Man wins jackpot at Caesars

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — An almond grower from Bakersfield, Calif., won more than $1.2 million Christmas Day on a $400 investment in a dollar slot machine at Caesars Palace, a spokeswoman for the casino said.

"Words can't describe the feeling," Mike Matuk, 50, said moments after lights flashed and bells rang at the machine he had been playing for two hours, indicating he had won the machine's jackpot — $1,280,901, spokeswoman Debbie Munch said.

Asked if he believes in Santa Claus, Matuk said, "I think I do now."

Matuk said he had put about $400 into the slot machine before coming up a big winner.

He said he often comes to Las Vegas to gamble and had previously won $5,000 and $10,000 playing dollar slots at Caesars.

Matuk, who is married and has two sons, said he intends to pay off some debts and buy some presents for his family but does not have any big plans yet for his money.

"I don't intend to quit my job or anything," said Matuk, who was spending four days at Caesars with one of his sons. "Right now I think I'm going to have more champagne."

Hostage's family leaves Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Relatives of a French woman held by a radical Palestinian group along with her three daughters packed up Christmas toys and left for home Monday without two of the children as they had hoped.

The children's father, grandmother and uncle boarded a France-bound plane at Beirut airport with five French journalists who had arrived with them from Paris Saturday.

Brigitte Valente, grandmother of the abducted children — Marie-Laure Bettie, 7, and Virginie Bettie, 6 — appeared depressed at a Beirut hotel before departing with the Christmas toys she had brought for the youngsters.

The girls' father, Pascal Bettie, said, "[The captors] told us that they will free the two children, but they did not say when or where the release will take place."

"But I'm less disappointed now because I got a confirmation that they will be set free," said Bettie, the estranged husband of Jacqueline Valente, mother of the two girls and another girl born soon after she was kidnapped.

'Huskers head for Miami

MIAMI — Nebraska football received its Christmas present Sunday for winning the Big Eight title — a trip to sunny south Florida and an Orange Bowl date with the University of Miami.

The No. 6 Cornhuskers arrived in Miami shortly after 2 p.m. EST and were greeted by Orange Bowl officials, who passed out the traditional oranges to players and coaches, a small enclave of Nebraska alumni and a calypso band playing a tune called "There's no place like Nebraska."

"We're happy to be here," said Nebraska center Jake Young, having left 30-degree temperatures behind. "It's a great bowl game and it's a nice Christmas present for us."

It has been five years since Nebraska last played in the Orange Bowl. In the 1984 Orange Bowl, the then-No. 1 Cornhuskers were upset 31-30 by Miami, which went on to win the national title.

Power line protests

Florida parents protest against opening schools near power lines

United Press International

FORT LAUDERDALE — Fears over the possible dangers of long-term exposure to the electromagnetic fields generated by high-tension power lines is stirring protests and may produce the nation's first magnetic field standards.

In at least two school districts in Florida, parents are protesting the opening of elementary schools near the power lines. And in the Houston area, school officials from the Klein Independent School District won a court battle to remove high-tension power lines from near three elementary schools.

Hamilton Oven Jr., administrator of the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation's air resources management division, said citizens as well as power companies have asked that the state set standards.

"It is becoming more and more of a public concern," he said. "The utilities want us to address the rights of way because they have been involved in quite a bit of litigation."

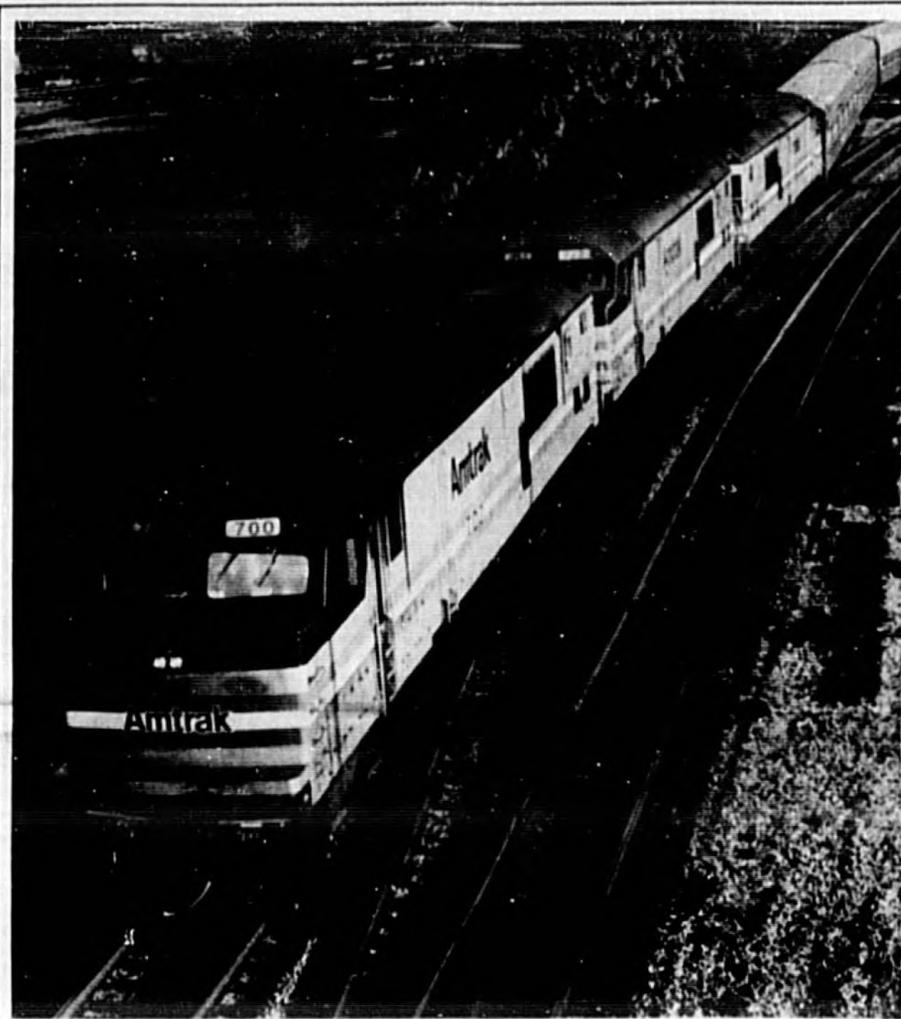

Recommendations for the nation's first magnetic field standards for new or modified transmission lines and substations are expected to be announced at a state hearing Jan. 18 in Tampa.

"Among the options, they could bury the lines or widen the right of way or change the height to reduce the intensity of the electromagnetic fields," Oven said. "We are attempting to set a standard to help protect the public, using reasonably available technology."

He said public concern could add to utility bills as companies spend money on added safety.

In Boca Raton, three parents filed a lawsuit seeking to stop the Jan. 3 opening of Sandpiper Shore Elementary School, which is within SANFORD — This city is the end of the line. The 900-mile rail line daily transporting passengers and their cars nonstop to and from Lorton, Va., ends at the Persimmon Avenue Amtrak terminal.

The Auto Train is one of the most popular Amtrak services. Amtrak spokesperson John Jacobsen said, Vacationers and snowbirds use the service so they can rely on their own transportation once they reach Florida — without making the drive themselves, he said.

In October 1983 Amtrak restarted the Auto Train service, which had been privately owned by a firm gone bankrupt. The service ran three times a week until it proved popular enough to run daily in Florida cowboy C.W. Beck died Sunday

C.W. Beck Sr., an old-time cowboy, died Sunday

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — One of the last of the old-time Florida cowboys, C.W. Beck Sr., died Sunday in Sanford.

"This is kind of the passing of an era," Beck's only son Charlie said today.

Beck, 79, who was born in Sanford Jan. 5, 1909, was born a rancher, and his father owned large holding in Sanford in the area of 25th Street and U.S. Highway 17-92.

When Beck died at sundown Sunday at Central Florida Regional after a battle with cancer, he was owner of a 4,000-acre spread just across the Osteen Bridge in Volusia County. Charlie, 33, said the ranch today usually runs from 800 to 1,000 head of cattle, but the ranching business is dying because of development.

For now the younger Beck said he will continue to carry on the family ranching tradition, although he has said he'll never be the cowboy his dad once was.

C.W. Beck was also Seminole County's chief sheriff's deputy, sometimes the only deputy, from 1945 until 1952. His son has carried on that tradition as a Volusia County sheriff's deputy.

In 1985, C.W. Beck Sr., told the Sanford Herald things were different in the old days as a sheriff's deputy. "You were paid for what you did. If you carried a fellow from the jail to Wonder how to stash that Christmas trash?

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Correspondent

So, you're surrounded, as you are every year, with piles of colorful paper, cheerful bows and bulky boxes. And there's no trash pickup today as municipal workers have a holiday.

What will you do with all that Christmas wrapping stuff? And what happens to it all once you've gotten it out the door?

"Tis the season," said Marie Hammer, "to throw things away all year 'round in America, but Christmas is worse than usual. All that newspaper advertising, all that wrapping paper, Christmas trees, gift boxes... it adds up."

Hammer, a home economist and professor at the University of Florida, adds that Americans in general waste far too much. The Christmas holidays create a huge surplus of garbage, most of which is harmful to the environment.

Estimates of the amount of excess trash that is produced at this time of year vary. Scientific studies done in Miami and Gainesville put the increase at nearly 50 percent over averages for the rest of the year.

Locally, Connie Riley of DumpAll Inc. said that records are not kept on the exact amount of trash that is produced during the holidays, but he "would guess that it more than doubles during the week between Christmas and New Year's."

A survey of local recycling centers shows that gift wrapping and boxes are not welcome items.

"The paper used to make wrapping paper is much thicker than newsprint and is difficult to de-ink," noted Mike Smith at Southeast Recycling in Orlando. Because the process is more difficult it is more expensive and, thus, less attractive to recyclers.

A new state law requires a 30 percent reduction of solid waste by 1994. Each pound of trash buried in a landfill costs taxpayers about a

Oil explorer hopes to dredge up space capsule

United Press International

Since the day that astronaut Virgil "Gus" Grissom's Liberty Bell 7 space capsule sank below the surface of the Atlantic Ocean, Robert Fuller has dreamed of bringing it back up.

And with the help of new developments in sonar and metal detection, Fuller hopes to bring the capsule to the surface next year — answering a 27-year-old furor over whether Grissom was to blame for losing the only unrecovered aircraft in the history of the United States' space program.

Fuller, 44, a specialist in oil exploration and a lifelong space buff, said Sunday he has applied to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for permission to salvage Grissom's capsule, which sank July 21, 1961, following a 16-minute suborbital flight, the second in U.S. history.

Space experts have argued for years about what caused an emergency hatch to spring open, causing Liberty Bell to take on water and sink. Some believe Grissom panicked, triggering the explosive bolts that blew open the hatch. Grissom, who was killed in a 1967 launch-pad fire while training for the first Apollo flight, told investigators that the bolts malfunctioned.

"We think Gus Grissom has been

Crash spills seafood over road

JACKSONVILLE — A semi-tractor trailer overturned early Sunday morning, dumping 75,000 pounds of seafood over Interstate 95 and forcing police to close part of the highway for 10 hours.

Jacksonville police spokesman Aaa Higgs said the driver of the truck transporting fish from Boston to Miami, lost control of the vehicle about 2 a.m. near the Myrtle Street overpass. "It was just turned over on its side, a bunch of fish falling out of the top of it," said Lloyd Cremins, part of the clean-up crew.

The driver and a passenger, whose names were not available, were treated for minor bruises at a local hospital and released. "It was a strong smell because there was a lot of fish on the road," said police officer Jeffery Lawrence. "It was everywhere, blocking two lanes on both sides."

Police originally closed both lanes of traffic, but then reopened the northbound lane shortly after the accident. The southbound lane remained closed until after 12:30 p.m.

A clean-up crew and wrecker service worked hours, uprighting the truck and scraping $200,000 worth of fish off the highway with a front-loader.

Be nice, Miami cabbies told

MIAMI — Smile, make eye contact and speak nicely to passengers is the message 5,300 taxi, limousine and other drivers are getting from Super Bowl organizers hoping to impress up to 100,000 area guests expected for the Jan. 22 Super Bowl.

The drivers, from 28 different nations, have been given "Transportation Passports" by organizers of the Super Bowl in Joe Robbie Stadium.

The booklets contain maps, instructions on such things as Miami International Airport, check-in procedures for buses, vans, taxis and limousines. They're a pep talk in English, Spanish and Creole on how to treat people right.

"I'm asking you to join us and go the extra mile this week for our guests," says Dick Anderson, chairman of the greater Miami Super Bowl XXIII Host Committee, and former All Pro member of the Miami Dolphins.

"Be helpful, be willing. That way, no matter who wins the game, Miami will be the winner," he tells the drivers.

The 3 1/2-inch by 5-inch booklets provide telephone numbers guests can be given to obtain help on hotels, tourist attractions and other points of interest.

They advise drivers to smile, make eye contact and initiate conversation with passengers. Be positive, the booklet says.

"With the right attitude — a desire and willingness to be helpful — you will make the best impression of yourself and Miami," the booklet says.

Cox finds buyer for The Miami News

MIAMI — Cox Enterprises has "conceptually" agreed to a new offer to buy The Miami News from an investor group and hopes to finish the deal before the paper's scheduled shutdown on Thursday, according to a published report.

The Atlanta company may decide to keep the News open for a short period after Dec. 31 if a sale appears imminent. David Easterly, president of the Cox newspaper division, said in a weekend report in the News.

"We have conceptually agreed to what was submitted — we did that (Friday) — and the next move is up to the bidder," he said. "There has been no contract signed and no earnest money put forward. There is a lot still to be done. We are trying to get this bidder to come in and make a deal."

Easterly would not divulge the details of the amended offer, but did say a delay in closing the newspaper because of an expected purchase would happen only if the prospective buyer posted escrow money to cover operating losses.

"That scenario is conceivable but not what we would prefer," he said. "We are talking about a number of scenarios."

Friday's developments came on the heels of an announcement that the U.S. Justice Department was investigating to determine whether the closing violates antitrust laws. Easterly said that probe had no effect on the sale negotiations.

Group gives condoms to Nicaraguans

MIAMI — A local organization devoted to AIDS education and awareness distributed 1,000 condoms Friday to Nicaraguan refugees and homeless persons who have taken shelter in Bobby Maduro Miami Stadium.

Gay activist Bob Kunst, director of Cure Aids Now, said nine volunteers from his organization distributed the free condoms and copies of the surgeon general's booklet on acquired immune deficiency syndrome in an effort to educate the refugees about the disease.

"This was our Christmas present to the community," Kunst said.

Three of the volunteers came to Miami from Cuba in the Mariel boatlift of 1980 and have since contracted AIDS, Kunst said. "They were able to give their personal experience, which got a positive response," he said.

Holiday cheer can mask ire

United Press International

TAMPA — It's Christmas time again, but Phil Thompson isn't strapping on his bulletproof vest to ward off Jack Frost.

"It's a more critical time of year because you've got families getting together," the Dade City police chief said. "Hopefully, many of those families are having a good time, but we get a greater number of calls involving guns and knives, so we warn our officers to be especially careful."

For those manning the front lines in squad cars, abuse shelters and emergency rooms, Christmas is a season of contrasts. Underneath the mistletoe, behind the lighted trees, wounds are often hidden and happiness feigned. Self-inflicted yuletide cheer, often soothed with alcohol and drugs, leaves behind much to be cleaned up by those who deal with domestic violence.

"It grates on you," said Cpl. R.D. Ruder, a domestic violence expert with the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office. "Outside of a house fire, I'd say there's nothing tougher for an officer during the holidays than showing up at a house with lights and a tree and presents underneath it and see a family going at it."

Experts agree violence is usually a year-round problem, but many say the torn and frayed fabric holding together many families comes under added stress during the holidays.

"As a former battered woman myself, I remember receiving the worst beatings on Christmas Eve," said Candy Slaughter, a domestic violence consultant in Pasco County. "I don't know why it was that way, but I remember the tremendous relief I felt when I went through my first Christmas without being beaten."

"I'm not sure the violence actually increases," Slaughter said. "That's usually a constant in most violent homes, you'll find. But the yelling and the screaming and the threats I think do probably increase during the holidays."

Statistics citing this perceived holiday rise in family violence are rare in part because changes in laws only recently have prompted police departments to keep detailed records of domestic violence.

But the Christmas season regularly ranks among the top events that prompt stress, psychologists say.

Florida is popular with Europeans

United Press International

MIAMI — A weak dollar, cheaper air fares and enticing tour packages are making Florida a popular destination for European travelers, travel industry officials say.

"If the dollar stays where it is, the problem won't be trying to book business from Europe. It will be trying to control it so you don't get inundated," said Richard Graves, marketing director of the Bahia Mar Resort in Fort Lauderdale.

Industry officials said they expect as many as 750,000 Europeans, including 440,000 from the United Kingdom, to travel to Florida this year. Arrivals from the United Kingdom increased 63 percent for the first seven months of 1988 compared with the same period last year.

"As long as people see they are getting value for their dollar, it can be very inexpensive," said Ed Litrenta, Florida tourism director. "But if it isn't a good experience, they aren't going to come back. We have to maintain a quality product and provide excellent service."

The Canary Islands off the northwest coast of Africa and Costa del Sol in Spain still remain popular with the British, but industry officials said cheaper air service and tour packages make Florida an enticing trip.

Based on last week's exchange rate of $1.80 per British pound, a 14-night deal in Orlando and Palm Beach starts at $498 per person, while other packages offered Orlando and Fort Lauderdale cost from $970 per person.

In an effort to promote south Florida overseas, a Greater Fort Lauderdale Convention and Visitors Bureau representative based in London is creating a 14-night package aimed at travel agents and airline personnel.

Airtours, a major tour operator in Manchester, England, provided a boost for area tourism this month when it announced plans to fly two charters a week into Fort Lauderdale, carrying up to 1,000 passengers.

According to a survey by the U.S. Tour and Travel Administration, British visitors spend an average of $1,015 and two weeks in the United States.

Twigg judge may rely on medical sleuths

United Press International

SARASOTA — An unsuspecting blond-haired child with green eyes, looking toward her 10th birthday, has landed at the center of a child custody battle that could be decided by medical detectives in 1989.

Kimberly Mays, who celebrated her 10th birthday Nov. 29, was born at Hardee Memorial Hospital in Wauchula in 1978 and has been raised as the daughter of Robert Mays, a salesman for a roofing company.

Her mother, Barbara, died of cancer in 1981 and after Mays remarried, she lost her second mother to a divorce in 1987.

Now, she faces the possible loss of the man she knows as her father if a Pennsylvania couple can prove they were victims of switched babies at the rural hospital and claim the girl as their daughter.

Ernest and Regina Twigg of Langhorne, Pa., say blood tests taken prior to surgery determined that Arlena, the child they took home from the hospital and raised, was not their biological daughter. Arlena suffered from congenital heart trouble all her life and died of complications in August.

The Twiggs filed a $100 million lawsuit in federal court against the hospital, three doctors and a nurse, charging they were victims of an intentional baby-switch. They later dropped that suit, but indicated it will be refiled, and began legal action to force Mays to allow blood tests on his daughter to rule out the possibility she is their daughter.

Sarasota Circuit Judge Sandy Owen faces the Solomon-like decision on the question of the blood tests.

John Blakely, lawyer for the Twiggs, argued at a Dec. 2 hearing that medical records showed the child Mrs. Twigg delivered Dec. 1, 1978, showed no sign of illness, while an infant born to Mrs. Mays three days earlier had a heart condition that prevented sufficient oxygen from reaching her extremities.

Mays opposes any tests and says regardless of the outcome of the legal battle,

Student safety questioned at Navy school

United Press International

PENSACOLA — A Navy school where a recruit drowned is being torn in two directions, with congressional investigators saying it hasn't gone far enough to ensure safety and students saying the program has become wof.

The tough training techniques of the Rescue Swimmer School, including the use of force to keep recruits in the water, came under scrutiny when a panic-stricken 19-year-old recruit died in the pool March 2 in the arms of an instructor.

Veteran instructor Michael Combe was convicted of negligent homicide and conspiracy in the death of recruit Lee Mirecki, and nine other Navy men ranging from petty officer to captain drew non-judicial punishment.

In the wake of the tragedy the Navy scrapped some questionable techniques and made sweeping reforms that went into effect last summer. But even today the changes do not sit well with everybody.

Those who would benefit complain the program may be too soft. About a quarter of the graduating students think the training probably was better before it was changed.

"Until they do a few rescues, we're probably always going to have some doubters out there," said Capt. Bill Dickson, commanding officer of the Naval Aviation Schools Command. "We certainly feel here that we're turning out a quality student that is every bit as good as the students that we turned out in the past."

But members of the Search and Rescue community also are skeptical. When they held their annual conference in Pensacola in October, they discussed the changes made in the program and took a look at possible improvements.

Among other things, a ban against instructors touching students in the water may be modified and students may be allowed to do some training in the open waters of a nearby bay.

Changes, if any, will not occur for several months, officials said.

Tragedy struck March 2. Lee Mirecki of Appleton, Wis., fled the pool during an exercise called "sharks and daisies," where instructors act like panicking survivors and try to pull rescuers under water to see if they have mastered escape techniques.

Mirecki crawled out, grabbed a nearby equipment rack and begged instructors to let him quit. He was pried away and thrown in the water. Minutes later he had a heart attack and died while students, following instructions, turned away and sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Three subsequent hearings provided a rare look at a Navy school.

POLICE BRIEFS

Firefighter, police battered

WINTER SPRINGS — A man who reportedly fought Winter Springs police and a firefighter is charged with battery on both police and the firefighter.

John Allen Ladd, 22, of 500 Airport Blvd., #1112, Sanford, is also charged with criminal mischief. He was arrested at a ball field on Trotwood Avenue at Northern Way, Winter Springs, at 2:55 a.m. today.

Police said they responded to a report of a man screaming and yelling at the ball field. They found Ladd lying semi-conscious on the ground. When they and a firefighter tried to rouse him he fought and continued to fight when put into a police car. He beat his head against the inside of the car, damaging the vehicle, police said. Ladd reportedly told police he wanted them to "feel his power," and that he "couldn't be stopped." Bond is $2,000.

Woman reports hose attack

SANFORD — Gloria E. Brown, 24, of 413 Cypress Ave., Sanford, told Seminole County sheriff's deputies a man attacked her and beat her with a washing machine drain hose in her sister's yard Sunday.

That brought a charge of aggravated battery against Kim Louis Henderson, 20, of 2409 Greenway Ave., Sanford, at 10:34 p.m. Sunday.

The incident occurred when Henderson reportedly approached and attacked Brown on Randall Street at about 9:45 p.m. She said he cursed and shoved her and hit her in the chest and wrist with the hose. Brown's wrist was cut and she was treated by firefighters. Henderson was arrested at Brown's house. Bond is $5,000.

Man stabbed in head

SANFORD — A man accused of stabbing another in the head and arm during an argument in Sanford at about 11 p.m. Sunday is charged with aggravated battery.

De La Cruz Savier Estrada, 24, of no address, was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's deputies who said he tried to hide behind a car when they arrived at 3530 Celery Ave., Sanford, where the incident occurred and the arrest was made.

At the scene Mundo R. Ybarra, 36, of Wachula, was holding a chair up to ward off Estrada, whom deputies said was advancing on him, before he ducked behind a car.

Under that car, deputies said, they found a kitchen knife, with which Ybarra said he had been stabbed as Estrada threatened to kill him. Deputies did not say if Ybarra's injuries required treatment.

Estrada is charged with aggravated battery. Bond is $5,000.

Police scuffle with angry husband

SANFORD — Police report fighting with a man, whom they said jumped his wife and started hitting her while they were investigating a disturbance at the couple's house.

Tony J. Gaines, 22, of 2 Higgins Terrace, Sanford, was charged with battery and resisting with violence at his house at about 3:15 a.m. Sunday. Police said one officer was pushed into a wall during the fight with Gaines. Bond is $1,000.

Cocaine possession charged

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Two men who got out of a car when Altamonte Springs police approached on Douglas Avenue, were stopped when they tried to walk away at about 8:35 p.m. Sunday. Police said they saw a mirror covered with powder cocaine in the car, along with a razor blade.

That brought charges of possession of cocaine and drug paraphernalia against Mare Leighton Elliott, 20, of 520 Briarwood Court Altamonte Springs; and Mark John Sutherland, 25, of 2156 Blue Iris Place, Longwood. Bond is $2,000 each.

Man charged with punching wife

LONGWOOD — Robert William Smith, 50, of 176 Raintree Drive, Longwood, was charged with battery-spouse abuse at 10:03 p.m. Saturday after his wife told Seminole County sheriff's deputies he punched her in the face several times during an argument over a televised ballgame.

Smith is also charged with battery for allegedly hitting his brother-in-law who tried to defend Mrs. Smith, deputies reported.

Suspected burglar arrested

Edward Perry Mullis, 28, of the Good Samaritan Home, 9th St., Sanford, was arrested on Weldon Boulevard at U.S. Highway 17-92, Lake Mary, shortly after the burglary. He is charged with burglary and bond is $1,000.

October 1994.

Auto Train ridership grew about six percent from 204,000 in 1987 to 216,000 in 1988. The service transported 106,000 vehicles last year and 110,000 in 1988.

Southbound Auto Train travel peaks between mid-December and January when vacationers and snowbirds head for Walt Disney World and the west coast and Miami areas. From January to mid-March northbound travel peaks when seasonal visitors return home. Jacobsen said. Peak and off-peak fares for northbound trips are the same as southbound fares.

During peak times—Oct. 1 through Feb. 20 for southbound and afterward for northbound—an adult may travel one-way for $109, with an additional $198 for an automobile. Off-peak one-way fares drop to $69 per adult and $108 for a vehicle.

Renovation earlier this year made the Sanford terminal something other than a dark, dirty place to wait for a train. Amtrak added a larger waiting area with a news and concession stand.

In spite of a look too contemporary to even slightly resemble Union Station, the romance of train travel is still alive among passengers at the Sanford facility.

"We haven't ridden a train since World War II," Ed Frye said as he nudged his wife Evelyn. The Deltona couple were headed for Maine to spend Christmas with their children.

After a neighbor recommended Auto Train to them, the Frys decided to try the service instead of making the long drive. Driving that distance "puts wear and tear on the car and wear and tear on the body," Ed Frye said.

"It's very social," Dorothy Kraft said. The atmosphere on a plane is stale and rigid, she said, but passengers on the Auto Train "can have a good time together."

Kraft and her husband were on their second Auto Train trip last week en route from their home in New Jersey to their winter home in Palm Beach.

For those afraid of flying, Auto Train is more than a romantic excursion; it's one of the only alternatives. Kathy West of Boston said she and her two children used the service to travel to Disney World because of her husband's fear of flying.

Do Auto Train passengers hang out in Sanford before taking off for other destinations?

Paula and Alan Teller of Yonkers, New York have been to Sanford three times via Auto Train, but never gave the city a second glance until last week.

"We went down to the water (Lake Monroe) for the first time today and we were surprised to see that Sanford is actually something to see," Alan Teller said. The Tellers spent less than an hour looking around the city.

Sanford Scenic Improvement Board members believe more passengers might explore the city if the part of it they saw when arriving in Sanford was better maintained.

"We need to show pride in that area," SIB Chairperson Martha Yancey said, because it presents passengers their first impression of Sanford. Board members are addressing concerns about trash, weeds and unmaintained vacant lots in the terminal area.

Yancey said the board has approved plans for planting crepe myrtle trees along the median of State Road 46, which leads to Persimmon Avenue. Board members are soliciting church and civic groups to accept responsibility for watering the trees.

Scenic Improvement Board work in the area can't begin until other SIB projects are completed, she said, because the board is limited to a $7,000 annual budget.

The Auto Train can transport 450 passengers and 230 automobiles in one haul, said Pat Duricka of Amtrak's Washington headquarters. Amtrak places restrictions on height and length of vehicles to avoid damage to passenger property, Duricka said.

Passengers are served dinner and a movie is featured during the nonstop trip. "Complaints about Auto Train are different than complaints about our other trains," Jacobsen said. Auto Train is "so nice people say, 'Why don't you have live entertainment?'"

Departures from Lorton and Sanford leave at 4:30 p.m. and arrive at 9 a.m. daily. While employees at the station are based locally, Auto Train crew members are from the Washington area.

Jacobsen expects five to 10 percent growth for Auto Train next year. But, he said, Auto Train may only grow to a certain point because Amtrak must turn away passengers during peak seasons, and service to other areas isn't expected.

Amtrak markets Auto Train through regional advertisements in national publications, such as Time and Newsweek, as well as through television and radio, and billboards, Jacobsen said.

Amtrak Marketing Route Manager Linda Park said a substantial market Amtrak targets is northeasterners in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and to those with winter homes in Miami, Orlando, Tampa and West Palm Beach.

Dealing with Arafat is a Mideast boon

Has the moment arrived for the United States to begin talking directly to the Palestine Liberation Organization in order to jump-start the stalled Mideast peace process?

At the very least, the time has come for the White House to consider such a step, in light of the PLO's rhetorical but nonetheless important shift to a more conciliatory stance toward Israel.

Thirteen years ago, then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger made a pledge to Israel on behalf of the U.S. government not to negotiate with the PLO until it recognized Israel's right to exist and renounced terrorism in all its forms. Those conditions were not unreasonable in 1975, nor are they unreasonable today.

But Mr. Kissinger's tactical promise, faithfully honored by Washington ever since, has had the strategic consequence of severely limiting American influence in the region. How can the United States play the role of honest broker in the Israeli-Palestinian conflicts if it will speak to only one side?

In recent years, both Secretary of State George Shultz and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir have tried in a multitude of ways to foster a new Palestinian leadership outside the auspices of the PLO. These efforts have proven to be nothing more than a time-wasting exercise in futility.

Among the refugees of the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, as well as throughout the entire Arab world, the PLO is tenaciously regarded as the sole, legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

The U.S. and Israeli governments sooner or later must face up to this immutable reality. This is especially the case now that Jordan's King Hussein has abandoned, at least for the foreseeable future, the American-sponsored idea of acting as a surrogate for the PLO in peace talks between Israel and a delegation of Palestinians unaffiliated with the PLO.

As the intifada, or uprising, by Palestinian youths continues to rage in the occupied territories, Israel and the United States cannot continue to defer indefinitely negotiations on a homeland for the Palestinian people. The long standing refusal to hold discussions with PLO representatives fuels the anger and hatred that keeps the intifada alive — at Israel's peril.

In addition to these practical considerations, there have been in recent weeks a number of steps taken by the PLO to comply with the conditions stipulated by the Kissinger pledge. One of the most significant developments occurred earlier this week when Yasser Arafat issued a conciliatory declaration to the United States and Israel after meeting with five prominent American Jews in Stockholm.

The statement specified that the Palestine National Council, which is the Palestinian parliament in exile, "accepted the existence of Israel as a state in the region" and "declared its rejection and condemnation of terrorism in all its forms." At a news conference, Mr. Arafat added: "We accept two states, the Palestinian state and the Jewish state of Israel."

On its face, the Stockholm declaration meets the conditions laid down by Mr. Kissinger. Nonetheless, many important players in the peace process, including Secretary of State Shultz and President Reagan, remain skeptical that the PLO has truly changed.

If Arafat succeeds in abolishing the PLO's commitment to destruction of the Jewish state, he should be able to count on the United States to be a fair mediator in the quest for a just settlement for the Palestinians and a lasting peace for Israel.

Reagan era ends — thank goodness

Just like Carl Sandberg's fog, 1988 crept into our lives "on little cat feet" — sat looking over the nation and world "on silent haunches," then decided to check out.

Small wonder, it was a year undistinguished for its unnewsworthiness.

We were reduced to consuming page 1 reports about four maudlin mediocrities — Dan Quayle, Michael Dukakis, Morton Downey Jr. and Geraldo Rivera — then being force-fed features about Oprah Winfrey's obsessive dieting.

We will not miss that part of 1988.

Yet, the year also sent us soaring to new heights of pride. The dazzling performances of two black American Olympians, Florence Griffith Joyner and Jackie Joyner-Kersey, dominated the Olympics; the Discovery's flight restored our supremacy in space; the election of a New England Texan showed that wealthy kids can also see their dreams of becoming president come true; and a worn-out Palestinian guerrilla faked everybody out with a born-again peace initiative.

We will cherish those moments of 1988.

But history will exalt 1988 for one glorious — or inglorious — fact: the end of the Reagan era.

I recognize that millions of Americans will mourn Dr. Feel Good's fade from prominence. What a phony claim to goodness this cinematic con artist has foisted on the American people for two presidential terms!

For eight years, Ronald Wilson Reagan sung hosannas to a balanced budget, yet each year he set new records for budget deficits. (Between 1982 and 1986, it more than doubled, rising from $127 billion to $273 billion.) If he'd used the same irresponsible style managing a chain store, he would have bankrupted the entire chain.

For eight years, a sanctimonious Gipper acted as if Moses had personally handed him the Ten Commandments. But he sat by quietly while more than 100 of his appointees were indicted for fraud, embezzlement, conspiracy to defraud the government, perjury and sundry acts of dishonesty.

For eight years, this "rich man's president" who falsely promised that no safety nets would be yanked from under the poor sat idly by while the poor got poorer, the rich got richer and the plight of America's homeless crescendoed into a national crisis. Reagan did nothing to keep the average income of the poorest fifth of the population from declining by 10.9 percent while the average income of the richest fifth was increasing by 13.8 percent.

For eight years, the ex-radio announcer who boasted he wasn't a racist because 50 years ago he believed that blacks should be allowed to play major league baseball became a major force in inspiring the resurrection of white racism in America. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall accurately capsuled Reagan's true place in history when Marshall said that Reagan has been the worst president for black Americans since Woodrow Wilson.

For eight years, the ex-Democrat praised one of America's greatest Democrats, then methodically worked to sabotage every piece of humane legislation that Franklin D. Roosevelt enacted to uplift the poor and improve the lot of minorities.

State of childhood is intolerable

WASHINGTON — When the glorious music of "The Messiah" rang forth again this year, I found myself moved as rarely before by the lines, "For unto us a Child is born, A Son is given." It had less to do with the performance, I quickly realized, than the arrival this year of Daniel Neitlich Broder, the first grandchild, the coming of a new generation.

The magic of childhood, which is much on our minds and in our hearts this season, also rests heavy on the nation's conscience. For all too many children in this land of affluence, the magic is a myth.

One good friend spent the holiday season wrestling with a cruel dilemma involving her 16-month-old grandchild. Her daughter, the mother of three children, has become a heavy drug user. The two older children are living with my friend, but with her job and other family responsibilities, she lacks the energy, the income and the living space to care adequately for the baby. She is trying to decide whether the infant should continue to be exposed to the risks of the current domicile or whether the authorities should be asked to arrange a foster home placement or adoption.

Stories like hers are all too common. A few days before Christmas, Marian Wright Edelman, president of the Children's Defense Fund (CDF), told the National Press Club the sad truth that, "Our children are growing poorer while our nation is growing richer." Even as we celebrate the achievement of the past quarter-century in lifting the burden of poverty from the backs of most elderly Americans, we are assaulted with shameful facts about the plight of our youth.

Of every 100 children born today, 13 will be born to teen-age mothers and 20 will be born out of wedlock; 12 will be born to parents who divorce before the children reach 18; 15 will be born into households where no parent is employed, and an equal number into households where the working parent earns a below-poverty wage; 25 will be on welfare at some point prior to adulthood; and 40 will live at some time in female-headed households. (All figures come from the CDF Fact Book for 1988.)

The percentage of children living in poverty has increased from one in seven 20 years ago to one in five today. What is true of children is equally true of young families. "The Forgotten Half," a report last month by the William T. Grant Foundation Commission on Work, Family and Citizenship, showed that while the poverty rate for all families declined slightly in the past 20 years, it rose 75 percent for those where the head of household is under 30 and more than doubled for those where the family head is under 25.

"The Forgotten Half" focuses on the 20 million 16-to-24-year-olds who are unlikely to attend college. Like the children on whom CDF concentrates, they are facing a life of declining family stability and diminishing economic prospects — unless they are very fortunate.

For many of the youths, the chance of escaping that fate depends on the fortuitous intervention of a caring adult. The Grant Foundation report praised a program at Union Temple Baptist Church in Washington, D.C., which I first learned about in a moving column by The Washington Post's Courtland Milloy.

Orita, an African word meaning crossroads, enlists men of the church to "sponsor" youths growing up in female-headed households. The adult mentors undertake the individual responsibility of instilling a better set of values than these youngsters would learn on the street and helping them gain skills that will aid in finding jobs. Milloy quoted the pastor, Rev. Willie F. Wilson, as saying, "Whether they go to college or not, we want to make sure that they have the skills. We want them to go into this world feeling good about themselves and their heritage."

The youths of whom Milloy wrote are among the lucky few who may escape the poverty trap into which they were born. There is convincing evidence that intervention — whether by church volunteers or government-financed teacher/counselors — can effect many rescues. As the CDF points out, careful follow-up studies have shown that graduates of early childhood programs such as Head Start are much more likely to complete high school and go on to vocational or academic training, more likely to be employed, self-supporting and stay out of welfare; less likely to be in trouble with the law or become teen parents.

All this may help explain why former Presidents Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter, in their bipartisan "American Agenda" given last month to President-elect George Bush, said the neglect of America's children and youth is "intolerable."

FDIC holds the defaulted goods

WASHINGTON — The sluggish Christmas shopping season left retailers with more inventory than they wanted. In that respect, stores have something in common with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. — bulging warehouses that beg for a sale.

If you shopped at the FDIC store today, you would find everything from a complete Western-wear shop to 705 men's hairpieces neatly sorted and bagged.

Those items and other exotica amounting to more than $11 billion are the remains from the record number of bank failures since 1982. The FDIC insures depositors in the nation's 15,000 banks and gets stuck with the property of the banks that fail.

Our associate Michael Binstein recently browsed through the FDIC catalog. There are such finds as a large mansion in Southern California with panoramic views of Newport Harbor and the Pacific Ocean. The house was built in 1926 for King Gillette, the inventor of the safety razor. If that doesn't suit, how about a 26-acre executive island retreat on Red Cedar Lake in Wisconsin that is only accessible by boat?

In addition to real estate, the FDIC has some other unusual odds and ends, including a movie entitled, "And They're Off," starring Tab Hunter and Jose Ferrer. Let the buyer beware. This movie has no soundtrack. You could probably get it for a steal. The FDIC has tried for two years to sell the movie to a studio, but no luck.

There is a striking variety of vehicles in the inventory. Make an offer on the 242-foot ferry built in 1927. Its last owners tried unsuccessfully to transform it into a floating office in San Francisco. The FDIC fleet also boasts a 1957 Rolls-Royce Silver Wraith, a collector's item that stretches as long as a limo.

You can even buy your own raceway — a quarter mile asphalt go-cart track accompanied by a water slide on nine acres in Rochester, Minn.

You name it. If someone went belly-up trying to market a loser, you can bet the FDIC has that loser in its catalog.

While we're on the subject of losers — a 10 percent interest in the snake-bitten Dallas Cowboys has been added to the FDIC portfolio. Regardless, a Washington business magazine, recently reported that one of the team's owners defaulted on a commercial bank loan and the Cowboys were the collateral.

The FDIC declined to disclose the name of the owner in default.

The loan was originally held by First Republic Bank Corp. of Dallas. Last July, the FDIC agreed to sell the insolvent bank to NCNB Corp. of North Carolina in the second-largest government-assisted bailout in banking history. The deal calls for the FDIC to assume the losses for a $5 billion pool of real estate and bad loans.

The owner's loan was in that pool. James Erwin, who supervises bad assets for NCNB, will actually be in charge of finding a buyer for the Cowboys stock, even though the FDIC owns it now.

A Cowboys spokesman refused to comment on any aspect of the organization's books, except to confirm that the team is for sale.

100 attend march to Christ's birthplace

United Press International

BETHLEHEM, Israeli-occupied West Bank — Barely 100 pilgrims and tourists braved a cold rain to watch a religious procession to Jesus' birthplace in a somber Christmas Eve celebration dampened for a second year by the Palestinian uprising.

Rain-drenched Manger Square outside the Church of the Nativity was nearly deserted and shops were closed.

Security, as usual, was extremely tight in the hilltop town just south of Jerusalem, despite the small number of Christian pilgrims and tourists. Hundreds of Israeli soldiers patrolled the city and kept watch from rooftops.

City officials canceled all non-religious Christmas celebrations and decided not to decorate the city because of the uprising against 21 years of Israeli occupation.

Mayor Elias Freij said Palestinians were not in a mood to celebrate after 12 months of the uprising, which began Dec. 9, 1967 and has left at least 323 Arabs dead and thousands wounded in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"You all know the hardship and things our people have suffered," Freij said. "We hope next year will be the start of peace negotiations."

For a second year, Freij did not hold his annual cocktail party for diplomats and Israeli officials.

And for a second year, only a fraction of the usual crowds appeared for rain-soaked Christmas celebrations. In past years, several thousand people from Bethlehem and abroad have crammed the square to celebrate.

When the Latin Patriarch led a religious procession into the nearly empty Manger Square at midday Saturday to begin the Christmas Eve observances, barely 100 pilgrims and tourists stood in cold rain to watch.

Michel Sabbah, the first Palestinian patriarch, led the procession across the square to the Church of the Nativity, built on the spot where Christians believe Jesus Christ was born nearly 2,000 years ago.

The patriarch was met by Freij and the Israeli military governor Lt. Col. Shaltiel Lavy, but the fanfare and Boy Scout drum corps that traditionally accompany the patriarch into town were absent.

A single shooting star in a tree next to the police station was the only ornament in Manger Square, usually festooned with lights and filled with tourists.

"When I was a child, I would always be threatened that if I didn't behave I would get coal in my stocking," said the Rev. Stephen Doyle, a Franciscan priest studying in Jerusalem. "That's what this Christmas is — coal in the stocking."

But many visitors found their visit spiritually rewarding, especially inside the Church of the Nativity.

"It's just kind of a special feeling spreading Christmas in the birthplace of Christ," said Guy Roll, a 21-year-old Tempe, Ariz. student studying in Paris. "All the songs when you were growing up speak about Bethlehem. All my Christmases from now on will be compared to this Christmas."

For Stephen Clackson of London, the bad weather and political situation were not a problem.

Trash

Here are some approaches that might turn the job of taking out the trash into an enjoyable one.

- Don't crumple the wrapping paper when you remove it. Cut it into 3 by 5 inch pieces and use it as note paper throughout the year.
- Save the bows and reuse them.
- Keep the boxes so you won't be scrambling for gift containers next Christmas Eve.
- Let the kids make decorations with the cards, some ribbon and some glue.
- Let the kids build a "fort" with the boxes.
- Wrapping paper makes a festive book cover.
- Store your holiday decorations in the boxes.
- Line your drawers with the paper.

the courtroom, you got paid for it. You got so much mileage to bring him in.

"A lot of them (deputies) didn't make it back then because they hadn't known what they were doing. I had a lot of pretty good people helping me. That's the reason I held the job," Beck said. During that time, he said, "I had a few cows, I worked for my daddy here for I guess 50 years. I didn't work for a wage from him, only for what cattle I had."

"I couldn't get an education, because of riding the cattle from Winter Park to 25th Street. I've been at it a long time... There was cattle in Florida long before there was cattle in Texas," Beck said. In recent years, the Beck family carried on the cowboy tradition, with volunteer cowboys helping them round up their herd for medical tests.

But, today Beck's days in the saddle are over. He is survived by his wife of 54 years, Inez and Charlie's three daughters, Kimberly, Kelly and Brenda Beck, of Osteen. Beck also leaves behind a sister, Minnie Kratzert, of Sanford.

"We're all going to miss him, because he was always so good to everybody," said family friend Nancy Engebretsen of Sanford. "He was one of the old timers. Everybody like to hear his stories about the old days."

Funeral arrangements weren't complet Monday, Brissou-Guardian Funeral Home, Sanford, is in charge of arrangements. Charlie said there will be a graveside service for his dad at the old Sanford Cemetery on 25th Street, but the time hasn't been set.

Capsule

treated unfairly, and that is one of the reasons we want to recover this capsule," said Fuller, who was a space-struck 17-year-old when he first read of the Liberty Bell 7 accident. More recently, the flight was a key element in Tom Wolfe's book "The Right Stuff" and a movie in which actor Fred Ward portrayed Grissom.

"We feel that the capsule will be in such good condition that we will be able to exonerate Grissom, which is one of our goals," he added. "When you know the inner workings of the craft and what it takes to do things like execute the explosive mechanism, it's hard to believe that someone could make that (the allegations against Grissom) stick."

Fuller, whose Subsurface Technologies group has turned to new projects since the recent decline in the oil exploration business, said Grissom's brother, Norman, a newspaperman in Mitchell, Ind., has pledged his cooperation. He also hopes for assistance from Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, one of the original seven U.S. astronauts along with Grissom.

In addition to exonerating Grissom, Fuller also wants to test out new technology for use in recovering shipwrecks from the Caribbean. He admits, however, that it will be "like finding a needle in the proverbial haystack" to locate the 9-foot high, 8-foot in diameter capsule, believed to be more than 18,000 feet below the Atlantic about 300 miles east of Cape Canaveral.

Fla. "We're interested in looking for wrecks, since some other recoveries have shown us how rewarding this can be," he said. "I would say it's a 50-50 thing. It's a drive to recover the capsule, which is something I've always wanted to do, and to develop some new advances in electronics and sonar."

"There are billions and billions of dollars (in wrecked ships) sitting on the Caribbean floor."

Despite its 27 years below the surface, Fuller believes the Liberty Bell 7 is still in good shape.

"It's been our experience that anything in deep, cool water usually stays in a wonderful state of preservation," he said. "It's in a low-sediment area — they probably get an inch of sediment in 300 years — so it's probably sitting on the bottom in plain view. Of course, it's still a very small target."

Fuller hopes to begin work by April, pending approval by NASA. The plan is to borrow an underwater "rover," similar to the one used by the salvage group that located the Titanic's wreckage last year, to find the capsule and then attach an inflatable air bag that will allow it to float to the surface.

He said one thing in his group's favor is its vow not to sell the capsule, as other salvage groups have suggested. Fuller hopes to rotate the capsule between the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C., a planned maritime museum in Fort Worth and an aerospace museum at Purdue University, Grissom's alma mater.

Parents in Broward county are organizing to fight the scheduled August opening of an elementary school less than 200 feet from high-tension power lines.

Some parents fear the electromagnetic fields generated by the power lines could lead to an increased chance of cancer, leukemia and other diseases in children in nearby schools.

School officials say the danger at school is no worse than at home, and cite testimony and studies by national experts at a series of workshops.

"You don't take a chance with children's lives," Sharon Rausch, one of the three Boca

Raton parents who filed suit, told the Fort Lauderdale News and Sun Sentinel Sunday.

A parents group protesting the opening of the Broward County elementary school M consists of about 25 people, but represents many more, said Dorothy Doering, head of the group.

"The School Board wants us to prove something wrong is going on, but I think the burden of proof should be on them to prove it is safe," she said.

"Our position is we have 18 schools contiguous to power lines," said Ray de la Feuilliez, an associate superintendent at Broward County schools. "If it is unsafe for school M, it is unsafe for all of those other students."

WORLD BRIEFS

Chinese riot against 'black devils'

BEIJING — Hundreds of angry Chinese went on a rampage against "black devils" Sunday in an eruption of hostility toward Africans studying in a city in eastern China, forcing the foreign students to take refuge in a train station, witnesses said.

Chinese residents of Nanjing, 600 miles south of Beijing, chased black Africans studying at a local college to a downtown railway station and surrounded it before hundreds of police arrived to disperse the crowds, foreign witnesses said from city in phone interviews.

"Down with black devils!" the Chinese shouted as they pursued about 100 African students.

The riot erupted after a dispute between African and other foreign students and local authorities over a Christmas Eve party apparently set off a fight sparked by rumors that a Chinese had been killed.

There were no reports of injuries during the disturbances. An officer at Nanjing's public security bureau, reached by phone early Monday, refused comment on the clashes.

More than 10,000 foreigners currently study in China, more than half of them from African, Arab and Asian nations. Nanjing has several colleges where foreigners study, including a center affiliated with Johns Hopkins University.

Black Africans studying at Chinese universities have repeatedly complained of racially motivated harassment and mistreatment by other Chinese students and even by local authorities. The Africans, many of whom are studying on scholarships from Third World countries, say the hostility is often aimed at black males with Chinese girlfriends.

Thousands attend funeral of ecologist

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Thousands of Brazilians shouted anti-government slogans at the funeral Sunday of a prominent labor leader apparently slain for his role in protecting the South American country's Amazon rain forests.

Francisco Mendes Filho, known affectionately to millions of his countrymen as Chico Mendes, was buried in the village of Xapuri, 1,800 miles northwest of Rio de Janeiro in the heart of the Amazon jungle region.

Mendes, the head of the Rural Workers' Union and a distinguished environmentalist, was shot dead by unknown gunmen Thursday at his home in Xapuri, two weeks after he expressed fear of assassination in a newspaper interview.

Authorities deployed 40 soldiers to maintain order during the funeral procession by about 20,000 people, who chanted slogans directed against the government of President Jose Sarney, police, large landowners and the Rularist Democratic Union, an ultraconservative political party known by its Portuguese acronym of UDR.

Bush's son, grandson go to Armenia

MOSCOW — President-elect George Bush's 12-year-old grandson, declaring he could not enjoy Christmas at home while earthquake victims suffered, Sunday delivered holiday toys to youngsters in an Armenian hospital, the Tass news agency said.

The President-elect's son John E. Bush, 40, and George P. Bush, 12, arrived in the capital of Yerevan at dawn to help distribute 40 tons of medical supplies, clothing and other relief goods provided through the AmeriCares Foundation of New Canaan, Conn.

They also brought along thousands of toys for the child victims of the killer quake that claimed 55,000 lives and left another half a million people homeless on Dec. 7.

Vremya, an evening television news program, showed the their arrival and a later visit to a children's ward in a Yerevan hospital to deliver toys on Christmas Day on behalf of the AmeriCares Foundation.

"You can see they don't need a translator," a Vremya commentator said as the camera showed the elder Bush wiping away a tear while the younger Bush delivered the toys.

Hirohito begins 63rd year on throne

TOKYO — Japan's Emperor Hirohito, bedridden with suspected abdominal cancer, began his 63rd year on the throne on Christmas Day in "extremely stable" condition, a palace spokesman said.

Crown Prince Akihito, first in line to the "Chrysanthemum Throne," and other family members attended a Shinto religious rite in the moated Imperial Palace, marking the anniversary of the death of Hirohito's father, Emperor Taisho, said the Imperial Household Agency that manages palace affairs.

Hirohito, 87, ascended to the throne following Emperor Taisho's death on Christmas Day 1926.

Hostage's family leaves Beirut

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Relatives of a French woman held by a radical Palestinian group along with her three daughters packed up Christmas toys and left for home Monday without two of the children as they had hoped.

The children's father, grandmother and uncle boarded a France-bound plane at Beirut airport with five French journalists who had arrived with them from Paris Saturday.

Brigitte Valente, grandmother of the abducted children — Marie-Laure Bettille, 7, and Virginie Bettille, 6 — appeared depressed at a Beirut hotel before departing with the Christmas toys she had brought for the youngsters. The girls' father, Pascal Bettille, said, "(the captors) told us that they will free the two children, but they did not say when or where the release will take place."

"But I'm less disappointed now because I got a confirmation that they will be set free," said Bettille, the estranged husband of Jacqueline Valente, mother of the two girls and another girl born soon after she was kidnapped.

The Palestinian Fatah Revolutionary Council, headed by Abu Nidal, kidnapped the French family and five Belgians from a pleasure boat off the coast of the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip in November 1987. Fatah has ac-used the captives, all of whom hold joint Israeli-French or Israeli-Belgian citizenship, of being Israelis.

Sunday, Fatah spokesman Walid Khaled released separate videotapes, one showing the French woman and the other showing the Belgian nationals identified as Emmanuel Houdekens, his wife Godelieve Kets, their two children, Laurent and Valerie, and Houdekens' brother, Fernand.

"We have made a long headway regarding security arrangements to release the two girls," Khaled said after meeting Sunday with the two girls' father, grandmother and uncle Andre Metral.

The closed-door meeting took place at the Palestinian refugee camp of Mar Elias in southern Beirut, which provides a base for Fatah, a radical splinter group of the Palestine Liberation Organization led by Abu Nidal, widely viewed in the West as the most notorious of terrorists.

Fatah has claimed responsibility for numerous terrorist attacks, including the assaults on the Vienna and Rome airports Dec. 27, 1985, in which 20 people were killed.

Khaled, who earlier said the two girls would be freed in response to a direct appeal Saturday by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi, said he was finalizing the planned release with French Embassy officials in Beirut.

New Israeli Cabinet hold first meeting

United Press International

JERUSALEM — Ministers at the first Cabinet meeting of Israel's new government briefed Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir Sunday on the occupied territories, where soldiers killed one Arab and wounded at least 18 others, Israeli and Palestinian sources said.

A second Palestinian died Sunday at a Jerusalem hospital from wounds he received Dec. 16 on a day of violent clashes in Nablus, the West Bank's largest city. Mohammed Nasser Hawash, 22, was the eighth Arab to die from the fighting on "Black Friday," one of the bloodiest days in the territories since the start of the Arab uprising more than a year ago.

Stone-throwing Palestinian youths attacked an army patrol at the U.N.-run Jabalia refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip Sunday, prompting soldiers to open fire, Palestinian sources and the army said. Soldiers shot and killed Raed Dmaidah, 17, and wounded four other youths during the clash, they said.

Two other youths were wounded in later confrontations with soldiers in Jabalia, and at least 12 Palestinians suffered wounds during violence elsewhere on the West Bank and in Gaza, Palestinian sources said.

In a report on the Dec. 16 violence in Nablus, the Ma'ariv newspaper said Maj. Gen. Amram Mitzna, head of the army's central command, had concluded in an investigation that all soldiers followed orders when they used their weapons to counter Arab demonstrators.

Mitzna determined that soldiers opened fire on Palestinians involved in the violent demonstrations only when their lives or those of other Israelis were endangered, the newspaper reported.

At least 325 Palestinians have been killed in the uprising against 21 years of Israeli occupation. Eleven Israelis also have died in the violence, which began Dec. 9 last year.

Shamir met with his new Cabinet for the first time since Thursday, when the Knesset, or parliament, voted to approve a coalition government between the country's two largest politi-

Likud and Labor have governed Israel for the past four years in an uneasy partnership frequently split over the Middle East peace process. Labor leader Shimon Peres became finance minister in the new government after serving for two years as foreign minister.

At the Cabinet meeting, which lasted for less than an hour, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Police Minister Haim Bar-Lev briefed Shamir on security issues in the occupied territories.

Shamir advocates building more Jewish settlements on the West Bank, while Peres and other Labor leaders want a freeze on new construction as part of an effort to reduce tensions.

One? Two? Three?

Just how many are under these walnut shells?

Covering the news sometimes can be like working a puzzle when all the pieces aren't apparent. It's not easy to see what's taking place behind the scenes. But that's our job.

A good newspaper doesn't settle for the obvious. A good newspaper turns over the shells — and the rock — to get the story behind the story and deliver that to you. Quickly, accurately, fairly.

We're working to be that kind of newspaper for you.

A newspaper with conscientious reporters who work hard to separate the facts from rumor, innuendo and half-truths.

A newspaper with experienced editors who examine stories to make sure they are complete, balanced and reasonable.

We know you count on your newspaper to deliver the whole story of all the news that might affect your life — in time for you to respond to it or benefit from it.

That makes us accountable to you. Every day, in every issue, with every story we report.

For professional journalists, there's no room for guesswork.

Our reporters are trained to assume nothing, check out everything. Our editors are conditioned to listen to you to know this community's pulse and reflect that heartbeat on our pages.

The real news doesn't fall into our laps. We still dig it out, the old-fashioned way, one fact at a time until it adds up to a complete account that makes today's realities clear.

The real stories are no more obvious than the number of peas under those walnut shells.

And, by the way, there are four peas under the shells. Two under the front one. We never said it was easy out there.

YOU CAN COUNT ON US.

Seven killed in auto accident

KNOX, Ind. — The deaths of seven people, including six members of a family, in a head-on collision between their car and a truck made Christmas a day for mourning in Knox. "It ain't too good," said Oscar Combs, father of Laura Sites, 25, who was killed in Saturday's crash. "It's something you gotta put up with."

The car, loaded with Christmas packages, collided head-on with a truck, killing all those in the auto, state police said. Floyd Davis, 25, of Knox, was driving west on a county road when he swerved into the eastbound lane to avoid a car that had stopped ahead of him to turn. He ran into a truck that was pulling a trailer loaded with a bulldozer, trooper Don Hartman said. Visibility at the time was good, authorities said.

The driver of the truck, Terry White, 31, of Knox, was treated and released from a hospital for soreness of the arms and legs. Combs spent Sunday morning making funeral arrangements for his daughter at a Knox funeral home.

Sites was the only one of the dead who was not a relative of Davis. Killed in the wreck was Rosalind Davis, 24, his wife; Gloria Davis, 46, his mother; Carl James Davis, 3, his stepson; Crystal Davis, 6, his stepdaughter, and Jesse Davis, 17, his brother. Sites was Jesse Davis' girlfriend.

Members of the Davis family will spend Monday morning making funeral arrangements, said an official at the Ibram and Sons Memorial Chapel in Knox. He said funeral services for all seven will be held Thursday.

Seattle newspapers picketed

SEATTLE — About two dozen Seattle newspaper employees, some dressed in 19th century costumes, picketed their employers Sunday to protest their refusal to provide holiday premium pay for working on Christmas Day.

One demonstrator, dressed as "Scrooge" in top hat, white stockings and breeches, said the picket lines in front of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and Seattle Times were aimed at drawing attention to the papers' decision to not give extra compensation to employees required to work the holiday.

Earlier this month the two newspapers told employees that those who work on Christmas and New Year's days, both of which fall on a Sunday, would not receive premium pay while the people who worked the following days would receive holiday compensation.

"If allowed to go unchallenged, the action taken by the papers (to move the holidays) would become the precedent, allowing even more drastic actions later," according to a leaflet handed out by the demonstrators.

"What's next? The 3rd of July," was the message on one picket sign. Another sign read: "Christmas comes once a year and it ain't tomorrow."

Other picket signs carried the messages "Don't be Scrooged," "Christmas Pay for Christmas Day," and "Merry Ex-Mas."

Suspect arrested in armored car holdups

LOS ANGELES — Police said Sunday they have arrested a key suspect in a string of armored car guard robberies, including a shootout with a guard last June in North Hollywood.

Steven Bernard Young, 29, was taken into custody on Friday night as he went to visit a friend in South Central Los Angeles and booked on suspicion of robbery, detective Norman Roberge said.

Due to the holiday, most detectives were at home and information on the arrest was sketchy. In a prepared release, Roberge said Young was "one of the main suspects" in a string of armored car and bank robberies.

Two armored car guards were shot to death during robberies at a Security Pacific Bank in Panorama City Oct. 14 and a Lucky Food Center in Bellflower Dec. 15.

At least 11 other guards have been robbed in a series of ambushes in Los Angeles, Riverside and Ventura counties dating back to last December.

Law enforcement authorities have been investigating whether a single gang may be responsible or whether several copy-cat bands have been involved.

Roberge obtained an arrest warrant for Young in November and at that time said the gang is possibly responsible for robberies of 10 armored car guards and three banks.

Since the warrant was issued, three other armored car guards have been held up in Universal City, at the downtown Broadway Plaza and the Lucky supermarket in Bellflower, where guard Patrick Rooney, 35, was killed.

Washington's crossing without the ice

WASHINGTON CROSSING, N.J. — Sunshine warmed crowds honoring the daring Christmas Day raid 212 years ago when George Washington led 2,400 freezing patriots across the icy Delaware River to one of the first American victories over British troops.

"These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from service to his country," Washington told his troops, shivering in the driven sleet of winter, 1776.

That dramatic scene was re-enacted Sunday for the 36th time before some 6,000 spectators who lined both banks of the river to watch James Gallagher of Newtown, Pa., lead about 120 men across the famous quarter-mile crossing from Pennsylvania to New Jersey.

But unlike Washington — who had to move 200 horses and 18 cannons across the river at night in ice and snow — Gallagher only had to worry about sailing four 40-foot replica Durham boats across the river in mild weather with temperatures hovering in the mid-40s.

"(Washington) had a much more difficult task to do. It was night and in very severe weather, so knowing their hardships makes our job much easier to do," he said. "But we try to keep everything as authentic as possible."

Inmate information access investigated

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The Federal Correctional Institution is investigating whether inmates misused information from mortgage applications they processed under a contract from the federal government, a published report said Sunday.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has stopped sending the mortgage applications to the prison pending the outcome of the investigation, the Lexington Herald Leader reported.

HUD has a contract with the prison for inmates to type information into a computer from mortgage applications people across the country submitted to the agency.

The applications contain a complete financial history of the applicants, including names, addresses, occupations, incomes, assets and employers. Some of the applications also contain bank account and credit card numbers, according to inmate Beverly Hirsch, who is serving a 40-year sentence for bank fraud.

"Would you want convicted criminals to have your bank account numbers and accounts of your credit cards?" Hirsch asked.

Hirsch said she was shocked to find the information available to the inmates.

"I'd like to say I came to prison to learn a lesson, not get material to commit future crimes," she said. "Inmates have no business with this information."

New York City homicides top 1,848

United Press International

NEW YORK — Fueled by an explosion of crack-related violence, the number of homicides reported in New York City eclipsed the record of 1,841 set in 1981 and surged to at least 1,848 by Christmas Day, authorities said Sunday.

At least six homicides were reported Christmas Day, as the pace of killings continued unabated by the holiday, police said.

"There's more out there, I'm sure. We just haven't counted them yet," Sgt. Maurice Howard said late Sunday.

"There's more out there, I'm sure. We just haven't counted them yet."

-Sgt. Maurice Howard

The record-breaking 1,842nd murder came late on Christmas Eve, with the suspected drug-related shooting of Carlos Rosa, 19, on Staten Island. The New York Times said Monday. Police said Rosa was found dead with bullet wounds to his head about 11:05 p.m. Saturday, not far from his home.

And there is still a week left in

New York's bloodiest year.

Much of the record-setting pace, which averaged 5.15 killings a day, has been attributed to the surge in drug abuse, particularly crack.

The number of homicides declined significantly from 1981 to 1985, but began to rise dramatically in 1986 as crack inundated many parts of the city.

Mayor Edward Koch told the Times the only hope of cutting the murder rate is to get tough on drug crimes.

"I believe that no matter what we do with respect to cops, we're not going to be able to eliminate drug addiction unless we're much tougher, and people don't want to be tough enough," Koch said.

Sgt. Ed Burns cautioned that the tally is "a statistical game" and that the actual number of murders may be higher or lower as reports filter in and are investigated.

Cops play Santa for burglarized family

United Press International

FORT WORTH, Texas — Several dozen Fort Worth policemen working on Christmas Eve pulled double duty as Santas, raising $350 on short notice to buy presents for a family whose home was hit by holiday burglars for a second straight year.

Officer Curtis Fortenberry, who works with a police canine unit that examines burglary scenes, organized the gift-gathering for Paul and Diane Hernandez and their two children, who had faced a second straight blue Christmas without presents.

"I was in my patrol car when I heard this had happened to this nice, hard-working couple for the second year in a row," Fortenberry said. "I thought, 'this is Christmas, this just isn't right.'"

"We have little computers in our cars, so I got on mine and said, 'I need money, guys, start digging.'"

Money was half the battle. The other half was convincing Sandra Harten, a manager at the Sears store at Ridgeman Mall, to open her store at 4 a.m. Sunday so police could buy clothes and toys for the Hernandez' two children.

"We stayed up all night wrapping the presents and delivered them to the family about 6:30 a.m.," Fortenberry said. "It was nice. All I do on my job is look for burglars, and I get kind of tired of it. So I thought it would be good to do something different."

"The fact that this happened two years in a row made it doubly sad. This family doesn't have two dimes to rub together in the first place. Their kids are 4 and 2 years old, and I have a 4-year-old myself. I can imagine how I would feel if we came home and everything we had was gone with no money to replace it."

He said at least half of the 80 Fort Worth officers on duty overnight pitched in.

Arsonists torch abortion clinics

United Press International

DALLAS — Arsonists were suspected of setting fire to three abortion clinics Christmas morning in Dallas, the city that spawned the Supreme Court case that made abortion legal, a fire investigator said.

The blazes, reported within 40 minutes of each other, caused no injuries, and only one clinic sustained heavy damage, said fire investigator Levi Whitlow.

Flammable liquids were believed to have been used to ignite the blazes, and firefighters found a 5-gallon gasoline can at the scene of the last fire, Whitlow said.

The burn patterns were the type that you would have from a flammable liquid," he said.

Whitlow said it would have been impossible for the same person to set all the fires and that it was unlikely the same person set any two.

"No, because of the time and distance," he said.

Dallas spawned the Roe vs. Wade case that led to the Supreme Court's historic 1973 decision that legalized abortion.

Jane Roe was a pseudonym for Norma McCorvey, an unwed mother who was pregnant with her third child in 1970 when she lost her case to abortion advocates. McCorvey did not undergo an abortion, and her child was given up for adoption.

The group filed suit against Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade in an effort to challenge Texas law prohibiting abortion except to save the mother's life. A federal district court struck down the Texas law and the case was appealed to the Supreme Court, which issued its decision Jan. 22, 1973.

Whitlow said the first fire Sunday was reported at the North Dallas Women's Clinic.

Jazz add to Lakers' woes

While the Lakers stood around on offense, the Utah Jazz moved a step closer to dislodging Los Angeles from its customary spot atop the NBA's Western Conference.

Using strong rebounding and inside defense, the Jazz rolled up a 101-87 triumph Sunday over a sagging team that needed seven games to oust Utah from the Conference Finals last season. The Lakers have lost five straight on the road.

"We always relied on the inside game to develop our offense from the inside out," Los Angeles guard Byron Scott said. "Right now we're not getting inside. Everybody's just playing sort of lackadaisical."

Karl Malone scored 31 points and hauled down 12 rebounds to lead the Jazz. Thurl Bailey added 22 points and John Stockton 21 for Utah, which improved to 15-12 while dropping the Lakers to 17-9.

In Sunday's only other game, Philadelphia whipped Washington 125-110.

Sanders arrested

United Press International

FORT MYERS. — Dejon Sanders, Florida State's All-American defensive back, was arrested Christmas Eve on charges of battery on a police officer and disorderly conduct after an altercation with a female store clerk, police said.

Cindy Hickman, a Lee County deputy jail clerk, said Sanders, 21, was released Saturday at about 10 p.m. EST after posting a $2,500 surety bond on the battery charge and a $100 cash bond on the disorderly conduct charge. He is scheduled to appear in Lee County court Jan. 17, she said.

Sanders, a senior, is a cornerback and punt returner for fourth-ranked Florida State, which meets No. 7 Auburn in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans Jan. 2. He played minor-league baseball for the New York Yankees over the summer in the Florida State League.

According to a police statement,

Dejon Sanders

"An altercation broke out" at a mall between Sanders, a Fort Myers resident, and a female store clerk at the Spencer gift shop Saturday at about 4:30 p.m.

"As a result of this altercation, police officer Tony Cail, who was working security at the mall, was tempted to arrest Sanders and was struck and injured," the statement said.

A nursing supervisor at Lee Memorial Hospital said Cail was treated and released.

MIAMI — The Nebraska football team received its Christmas present Sunday for winning the Big Eight title — a trip to sunny south Florida and an Orange Bowl date with the University of Miami.

The No. 6 Cornhuskers arrived in Miami shortly after 2 p.m. EST and were greeted by Orange Bowl officials, who passed out the traditional oranges to players and coaches, a small enclave of Nebraska alumni and a calypso band playing a tune called "There's no place like Nebraska."

"We're happy to be here," said Nebraska center Jake Young, having left 30-degree temperatures behind. "It's a great bowl game and it's a nice Christmas present for us."

It has been five years since Nebraska last played in the Orange Bowl. In the 1984 Orange Bowl, the

Penguins' Brown hospitalized

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Rob Brown, Pittsburgh's second-leading scorer, was taken to the hospital with a possible spleen damage after being speared by New Jersey Devil Jack O'Callahan midway through a 2-2 tie Friday night, Penguins Coach Gene Ubriaco said.

Brown, a 20-year-old in his first full season, was skating without the puck in front of New Jersey's net when the Devils' 190-pound, veteran defenseman speared the 170-pound center. O'Callahan received a major penalty and game misconduct from referee Denis Morel, who gave Brown no penalty.

Brown, who has 25 goals and 35 assists in 35 games, played a few shifts before being taken to the hospital, Ubriaco said.

The score was tied 1-1 at the time and Pittsburgh scored on the ensuing power play before the Devils forced overtime.

Bosox' Boyd to go sidearm

WORCESTER, Mass. — Boston Red Sox pitcher Dennis "Old Can" Boyd, who missed the last several weeks of the past season with a shoulder problem, said he will throw sidearm next season.

Boyd, 29, tried out his new motion during a 30-minute warm-up session Friday at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester and afterward called himself fit.

"I'll be throwing at about 8 or 9 o'clock," Boyd said, referring to the drop of his right hand on the sidearm motion. "I've been thinking about changing my motion since I went on the disabled list."

"But it doesn't matter where you throw from. You still got to throw it down and away or down and inside. The thing is, I like it."

Boyd, 9-7 last season, pitched his final game Aug. 26 when he suffered a second straight blood clot in his shoulder.

Sheridan to stay at N.C. State

ATHENS, Ga. — North Carolina State football coach Dick Sheridan Saturday rejected an offer by the University of Georgia to coach the Bulldogs, citing his desire to remain with the players he had recruited.

University of Georgia spokesman Tom Jackson read a statement prepared by UGA President Charles Knapp who met with Sheridan around 8 a.m. in Athens.

Sheridan, 47, was the unanimous choice of Knapp's eight-member search committee screening applicants for the job to succeed Vince Dooley.

Dooley announced Dec. 14 he is retiring after 25 years and 200 victories and would consider a bid for governor in 1990.

Knapp said Sheridan cited his "strong commitment to the school and the players he has recruited" in the three years he has been there as the primary reason for his decision.

"While I am of course disappointed, I respect his reasons for declining the offer," Knapp said.

Hut 1, Hut 2: It's not football

Elite Pizza Hut opens Tuesday

By CHRIS FISTER
Herald sports editor

Q: What are two of the most common things of the holiday season?

A: Turkey and football. If you've had enough of one or the other — or both — and are looking for some excitement before New Year's Eve, the Pizza Hut Invitational boys soccer tournament is just what the doctor ordered.

This year's 16-team field includes both Class 4A and 3A state champions of a year ago and what figure to be some of the top contenders for the state crowns in 1989.

"This is the best possible test a team could get during the season," Tallahassee Leon assistant Fred Williams said. "Our experience in the Pizza Hut has really helped develop our program to its full potential."

Sites for this year's edition of the Pizza Hut, which opens Tuesday, will be Orlando Bishop Moore High and Orlando Boone High. Leon is the defending champion, having beaten Lake Mary in last year's final.

In Tuesday's first match at Boone (12 noon start), Miami Killian takes on Jacksonville Fletcher in a battle between teams that are a state apart, both in distance and possibly in talent as well. Killian, defending 4A state champion, fields one of the top teams in the state year after year and the Cougars come into the Pizza Hut with a 5-0 record and the No. 1 ranking in Class 4A.

Fletcher is annually one of the top teams in the North Florida region, but has yet to make its mark on the state scene. The Jacksonville representative can grab a share of the spotlight instantly with an upset of Killian.

Oviedo's Tim Waisanen goes on the attack in action earlier this season vs. Seabreeze. Both teams will be in action this week in the Pizza Hut Invitational.

Boone, Lake Brantley's Patriots look to turn their fortunes around against Winter Park's Wildcats. Brantley 2-1-1 looks to shore up its defense in front of goalkeeper Kirk Klaffer and get its offense in gear led by Louie Melitidis, Prince Sharma and Troy Weitzel. Winter Park, 5-0-2, has looked good in the early season with All State performer John Duguid among the leaders. The Wildcats are currently ranked No. 8 in Class 4A. See Hut 1, Page 2B

Leon looks to repeat title

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

The Pizza Hut Invitational boys soccer tournament takes center stage this week in high school sports and if it is anywhere near as entertaining as it was a year ago, fans will get more than their money's worth.

Last year it was Tallahassee Leon rallying to tie Lake Mary in the final two minutes of the championship game and Leon went on to win the title, 2-1, in penalty kicks.

Last year's Pizza Hut showed the team that they could play with the best teams in the state. Tallahassee assistant coach Fred Williams said, "Particularly beating Lake Mary, that set us up for the rest of the season."

Leon went on to win the Class 3A state title and brings in the longest current winning streak in the state as it has not lost in 35 matches. Leon will go for its second Pizza Hut title in a row this week, but again the competition will be top notch.

Tampa Leto finished third in last year's tourney with a 3-2 victory over Lake Howell in another game that required penalty kicks to decide the outcome.

This year's tourney will also feature state powers Lake Mary, Tampa Besant, Miami Killian, Clearwater Central Catholic and Tampa Leto.

Other tough teams in the tournament will be Lyman Bishop Moore, Winter Park and Orange Park. The darkhorses of the tourney could be Oviedo, Jacksonville Fletcher and Daytona Beach Seabreeze.

With that kind of field you can expect to see quality soccer every day at both Bishop Moore and Boone High Schools. The action will See Hut 2, Page 2B

Bears head south for playoff warmup

United Press International

SUWANEE, Ga. — The Chicago Bears Sunday night arrived at the Atlanta Falcons' training facility, where they will practice all week in preparation for their first playoff game.

The Bears elected to travel to Suwanee because of the weather conditions in the Chicago area. They have conducted post-season practices at the Falcons' training camp three out of the past four years.

The high temperature is expected to be in the upper 60s this week in Suwanee, compared to highs in the 20s around Chicago.

"It's the best place for us," Bears Coach Mike Ditka told WBHM-TV in Chicago Sunday night from Suwanee. "It should be ideal for what we want to do and to get ready to play a football game."

The Bears will host their first playoff game either Saturday or Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles or Los Angeles Rams, depending on the outcome of Monday's wild-card match between the

MIAMI GETS READY TO HOST

MIAMI — Smile, make eye contact and speak nicely to passengers is the message 5,500 taxi limousine and other drivers are getting from Super Bowl organizers hoping to impress up to 100,000 guests expected for the Jan. 22 championship game.

The drivers, from 28 nations, have been given Transportation Passports by the Super Bowl organizers.

The booklets contain maps, instructions on such things as Miami International Airport, check-in procedures for buses, vans, taxis and limousines. They're a pep talk in English, Spanish and Creole on how to treat people right.

"I'm asking you to join us and go the extra mile this week for our guests," says Dick Anderson, chairman of the greater Miami Super Bowl XXIII Host Committee, and former All-Pro member of the Miami Dolphins.

"Be helpful, be willing," he tells the drivers.

His antiques aid in restoration

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — "4 bdrm/2 bath home built in 1890s. Structurally sound. Oak floors. Fireplace. Handyman's special. Great buy at $65,000."

You see an ad like that in the classified section of the paper but you're afraid to check it out. After all, to really fix it up right you'd never find the right accessories.

Mark Shuttleworth, proprietor of Florida Victorian Architectural Antiques on First Street in Sanford, can probably help you out. He says, after all, that he is "in the business of saving pieces of history."

Until recently, most people wanted to get into a new home. The old homes did not carry the status of a new house in a development. Some family homesteads fell into disrepair as the younger generations opted to a drywall and aluminum domicile.

Though its popularity is increasing due to the nostalgia and "country" design trends, Victorian architecture and furniture have not been well-preserved. Much of such in Florida were leveled or fell in disrepair in the post World War II era.

"Everything in the area of design went to hell after World War II," Shuttleworth said.

Not knowing what they're missing, many people pass by Shuttleworth's red building, with its saw-tooth tin roof, which formerly was a citrus packing plant, built in 1909. It might seem dilapidated itself.

The paint is peeling in spots. A wooden mantle leans against the front wall. A plaster cast Comedy from the wall of the Victoria Theatre in Mt. Carmel, Pa., is next to the door. The skeleton of a chandelier sits in the brown grass and gravel.

The uninitiated might see it as junk. A keener eye would see a beautiful collection of the rare, the unusual and bits and pieces of a vanishing part of American history.

The store's front room is filled with claw-footed bathtubs, of both cast iron and porcelain variety. Most were rescued from houses that were being razed in the name of progress.

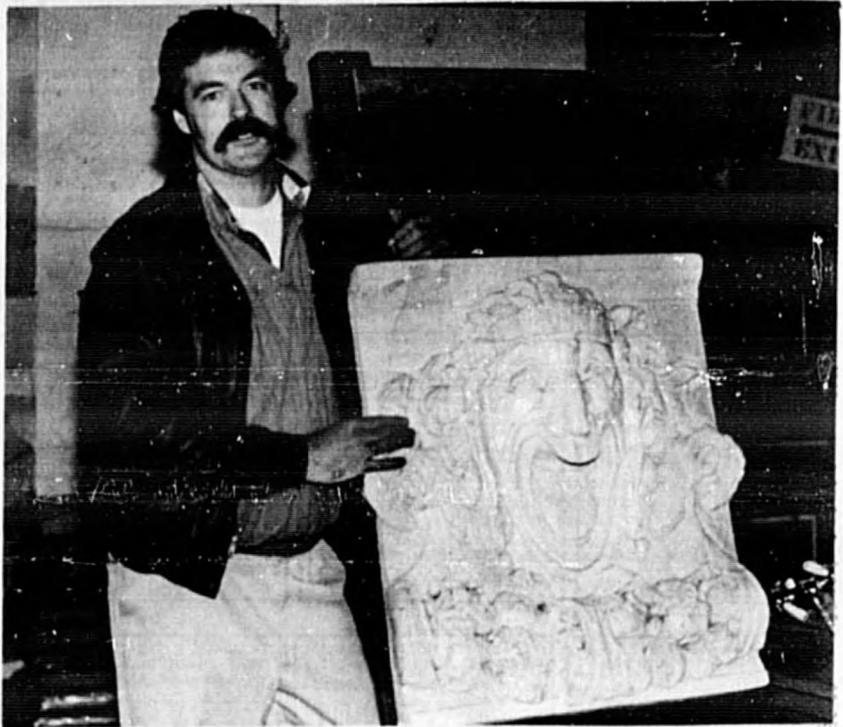

Ninety-five percent of the tubs will be bought by women to install in a guest bath. Shuttleworth, a former social studies professor, has even researched the subject of bathing preferences and finds that very few men like bathtubs.

"They want to shower and get out the door. Women seem to enjoy luxuriating in the tub."

In his business, he has a lot of opportunities to find out about the lifestyles of his clientele.

"When someone comes in here to buy something," he said, "I like to know what they are going to do with it. It's fun to follow a piece like that. Some people have new and creative uses for things."

Last year he salvaged some items from a church that was being demolished in St. Petersburg. A gentleman from Cavanaugh's Importing Company of Key West bought the hand-carved portal to work into the design of his building that was being renovated. He had hoped that the piece could be incorporated into the design, but as it turned out, it fit perfectly into the building.

"So well, in fact, that the preservation people thought it had come out of the walls. It was amazing," he said.

Shuttleworth has always had an interest in antiques, his mother being an antique dealer and interior designer. As a child he spent a lot of time stripping and refinishing furniture.

While in college, he salvaged the contents of a Ft. Lauderdale mansion that was being demolished. He jokes that he did it just because "it was there."

After finishing his graduate degree in social sciences, he was employed for a while as a social worker and then as a professor. He never planned to pursue a career in antiques.

It was through this informal training, however, that Shuttleworth became an expert on woods and architectural designs.

"You could blindfold me and put me in the middle of a house, show me a section of the floor and I could tell you, within a few years when the house was built, assuming the floor was original," he stated.

Floorboards were cut to different widths and lengths during different eras. Styles, Shuttleworth explained, changed every 10 or 15 years or so until about 1930. Doors also followed the same pattern of changes in style.

Until recently, he discouraged homeowners from using reproductions when revitalizing their homes, but he admits that the quality of replicas has increased dramatically in the last few years.

"They are using better woods and techniques in production these days," he said.

A problem Shuttleworth sees in using certain original items, such as staircase railings, is that they don't meet current building standards. He said in the case of the stair railings, the spindles are too far apart and homeowners will be forced to add reproduction pieces between the originals.

Shuttleworth does not give his advice on remodeling and renovating homes as merely a businessman. He is a kindred spirit.

He entered his current line of work when he and his wife (photographer/artist Anna Tonczak) bought a house in Lake Helen that was built in 1895. He began to renovate the structure. He became so obsessed in the project that it became a full-time job.

"I learned by doing at the house. And I'm still learning now, from contractors, homeowners, architects," he said.

He keeps his hand in teaching as well. Recently, at Stetson University, he taught a section of an American Studies class that dealt in Victorian architecture, materials and culture.

"Did you know, for example, that there was such a widespread use of brass details during that period because there were all those armament factories from the civil war with machinery capable of producing heavy metal pieces?" he asked. "They were just sitting there, so they started making bathtubs and grillwork and such."

Shuttleworth is enjoying the up-and-coming Florida movie industry's use of many of his pieces as props, he said.

Sometimes a property master will come in and rent objects to fill out a set or, as in the case with the recent "Superboy" TV sequences being filmed in Sanford, doors or windows will be purchased and used as signature pieces. (The front door and windows of Clark Kent's Smallville home was purchased from Florida Victorian Architectural Antiques.)

Numerous modern techniques exist for refinishing wood, but Shuttleworth prefers to do things the old-fashioned way—by hand. He insists that not only are the results better, with less wear on the wood grain, but the financial cost is less as well.

While he has stayed away from the creation of reproductions, he has begun to consider doing special projects as authentic items get harder and harder to find.

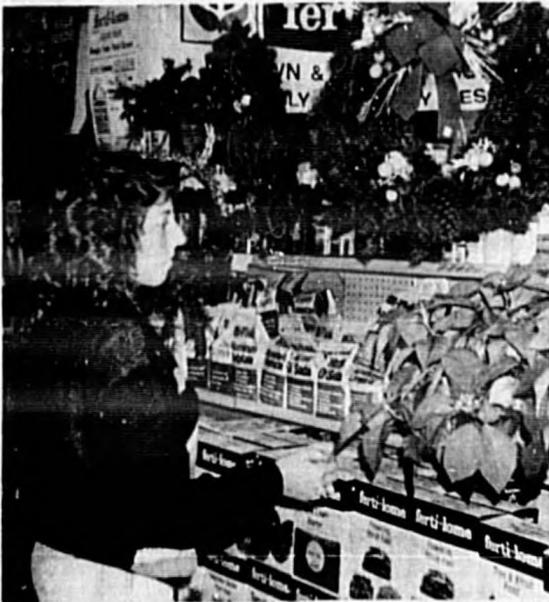

Shuttleworth has a great deal of fun salvaging old houses when he finds what he calls "time capsules" embedded in the walls or pieces of furniture.

"Sometimes a carpenter would stuff newspapers or a jar containing coins or something like that into the wall behind a fireplace. Or a cabinetmaker would sign his name to a piece. Occasionally we've even found children's playthings crammed into crevices," he marveled.

Shuttleworth said that while many people think of the Victorian age as being opulent, a vast majority of the population was poor. Most of his pieces are not from the estates of the wealthy.

Shuttleworth loves to collect old signs, which he said tell a lot about the times. He admits that such items are very popular and he doesn't hang on to them for very long.

Take care and your poinsettias will flourish past Christmas

Lanell Franklin, a student at Lyman High School, tries decide on which poinsettia to purchase at Lukas Nursery of Oviedo.

Widely used and beloved as the symbol of the Christmas season is the popular poinsettia. No other flower makes as brilliant a show of bright red flowers throughout the festive holidays.

Despite their popularity, many homeowners seem to be a little confused about the actual flowers of the poinsettia. The true flowers are small, green and yellow and inconspicuous. The showy red parts, often mistaken as the flowers are not parts of the flower; instead, they are highly modified petal-like leaves which are called bracts. These bracts are formed below each flower.

Once you get your poinsettia home, or if you received one as a gift, it is important to care for it properly so you will get the maximum use out of it.

The poinsettia is especially sensitive to chilling temperatures, and prolonged exposure to them will cause the plant to lose some leaves. The poinsettia should be placed in a cool place in your home away from extreme heat or cold drafts. This means placing it away from radiators and other heat sources. The ideal night temperature is between 60-70°F.

The method of watering can determine the life expectancy of your poinsettia. Proper watering involves applying water in sufficient quantities to thoroughly soak the soil in the pot until it runs out the bottom, and adding no more water until the soil approaches dryness again. Your finger stuck in the soil a few inches is the best indicator of soil moisture. Poinsettias should be checked for moisture frequently and not watered if the soil is still moist. If your poinsettia suffers from lack of water, some of the lower foliage will yellow and be lost leaving a leggy plant.

GARDENING

Many of the new varieties of poinsettias will retain their leaves and decorative bracts far into the New Year. Eventually the lower leaves will begin to drop and the bracts will lose their brilliant color. At this point the plant should be placed in a cool, dry location. Give the plant enough water to keep the soil from becoming entirely dry so that the stem won't wither.

After the danger of frost has passed, the poinsettia can be planted outdoors in the warmer parts of Central Florida. The poinsettia is very sensitive to cold, and many years, the plants are frozen before they have a chance to bloom.

Therefore, choose for your poinsettias a sunny, well-drained location protected from north winds and frost. Also select an area where plants will not receive any light at night. Poinsettias must have almost total darkness before flower buds are formed. Plants are prevented from flowering when they are exposed to electric lights from the streets or in the home grounds. Even a brief exposure to electric lights will prevent poinsettias flowering or markedly delay flowering.

In order to keep plants bushy and compact—thus yielding more flowers—pinch the top 1/2 inch from new shoots when they reach the length of 4-5 inches. The branches that are pinched will develop two or more shoots. When these shoots grow to 4-5 inches, pinch them. Repeat the pinching process when there are enough shoots to do so. However, do not pinch poinsettias after the first week of September. To do so will delay or prevent flowering at Christmas time.

After the plants have been in the ground about a month, apply one or two tablespoons of a complete garden fertilizer such as 6-6-6 or 8-8-8. Usually, three applications per year are recommended—the first when growth starts in the spring, the second in June and the last in late fall after the bracts have set. This last application promotes large bracts with good color and aids in promoting root growth during the winter months.

Lastly, water well each week during dry weather. Take good care of your poinsettias and you can have Christmas year-round.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

The auction was rather hectic, not unusual when someone has an eight-card suit and favorable vulnerability. South opened one spade and West jumped in with four hearts. North, under pressure, was obliged to bid four spades. East now made an excellent bid of five hearts. Although he had some defense against spades, he also had a good hand in support of hearts. Whatever West had, five hearts should be inexpensive, and on a good day the opponents would continue bidding.

South could envision making seven spades opposite the right 10-count, but instead of initiating a difficult cue-bidding sequence, he bid six spades. It was a fair compromise and rated to make most of the time. South won the heart lead with dummy's ace and discarded his diamond two. The spade finesse won, but when West showed out, South was faced with a sure trump loser. He led the diamond queen, hoping for West to cover, but West refused. South continued with the diamond jack but was now doomed to fail regardless of what happened. In fact East ruffed the diamond jack and returned a club. Eventually East took the setting trick with the spade king.

Where did South go wrong, or was he just unlucky? He erred at trick one. If he had discarded any club or any high diamond, he would have been able to lead the two of diamonds at trick three, and if West played low (as surely he would have), South would have finessed dummy's eight. Now declarer could take another trump finesse and later another diamond finesse, losing just the one trump trick.

Specialists can help with Paget's disease

DEAR DR. GOTT: My doctor told me I have Paget's disease but did not mention any treatment. I respect him but he's a general practitioner. Should I see a specialist?

DEAR READER: Paget's disease usually refers to a chronic disease of bone that is characterized by spotty islands of soft, calcified non-bony material. These lesions typically begin as patches of overactive bone formation that degenerate with time. The cause is unknown.

Paget's disease can produce pain, stiffness, headaches, bowing of the legs, tender bones and a susceptibility to fractures. Sometimes the soft lesions cause enlargement of the skull.

X-rays often show increased bone density and areas of overgrowth. Bone scans, using small doses of radioactive isotopes, reveal a spotty pattern of bone breakdown and regrowth. Alkaline phosphatase, an enzyme released by increased bone metabolism, is usually present in the bloodstream in large quantities.

All but the most disabling forms of Paget's disease can be treated by a general practitioner. Pain medication is helpful; calcitonin, a hormone used to stabilize bone formation, is often useful.

I usually refer patients with moderate/severe Paget's disease to endocrinologists. Armed with their suggestions, I can usually take care of the day-to-day treatment of this common condition.

If you are uncomfortable — both physically and psychologically — without a second opinion, ask your doctor to refer you to a specialist.

For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Medical Specialists." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Last night, in bed, I was hit with a sharp pain in my diaphragm. Immediately my pulse started to race and I began shaking uncontrollably. The attack lasted half an hour. After it wore off I had a heavy bowel movement and for the rest of the night I had to void every hour. I've been told that I have a hiatal hernia. Is this related?

DEAR READER: I do not know the cause of your "diaphragm" pain and other symptoms. You should see your own physician for a diagnosis.

Chest pain associated with rapid pulse is always a concern for doctors because of the possibility of a serious heart or lung disorder.

Hiatal hernia, a weakness of the muscular ring that separates the esophagus from the stomach, is often associated with severe heartburn that can mimic the pain of heart attack or peptic ulcer. However, the other symptoms you mention — notably the rapid pulse, shaking and excessive voiding — are not usually caused by hiatal hernia.

Your doctor is the logical person to sort out the causes of your "attack."

'Yule' is a heathen word for 'Christmas'

"Farthing," once a British coin, now refers to something of very little value. To spell this distant word, consider it a "far thing."

"Revel" takes delight or makes merry. For spelling leverage, revel in this clue: Write "lever" backward for "revel."
Q: We hear "yule" used for "Christmas." Is that what "yule" means?

A: The yule festival began as a heathen celebration of winter. Pronounced like "you'll" and often capitalized, "yule" came into Old English more than a thousand years ago and has become synonymous with "Christmas." We don't know who used it first—no one kept a yule log.

In editing, "justly" spaces the text for even lines. Think just. When you justify, the margins should come out just right.

"Rarely" makes thin or more refined. It's a rare word that offers a spelling clue as obvious as the one in "rarely."

Q: When do you use "bring,"

LANGUAGE

and when do you use "take?"

A: In formal usage, "bring" indicates carrying to the person speaking and "take" refers to carrying away from that person. If you find a mistake involving these words, bring it here, and I'll take it from there.

Showing respect or admiration for someone is "veneration." End it with "ration." We should all live long enough for our ration of veneration.

"Kinetic" shows motion or energy. Its center is "net," which is what people will get if you overdo being kinetic.

Q: When my boss dictates letters, everything is "the said company," "the said price," etc. Why?

A: The past participle "said" is being used as an adjective to refer to what's been named or mentioned before. Lawyers seem particularly fond of this usage, but "said" sounds pompous and is often unnecessary. That's enough to say about the said "said."

Use "congenital" for something inborn or existing from birth. Some friendly spelling advice: Insert a "t" in congenital to produce congenital.

"A cluster" or "bunch" forms a "cluster." Think of a cluster of stars, and the word will never lose its luster.

Q: Is it all right to use "is when" in a definition? I was taught not to.

A: You should avoid "is when," especially when defining words. For instance, "A blizzard is when there's a severe snowstorm" lacks the force of "A blizzard is a severe snowstorm." The only time to use "is when" is when you're referring to time.

"Earmark" identifies or sets apart for a special purpose. I'll explain how "earmark" was originally literal, if you'll lend me an ear.

"Infamous" brings disgrace or has a bad reputation. When spelling "infamous," remember the word's root, which is found in "famous."

OUR LANGUAGE ADVICE: Television commercials for a maker of "body scents" deserve the latest Ad-Vice Award. The announcer suggests, "Let them fragrance you," forcing the flowery noun "fragrance" to double as a verb. Avoid this type of functional shift, especially if you want to make scents.

"Mobile" can be easily moved or shifted. It's a good word to take with you, especially if you're moving to Alabama. When you give in or surrender, you "capitulate." It ends in late, but don't wait until it's too late to capitulate.

Use "dulcet" for "sweet-sounding" or "melodious." Enjoy this agreeable adjective—except in pronunciation, there's nothing dull about dulcet.

Corrective grandson perturbs Grandma

DEAR ABBY: While lunching with my 3-year-old grandson, he asked me a question that I answered while finishing a bite of food. Then he boomed, "You shouldn't eat with food in your mouth!"

His mother just looked at him and beamed her approval. Abby, don't you think she should have told the boy it would have been nicer for him to have whispered his comment into Grandma's ear instead of loudly calling attention to this small breach of etiquette on the part of his 77-year-old grandmother?

Please print this for thoughtless parents who preen at every word their offspring utter.

HURT IN FRESNO

DEAR HURT: It confuses a 3-year-old to see an adult do something that he's been told he must not do. (Children learn from example.)

However, you're right. The mother was remiss to have approved of her son's "booming" reprimand of his grandmother without also stressing that out of respect for his elders, in the future he should make such comments privately.

DEAR ABBY: Please help! The invitations are out. We are celebrating our parents' 50th wedding anniversary. We (their children) are giving them a lovely party. They are aware of it.

Abby, we were under the impression that our parents married in 1938. Now we find that they were married in 1939! (My mother was nearly five months pregnant on her wedding day.) I'm sure everyone in their families must know about it. How can they face their families with this deception? How should we handle it? Thank you.

BETRAYED

DEAR BETRAYED: For goodness sakes, do not give it another thought. The chances are that no one remembers it—if indeed they ever knew it in the first place. Please don't tarnish your parents' golden wedding anniversary with negative thoughts. What was, was. And who cares? And who's counting?

ADVICE

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the use of live animals for medical research, I would like to offer the following information:

Today's advanced technologies have brought viable alternatives to using animals for research. Science has shown that much animal experimentation is not only duplicative and unproductive (two-thirds of biomedical experimentation is unpublished and therefore useless) but is also old-fashioned and should be phased out because up-to-date, sophisticated methods of biomedical research are available for use right now.

Computer, mathematical and mechanical models can be used to simulate many physiological systems. In-vitro research utilizes cell tissue and organ cultures, bacteria and other microorganisms. Chemical and physical systems such as enzymes, artificial membranes and robots serve as alternatives. Even plants make useful and inexpensive research tools.

These are the procedures that will give the most benefits to both people and animals because they are more accurate and reliable than animal experimentation, and eliminate needless cruelty. They also can save the taxpayers a bundle.

CARES FOR BOTH ANIMALS AND PEOPLE

DEAR CARES: Well said. Thank you.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Noel
YOUR BIRTHDAY
December 27, 1988

In the year ahead you should have opportunities to expand and build upon foundations you have already laid. What appeared to be impossible last year will now be within the realm of probability.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Regardless of how inconvenient it might be, try to honor your promises and pledges to the letter today. Being a person of your word will enhance your image. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Conditions are extremely unusual at this time, and it's possible you might reap harvests from fields you have not sown. Be grateful for any opportunities that come out of the blue.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The onus may be on you to make a rather difficult decision today. If you're firmly convinced it is the best for all concerned, abide by your judgment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Singleness of purpose is essential today when involved in worthwhile projects. Meaningful achievements are possible if you do not allow side interests to distract you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Let your better judgment direct you today in both commercial and social situations. Don't go along with the group in matters that you do not feel serve your best interests.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A domestic disruption may arise today that will require cool heads on everyone's part in order to be resolved properly. Be careful that you do not do anything unthinkable that could fuel the fire.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take time to weigh each and every alternative today before making an important decision. If you think everything through properly, the end results should be to your liking.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something unexpected might develop today that could enhance your financial position. Be prepared to move swiftly, because it may be a fleeting opportunity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone who is in your corner and eager to help you must not be confused by your tactics today. If you clarify your purpose, it will spare both of you some uncomfortable moments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not rock the boat today in two critical situations that are presently moving along rather smoothly. If events are allowed to run their courses, you should benefit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're now in a cycle where friends will play more prominent roles in your affairs. Take advantage of any opportunities you have to strengthen your relationships.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Several things are presently developing that could be of substantial benefit to perhaps two, might start emitting positive signals today.
