Abortion doctor hires protection

SARASOTA - Two men armed with a loaded submachine gun and other weapons say they were protecting a doctor when they videotaped anti-abortion protesters from a parking lot across the street.

Robert Thrasher, 35, and Albert London, 45, of Tampa wore bulletproof vests. Canisters of Mace and other self-defense chemicals were in their van, which was searched in the March

The men said they were videotaping the protesters at the request of W. Philip Keene of Tierra Verde, a doctor at the clinic, Sarasota Women's Health Center, police said.

"Keene has been the subject of numerous serious threats recently," London said, "We're the good guys here."

No charges were filed in the incident; only a trespassing warning was issued

Both men had current concealed weapons permits, although London carried no weapon. Thrasher is licensed to possess and transport any firearm - including automatic weapons, police

Del Rey surrenders to police

MIAMI - Francisco Del Rey, whose teen-age son was charged in the deaths of three people when his speeding Corvette sliced through their car, has surrendered on a probation violation.

Del Rey, of Coral Gables, gave himself up Tuesday on a warrant charging him with violation of probation stemming from his efforts to help his son, Francisco, obtain a driver's license fraudulently.

Police allege that the younger Del Rey was racing another car at more than 100 mph when he crashed in the early morning hours Dec. 30, killing the occupants of a small car.

Del Rey, now 16, is free on bond, pending his trial on three counts of manslaughter and possession of a fraudulent driver's

Smokers tax

House panel approves an increase of 25-cent a pack

By ADAM YEOMANS Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - The price of eigarettes would increase 25 cents a pack under a measure approved by a House panel in a move that surprised tobacco lobbyists and legislative leaders.

After an impassioned plea by Rep. Bob Casey, a family physician for 25 years, the House Finance & Tax Committee adopted the eigarette tax Tuesday. The tax would raise an estimated $275 million a year to pay for health care programs.

Chances for passage, however, appear bleak in an election year when lawmakers have promised no new taxes. But Casey said he was prepared to fight and hoped to enlist Gov. Lawton Chiles.

"Cigarette smoking kills more adults than all the wars combined in the 20th century," he said. "It's lethal. You can look at AIDs. You can look at any disease you want to, and eigarette smoking kills more of our children as they become adults than any other thing.'

Although the governor embraced a similar, although ill-fated, proposal last year to pay for more prison construction, aides wouldn't say whether he still supported a eigarette tax.

The governor's office is following the bill," said spokesman Ron Sachs. Casey said he introduced the amendment because legislation he had proposed to increase the state's excise tax on eigarettes was going nowhere this session. He said he wanted the full House to debate the Issue and vote on it.

"Fil take anything I can get," he said. Casey, a Republican from Gainesville, and anti-smoking supporters later defeated a move by the tobacco industry to kill the tax increase. Committee members did vote to restrict the money generated from the tax to pay for research and treatment of smoking-related

Casey proposed the tax increase as an amendment to another eigarette bill (CS-HB 2305) that was being pushed by the tobacco

That bill would allow tax disputes be tween wholesalers and the state to be resolved through administrative hearings instead of state court, and it exempted some wholesalers from posting a surety bond with

Rep. Everett Kelly, D-Tavares, the bill's sponsor, said he would support a cigarette tax increase under different circumstances, but the measure will hurt his bill.

House Appropriations approves health plan

By JACKIE HALLIFAX Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - The latest House version of a plan to subsidize private health insurance for hundreds of thousands of people shows lawmakers are "moving in the right direction," a top aide to Gov. Lawton Chiles said.

The governor has said he would make lawmakers, scheduled to end their session a week from Friday, work overtime if they don't pass a reform bill he can accept.

But the governor's aide, Doug Cook, expressed some optimism after the Appropriations Committee voted 23-13 Tuesday for the reform bill (CS-HB 2823).

"If we can sustain it is another question," Cook said. The Senate Health Care Committee was scheduled to take up the issue today, and the full House may debate its bill

Appropriations Chairman

John Long, D-Land O'Lakes, told members of his committee that more work remains to be done on the bill. But Rep. Ben Graber. physician who chairs the Health Care Committee, fiked the legislation. In its present form, this is an excellent product, a very good product," said Graber. D-Coral Springs. "This will promote health care coverage to possibly as much as 800,000 people in the state over the next few years.' Based on Chiles' proposal, the bill would require everyone on Medicaid, the joint federal-state health care plan for people on welfare, to go to a Medicaid health maintenance organization or a prepaid plan. The savings from such managed care programs would be used to subsidize private insurance anywhere from 700,000 to 1.2 million of Florida's 2.5 million uninsured restdents.

As result of Rolling's detailed confessions to prison inmates a year ago, police and prosecutors said Tuesday they were sure Rolling stabbed Julie Grissom. 24: her father Thomas, 55, and her 8-year-old nephew, Sean, in November 1989.

State Attorney Rod Smith said Rolling had implicated himself in the Louisiana case, but that Florida officials wanted to see him remain in custody. "When I say confessed, in a legal sense, no," Smith said. "But from a practical sense we know he committed those crimes, absolutely." Rolling, 39, will be sentenced

"I think he feels sorry that he was caught, not that he did it." said Diana Hoyt, Christa Hoyt's stepmother. "If he was out right now, I think he would do it again."

Don't feed the gators

Don't feed the gators. It'll cost you an arm and a leg.

This may be a pun, but the Florida Fish and Game Commission considers it a serious situation. Feeding a wild alligator is a second degree misdemeanor. Conviction can result in a fine of up to $500 or six months in jail, or

As soon as the temperatures warm, as they now have, alligators can be seen protruding from the waters of Lake Monroe, near the Sanford shoreline. They don't pose any immediate threat.

They can be considered one of Sanford's natural tourist attractions. Visitors can often be seen along the waterfront watching a gator swim slowly by, or basking in the warmth of

The best part of having gators within sight on the lake is, there's no admission.

Occasionally however, people who may consider themselves animal lovers, try to toss food to the gators. This is not only illegal, it can cause problems.

Last year, because of suspected feeding, a gator, locally known as "Old George" had to be destroyed. Having become accustomed to being fed along the seawall just across from the Sanford post office, George began to rely on that type of food. Gradually, he moved closer and closer to shore where people were gathering for fishing or sight-seeing.

The gator was subsequently declared as a potential hazard, and had to be removed from the lake and destroyed. (The work was done by a protessional and licensed nunter).

People who know satd George had been around for many years. He was a gator who could almost always be depended upon to give the tourists an eye-full of our precious wildlife.

Now, the gators can be seen once again. Let's not have another destroyed because of a similar circumstance.

To carry it one step further, if you see someone else feeding them, report it. You may be saving the gator's life, as well as a person who may be standing on the shore and deemed lunch for a hungry gator.

But will scandal effect policy? Luckily, Americans still do care about policy. Luckily for the Clintons they have some policies to peddle. A number of scenarios are available.

Scenario One. Reporters will try to show that a distracted administration functions poorly. But, it may turn out, such a linkage of policy to scandal hardly exists. After all, the policy wonks do keep wonking away. That is a good posture for the president: working tirelessly to help America in its moment of need.

The story is moving from real estate to real people.

Clinton takes a hard-line turn on welfare and crime, and takes half a loaf on health care. That's what the public wants, and that is where the public interest is. By delivering, the president becomes a hero and voters say, "Well, I'm finding out what they're really like. I'm not happy about it, but he is delivering what America needs. He really is a New Democrat. He is transforming his party, so I'll stick with him." Will Clinton do that?

The much-leaked deliberations of the Clinton welfare task force seem to be giving birth to a mouse that may never end welfare as we know it, spending more money on more programs for more people. Republicans will make hay, appropriately, by saying that we should stop giving money to teen-ugers who bear illegitimate babies, thereby discouraging such behavior. Justice not served

Last year my wife and I hired two local handymen who were launching their home improvement business in Sanford. We admired their implied skills and checked the references they gave us. During a two-month period we paid them over $4,000 for labor and materials but we could not get them to complete the job or to fix anything that was not correct. Both individuals blamed the other and our efforts to solve the problems were exhausted. Attempts by a court appointed mediator failed. In September a county judge awarded us a final judgment for over $2,000. Unfortunately, collecting on the judgment is another story and an additional expense of time and money. Over time the wound to our pride and pocket book had healed; but our wounds have been reopened when I read an article in the Sanford Herald that a worthy organization had given one of the individuals $1,500 worth of materials for his home. Once again, this individual has benefited from others. My wife and I can only wonder how many others have been affected. Justice has not been served!

Kudos to doctors

March 30 is celebrated nationally as Doctors' Day, and I wanted to use the occasion to acknowledge the contributions the doctors at South Seminole Hospital make to Longwood.

South Seminole Hospital is privileged to have 500 physicians representing 33 specialties on staff and available to our area's residents. These physicians work nights, weekends, holidays and through family occasions to meet the health care needs of the citizens of Longwood. Their commitment of high-quality health care means that 90 percent of the health care needs in Longwood can be met right here - without the inconvenience and expense of traveling to a bigger city. Their dedication is an important contribution to the quality of life we enjoy in Longwood, and I hope others will join me in saying a big thank you to them on Doctors' Day.

Travesty of jail time

Before the next plea or complaint either to your desk, from your typewriter, or any legislator ever again addresses the supposed lack of jail space for the real criminals, the ones that the public have a real reason to fear, let's help to inform them of how the jail space they have already paid for is being squandered by the very powers they have elected and trusted to manage for them.

The truth is many of the people waiting in the Orange and Seminole County jalls have been sitting there for weeks waiting to get assigned a public defender, their only crime in a lot of cases is being poor and unable to pay a traffic fine. So our brave police put them in jail and tack on other bogus violations to make the arrest look good, most of which get dropped but, only after they are held a month or more. While the rapist and killers are arraigned and assigned a public defender within two or three days, and get out on bond to to terrorize the public. The fact is, these people are getting the book thrown at them just about a year in Jail per charge that being the maximum, and since it cannot be prison time, they end up having to do nearly all of it straight up. So violent felons get out before these people ever would.

Since I am on the subject, while these men and women sit in jail for non-payment of a traffic fine we not only support them, but their family must get help from HRS and Food Stamps, then we pay for all their medical care. As the person sitting in fail loses any job that they may have been working.

Influential Dems fume over column

WASHINGTON - On the day when most of Washington was wearing green, two of the most influential men in Democratic politics were seeing red.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher known until now for emulating Ronald Reagan's habit of falling asleep at official events, became enraged upon reading our column on St. Patrick's Day. The column. which castigated Sen. Daniel Patrick

Moynthan, D.N.Y., for a legislative favor to Ireland, prompted a hurried phone call from the State Department to the senator's office. Moynthan, who chairs the powerful Finance Committee, was particularly angered because we quoted an unnamed State Department source who wondered where Moynthan's loyalties

His cool demeanor ruffled, Christopher barked displeasure into the receiver while trying to win back the senator's favor. "I don't know who I have in this building who feels it's OK to question a United States senator," he told Moynthan. according to State Department spokesman Mike McCurry. "But if I found him, I would fire him or send him to some place he wouldn't forget. McCurry suggested a few countries where the offending diplomat might be sent. He also told us he had never seen his normally tempered boss so shaken up. "That was about as mad as I've ever seen Warren Christopher," McCurry told our associate

Andrew Conte. Moynthan was irked enough by the column that he canceled a scheduled subcommittee hearing to confirm three ambassadorial appointments - to Egypt, Bahrain and Kuwatt. Moynthan's tantrum means that the three nominees, all career diplomats with significant experience in the Middle East, will have to cool their heels until Moynthan sees Moynthan's office declined to comment. One Senate source confirmed, however, that canceling the hearing was Moynihan's way of signalling his displeasure. "He was just plain (upset)," the source said. "This was his way of venting his irritation." Moynthan has so far refused to reschedule the hearing.

While Christopher capitulated like a lamb to the powerful senator, others in the foreign service establishment aren't being as diplomatic. One official was surprised that Moynthan, a former ambassador to India and the United Nations, would jeopardize relations between the United States and the Middle East just to exercise his pique. "We are dismayed that a senator of the stature of Sen. Moynthan would express his displeasure in such an inappropriate way," a spokesman for the American Foreign Service Association told us. "That Moynthan would play petty polities in areas of such diplomatic sensitivity is simply mystifying."

Perhaps these officials are more willing to critique Moynthan because the senator doesn't hold their fate in his hands. As chairman of the Finance Committee, Moynthan will hold decisive sway over such Clinton administration priorities as health care reform and welfare reform, a fact of which everyone in the administration is keenly aware

On St. Patrick's Day, we reported that Moynthan worked behind the scenes during the budget debate last summer to preserve a tax deferral that encourages U.S.-owned companies to set up shop in Ireland. Clinton's original 1994 budget sought to close the deferral, with the hope of keeping businesses at home and generating $500 million in tax revenue.

Two of the most influential men in Democratic politics were seeing red.

6A - Sanford Herald, Sanford, Florida - Wednesday, March 30, 1994 Is another Bear Market on the way?

By RICK GLADSTONE AP Business Writer

NEW YORK - The stock market has been doing something lately that many investors flud puzzling and unnerving: it's been going down.

The Dow Jones industrial average's 63.33-point drop Tuesday was part of a broader decline in stock prices over the past several weeks that has left the market at its lowest level since early December.

The descent basn't aroused any pante or mass selling. On the contrary, the decline has been described by Wall Street professionals as an orderly and understandable response following a prolonged rise that began

Some describe the decline as a correction, a term that generally means stock prices will full about 10 percent to 20 percent from their peak and then start climbing again.

But others are wondering whether the drop isn't a bear

Some questions and answers about the stock market's behavior:

Q: What halted the rally in the stock market?

A: Some market watchers say the defining event seemed to be the Federal Reserve's move Feb. 4 to push up interest rates for the first time in five years to keep inflation in check. The Fed acted to raise interest rates again last week. Higher interest rates market - a prolonged downturn - the cost of money - can burt that can unnerve Wall Street corporate profits and lead many investors to take their money out of stocks and put them into bonds and other interest-bearing investments.

Q: Are there other possible reasons for a shift in the stock market's behavior?

A: There are a number of possible reasons, but the market is so enormous that it's hard to attribute market psychology to one particular cause.

Some say the Fed's action created a climate of uncertainty that means, any news will be interpreted as an excuse to sell.

On Friday, for example, political turmoil in Mexico was cited as a reason for a Wall Street decline. On Tuesday, good news about the economy was seen as a warning of inflation and another reason to sell. Some forecasters who base their predictions on historical patterns say that prices are artificially high - pushed up by investors getting into the market for the first time - and are just falling back to more realistic

"When you start letting air out of the balloon and there's a lot of pressure in there, it's hard to let the air out gently," said David Bostian, an economist at the Wall Street investment firm Herzog Heine Geduld.

Q: What's so bad about a drop

A: Nothing is necessarily bad about it - J.P. Morgan himself once said that stocks will fluctuatc. But investors who see their holdings lose a good deal of value in a declining market can react by selling - making the fall worse. They also can stop spending money and weaken the economy.

"If people who find out you can lose money in the stock market start suddenly panicking, this junior bear market could get worse," said Stan Weinstein, a stock market adviser who edits The Professional Tape Reader in Naples.

"You're either going to have a very bad cold here, or if things get exacerbated you could have pacumonia.

Clinton: Checkbook challenged?

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - President Clinton can dazzle people with his command of the intricacies of federal programs, rattling off numbers and spitting out statistics. But when it comes to his personal finances, look

The nation's policy-work-in-chief seems to be checkbook challenged.

At least that's the image the president keeps exuding. And, to a point, it's one the White House doesn't mind cultivating

After all, the less he knew about his own household finances, the less accountable he may be for the tangled Whitewater transac-

House Clinton, for example, says he's not sure whether he and Hillary Rodham Clinton still owe back taxes associated with that controversial land investment.

"If we do owe, we'll make it good," he said recently

Special counsel Robert Fiske is reviewing the records and may be the first one to give the Clintons the bad news - if any taxes are

The Clintons now say they lost about $47,000 on the Whitewater land deal, a downward revision. Some private accountants have suggested the Clintons could wind up finding some of the Whitewater interest payments they deducted challenged and have to pay back

Clinton has never exhibited too much savvy - or interest - in mastering household cash flow. "It's like in any family where one person bandles the family finances and the other person doesn't," said Clinton spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers. "He's always been more interested in policy.

Maybe that would explain why Clinton:

With a straight face could claim a charitable contribution of old clothes while governor of Arkansas and value his used undershorts at up to $2 a pair.

Could "forget" a $20,000 loan he obtained to help his mother buy a house, allowing it to be counted during the 1992 campaign as part of what he claimed was a Whitewater loss.

After all, it wouldn't look too good for Clinton to be making big bucks on land speculation at the same time he was pounding Republicans for a decade of greed and excesses

And until they were pressured, and after The New York Times revealed details earlier this month, the Clintons also didn't divulge the $100,000 killing Mrs. Clinton made in cattle and other commodity futures in the late 1970s.

On Tuesday, the White House released additional documents suggesting Mrs. Clinton was able to turn a $100,000 profit from a mere $1,000 investment.

Now that's the kind of person anyone would want in charge of their household

Frank Luntz, a Republican and former Ross Perot polister, suggests Clinton is being a bit too glib on the tax issue.

If it turns out the Clintons underpaid their taxes or were trying to evade paying what they owed, that will not sit well among Americans, particularly with the April 15 tax day approaching, and Clinton "will pay the price" politically, Luntz said

But Democratic pollster Mark Mellman said "everyone knows the tax system is pretty damn complicated. You can easily make a mistake. I don't think there's any evidence at all to suggest a malicious attempt to avoid taxation."

Paul Begala, a Democratic consultant who see any inconsistency between Clinton's reputation for being a master of detail and his purported lack of attention to his own

"I think the world is full of people who pour all their energies into work who then go home and have a messy apartment," Hegala said.

He was quick to say he wasn't accusing the Clintons of having messy quarters, just trying to make a point.

As governor, Clinton had a reputation for going around the state and never having enough money to pay his bills, asking aides settle up for meals and merchandise.

As president, Clinton has been short on cash several time while on shopping sprees at one point asking a bookstore to send him a bill when he didn't have enough cash or any credit cards.

Of course, carning only about $35,000 a year as governor, he didn't have much spending money back then, unless Mrs. Clinton gave him an allowance.

In addition to having been spectacularly successful trading cattle futures for a brief period just before she became pregnant in 1979, she was making over $150,000 a year in salary as a lawyer and more than $60,000 a year from corporate boards when Clinton began his run for the presidency.

Clinton suggested last week he was pleased with the arrangement where she was the main breadwinner and said he was "proud" to call himself the nation's lowest-paid governor.

Records show Mrs. Clinton built $1,000 into $100,000 windfall

By RON FOURNIER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - With the help of a well-connected friend. Hillary Rodham Clinton parlayed $1,000 into nearly $100,000 in the cattle futures market as her husband claimed the Arkansas governor's office.

She hit the ground running. turning a $5,300 profit on her tiest trade

The White House released the ligures Tuesday, along with 21 pages of supporting documents. trying to refute speculation that Mrs. Clinton reaped windfall profits in 1978 and 1979 without investing any money of her own.

But the disclosures raised new questions. The most prominent: How did a novice investor profit a hundredfold in the volatile commodities market?

"It's been done, but it's one-in-a-thousand," said Jeffrey Piper, a broker with Lind-Waldock & Co. in Denver. "In fact, the odds are higher than Several commodities brokers said Mrs. Clinton's first venture into the market appeared to be unusually successful but that such profits were not unheard of at a time when cattle futures prices were in a record upswing because of reduced herds and Inflation.

Mrs. Clinton abruptly quit trading in 1980 after her daughter, Chelsea, was born. An aide said Mrs. Clinton found the business "too nerve-racking. She just didn't have the stomach for it anymore."

Aides said Mrs. Clinton never invested more than the $1,000, plus any profits she had accomulated. However, she, like other commodity futures traders, ran the risk of losing substantially more than her inttial investment had the market moved against her.

Mrs. Clinton made her first trade in October 1978, less than a month before the Arkansas governor's campaign. At that time, President Clinton was the state's attorney general.

White House officials said Mrs. Clinton made the trades after consulting several people, including Jim Blair, a longtime Clinton friend and chief counsel for poultry glant Tysons Food luca an economic and political force in Arkansas.

Questions also were raised about Mrs. Clinton's broker, Robert L. Bone, who had been disciplined by regulators both invest any of her own money. before and after her commodity trading. He was accused, among other things, of allocating trades to investors after he had determined whether the trades were winners or losers. There is no evidence that Mrs. Clinton benefited from allocation of profitable trades to her ac-

"She had no knowledge of any allocation of trades," said one White House official. The officials, designated by Mrs. Clinton to discuss her trading. briefed reporters on the condition they not be identified by name. Blair has said Mrs. Clinton did not get special treatment in the investment. He denies that she benefited from the allocation of profitable trades to her account.

Bone worked in the Springdale, Ark., office of the Ray E. Friedman brokerage firm, or REFCO.

In commodity futures trading, an investor bets on the rises or drops in price of key commodities. Usually, the investor buys contracts for future delivery, and trades them back and forth like stocks, investors usually unload the contracts before the actual delivery of the underlying commodity.

The documents suggested that Mrs. Clinton reinvested the principal and proceeds in several transactions, accumulating truding profits of $49,069 in 1978 against $22,548 in losses. Her net gain for 1978 was $26,521.

Letting her winnings ride, she made profits of $109,600 in 1979 and losses of $36,600. Her net gain for that year was $72,996. The White House indicated the difference came in the rounding off of figures.

She closed the account in July 1979 - after making more than $99,000 on the original $1,000. The Clintons combined salaries amounted to $51,000 in 1978 and $74,000 in 1979.

Tax returns for 1977-79 and other documents released by the White House last Friday showed the nearly $100,000 gain but did not list what Mrs. Clinton had paid for the commodities, the date acquired or the date sold.

That raised questions over how much of her own money Mrs. Clinton put into the investment. The White House issued the new material after a Newsweek magazine story suggested Mrs. Clinton dld not

Newsweck has since backed off its report. In October 1979, Mrs. Clinton opened a second account with $5,000 she had made in the initial investment, the documents suggested. She opened it through her stockbroker Stephens Inc. in Little Rock, Ark., which traded commodity futures. Before she closed out this account in March 1980, she lost $560 in 1979 and $449 in 1980, the White House documents show.

That showed her total loss on the second account to be $1,009, roughly the same amount that she had invested initially.

Playing the percentages Dixon throws strikes, one-hitter at Bishop Moore

By TONY DeSORMIER

LONGWOOD - Lyman High School pitching coach Dave Campbell has a simple formula when It comes to predicting success for high school

"To be successful, a high school pitcher should have a minimum strikes-to-balls ratio of 60/40," explained Campbell, a former bullpen ace for the Atlanta Braves. "They have to throw strikes."

On Tuesday night, Lyman's Tommy Dixon showed how successful a pitcher can be following that formula - assuming he throws backbreaking curveballs and well-place fastballs for strikes while changing speeds - in throwing a one-hit shutout in the Greyhounds' 6-0 win over Bishop Moore.

The only hit Dixon allowed came in the seventh lining, when first baseman James Patrakis led off with a clean single into left-center field. Other than that, Dixon struck out eight and the eighth. The Seminoles also had a hard time scoring runs, but Juntor Andy Hillman (2-0) protected what they got by tossing a four-hit shutout in a 2-0 win over Spruce Creek. Corey Gochee scored a run in the fifth and Deon Daniels scored the other in the sixth, with both runs coming without the aid of a hit. Sophomore Alex Acosta had a double and a single for Seminole. The third county team, Lake Howell, ran into a buzzsaw as Key West jumped on the Silver Hawks for four runs in the bottom of the first inning and never looked back in posting a 7-2 victory.

Phil Dilimore scattered six hits in hurling the 15th complete game of the season for the Conchs (15-3). Dillmore (8-0) struck out eight and gave up just one run.

David Monroe led the Key West offense with a pair of doubles. Miguel Menendez and 6-foot, 5-inch, 270-pound sophomore Craig Lariz also had two hits each.

ORLANDO - South Daytona's Dave Savicki outclassed the competition to win the Modified feature event last Friday night. March 25, at Orlando Speedworld.

Savicki, driving the MOPARpowered Phil Air Flight Center/Yipes Stripes racer, started the race from the hiside pole position. At the drop of the green. Savicki charged to the early lead and, by the end of the first lap, had a four-car advantage over the second place car of Jon Campagnone Jr.

Three yellow flags during the race tightened the field for new restarts with Campagnone lining up side by side with Savicki. But with each green flag, Savicki charged to the point to regain life advantage.

Savicki, the feature winner on Saturday, March 19, at New Smyrna Speedway, took the checkers six car lengths ahead of Campagnone.

Hocking, shortstop: Greg Brummett and Dave Stevens, pitchers; and Mike Durant, catcher, to Salt Lake City of the Pacific Coast "The car was just perfect tonight," said Campagnone, 39, who has been racing for six years. "The engine was flawless. and the handling was outstanding. For some reason, the carthe International League, Sent Mike Hum-phreys, outflelder, outright to Columbus Sent Derek Jeter, shortstop, to their minor league just loves this track. We always run better here than we do at

New Smyrna. According to Gail Savicki, Dave's wife, "From Sunday to Thursday, Dave spends every waking hour and every last drop of energy tweeking and fine tuning his car. It's true the car does run good, but it's because of Dave's efforts and his love for the sport. Traffing Savickt and Cam-

Editor's note: Saturday's results from New Smyrna and Volusia County speedways will appear in Thursday's and Bruce Thompson. "I just can't get excited about finishing second," said the 22-year-old Campagnone, who has been racing for three years. "As a matter of fact, I'm real disappointed.

"Last year, we had a better season. We had seven wins compared to only two this year. It's the tires. I have a good car, but we're racing old tires. It's just me and my dad with no sponsor. We just do the best we can with what we have."

Gary Balough, who drives the Pec Wee Griffin/Robert, Hamke Camara, led every circuit to win his fifth consecutive Late Model feature event. Balough, who has seven wins on the season, led Harold Cannon, Ricky Wood. Bruce Everett, and Duke Southard to victory lane. Glen Carter, recently moved up from the Modified Division, held off a late race challenge by Mike Todd to win the Limited Late Model feature. Carter beat Todd by less than a car length for his fourth win of the season.

They were followed by Bill Pratt. Michael Williams, and Gary Schlichter.

Other feature winners were Robert Jenkins (Bombers). Bobby Sears (Mint-Stocks), Paul Colgan (Sportsman). Tim Aultman (Covote Cafe Bombers) Fred Peters (Run-Abouts).

Cook of the Week

Her Italian Potatoes are quick and different

By RENEE KEITH Herald Correspondent

If you want to see someone light up in a flash then just ask Cook of the Week Cindy Moody about her youngest grandchild, Tyler. "This little guy has brought so much enjoyment to our lives," says Moody. We can't wait for weekends to come that we get to have him stay with us." Needless to say, being a grandmother is "the" experience for Moody.

Moody hails originally from South Georgia and she has lived in Sanford for the last 6 years. She's married to husband, Jerry, and their blended family consists of four sons. Their youngest son, Clarence (Zip) is currently attending Seminole High School. Gregory is the oldest and he lives in Georgia. Jerry (Skip) and his wife Jody live in Orlando and are the parents of the two older grandchildren, Candice and Chase. Paul (Cappy) and his wife Jenny also live in Orlando and are the parents of Tyler.

Moody has been employed with Seminole County for 21/2 years in the Public Safety Division. She enjoys gardening and has a large vegetable garden that has almost any kind of vegetable one could imagine. With great pride Moody shares how she and her husband have redecorated their home, "The brick fireplace I guess I would have to say was the biggest undertaking of all that we did," says Moody. How- They have their own house pets something that is real quick to Volunteers answer White House telephone calls

By KIMBERLY A.C. WILSON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - When America had something to say about Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan, George Bush and now Bill Clinton, Mildred McMahon was at the White House phone, ready to

"It's a funny thing. Downthrough all the years, the calls, they're the same in one way: the lovers and the haters call, the issue people call, and those who would Just like something changed, and they're all of them wonderful," McMahon says.

McMahon is one of the 3,000 volunteers on the roster of the White House correspondence office, the largest unpaid staff in the executive branch. The office has a finger on the nation's political pulse, absorbing almost instant public response to presidential speeches and governmental actions. Two hundred and fifty are permanent volunteers like McMahon.

bandle the thousand and letters that pour into the White House daily. Mail alone has increased nearly fourfold from the Bush administration to the current one. While Bush received 2.3 million pieces of mail during his last year in office, Clinton topped 8 million pieces in his first. His comment-line logs between 2,000 and 2,500 calls a day.

Helpers range from high school students to senior citizens with duties that include clipping news stories, answering public comment phone lines and hand-addressing replies to the 153,800 pieces of mail that arrive each week for the first

"We treasure them," correspondence office director Lori Abrams said fondly of the volunteers. "We try to let everybody be a part who wants to."

The reasons for enlisting vary widely. Most of the interns are students and most of the volunteers who address replies are retired.

Volunteers help the Clinton administration keep a promise to aches. Last summer, student respond to every letter to 1600 volunteers scrawled un-reads a representative sample of each week's mail. Abrams said.

After Clinton's State of the Union Address in January, the president returned to the White House and walked straight to the Old Executive Office Building next door to field a few late-night calls about the speech and thank the volunteers.

Volunteers say working for the White House means excitement. comradery and gratitude.

Ginny Garbers is a secondgeneration White House volunteer, one of the hundreds who hand-address greetings for birthdays, weddings and other

"I just know how much the people appreciate getting these," Garbers said.

The paid White House staff, as well as the recipients of White House replies, appreciate the help, said 18-year-old George Washington University freshman Nichole Veatch.

It takes a lot more than staff Volunteers help paid staff members to make a White House run and they know that Veatch said.

The Tampa native works twice a week from 4:30 a m. to 9 a m. and once overnight clipping news stories. She sees it as a chance to unravel the mystery of big government.

Before I came to Washington I was seeing politics almost from an outsider's view. There's always the thought that the people at the White House aren't connected, but now I see they know what's going on in America and they're changing it," she said. In addition to the individual volunteers, members of local clubs and national organizations like the Girl Scouts pitch in to open and staple mail on weekends and evenings, a tradition that began when Jacqueline Kennedy first brought volunteers to the correspondence of-

McMahon relishes the diversity of volunteers and callers altke.

"It's a different crew practically every day," she said. That has caused some head-

Four people were arrested on drug possession or disorderly conduct charges, and five were injured, including three police officera.

"Everyone was frustrated," she said. "The place was packed. Why didn't they play at a bigger venue?"

"People were trying to force their way in." said Miami police spokesman Angelo Bitsis. "More showed up then had tickets." Two-thousand more, Promoters sold 8,314 tickets in 11

Some 65 members of Mlami riot police were brought to the AT&T Amphitheater after frustrated fans, who were unable to buy tickets, started hurling bottles and rocks and kicking down fences. There were 34 officers hired for the event,
