Teen poll results troubling

NEW YORK — Growing feelings of worthlessness and isolation led 30 percent of America's brightest teenagers to consider suicide, and 4 percent have tried it, a new poll shows.

The figure is the highest since "Who's Who Among American High School Students Annual Survey of High Achievers" started tracking suicide questions four years ago.

"It's important to note the statistics represent high-achievers, not the general teen population," Paul Krouse, publisher of "Who's Who Among American High School Students" in Lake Forest, Ill., said in releasing the report Monday.

The poll taken last spring said blacks are at particular risk, noting that 10 percent of black high-achievers said they had tried suicide.

Boulder kills five people

VELARDE, N.M. — A boulder bounded down the side of a mountain and crashed into a Greyhound bus, sending it careening into a pile of rocks and killing five people and injuring 14, state police said today.

The bus, traveling from Denver to Albuquerque, crashed on New Mexico 68, a winding two-lane canyon road, about 80 miles north of Albuquerque around 10:30 p.m. Monday, said state trooper Harold Zunt.

"The front face of the bus is gone, just sheared off," he said. "I don't think the driver had any warning that that rock was coming down. I think it just happened and the driver didn't have a chance to do anything, really."

The driver, Gaylon Parks of Denver, was among the five people killed, authorities said.

Wallace formally charged

Murder defendant held without bond

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Joseph Carmichael Wallace, 60, of 1955 Trail Run Drive, Geneva, was charged with first-degree murder yesterday afternoon.

Judge Fred Hitt set no bond on this case until further order of the court because of the potential of a death sentence being connected with a first-degree murder charge.

Wallace was arrested Monday afternoon and charged in the death of the Rev. Richard A. Conner, 48, who was installed in June as pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Geneva. Conner and his wife had recently moved there from Tallahassee.

Wallace appeared before Judge Fred Hitt, who set his arraignment for 9 a.m., Oct. 10, in Courtroom E at the Seminole County jail.

Joseph Wallace

"There is probably cause for a first-degree murder charge," Hitt said.

Wallace was escorted into the small courtroom at the jail with 12 other defendants at about 1:45 p.m. He was clad in dark blue jail garb and wore white sandal-type shoes. He appeared sullen and thoughtful as he stared at the arrest affidavit.

Wallace told the judge that he would arrange for his own attorney rather than use a public defender. When asked by Hitt if he had spoken to anyone, Hitt replied, "No."

Wallace will be seen on Wednesday for counsel review, Hitt said.

Members of his family sat in a glass-enclosed room behind the courtroom. The Rev. William J. Boyer, a friend of Conner's, was also present. Boyer is pastor at Grace United Methodist Church in Lake Mary.

"I don't really have any further reaction to it. He's (Conner) just been in the district since June," Boyer said sadly outside the courtroom.

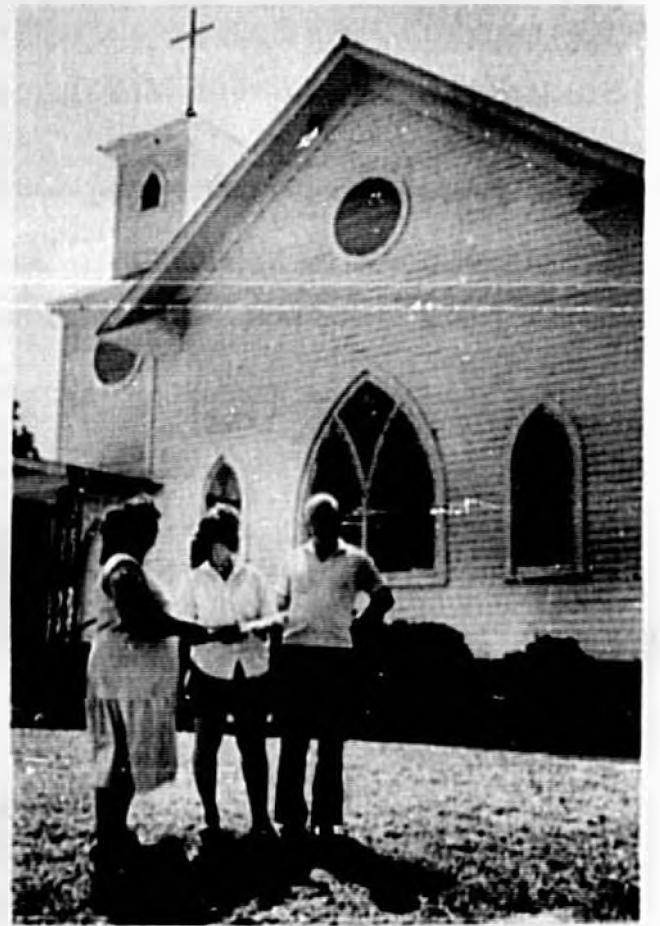

Sheriff County Sheriff's Deputy Todd Raines reportedly saw Conner's body lying in the front passenger's seat of his 1983 Buick. He had suffered a single wound to the abdomen from a shot fired from a large caliber handgun. It was reported that the shot was fired through the car window.

Conner and his wife Pamela have two grown children, a daughter and a son.

Unrelated to the Wallace case, Robert Young, who was arrested and charged on Aug. 20 with four counts of sexual battery and one count of kidnapping was also arraigned Monday.

He entered a plea of not guilty. Young is scheduled for trial before Judge Robert McGregor Nov. 29. He will use a public defender.

Young, 35, of 613 S. Sanford Ave., an auxiliary Ovidio police officer, is accused of the armed kidnapping of a Sanford girl.

Geneva residents stunned by murder

By SUSAN LODEN

GENEVA — The bright pink and blue stained glass windows of the 100-year-old Geneva Methodist Church shown bright in the afternoon sun, impervious to the dark cloud of grief, sadness and shock that has gripped this tiny tight-knit community — a community where the church's minister was murdered Sunday night.

The sorrow is centered on the white and gray block parsonage behind and to the right of the church building where church parishoners gathered Monday to comfort Pamela Conner, the wife of the Rev. Richard A. Conner Sr., 48, who was shot to death in rural Geneva, at about 6:50 p.m. Sunday.

Conner, who became the church's minister in June after moving from Tallahassee, is remembered and mourned today because he took a wrong turn and stopped at the wrong house to ask for directions.

Conner had Sunday night appointments with five church members whose signatures he needed on paper work for a church charge conference that was scheduled for Wednesday.

He drove onto Ridge Drive, just a few miles west of his house off State Road 46. At a curve, Conner turned his car left onto Trail Run Drive. He made a fatal mistake, and turned right, into a sandy driveway posted "No Trespassing" at 1955 Trail Run Drive.

Overturned truck

There were no injuries in this three-car accident that began when the driver of a Budman Leasing Co. truck police say ran a red light and struck another truck in tow at the intersection of U.S. Highway 17-92 and 27th Street. The beer truck careened off the truck in tow and, rolling on two wheels, struck a car entering the intersection from east 27th Street. The beer truck struck a traffic light pole. The driver of the beer truck was charged with failure to yield the right of way. The accident caused nearly $30,000 in damages.

Public hearing slated in wake of Smith firing

SANFORD — City commissioners, responding to allegations of improprieties by members of the Sanford Housing Authority Board of Commissioners, agreed Monday night to hold a special public hearing to discuss the situation.

A special public hearing was scheduled for 4 p.m., Sept. 26, at City Hall to discuss the controversies surrounding the embroiled Sanford Housing Authority (SHA).

City Commissioner John Y. Mercer asked the commission to proceed with caution. "One thing we don't want to have is a witch hunt," said Mercer.

The commission's decision was a direct result of swift and calculated action taken by the SHA Board of Commissioners on Sept. 8. By a 3-2 vote, the SHA commissioners fired Executive Director Elliot Smith and forced the resignation of 15-year SHA attorney Ned Julian Jr. at a special meeting, which had one scheduled item for discussion on its agenda — air conditioning units for Redding Gardens.

SHA commissioners Bob Ball, Tert Buratti and Alberta Detryville comprised the majority in the 3-2 vote at the meeting, after Ball introduced both resolutions concerning Smith and Julian. Robert Frazier and commission chairman Alexander Wynn III voted against the resolutions.

Ministers discount book's rapture prediction

By JANE CASSELDERRY
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Will the "rapture" occur before sundown today or will predictions of Edgar C. Whisenant go the way of others in the past which attempted to pin down a date for the Second Coming of Christ?

Although some are skeptical about the accuracy of the date, many others are "getting right with God," just to be on the safe side.

Whisenant's controversial booklet, On Borrowed Time: 88 Reasons Why The Rapture Is In 1988, which predicted the event would take place between sundown on Sept. 11 and sundown on Sept. 13, has sold out in area Christian bookstores.

In addition to predicting the rapture, Whisenant predicts World War III will begin the evening of Oct. 3 and will result in the destruction of the Soviet Union. His predictions continue to Jan. 1, 3000.

The "rapture" is a 170-year-old doctrine held by some Christians who believe Jesus will return for his followers — living and dead — and they will be transported through the air to meet him, thus escaping catastrophes expected to plague those who have been left behind. The popular theory has been the subject of several successful books and films in recent years.

The doctrine, not universally held among Christians, also claims the non-believers left behind will go through seven years of war, fire, death and pestilence under the leadership of the anti-Christ. The troubles end when Christ and his followers return to rule for a millennium (thousand years).

Ellis Osborn, owner of Osborn's Book & Bible Store in Sanford, said he sold about 800 paperback copies at $2 each before the publisher, World Bible Society of Nashville, Tenn., stopped printing them last week. The company distributed more than a million copies nationwide.

"There has been a great deal of interest in the book," Osborn said, "but only one or two people have said they put 120 percent faith in his (Whisenant) dates. He worked on the book for 14 years using computers to make his calculations based on scriptures."

Osborn admitted he had not read the book, but said his wife has told him all about it. "I think it's a plus, but not a guarantee," Osborn said. "It has encouraged church attendance."

Three death warrants signed

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Bob Martinez has signed death warrants for three convicted killers, including a man sentenced to die for the sniper slaying of a Jacksonville police officer. Leo Alexander Jones and John Marek, who are on their first death warrants, received Nov. 10 execution dates after Martinez signed the warrants Monday. An Oct. 4 execution date was set for Bobby Marion Francis, who is on his second death warrant. Francis originally was scheduled to die last November, but his execution was stayed by the state Supreme Court.

Student said he feared for Mirecki, others

PENSACOLA — A sailor who was in the pool where a recruit died six months ago said he saw Lee Mirecki perform a difficult rescue maneuver with an instructor before he had a heart attack and drowned. Petty Officer John Breeden was one of five students to testify during a half day session Monday at the court-martial of Petty Officer 2nd Class Michael Combe. Combe, 28, of Tempe, Ariz., is accused of involuntary manslaughter, battery and conspiracy to commit battery in the March 2 death of Mirecki. Prosecutors say he conspired to keep Mirecki in a class by pulling him from an equipment rack after he fled from the pool. Prosecutors said Combe later forced Mirecki's head under water. The recruit had a panic-induced heart attack and drowned.

Non-Cuban Latins flexing political muscle

MIAMI — Non-Cuban Latins, whose numbers are increasing in south Florida and across the nation, are flexing their political muscle as immigration from Cuba slows. "In the past, when you talked about Hispanics in the southwest you meant Mexicans, in New York you meant Puerto Ricans and in Miami you meant Cubans," said Alejandro Portes, a sociologist at Johns Hopkins University. "But at least in Miami, that's no longer true." Central and South American immigration to the United States has increased more than 44 percent since 1982, census figures show. The Cuban population increased 7 percent during the same period. In Dade County, home to about 600,000 Cubans, the proportion of Cubans to other Hispanics dropped from about 70 percent in 1980 to about 67 percent in 1987.

Murder trial set to open

PENSACOLA — Temporary insanity is expected to be revealed as the defense's strategy during opening statements today in the trial of an ex-security guard charged with murdering three people during an alimony hearing. Clyde Melvin, 63, is charged with three counts of first-degree murder for allegedly gunning down a his wife's lawyer, a former sister-in-law and a judge during the July 28, 1987 hearing on his alimony payments. He also is charged with attempting to murder his ex-wife, Eleanor Inez Huckleba, who survived a gunshot wound to the head. If convicted, Melvin could be sentenced to die in the electric chair. A jury of 10 women, two men and two male alternates was seated Monday for the murder trial, which is expected to last about 10 days. The jury will not be sequestered. A seven-day effort to pick a jury in Port St. Joe, site of the shootings that prompted tougher courthouse security across Florida, failed when the judge ruled rumors about the case had spread to virtually every citizen in town.

Survey: Back-to-school sales down

GAINESVILLE — Florida retailers are blaming boring fashions, AIDS and even the state lottery for disappointing back-to-school sales, says a University of Florida marketing expert. "Sales were very soft in August and early September," said Barton Weitz, director of UF's Center for Retailing. "Retailers fear this relatively poor back-to-school season portends a slow Christmas season as well." The biggest frustration for retailers has been a continued slump in sales of women's apparel, which accounts for about half of department store sales, he said. "The short skirts that came on last year were not accepted by the public," Weitz said. "That left a lot of indecisiveness among women about what to buy and what they turned out buying was nothing at all." Declining women's wear sales also affect business in children's and men's clothing departments because women do most of the shopping, he said.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

NASA to limit press site access

By WILLIAM HARWOOD
UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — More than half of the journalists expected to cover the first post-Challenger shuttle launch will be barred from a Kennedy Space Center press site, sources said Monday, amid calls for presidential intervention. "I just simply don't think that an Iron Curtain should be put around the perimeter of the Kennedy Space Center when we are getting back into space with our nation's space program," said Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., veteran of the last successful shuttle flight in January 1986. The space agency hopes to launch Discovery the week of Sept. 26 and with blastoff less than three weeks away. NASA and the Air Force still have not announced how many reporters and photographers will be able to witness launch from the agency's forward press site 4.2 miles away. But a news conference was planned for today in Washington to announce the results of the months-old debate and sources said at least 1,500 reporters would be permitted to remain at the press site for blastoff. More than 3,600 journalists have applied for credentials and those not allowed to view the launch from the forward press site apparently will have to observe it from a NASA causeway more than 3 miles farther away where facilities are limited. "NASA and the Air Force, which has responsibility for range safety, have mutually determined that the number of persons who will be permitted access to the Kennedy Space Center for the launch of the space shuttle Discovery will be greatly reduced for safety reasons," said a NASA statement. Studies conducted after the Challenger disaster and the explosion of a Titan 34D rocket showed "the danger to persons on the ground is much greater than was understood should an accident occur," the statement said. "Because of this new information, NASA and the Air Force have determined that the prudent action is to minimize the population at the close-in viewing areas," the statement said. Nelson, whose district includes the Kenedy Space Center, and three other congressmen sent a letter to President Reagan Friday asking him to turn back Air Force efforts to impose limits on how many reporters and journalists are allowed to watch launch from the forward press site. The issue hinges on post-Challenger studies that indicate those in the immediate launch area face a greater threat of injury or death from solid-fuel rocket debris in the event of a catastrophe than had been previously believed. "The Air Force basically wants to, for range safety reasons, exclude most people from having access to see the launch," Nelson said at a news conference. "Who are you going to exclude? If you're going to limit the press, who are you going to limit?" "Are you going to limit The New York Times or is The New York Times going to have access at the press site right here and the Panama City News Herald is not going to have access?" Under an agreement between NASA and the Air Force, the Air Force has responsibility for property damage and loss of life on the ground in missile accidents.

Harvested gators said stacking up

SEBRING — State officials won't know until next month exactly how successful Florida's first commercial alligator hunt in 26 years has been, but some meat and hide processors say they are swamped with harvested reptiles. "We've been working 20 hours a day since the harvest began last week. They're stacking up like cordwood," said processor Kenneth Geiger in Sebring, 84 miles southeast of Tampa. The Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission issued licenses to 230 hunters each, allowed to bag up to 15 gators at least 4 feet long. Hunters don't have to submit their success reports until two weeks after the hunt closes Sept. 30.

Processors buy gators for up to $50 a foot or charge a processing fee and return the hide and meat to the hunter. "We've done 69 of them since last week," said processor James Worden in Clewiston on the southern shore of Lake Okeechobee. "If I had any more I couldn't handle them." The game commission has licensed 29 processors but some, like Mel Gentry with Gatorland Zoo outside Orlando, chose not to participate in the special harvest. "We were not interested in hiring additional staff and breaking our routine," he said. Chief processor Barry Holdridge with Hooks Alligator Products west of Fort Lauderdale said it takes about an hour to process 1 foot of gator.

Lawmakers challenge governor's vetoes

By MICHAEL McCLELLAND
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Legislative leaders have filed suit against Gov. Bob Martinez, charging Martinez violated constitutional guidelines when issuing five vetoes after this year's legislative session. The vetoes were aimed at specific parts of the 1988-89 fiscal year budget. The lawmakers asked the state Supreme Court Monday to strike down the vetoes and return the $789,559 involved to the budget. The suit was filed by House Speaker Jon Mills, House Speaker-designate Tom Gustafson, House Appropriations Committee Chairman Sam Bell, D-Ormond Beach, Senate President John Vogt and Senate President-designate Bob Crawford. Martinez has the constitutional authority to veto the entire budget or "specific appropriations" within the budget. The suit charges Martinez exceeded that authority when he vetoed individual items within specific appropriations. For example, Martinez vetoed one $80,000 position from a overall university system salary appropriation of $187 million. Martinez could have vetoed the entire budget or the entire $187 million specific appropriation, the legislators argue, but not the individual position. "The lawsuit challenging gubernatorial vetoes reaches directly to the foundations of Florida government," House General Counsel Kevin Crowley wrote in filing the suit. "For the Legislature to do nothing would be to acquiesce to an impermissible expansion of executive authority at the expense of the Legislature." The vetoed items were not present in the appropriations bill, but spelled out in far more detailed working papers assembled by the House and Senate budget committees. Lawmakers claim Martinez had no legal authority to veto items in the binding working papers. Martinez' General Counsel Peter Dunbar said he welcomed the suit as an opportunity to settle the legal status of the working papers. Lawmakers commonly use those papers, he said, to hide pet projects from a governor's veto. "Either we get rid of the working papers because they are not law, or (the working papers) are law and we can get in there at those turkeys they are trying to hide," he said. "It's a win-win situation for us." Dunbar described the suit as "obvious governor-bashing by the Democrat-controlled Florida Legislature." He said no Republican legislators were involved in the suit. Dunbar said lawmakers had rejected Martinez' offer to ask the court for a binding opinion on the working papers that would have had the same result as a suit, without placing the legislative and executive branches at odds with each other. The vetoed items included: —$500,000 for road maintenance on the Blackwater River State Forest Road. —$80,000 and one job position for long-range planning needs at Florida Atlantic University. —$198,659 and 4.15 positions for the Institute of Child Health Policy. The institute is located at both the University of South Florida Medical Center and the University of Florida Health Center. —$2,100 for temporary help at the Institute of Child Health Policy. —$8,800 for the Atlantic Center for the Arts.

MIDWAY — An 18-year-old Altamonte Springs man reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies he was robbed of $5 and his Rebooks sneakers by seven men who attacked him at about 2:30 p.m. Monday on Church Street, Midway.

Kyle Craig Bealdray, of 813 Dorde Del Camino, reportedly told police he was in that area with friends to buy cocaine. He separated from his companions and was robbed, he said.

One of his companions, David Raymond Gruse, 17, of Altamonte Springs, told sheriff's deputies he too was attacked and robbed at about the same time in Midway. Gruse said he lost $170 to the thieves.

Van Der Weide endorsed

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Ned Johnson, the unsuccessful Republican primary candidate for the District 5 county commission seat, Monday endorsed former opponent Dick Van Der Weide in the Oct. 4 run-off.

Citing Van Der Weide's qualifications and knowledge of county issues, Johnson said Monday "I unreservedly support Dick Van Der Weide" and urged his own supporters to do so as well.

If Johnson is successful in encouraging his supporters to vote for Van Der Weide, the endorsement assures the Republican nomination of Van Der Weide against runoff opponent Jennifer Kelley Oct. 4.

Last Tuesday, Johnson garnered only 27.6 percent of the District 5 ballots, 4,385 votes. Van Der Weide received the largest number of votes, 6,284 — 39.5 percent — but failed to pull the 50-plus majority needed to win the primary. Kelley received the second largest support, 5,240 votes or 32.9 percent of the ballots cast in the District 5 Republican race.

Van Der Weide said he appreciated Johnson's endorsement, but with his lead in the race, he has little concern about the Oct. 4 results.

"We feel good at this point," Van Der Weide said. "We were the leading vote-getter in the first primary...We're just going to continue pushing and work hard until Oct. 4."

Kelley said she wasn't concerned about the endorsement.

"I don't think it'll have much effect," Kelley said. "This part of the county is mostly old line people and I've been here for nearly 30 years and I've seen it grow. Ned and Dick are recent arrivals."

As a Republican not linked to a power clique as Van Der Weide and Kelley, Johnson waged his campaign as an independent — but said his independence was one of financial independence from lobbies, not party power bases.

"It was not necessarily just a political issue, but a funding issue," Johnson said. "I was not going to be obliged to any one particular group. Independence comes back to the fact that I was behold to no one."

One area of possible difference between Van Der Weide and Johnson is development of the western areas of the county. Van Der Weide has tended to be more liberal in view of development rights in the still largely rural western areas than Johnson.

Lack of funds may delay surgery

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Donna Harter of 143 Pine Crest Drive is a very concerned mother who feels she is working on borrowed time to save her son.

Harter's son, 19-year-old Donald Mangum, has a quarter-sized tumor on the right side of his brain which is causing him to have violent seizures.

Mangum is scheduled for what may be life-saving surgery this week, but the surgery may be postponed because of a lack of insurance to cover the costs, and Harter's inability to find any agency to help with the expense.

In a desperate effort, with little time left to lose, Harter has appealed to U.S. Rep. Bill McCollum who is seeking a way to find the funds for surgery.

A staff assistant in McCollum's office said Monday the office is working with the Social Security Administration to try to obtain funds through SSI, the only federal program for which Mangum may be eligible.

"As a rule, we cannot discuss anyone's case. We're working on it. We're aware of the case," says Elaine Whipple, staff assistant.

Harter says the seizures started almost two years ago. "They were so mild that even we didn't know what it was," she says.

About three weeks ago a neurosurgeon confirmed that Mangum had a brain tumor. "The doctor told us it was definitely a tumor and that it was growing," Harter says.

The doctor told Mangum that if he didn't have surgery as soon as possible, either the tumor or the seizures would kill him.

Mangum is scheduled to have the surgery at 9 a.m. Wednesday at the Neurosurgery University of Florida Health Center at Shands Hospital in Gainesville.

But Harter says she was told a few days ago that there is a good chance the surgery may be postponed because of lack of funds and no insurance to cover the costs, which have been estimated at $35,000 to $45,000 if there are no complications.

Harter was given a list of several agencies which could possibly help pay for the surgery. Feeling helpless, but hopeful that someone would help, Harter started calling, but her spirits were dampened after she received several negative responses from a few of the agencies which she thought could help her son.

"I have called all these organizations that they gave me on a list and they say that they can't do anything," a disillusioned Harter says.

The first organization she thought of was the Epileptic Foundation. When Mangum suffered a violent seizure last September, he was rushed to the hospital and a CAT scan showed there was something wrong.

The coordinator of the Epilepsy Services Program Department of Neurology set up an appointment with a neurologist who performed another EEG and the costs for the office visit and several of the tests were covered by the Epileptic Foundation.

However, "They don't have enough funds to cover surgery," Harter says.

Lynn Walston, service coordinator for the Epilepsy Association of Central Florida, Inc., says Mangum has been referred to State of Florida Children's Medical Services, which has a capability of covering or arranging for services. However, Walston says "It's very likely that it (the surgery) will not be performed because Shands does not have the funds to cover it." She said if it is a life-and-death situation, possibly some hospital will do it.

So far Harter says she has called Vocational Rehabilitation in Orlando, Health & Rehabilitative Services (HRS) in Seminole County, and the Social Security office. She says at the Social Security office she filled out paper work and was told that her son won't qualify unless he's out of work for one year after surgery.

She also called Information and Referral Services, and the Epilepsy Association of Central Florida, Inc.

Harter says the Epilepsy Services coordinator suggested calling the Seminole County Health Department.

"They told me if he was female and pregnant, they could help," Harter says.

Irene Quintana, welfare officer for the county health department, says, "I don't know whether that was told to her or not." Quintana says the public health unit has different clinics. One of them takes care of pre-natal cases, and that may have been the clinic Harter called, she says.

In the meanwhile, Mangum has moved from Orange City to his mother and step-father's home.

He takes medication (Dilantin) for his seizures, and has enough medication to last until Tuesday. A healthy-looking muscular youth with bright blue eyes and a mane of long locks, Mangum canceled a visit with some friends to sit down at the kitchen table and talk to a reporter. When asked how he feels, Mangum replies, "Terrified." He doesn't show his fear and consoles his mother with an affectionate caress.

"I've been healthy all my life," he says, but adds that the seizures resulted in him losing his last two jobs.

Mangum says his seizures used to last a couple of minutes and afterward he didn't remember what happened.

A guitarist, Mangum says he still plays occasionally, but adds that he has altered his lifestyle drastically.

CCIB arrests suspected coke dealer

By SUSAN LODEN

SANFORD — A man reputed to be a key figure in Central Florida cocaine trafficking was arrested near Sanford by City County Investigative Bureau agents about midnight Monday.

Ahner Jackson Jr., 36, of 2030 Dixie Ave., Sanford, is charged with trafficking in a kilogram of cocaine, and conspiracy to traffic in more than 400 grams of cocaine. He is being held without bond in the Seminole County jail.

CCIB agents report that a confidential informant met Jackson at the Lil' Champ, State Road 46, east of Sanford, at about 11:24 p.m. Monday to sell him a kilogram of cocaine for $17,000. The cocaine was delivered after the informant received $10,000 of the payment, with a promise that the additional money would be delivered today, agents said. Agents moved in and arrested Jackson.

Jackson's brother, Gregory Jackson, 33, of 2411 Crawford Drive, Sanford, who allegedly drove Ahner Jackson to the convenience store and sped away, was also arrested by agents who followed him home. Gregory Jackson is charged with criminal conspiracy, reckless driving and driving with a suspended license. Both brothers remain jailed.

CCIB agents report they were aided by Federal Drug Enforcement Agents. They report Ahner Jackson Jr. is suspected of being involved in an organization that distributes large quantities of cocaine. He is considered by lawmen to be a major cocaine trafficker in Florida, the arrest report said.

Automakers shun responsibilities

It's discouraging to see how eager the Department of Transportation and U.S. automakers are to hoist the white flag in the campaign to increase fuel efficiency in automobiles.

The DOT has scheduled a hearing tomorrow on yet another proposal to lower gasoline mileage standards for next year's new-model cars. Car makers are required to achieve an average of 27.5 miles a gallon for their 1989-90 model cars, according to the corporate average fuel-economy standards (CAFE) mandated under the 1975 Emergency Policy and Conservation Act. The 27.5 mpg requirement originally was to have taken effect in 1986. Instead, the DOT has heeded the pleas of General Motors and Ford Motor Co. each year and kept the standard at 26 mpg.

The latest exemption proposed by Transportation Secretary James H. Burnley IV is once again in response to a request by GM, which argues that it won't be able to meet the 1989 target without making production cuts in larger-model cars and laying off workers. Meanwhile, Ford asserts that it can only meet the higher-average mileage standards by introducing unprofitable incentives to encourage sales of its smaller, more fuel-efficient cars.

Actually, both GM and Ford are eager to boost production of their more profitable larger model cars in order to meet a surge in customer demand. They can still do this without meeting the higher fuel-economy standard if they pay the fine of $5 per car for every one-tenth of a mile that the fleet average misses the mileage target, or approximately $25 per vehicle. Manufacturers of imported luxury cars, such as Jaguar and Mercedes Benz routinely do this and pass off a substantially larger fine to customers.

Another option is for GM and Ford to follow Chrysler's lead in achieving the higher mileage target by reducing the weight of their larger, rear-wheel model cars through conversion to front-wheel drive.

Some opponents of CAFE assert that down-sizing cars in order to meet the mileage target needlessly increases highway fatalities. Lighter cars are inherently less safe. But this argument is refuted by the Washington-based Center for Auto Safety, which notes that since adoption of the CAFE standards in response to the 1975 energy crisis, the average mileage standard for autos has doubled. At the same time, the rate of traffic fatalities per 100 million miles traveled has declined by one-third.

The center, which has filed suits over previous DOT mileage rollbacks, urges that fuel economy targets be increased to 40 mpg, especially in view of the growing concern over carbon dioxide contributing to the "greenhouse effect" in the earth's atmosphere.

That goal is probably too much to hope for in the near future from GM and Ford. Still, it would be encouraging to see their can't-do attitude change to the traditional can-do. What ever happened to that?

What it's really like to win $1 million

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When a big lottery prize — like Florida's recent $55.1 million jackpot — makes headlines, many Americans wonder what they would have done if they had won. And they dream about the lives of lottery winners.

With some glaring exceptions, lottery winners are generally happy — but winning brings radical changes to the lives of relatively few.

Keep in mind that all U.S. lotteries pay their jackpot winners during a 20-year period. This means that anyone winning $1 million gets only $50,000 a year — before taxes. After taxes, the net drops to somewhere between $25,000 and $35,000 a year.

For most $1 million winners, the annual tax-free windfall of about $30,000 certainly helps. But a common denominator of winners in this category is how little their lives actually change.

Talk with them and you hear that the money has brought them peace of mind. Their annual lottery checks buy the extras they previously could not afford, and the money allows them to stop worrying about the potential financial impact of a job layoff or a long family illness.

But some Americans have won multimillion-dollar prizes. Annual lottery checks in the six figures after taxes can, and do, change lives.

A rule of thumb is the greater the win, the greater likelihood the winner has quit his or her job. Also, older winners are more likely to retire to live off their winnings.

There are exceptions. If a person has a career that has value to them above money, they often hold on to their jobs. But if they worked just to earn a paycheck, they will quit.

This doesn't mean, however, that they don't work at all. Many start their own businesses and work even harder than they did before. But they are working for themselves and enjoying it more.

Then there are the winners of mega-prizes.

With some glaring exceptions, lottery winners are generally happy.

who represent a very small percentage of winners. With annual checks well into the six figures, and occasionally into seven figures, they can pretty much do what they want.

There have been several cases of lottery "millionaires" living a lifestyle well above what their annual checks will support.

Several have declared bankruptcy. Two have written huge numbers of bad checks and been arrested when they could not cover them. One winner in New York was arrested and convicted of stealing from a family member, another, in Michigan, tried to stretch his lottery income by dealing drugs.

One of the most tragic stories is that of Earl Thompson of Pittsfield, Mass. Seven years after winning $1 million he killed himself. When he died, he was debt-ridden.

More common are the lottery winners who say winning has been a negative experience because old friends abandoned them, or bitter fights broke out with family members who thought the winnings should be shared.

Still, winning the lottery is a plus for most. But striking it rich often does not live up to the winner's expectations.

Campaigning in New South

JACKSON, Miss.—When John F. Kennedy campaigned in the South in 1960, he had a favorite line. Citing the names of the senators and representatives from whatever state he happened to be visiting, he would ask, "Why would you send good Democrats like these to Congress and turn around and vote for a Republican like Dick Nixon for President?"

Last week, as he campaigned through those same Dixie states, Republican vice-presidential candidate Dan Quayle reversed the question. "You wouldn't elect a Massachusetts liberal as your governor, would you?" he asked voters. "Then why in the world would you elect him as President?"

In fact, several of the states in which Quayle campaigned—Louisiana, Arkansas, Virginia and Mississippi—have governors who were educated at elite, liberal Eastern universities and are pursuing policies almost anyone would call progressive. Still, the rhetoric of the conservative senator from Indiana selected by George Bush as the No. 2 man on the GOP ticket shows how the South has changed as a force in national politics.

Along among the regions, the South has cast the majority of its electoral vote for the winner of every recent presidential election. Once a reliable Democratic bastion, its increasing tendency to go Republican is perhaps the single biggest reason the GOP has won four of the last five contests for the White House.

It is no coincidence that the Republicans came on strong just as the national Democratic Party under Lyndon B. Johnson became the political arm of the civil-rights movement, which enfranchised millions of blacks and helped end rigid segregation in American society.

As Alexander P. Lamis, the Charleston-born political scientist, points out in the newly published and updated edition of his book, "The Two-Party South," the "betrayal" of the white South on civil rights—starting gradually with Harry Truman and ending momentarily with Lyndon Johnson—precipitated the death of the one-party system.

For a time, the region's dominant Democrats reeled in confusion. But in remarkably short order, they began—at the state level—to form a new political base on a coalition linking a solid and expanding black constituency with a portion of the white electorate. Such a coalition gave one of those "New South" Democrats, Jimmy Carter of Georgia, a majority of the Southern electoral votes in 1976. But it was the last time the formula worked for the Democrats at the presidential level.

It is not just a matter of personality or geography. The reason national Democrats have a hard time carrying the South is (as Lamis demonstrates using survey research from the 1984 election) that Southern whites have very different views on key issues, not only from blacks in their region but from many Northern whites. They are least distinctive on economic issues like jobs and health insurance. Michael Dukakis is on sound ground in stressing those issues as he tries to break into the South.

But in two other areas—national defense and social issues—Southern whites have been significantly more conservative than other parts of the electorate. And on many of those questions—from the use of force in Grenada and the Persian Gulf to prayer in schools and the Pledge of Allegiance—Dukakis is as out of step with much of Southern white opinion as Walter F. Mondale was when he lost every Dixie state to President Reagan four years ago.

It was very much by design, then, that Quayle in his campaign speech here, as in other stops on his Southern swing, insisted that the choice between Bush and Dukakis is not just a matter of "competence but of ideology."

Quayle is no more an ideologue than he is an intellectual, but he quickly grasped the way in which symbolism and code words can convey a message in Southern crowds. Appearing at a high-school football stadium where preschoolers carried hand-lettered signs saying, "Save Our Pledge of Allegiance," Quayle railed against "federal rules, federal bureaucracy and federal regulations."

He was talking about what he said would be entailed in the federal day-care program endorsed by Dukakis. But the language had echoes of other disputes about busing and racial desegregation in other days. Day care has let Republicans raise the old bugaboo about government "interference" in family decisions.

Bush strategists are confident that the South, which went solidly for the Vice President in last March's "Super Tuesday" Republican primaries, will give him a solid majority of its electoral votes in November.

Dukakis carried only two Southern states, Texas and Florida, on Super Tuesday. But he is hoping to deny Bush another sweep, and his selection of Texas Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen is a huge gamble on the possibility of switching that state's 27 electoral votes.

For a time, the region's dominant Democrats reeled in confusion.

Bad water is very prevalent

WASHINGTON — Pesticides have percolated through the ground and into well water in at least 34 states — significantly more contamination than was previously reported by the federal government.

About 90 percent of rural Americans get their drinking water from the ground. An estimated 13 million wells serve 117 million people nationwide.

The Environmental Protection Agency gathered test data from 45,000 wells and found that 3,500 of them were tainted with harmful levels of at least one pesticide. Another 5,500 wells had traces of 73 different pesticides in amounts that would not be harmful.

The EPA had that information last February, but it issued a written report saying only 19 pesticides had been found in wells in 24 states. However, EPA officials verbally acknowledged that between 50 and 60 pesticides were found in 30 states.

Environmental groups demanded to see the data earlier this summer. The Washington headquarters of Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) assembled the data in a report that is scheduled to be released today. PIRG came up with 73 different pesticides found in wells in 34 states, according to an advance copy of its report given to our associate, Stewart Harris.

An EPA spokesman told us the agency report in February used lower figures because it counted only the cases that had been "confirmed" by the federal government. "We are not trying to hide that issue at all. We are trying to highlight it," the spokesman said. The EPA has promised to release its own updated numbers in October based on continued work to double-check the information. A groundwater contamination survey based on the EPA's own test data will not be completed until 1990.

While the EPA's written data may be conservative, the report from PIRG may lean a little too far in the other direction. Some of the test information is not holding up to scientific scrutiny by the EPA, according to agency scientist Patrick Holden. Even taking that into consideration, Holden said the final figures, to be released Oct. 1, will exceed the 19 pesticides in 24 states cited in the EPA's February report.

October will be too late to affect congressional debate over the issue. Concern over pesticides contamination of groundwater reached Capitol Hill last spring during debate over the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act. At that time Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., and Rep. Jim Oberstar, D-Minn., introduced tough proposals to control groundwater pollution. But the chances are slim that the bills will pass before Congress recesses in October.

Durenberger's provision has made it through committee and is waiting for consideration by the full Senate. Oberstar's bill remains bottled up in a House committee with little chance of making it to the floor before the recess.

The data from PIRG does not mean that one out of every four wells in the country is contaminated with a pesticide. The data comes from 101 studies by state officials, chemical companies and research institutions, and they were focusing on problem areas. Nevertheless, the data indicates groundwater contamination is more widespread than previously thought.

the first three months of the year, the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Record exports in the second quarter of this year narrowed the broadest measure of the nation's huge trade gap to $33.3 billion, the lowest in more than two years, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

Merchandise exports shot up 5.8 percent to a record $79.7 billion but a more ominous sinking in the nation's foreign investment earnings kept the trade gap from improving further.

The imbalance in the nation's current account deficit narrowed by 9.8 percent in the second quarter to $33.3 billion from a revised $36.9 billion in

That was the lowest trade gap since the first quarter of 1986 when the deficit was $32.5 billion, the bureau said.

The current account is the most important of the bureau's measures of foreign trade because it measures not only merchandise trade but also the flow of investment earnings between countries.

Disciplinary action upheld

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — City Administrator Gene DeMarie has upheld disciplinary action against city secretary Valerie Hockenberry in a decision Monday. He agreed, however, with the board's recommendation to shorten her six-month probation period.

Hockenberry, administrative secretary in the police department, was suspended with pay Aug. 22, along with Police Chief Greg Manning and Capt. Terry Baker, City Clerk Don Terry, in his capacity as acting city administrator prior to the hiring of DeMarie in May, suspended them for probable cause on charges of misappropriation, misfeasance and violation of the employee conduct code based on a managerial audit of the Police Benevolent Fund by city consultant Jeff Etzberger.

The charges were later reduced and the three reinstated. On April 14, Terry reinstated Hockenberry on a six-month probation at her same salary, but transferred her from the police department to the public works department. It was this action that Hockenberry appealed to the grievance board.

While affirming Terry's April 14 action, DeMarie also accepted the grievance adjustment board's Aug. 23 recommendation that Hockenberry's probationary period be concluded as of that date. Hockenberry has been employed by the city for 13 years, all but the last few months in the police department, where she had hoped to return.

In his letter to Hockenberry, DeMarie stated, "As you know, I was in attendance for most of the GAB proceedings, and I came away with a much better understanding of the circumstances surrounding your involvement in this incident

Many of my initial impressions of the situation were confirmed and some were clarified.

"I don't think it is necessary for me to go into great detail about my personal thoughts on this matter," he added. "Suffice it to say that my decision is an attempt to put this whole affair behind us."

Hockenberry, when promoted to the job of administrative secretary to the chief, was given the responsibility of keeping the books for the Police Benevolent Fund, a task for which she was not trained. The Police Benevolent Fund, administered by Manning and Baker, was used for such things as personal loans, parties, flowers and purchase of emergency items for which the city later reimbursed the fund. The debate over the way it was handled resulted from the fact that it was mixed with some city monies as well as SWAT Team and K-9 funds.

and an interest in the Bible truth that there is a Jesus and He's coming again and we should live day to day like he would come that day."

Harry Carroll, owner of the Book & Bible Store in Casselberry, said he sold 500 copies before he ran out. Carroll said, "I definitely feel very strongly that whether this is the time or not Jesus will be coming back again, but the Bible says no man knows the time or the hour. In years past, people have tried to pinpoint the day, but you can't do that."

Carroll said Whisenant is "no dummy — he worked with NASA and has three or four degrees. It's really stirred up a lot of reaction, most positive and some negative."

Dr. Freddie Smith, pastor of Central Baptist Church of Sanford, said, "We understand the Lord can come any time and throughout the history of the church there have been those who have tried to predict the date. There is a lot of analysis in the book, but it's my opinion that Christ will return at the moment we least expect."

The Rev. Bronson Lane, pastor of Friendship Alliance Church, Sanford, said, "By the wide discussion of Biblical truths, it has caused a lot of people to pause and take their own spiritual pulse and examine their relationship with God." He said he does not expect Christians strong in the faith to be disillusioned if Christ does not return at the time the book predicts, but there is some potential for scoffing and jaundice among the unbelieving public.

projects which include approximately 480 units and 1,500 residents.

The firing of Smith brought an overwhelming show of support for Smith to Monday's city commission meeting.

Asked for a show of hands by the commission, approximately 45 citizens present identified themselves as being in support of Smith.

"For the first time since being on the commission, I'm very embarrassed," said Commissioner Bob Thomas. "We have been most remiss. I feel ashamed we stood by and let this fester like it did." "He (Smith) was betrayed by those who were suppose to protect him. I think it is very unfair what has happened to this man."

After waiting more than two hours until other city business was discussed, two people read resolutions to the commission asking for the removal of SHIA Commissioners Bill Buratti and Detreville.

Residents

Church member Imogene Yarborough, whose house is just south of the church on First Street, said Conner's Jesus license plate may have announced his calling to the resident of the double-wide mobile home at 1955 Trail Run Drive. But the license plate didn't announce Conner's mission.

Yarborough said Conner wasn't making random house calls. He had business appointments with church members in the neighborhood and was lost.

"He wasn't one of these ministers who would knock on your door and tell you to come to church," Yarborough said. "He would welcome you with many kind words from Christ. He made you just want to do anything you could for the betterment of your church and your soul."

She remembers him glistening in sweat Saturday, with his bright red hair shining as he pulled weeds at the church and worked with 28 parishoners to clean the church for the Wednesday conference. "He was a young man in his prime," Yarborough said.

Joseph Carmichael Wallace, 60, an insurance claims adjuster for a Winter Park company apparently considered Conner an unwelcome trespasser. Wallace, who was charged by Seminole County sheriff's deputies early Monday for the murder of Conner is being held without bond in the county jail, accused of shooting Conner once in the abdomen with a handgun. Conner was shot through the window of his car, apparently never having had a chance to get out of the vehicle and explain that he was lost.

When Wallace's neighbors heard a shot and someone yelling about trespassing, they called a sheriff's deputy to the scene. When that deputy arrived at about 7 p.m., Wallace, whose wife Betty and sons Daniel and Michael were with him at home, reportedly met the deputy at the front of his property and told him everything was okay at his house. The deputy left and returned at about 7:30 after the witness told him a shot was fired at Wallace's house.

The deputy returned and found Conner lying in his car in the driveway behind Wallace's house. He was fatally wounded. A handgun was found on an outside picnic table and when the Wallacees were ordered out of their house, a sheriff's report indicates Mrs. Wallace said her husband had shot Conner and the shooting was unprovoked. Sheriff's Capt. Roy Hughey said a motive for the shooting may never be determined. Investigators do not believe Wallace was intoxicated, Hughey said.

One of Wallace's sons reportedly said he saw his father put Conner's body back into his car and then hose off the driveway and wash blood from the car. When the deputy found the body, before he called the Wallacees out, he said he heard a discussion about a body.

Parishoner Ken Johnson was called to the scene to identify Conner. "That was the last thing I expected," Johnson said. "You just pull down the blinders and go on like a robot."

Meanwhile, Conner's daughter Kathy Ann, 21, heard a news bulletin that a man in his 40s had been shot and killed in Geneva. She saw a picture of the victim's car on television and expressed concern to her mother about her father being gone for five hours.

At about 11 p.m. Sunday, Yarborough said Mrs. Conner was notified of her husband's death.

Parishoners, including Cathy Coston, who had helped make arrangements for the Conner's move to Geneva from Tallahassee, gathered at the parsonage and stayed through the night and through Monday.

"He was a great guy, vivacious, extremely organized, a very good strong speaker with a great message," is Coston's memory of Conner. His last message Sunday was entitled "Rumor Mill." "You don't want rumors, bits of information," Coston said. She interprets that in part to show that it should be made clear that when he was killed, Conner was on church business. He was lost and was not soliciting. "He was right next door to where he was going."

"I don't know the purpose for this. God works in mysterious ways. Something will have to come out of this that's good. Whatever it is is not evident now," Coston said. As Christians, she said, those who mourn the loss of Conner feel no anger.

"He brought so much new energy with him," Yarborough said of the victim, who had asked for duty in Geneva and had replaced Rev. Gary Isner, who had been the minister there for more than 15 years.

"He was soft spoken, but very direct. Our Bible teaches us there's a reason for everything. So many times you can't say why. I don't want to say it's to unite the church or the community. We're not broken up," Yarborough said. "All of Geneva is not bad. We're the last little unincorporated area in the county. We know one day we're going to have all the things that happen in a big city. But there's a lot of good people in Geneva. They stick together for whatever they believe in. We don't need everybody else's castoffs," she said, referring to a proposal to build a state prison in Geneva.

Wallace, an Alabama native, is a "total stranger" to mainline Geneva residents, Yarborough said. That includes the 100 members of Conner's church, which once was a church of the aging, but is now attracting young families as well.

Pam Dorn, who for 12 years has lived across the road, two driveways down from the Wallace property, which, she said, has been home of the Wallacees for about 10 years, knew both men.

A girl scout leader, Dorn said her troop meets at the Methodist Church. She remembers Conner as "really nice to every one."

She remembers the Wallacees as very private people. "They didn't visit. They were an older couple who didn't visit with the young people. We had no problem with them. They've been good neighbors. They loved their animals."

Dorn was shocked to hear about the murder. She didn't hear the shot Sunday night, but said it's common to hear target practice shots.

Crops hit by drought down 31 percent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government appears to have a firm fix on drought damage, confirming a previous estimate that U.S. grain production is down 31 percent this year but should have only a modest effect on food prices.

Total grain production now is forecast at 191 million metric tons for 1988, compared to 277 million last year. The Agriculture Department estimate is based on Sept. 1 crop conditions and is the most accurate measurement yet of the impact of the drought that began in the spring.

Today's reports are a further indication that the drought has had a major impact on this year's crops. Assistant Agriculture Secretary Ewen Wilson said in releasing the figures Monday.

"But because of large pre-season stocks, total supplies are enough in most cases to assure an adequate food supply at home, satisfy foreign customers and meet our food aid commitments," he said, echoing comments made when similar numbers were provided by the department last month.

Wilson repeated the Agriculture Department's projection that the drought should add only 1 percentage point to the Consumer Price Index for food this year and that food prices overall are likely to rise 3 percent to 5 percent.

Meat prices are likely to go up 10 to 15 percent.

The drought is the fourth worst on record in terms of area covered. It peaked in mid-July when 46 percent of the country suffered severe or extreme drought.

Large surpluses from past bumper crops are expected to cushion the impact of the drought on consumers, although there have been charges of gouging by some food merchants and questions about whether the government is wise to subsidize agriculture exports during a drought.

U.S. grain reserves are expected to drop 37 percent by next fall. For corn and wheat, the carryover would be equal to about 2 1/2 months' supply, and for soybeans, the 100 million ton carryover is equal to one month's supply — a relatively tight level, Wilson said.

Poor not sharing South Korea's economic success

United Press International

PUCHON, South Korea — The Olympic Flame's 22 day journey through South Korea will spotlight the nation's booming economy but when it passes through a ramshackle camp near the capital it will illuminate a darker side of the South Korean success story.

Down a muddy road off the main expressway where the torch will pass Thursday, 40 families live in a makeshift shantytown after being evicted last year from their Seoul homes in the wake of the country's redevelopment fever.

With South Korea's rapid economic development, Seoul has become the world's fifth largest city. But government plans to showcase steel and glass towers and modern apartment buildings have so far not included those at the low end of the economic scale.

Staging the 24th Summer Olympics Sept. 17-30 has injected vitality into this nation's 41 million people.

Since the torch arrived from Athens Aug. 22, celebrations have erupted everywhere on the long journey north to Seoul for the lighting of the Olympic flame at the opening ceremony Saturday. The flame was carried on a sleek, modern ferryboat and by Korean-made cars and jeeps past a dozen high rise cities that are testament to South Korea's economic miracle.

But the squatters say they can't share in the excitement.

"We have no reason to watch the Olympic torch pass here. We have been damaged by the Olympics," said Kwon Soon Kun, 46, a resident of the camp at Puchon, 25 miles west of Seoul.

About 200 squatters, day laborers and their families live in a ramshackle village of wood structures hung with plastic tarpaulins and blankets. They say the city has notified them it will build a wall along the highway to block the settlement from view when the torch passes.

A local official said only that the city was considering putting up the wall.

But even Kwon, reflecting Korean national pride at hosting the Games, agrees his home should be hidden from the eyes of the outside world.

"This place is poor and shabby and the wall should go up," Kwon said.

The camp was erected in February, when its residents covered 3-foot holes in the dirt with plywood and blankets to shelter themselves from the cold.

Now the sun is shining and the usual haze that hangs over the Seoul area has lifted for a few weeks. Laundry hangs in the breeze while women dry sesame leaves, fish and fruit on blankets spread on the muddy ground.

The Asian Coalition for Housing Rights, which last week visited Seoul on a fact-finding mission, charged that in the government's zealous redevelopment drive it has not provided for the housing needs of the poor.

It estimated the dwellings of 720,000 people have been destroyed since 1983 and that beatings, threats and even 13 deaths resulted when residents resisted efforts to vacate their tented homes.

Only 10 percent of residents of redeveloped areas have been able to afford the price of new dwellings on the redeveloped sites, the group said.

Ethics office chief raps Meese's conduct

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Though drawing some harsh conclusions of his own, the government ethics director is leaving it to Justice Department lawyers to decide whether their ex boss Edwin Meese violated ethical regulations.

Frank Nebeker, head of the Office of Government Ethics, wrote in a 17-page memo to colleagues that while he believes Meese ignored written pledges of conduct and undercut public confidence in the law enforcement agency, the former attorney general's associates should make any legal determination.

Department officials are reviewing the situation but have refused comment.

Nebeker's memo was made public Monday and it drew conclusions from a review of independent prosecutor James McKay's 14-month criminal probe of Meese.

The ethics chief agreed with McKay that Meese displayed a lack of genuine concern for honoring ethical agreements he signed before becoming attorney general.

Meese, who left office Aug. 12, was traveling Monday and was not available for comment.

James Roop III, a lawyer for Meese, criticized Nebeker's memo, protesting that the ethics director refused to meet with Meese's attorneys and saying the memo contained "nothing new."

As a result, Mr. Nebeker's conclusions are wrong and unwarranted, and Mr. Meese's integrity and reputation have been unfairly impugned, Roop said.

top U.S. law enforcement officer

Meese also had agreed to remove himself from matters involving longtime friend F. Robert Wallach, the San Francisco lawyer who represented Meese during an earlier independent prosecutor investigation.

Meese signed a second, similar pledge before taking office in February 1985.

This office did not accept Mr. Meese's ethics agreement lightly, does not accept his failure to comply with it lightly and will not accept other nominees' agreements lightly in the future, Nebeker wrote sternly.

However, he added, "I cannot properly state that Mr. Meese or any other employee has violated one of the provisions of an employing agency's regulations."

My observations are not intended by this office to be in lieu of actual findings of the Department of Justice.

WORLD BRIEFS

Chilean government censors opposition

SANTIAGO, Chile — The government censored opposition advertising that discussed the torture of political prisoners, three weeks before Gen. Augusto Pinochet asks voters to extend his rule, officials said.

The opposition's 15 minutes of free political advertising — its first significant access to television since the 1973 coup that brought Pinochet to power — did not appear Monday night after the government said it could not contain an interview with a judge investigating the alleged torture of political prisoners by the secret police.

London expels Cuban ambassador

LONDON — The British government has ordered the Cuban ambassador to leave the country today because of a shooting involving a lower-level Cuban diplomat in central London.

The Foreign Office said the second Cuban diplomat — who reportedly fired up to five shots at either a car or group of men — was also being expelled.

The reason for the shooting Monday afternoon was not immediately clear but London gave Ambassador Oscar Fernandez-Mell and third secretary Carlos Medina Perez until midnight today to get out of the country.

A Vietnamese diplomat was expelled from London over the weekend because he brandished a pistol outside the Vietnamese Embassy during a demonstration.

German hostage released by terrorists

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The pro-Iranian captors of West German businessman Rudolf Cordes released their hostage of 19 months apparently in hopes of influencing a West German court trying TWA hijacker Mohammad Ali Hammadi, analysts say.

Cordes, who was released in Beirut shortly before midnight Monday, was taken to Damascus, Syria, where he was turned over early today to West German Ambassador Georg Hermann Schillingstein.

Cordes's release came after the clandestine pro-Iranian group, Strugglers for Freedom, issued three statements promising to free Cordes Monday and saying it had received "guarantees" that the cases of two Lebanese arrested in West Germany would be "settled."

Argentine general strike ends in victory

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — A 24-hour general strike against what labor groups called excessive police violence ended with both government supporters and union members claiming victory.

Saul Ubaldini, secretary-general of the General Labor Confederation, said in a statement that Monday's walkout, which ended at midnight, was 95 percent effective.

But bus service on the streets of Buenos Aires was substantial, though less than on a normal day, and most banks, shops and restaurants were open for business. Suburban train service, however, was idled.

Buenos Aires subways functioned, as did major industries in the factory zone in the suburbs. In the interior, the strike had little effect in the province of Mendoza, but in the province of Cordoba most major industries were shut.

Bus crash kills five, wounds 14

United Press International

VELARDE, N.M. — A boulder bounded down the side of a mountain and crashed into a Greyhound bus, sending it careening into a pile of rocks and killing five people and injuring 14, state police said today.

The bus, traveling from Denver to Albuquerque, crashed on New Mexico 68, a winding two-lane canyon road, about 80 miles north of Albuquerque around 10:30 p.m. Monday, said state trooper Harold Zunt.

"The front face of the bus is gone, just sheared off," he said.

It had been raining. The road was wet. This was a hilly, two-lane undivided roadway. There had been a rock slide in the area.

—George Gravely, Greyhound spokesman

"I don't think the driver had any warning that that rock was coming down. I think it just happened and the driver didn't have a chance to do anything, really."

The driver, Gaylon Parks of Denver, was among the five people killed, authorities said.

Jim Brenna, a member of the Dixon Volunteer Fire Department and one of the 100 or so rescuers at the scene, said it appeared the driver was killed immediately when the boulder, the size of half a car, crashed into the bus.

"A preliminary investigation indicates that a rock fell from the mountainside due to the heavy rain ... and collided with the bus," said Zunt. "It looks like it collided right where the driver sits in the bus."

"He probably was killed instantly and two or three passengers as well," said Greyhound spokesman George Gravely.

After the boulder hit, the bus veered into a pile of rocks at the side of the road that falls away down an incline.

One dead, one missing, five hurt in Navy jet accidents

United Press International

Two Navy F-14 Tomcat jet fighters crashed at opposite ends of the country, killing one pilot, injuring two others, leaving one missing and badly injuring three people on the ground in California.

The first jet went down in the Atlantic Ocean off North Carolina about 12:30 p.m. EDT Monday, killing one crewman and leaving the other missing. About 45 minutes later, another F-14 crashed into a hangar at a private airfield after the two-man crew ejected straight down while the crippled plane was doing out-of-control barrel rolls over El Cajon, Calif.

The two fliers were badly injured, one when he hit some power lines and broke his neck, the other when he landed hard in the middle of a city street. Three people on the ground were injured, including one who lost a leg, in the spectacular fire and explosions that erupted when the jet slammed into a hangar and bounced into another. Both hangars and five private planes on the ground were destroyed.

The jet was returning to its base at Miramar Air Station, home of the famed Top Gun air combat school when the pilot radioed he was having trouble with the hydraulic system that controls the flaps.

"They were trying to get home," said Lt. David Wray, a Navy spokesman. "They were out over the ocean when they experienced the trouble. They were on their way back to Miramar when they decided to try to land at Gillespie Field," which is about 10 miles from the Navy base.

Witnesses said the plane did several rolls before the crew fired their explosive ejection seats while the plane was upside down with its landing gear in the air.

"It was coming in upside down real slow and the landing gear was in position," said Darrin Bronk, a motorist who saw the crash. "It was aimed for the runway, but then it veered away into a hangar and crashed in a ball of flame."

Lt. Jim Barnett, 36, an instructor with 10 years experience in F-14s, was listed in stable condition at Mercy Hospital with fractures to his arm and heel and cuts and bruises.

Lt. Jg. Randy Furtado, who was riding in the radar officer's seat, was listed in critical condition at Sharp Memorial Hospital with a broken neck with life-threatening injuries.

The East Coast crash involved a plane from the Naval Air Station in Virginia Beach that was on a combat training mission when it crashed.

Reagan signs housing bill

UPI report

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's signature today on major civil rights legislation will put teeth into the nation's housing laws.

After years of complaints about continuing discrimination in the face of the 1968 Fair Housing Act, the reform bill adopted this year has broad bipartisan support from Congress and the real estate industry.

The reform creates a new process for dealing with housing disputes, allowing people who believe they have been discriminated against by a rental or sales agent to file a complaint with the Housing and Urban Development Department.

Browns sign Strock, Slayden

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Browns, reeling from the loss of their two top quarterbacks, Monday signed 15-year veteran Don Strock and re-signed rookie Steve Slayden.

Strock and Slayden will backup starter Mike Papek, Browns Coach Marty Schottenheimer said.

Cleveland, 1-1, the only team that hasn't scored a touchdown, has lost its starting quarterback in each of its two games. Gary Danielson, who broke his left ankle for the second time in three seasons during Sunday's 23-3 loss to the New York Jets, was placed on injured reserve and will miss six to eight weeks.

Don Strock

Danielson was subbing for Bernie Kosar, who severely sprained his right elbow in the opener at Kansas City, a 6-3 Cleveland victory. Kosar went on injured reserve Sunday and will be sidelined at least another three games and as many as seven.

Sewell's condition critical

TAMPA — Rip Sewell, who won 143 major-league games and originated the blooper pitch in 1942, remained in critical condition Monday at Lakeland Regional Medical Center.

The 81-year-old resident of Plant City, Fla., suffered an aneurysm seven weeks ago and surgeons later removed the remains of his right leg up to his hip. In 1972, both legs were amputated just below the knees due to circulation problems.

"He's on a plateau right now," said Sewell's wife, Maggie. "He doesn't get any better or any worse. We've taken him off all machines."

Sewell's wife said he is often aware of her presence in the hospital room.

Elliott increases Winston lead

DAYTONA BEACH — Rusty Wallace's misfortune in the Miller High Life 400 gave Bill Elliott his largest lead of the season in the battle for the Winston Cup driving championship.

Wallace trailed Elliott by only 26 points heading into Sunday's race at Richmond, Va., but got involved in an accident early in the race and finished 35th. Elliott finished seventh while two-time defending champion Dale Earnhardt's second-place finish vaulted him by Wallace in the point standings.

Elliott now has 3,363 points to 3,246 for Earnhardt and 3,244 for Wallace, heading into Sunday's Delaware 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway. There are seven races left on the schedule.

"We're going to approach Dover the same way we've approached every other race this season," Elliott said. "We're going to do everything we can to win the race and if we do that, the points will take care of themselves."

OLYMPICS

All athletes allowed to march

SEOUL, South Korea — Olympic organizers Tuesday night said all athletes will be allowed to march in the opening ceremonies of the Seoul Games, eliminating a possible U.S. boycott of the festivities.

"No athlete, from any country, will be refused the right to participate in the parade," Sohn Wie Soo, a spokesman for the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee, said in a four-paragraph statement.

More than 13,000 athletes — the most in Olympic history — are to compete at the Games, which open with Saturday's dazzling ceremony at Olympic Stadium. An athlete has never been denied the opportunity to attend the opening march but that tradition appeared in jeopardy with SLOOC considering cuts in the number of participating athletes.

Walker, Cowboys run past Cards

United Press International

TEMPE, Ariz. — When the Phoenix Cardinals weren't beating themselves Monday night, Herschel Walker helped them do it.

Walker gained 149 yards on 29 carries, scoring a touchdown and setting up another to lead the Dallas Cowboys to a 17-14 victory that spoiled the regular-season home debut of the Cardinals.

"When it came to stopping Herschel, we couldn't do it," Cardinals Coach Gene Stallings said. "I think that's probably the bottom line."

To complete the demolition, Walker took out a television cameraman on his scoring run, sending him to the hospital.

"As long as we win, that's what counts," Walker said after the Cowboys improved to 1-1. "It doesn't matter if it's pretty or not, you've just got to win."

Meanwhile, the Cardinals were doing some destruction of their own, but of the self-inflicted kind. They squandered three potential scoring opportunities midway through the game, coming away with no points each time.

Trailing 10-7, St. Louis opted for a fake on Al Del Greco's 42-yard field goal attempt. Holder Cliff Stoudt pitched over his shoulder to Del Greco, who was stopped at the Dallas 16-yard line as the half ended.

"We weren't sure he could kick it," Stallings said. "It was a gamble, obviously. He had missed the first one, and wasn't kicking too good before the game started."

Dallas quarterback Steve Pelluer completed 12 of 24 passes for 162 yards, including a 47-yard completion to Michael Irvin to set up the first Dallas score. With Dallas trailing 7-3 and the ball on the Cowboys' 47, Pelluer found Irvin along the sideline on a fly pattern and hit him with the pass at the Phoenix 6. A late hit by Leonard Smith moved the ball to the 3, where Walker carried around right end for the touchdown on the next play.

The Cowboys increased their lead to 17-7 on an 81-yard drive that ended with a 1-yard scoring plunge by Pelluer with 5:23 left in the game. Walker carried on 9 of the 13 plays on the drive, picking up 58 yards.

For the second straight week, Phoenix out-gained its opponent in total offense, with 396 yards to Dallas' 352. However, the Cardinals again self-destructed in potential scoring situations, falling to 0-2.

Phoenix lost three potential scoring opportunities inside the Dallas 30, coming away with no points on the drives.

In the second half, a 34-yard pass play to the Dallas 9 was nullified by a penalty, and a fumble by Phoenix rookie Tony Jordan stopped another drive.

In addition, a pass-interference call against Reggie Phillips kept alive a Dallas drive with less than two minutes left in the game.

On third-and-9 from the Dallas 21, Pelluer's pass for Ray Alexander fell incomplete, but Phillips was flagged for grabbing Alexander before the pass arrived.

Cardinals quarterback Neil Lomax completed 20 of 34 passes for 266 yards and two touchdowns.

Walker bowled over television cameraman Dan Siekman along the sideline on his scoring run, sending Siekman to the hospital for X-rays for a possible broken arm.

On the first series of the second half, the Cardinals had a 34-yard pass play from Lomax to J.T. Smith nullified by an illegal formation call when tackle Luis Sharpe lined up too deep off the line of scrimmage. The Cardinals were forced to punt.

Olympics attract world's best

Track events assume new luster at Seoul

By JOE ILLUZZI
UPI sports writer

Track and field, the showpiece of any Olympics, enjoys a homecoming of sorts at the Seoul Games.

For the first time since 1972, the major powers will be in the starting blocks. In 1976, African nations walked out over New Zealand's sporting ties with South Africa. In 1980 the United States led a boycott stemming from the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. In 1984, the Soviets replied in kind, citing inadequate security.

"It does make it special," says Mary Decker Slaney, America's middle distance star. The Russians are a very strong part of women's middle-distance running. The 1984 Olympics would have been a much bigger challenge for everybody if the Russians were there and the East Germans.

The only track and field contenders missing this time will be Cuba and Ethiopia, two of six nations who say they will not attend.

The political success of the past boycotts remains open to debate.

Beyond doubt is the cost to some of the best in track and field.

At Moscow in 1980, such Americans as Larry Myricks, Renaldo Nehemiah, Greg Foster and Stanley Floyd would have been favored for gold medals. Now, Myricks lags behind Lewis in the long jump; Nehemiah and Foster will watch the Games on television, and Floyd will be a spectator in Seoul, cheering his wife, Delisa Walton-Floyd, in the 800 meters.

In 1984, when the Soviets led an East Bloc boycott of Los Angeles, Marlies Gohr, Marita Koch and Barbel Eckert of East Germany and Jarmila Kratochvilova of Czechoslovakia were candidates for gold in the women's sprints. None will compete in Seoul.

"This definitely adds to the Olympics because everyone is going to be there," says Carl Lewis, the 1984 quadruple gold medalist. "That always makes it best. It makes it more fair, a better Games. It gets more publicity and it's more open. It's great for the Olympic movement to have everyone involved."

Seminole swims for success

By CHUCK BURGESS
Special to the Herald

While most of the area high school swim teams have established themselves as contenders on the state level with their many numbers, Tony Ackerson's Fighting Seminoles have managed to inch their way up in the swimming world with outstanding individuals and a small supporting cast.

However, as the 1988 swim season bolts full speed ahead, Ackerson hopes to combine the two and field one of the strongest teams that Seminole has seen in recent years.

The Seminole High swim program prepares for another season of flip turns and close finishes as they open their year on September 24 in the Sheridan Invitational. Ackerson, along with assistant Marc Rummier, see this year as a different kind of year for Seminole swimming.

"This year we should do very well with the meets we have scheduled and the kids we have out," Ackerson, who is in his second year as the Seminoles' mentor, said. "Most of the kids have come back this year in great shape and we have a lot more people out. It should be a really good year for us."

Seminole, which has been known for it's individuals at the state level, may field its largest team at the state meet this year.

"With the team we have right now, we should be able to put at least three swimmers in the state meet," Ackerson said. "We've been looking real good in practice so far and with the increased yardage our swimmers should be a lot stronger than in previous years."

The big story is on the boys' team where Ackerson may see the first time in Seminole history that two boys go to the state meet. Seniors Scott Lewis and Georgia transfer Sean Mickle will both have good possibilities to place well at the state meet this year according to Ackerson. "Scott (Lewis) has really been looking good in practice."

Knights No. 3

With victories over Bethune-Cookman and West Georgia in hand, the University of Central Florida Knights climbed from No. 5 to No. 3 in the NCAA Division II rankings this week.

UCF picked up 33 points in the voting and trails only defending Division II champion Troy State (40) and North Dakota State (35).

The Knights will have their shot at No. 1 this Saturday night as they host Troy State at the Orlando Citrus Bowl. Troy State defeated UCF, 31-10, in last year's playoffs.

UCF's two victories this season included a 29-21 thriller over BCC in the opener and a 33-14 rout of West Georgia a week ago.

SHS kickoffs 7:30

'Noles plan to ambush Eagles

Any copying, reprinting or rebroadcast of this column is strictly encouraged by the author.

Just when you thought you were out of paper for the kitty box, the Fearless Fister Forecast has returned. After taking a 3-week sabbatical at the end of last season and missing opening week in 1988 due to a computer malfunction (or was that a brain malfunction?) the pigskin predictions column that has entertained (or is that frightened?) more people than Freddie Krueger is back.

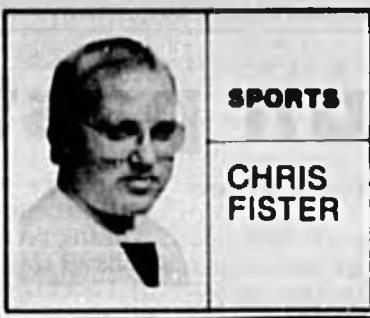

The last prediction made by this columnist came in January when it was forecast that Doug Williams would throw for four touchdown passes and lead the Washington Redskins over the Denver Broncos in the Super Bowl.

Now, let's put that perfect '88 record on the line with this week's picks:

Edgewater at Seminole

The excitement certainly has not left Seminole High football after the graduation of several key players from last year's district, region and section championship team. The 'Noles showed the ability to strike at any time, either offensively or defensively. In last week's 29-12 victory over Titusville Astronaut.

This week, SHS opens defense of its 4A-7 District title against an improved Edgewater ballclub. The Eagles are gearing up for a run at the district crown — too bad it's only a four-team district and the first loss usually eliminates you. While the devious Eagles are thinking championships, they will be

Lake Brantley at Lake Mary

In this rivalry of rivalries, favorites don't mean diddly. Pregame scare tactics don't work. It is interesting to see which coach has the biggest veins in his neck, though (just joking).

Not only is this for bragging rights in Altamonte Mall, but it is of the utmost importance in the race for the Seminole Athletic Conference and District 5A-4 titles. Both the Patriots of Lake Brantley and Lake Mary's Rams are contenders in the district this year and whoever wins Friday night will clear one of the biggest hurdles en route to the championship.

What it comes down to here is doing anything and everything it takes to win. And, in that situation is when Harry Nelson's Rams have been at their best in recent years. Lake Mary by 7.

DeLand at Lake Howell

The Bulldogs were the ones who ended up spoiling a trip to the playoffs for Lake Howell a year ago. DeLand's victory was the only district loss for the Silver Hawks and the district wound up in a three-way tie. Lake Mary went on to win the district playoff.

This year, Lake Howell has already built up some momentum going into the matchup with a win over a strong Apopka team while DeLand is still reeling after an overtime loss to Fort Pierce Central. This year, DeLand will not be able to stop Lake Howell's run toward a district crown. Lake Howell by 14.

Oviedo at Dr. Phillips

When Dr. Phillips High opened a year ago, they originally thought they'd be in Class 4A in football. When everybody and his brother in Orange County enrolled at the school, it immediately went to 5A. The problem for the Panthers was they already were committed to playing the four teams in District 4A-7. So this year is the second season the Panthers won't be eligible for the state playoffs.

They can't win the district and don't play enough games to win the Metro Conference. So about the only thing the Panthers can shoot for is an unbeaten season.

Oviedo, on the other hand, hopes to make a run at a district title. And what better way to prepare than an upset victory. Oviedo by 6.

West Orange at Apopka

The Blue Darters are looking to get their offense in gear after being held to three points by Lake Howell a week ago. Apopka should be able to put enough points on the board and its defense is about ready for a shutout. Don't count the Darters out just yet...Apopka by 10.

COLLEGES — In college action this week it should be Florida over Indiana State by 50; Clemson over Florida State by 6; Miami over Michigan by 3; UCF in an upset over Troy State by 2.

PROS — Can it be? The Bucs win two in a row by downing the Cardinals by 13; and the Colts over the winless Dolphins by 7.

UCLA climbs to 2nd

United Press International

NEW YORK — UCLA rode a victory over recent nemesis Nebraska to the second position behind Miami in today's United Press International Board of Coaches' college football ratings.

The idle Hurricanes received 37 of 50 first-place votes and 737 of a possible 750 points. The Bruins, who Saturday shocked the Cornhuskers 41-28 at the Rose Bowl, jumped from fifth last week with 686 points and the remaining 13 first-place votes.

Remaining out the Top 10 were No. 3 Oklahoma, No. 4 Clemson, No. 5 Southern California, No. 6 Georgia, No. 7 Auburn, No. 8 Louisiana State, No. 9 Notre Dame and No. 10 Nebraska.

The second ten included No. 11 West Virginia, No. 12 Florida State, No. 13 Penn State, No. 14 Alabama, No. 15 South Carolina, No. 16 Michigan, No. 17 Ohio State, No. 18 Florida, No. 19 Washington and No. 20 Pittsburgh.

UCLA, which had been outscored by Nebraska 126-46 in three meetings over the past five years, scored four touchdowns in the first 14 minutes en route to a 41-28 victory over last week's second-rated Cornhuskers.

"I think this victory puts our football program on a different plateau," Bruins Coach Terry Donahue said. "It removes the stigma that we couldn't beat Nebraska."

Seven independents, five teams from the Southeastern Conference, three from the Pac-10, two each from the Big Eight and Big Ten Conferences and one from the Athletic Coast Conference completed the rankings.

Florida, Ohio State and Washington made their first appearances in this season's ratings, while Iowa, Michigan State and Syracuse dropped out.

Oklahoma and Clemson reversed positions from last week. The Sooners opened with a 28-0 road triumph over North Carolina. The Tigers downed Furman 23-3.

Southern Cal, which beat Stanford 24-20, moved up one spot to fifth. Georgia, which routed Texas Christian 38-10, moved up two spots from eighth. Auburn, which beat Kansas 20-10, remained seventh.

Notre Dame leaped from 11th to ninth after beating Michigan 19-17. The Wolverines fell from 10th to 16th.

West Virginia, which entered the rankings last week at No. 13, beat Fullerton State 45-10. Florida State held onto the 12th position after a 39-13 triumph over Southern Mississippi.

Penn State jumped four spots from 17th to Alabama two from No. 16 after season-opening victories. The Nittany Lions downed Virginia 42-14 and the Crimson Tide beat Temple 37-0. South Carolina, which beat Western Carolina 38-0, stayed at No. 15.

A wacky night in the AL East

United Press International

The Yankees may be calling on Claudell Washington too often; the Tigers may be calling on the Blue Jays for a repeat of last season; and the Red Sox may be calling the Orioles a first-place team's best friend.

Welcome to Monday night in the American League East.

Confusing? Perhaps, though no more so than the chase for the AL East title, a seemingly ever-twisting trek toward October.

The front-running Red Sox lead the Tigers by 3½ games. Both notched victories Monday night against clubs they apparently enjoy playing: Boston topped Baltimore 6-1, Detroit nipped Toronto 6-5.

Meanwhile, the Yankees, 4½ back, lost for the third time in four games against the Indians, this time 8-6, when their last-inning hero, Washington, failed to deliver.

Mets 3, Pirates 2

Gary Carter homered with one out in the ninth inning Monday night to lift the New York Mets to their fifth straight victory, a 3-2 triumph over the Pirates.

Expos 14, Cardinals 2

At Montreal, Nelson Santovenia drove in five runs and Rex Hudler knocked home three to power Montreal, snapping the Cardinals' seven-game winning streak. Bryn Smith, 11-9, scattered seven hits over six innings. Mike Smith pitched three innings for his first career save. Joe Magrane, 4-9, took the loss.

Oviedo runs toward future SAC success

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

OVIDEO — Oviedo cross country coach Ed Bolton is hoping his group of young runners can gain experience for the future and be competitive at the end of the season as well as next year.

Leading the way for the Lions so far is junior Brad Bolton who is in his third consecutive season as a cross country athlete. Following Bolton is senior Derek Bates who has run four years at Oviedo.

"Both Brad (Bolton) and Derek (Bates) are our captains and will have to be our leaders this year," Bolton said. "They've both been around for awhile and understand what we need to accomplish."

Following Bolton and Bates is sophomore Jeff Ickes who is a competitive triathlete and is also involved with the Oviedo swimming program. Rounding out the top five should be sophomores Zach Ely and B.J. Mayhew.

Right now a pair of tennis players are leading the way in seniors Ashley Ehrhart and Adrienne Wood, both competed in the sport last season and give Oviedo some veteran runners along with leadership.

Gwen Long and Nicole Tolbert, both juniors, also return for the Lady Lions to add a little depth to the squad.

"Those were our top four runners from last season and we're hoping they can carry us during the early going," Bolton said. "We've had a couple of nice surprises, though, and hopefully we'll get a few more runners."

Sophomores Melinda Mayhood and Rebecca Kolyac are also out for the team and have been looking good in the early going. Rounding out the team is freshman Latonya Thomas who has been looking real good in the early practices.

Track

tween Lewis and Ben Johnson promises to be the highlight of the Sept. 23 Oct. 2 track and field competition. Johnson set a world record of 9.83 seconds at last year's World Championships in Rome. That event, the first in which Lewis will compete in Seoul, will determine whether he can duplicate his gold bonanza of 1984.

Lewis will follow with the long jump, the 200 meters and the 4 x 100-meter relay. The long jump final and the second round of the 200 meters are scheduled one hour apart, and Lewis may forsake the sprint if the timetable is not changed.

No man has won gold medals in consecutive Olympics in any of those four disciplines. However, Lewis is one of several possible multiple gold winners in Seoul.

Jackie Joyner-Kersey is heavily favored to win the heptathlon and has an excellent shot at the long jump. Florence Griffith-Joyner, now the world's best female sprinter, will compete in the 100 and 200 meters and the 4 x 100 relay. She has an outside chance at running a leg on the 4 x 400 relay.

Slaney returns to the Olympics four years after her infamous collision with Zola Budd in the 3,000 meters final at Los Angeles. She has resumed competition this year after giving birth in 1986 and undergoing surgery on her Achilles tendon. Slaney has shown strong form and will challenge Tatyana Samolenko of the Soviet Union in the 1,500 and the 3,000. Samolenko won both events in Rome last year.

Butch Reynolds, a former Ohio State star, is the choice runner at 400 meters. He also will run a leg on the U.S. 4 x 400 relay, which should win easily and possibly set a world record.

Said Aouita, the premier middle-distance runner, will double at 800 and 1,500 meters. The Moroccan has routed all comers in the 5,000 and 10,000 but will face solid fields at the shorter distances.

The 800 will include Olympic champion Jose Luis Barbosa of Brazil, who also will run the 1,500, world champion Billy Konchellah of Kenya and Britons Steve Cram and Tom McKean.

The final in the men's 1,500 figures to be extremely competitive. Along with world record-holder Aouita and Barbosa, the race should include an array of the finest milers, with Cram, world champion Abdi Bile of Somalia and American record-holder Steve Scott will be in the hunt for the gold.

Sebastian Coe, the Olympic 1,500 champion in 1980 and 1984, failed to make the British Olympic team.

Two East German women — Heike Drechsler and Silke Gladisch — will bid for more

Carl Lewis has been dominant in the long jump over his illustrious career and he is the favorite once again at the '88 Olympics. Fellow American Larry Myricks is considered his top competition than one gold medal. Drechsler could take the same route as Lewis in sprints, long jump and relay. Gladisch was the world's top sprinter in 1987 and won the 100 and 200 at Rome.

East Germany, the Soviet Union and the United States will capture the majority of the 126 medals from the 42 track and field events.

Other outstanding performers to look for in Seoul will be Soviet pole vaulter Sergei Bubka, who has set two world records this year; Bulgarian women's high jumper Stelka Kostadinova, who established a world record at the World Championships minutes after Johnson set his in the 100.

Williams has shot at winning a medal

By CHRIS FISTER
Herald sports editor

Schowonda Williams, an Altamonte Springs resident and Lyman High School graduate, is considered one of the top five contenders to win a medal in the 400-meter hurdles at the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea.

The 400 hurdles is one of the toughest events in the women's field since the Eastern bloc nations, Soviet Union, East Germany, etc., will compete.

Williams, who holds Florida state high school records in the 110 and 330 hurdles, has had a tremendous year in competition as she has won every major U.S. title in her specialty. The 21-year-old Louisiana State University student, led the Lady Tigers to the NCAA Championship with a first place in the 400 hurdles and anchoring the winning 4 x 100 relay team.

Early this summer, Williams won the 400 hurdles at the U.S. Track and Field Championships held at Tampa. Then, in the Olympic Trials in July, she ran the fastest time by an American this season with a first-place clocking of 54.93.

Had this been 1984, the year of the boycott at the Los Angeles Games, Williams would be right in the running for top honors. The winner that year was Nawal El Moutawakil of Morocco with a 54.61 — light years behind the world record in the event of 52.94 held by the Soviet Union's Marina Stepanova.

In order to win a medal at Seoul, however, Williams will have to drop at least one full second off her time at the Olympic Trials. The best time this season is a 54.05 by Debbie Flintoff-King of Australia.

Although they have not broken the 54-second barrier in competition this year, the favorites in the 400 meters at Seoul will be East Germans Sabine Busch and Cornelia Ullrich, with Busch's speed making her the best bet. Flintoff-King is also considered a medal contender with Williams not too far off the pace.

OLYMPIC NOTEBOOK

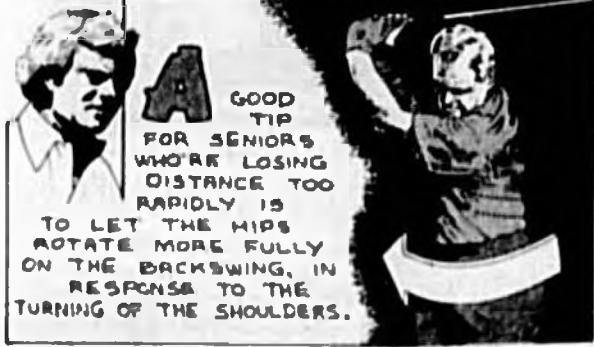

Park Se-huk, president of the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee, is still worried about the security at the Games.

Park said Sunday he placed security on top of his worry list, followed by traffic flow and the weather.

"People are very security conscious and are being co-operative," he said.

SCOREBOARD

Play Better Golf with JACK NICKLAUS

A GOOD TIP FOR SENIORS WHO'RE LOSING DISTANCE TOO RAPIDLY IS TO LET THE HIPS ROTATE MORE FULLY ON THE BACKSWING, IN RESPONSE TO THE TURNING OF THE SHOULDERS.

SOME OF THE YOUNGER OR MORE LINGERING PLAYERS MINIMIZE HIP TURN, BUT ON THE OTHER HAND, BOB JONES WON 15 MAJORS COLLING HIS HIPS ALMOST AS FULLY AS HIS SHOULDERS.

I BELIEVE PLENTY OF HIP TURN IS BETTER THAN TOO LITTLE, ESPECIALLY FOR OLDER GOLFERS.

Joining Lewis will be Mickle who Ackerson feels will be a big surprise when the state meet rolls around. "He'll (Mickle) make a huge difference with this year's team," Ackerson said. "With the meets we have scheduled, he should have no problem in winning both of his events."

Along with Lewis and Mickle will be senior Mark Davis (free) and sophomores Jeff Belford (breast) and Bryan Pavlak (sprint free). Ackerson says sports eight other swimmers, but says he looks for them to provide the depth in the dual meets.

On the girls' side the Lady

Swimmoles will turn to junior standout Cissy Burgess for leadership in the big meets. Burgess has qualified for the state meet in both her freshman and sophomore years and Ackerson looks for Burgess to be there again at the end of the season. "Cissy (Burgess) is really our big story," Ackerson said. "She's a very strong girl and she's really tough. She should be tremendous for us this year."

Joining Burgess on the Lady "Noles roster will be senior Mindy Bogue (back, sprint free) and junior Tina Kennedy (breast, distance free). Eight other newcomers will give the dual meet depth for Ackerson's Swimmoles.

The Lady Darters look for their first victory Wednesday when they go to Lake Mary.

"I saw a lot of good things from the girls," first-year coach Kathy Barma said. "We just had a difficult time serving. That was Dissect a frog here, memorize an algebraic equation there and diagram a sentence in between. You can stumble through it all without really trying and you'll be out in a few years.

Some students don't get that far. Their motivation to learn dries up at first base and they walk off the field.

The classical teen-ager possesses an unvarying apathy about his education. But in more and more cases lately, the teen becomes disinterested, disillusioned, frustrated and can't find a meaningful reason to continue high school.

Where it begins

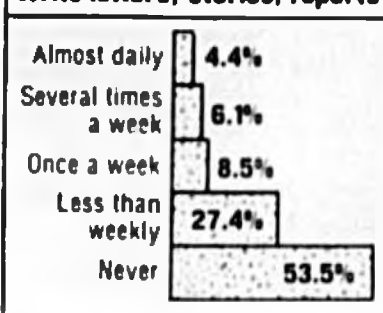

Who baked the pie of student disinterest about school? According to Bev Freeman, director of guidance at Lyman High School in Longwood, the head chef is "the breakdown of the family unit."

"The family is not what it used to be," Freeman said. "The family used to bring the kids up and establish a value system, with education at the top. The family used to be there to keep the kids off the street. I know that many people are out doing the best they can, but the kids' needs are not being met."

Ninth- and 10th-graders are legally bound to attend school and are not as hardened in their

Almost 50 percent of 11th graders have used computers to write letters, stories or reports, according to a survey. But less than 25 percent of them have used computers to make graphs or databases.

anti-curricular attitudes, said Dede Schaffner, consultant coordinator for Seminole County's Dividends School Volunteer Program. The Seminole County school system has its net out to catch kids at ages 14 and 15 and regear their thinking, she said.

"A lot of these kids have potential, but no one takes an interest in them," Schaffner said. "A lot of parents think, 'He's in high school now. He can fend for himself.' Which is too bad because a lot of these students are crying for help."

Although a student's disinterest for school probably was cultivated in the home, the parents are not necessarily Mistl Mom and Deadbeat Dad. "A lot of them don't know how to reach their kids," Freeman said. "A lot of them are more concerned about getting food on the table."

Another culprit that perpetuates the high school dropout rate is the employer who hires those who drop out. Students see no purpose in finishing school when they can already get a job, Freeman said. "What they don't know is they'll be making minimum wage forevermore," she said.

"Though a teen-ager's waning interest in school may be a passing phase, a persistent lack of motivation can have lasting effects," said Ken Estes, director of public relations for the CareUnit programs corporate office in Irvine, Calif. "In addition to inhibiting his or her intellectual growth, it can jeopardize an adolescent's academic future and professional goals."

Schools to the rescue

Seminole County schools aren't sitting back and letting history take its toll on the teen generation. A number of programs aims to fill the gap between parent and child and motivate students to better themselves educationally and socially.

In peer counseling/tutoring, "at risk students" are identified early by attendance, discipline and grades. Upperclassmen then aid the students with their classes and serve as role models, Freeman said.

Through a special grant, Lyman High School enjoys a Teachers as Advisors program, Freeman said. Each incoming student is assigned to a teacher, with whom the student meets each day of all four high school years. "The advisor becomes like a friend who's there all the time," she said.

Some students are released from school an hour early in order to work a job. "To them, already, school is not relevant," Freeman said. "So we've tried to make it relevant."

In the Youth Motivator Program, a new program this fall in Seminole County schools, adults will "adopt" students as in the Big Brothers/Big Sisters. Schaffner said. Only youth motivators will meet with the student during school hours at least once a week for an hour in addition to field trips to companies, museums or other sites following permission from school and parents.

Youth motivators will be matched one-on-one with students who are potential dropouts and will encourage attendance, aid with homework, help with missed classwork and serve as good role models. Schaffner said. Pinellas County boasts of the Youth Motivator Program's success in its two years of implementation.

Each Seminole County high school and Crooms School of Choice will participate in the Youth Motivator Program. A training session for youth motivators will be held Thursday, Oct. 6, at the Sanlando Methodist Church, State Road 434, Longwood. To participate in the program one must attend the training session.

To register for the youth motivator training session contact Dede Schaffner at 834-8211.

How parents can help

Estes recommends one take the following measures to ensure his teen-ager is working up to his potential during the school year.

- Ask your adolescent in a non-threatening way why he isn't interested in school. If the coursework is boring or too difficult, meet with the school counselor to discuss whether your child can be transferred to classes better suited to his abilities.

- When a teen-ager fails to see the relevance of subjects such as chemistry or literature, explain that they're the building blocks of a solid education that will offer endless options.

- Become involved in your child's school. Join the PTA, volunteer for fund-raising activities and attend athletic events. If you're interested in his school, he may be as well.

- Put your child on restriction or deny use of the family car if the need arises. This can work wonders in renewing a teen-ager's interest in studying. But also establish a system of rewards. In exchange for a better report card, consider excusing a teen-ager from three weekend's worth of chores, allowing him to stay out late an additional night during the week, or offering money for each "A" or "B."

- Set a good role model for your teenager by reading in the evening instead of renting a video. Discuss current events at the dinner table and ask your teenager what he or she thinks about them. Plan family outings to museums and historical sites. Watch intellectually stimulating television programs such as documentaries.

- Talk to your teen-ager about his or her career aspirations and show the relevance of his or her coursework in achieving those goals.

Estes notes that disinterest in school may be a sign of a more serious problem, such as lack of self-esteem, depression, or drug or alcohol abuse.

'Mr. Right' loves her, not her kids

DEAR ABBY: I am 38, twice divorced and have three kids, ages 20, 16 and 3. I have always supported myself and my children with no help from anybody.

Six months ago, I met "Mr. Right"—I'll call him Mel. He's 31, kind and honest. He's been divorced for a year after a seven-year marriage (no children). He loves my kids and they love him.

There is only one thing wrong. Mel has been hating my children from his friends and family. We live 70 miles apart and see each other only on weekends. It bothers me that he doesn't want his family to know that I have three children. (He has asked me not to mention them because he doesn't want them to know yet.)

We have had long talks about our future together. He foresees marriage in about three years. So, what do you think of this, Abby? I really love him and he says he loves me.

IN LOVE IN SOUTH DAKOTA

DEAR IN LOVE: There is something wrong with Mr. Right. "Hiding" your children from his friends and family is downright deceitful. Mr. Right is very shortsighted. If there is marriage in your future, your three children will have to come out of the closet. What then? Put this question to him, and draw your own conclusions.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns something that sounds trivial, but it's actually very serious. I heard that while baseball players are waiting in the bullpen, they pass the time by pulling the hair out of each other's noses. A man told me that his aunt actually died after she had pulled some hairs out of her nose. This shocked me into writing to you so you could warn your readers. I hope you print this. It may save some lives.

F.S.S., DENVER

DEAR F.S.S.: I consulted a medical expert and was told that because the membranes of the nose are very delicate, pulling hair from the nostrils can cause an infection called furuncle of the hair follicle. However, since the advent of antibiotics, the chances of dying are minimal. Bottom line: This baseball team needs a better way to pass the time.

EPA issues radon health alert

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The surgeon general is urging Americans to test the air in their homes for elevated levels of radon, a natural radioactive gas believed to pose an increased cancer risk for at least 3 million households nationwide.

The health advisory was triggered by a new Environmental Protection Agency survey that found radon, previously believed to be a problem of a few Eastern states, is a nationwide health threat ranging from Massachusetts to Wyoming.

Dr. Vernon Houk, assistant surgeon general, pointed out Monday that as many as 20,000 lung cancer deaths each year are caused by the colorless, odorless gas released by underground uranium deposits in rock and soil. Radon seeps into homes through cracks and openings in basements.

"Radon exposure raises the risk of lung cancer for a nonsmoker to that of a smoker," Houk said. "It is a serious national health problem. It exceeds by 10 times the threat posed by outdoor air pollution."

"I would not buy a home — I would not move into a home — without knowing what the radon content is in it."

Houk said radon poses even a more serious threat to smokers, who face cancer risks from the gas 15 times greater than non-smokers. He said while radon intake is normally exhaled, the gas can attach to smoke particles permanently lodged in smokers' lungs.

The radon problem was discovered in 1982 when a nuclear plant worker in eastern Pennsylvania set off radiation alarms when he reported for duty. After checking out all other causes, investigators found exceedingly high radon levels in his home.

Officials first thought the problem would affect only a limited area, particularly a swath of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York that overlies a uranium-rich geological formation known as the Reading Prong.

But EPA Administrator Lee Thomas said studies conducted by his agency during the last two years "clearly documented" the problem is national in scope.

The EPA study released Monday found elevated levels of radon in one out of every three dwellings tested in an 11,000-home survey conducted in Arizona, Indiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota and Pennsylvania.

Similar results — elevated radon levels in one of five homes — were obtained in a 10-state EPA study last year in Alabama, Colorado, Connecticut, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

By "elevated," the EPA means radon concentrations exceeded a federal "action level" of four picocuries per liter of air. EPA officials said people exposed to concentrations equaling the action level face a cancer risk equivalent to smoking half a pack of cigarettes daily or having between 200 and 300 chest X-rays a year.

Thomas said the EPA believes 3 million homes in the 17 states surveyed have radon concentrations above the federal action level. Nationally, the agency estimates 8 million homes may have a problem.

Thomas said the most recent EPA survey found a radon "hot spot" in Minnesota and North Dakota similar to the Reading Prong area. He reported, "These are states where 40 to 60 percent of the homes have a problem."

Officials said Northern states are especially susceptible because windows and doors are kept tightly closed during much of the year, restricting ventilation and allowing radon levels to build.

Thomas and Houk said virtually all Americans should get their homes tested for radon, with those living in detached homes, rowhouses or townhouses and basement, first-floor and second-floor apartments facing the greatest risks.

Testing usually costs $15 to $25. If elevated radon levels are found, a homeowner may have to spend from $500 to $1,000 or more to fix it. Remedies include sealing basement cracks to installing ventilation systems.

Of the 17 states surveyed, the EPA said the percentage of homes exceeding the federal "action level" was as follows:

- 0 to 10 percent of homes exceeding the standard, Alabama and Arizona.
- 10 percent to 15 percent, Michigan.
- 15 percent to 20 percent, Connecticut, Kentucky, Missouri and Tennessee.
- 20 percent to 25 percent, Kansas, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Indian tribal lands in Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin.
- 25 percent and greater, Colorado, Indiana, Minnesota, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Wyoming.
