Foundation poured at Humane Society

SANFORD - After numerous delays and setbacks, the concrete foundation was poured on the new facility at the Humane Society of Seminole County on Wednesday.

The new building, planned for completion by the end of February, is on schedule to meet that deadline. The old humane society facility burned to the ground in April 1993 and has been struggling financially ever since.

"Things are looking up," said shelter manager Betty Munoz.

The humane society has been ravaged this year by several highly publicized internal battles, which centered on concerns that the society's main focus had shifted from caring for animals to one that was more human-oriented. A probe into the treatment of the animals at the shelter by the US Humane Society has also been initiated.

Steve Mason, president of the board of trustees, has stated that the problems would subside as soon as the new building is completed and the public is able to see the facility is on the road to recovery with a fine facility for the animals.

Homeschool students from Orlando had the opportunity to expand their horizons at the Central Florida Zoo on Wednesday. Building hibernation boxes for the butterfly garden at the zoo they used their knowledge and skills in construction and the needs of the butterfly population to make the winter homes. Above Adam Hanselman, 11, of Lake Mary and Warren and Billy Evans, 9 and 12, both of Pine Hills cooperated on a box. Below, parent Jamie Hanselman helps Billy Evans with some of the needed construction skills. ## SCC family tells Weldon thanks for the memories

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - Though he announced his plans for his retirement nearly a year ago, the reality of it is starting to hit Dr. Earl Weldon now.

Weldon, who has served as president of Seminole Community College since it was founded 30 years ago, will step down at the end of this month.

On Wednesday, the students at SCC took the opportunity to thank the president who helped create the college where they are able to build a strong educational foundation and to earn a variety of degrees and certificates.

Weldon has always been known as a "hands on" administrator. Thirty years ago, he personally worked clearing the orange trees that once stood on the campus. Recently, he has worked with the designers and architects doing the work on the new administrative building that will soon be named in his honor.

In retirement, he is not expected to be any different.

Between planned trips to see the nation at a leisurely pace and visits to the grandchildren who are scattered hither and yon around the state, Weldon also plans to offer his services to incoming president, Dr. E.A. McGee as an advisor during the transition period.

Still, the students decided to have some fun with him during their last official opportunity to bid him farewell.

Weldon was honored at a reception in which the students told him that it was time to sit back and relax. Work was over and it was time to do nothing for a while.

To help him achieve that goal, See Weldon, Page 5A

Remember Pearl Harbor

By NICK PFEIFAU

PEARL HARBOR - On December 7, 1941, at 7:55 a.m. (local time), approximately 200 Japanese aircraft attacked Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, long considered the U.S. "Gibraltar of the Pacific." The raid, which lasted slightly over one hour left nearly 3,000 dead.

The attack virtually wiped out the entire U.S. Pacific Fleet which had been stationed there. Few escaped damage. An estimated 200 U.S. aircraft on the ground at the time of the attack were destroyed.

The attack brought about the immediate U.S. entry into World War II. An official Declaration of War was requested by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and approved by Congress on Dec. 8, 1941.

The following information regarding the attack and local reaction was carried on the pages of the Sanford Herald within the next few days of the attack.

SANFORD - With the approaching holiday season, the full effect of World War II had not reached as many people as may be expected. There were no announcements of cancelled club meetings or guest speakers who would discuss See Pearl, Page 5A

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Farmers: NAFTA hurting us

FLORIDA CITY — If the Clinton administration doesn't limit the numbers of vegetables entering the country from Mexico, Florida may look for help from the courts, a state agriculture official threatened Wednesday.

Florida's farmers, who supply much of the nation's winter vegetables, are being crippled by inexpensive tomatoes, squash, cucumbers, peppers, sweet corn, and other vegetables coming from Mexico, Martha Roberts, deputy commissioner for food safety for the state Department of Agriculture.

"We may have to sue the government to enforce federal laws," Roberts told about 100 farmers gathered at a tomato packing plant. "We're not going to have any American-grown fruits and vegetables to eat if the situation in Mexico... is not changed."

Farmers held signs that read "Save our Jobs" as Roberts and lobbyist denounced the lax enforcement of trade laws in the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Cattle drive draws group

KISSIMMEE — Members of an animal-rights group plan to protest a Florida cattle drive that winds up in Kissimmee on Saturday.

The drive is being done in celebration of the state's 150th anniversary.

"The cattle drive is cruel and unnecessary," said a press release issued by the Animal Rights Foundation of Florida.

The week-long event features a herd of cattle being driven from Yechaw Junction to Kissimmee to recreate the cattle drives once common across the state.

The event is intended to celebrate the state's cattle heritage. It is sponsored by the Florida Cracker Cattle Breeders Association, the Florida Cattleman's Association and the Florida Department of Agriculture.

Ninth suspect held

NEW YORK — The alleged gunman in the shotgun slaying of the owner of a customized pickup truck in Ocala County was arrested Wednesday in midtown Manhattan, police said.

Detectives caught Jermain LeBron, 31, who had been identified by Florida authorities as Jermain Gleason, and a fellow fugitive, Howard Kirk, 22, said police Sgt. Sean Crowley, a police spokesman.

No further details are available, he said. Nine people now have been implicated in the murder of Larry Neal Oliver Jr.

Oliver, 22, a waiter, reportedly was killed for his red pickup truck.

Three men and two women arrested in central Florida on Saturday told police the gunman was Gleason, who they said coveted the Chevrolet pickup Oliver was driving.

Investigators from Ocala County went to Connecticut to question Daniel R. Sumner, 20, and Vern C. Williams, 21, who were arrested in Killingly, Conn. on Monday.

Some of the five suspects arrested earlier said they helped dump the body. Others allegedly burned the victim's personal papers, cleaned up blood from the house where he was killed and pawned the victim's car stereo equipment.

Five of the suspects treated themselves to dinner with Oliver's credit card, according to police records. Oliver's charred truck was discovered Nov. 30, one day before a body thought to be his was found wrapped in a blanket and covered with brush was found in a rural area.

YMCA breaks ground for expansion

By MARY ROWELL
Herald Correspondent

LAKE MARY — The Seminole Family YMCA held ground-breaking ceremonies Saturday, Dec. 2, to celebrate the long-awaited expansion of their building on Longwood-Lake Mary Road.

Originally built in 1987, it soon became apparent that expansion was needed to meet the demands of the ever increasing population of the Lake Mary area. The building as it currently exists houses offices, locker rooms and restrooms and a multi-purpose room with exercise machines in 5,000 square feet. The new addition will add another 4,000 square feet. In Phase I, adding another multi-purpose room and more restrooms.

Plans for the first phase began with a serotus fund raising in March of 1994. The cost of Phase I is estimated at $400,000. Future expansion, with the YMCA facility eventually reaching 30,000 square feet, is planned to meet the needs of the growing community.

Saturday's festivities began with an outdoor continental breakfast, while inside, a karate demonstration was taking place. A benediction was given by Rev. John Montgomery, of River Oaks Presbyterian Church followed by speakers YMCA board chairman Bob Reis, incoming board chairman Brian Overby, city of Lake Mary mayor Lowry Rockett and Lake Mary police chief Richard Beary. The theme of the expansion project is "Grow With Us," and Beary summed up the reasons by saying, "society gets the next generation that it builds, or fails to build."

Other guest included Dana Reed and Jim Ferber, of Matthew Brown Construction.

Then it was time to get dirty. Guests Rockett, Beary Reis, Overby, Reed and Ferber picked up their shovels and dug in.

Government profits

By NICK FRIEDLAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Seminole County Clerk of Circuit Court, Maryanne Morse, has announced a 5.1 percent return on investments for her office during the fiscal year just ended. The clerk's office generated $353,733.48 in profit or excess fees, on $6,930,889.30 in revenue. Morse has transferred the excess fees to the Board of County Commissioners.

Morse noted the profit comes after her office paid to complete the fiber optic bridge between the courthouse and the county services building, a new UNIX based mainframe computer, a state-of-the-art PC local area network, and upgrading to the clerk's and county's financial software system.

In her seven years in office, Morse has reported generating a total of $3,753,718.80 in profits.

The 5.1 percent return this year was lower than in the past three years because of the additional expenses involved. In 1994, Morse reported a 14.4 percent return. In 1993 the return was 13.1 percent, and in 1992 the percent was 13. The Seminole County Clerk's office is one of 47 in the state funded entirely through fees generated in day-to-day operations, without any general taxpayer support. These fee-based offices are required by law to transfer any surplus to the county at the end of each fiscal year.

Attempted murder charged

From Staff Reports

SANFORD - Brenda Hughes, 33, of 2541 Byrd Avenue, Midway, was scheduled to make her initial court appearance this afternoon in a John E. Polk Correctional Facility courtroom. Hughes is charged with one count of attempted second degree murder.

According to Seminole County sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, investigators arrested Hughes last night following a shooting incident at her residence in Midway.

The incident occurred at approximately 8 p.m., when McDonough said she and a live-in boyfriend, Charlie Martin, got into a verbal argument.

During the argument, McDonough reported that Hughes grabbed a .22 caliber rifle and fired several rounds at Martin inside the house. After Martin ran outside, the woman reportedly fired several more rounds at him.

In all, a total of nine shots were said to have been fired, but none of them struck Martin, and he was uninjured.

McDonough said Hughes later admitted to sheriff's investigators that she was only trying to scare Martin, not kill him.

Remember Pearl Harbor

How times change. We can be in one situation today, and suddenly we are thrust into another. It can come swiftly, as swiftly as an air attack against a military base.

Today, on the anniversary of the Japanese attack against Pearl Harbor, people who may have been around in the early 1940s realize how everything can change, not only in a particular location, but throughout the entire world.

Within days, even hours after the attack, Americans were exhibiting more patriotism and more camaraderie than during the previous several decades. What was a nation of separate individuals suddenly became a nation united for one purpose.

What would happen if a similar situation occurred today? All of the conflicts between political parties would come to an immediate halt; individual politicians would stop slamming others; even talk show hosts would change the direction of their tirades.

We expect even criminal activities might be slowed drastically, and the long lines at homeless shelters and unemployment offices would suddenly move to become lines in front of armed forces enlistment offices.

Yes, without a doubt, Dec. 7, 1941 brought about a drastic change in the lives of every American. It is unfortunate that it takes a major tragedy to bring us together. Just imagine what our nation would be if individual people could band together and work on helping each other similar to what happened 54 years ago, but without the need for a war.

It shows that people helping people can be accomplished. It shows that, deep down inside each of us, there is the capability of working with others regardless of the difficulties which may be present.

Let's use this December 7th to give this some thought. We can certainly do better in helping each other and working together more.

Let's just hope that it will never again take a world war to prove we can do it.

LETTER

Bless Mr. Scally

I would like to express my deepest thanks to your friend of the people, Mr. Bill Scally of the Veterans Service Office. I feel Mr. Scally went far above and beyond the call of duty for me in regards to my VA claim. He first started assisting my husband Ron, in August, 1990, when he filed his claim for his service connected disability. Ron died in February, 1993, prior to final adjudication of his claim.

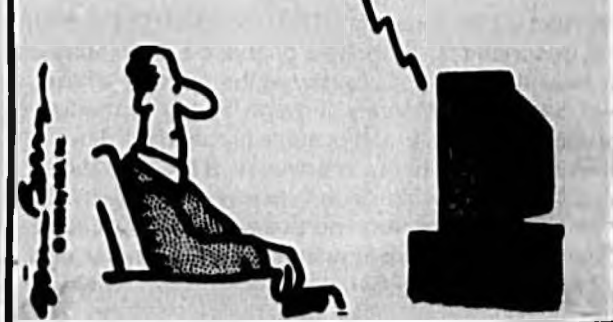

At that time, Mr. Scally recommended that I file a claim based on "service connected death." My claim was continuously denied and was appealed on my behalf, by Mr. Scally. My claim was finally approved this year, five years later.

The claim resulted in my receiving a rather large retroactive monetary amount plus a monthly compensation with educational benefits. Mr. Scally was always there, regardless of how big or small my problem may have been. He was always one step ahead of any problem I had and always had a second plan of action. Without the never-ending help and support of Mr. Scally, my morale and outlook would have been very low. He did more for me than any one person can imagine.

His office is blessed to have such a wonderful employee like him. We need more people in the world such as Mr. Scally, people with his patience and perseverance. I could never begin to thank him enough for all he has done for me. I would also like to thank the Seminole County Board of County Commissioners for having someone like Mr. Scally as an adviser available for me.

Landing the best airliner seats

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

When you book a coach seat for a flight, you can expect it to be cramped. Among domestic airlines, only Midwest Express (and, to a lesser extent, Kwi and TWA) offer consistently superior seat room.

Obviously, you won't always be able to choose from among those three airlines. But you can often choose a flight with comfort in mind. In coach, where seats are generally straitjacket-tight, small differences in roominess can have a big effect.

Seating comfort depends on three factors:

—Seat pitch, the front-to-rear spacing of rows, governs both legroom and space for reading or working.

—Seat width determines the side-to-side space.

—Configuration, how seats are grouped within a row, determines your risk of being crammed into a middle seat or of sitting next to a passenger in one. You can put up with even the worst airline seating if you're next to an empty seat.

The 2-3-2 arrangement (window / aisle; aisle / middle / aisle; aisle / window) used in 767s is the best of the standard coach/economy configurations. A 2-3, a 2-4-2 or a 2-2-2 setup is also good.

Here's how to try to maximize your chances of a comfortable flight and increase your odds of sitting next to an empty:

—On a wide-body plane, request an aisle seat in the center section. Middle seats in the center section are considered the least desirable, so they're the last to be assigned.

—If most of the seats on a plane are in groups of three, one member of a couple will almost always be assigned to a middle seat. Couples can ask for an aisle and a window seat in a three seat row. There's a good chance that the middle seat won't be assigned.

—Several large lines now try to reserve preferred aisle and window seats in coach for very-frequent-flyer members of their frequent-flyer programs.

Certain seats have extra space, even on planes with the most limited legroom. Here are some you may want to request:

—Door rows. Most wide-body planes and a few narrow-bodies have exit doors in the middle of the cabin. The seat rows right behind those doors have extra legroom. However, those seats may put you at a bad angle for viewing an in-flight movie, may be narrower than other coach seats or may be located in a high traffic area.

—Exit rows. In narrow-bodies, seats next to the over-wing emergency exits generally have extra pitch. However, the airline may require occupants of those seats to be able to assist in an emergency evacuation, and it may not assign those seats in advance. You can try to switch to an exit-row seat when you check in.

—Bulkhead rows. If you sit right behind a cabin divider, you may get extra legroom, and nobody in front can recline a seat back into your face. However, those seats are sometimes reserved for disabled travelers or people with babies, and they may be too close to the movie screen for easy viewing.

—Twin side seats. Most 767s, DC10s, MD11s and L1011s have pairs of seats along the sides of the cabin; on DC9s, MD80s and Fokkers, you find two-seat units along one side. If you ask for a seat in a two-seat group, you'll never be in a middle seat or next to anyone writhing in one.

On most airlines, you can reserve specific seats a month or so before departure. But many lines block out the best seats for travelers on full fare coach tickets or for those with very frequent-flyer status. Some lines also won't assign seats in advance to travelers on tickets purchased through a consolidator (a discount ticket broker). If you want a particular seat, ask if and when you can get an advance assignment. If you can't get one, check in early for departure and ask them for the seat you want.

Helping the speaker save his breath

Speaker Newt Gingrich's formal announcement that he would not be a candidate for president in 1996, a decision he had informally announced a few weeks prior to the formal announcement, reminded me of a task that I have been neglecting.

Two years ago, I promised to establish The Curmudgeon's Professional Announcement Service in an attempt to relieve hard-working public servants of the burden of announcing so many things. Had I been alert, I could have saved Newt the chore of informally announcing he would formally announce he wasn't running, and I could have made the formal announcement, as well.

In any case, Newt said he is too busy running Congress to run the country, and I understand completely. I therefore volunteer, pro bono, to relieve His Speakership and other actual and potential candidates for high office of the strain of announcing things by handling some announcements for them.

The first announcement is on behalf of Robert Dole:

"Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole today announced that Hollywood is up to its old tricks. The Senator said he has been alerted by conservative Christian groups that the Disney company has been inserting subliminal sexual messages in its films. The scene in 'The Lion King' in which swirls of dust spell out the word 'sex' is an abomination," said Dole. "The scene in 'Aladdin' where the title character mutters 'All good teenagers take off your clothes' is an assault against America's youth."

The second announcement is on behalf of Bill Clinton:

"President Bill Clinton today acknowledged that he had drifted too far left, but said he had been pushed in that direction by the damn liberal media, which never give him a break."

On behalf of the leader of the Republican Revolution:

"House Speaker Newt Gingrich announced today that in addition to murder, kidnapping, the drowning of innocent children and general moral decay, the liberal welfare state is responsible for purple hair, tattoos and navel rings."

On behalf of the Senate Majority Leader: "Sen. Robert Dole today said that due to a staff mixup, he had issued the wrong announcement. 'I am actually a fan of Disney films,' he said. 'Mickey Mouse is an American original.'"

On behalf of the speaker of the House: "Newt Gingrich wishes to informally announce that he is very busy running Congress and must discourage any suggestion that he be nominated to the Supreme Court or appointed to the office of pope, should such openings arise. He will formally announce this informal decision in a few days."

On behalf of the Senate majority leader: "Senator Robert Dole late today said he can be against Disney films, or he can be for Disney films. 'I'll be what-ever the American people want me to be,' he said."

On behalf of an Anonymous Announcer with a deep, resonant voice who left these words on my answering machine: "I have taken note of Phil Gramm's remark that God doesn't like government, of Patrick Buchanan's suggestion that God disapproves of the Supreme Court, of Parson Pat Robertson's claim that God is a Republican of the Rev. Jerry Falwell's assertion that God hates homosexuals, and of Time magazine's disclosure that life exploded upon the earth in a big bang."

"I wish to inform Phil, Pat, Pat and Jerry that I am a registered independent and a snicky voter and when I am ready to discuss my politics, they will be the last people I call."

From Kissinger to Schwarzenegger

ASPEN, Colo.—President Clinton is concerned about American isolationism. In his realm, that's appropriate. But in a more important arena—global "soft power"—there has been a recent positive quantum jump in American internationalism. After talking here with entertainment entrepreneurs at an Aspen Institute conference, one can look beyond the mountains and see the possibility of one more American Century.

Such musings stem from the two new mega-mergers of corporate communications giants: Disney with Capital Cities/ABC and Time Warner with Turner Broadcasting. What is in sight seems clear: There will be about half a dozen global communications giants (including Viacom, which owns Paramount, and NewsCorp, which owns Fox).

All of them are American corporations. The products they purvey—movies, television, music—are almost entirely American, as American as apple pie, crime in the streets and upward mobility. These products have no serious competitors; foreigners can make jet aircraft or television sets, but the only international competitor to an American movie is another American movie. The global reach of these media megaphones will grow rapidly due to technological, political and demographic change, and because these American companies which produce and peddle Americans are more likely than before to have the huge amounts of capital necessary to exploit such changes.

All this may well constitute a major advance in American foreign policy. How so? America's foreign policy goal is to live in a world hospitable to American values and values. During the Cold War we needed "hard power," military muscle and geopolitical clout, to ensure that such hospitality would survive. After all, it was threatened by an evil empire. But without a serious hard-power adversary, the importance of hard power is diminished. Increasingly, real power is soft power. (The phrase is Harvard professor Joseph Nye's, author of "Bound to Lead," and now assistant secretary of international security affairs at the Department of Defense.)

The range and penetration of American pop culture's power and influence should not be underestimated. In late September, in Australia, Dublin, Germany, Holland and Sweden, all 10 of the top box office movies were American. In Brussels, Spain and Italy it was nine of 10. In Paris it was eight of 10, and in Japan, seven (courtesy Screen magazine). Some were good, like "Apollo 13," and some were terrible, like "Waterworld."

But good American entertainment and bad American entertainment have American roots in common. The distinguished director Sydney Pollack ("Tootsie") has said that most American movies have a common theme: "The hero shapes destiny," a notion that entrances global audiences. The views and values that geopolitical America is offering to the world today concern democracy, markets, individualism, pluralism and merit—very much in sync with the idea of human beings as destiny shaping heroes. American foreign policy is moving from Kissinger to Schwarzenegger.

That is the situation as the audience grows by bounds and leaps. Communication satellites, fiber optics and digitalization will offer ever-fuller program menus. Restrictions on media access are being diluted, de facto or de jure, because in a high-tech time, politicians can't control it anyway.

And people most everywhere are moving up the economic path. China scholar Anne Thurston told the Aspeners that in recent years somewhere between 100-200 million Chinese have moved from farm to city, a vantage point from which they can more easily buy a movie ticket and the advertised goods that support commercial television.

These emerging conditions, driven by surmer Chinese peasants and American entrepreneurs, serve as force multipliers of American soft power. Our views and values will be exposed to an ever-increasing audience of billions. Which leaves only a couple of questions: What will they see? How will they react?

Will it be an America, still strong, working to rejuvenate what was once so easily called the "American way of life" that will be applauded and accepted? Or will it be an America drenched in crime, dependency and bitterness that will be scorned and rejected? All that depends partly on what the entertainment entrepreneurs choose to purvey, but mostly on what we do to ourselves and for ourselves.

Seniors' special shopping day

Area senior citizens gathered at the Lake Mary Target store, and at Target stores nationwide Tuesday for special holiday shopping hours set aside for seniors and people with disabilities.

Target's annual Holiday Shopping Party allows senior citizens and people with disabilities to do their holiday shopping in a relaxed atmosphere without the hectic holiday rush.

Target Team members and community volunteers worked together to make this holiday party wonderful. Each guest was greeted with a gift bag of goodies with many bags containing a card inviting them to pick up a special gift at the Guest Service desk. Gifts included television sets, boom boxes, Tiffany lamps, watches, bracelets, telephones and much more.

Target also provided an assortment of breakfast treats to enjoy while listening to the Christmas songs being beautifully performed by the Lake Mary Elementary School choir directed by Dr. Henkle and Lake Mary Target's own Phil Campana.

To add to the ease of shopping, wheelchairs, personal shopping assistants and free gift wrapping were available. Best of all - Santa was there along with one of his elves.

Shoppers had their pictures taken with Santa who took requests for Christmas wishes.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The White House began unveiling its seven-year budget-balancing proposal to congressional Democrats on Wednesday, even as President Clinton delivered his long-promised veto to a Republican plan he said bore "wrong-headed cuts and misplaced priorities."

Clinton dispatched Leon Panetta, his chief of staff, to the Capitol to brief House and Senate Democrats about the package, which the administration plans to present to Republicans when budget talks resume today.

Compared with Clinton's June proposal, the new plan will have deeper cuts in welfare and many domestic programs and additional limits on business tax breaks. It will call for the same savings of $134 billion from Medicare and $64 billion from Medicaid that he had sought earlier, but it was unclear what changes would be made in the $66 billion tax cut for families he had proposed.

The new proposal was a concession to GOP demands that the president propose a detailed, seven-year package, rather than working with the broad-brush, 10-year outline he unveiled six months ago. Republicans had mixed reactions.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said he wanted to see whether Clinton's proposal will be "warmed over" or "a step toward a balanced budget in the next seven years."

And House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio, warned, "They'd better lower the rhetoric if they want to get this done."

Democratic support for the measure was spotty. The plan, drafted chiefly by administration officials, left some Democrats skeptical about the size of its tax cuts and its savings in Medicare and Medicaid.

Meanwhile, Clinton vetoed the seven-year budget-balancing package that Republicans pushed through Congress last month, which capped their drive to shrink government.

Brandishing the pen President Lyndon B. Johnson used to sign legislation creating Medicare 30 years ago, Clinton criticized the GOP plan, saying it would slash that program and Medicaid, education, environment and welfare while shrinking tax breaks for millions of the working poor.

"With this veto, the extreme Republican effort to balance the budget through wrongheaded cuts and misplaced priorities is over," Clinton said as he vetoed the measure before television cameras in the Oval Office. "Now it's up to all of us to go back to work together to show we can balance the budget and be true to our values and our economic interests."

No backing down on Medicare

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The White House contended Wednesday it can postpone the bankruptcy of Medicare's hospital fund for nearly a decade with less than half the savings the Republicans are looking for.

Contrary to GOP claims that there was only a few dollars' difference between their Medicare premiums and President Clinton's, the administration argued the GOP plan would force the elderly to pay $8 to almost $12 a month in higher premiums for the next seven years.

Clinton is standing firm on the offer he made in June to save $134 billion from Medicare and $64 billion from Medicaid over the next seven years. The Republicans want to save $370 billion from Medicare and $163 billion from Medicaid.

The administration fleshed out the proposal as part of Clinton's counteroffer on how to balance the budget by 2002.

Like the Republicans, the president would derive a chunk of his savings by encouraging the 37 million elderly or disabled Medicare beneficiaries to switch from traditional, fee-for-service coverage into managed care. The White House says it would give beneficiaries new choices including preferred provider networks, health maintenance organizations with a point-of-service option allowing patients to see outside specialists by paying more, and new managed care plans created by hospitals and doctors themselves instead of insurers.

Clinton would get most of his $124 billion in savings by squeezing fee increases paid doctors, hospitals, home health agencies and nursing homes.

In many cases, they are the same type cuts the Republicans want.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, the chairman of Ways and Means, said he was troubled by the outline of the White House approach. He complained that it made no mention of medical savings accounts, "limits people's choices to managed care arrangements" and failed to trim premium subsidies for wealthy retirees.

Clinton would raise just $8.8 billion in extra Medicare premiums compared with $57 billion under the GOP plan.

The Clinton proposal would let the monthly premium, now $46.10, drop to $42.50 in January 1996 then climb to $77 by January 2002. The GOP plan would hike the premiums to $53.70 in January 1996 and to $88.90 by January 2002.

Body's weapons against AIDS virus discovered

NEW YORK (AP) — After a long search, researchers have discovered AIDS-virus suppressors that the body produces naturally, possibly opening the door to new treatments.

Scientists have long known that white blood cells called CD8 cells secrete one or more substances that hamper the virus' efforts to reproduce and infect cells. But they hadn't been able to find out what the suppressing substances were.

Two research teams say they've found some answers. One identified three substances that dramatically reduce HIV's ability to infect cells in test tubes. The second team found that an unrelated protein from CD8 cells restrains the virus' reproduction in test tubes.

Scientists hope to find a way to use the substances to control the body's HIV levels for long periods, maybe indefinitely, prolonging the years infected people can stay healthy.

Although HIV-infected people produce anti-viral CD8 secretions naturally, prior research shows that the levels decline as the immune system deteriorates.

One of the research teams, from Germany, reports its results in today's issue of the journal Nature. The other, publishing in the Dec. 15 issue of the journal Science, includes prominent AIDS researcher Dr. Robert Gallo of the Institute for Human Virology, part of the University of Maryland at Baltimore. He was with the National Cancer Institute at the time of the research.

The substances had been known before for doing other jobs.

Doctors thought he would die, premature baby gasps for breath

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Experts had given up hope of saving newborn Chase Lear-Carter, but his parents wanted to hold him until the end. Then something wonderful happened: The severely premature infant gasped for air and lived.

"There was nothing we could do except look at him and love him," his 21-year-old father, Nicholas Carter, said.

The baby, who was born 18 weeks premature and weighed less than 2 pounds, clung to life on a ventilator Wednesday.

When Chase was born Saturday, he had a faint heartbeat and wasn't breathing properly. The medical staff tried to resuscitate him but the infant did not respond.

The baby's parents held him even as the death certificate was being prepared. Then, three hours after he was born, the infant revived.

"Medical science can't explain everything," said

Susan Watts, a spokesman for Bronson Methodist Hospital. "We see a lot of amazing things every day."

Chase's mother, Shannon Lear, 19, didn't give up hope. "Whenever they told me they didn't believe the baby was going to survive, I didn't want to believe it," she said.

The baby is expected to remain at the hospital through March and may have developmental problems because of the early delivery.

Muraskas, of Chicago's Loyola University Medical Center, said it is not uncommon for babies to show signs of life hours after a failed attempt at resuscitation.

He pointed out possible problems from the lack of oxygen, including retardation, and wondered if it was a good idea to put Chase on the ventilator again.

Chase's father disagreed. "I think he's going to make it," he said. "He's just a big fighter."

ONBOARD USS SPRINGFIELD — The U.S. submarine force is known for being the elite of the fleet; a reputation earned an sustained because of the hard work, skill and dedication of its Sailors.

James Covington Jr., son of Harvey and Armilla Covington of Sanford, Fla., knows this better than anyone. Covington, 35, is stationed onboard the nuclear-powered attack submarine USS Springfield, homeported in New London, Conn.

A lieutenant, Covington is the weapons officer onboard the submarine. "One of the most important aspects of my job is to provide the intelligence and forward presence that the national leaders need to make informed decisions, both politically and militarily, to preserve peace and maintain national security."

Equipped with torpedoes and Tomahawk cruise missiles, attack submarines like Springfield can provide surveillance, intelligence, support special operations and launch missiles at enemy ships or land targets. Attack submarines also act as the battlegroup's watchdog, using sonar to search for potential surface and underwater threats.

Covington, a 1977 graduate of Seminole High School in Sanford, Fla., earned a bachelor's degree in computer science from Florida State University in 1987 and a master's degree in computer science from the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, Ca., in 1992.

The Sanford native said he joined the Navy in 1980, initially as an enlisted man, for several years.

"I chose the Navy because I knew they were almost always the first force to arrive at the scene of a potential conflict. I felt that the Navy offered better technical training as well." Covington attended a year and a half of training in nuclear power theory, mathematics, physics and electrical theory and served as an electrician's mate before he was accepted to attend Florida State University on a Navy ROTC scholarship that led to his commission as an officer. While he's now served in the Navy 15 years, he said he's still learning a lot about working with people.

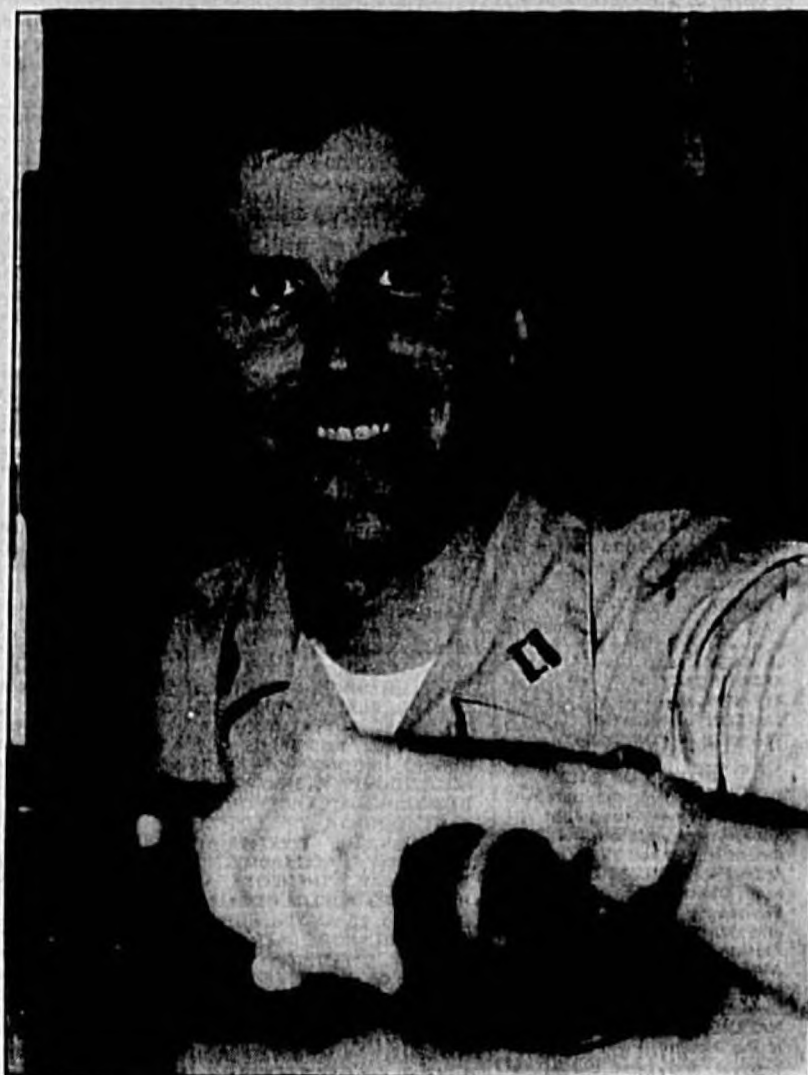

"Communication is one, if not the most important, but often overlooked aspects of leadership. You've got to keep your people informed of what is going on if you expect them to be able to support you."

He has also had the chance to take advantage of some unique opportunities. He's visited more than seven foreign countries, including Greece, Scotland and the Netherlands, and has met service members from other countries.

"The most exciting things I've done have been while in the Navy is participate in several NATO exercises with other countries' navies during a 1994-95 Mediterranean deployment."

Of course, travel has meant six-month separations from his wife, the former Rhonda Sholl, and their three sons, Michael 12, David, 11, and Nathan, 7, but he said they manage well when he's away.

"Denise stays busy with the kids, volunteer work as an EMT (Emergency Medical Technician), and continuing education. The kids miss their dad, but stay involved with school and friends.

Covington said he plans to make the Navy career.

"My intentions are to retire at 20 years of active service and settle in the Hampton Roads area, working for a computer graphics firm as a system designer."

Written Will Is the Best Way To Achieve What You Intend

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but it's vital that you pass this message along to your readers: Make a will!

Sometimes death gives no warning. Even if your parents lived to be a hundred, there is no guarantee that you will, too, or that you'll be of sound mind when the time comes to make a will.

Furthermore, don't assume that your spouse or anyone else will see that your relatives receive what you want them to have — regardless of what verbal assurance you've been given. Money has a strange way of making people "forgetful."

My younger brother died unexpectedly a year ago, after only 13 months of marriage to a woman he'd known for only two months. He owned valuable real estate and antique cars. His wife managed to circumvent estate laws that direct an estate be divided between the surviving spouse and the next of kin (my mother) when there is no will. She kept it all.

The only way to be sure your assets are disposed of in the manner you wish is to make a will. Period.

And when you make a will, be sure that there is more than one copy. In my brother's case, it was rumored that he had a will, but no one had a copy of it.

Abby, if this saves one family the pain and anguish that my family endured, it will have served its

ADVICE

"THE VOICE OF EXPERIENCE"

DEAR VOICE: Unfortunately, not all understand that if they die without a will, state laws determine how their estate will be distributed. A will that meets the legal requirements of the state in which you live is necessary so that your assets will be distributed as you wish, and with the least delay. And if it is drafted by an attorney, or knowledgeable estate planner, you can be assured it's at the lowest possible tax rate and administrative costs.

An all-too-often refrain: "I don't have much in the way of material goods or money, so I don't need a will." Not all Most people, when they take inventory, find they have more assets than they imagined. Simple wills are not expensive. Everyone should have a will, preferably one drawn up by a professional.

DEAR ABBY: Many household appliance and cable service repairmen with whom I have made appointments for house calls do not show up at the appointed time. I realize that they cannot always accurately estimate the amount of time that's needed to make repairs and may need some flexibility in their schedules.

But when they know they are going to be more than an hour off schedule, it seems to me they could at least telephone the customer to reschedule the appointment. It's not uncommon for them to be five hours behind and not even bother to call to reschedule — much less apologize.

Needless to say, this can be a great inconvenience, annoyance, and a waste of the customer's time. Such arrogance and lack of consideration by repair people seem typical of our modern society.

Abby, will you please send the message that their bosses are losing business because of it?

DR. WAYNE EARNEST, ALEXANDRIA, VA.

DEAR DR. EARNEST: I'm printing your letter. Let's hope those who are guilty of the above-mentioned offense — including doctors and dentists — will recognize themselves and heed your message. Regardless of where the appointment might be, no one like to be kept waiting.

DEAR ABBY: Last summer I underwent surgery to fuse two of the vertebrae in my neck, and I had to wear a hard cervical collar for six weeks. For the first time in my life, I saw the world through the eyes of someone with a disability.

Most people were wonderful, but some were insensitive bores. Conversations with the latter usually went something like this:

"Oh, Lynn, what happened to you?"

"I underwent some sur ..."

"I know, I had surgery myself about 10 years ago. What I went through, you wouldn't believe!"

These people would then engage in long harangues about their own health problems, the agony, the tedious recovery and their residual problems.

If I ventured, "Well, that is not what I had. I had ...," they would interrupt with, "I know, my daughter had that, too ..."

Then began a lengthy discourse regarding their children's medical conditions, broken bones and accidents!

Most people are not remotely interested in anyone other than themselves. They feign interest simply as a pretext to discuss their own medical problems.

Abby, will you please remind your readers that the next time they ask people how they are, they should at least pretend they care enough to hear the answer?

LYNN R. SHOEN, LAS VEGAS

DEAR LYNN: Some people mention their own illnesses as a way of relating to yours — to let you know they've "been there." Unfortunately, some self-centered individuals view these conversations as an opportunity to deliver an "organ recital." Perhaps your letter will cause some of them to stop and think — but don't count on it. Take comfort from those who are sincerely concerned and sympathetic, and try not to dwell on the others.
