Dykeman reportedly took money but did not light the gasoline. He then left the store only to be followed by a male customer of the store who was attempting to obtain Dykeman's license number.

Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough said after Dykeman saw he was being followed, he threatened the driver of the other customer with gasoline and the lighter as well.

School district ups standards for seventh and eighth graders

By VICKI DeSORMIER Housed Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - the de they've anticipated a few more failures along the way, school district officials are hoping their higher expectations for middle school students will lead to more successes in the long run.

The standards for promotion in the middle school pupil progression plan were raised at the start of this school year. Students in the sixthgrade are expected to maintain a 2.0 grade point average. In the seventh and eighth grades, they will merely be expected to pass.

Next year, seventh graders will also need to maintain the C average and eighth graders will also need to keep up that higher standard.

High schoolers are already expected to keep the 2.0 grade point average in order to pass.

We have quite a few students who have failed two out of the four grading periods for this year." Dr. Ron Pinnell, executive director of secondary education, said. "They are not going to be promoted under the current system if they don't have some remediation."

How close should bars and churches be?

By NICK PPEIFAUF Herald Stall Writer

SANFORD - There is an indication the city may lower its distance. requirements between businesses serving alcoholic beverages and churches. At the present time however, it is just that; an indication, not a done deal.

The matter was discussed extensively during Monday afternoon's Sanford City Commission work seasion. By a three to two consensus, commissioners suggested the city staff investigate lowering the distance from 2,000 to 1,000 feet.

Commissioner Whitey Eckstein started the discussion, saying hebelieved the city's ordinance requiring a 2.000 foot distance. "Is kind of unusual." He referred to a report from the city's Planning and Development Director Jay Marder indicating other cities have distances ranging from only 300 to TALLAHASSEE - Despite leaders' promises to keep their work "in the sunshine," the state House rules currently don't require the chamber's most important meetings to be open to the public.

Newly elected House Speaker Daniel Webster has promised public access to all parts of the chamber's workings, but his new rules don't address public access to the most influential groups within the new structure: the so-called "policy councils" that decide if and when bills make it to the House Goor.

"The councils should have open, noticed meetings," Sally Spener, head of Common Cause of Florida, told the House Rules, Resolutions and Ethics Committee on Monday.

The committee held a public hearing to solicit comments on the rules the House adopted after Republicans took control of that chamber last November for the first time in 122 years.

Rep. John Thrasher, vice chair of the rules committee and next in line for House speaker, said he and other GOP leaders fully intend for all meetings to be open to the public. The omission of such language is "probably an oversight," said Thrasher, R-Orange Park, and will be corrected before the rules are readopted on the first day of session March 4.

Only two people spoke at Monday's hearing — Spener and the League of Women Voters' Marcia Elder — and both largely praised the new rules, particularly the measures that limit how egislation can be amended on the House floor and in the final days of the session.

Elder recounted a story of a friend who worked as a lobbyist for the first time in last spring's session. She said he was able to get a legislator to lie on the House floor and misrepresent the effect of an amendment that actually gave his client favorable treatment.

"That's the way of getting bad legislation passed." she said. Spener said she also believes the new rules will help keep bad laws from being passed in the final, frantic hours of the session.

But she added that a number of glitches need to be fixed, particularly the language that deals with policy council meetings.

Although the rules clearly require that "committee" meetings be open to the public and scheduled with several days public notice, the rules make no such requirements of the 'policy councils."

'That was our concern." Spener said, adding that she hopes Thrasher's assurances are transformed into real changes before March 4. "We just would like to see that represented."

Miami takes first steps to recovery

MIAMI - Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay guided a state oversight board through a tense standoff between board members and Miami's mayor to gain approval of a $66 million recovery plan for the financially struggling city. But Florida's first oversight board left most of the hardest work for the five-year plan due April 15 - the nation's taxfiling deadline.

The board on Monday approved Mayor Jos Carollo's strategy for covering this year's 000 million deficit after the city rein-forced it with an extra 010 million to ensure the shortfall is covered. The board also required that the city provide a 04 million cash reserve by Sept. 30 — the end of the current flocal

Some board members had wanted a $13.6 million reserve fund because the city's finances have been volatile and ac-countants still haven't determined the quast each first to and ent of the treasury. They asked the major to came up with a concrete plan for that amount, for example by selling city

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE Migrant workers frozen out of jobs

Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - About 20.000 migrant farmers have lost harvesting jobs because of the crop freeze that wilted hundreds of millions of dollars worth of Florida vegetables, farmworker advocates say.

The problem didn't hit home until this week because many got jobs cleaning up and replanting right after the Jan. 19 freeze. Arturo Lopes, director of the Coalition of Florida Farmworker Organizations in Homestead, said Monday.

Now that work is mostly done and that pay has chied, Lopes said. "Friday is when the farmworkers have to pay their rent. A lot of them will be without money to pay." The freese idled up to 8,000 farmworkers in vegetable growing areas around Home-stead in South Dade County.

Lopes estimated. Including their family members, that leaves 30,000 people without a source of income.

Statewide, a "ballpark gucas" in that 75 percent of the migrant farmworkers in 20 counties hit by the freese are jobless, said Jeannee Elewick-Morrison of the Department of Children and Families' office of migrant services.

That would be nearly 20,000 hervesters without work and a total of 80,000 people without income, according to figures from Morrison, who is also director of the Governor's Council on Farmworker Affairs. Gov. Lewton Chiles has asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture to declare 20 central and south Florida counties lionoter areas

The state Department of Agriculture said 50 to 100 percent of the crops in those areas were destroyed, including tomatoes, green beans, squash, bell peppers, eggplant, sweet corn and succhini.

Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford estimated damage to Florida crops at nearly $300 million and asked for federal disaster aid.

"That's help for the farmers, not for the farmworkers," said Bob Blair of the United Methodist Committee on Relief.

which is seeking cash donation to provide temporary assistant to Florida farmworkers and the families.

Lopes said some workers w be able to qualify fo unemployment benefits if the employers are on record a having paid into the state' unemployment compensation fund on their behalf.

But many are paid on a cast basis without such recor-keeping and will not be eligible. he said.

Because some migrant workers are moving to different parts of the state to try to get citrus harvesting or other jobs. the state Department of Labor haan't been able to estimate how many will end up in unemployment lines.

Driving to work

It seems like almost every morning, radio traffic reporters tell us, "Traffic is tied up for everal miles because of an accident on Interstate-4 at the Lake Monroe Bridge." It happened again this morning.

Of course it isn't every day, but if you ask motorists using the highway to travel to work. they'll tell you it's getting much too common.

What is the cause? We can't say that it's because the interstate becomes narrower near the bridge, or find some way to blame the highway. (People seem prone to blame an inanimate object rather than themselves).

But let's look at the people who drive the Interstate-4 rush hour traffic on the way to work in the early morning hours. It appears an though they are doing everything EXCEPT driving to work.

Some are talking on their cellular phones. They are so important in life that they must 'check in" the minute they leave their homes, or begin to "make deals" right away.

Some have determined that they can sleep in a minute or two more if they cat breakfast while they drive. We find them flying along at 70 miles an hour munching away on a sausage biscuit.

Whether they are on the phone or biting into a biscuit, many are also trying to handle a cup of hot coffee.

Then there are a few who went out partying last night, didn't get enough sleep, and are half dozing off while they drive to work. When someone becomes sleepy, it's near impossible to maintain the alertness required to ma-neuver in a basi traffic. And things are probably not going to change. sim data

We don't believe the proposed rail service to run from the St. Johns into the Orlando area is going to resolve much of the traffic. People have become so attached to their cars they

Oil co. deals called into question

WASHINGTON - An unreleased letter sent to Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt last week charges that the government had no legal authority to strike a series of deals with major oil producers.

The controversy stems from a series of "global settlements" entered into by the Interior Department's Minerals Management Service. The actilements were designed to collect a portion of the unpaid royalties for oil that was pumped on federal and state lands.

Last week's letter - sent by Rep. Carolyn Maloney, D-N.Y. - is merely the latest salvo in a battle that stretches back more than two decades, and in which critics say the federal treasury has been robbed to the fune of nearly $2 billion.

Briefly, here's the background, as told to us by congressional Democratic sources familiar with the case:

In the mid-1970s, officials in California began complaining that oil companies had underpaid royalties that they owed for crude oil pumped from federal and state-owned land. The state claimed that the oil companies were paying royalties based on the "posted" price, rather than on the real market value, which was usually higher. The city of Long Beach successfully sued seven oil companies to recover missing royalties, yet the practice persisted for years.

The Reagan and Bush administrations never paid much heed to California's complaints, preferring instead to side with the oil industry, which didn't think it owed any money. California's claims were consistently denied by officials at the MMS.

But all that changed in 1994. when an inter-agency task force made up of investigators from Interior, Engergy and Commerce began reviewing the old California claims.

The turnabout started after pressure was applied by Maloney and the Project on Government Oversight, a non-partisan watchdog group. Last May, the interior Department released a report alleging that 10 different oil companies owe the federal government and the California state government $656 million in unpaid royalties dating back to 1978.

The controversy

series of 'global settlements'

In recent months, the MMS has begun sending bills totaling nearly $400 million to the companies for the unpaid royalties. But two of the biggest companies -- Exxon and Chevron -- can't be touched. The bills that were sent out will almost certainly be appealed by the companies. And it seems inevitable that the issue will be settled by the courts.

And that's where Maloney's letter comes in.

As the inter-agency task force began auditing the claims in 1994, MMS officials were quietly negotiating a series of global settlements, which netted the government just pennies on the tional Aunder terms of the agreements, neither the government nor the oil companies can reopen the case once the settlement is signed.

In the letter sent to Babbitt last week, Maloney claims the MMS never had the authority to negotiate settlements with the oil companies. She cites the Federal Claims Collection Act. which holds that the head of a federal agency. "may compromise a claim of the government of not more than $100,000 (excluding interest) ..."

Maloney adds that the actilements were invalid because some of them involved claims on Indian tribal land, though no Indian leaders were involved in the negotiations.

The only way Interstate-4 motorists are going to survive is if every one of them devotes his or her entire time behind the wheel to what is going on. Lane changes, sudden slowdowns, people entering the highway; these all need our complete concentration.

If you are so important you can't begin the day without making those phone calls (while driving), then make them at home before you leave. Get up early enough to eat breakfast before you leave the driveway.

DONNA BRITT

Crying, sty mother had called me into the living room, "He looks just like your brothert"

Wow, I thought. The J Spy guy looks like Derreill

That was so long ago. It was before I knew there could be places in a human soul that have wide and deep and stretch for miles, yet seldom are visited. Before Darrell became such a place.

I describe my older brotchr as a place rather than a person because he stopped being a part of my exterior life 20 years ago. His death in 1977 hurled him into an inner landscape wholly unprepared for him. I spent so long hurting there, so many years measuring and poking into the hole his death made inside me that I thought I would never rest.

Bill Cooky, I bet, foele he will never rest. State his non was killed Jan. 10, I-tike other members of a certain, terrible club-have wished to tell Cosby I understand. We have wanted him to know that as the years pass, even committed grievers create other landscapes--for me, a husband, children, and a career and the accompanying ge. The chasm of my brother has filled in enough that for months I can skip over it.

Then something trips me into the hole. Something like Ennis Cosby's murder.

Though it is presumptuous to feel 1 know some of what the entertainer's family is enduring, I cannot help it. Neither, I suspect, can a million other people.

The Cosbys have joined a chub my family joined years ago, that Michael Jordan joined after two mys stumbled upon his father asleep in his car. The club has neither perks nor privileges, yet has far too many members. Each has lost a son, a sister, some beloved relative to violence. Each wishes no one else ever had to join.

My brother Bruce was 19 when Darrell. 28, died after being abot by two Gary, Ind., police officers who said he had attacked them with a brick and a chain. An inquest exonerated the cops, both white, who later left the force in diagrace. My family will never know what really happened with my sentle brother, an aspiring comedian who had no criminal record.

Yet among his legacies, says Bruce, 38, is an exagerated respect for police: "I 'yes, str' them to death; talk them through my every move, saying, 'I am reaching toward my wallet, unless you'd rather do it."

price of moral controversy in America. We have been trained through these 24 years to believe that any deep conflict will come to blows--at least verbal, at worst, lethal.

But this year the anniversary came just two weeks after the question of assisted suicide was heard in the Supreme Court and in a rising public debate.

Aid-in-dying also is a debate cast in moral terms, a matter of life and death, right and wrong. Here too, advocates, clergy, lawyers, doctors, patients, line up on either side of the question. And here too, the Supreme Court is asked to determine what the Constitution says to a dilemma of our time. But how different is the tone surrounding these two moral conflicts.

There were, to be sure, pickets and protests on the Supreme Court steps the day of the assisted suicide appeal. On one side were folks calling themselves "Not Dead Yet." On the other side were supporters of assisted suicide, including the daughter of Jack Kevorkian's 19th patient.

Yet we did not hear opponents hurling epithets at Dr. Timothy Quili as he came to court after a public admission that he has assisted in a death. Nor did we see the sights of Jan. 22: Supreme Court steps dotted with police in riot gear.

The public discussion about the end of life has been civil, somber, respectful of complexity, humble in the face of life's uncertainties. These are not fighting words.

Why is there such a difference in the emotions swirling around pregnancy and dying? The beginning and the ending of life?

I suspect that it goes beyond the ideology called "pro-life." For one thing, dying an described by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, " is an issue every one of us faces, young and old, male and female." But pregnancy. and therefore abortion, is a woman's issue by its very biology.

As a woman's issue it is also tied up with all the possibilities and prejudices about women's liberty. A woman's power to decide clearly chilled the man in this year's pro-life march holding a sign warning the president: "Hey Bill, what if your mom didn't want you?"

Abortion is also and inexorably woven into sex. As Oloria Feldt of Planned Parenthood knows, "The issue of choice goes deep into people's worldview about the nature and purpose of sexualtiy."

About sex and pleasure, sex and punishment.

Yet there is another more subtle dividing point in the tenor of these arguments. Like many who write about abortion, I get my share of hate mail, angry voice mail and vitriolic e-mail. But the mail about physician-assisted suicide brings stories.

So too, in the public discussion about dying, there is respect for the complexity of experience.

A city map indicates the location would be within 1,000 feet of six churches.

He suggested the city help accommodate AMVETS by offering the lease of the PBA Building on Seminole Boulevard for a temporary facility until a more suitable location can be found.

It was pointed out however that the building has already been leased by the city to a church, which uses the facility one or two days each week on a temporary basis.

Eckstein was joined by Commissioners Brady Lessard and Veima Williams in supporting the reduction of the city requirement to 1,000 feet.

Mayor Larry Dale approached another question. "The city differentiates between businesses with just a beer and wine license, and those which serve hard liquor," he said. There is

City Attorney Bill Colbert said it would be possible to have separate zoning. "but you can't take this on a parcel by parcel basis." he added.

Although Commissioner Lyons had appeared to be leaning toward a reduction in the distance, he observed, "I still haven't heard any compelling reason to lower the distance requirement to 1,000 feet."

'But anything over 1.000 feet is causing an undue hardship on part of our business communiresponded Eckstein. ty,

Mayor Dale and he was not in favor of any reduction unless the change combined seliers of beer and wine with alcohol as well.

The discussion then centered on the next step. Should the commission vote on reducing the distance requirement to 1,000 feet, or should it be held up until further atipulations. nuggested by Mayor Dale, are included in an ordinance.

By consensus vote, the 1,000 foot reduction was favored by eioners Lessard Ech nmk tein and Williams. It was determined however, that a hearing on such an or-dinance would be held off until it could be finalized to include the distance reduction as well as inclusion of all types of alcoholic beverage sales.

An effort was made to make sure that as few teachers as possible were teaching out of field. Improvements have been made each year. During the last year, a 12 percent drop in the number of out-of-field teachers has occured.

"I'm just hoping the guy lives a good bit longer," Row said. "I'm nowhere near ready to give up Rosy just yet."

Row said that others have sked if Rosy might be used in the funeral procession - one man thought perhaps his ashes could be carried inside. Whatever the request, Row listens kindly. "One poor fellow who said he doesn't have many friends

Auto Theft Unit investigators often make presentations to community and civic groups on the topic of auto theft prevention.

"We're able to pick and choose those teachers who are qualified and certified for those posttions." Currently, there are 24 new teachers at 15 schools who are teaching out of their field, some for only a few periods a day.

"It's not as good as it seems." Wells said. "I think we're doing a good job of reducing the number (of out of field teachers). but that number is artificially low because it's just the new leachern."

In at least two cases, for example, a bi-lingual teacher who is certified in Elementary Education is teaching an ESOL (English for Speakers of Other Languages) class. In another case, a teacher certified to teach technical studies is teaching computer science.

"A lot of the teachers are only out of field for a period or two a day, so it's much better in that respect too," Wells noted. Teachers who are teaching out of field are required to be making an effort to become certified in the area in which they are teaching. In many cases teachers are making that effort.

The county has a list of 32 teachers who have completed the necessary course work to earn their certification in the area in which they are teaching out-of-field. They are merely waiting for the certification process to be completed - a process which takes at least 90 days.

The FBI and an attorney for the whistle-blower disagreed Monday night over whether the lab problems uncovered in the still-secret draft report could harm major prosecutions such as the upcoming Oklahoma City bombing trials.

The whistle-blower, scientist-agent Frederic Whitehurst, who was investigated for possible leaks to the press, was subjected to more severe interim action than the three other employees. They were criticized by the department's inspector general. who hired five scientists to help investigate Whitehurst's allegations that the lab was biased in favor of prosecutors, officiale said.

Volunteer of the Week

Her labors of love run the gamut

By SUSAN WENN Heraid Staff Writer

SANFORD - Jackie DuBose has volunteered for many years now and spread her kindness and generosity to numeorus organizations. Presently she works with the American Legion and Seminole Volunteer Enterprises Inc.

Although her efforts were once. extended to such groups as the Fleet Reserve, Habitat for Hu-manity, the RSVP Christmas Store and the Seminole High Booster Club, DuBose has found that her love lies in helping her two top priorities now. She shared that she "was one of the volunteers that helped lay sod when the new stadium was built at Seminole High School many years ago.

Working with the American legion for two years now. DuBose serves as the historian. "I take pictures of all the activities that we do at the Legion and other places," she said. "I take pictures when we are at the parade, the RSVP Christmas store and when we served Easter dinner at Rescue Mission."

She mentioned that she just finished an Octoberfest. Other efforts served by the American Legion were cited as "towel bibs for the patients in the V.A. Hospital in Gainesville."

bought 200 pair of socks to send them all kinds of favors."

A "bar bingo" was mentioned as a way that the American Legion also assists the other volunteer endeavor that DuBose does, Seminole Volunteer Enterprises Inc. "We have a bar bingo night," she said. "We have people bring a can of food to take to Seminole Volunteer Enterprises Inc. This way we can help people with food throughout the week instead of just twice a month."

Working with Seminole Volunteer Enterprise Inc. consumes some three days a month and 12 hour shifts for DuBose. "I enjoy my work," she said. "My main job is to cook for the volunteers. trustees and anyone that comes in. I do anything else that I can do. Sometimes i package, punch cards or do whatever who Jean Metta needs me to do."

DuBose said."I just like helping people. It makes me feel good to help somebody instead of just sitting around moaning and groaning. I like the people. We help the people that come in with food. We just recently gave out all kinds of vegetables. We always need volunteers."

Those interested in volunteering at Seminole Volunteer Enterprises Inc. may call 322-1520.

Protect ornamentals from the cold

Many different tropical and subtropical plants are found in a typical Florida landscape.

While tropical plants need to protected from be temperatures below 50 degrees F, subtropical plants can harden to withstand freezing temperatures. The ability of plants to tolerate freezing temperatures is influenced by temperature changes prior to a freeze. A gradual decrease in temperature over a relative period of time prepares kond the plants to withstand cold temperatures. Plants normally tolerant to low temperatures may be injured if a sudden decrease in temperature ocurs. Cold injury can occur to the entire plant or to plant parts. such as buds, flowers, fruits, trunks, stems or roots. Many plant parts can adapt to tolerate cold, but fruits and roots have little ability to develop cold tolerance. Containers: Plant roots in small containers can be frozen by low temperatures, but under the same conditions, roots of planta in the landscape will escape cold injury. Roots of plants in exposed containers can be injured by low temperatures and show no apparent damage until the plants are stressed at higher lemperatures.

Soil heat is source of heat. best preserved by mulches placed around plants protect the roots. Tertilisation: Most landscape plants are fertilized two or three times a year. Applications are usually scheduled in March and September in Central Florida. Late fall applications should be avoided as it can promote ultimely late flush of new growth. Fertilizer rates recommendations should be reduced in the fall because plant nutrient consumption declines during the colder months. Plants should receive in the fall about one third to one half the normal fertilizer heat will be released during the night thus helping to protect the roots of the plants. After a freeze, plants should be watered to provide water to the plants which may be losing water through transpiration and the water in the soil may not be available because it in frozen, this is especially true in container plants.

Covorings: Materials such cloth sheets, quilts and plastics can be placed over food conducting tissues under the bark. If scratching into the bark reveals black or brown tissues, continue the search until you find green tissues when scratched. Prune back to the live wood to promote healthy growth of the branches.

Cold injury to p Remove damaged portions of leaves but keep the green, but not injured portions of the leaves to maintain a high level

Parents of lost children sometimes need direction

DEAR ABBY: I work at the customer service desk at a popular tomer service desk at a popular shopping mall, where I see some very disturbing things. For exam-ple, lost children are brought to us until their parents miss them and seek help. It's not uncommon for parents to leave small children watchildren disclose the statements the watching a display, telling them, "Stay right here — I'm going to do a little ahopping." Children have little conception of time, and will sometimes panic, thinking they have been abandoned

When they finally locate their lost children, the parents get angry at the kids — often spanking them and verbally berating them for getting lost. Don't they realize that it's the adults' responsibility to keep their eyes on their child - and not the other way around?

Something else we see all too often is a parent telling the child, "If you don't behave, that policeman -or security guard - will get you." This makes children straid to approach a policeman if they need help. I have seen children as 0000 plete strangers to help them find their mommy rather than Security because they are afraid of police-

I don't have any children, but I feel lucky to be able to dry the even of lost children and help them find their parents. What if they asked for help from the wrong person? Like it or not, there are a lot of evil people out there just looking for the opportunity to abduct a lost child.

Abby, this may be too long to print, but I know you can shorten it and say it better. Perhaps seeing this in print will open some eyes.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law phones me daily. The calls are answered in case of emergency, but if I don't make an excuse to cut the conversation short, she can interrupt my day to the tune of 40 minutes or more.

Several years ago I asked her not to call so often. Much as I love family, I have friends, kids, hobbies, cooking - in short, a life. I call my own mother weakly, not daily. Even her own kide say she can never get enough. If you call her, it's not often enough; same for a visit, except you didn't stay long enough or eat enough food. She's retired now, so it's gotten worse.

MAITLAND - The Orangewood Christian Lady Rams (6-7) ran out of gas in overtime as it dropped a 69-63 decision to No. 13 ranked Miami Northwestern (15-1) Friday night before a packed house.

Orangewood led 19-9 after one period and 32-27 at halftime, but needed a 12-foot jump shot from freshman Kathryn Sterling to tie the score at 60-60 and force overtime.

The Rams ran into problems in overtime, however, as with four girls fouled out and another missing with an injury, they finished the game with only four girls on the floor.

Noelle Moore led Orangewood with 17 points and 20 rebounds.

Raiders get sour taste of No. 1

By DEAN OINTH Heraid Sports Editor

SANFORE - The Seminole Community College women's basketball team found out just how good the number one ranked team in the nation is as the local equad played tough but proved to be no match for Central Florida Community College in a 101-59 defeat in Mid-Florida Conference action Saturday at the SCC Health and Physical Education Center.

The Patriots from Ocala (22-0, 4-0 in the M-FC) came into the game leading the nation in scoring (122.4 points per game) and featured two of the top eight individual scorers in the nation.

The Raiders (17-6, 3-1 in the conference) did a super job on the nation's No. 2 scorer. Monica Echeverria, holding the guard to only five points (on a 26.1 points per game average). But the same could not be said for the No. 8 scorer in the country, Conswella Sparrow. who punished SCC for 39 points. The big center hit 10 of 21 from the floor and 12 of 19 from the free throw line.

For good measure, she also pulled down a game-high 15 rebounds, one better than teammate Cabezas, who hauled down 14 boards.

CFCC, which led 53-33 at halftime, also had Abrlic (14 points). Nicholson (12) and Jackson (12) score in double figures.

Doing the damage for the Raiders were Daungi Carter (15 points, six rebounds, two blocked shots). Charlotte Griffin (10 points, three rebounds, four assists, six PATRIOTS INI. BAIDERS IN

Jerks not welcome in this league

LONGWOOD - On Wednesday mornings. Nelson "Hap" Hazard and his friends go to a ballfield to play "two."

Men in their 60s and 70s once again boys with gloves and bats and spiked shoes.

This is their day, Wednesday - 52 weeks a year. God forbid it rain. But even so, it wouldn't stop the boys from getting in their doubleheaders at the Seminole County Softball Complex in Longwood.

Some drive all the way from Kissimmee or Port Orange. DeLand and Debary. Sanford and Lake Mary.

The first games begin at 10 a.m.

The players from from eight teams are there much carlier, though, eager to limber up, toss the ball around, hit pepper or take some BP.

How marvelous their joy and verve. "It's a sweet scene" mays 73-year-old Hap Hazard from Fern Park, illustrious player-manager of the Over-the-Hill Gang. Sweet, indeed.

"We play for fun," Hazard explains. "Someone may holler. "hey butterfingers" if a guy boots one but nothing stronger. No griping, no finger pointing."

If there's a rule it's: Jerks not welcome. "Had to let a fellow go last week." Hap Hazard said, wincing. "Had too big a mouth."

In an age when big-leaguers are pulling down selaries of $6 million - even $7 million - the fellows on the Over-the-Hill Gang pay $1 for the privilege to play their ballgames each Wednceday.

"Pretty good deal, heh?" Hazard says.

The money helps pays for the field and the umpires - who are much younger than the players.

"I think - well, I know for a fact the umpires get a kick out of being with us." Hazard said. "We don't cause a whole lot of fuss. We're out to have fun. We play hard but who wine doesn't matter in the long run. There are no league standings.

'We'll come off the field with a sense of ac-compliahment. Thankful we have our health and can be together doing something as next as playing ball. It's an exuberant feeling.

Of course, there are laughs and memorable moments.

One of Hap Hazard's players, catcher-first baseman Jim Whitmore, is 80-years-old.

"Jim runs like a jack rabbit." Hazard said. "You won't believe how fast he is at 80.

"Doesn't hit the ball very hard but he can run. He won't get the ball out of the infield. Dribblers. you know.

What he tries to do is just place the ball down the third base side and run on his way to first. They usually don't come close to getting him out. Jim's too fast. Like I said, he runs like a jack rabbit."

Hazard gets a little teary-eyed recalling what the Over-the-Hill Gang did for Jim Whitmore on his 80th birthday.

"Everyone autographed a softball for him." Hazard said. "Simple, I suppose but it was from the heart, and Jim really appreciated it.

"As we were celebrating with Jim, one of the umpires came up to me and said. 'you guys are great," "Hazard said.

Nice call by the ump, we have to agree. These guys are great.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was upset to read the letter you published from an irate physician who said you were wrong to state that home births are safe.

It's scary how some physicians do not keep up with their own profession. Studies from the National Association of Childbearing Centers have proved that out of hospital births are no more dangerous for the average healthy mother than are in hospital deliveries, which was exactly the point you made in your column. As a certified nursemidwife, I know this to be true.

The irate doctor should not attempt to substantiate his incorrect claims with outdated facts. (Home birthing was more risky decades ago than it is now, because of technological advances, such as ultrasound examinations.) You are the one with the correct information. Keep up the good work'

DEAR NURSE MIDWIFE I couldn't have said it better myself.

DEAR DR. GOTT I have read your column in my local newspaper for years and have been helped -- and educated - on many occasions, However, this newspaper does not carry your picture.

Recently, I was visiting in another state and was gratified to read your column in another newspaper that published your picture. Now I know that you're not an old geezer but a young man with a vast source of medical knowledge.

DEAR READER: Thanks for the compliment but, alas, the picture is misleading. I really am a geezer.

It is rare that bridge articles annoy me. But the one that related this deal touched a sore spot. The writer mentioned that his partner was "playing the hands well." True, he gave the defenders the maximum chance to go wrong, but why did West - or East not find the right answer?

Here's how the deal paneod out. It is relevant only because it comes from a pair event, in which every trick is vital. Yet the principle is important. South opened with a weak no-trump, showing 12-14 points. North, the scribe, jumped to game.

West led the heart seven: two, queen, king, First, declarer ran his six club tricks, discarding the heart jack and two spades from hand. Then, he took his four diamond tricks, brin everyone down to two cards. What do
