It matters not to the planet, as it makes its appointed orbital rounds, at what point the self-important little creatures who cling to its surface say that one revolution of the sun has been completed and another

It is only in relatively modern times that we have arbitrarily selected January Las New Year's Day. The Julian calendar. which began its year on March 25, was, in fact, used by Great Britain and its American colonies until the middle of the 18th century, long after the rest of Christendom had adopted the Gregorian or reformed

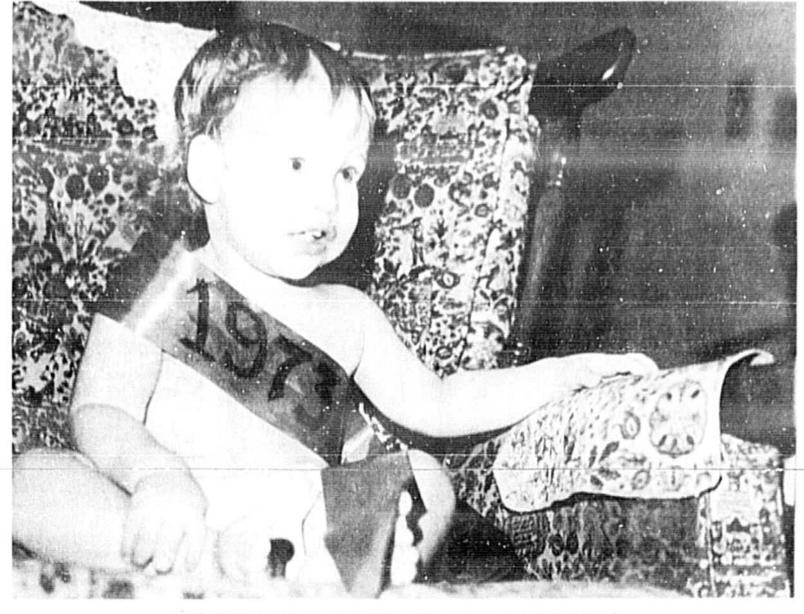

We could argue that January 1 is a logical choice because it comes shortly after the winter solstice, that point in the earth's orbit when the days slowly start growing longer in the Northern Hemisphere.

However, this is purely happenstance. and anyway, for those in the Southern Hemisphere it means just the opposite. that the nights are growing longer and that summer is ending-no particular cause for celebration.

No, there is less reason for us to observe January I as the beginning of a new calendar year than there is for the government to continue using July 1 as the beginning of a new fiscal year just because, once upon a time, Congresses finished their legislative work by the end of June

UN Probe Of Supercorporations Slated

A Western trade expert calls them "multifarious corporations," but says not to quote him.

A Russian calls them "multinational monopolies." but doesn't mind being quoted. In fact, he hopes he is.

The U.N. is about to take a long, hard and possibly critical look at the world's newest form of international economic enterprise - the multinational company

This is the giant supercorporation whose parent might be American but whose numerous offspring might have anywhere from a dozen to 100 different nationalities, depending on the councies where they operate.

The multinationals are a fairly recent

Before World War II, U.S. and European manufacturing corporations maintained subsidiaries overseas mainly to process and assemble materials shipped from the parent company, then sell the products in local markets. In the modern multinational organization, these far-flung affiliates not only manufacture and sell in their own home market. they also ship materials, components, and finished products to each other and back to the parent. With multiple sources of supply scattered in many countries, the corporate strategists in the home office have enormous flexibility in placing orders with the subsidiary that enjoys the best combination of labor costs, taxes, transport, tariffs, and other factors in order to supply customers anywhere in the world. These vast organizations are able to raise money in financial markets all over the globe. They tap the scientific brains and creative talents of many countries, and shift managers from one country to another.

These characteristics, as well as their sheer size, have stirred fears about the multinationals in many governments that play nost to their subsidiaries.

General Motors, the biggest of them all, has annual sales of more than $25 billion, surpassing the gross national product of 130 countries. Some 187 of these enterprises have a total of 8,000 foreign subsidiaries. Operating from so many bases in different countries, and with such flexibility, the multinations seem able to escape - at least in part - from the control of govern-

Governments of smaller countries fear that their sovereignty is threatened by such strategems of the multinationals.

Labor unions, too, are starting to worry that multinational companies will cancel out gains of workers by shifting production to "runaway plants" in low-wage areas, and may even break local strikes by supplying customers from plants of other subsidiaries whose workers have stayed on the job.

Such concerns have been growing for several years as multinational companies rapidly expand their wealth and power and spread their operations to the remote corners of the globe. But it was President Salvador Allende of Chile who spurred the U.N.'s interest in the multinationals at the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development held in Santiago last year Chile denounced one of the top multinationals. International Telegraph and Telecommunications (ITT). The Chilean representative claimed that

"ITT, using its influence with the U.S. government, attempted to have it intervene through economic boycott and subversive action, to overthrow the legally and freely elected constitutional government of my country."

More recently, Chile has denounced Kennecott Cooper Corp. for attempting, by legal action in France and other countries, to block sales of copper from the El Teniente mine that the Chilean government expropriated from

They cite as evidence the emergence of massive evangelistic efforts to Christianize the country, the use of Jewish 'converts" to push the Christian cause, the failure to condemn Archie Bunker's televised anti-Semitic jargon and the distribution of movies considered to contain the seeds of prejudice.

Making New Year Resolutions

Copley News Service

Whatever became of New Year's resolutions? Maybe people still make them, but you don't hear much about them Years ago everybody made them, for people then had the very good idea that one of the best ways to reform the world was to start with the individual And maybe it wasn't such a bad idea for folks to take a Tany good hook at discussives once a year. (Most of us probably couldn't stand it any oftener than that.) There is very little doubt that out of every hundred people there would be exactly one hundred who could do with some im-Of course, few, if any, individuals managed to stick to their resolutions for a whole year, but the mere fact of making them was bound to have an uplifting effect. Even we youngsters caught the fever and most of us made resolutions as earnestly as our elders did. There was one year-we must have been in about the sixth grade-when all the girls in class agreed to write down their resolutions during Christmas vacation and show them to each other when school started again the first of the year. (What the boys were going to do we neither knew aor cared, since at that age boys definitely topped the list of things we Accordingly, we came smugly back to school with our lists. Each of us had probably made about five or six resolutions-each of us, that is, except Alice, and she must have made at least 20.

But the sight of Wilbur as he leaped shrieking from his seat, clutching that part of his anatomy which had come in contact with the tack, was undoubtedly worth it.

But the important thing was that all our resolutions made a pretty poor showing compared to Alice's, and naturally the rest of us weren't going to stand for that. Alice might be, and was, one of the most popular girls in class under ordinary circumstances, but there are limits. Since we couldn't very well add to our lists without admitting Alice's superiority, our only recourse was to gang up on her and batter flown her

"I could, too!" Alice, undaunted, held her ground. Back and forth raged the battle until finally one girl brought it to a head with the crowning insult. "You couldn't make even one resolution and keep it!"

Fish rain from the sky? • 'We saw it happen'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The man who told his wife he saw fish falling from the sky was not crazy; neither was he lying. In the summer of 1926, I caddied at a local golf course, There had been a long drought that summer and the fairways were brown and dried up. One afternoon while I was caddying, a sudden storm reame up and a terrific thundershower followed. Rain came down in torrents, and with it came a shower of tiny frogs about the size of nickels. They were alive and jumping all over, thousands of them!

The golfers and I couldn't believe our eyes as we watched thousands of frogs come right down with the rain from the sky. We saw it happen. WM. A. WALKER, EVANSVILLE, IND.

DEAR ABBY: Here I have gone all my 70 years without writing a letter to a columnist, but now Dear Abby has finally smoked me out. I can't sleep until I help out that poor devil whose wife thinks he needs to see a shrink because he said he saw it raining fish!

He may have. In some areas, summer storms are preceded by twisters which are in reality tornados that suck up an immense amount of water from a stream or pond, and with it all the life that is in it. It's converted into a "waterspout" and carried for miles before it's deposited - in a obsessor of animals,

If anyone doubts this, write to me, and I'll soin some wonderful yarns about flying saucers. F. C. MILLER, SAN DIEGO, CAL

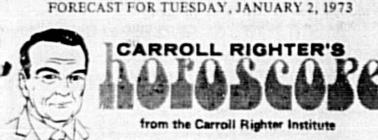

DEAR ABBY: I was raised on a farm in Minnesota. and as a boy I remember a storm coming up. It looked serious so we all ran to the cellar. In 40 minutes it was all Afterwards, we went outside and saw our chickens going wild, eating tiny fish and frogs. We were inland at least 10 miles, so the only explanation was that a tornado had sucked them up out of a stream and had dumped them on our farm. This is not a fish story. I saw it with my own eyes. FLOYD J. McMANUS, LAGUNA BEACH, CAL.

DEAR ABBY: I lived on a farm three miles from Ashland, Wis. A storm came up suddenly and afterwards I saw little tiny fish in the cowtracks around our barn. I'm no kid, Abby. I am 80 years old. RICHARD HAGSTROM, ZIG ZAG, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine named Ed Brady heard rainstorm, and the next day he found a big eel in his rainbarrel. He lived half a mile from the river. This occurred at Ouaquaga, N. Y. Ed Brady still lives there and H. D. JOHNSON, WALTON, N. Y.

POLLY'S POINTERS Old Receiving Blankets Used as Diapers, Quilts

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY-My solution to the problem of what to do with an oversupply of baby receiving blankets was to use them as night diapers. They are so wonderfully absorbent. I also used some to line quilts I made for baby's bed. Using two alike makes a quilt with a pretty lining that is very warm next to baby.-HELEN Polly's Problem DEAR POLLY-I am fortunate to have my grandmother's oak hat rack with a mirror. It is about 80 years old and has numerous nicks and scratches. This rack was evidently not taken down when the wall was painted many times. There are several colors of paint spattered and smeared along the edges. How can I remove this old paint and either touch up the nicks or refinish the rack without ruining its antique value?-MRS. S. W.

DEAR POLLY-My Pet Peeve is with the economy size packages of plastic wrap which is wound on a larger cardboard tube and does not fit in my regular dispenser. The tube is the right length but too big around.—THELMA

DEAR POLLY-My Pointer is for those bothered with animals getting into their trash cans. I, too, had that problem until I bought a large plastic garbage can with a snap-on lid. A large black heavy-duty trash bag is put into it with about 10 inches left to fold back over the rim. Fill the bag through the week and on pickup day remove the lid, gather together the top of the bag and tie with the fastener that came with it. The whole can can be set out. It is easy for the bag to be lifted out and dumped into the truck. If the can has to be left out overnight the lid is snapped on. If a metal can is used, the lid can be held on with a rope, chain or straightened-out coat hanger and then a piece of wire used to hold it together. Hook whatever is used through the handles on the sides and the lid, too. This may seem quite a bother but so is picking up and resacking trash that might have blown around. Remember to remove the lid early in the morning if the can is left outside the night before garbage collection.-

DEAR POLLY-If your kitchen is not as up-to-date as it might be and you would like to make your wood cabinet doors and drawer fronts more attractive, cover them with that pretty adhesive backed paper that comes in all colors and patterns. Your kitchen will assume a new look and gaiety.-KAREN

Business has never been better in central Florida - the need for labor-saving office machines has never been greater. Buy now at Let's stop kidding ourselves - inflation is coming. After the first of the year, the greatest round of price increases on manufactured goods is in the works. Many manufacturers have already notified us. Don't be fooled about "price controls" . . . it is easy for a manufacturer to declare current models obsolete and bring out new slightly changed models calling them "new improved models", under a different stock number, at a higher price. You can count on 5 to 15% increase on many items during this year, so buy NOW during this special sale, at these very low discount prices and save on current prices.

Emotions rather than reasoning are entering into the "quake" rescue mission. Look at two contrasting efforts on page 3A of today's issue. As might be expected, it would appear that much compassion but little supervision and coordination being demonstrated.

It's been buggin me.....why all of this now for Nicaragua and yet this government reacted so slowly in taking care of its own during the hurricane Agnes disaster which struck the northern part of this country

So, a call was placed to Eugene Keltner, executive director of the area Red Cross. "The public response to special flood relief as of Sept. 30 is $23,109 expended on 527,863 sufferers, and there had been $15 million collected to offset these expenditures."

A Federal Aviation Administration surgeon said the tumor found in Capt. Robert A. Loft's brain by a medical examiner could have been pressing against his eye nerves enough to affect his vision, the newspaper reported. But the surgeon, who was unnamed, agreed witnesses could not recall Loft showing any signs of the growth in his brain.

The bell-shaped tumor was found in an autopsy conducted over the weekend in Miami, the paper said.

The newspaper did not say if Loft had been ordered to take corrective action or if he had taken any on his own.

will meet with officials of the Management Area for the second time Wednesday evening to try to reach a compromise whereby the Dunes Road through the area can be re-opened.
