CULLED FROM THE STATE PRESS

An Epitome of the Week's Most Important Happenings in the State's Domain.

The year 1912 promises to keep the pace set last year for development in Fort Meade. Permits for twenty new buildings and additions to existing buildings have been issued since January 1.

It is understood that on last Sunday there were over one hundred bathers in water at the electric pier in St Petersburg. This sounds like summer.

Work on the new St. James building which is being erected in Jacksonville by Cohen Bros. for their new department store, is progressing rapidly. It will be about eight months before the building is ready for occupancy.

A Lakeland printer girl won a spelling match at Tampa. A person to be an efficient printer must know how to spell.

The potato crop of 1911-12, from Hattings and vicinity, will be the largest in the history of that section, according to statements made by well known planters and shippers in that territory.

An unfortunate tragedy occurred at St Augustine Sunday evening when a portion of "Whitney's Oldest House" was destroyed by fire and Mr. Everett C. Whitney, the owner, was burned to death in the building. The fire and tragedy occurred on Hospital street, near Bridge street and in the heart of the city causing a great deal of excitement and the assembling of an enormous crowd. The origin of the fire is not definitely known but it is presumed to have been caused through accident by Whitney, who was the occupant of the building and sick in his room at the time.

The negro woman implicated in the recent Jacksonville murders is said to have confessed and the whole secret will be laid bare at the special session of the grand jury to be held next week.

Growing Sweet Potato Draws

By C. K. McQuarrie

The farmers who intend to raise a crop of sweet potatoes should prepare for it by making a seed bed in time to have them ready for setting in the field as early in April as possible. This will allow the vines to grow sufficiently to be cut into suitable lengths for planting the main crop late in May or early in June.

When heavy rain and cold weather prevail through the month of February, it is not advisable to make the bed too early. Cold moist soil is detrimental to the growth of the thrifty plants we need for setting out in the field. If the bed is made early in March and cared for as suggested here better draws will be had in the same time, than if it is started earlier under unfavorable conditions.

A preferable location for the bed is on the south side of a building or of a light board fence, so that the sun will keep the soil warm for the sweet potato is a plant of the tropics.

In making the bed it is advisable to clear a space on the ground of the desired length and not more than four feet wide, so as to be easily accessible when pulling the draws. It is sufficient to level the soil with a rake or hoe and take care that no water will stand in the vicinity in rainy weather. It is advisable to make a frame for the bed by setting ten-inch or twelve-inch boards on edge and driving stakes. On the bottom of the bed a layer of horse manure about four inches thick should be placed. This should be covered with soil to a depth of a few inches and tramped well so as to ensure it being solid and prevent the escape of moisture. If sunny warm weather prevails, the bed should be allowed to remain in that condition for a few days so that the soil will be as warm as possible when the seed is laid in place.

Though this method of making a bed is not the one usually employed, it will give a large number of strong draws in a short time.

One of these essentials towards a good crop is the use of good draws for the first planting. To this end we must see that nothing but high grade seed potatoes are used. The practice of using poor seed potatoes is really wasteful. Nothing but the healthiest potatoes available should be used when making the seed bed, and they should not be too small nor too large.

Each potato should be carefully put down in the bed separately so that they do not touch one another, in which case rot will be apt to occur. Any larger than the average should be split in halves the long way of the potato and the cut side laid next the soil. After the soil is all placed in position it should be covered with a thin layer of soil, and on top of the soil another thin layer of horse manure with a very little soil on top of that to prevent evaporation. In ordinary practice we have found one bushel of seed sufficient for an acre.

If dry weather prevails after making the bed it should be watered occasionally with a sprinkler. The aim should be to keep the soil in such a moist warm condition that we get draws as early as possible.

After the sprouts show above the ground and get to growing well, soil should be added every few days so as to make long necked draws. By covering shallow at first and increasing the soil depth as the plants grow, we get the best conditions for quick growth. If we cover deep at first, growth is retarded, and time is what counts when once the season for planting has come.

Weather Report

Rain tonight except fair extreme north west portion colder, north and central portions Wednesday generally fair.

SANFORD GROWERS FEARED

Present Prices Mean Net Return From Crop Will Be Profitable.

Sanford Fla. Growers in this section are considerably excited over prices being realized for their shipments of celery prices ruling here today on good stock being $4 per 10 inch crate. All though the crop is cutting just about one half normal yield with continuance of anything near these prices the total amount of money realized for the celery crop in this vicinity will exceed that of last year by several thousand dollars. The March movement will be light as there is not enough stock sufficiently matured to justify prediction of a heavy movement. Indications now are that there will not be much doing as far as a fair movement is concerned until early April. The main movement will be on between April 15. The probabilities are there will be about 10 to 15 cars move from point during the present week all of which has been sold.

Lettuce shipments are also light. A number of cars will be loaded during the week quality only fair. Price for lettuce around $2 bumper, with some extra stock commanding a premium.

The M. O. Caggins Co. will haul a number of cars of celery and lettuce during the present week. Chase & Co. T. E. Pace and others will also have a number of cars. The movement is limited and no one operator is loading very heavy at the present time. Produce News.

Mrs. M. A. Jameson

Died at the residence of D. C. Robb on February 28, in the 33rd year of her life. Mrs. M. A. Jameson.

Mrs. Jameson was born in Kentucky, and spent the earlier portion of her life there, coming to Sanford some twenty years ago. She made her home for several years past at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robb.

She left two daughters and one son to mourn her loss, Mrs. Robb, of this city, Mrs. T. S. Mixley, of Memphis, and W. E. Jameson, of this city.

Vain is any attempt to measure the loss of a mother to her children after all the poets have sung and lovers dreamed, outside of heaven there is no love like mother-love. We believe the tender care devoted to those nearest and dearest, went with her to the better land, and in the possibilities of eternity, may be needed hereafter. We fancy her awaiting them in the place prepared for her, a little apart from the innumerable company in bright array, perhaps in one of the "palaces of ivory" with windows crystal clear of which old Bonar quaintly sang. In the light, not of the sun, neither of the moon, we see her beyond the fields of asphodel, under the waving palms, beside the still waters bordered with silver lilies. These may be merely figures, but they bear a precious meaning to yearning hearts made for the deep household loves, hearts that will not be comforted because the Angel of the House is missing.

RELIGIOUS MOVEMENT

Men of Sanford Enrolled Under Forward Movement

ROUSING MEETING SUNDAY NIGHT

Prominent Speakers Urged More Activity Among the Men of Christian World

The Men's Religion and Forward Movement for Sanford started off with an enthusiasm last Sunday night that filled the Imperial Theatre to the doors. The audience began to gather early and when the time arrived to open every available seat below was taken and there were many in the balcony.

The music of the evening was in charge of Professor Wildman. An orchestra of eight pieces was led by Mr. Reasoner. This orchestra played two selections at the opening, appropriate and most acceptably rendered.

Mr. F. R. Walker presided, introducing the speakers with a few well chosen words. After the singing of Gommation by the audience led by the orchestra and a choir of men's voices, prayer was offered by Mr. Laurin Philips. The scripture lesson of the evening, from the 17th of John and was read by Mr. Frank Forster.

Mr. Marcus D. C. Fogg, Jacksonville superintendent of the Christian Home Society of Florida was the principal speaker of the evening. He spoke on "The Need of a Social Conscience" with an earnestness and power that held the close attention of his audience. Giving telling instances from political life he showed that the Christian people of Florida have it in their power to have the kind of government that they want and told them how to go about it.

If you don't want a good representative in the legislature you had better to have him declared Mr. Fogg and the great audience half of whom were voters showed their approval in spontaneous applause. Conditions at the Mammalia Reform School and other state institutions were said to show how little appreciation of Florida's responsibilities there is as yet in our Legislature and among the people.

The orchestra played a short selection after which followed brief addresses from several representative men of the city. These were to the point and evidently met the approval of the audience. Mr. D. E. Thurston spoke on the necessity of re-organizing the M. R. & F. M. and emphasized the spirit of oneness that is growing up between the churches and among Christians as the result of this movement. Professor N. J. Perkins dwelt on the importance and advantages of bible study. Then Mr. A. R. Chappell spoke on personal evangelism.

One final word remained to be done to finish the meeting by a round up of the men who were there. This was given to Mr. F. R. Walker, who had attended the Jacksonville convention and there outlined the purposes and methods of the Movement. He called attention to the five lines of work for which men's activities are asked, and most of which had already received attention during the evening, as follows:

1. Evangelism
2. Missions
3. Bible Study
4. Boy Work
5. Social Service

These five departments were posted in conspicuous positions before the audience. Every man present was urged first to declare his allegiance to the work and then, if he could, to make choice in which field he will follow. Cards distributed through the audience for this purpose. The result of the evening and of previous similar alignments is that there are now 126 men in Sanford pledged to stand by the Men's Religion and Forward Movement. Of these 91 have definitely chosen their field for work: For Evangelism 3, Missions 5, Bible Study 32, Boy Work 32 and Social Service 19. It is hoped that those who have not already chosen will consider those fields in which the representation is now the lightest.

Announcement was made that there is to be a Men's Religion and Forward Movement convention in Sanford for four days beginning Sunday, April 14. This convention will be addressed by men from Jacksonville, Atlanta and other cities. Every man in Sanford should be lined up before that time.

The Organization Committee, which has so far had the work in charge, wishes to thank Mr. George A. DeCotte for the free use of his theatre and his courtesy in advertising the Sunday night meeting. They wish also to thank the orchestra and choir for their part in the services. Thanks are due to the officers in charge of Mr. Frank R. Kent. They wish particularly to acknowledge their obligations to the Herald for the generous space given in its columns to this movement.

Thus passes an occasion long to be remembered in Sanford, and thus begins a movement that may have far-reaching influences for good upon our city.

Pythian Sisters Banquet

The Pythian Sisters gave a banquet last night in the castle hall in the Welborne Block which was largely attended by the Knights and their ladies and many visitors. Refreshments were served and a good time enjoyed by all present.

Among those present from a distance were Mrs. M. S. Brown of Palatka, who is Past Grand Chief.

Today Mrs. Brown and Mrs. M. Frank who is Grand Mistress of Finance and Miss Florence Frank who will represent Sanford Temple No. 17 will go to Tampa to attend the annual meeting. Representatives of Phoenix Lodge No. 5 of this city, Henry McLaughlin and Felix Frank will accompany them.

Tampa will extend a most cordial welcome to the visiting Knights and a reception banquet and ball will be given there at the Tampa Bay and automobile club in the city.

FOR A LIBRARY BUILDING

Valuable Suggestion To Place Building In South Park

Editor Herald:

At the last meeting of the council a committee presented to the council a petition to have the city of Sanford contribute a certain amount each year for the support and maintenance of the Sanford Public Library.

The Library Association owns a lot just south of Spencer's bakery that is of no benefit at this time to the Association. The writer believes that this lot could be sold and the funds thus secured could be used as the basis of a building fund which could be utilized in erecting a nice modest library building in the center of the Ninth street park. All objections as to the availability of the park for this purpose could be properly arranged if taken up with the right parties and if the Association lot could not be sold outright, a ninety-nine year lease could be made on it which would serve the purpose just as well.

The Ninth street location would be an admirable one, in that it is quiet, sufficiently removed from the business center and is large enough to prevent any noises on the adjacent property from bothering the patrons in any way. It is also within easy distance of the High school Primary school, grammar school and the Catholic school, thus furnishing the pupils good consulting facilities, with such works as the library now contains.

As the proposition now stands, it would seem illogical for the city to appropriate money to maintain the library while it is located on the second floor and right in the heart of the business center, but by erecting a suitable building and placing it in the Ninth street park, there would be no reason for a single resident to make an objection to the city in assisting in maintaining this public service institution.

The vast number of winter visitors who come to Sanford each fall and remain until spring now we have no place to while away their time, with the exception of the few checker games that are daily pulled off in the old fire house shed which now stands on the Association's lot and with the erection of a library building a place would be provided for the guests of the city to gather and feel that in so doing they were not encroaching upon the good graces of any one. The writer would be pleased to hear from some one else on this subject. If there are points against it they should be discussed and all barriers removed that would in any way prevent the erection of a library building at the earliest possible moment.

Will Not Come to Sanford

The Commercial Club failed to get enough money pledged to make up the sum demanded by Aviator Bonney as a bonus and he will not appear in Sanford this week, although he may later. His rates are rather high, probably because he is an air man.

Sanford Crop Conditions

Sanford, Fla., March 8.—Celery and lettuce are moving freely at fair prices, and also a large acreage of late celery and lettuce will be ready for market about April 10. The acreage in cucumbers, tomatoes, Irish potatoes and beans will be large and crops at the present time look well. The extreme wet weather which retarded the bleaching of celery and caused some damage from blight, is now greatly benefiting other crops. Celery has been bringing from $1.75 to $2.00 this week as to grade quality and pack. The total movement was about 15 cars and about the same number of cars of mixed vegetables moved.

One grower sold 1 1/2 acres of celery Monday for more than $2,000. A. Dornier will cut 20 acres this year and it is estimated that the crop will net him in the neighborhood of $20,000. J. F. Jones has just finished setting several acres of lettuce which has a splendid stand and he hopes to get into the market about April 15, if weather conditions remain favorable. Mr. Jones will no doubt have some fine lettuce on the market not later than that date.

Davis Bros. have 3 acres of vegetables of various kinds includes onions, celery, lettuce, cauliflower, cabbage, beets, Irish potatoes, eggplant and pepper. All of these crops are looking fine. They are also extensively engaged in the poultry business. A. McDonald has 5 acres of celery, 3 acres of cucumbers, and 2 acres of tomatoes. Mr. McDonald's celery is looking fair and other crops are in good condition. J. C. Hall has a nice acreage of cucumbers, Irish potatoes and beans. M. N. Stewart has 3 1/2 acres of celery which is in good condition and a small acreage of cantaloupes. A. R. Chappell has 19 acres of celery and other vegetables, his crops are doing well and he anticipates a good yield.

Shipments next week will be heavier and if present weather conditions hold the growers will yet retrieve some of the loss occasioned by the wet weather during January and February.—New York Packer.

As yet there is no clue to the burglar who broke in the window of Palmer & Seigh and extorted several suits of clothing and no clue to the officers who were on the beat. The question now arises as to whether one man should patrol First street and let the trains alone or put on another night policeman.

The carnival has come and gone and the town is here yet from which I gather that the carnival left more here than they carried away. The city fathers slipped out of a bad hole and the weather man helped them to do it. Now they should adhere to the old ordinance or else pass a new one and make a straight license of $150 for the week and let them all come in.

I was certainly glad to see such a representative crowd of men out to the Men and Religion Forward Movement held at the Imperial theatre last Sunday evening. This movement is sweeping the civilized world and will do more to strengthen the Christian religion and bring men to the full realization of their duty to God and man than any religious movement ever put forward before. The figures that shows how few men are church members are appalling and make the thinking man sit up and take notice. The Forward movement should be fruitful of good results in Sanford not that our little city is worse than any other but that all of us are prone to be backsliders more or less and to leave the church work to the ladies. The men can do an immense amount of good in church work and out of the church because the Forward movement is not designed at all together to bring people into the church but to promote a better feeling in every way, to induce men to elect better men to office and command a more fraternal feeling of man to man. It is to be hoped that the Sanford men will take part in once and make this city one of the strongholds of the movement.

Like some popular tunes which fail to please a person when they first appear but linger long after you hear them several times, the wonderful "Houn Dawg Tune" grows on us. There's an unexplainable something about it which makes you read it several times daily, and while you can remember it word for word, it sounds better every time you repeat it.

It is a fine battle song for the Democrat, a party even if some people have seen fit to make fun of it.

It is democratic to the core. Read it again and be convinced.

Every time I come to town
The boys keep kickin' my dawg aroun'
Makes no difference if he is a houn'
You gotta quit kickin' my dawg aroun'

CHORUS
Chaw, chaw, chaw, and ever be home
In Blue No. 100,000, Lallyphone
Makes no difference if he is a houn'
You gotta quit kickin' my dawg aroun'

Sambel, say that bamp down
You good for nothin' triflin' houn'
Makes no difference if he is a houn'
You got a quit kickin' my dawg aroun'

Every time I go to school
The teacher lams me with a rule
Makes do difference if I am a fool
She's got a quit laimmin' me with a rule

Sift the meal an' save the bran
You can't grow taters in sandy lan
Makes no difference if he is a houn'
You got a quit kickin' my dawg aroun'

My dawg-Drum is a good ol' houn'
Trails the possum on the driest grain
Makes no difference if he is a houn'
You got a quit kickin' my dawg aroun'

While the houn' is considered by many as a thing which has no rights, it has them just the same, and occasionally you will find some person who issues the command, "You gotta quit kickin' my dawg aroun'."

Just so have the people been treated by those who have controlled the Republican party. They have kicked the people around during off years and have persuaded them to vote the Republican ticket during election years. Now the Democrats have come to the defense of the people and have told the Republicans they've got to quit kickin' the people around.

That "houn' dawg tune" is really a classic. The words, we mean, even if the tune won't divide honors with the Wonderful Wiggle Rag, and the like.

Much comment has been caused by the recent action of the Keystone Telephone Company of Philadelphia in ordering its operators not to say "please" to the subscribers, and asking the subscribers not to say "please" to the operators. It is estimated that the use of this little sweetener of business life costs the public and the company five days in a year of time.

Arguing from many such incidents some writers think they see a tendency to cut courtesy out of American business life. And yet, if so, this is a tendency that many of our big concerns are fighting very hard against.

A recent magazine writer speaks of hearing a prominent American manufacturer, in the court yard of a Swiss hotel, commenting on the charming courtesy that pervaded the place, and saying that he would give $10,000 if that courtesy could become the habit in his home office and salesrooms. He added that his foremen were much more inclined to swear than say "Good morning."

The position of telephone employees may possibly be exceptional. Perhaps words of courtesy do clog the processes of shifting lines and switches, which need to be conducted at a high rate of speed, and a celerity of connection will perhaps smooth the public's ever sensitive fur better than anything manners can do. But if so, there are few other modern business relations where courtesy is not an asset of a high value.

A democratic people are peculiarly given to standing on their rights and their dignities. The unshorn and grimy man who marches up to your desk to ask a business question, may not look as if he were worth consideration. But he is an American. If you make him stand ten minutes while you finish dictating a social letter to your stenographer, he will probably resent the assumption that he is not given as prompt attention as the man in the store clothes who came in ahead of him.

If later it turns out that he had some offer to make that might be valuable to your business, it will take higher bids on your part to win him away from your rival who good naturedly gave him a smile and a cheer and a cheering, without needless delay.

A Beautiful Home Wedding

Monday afternoon, the 26th day of February, at 4:30 p. m., Miss Mamie Thomas, the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Geo. T. Thomas, one of the most popular young women of Athens, and Dr. A. C. Edwards, a rising young business man of Jacksonville, Fla., were quietly married at the home of her parents in the presence of a few friends by her pastor, Rev. J. E. Hill, in a most impressive manner.

The bride was a picture of loveliness and grace in traveling suit of blue, with hat to match, while the groom, handsome in appearance and manly in bearing, seemed happy in the realization that he had won the prize of his life.

The bride wore a corsage bouquet of violets and lilies of the valley, her only ornament being a beautiful necklace with pearl pendants, the gift of the groom.

The parlour in which they were married was richly decorated with magnificent carnations, palms and bamboos, and the effect was a scene of beauty and loveliness. The many handsome presents gave testimony of the love and esteem in which the bride was held.

Especially beautiful and inviting, with the decoration of lovely flowers, was the dining room, where a delicious salad course was served.

After receiving the congratulations of the friends and many good wishes for their future happiness, the happy couple left over the S. A. L. Railroad for Jacksonville, Fla., where they will make their home—Athens Banner.

Mr and Mrs. Edwards are well known in Sanford, Mrs. Edwards visiting here the guest of Miss Besae Long and Mr. Edwards at one time being with Newlan's Pharmacy.

Mr Spear stopped over in our city today in the interest of his illustrated lecture. His plan we think should prove of great interest to Florida as he visits the Northern and Western States giving his lecture in the moving picture houses as a source of interesting.

Typical scenes which he has carefully collected from places of note will show the real beauties enterprises and resources of South Florida. Mr DeCola has secured a date with Mr. Spear for a demonstration lecture while in route. He will also give a lecture at the Savoy in Jacksonville and other places before going North.

Registration Books

ADDRESSED LADIES' CLUBS

Marcus Fagg Presents Some Important Facts to Sanford Ladies.

"What Florida is doing for her Defective and Delinquent Classes."

Friday afternoon, in the hospitable home of Mrs. Henry Wight, the Wednesday Club, Welaka Club, Lend a Hand Club and a number of other Sanford ladies, had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Marcus C. Fagg, of Jacksonville, Superintendent of the Children's Home Society, who was Mrs. Wight's guest. After a few remarks explanatory of the meeting, and Mr. Fagg's presence among them, Mrs. Geo. L. Maris, president of the Wednesday Club, introduced Mr. Fagg to the ladies. Mr. Fagg is an interesting, fluent and forceful speaker, deeply and enthusiastically in love with his work of rescuing, helping and pleading the cause of the children, and all those who are mentally, morally and physically dependent on the maintenance and care of the State of Florida, and the individuals who make up the State.

After a high, graceful, and well deserved tribute to the Women's Clubs of Florida, the work they have done, and are still doing, for the betterment of all existing conditions in the State, the improvement and uplift of all classes wherefore it is needed, Mr. Fagg presented for the consideration of the clubs, the facts and conditions as far as he could ascertain them, which exist in the State Reformatory, at Marianna, which he visited and investigated last December. The buildings were fully described, the arrangements and furnishings of the interior, the methods in controlling and caring for the inmates. The great need of many changes and improvements which could give the institution and management, a better opportunity to reform those whose conduct has sent them there for detention and punishment.

While of course the boys do all the work on the farm maintained by the reformatory, they have very little, if any, systematic school facilities which in trying to reform vicious minds is a great oversight. Lives are to be changed or reformed, the thoughts that control those lives must be diverted into a cleaner, healthier and attractive channel. A first-class school training can do that, when many other means will fail.

Mr. Fagg wanted it clearly understood, that those in charge of the institution are not to be blamed for existing conditions, and for the meagre equipment and inability to cope with the situation, and the very lax methods that are pursued. It is the Legislature, which fails to appropriate sufficient means to carry on the institution, in any degree commensurate with the dignity and intelligence of a State which prefers to make good citizens out of bad boys; instead of doing nothing toward their mental and moral upbuilding of the ninety-three inmates. There are eighty-eight boys and five girls; twenty-nine whites and sixty-four colored. To the everlasting shame of the Judge who sent her there, a decent, intelligent, half-grown white girl was in the reformatory at the time of Mr. Fagg's visit, and she was not a criminal, other than that she resented "viva et arma", an insult offered to her, an orphan, by another woman, and the Judge who tried the case, sent her to the reformatory for assault and battery.

Mr. Fagg stressed with all the eloquence at his command, the culpable mistake, of sending girls to the same reformatory where boys are sent. Another heartless and careless mistake, is sending little children to such an surroundings and associations. A little boy of six years old, deserted by a wicked mother, was sent there because a policeman found him sleeping under a porch; and the Judge sent him to the reformatory as a vagrant.

Mr. Fagg investigated the case of the girl and little boy and ascertained these facts. He went to work immediately, and found other homes for them, and they are now going to school, and are gratefully responding to the interest and care given them and are both making good in every way they can. Mr. Fagg points out that the reformatory could and should be made a training and industrial school, where untaught, vicious and immoral juvenile criminals, white and colored, could be taught a trade, to make them self-supporting and clean, helpful, moral training, to lift them out of the slough of viciousness, and degradation, and which will fit them both for upright and useful citizen. Mr. Fagg also visited the Asylum for the Insane, which has eleven hundred inmates. This institution in a great many respects, is very well equipped, in other respects, woefully lacking, and here again, the great need of funds cripples and hampers the management and prevents the doing of so many things to ameliorate the condition and make more comfortable these unfortunate and help wards of the State. Statistics given by the physician in charge, show that tuberculosis is largely on the increase in the asylum. The legislature should come to the rescue of those, who cannot flee from contamination of the disease, or in any way use precautions to protect themselves by making an appropriation for a separate building for the use of those who have pronounced symptoms of tuberculosis. The next institution visited was that for the Blind in St. Augustine, which Mr. Fagg was gratified to find in a much better condition, with an equipment and management more up to date, in consequence of a much larger appropriation of funds with which to care for and make the lives of those who cannot see each other, and this beautiful world at least more bearable. There the blind are taught such trades as they can master. They have daily lessons and those who evidence a desire or talent are taught music. The institution for the Blind is at least a credit to the State.

Five Orphanages were visited by Mr. Fagg, in his laudable itinerary, one in Pensacola, which has been forced to close its doors as an orphanage, and is now a boarding home for children who have one parent who can pay for their care in the home. Two in Jacksonville, which were very good in their way, and with the means at their disposal, but they were without educational facilities. Another at Enterprise in the same condition, and lack of means with which to fit their charges to occupy better and higher places in future life.

The orphanage at Arundel is in every way, the best equipped in the State, but in all of the Orphanages the industrial feature is lacking. The children are not being taught trades, or crafts, by which they will be made easily and creditably self-sustaining when they leave their homes, and join the battle of life.

Mr. Fagg will in a short time, investigate the condition and needs of the Reformatory in Florida. As was suggested by Mr. Fagg, the Women's clubs have a great work before them, and studying and grasping public needs and problems as well as those which are local, suggesting ways and means of improvement, or overcoming existing conditions, with different and better methods. They can arouse individuals, and those in authority, from the torpor of indifference and selfishness, which now entralls them, and show them their responsibility to their fellow man, and especially, their God-given duty, to the children; by never letting them forget for an instant, that the greatest asset of a State or Nation, is its citizens, and especially its children, for they will be the citizens of tomorrow. Let not the Women's clubs, and all other women, who do not belong to clubs ever be indifferent to their duty, opportunity and privilege. There is no limit to what women with concerted will and effort can accomplish. They have but to find the way and point it out, the men will follow. Their intuition and ingenuity, will not be long in finding the way, that is needed.

To The Democratic Voters

Of the 19th Senatorial District

The Democratic Executive Committee of Orange County has put the Senatorial claims in the proper light in the resolutions printed below. It will not endorse any candidate who must be voted for by you. In this the Committee is right. Endorsement of such candidates is your business exclusively. I ask your careful consideration and if you think I can best serve the district to renominate me.

Yours respectfully
LOUIS G. MASSEY

Resolutions of Democratic Executive Committee of Orange County

WHEREAS, on January 20, 1912, the Democratic Executive Committee of Osceola County, by resolution, called to the attention of the good Democrats of Orange County an alleged agreement or custom of dividing the Senatorship of the 19th District equally between the two counties, and expressed the belief that the patriots of Orange county democracy would not suffer this cause to be broken at the present time and then proceeded to endorse a candidate for Senator. Therefore, be it

RESOLVED, by the Democratic Executive Committee of Orange County, assembled February 17, 1912

1. That this committee knows of no agreement or custom by any competent authority by which the terms of the senators from this district must be equally divided between Orange and Osceola counties. The equal term given to the last senator from Osceola county was because of the services and record of Senator C. A. Carson and, being personal to him, is not to be construed as an admission by the Orange County democracy that the senatorial terms are to alternate equally without regard to the merits of the candidates.

2. That in the opinion of this committee, the democratic voters of the 19th district should elect their senator according to their estimate of the fitness of the respective candidates.

3. That the democratic voters of the district will nominate a candidate for Senator in a primary held in this county regardless of place of residence under the auspices of this committee, which is the judge of the returns in this county. It would therefore, be improper for this committee, under such circumstances, to endorse any candidate.

Home Rule For Cities One of the planks in the platform of Cromwell Gibbons, candidate for governor, is the home rule for cities in which they can change their charter without resorting to the legislature.

HARMON WON THE FIRST ROUND If Harmon and Roosevelt should be the candidates the contest would be between the man who wished to put a confessed violator of the law in the penitentiary and one who did put him in the cabinet.—Times-Union.

And it would be a contest in which the first round has already been won by Governor Harmon.

When Governor Harmon resigned from the railroad rebating investigation because Roosevelt, then president, would not allow him to proceed against Paul Morton, and wrote his famous "guilt is always personal" letter to Attorney General Moody, Roosevelt was mad all through.

In the campaign of 1910, when Governor Harmon was a candidate for re-election and every resource of the republican party was being exerted to defeat him, Roosevelt thought his opportunity to wreak vengeance had come at last. Accordingly he went into Ohio two days before the election and made the most bitter speeches of which his intense temperament is capable against Governor Harmon.

the redoubtable Teddy. The result of Mr. Roosevelt's little excursion into Ohio is well told in the following telegram which was sent to him on the night of the election when the returns were coming in: Hon. T. Roosevelt, Oyster Bay, N. Y. Lucas county and Cuyahoga county, the two counties where you defamed Governor Harmon, show a net democratic gain of 9,000. Come again.

HUGH L. NICHOLS, Chf., Ohio-Dem, State Ex. Com. Governor Harmon carried the state by 101,000 majority. We believe he can do it again, and what the Democratic party needs most at this time is a leader who can carry the states that have the electoral votes.—Starke Telegraph.

ROLLINS COLLEGE GLEE CLUB

At the High School Friday Evening Next

On Friday evening the people of Sanford will have the only opportunity of the season to hear a college glee club. Those who have been fortunate enough to hear such an organization will be glad to know that the highly successful Rollins College Glee Club will give a concert at the High School Friday evening.

The club this year consists of twelve members, or in other words, a triple quartette. And in addition to the triple quartette, they are accompanied by a reader and pianist.

During the present season the club has made a highly successful tour of all the East Coast cities, and reports speak very complimentarily of them. In all they have given about sixteen concerts, which is a very large number for a College Club, whose time is necessarily limited. So, those that attend the concert Friday evening may expect a well rendered program.

The proceeds from the concert will be for the benefit of the Sanford High School Athletic Association. And the sale of tickets is in charge of a committee of the association consisting of Wallace Crosby, John Hunter, Clarence Mahoney, Randall Chase, and Bertie Pattishall. Those that purchase tickets of them may be sure not only of benefitting the athletics of the school, but also of hearing a most enjoyable musical entertainment, consisting of music of such a character that any one may enjoy it.

THE UTILIZATION OF WASTE

products to the very fullest extent is, of course, the aim of every industrialist, and the Wood Waste Distilleries Co., Wheeling, West Virginia, U. S. A., certainly makes this possible in the case of the waste material of wood working establishments. By means of their distilling apparatus, ranging from a capacity of 5 to 500 gals., the industrial alcohol and turpentine contained in sawdust are effectively extracted, while the resultant fiber is ready for paper manufacturers. This still will actually pay for itself, over and over again every month, and Colonial and foreign fruit canning companies, chemical works, saw mills, varnish makers, oil refineries, sugar refineries, etc. cannot fail to find it a profitable acquisition.—R. G. Dun's International Review

For County Treasurer I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of County Treasurer. In asking your support in the coming primary election for this very important place, which is to be given to some one by the Democratic voters of this county, and if you can see your way clear to honor me with this place, I promise you that I will at all times and under all circumstances strictly guard your interests so far as lies in my power.

I am a candidate for the office of Treasurer of Orange county, subject to the action of the Democratic primary to be held April 30, 1912. Your support will be appreciated.

For Sheriff James A. Kirkwood announces his candidacy for re-election to the office of Sheriff of Orange county subject to the decision of the Democratic primary to be held on April 30, 1912.

I am a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Orange county subject to the decision of the Democratic primary to be held April 30, 1912. Having served in the capacity of deputy sheriff of the county for a number of years and being familiar with the duties of the same I feel that I can leave the question of my ability entirely to the voters of Orange county.

I wish to announce to the voters of Orange County, that I will be a candidate for the office of Sheriff for the year 1912. And I pledge myself to carry out the law without fear or favor to any one, and special privileges to none, I respectfully ask your support.

For Tax Assessor I announce my candidacy for re-election to the office of Tax Assessor of Orange county subject to the decision of the Democratic primary to be held on April 30th 1912.

For County Solicitor To the Democratic Voters of Orange County I hereby announce my candidacy for re-appointment to the office of county solicitor of Orange county, subject to the coming Democratic primaries. Should I be so fortunate as to secure re-appointment for re-appointment for another term of office it will be my earnest endeavor at all times to perform the duties incumbent upon me faithfully and fearlessly to the best of my ability.

To the Democratic Voters of Orange County I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the office of County Solicitor subject to the action of the Democratic Primary and respectfully ask for your support.

For Tax Collector I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-election to the office of Tax Collector of Orange County, subject to the Democratic Primary. If elected I pledge to you my faithful service as I have endeavored to give in the past.

For County Judge I hereby announce my candidacy for re-election to the position of County Judge of Orange County, subject to the decision of the Democratic primary to be held on April 30, 1912.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for re-appointment to the office of Judge of the Criminal Circuit of Florida, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary.

For State Attorney I hereby announce that I am a candidate for re-appointment as State Attorney for the Seventh Judicial Circuit of Florida, subject to the action of the Democratic primaries in April, 1912.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction To the Voters of Orange County: I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the office of County Superintendent of Public Instruction to succeed myself, subject to the action of the approaching Democratic primary.

I feel that I am peculiarly fitted for this office by educational qualification, and by experience in management of small and large schools, and in dealing with teachers, by natural temperament and love for the work and by familiarity with the details and the general demands of the office acquired during my present incumbency. If elected to the office the educational interests of the county will be upon my heart, and I will endeavor in every way to be faithful to the trust imposed.

For Clerk Circuit Court I announce my candidacy for the position of Clerk of the Circuit Court of Orange county subject to the decision of the Democratic primary to be held on April 30, 1912. Having served the county in this capacity for a number of years I again ask for the suffrage of the people. My past record is my best recommendation.

For State Legislature I will be a candidate for re-election to the State Legislature from Orange county subject to the decision of the Democratic primary held April 30th. Having served the people of the county for one term in this office gives me the benefit of experience as a legislator and the knowledge acquired by this service gives me a better opportunity to work for my constituency during another term in the Legislature.

To the Democratic Voters of Orange County: I hereby announce that I am a candidate before the approaching primary for member of the Legislature from this county. If elected I will represent you ably and honestly and will endeavor to return to you a record that will meet with your hearty approval.

For Representative in the Legislature of the state of Florida, for Orange county

For County Commissioner I will be a candidate for re-election to the office of County Commissioner of Orange County subject to the decision of the Democratic Primary held April 30th, 1912.

DISCUSSIONS IN FARMING
Subscriber Thinks Growers Ought to Write Farm Hints
The following received from W. S. Swartz of New York, President of the Southern Produce Co. is worthy of the consideration of the Sanford growers. The Herald will gladly devote the space should any grower avail themselves of the opportunity.
New York Mar 11th 1912
Sanford Herald

You will find enclosed my check for $2.00 in payment of our subscription to the Sanford Herald, for the year beginning Feb. 11 12.

In renewing my subscription, I desire to express my appreciation of the work Mr. Holly is doing to give Sanford people whether they live in Sanford or New York, a good clean live paper.

For those of us who are interested in the practical problems of the Sanford farmers, I sometimes wished that you would add a column which should take up one week the presentation by some of the Sanford people of some important subject of agriculture, and the next week publish such notes or experiences or comments on the same line as might be called forth by the paper which opened the discussion. There are so many things in which the experience of one farmer would be valuable to other farmers, and through this Herald Farmers' Club, if it might be so called, the whole prosperity of the farmers in and around Sanford would be increased. If there is anything which I can contribute in helping to make such a column of value to others, as I am sure it would be a value to me, I would be glad to have you command me.

Very truly yours,
Wm. R. Swartz,
Pres. & Treas.

Mr. Adlin Goes To Sanford
Mr. Lawrence Adlin, son of Judge and Mrs. A. F. Adlin, formerly of this city will cast his fortune with our flourishing sister city Sanford taking a prominent place in the Everglades railroad.

Mr. Adlin passed his childhood here, and attended the high school, where he was one of its most brilliant students. He went to the Philippines with his parents, and from there to Dartmouth College in New Hampshire, graduating last Spring with high honors.

Mr. Adlin is handsome and debonair in his appearance, graceful and courteous in his manners, and a most delightful conversationalist, so social Sanford will give the young gentleman the warmest of welcomes, which the business world there will echo. Orlando wishes him all success in his new enterprise.—Reporter-Star.

NARRATIVE OF
CAPTAIN ADAMS
"Detective-Diplomat"

By H. M. ROBERT

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

THE unexpectedly successful results that had attended most of the missions on which, as his majesty's courier, I had been sent, though due in the main to happy combinations of circumstances, had impressed both King Edward and Sir Edward Grey, the foreign secretary, with a belief in my abilities. In vain I pointed out the happy accidents that had turned defeat so often into victory.

"Well, say you are lucky, Captain Adams," the king replied. "Is not luck a constant asset of yours and, as such, to be reckoned for?"

And now, when I had become puffed up and somewhat vainglorious over the favor in which I thought I stood, I was to receive a lesson that speedily recalled me to a humbler condition of spirit and taught me, incidentally, not to rely too greatly on the praise of kings.

Sir Edward Grey had summoned me to the foreign office, in Whitehall. When I entered his private room he looked at me in a peculiar manner, peering over his long, thin, aristocratic nose and biting his thin lips nervously. He motioned me to a seat and began to pace the room, a cigarette between his lips, evidently musing hard. Once or twice he stopped at my side as though to address me, and again I caught that curious glance—half furtive—on his face.

"Captain Adams," he began at last, "his majesty has commissioned me to request your services upon a very simple mission, and yet one fraught with many difficulties. It does not require diplomacy—a quality which we can find anywhere—but watchfulness, courage, resourcefulness and silence, qualities in all of which I believe you to excel."

I bowed and stammered my thanks. Sir Edward Grey walked over to a table and took up a black leather wallet, which he opened. Inside I perceived a roll of parchment. Sir Edward Grey closed the wallet and placed it in my hands.

"His majesty's government," he said, coming up to me and lowering his voice until it became a whisper, "has just concluded a secret treaty of the utmost moment with Spain. It binds us, under certain contingencies, which are by no means remote, to come to her assistance with all our military and naval forces. In this wallet is the draft copy, which you will take to King Alfonso to sign. That is all."

"I can start for Madrid tonight—" I began, but the foreign secretary checked me.

"No, for Paris," he answered. "You would never take that treaty to Madrid. A certain great power is willing to move heaven and earth to discover its contents. That it would not be overscrupulous in endeavoring to obtain it I can assure you. In fact, my dear Adams, to be concise, German spies have been watching the foreign office for weeks and the moment that you entered you became a marked man. So, what with Spanish brigands and the slow trains of the peninsula and the Pyrenees to cross, I think it is a safe prophecy that you would never reach Madrid. You may, however, get as far as Paris."

"Paris?" I repeated.

"Yes. So important are the issues at stake that King Alfonso has gone secretly to the Spanish embassy there, where he will receive you tomorrow at noon. Can you take the night boat from Dover?"

"I will," I said, "and I will deliver the treaty safely tomorrow to his majesty the king of Spain."

Again Sir Edward Grey looked at me in that searching and yet half furtive manner.

"That's well, then," he said at last. "But remember, Adams, you have to deal with resourceful and unscrupulous enemies, who will never rest until they have the treaty or until your mission is accomplished." He took up the wallet, which I had laid down and, with many adjurations, urging upon me most emphatically that I should not lose sight of its precious contents, unless I had them about me, he showed me to the door.

Of course I did not intend to leave the treaty in its present location. I intended, on my arrival at my lodgings in Half Moon street, Piccadilly, to have Talbot, my soldier servant, sew the document in my coat, while I would continue to guard the empty wallet. But on the way downstairs the inspiration came to me to withdraw the document at once and place it in the bosom of my shirt. As I left the building a grotesque-attired cabman urged his horse up to the curb and leaned the box.

"Keb, sir?" he cried. He pressed the spring which caused the doors to fly open and instantly a grimy street-runner, one of those men who follow passengers in cabs for miles, in hopes of being permitted to help with the baggage, snatched at my wallet, as though to place it within for me. As his fingers closed upon it I wheeled and struck him in the face. It was all the work of a moment; by the time I realized that I still held the wallet the fellow had slunk sheepishly away, while the cabman, as though discovering a more satisfactory customer, wheeled off into a side street.

Though it was four o'clock on a dark winter evening, I decided that the streets would be as safe as any cab for me and, as there would be time for me to walk to my lodgings and still catch the night boat, I set off at a brisk pace. I had reached the National gallery before I was satisfied that I was not being followed—at any rate, closely. My route now lay through a maze of narrow streets of unsavory reputation. Should I attempt their passage? It seemed to me that all places were equally precarious just now. I had halted at the entrance to one of those little old-fashioned hotels, still frequented by travelers, though their encroaching slum neighbors are gradually driving out the better class of visitors. While I was debating, suddenly a muffled, but unmistakably feminine voice, crying for help, reached my ears. Immediately a hansom wheeled round the corner and drew in near the hotel entrance. A second later I perceived two men half leading, half dragging a veiled lady toward the doors. She seemed suddenly to have awakened to a realization of her destination, for she began to struggle violently and to scream. One of the men clapped his hand over her lips and unceremoniously they bundled her into the hansom.

Should I intervene? Or was this but some trick to lure me out of the broad thoroughfare into that maze of secret streets and there to rob me? As I waited one last cry came to me, so piercing in its agony that I almost regretted my prudence, but before I could finally run to the girl's aid I heard men running in answer to her call, and suddenly the cabman lashed his horse and the vehicle disappeared into the gathering murk and fog.

Certainly matters were becoming lively. And I had been gone but a short half hour already.

I retraced my steps homeward, not penetrating the narrow maze of alleys that lay nearest, and arrived in time to discover Talbot, my servant soldier, laying the table for my dinner. I bade him pack my grip instantly and get me ready for the Paris boat.

"Won't you take me with you, sir?" he pleaded. "Them froggies is nasty devils, sir. I'd like to go, sir. Two 'eads is better than one, sir, and 'oo'll look after you when you're asleep. Them frog-eaters will trap you into a dool, sir."

Talbot and I had gone through many strange adventures together, and there was no man whose company I would have preferred. But in this case I had to dispense with him, for my mission was a brief one and I could not be troubled with a companion, especially as French was the one language Talbot would not or could not learn.

When he found that I was obdurate, Talbot set about packing my grip. Then, at my instructions, he sewed the precious document within the lining of my coat. And so, grasping the now empty wallet, I set off for Charing Cross station, which I reached without mishap. At nine o'clock I was en route for Dover; at midnight I was aboard the night boat for Calais. I can hardly express the thankfulness I felt at having at least performed the first part of the journey in safety. By the morrow noon, my task fulfilled, I should be on my way homeward.

I did not sleep, but lay down to rest in my berth. I am not the best of sailors and the action of the waves produced in me that sensation from which even those of the blood royal are not exempt. The lights were low in the cabin. I saw no one approach me. In spite of my resolution I must have dozed off slightly—for I started up suddenly, to hear the steward announcing that the lights of Calais harbor were visible and that we were near the end of our journey.

So lightly had my eyes closed, so firmly had I held the wallet, none could have approached to rob me of it, I felt sure, without instant detection. And yet—was that my wallet? My wallet had had a silver lock, and this, though otherwise a creditable resemblance, had one of untinned brass. Thoroughly alarmed, I sprang to my feet and felt at my coat. Thank heaven, the treaty still reposed within the lining.

But now for the first time I realized how crafty, how implacable, were the enemies that pursued me. The wallet must have been substituted while I dozed. I flung it away across the cabin. I must watch myself the more carefully, for undoubtedly they would attempt their coup during the night journey between Calais and Paris.

Strangely enough, there was not a sleeping compartment to be had, and I was forced to content myself with an ordinary carriage. I did, however, succeed in obtaining one for myself, saw the door closed, and, as the train steamed out of the station, congratulated myself upon a successful journey. I had no further desire to sleep. The dawn would find me in Paris, and ready to perform my mission.

As the train sped on and I mused in this way I heard sats beating against the wall that separated mine from the next compartment, and a cry followed—a woman's cry. The cry was repeated, more loudly, this time outside my window, and then I saw a slight form upon the footboard that clung to my window and implored help. And it was the voice and face of the woman whom I had seen that self-same evening carried into the cab in London!

Distrustful as I was, I was about to resist that appeal, when I saw a man spring through the door of the adjoining compartment and, clinging to the carriage with one hand, with the other shower a continuous hail of blows upon the lady's face and shoulders. Next instant I had flung my door open and pulled her in, but nothing daunted, the fellow followed. I ran at him and struck him between the eyes, hurling him into a corner of the compartment. I was about to rush upon him again when, with a cry, the woman grasped my arm.

"He is my husband," she said, faintly.

Meanwhile the stranger, having stood up and wiped the blood from his forehead, was pulling a card out of his case. I perceived now that he was a gentleman in appearance.

"If monsieur will obtain a friend we need waste no time in preliminaries," he said.

Ignoring him, I turned to the lady.

"Your husband?" I asked.

"I—abandoned him," she faltered.

"He found me in London and—brought me back. He was right. Alas, you must meet him!"

And I perceived into what a trap I had fallen.

"I have business tomorrow which cannot be postponed," I said to the man in French. "Afterward I am at your disposal."

"Monsieur is afraid?" he said with a sneer. "If so—"

I laughed bitterly. "I know you and I say you cannot induce me to fight until my message is delivered at the embassy," I answered. "At one o'clock tomorrow I shall be at your disposal."

I expected, of course, that seeing that his ruse had failed, and that I could not be entrapped into a duel before my errand was accomplished, the tricksters would leave me, their last desperate throw defeated. But to my astonishment the fellow said, coolly:

"There is an Englishman with whom I am acquainted in the front part of the train. I will send him to monsieur."

And, with a ceremonious bow, the man retreated, his wife following him willingly and ostentatiously, as though her part in the play action had been accomplished. Ten minutes later a pleasant-looking Englishman came climbing along the footboard and introduced himself.

"I hear you have assaulted an acquaintance of mine, Monsieur Ravachol," he said.

"The fellow is a spy," I retorted. "It was a put-up job to entrap me into a duel before I had fulfilled a certain mission."

"That may be so," the Englishman answered. "But in this country you cannot even strike a spy without having to answer for it with pistol or sword. When is your errand to be accomplished?"

"Tomorrow at noon," I answered.

"Why, then, you can, no doubt, be able to meet M. Ravachol in the Bois at four?" he answered.

And there was no answer to be made. Spy or no spy, the fellow was entitled to his revenge. Well, once I had handed the treaty to the king of Spain I should be ready to be killed or to kill. One thing I stipulated for. The duel should be real—no mock encounters.

"From the reputation that Monsieur Ravachol bears as the best shot and swordsman in Paris," answered the Englishman, "you need have no fear on that score. Will you meet me at four outside Grey's, at the entrance to the Bois? You are familiar with Paris?"

It was settled that I should meet him there the following afternoon. We were to fight with rapiers, the bouts to continue until one of us was killed or completely disabled. Then, with an interchange of cards, the Englishman left me and I was alone again. And outside it was dawn, and the outskirts of Paris appeared like ghosts through the mists. And in my coat lining was the treaty, and my mission was all but accomplished.

It was fulfilled the same morning when I entered the Spanish embassy and formally handed it to a certain Senor Hermosillo y Ramos, who was awaiting me there. He was a tall, lank, eager-looking youth of about three and twenty, looking evidently ill at ease in his civilian clothes.

"I have the honor to present your majesty with this document from London," I remarked as I delivered it.

The Spanish king seized it eagerly and read it. Then he looked at me in amazement.

"You—succeeded in escaping the German spies?" he gasped. "How? You fortunate Englishman! You have saved Spain. And now, you will take back a private letter from me to his majesty, my cousin of England?"

He had regarded me keenly the while and, as I debated, I suddenly perceived on his face the same curious, half-furtive look that I had seen on that of Sir Edward Grey. Should I confess that I must fight for my life that same afternoon and so mortally affront Alfonso by a refusal, and thus end my career in his majesty of England's service? Even as I hesitated, there came the thought to me that Rava-chol would never meet me, that he had merely sought to carry off his affront lightly. And I accepted the letter, which Alfonso had taken from his pocket.

It is of the utmost consequence," he said, "since it bears directly on the treaty. But I have all confidence in you, my friend."

And in the most cordial way he dismissed me.

At three o'clock I found my English second, Mr. Burgin, according to his usual custom, waiting for me. I hazarded the remark that presumably Mr. Ravachol would not be in place.

Burgin turned and regarded me earnestly.

"Make no mistake," he said. "Mon-sieur Ravachol may be what you call him, but he has never played the coward."

I cannot describe the sensation of terror that overcame me at these words. If he were there indeed, if he fought me and killed me, the letter would be his, for undoubtedly they would search my body before the police arrived. I decided to confess my predicament to my second and beg that in the event of my death, he would take the letter from my pocket and convey it personally to Sir Edward Grey.

And then, as my lips were about to frame the request, I looked up suddenly and saw something in his eye so menacing, so fraught with hatred that intuitively the entire plot burst upon my comprehension. Burgin and Ravachol were in league; they had lured me here by trickery, knowing that coming from the Spanish king, I should in all probability be the bearer of dispatches of a vital nature. Now there remained for me nothing but to comport myself without fear, to win if possible, even against trickery, and, at any rate, not to give Burgin the satisfaction of knowing that what he sought actually reposed in the bosom of my shirt.

At four o'clock, in a shady dell in the very heart of the Bois, Burgin and I awaited the approach of my antagonist. To my surprise Burgin manifestly took my part, insisted upon a choice of weapons, placed me where the sun would not shine in my eyes. Was he, after all, friendly? Or was Ravachol so sure of victory that he could afford to play fairly with me?

We crossed swords, the letter in my bosom burning like a cinder of fire. On that issue depended—how many hopes? Ravachol thrust in carte, hence—I parried with difficulty. From the first moment I perceived that I was hopelessly outclassed. Every moment his assaults grew fiercer. The brief intervals, which only wearied me, seemed to refresh his iron wrist. At last I realized that I was at his mercy. And still I parried that fatal thrust which, as I well knew, could not be long delayed.

It was then that I realized that Ravachol was playing with me, waiting to weary me still further before taking his revenge.

His eyes seemed to hypnotize me as he darted agilely before me, the very incarnation of grace and cruelty. Across his face, tanned by the sun, the blow that I had dealt him seemed to stand out like a white weal. The breath came panting between my lips. A couple of spectators, who found out each bout eagerly, I could read in their eyes for me—pity for my defeat. For they did not know that this was a duel unto the death.

And then I saw in my enemy's eyes the determination that he had arrived at. He had played long enough. The memory of that blow had stirred him up to a frenzy of wrath. I saw the curving rapier slide through my guard and halt inflexibly within an inch of my breast. Once it did that, and then—

I felt the last prick upon the skin of my chest, not painful. I saw the spectator leap forward, saw Ravachol draw back, waving a sword that dripped ominously. Was I wounded? I started forward, but my knees gave under me and I fell gasping to the green earth. Everything was swimming before my eyes. In a mad whirl "Pauvre garçon," said a voice above me. And I heard the word "mortally" pronounced. In my last moment of conscious agony I felt a hand pressed softly into my shirt to where the letter lay. It was withdrawn, and then before all external sounds were shut out from my ears, I heard a voice that seemed very vaguely and indistinctly to come from my world of London.

Ten days later I opened my eyes in the bedroom of a Paris hotel. Lallot was seated beside me. It did not surprise me. I had passed through a tumultuous delirium of nightmares, in which I encountered Ravachol under a thousand guises, in which Lallot alone could and did save me. And that he should be here at my side seemed natural enough.

When I grew stronger he told me how, notwithstanding my indisposition, he had followed me on the next train, to stand by you, sir, among them, they others. How he had rained the streets of Paris all that morning seeking for me, and at last, by some miracle, had learned from a fellow Englishman that duels were fought in the Bois, and had gone there, assured that the French had formed a scheme to assassinate me. And once there, he had come in time to staunch the flow of blood, the rest having turned tail and run when I was struck down, and to procure the services of a surgeon.

Lallot, I said, when I was well enough to travel, my services with the king is ended. It makes no difference where we go. Let us try America together. England has dispensed with me.

What was my amazement then to receive an urgent summons from Sir Edward Grey to meet him at the foreign office on the following day! Surely the theft of the document and the failure of my undertaking had by now been made manifest! But I could not shrink my fate. With a heavy heart I went to the appointment.

The moment that I entered the room the foreign secretary came up to me quickly, his hand outstretched.

"Captain Adams, you have been wounded in the government service," he said. "It is as meritorious as the field of battle. I have mentioned it to the king. Your services will not be forgotten."

"No, do not say a word," he continued, checking me as I was about to speak. "I know what you would say, Captain Adams, diplomacy puts men to queer duties. Let me confess frankly, then, that you were never meant to reach Paris."

"What?" I cried.

"The treaty that you carried was a false one, to deceive the emissaries of Germany. We were confident that you could not escape them. And when you did, it was necessary for the king of Spain to give you a further fraudulent letter, to deceive the spies who beset you, so that, as we could not enable them to get you going, they should get you coming."

"It was, of course, never intended that you should put your life in jeopardy, and we had not counted on the blood-thirsty revenge of Ravachol, who, knowing himself a famous swordsman and smarting under defeat as well as under the blow you gave him, doubtless, thought his opportunity for killing you too good a one to be passed. Captain Adams, you must forgive this subterfuge. We needed the services of a gentleman of transcendent honesty and simplicity of character, who should be captured against his will. You have fulfilled what we expected and desired, and your failure has been, in truth, your great success."

Fancy Work Circle

This new circle recently formed by a number of the charming matrons, who are fond of fancy work, and who appreciate the entertainment of pleasant companions while they work, was entertained by Mrs. J. J. Purdon, Thursday afternoon.

After the pretty fancy work and pleasant conversation, had been enjoyed for a while a delicious fruit salad, sandwiches and coffee with whipped cream was served.

Mrs. Purdon's guest were, Mrs. T. S. Davis, Mrs. W. L. John, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. H. H. Hill, Mrs. R. C. Abbott, Mrs. Hines, Mrs. Easterby.

Children's Home Society

Mr. Marcus C. Fagg, of Jacksonville, Superintendent of the "Children's Home Society", presented the cause of that institution to the members of the Presbyterian church Sunday morning and to the friends of the cause who were present. Mr. Fagg explained the inner workings and plans of the institution, giving a brief synopsis of the good work that has been accomplished and what they are still endeavoring to do, in the way of finding good homes for the orphans who come to them for protection.

Homes were secured for over three hundred children last year, and eighty have been provided with homes since January 1st.

Mr. Fagg stated that he was not here to take up a collection, but that any contribution, from those who felt like helping the cause, would be gladly accepted at any time, both present and future.

Delightful Recital

By special request, Mrs. Olga White Barnes, the highly gifted reader and impersonator, gave one of her delightful recitals at Epworth Inn, in Enterprise, Friday evening, which was very much enjoyed by the large audience.

Mrs. Barnes was assisted by Miss Coleman, of Enterprise, and Miss Mabel Bowler, who sang several delightful solos, accompanied by Miss Florence Frank. The following program as given by Mrs. Barnes and the young ladies who assisted her, will give some idea of the pleasure enjoyed by the citizens of Enterprise. Quite a party went over to Enterprise, with Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, to enjoy the recital.

Welaka Club

At the annual meeting of the Welaka Club held at the club rooms last week the annual election of officers occurred. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Keelor, and the reports from the different officers were most satisfactory, demonstrating that the Welaka Club has been most active in civic reform and in many other ways living up to the high ideals that have ever governed the actions of the members. Although comparatively a new organization among the clubs of the state the Welaka Club compares most favorably in the work accomplished.

Mrs. Keelor made an address to the members as retiring officer that was fraught with good advice and best wishes and in a review of the past year carried a message of love and good cheer to all the members.

The new officers elected for the coming year are as follows:

President, Mrs. J. W. Dickens; vice-president, Mrs. R. S. Keelor; second vice-president, Mrs. Forrest Lake; recording secretary, Miss Charlotte Keelor; corresponding secretary, Miss Madge Ward; treasurer, Mrs. Robert Newman; auditor, Miss Nonna Wylie; custodian, Mrs. H. P. Driver; press reporter, Miss Mell Whitner.

After the business meeting delightful refreshments were served by Miss Laura Fish assisted by Mrs. Morrow.

The Welaka Club will take up important measures this year and have a fine program mapped out that will redound to the credit of the club and of the city of Sanford. Press Reporter

SPORTING GOSSIP

Holden Park was the scene of quite a little activity last week. Mgr. Steegns was busy getting the outfield in condition and having the water drained out of center field. Father Wallace had a few energetic ball tossers out for practice. Considering the season and lack of condition the work was very fair, but there were not enough candidates out to make up a bridge gang.

Where are all those local ball players? If you anchor at one of Sanford's busy corners for about half an hour any afternoon you'll hear more base ball talk than you could possibly pack under one Stetson, and yet where it comes right down to brass tacks, to the getting out and working part, Julius, its nix.

There can't be a ball team without the players and all you young bucks, and old ones, too, for that matter, come out to the ball field and let Wallace put you through our paces. My hat is in the ring. How about yours?

Will Play at Kissimmee

Paul Weaver was in the city over Sunday from Kissimmee and stated that Kissimmee was very anxious to play ball with Sanford on March 27th, on which date Kissimmee will have a big barbecue and carnival. Sanford has not put a team in the field yet but will send down a few celery growers to endeavor to skin the cowboys.

CULLED FROM THE STATE PRESS

An Epitome of the Week's Most Important Happenings in the State's Domain.

About all of the stock for the new chaucqua building which is to be erected in Lakeland has been subscribed and plans will soon be ready from the hands of the architect. The stock amounts to $15,000, which will be used for the erection and furnishing of the building.

The real estate men at Miami have taken steps toward the organization of a permanent board, or real association. A committee has been appointed to draft by-laws and constitution for the new organization.

News comes from Punta Gorda that some of the fish in the waters there now are so large that the tackle fails to hold them. The tourists are having lots of sport fishing for the monsters.

The Sumter County Times, which has been published at Sumterville for over 30 years, has been moved to Bushnell, the new county seat.

A company to be perfected by capitalists of New York City are making plans to erect a plant in Tampa which will engage in the manufacture of brick.

Tampa is giving a welcome to the delegates and visitors upon the grand lodge Knights of Pythias for the domain of Florida, in the true Pythian spirit. The city has been turned over to the visitors, and everything is at their disposal. With the arrival last night of Grand Chancellor S. J. Hilburn of Palatka the scene began to be a busy one. At all stations and steamboat docks members of the local uniform rank were on hand to escort the visitors and give what information was desired.

Wednesday morning Charles L. Beardoff, superintendent of the Record Printing plant at St. Augustine, passed away at his home after an illness of six weeks of pneumonia.

Following his denial of the motion for a new trial, Judge Locke at Tampa sentenced J. J. Abbott, convicted of mail robbery, to one year and six months in the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga.

Col. W. M. Toomer has formally withdrawn from the race for congress from the second Florida congressional district.

Wednesday Club

The most enjoyable meeting of the Wednesday Club was the one held in Mrs. Frame Munson's studio, Wednesday afternoon. A large number of the club were present with several visitors, to enjoy the delightful program, prepared by Mrs. Munson.

After the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Mrs. Chase, the committee on Library Day and the Book Shower, made their report through their chairman, Mrs. G. B. Waldron.

The president announced that Mrs. C. R. Walker had invited the club to hold their Library Day and Book Shower meeting at her home, next Wednesday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. An interesting program has been arranged. The members of the club are expected to bring a book, to be given to the Sanford Library. Any good book of fiction, or one of the standard poets, will be acceptable. However, the choice is left to the donor. Mrs. Frank E. Jennings, of Jacksonville, will be present and will speak to the club on "The Influence of a well-rounded Club in a Community." Mrs. T. A. Newton and Miss Mabel Bowler will sing; with Miss Florence Frank accompanist. The business of the club finished, the president turned the meeting over to Mrs. Munson, who, in her usual charming manner, gave an intensely interesting synopsis of "Early Scandinavian Music and Folk Song"; with a comparative review of the music of Norway and Sweden—past and present. Mrs. Munson spoke in turn, of the music of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Iceland, which, combined, constitute the Scandinavian music.

In comparing the music of these countries mentioned, Mrs. Munson called attention to the fact, that the kind, style and nature, of the music of any country, was an invariable interpretation of the characteristics of its people. Mrs. Munson's talk was enjoyed as only her talks on music can be. The musical program which followed was all Scandinavian music, illustrative of the nature of the music of the above-mentioned countries, whose music is known as Scandinavian music. A brief sketch of Grieg, the famous Norwegian composer, was given by Mrs. Munson also, an interesting account of the wonderful musical inspiration permeating a whole community in a western town, which had its origin in the music-loving hearts of a colony of Swedes, who came to America years ago.

STORM IS SWEEPING SOUTHERN STATES

Stygian Darkness Said to Envelope Landscape and High Winds Are Raging Through The Country.

Advices from the local Western Union office today is to the effect that a terrific storm is raging over the Southern states, the Carolinas particularly feeling the effects of the Hurricane. Darkness like unto the blackest night prevails, and the Worst fears are entertained for the safety of the people. All the wires are down and no particulars of the storm can be learned at this time.

SMALL FORTUNE ON ONE ACRE

Net Returns Give Grower $2,849 From 1,247 Crates of Celery

Editor Times-Union: Another record in intensive farming as it is carried on in the Sanford celery delta was made here this week when Mr. W. M. Colbert marketed one and one-third acres of celery from which he cut a total of 1,247 crates of celery which brought 1. a. b. Sanford the sum of $4,253.75.

Mr. Colbert came here in the fall of 1911 and rented a small place and planted it to cucumbers and onions. He did so well with these crops that the close of the 1911 season he rented a larger place and prepared to grow celery and other vegetables. He set aside a space 180 by 310 feet which he prepared for celery. The crop was planted and nursed through the many rainy spells we had during the fall and winter and was brought up to a point of maturity and perfection that readily created a 1. a. b. market for it. Twelve hundred and four crates were sold at $3.50 per crate, while forty-three crates of culls brought $1.25 per crate, making a total of $4,253.75 for the product of that small area.

This is Mr. Colbert's first effort at growing celery. It is generally presumed here that if one can grow celery successfully he is a past master at growing the various other crops usual to a Sanford truck farm and many of the "old timers" here allege that it required years of experience, care and much thought to profitably conduct the celery growing business. However, it was left for a tenderfoot from Virginia to blow in here and produce the bumper crop of the delta in a little over a year after his arrival.

The question is frequently asked: What is Sanford irrigated land in a good state of till worth per acre? This is a hard question to answer when an acre will produce at the rate of $2,849 net as in the above case. It costs approximately 75 cents per acre to grow celery and deliver it to the cars. In the above case the rate of production was 1,936 crates to the acre, the cost of production $777, while the gross returns amounted to $3,626, leaving a net profit to the owner of $2,849, which is equal to 8 per cent interest on an investment of $35,613.

All of Sanford's acres do not produce in the above ratio, however, but still, when one does occasionally get in touch with hidden forces that will bring about such results as we have just enumerated, it is really hard to place an intelligent value on one of Sanford's sub-irrigated acres.—Times-Union.

Fire at Winter Garden

Winter Garden suffered another destructive fire Tuesday night with a property loss of about twenty thousand dollars, the hotel and four store-houses being in ashes, while the surrounding brick buildings are considerably scorched, being saved by the heroic efforts of the fire department.

The packing house of W. L. Story, the Orange Hotel, Daxd's store, Strozier's store and several smaller buildings were burned. The bank building was slightly damaged as was the stores of Dillard and Boyd and the South Apopka Supply Co. The loss will total $20,000 with partial insurance.

Has Fine Cucumbers

J. I. Hutchinson who is farming on the McBride place west of the city brought a cucumber vine to The Herald office yesterday that was full of bloom and had several small cucumbers already formed. He has 2 1/2 acres of cukes under cover and has no fear of frost and expects to begin shipping in a few weeks. He is an original cucumber grower from the Bushnell section and stated that he believes the Sanford section better adapted for cukes than any other part of the state on account of the irrigation system and location. He can raise cukes for the market about 30 days earlier here and expects to make a fine thing out of them. Success to you, Mr. Hutchinson!

The man who can come here and give us the real dope on variegated crops in a public benefactor and we hope you will clean up a fortune on cukes and make Sanford a cucumber section as well as a celery center.

Book Circle

The Book Circle was delightfully entertained by Mrs. D. L. Thraher, Thursday afternoon. The ladies enjoyed their dainty fancy work and a social afternoon together.

A delicious chicken salad, sandwiches, olives and lemon sherbet was served. Mrs. R. S. Keeler, Mrs. Charlotte Keeler, Mrs. J. A. Gerber, Mrs. J. F. Gonzalez, Mrs. C. E. Bell were charming visitors, invited by the hostess to meet with the circle. The members present were Mrs. Cruse Barnes, Mrs. A. P. Connelly, Mrs. Robt. Newman, Mrs. R. L. Peck, Mrs. Samuel Paleston, Mrs. M. H. Bowler.

Taking Religious Census

Preparatory to the Bass-Stepleton Revival to be held in the First Methodist Church, beginning May 26th, the following committee has been appointed, and is already at work, taking a religious census of Sanford and suburbs.

Mrs. James M. A. Mott, J. D. Jenkins, R. M. Mason, W. H. Williams, W. W. Abernathy, H. V. Perry, G. W. Spencer, Albert Seigh, J. A. Smite, M. Grow, Geo. Fox, Jr., Frank Miller, Clara Coffey, J. D. Roberts, Ernest Morrow, M. E. Moye, W. P. Fields, Misses Carrie Abernathy, Gene Wicker, Messrs. M. E. Moye, W. P. Fields.

ANOTHER BURGLAR'S VISIT

W. W. Abernathy Seems To Be a Lode-stone for Attracting Thieves

On Wednesday morning about day break Mrs. W. W. Abernathy who sleeps lightly was awakened by the gas jet being turned out and immediately roused her husband. As Mr. Abernathy sprang from the bed the outlines of the man were faintly visible going toward the door of the next room and upon his following, the intruder sprang through the window and made his escape down the alley that lies back of the house. Mr. Abernathy sounded the alarm and Officer Jones responded immediately and searched diligently for the burglar. He even kept up the search on other streets and while walking down Third street near the Bye Lo Hotel saw a man crouching down and trying to hide a bundle. Officer Jones called him to halt as he wanted to speak to him. The man jumped on a wheel and rode toward Park avenue. Jones fired several shots at him and the trail getting too warm the fellow dumped the wheel and disappeared from view. The wheel afterward proved to be Percy Packard's and was taken by the same man that robbed Mr. Abernathy's residence.

The officers have a good clue to the thief and expect to round him up shortly. This is the fifth time the residence of Mr. Abernathy has been visited by a burglar and he has lost money and his watch at various times. This time however he was too quick for the burglar and all he could get was a pocket knife.

Mr. Abernathy is beginning to think that the best way to get rid of the persistent thief is to kill him off and the next time he discovers him he will not have to call in the officers.

Good Time Assured

HAPPENINGS DURING THE WEEK

Here the Readers Will Find a Brief Historical Spring Flowing For Hurried Readers

Unless the neutrality laws of this country are more clearly defined it may be difficult for the United States to avoid a conflict with Mexico, President Taft is reported to have told a delegation from the senate and the house at the white house this morning. President Taft pointed out to the delegations, which was made up of the senate foreign relations committee and the Texas delegation in the house, and the neutrality laws of this country were not specific enough.

David A. Trousdale, an express messenger, balked the robbery of Southern Pacific passenger train, near Sanderson Texas where he trapped the two bandits who had held up the train and killed both of them.

Instead of being taken to the court room for preliminary trial on the charge of shooting her husband, Eugene H. Grace, at Atlanta Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace remains in her prison cell. The preliminary trial has been postponed until March 19, on account of Grace's condition.

Distress throughout England, Scotland and Wales from the coal strike is growing particularly in Wales, where practically the whole life of the people depends upon the coal industry. Authorities report many families in want since the strike.

Criminal Court

Monday morning criminal court convened with Judge Warlow on the bench and twenty-six cases on the docket. The jury included Messrs. George Conroy, E. W. Hansell, Nelson Carroll, J. D. Davidson, J. I. Anderson, R. D. Eunice, G. W. Smith, R. R. Whitten, J. T. Jacobs, C. F. Ross, W. W. Ross and A. Arnold.

The following sentences resulted: Will Butler, breaking and entering, two and one-half years in pen. W. Wofford, hog trespass, costs of suit. Frank Dudson, larceny, bond forfeited. Cleve Johnson, shooting into a public hall, seven years in pen. Walter Taylor, aggravated assault, $40 or sixty days. Sandy St. Clair, concealed weapons, $100 or four months. George Harris, larceny, thirty days in jail. Wm. Culbreath, selling liquor, $300 and six months jail, or a year in jail. I. C. Shivers, petit larceny, $50 or three months. Henry Brown, resisting officer, bond forfeited. Tom Reed, attempt to break and enter, $150 or eight months.

Madame Bouton Concert

The concert given by Madame Bouton on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Musical Club will long be remembered by its hearers.

The opportunity of hearing such an artist is rarely had in a city of Sanford's size and the audience in which were the representative local musicians showed their appreciation by their generous applause and insistent demands for the repetition of certain numbers.

Madame Bouton possesses a splendid stage presence and a glorious voice of fine range and timbre.

The program varied pleasingly from Old French to Art songs and Operatic arias, showing not only the singer's art and tone quality but excellent dramatic ability. The flexibility of her voice is marvelous and her execution bespeaks years of study. Miss Olive Hill as accompanist deserves great praise for her sympathetic work. She has good technic and interpreted the difficult music with much understanding.

A Social Program

At the Congregational church next Sunday night Rev. George B. Waldron will outline what he believes should be "A Social Program for Sanford" under the Men's Religion and Forward Movement. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and men are especially invited. Services begin at 7:30. Please not the change in time.

In the morning Mr. Waldron will speak on "Some Foolish People." Sunday school opens at ten. Professor Morris' Bible class is well worth attending.

HOSPITAL FIELD DAY

Realized Good Sum From Horse Show, and Financial Condition Is Good.

Mr. F. P. Forster, Chairman of the Finance Committee, reports to Mrs. G. H. Fernald, Treasurer of the Sanford Hospital Association, the result of the Field Day celebration as follows:

Gate Receipts	$173.09
Donations (Cash)	20.00
Net Proceeds from Programmes	273.65
Booths &c. under auspices of "Lend A Hand Society"	421.79
Fares,—automobiles	10.00
Disbursements, as per vouchers on file	$232.55
Check to the Treasurer	666.09
	$898.64
	$898.64

The Hospital Association now has on hand and loaned out the sum of $1,407.84. It is expected that the annual dues of the members of at least one dollar each will add about one hundred dollars to the above. As soon as we can get two other persons to give one hundred dollars each, as a donation to the Hospital, the eight one hundred dollar donations already conditionally subscribed will be promptly paid, and this will add $1,000.00 to the fund. The conditions of this donation is that we must have ten persons subscribing $100 each, before any of them are obliged to pay. When we get this, which will be soon I hope, we will have $2,500.00 in cash on hand, and by borrowing as much more from the Building and Loan Association, the Hospital will be promptly built. Who will give the two hundred?

M. F. ROBINSON, PRESIDENT.

Attend the annual meeting at the WELBORN BLOCK TUESDAY EVENING MCH. 12TH.

To Lecture Here

Next Wednesday evening Mrs. Cora Ransler will give a lecture at the Masonic Hall under the auspices of the Eastern Star. Subject "The Holy Land."
