Senior Fair starts today

LAKE MARY — Marjorie Seay and Paulie Stevens of Lake Mary are local representatives at the Senior Fair being held at the Central Florida Fairgrounds in Orlando. Each of the women are displaying art work in the water color division.

The Senior Fair opened at 10 a.m. today and ran through 3:30 this afternoon. In addition to the Senior Art Show, the one-day event also included a Senior Employment Fair, free health screening, other activities, exhibits and entertainment.

Stevens, who heads the Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce Seniors Committee, said the Senior Fair originally was centered on a four county area, Brevard, Seminole, Orange and Osceola, but Brevard has since broken away for their own events, and the fair is now a tri-county event.

When asked about her chances in the competition, Stevens replied that "It's not so much a matter of competition, rather it is designed to show what we seniors are doing with our leisure time."

The fair is sponsored annually by the Older Americans Committee of the area's Agency on Aging.

Sylvan Lake developer wins concessions from county

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners Tuesday night made concessions to developer Mark Arnold on two agreements he made with the county in 1988 in return for approval of his controversial Sylvan Lake development.

Although a December 1988 agreement between Arnold and the county states there shall be no access from the 220-home development to Lake Sylvan except from the lakefront homes, Arnold asked commissioners Tuesday to allow non-lakefront residents to use non-powered boats as well. Commissioners allowed all Sylvan Lake residents to use the beach and swim in the lake, but not to use boats of any kind.

Commissioners also allowed Arnold to use an estimated 14 acres he previously agreed to conserve.

Although the project was reviewed and approved by the Florida Department of Community Affairs because it lies within the state Wekiva River protection zone, a state DCA official said there is little the state can do if the county modifies a state-approved agreement.

"We reviewed it and assumed the county and the developer would do what they said," state planner Jim Farr said.

In 1988, Sylvan Lake, then known as Sylvan

Lake, was one of the most controversial development proposals in the county. The 334 acres east of Lake Sylvan, which lies west of Interstate 4 south of State Road 46, is in the fringes of the newly established Wekiva River Protection Zone. The protection zone required that all development must maintain the rural character of lands near the river.

The project was also controversial because it lies within the Markham Woods Road area, where homes had been traditionally built on one-acre or larger lots. Arnold proposed to "cluster" homes on one-third acre lots or larger to preserve the wetlands on the site. Although the average density

Expressway delays raise for director

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The majority of the Seminole County Expressway Authority members balked at giving expressway director Gerald Brinton a 10 percent pay raise Wednesday, saying they wanted to see what other expressway authorities pay their director first.

The increase, sought by expressway chairman Fred Streetman and supported by members Sandra Glenn and Bob Sturm, would increase Brinton's current annual salary from $67,936 to $74,729 yearly.

"I'm not sure at this time we should jump into that kind of increase," said authority member Jennifer Kelley.

Kelley's caution was supported by authority members Bettye Smith, Pat Warren, and Mary Lou Miller.

Streetman countered saying Brinton has taken the Seminole County Expressway from an idea to the verge of construction. The authority hopes to begin construction of the 12-mile tollroad from State Road 426 to U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford by November.

Glenn said Brinton may be the only expressway executive in the southeastern United States who has a road project at the current stage of development and has his same responsibilities. Except for an executive secretary, Brinton is the only employee of the authority. He oversees all expressway functions from design and bond financing to lobbying efforts in Tallahassee.

By comparison, Bill Gwynn, executive director of the Orlando-Orange County Expressway Authority, which currently operates 52 miles of expressway and is designing about 30 additional miles, earns $99,000 annually. He has two deputy directors with responsibilities for planning and engineering, who earn $60,500 and $65,450 annually respectively.

The Jacksonville Transportation Authority operates 32 miles of non-toll expressway, but a rail and bus mass transit system. The JTA executive director, Miles Francis Jr., earns $81,400 each year.

Francis has a deputy director who oversees JTA financial aspects, earning $60,000. Francis has a director of engineering who oversees construction of the expressway and "Skyway" elevated rail system, earning $61,000 annually, and a mass transit director who oversees operations of the bus and Skyway system, earning $50,000 yearly.

But other authority members said they did not question Streetman's evaluation of Brinton's work, they were uncertain if a nearly $75,000 a year salary was justified.

Florida orange industry targets fresh fruit market in national ads

United Press International

LAKELAND — The Florida Department of Citrus is considering spending $5.7 million on a national advertising campaign to convey shop press that Florida oranges are every bit as good as their California counterparts.

The advertising campaign, in 1990 and 1991, would be aimed at cutting into the California navel orange market, which produces more than three-quarters of all fresh oranges eaten in the U.S., officials said Tuesday.

About 95 percent of Florida's oranges are squeezed into juice. Florida Department of Citrus Executive Director Dan Gunter said the industry may be able to expand the amount of Florida fresh fruit that consumers eat if it can improve on the oranges' image.

"We have found in research that the most serious problem facing Florida oranges in the marketplace is that they are usually not bright

Legislators negotiating budget tax compromise

By MICHAEL MOLINE
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — The House and Senate have opened negotiations toward achieving a $725 million tax compromise needed to finance their planned $26.4 billion state budget and end the 60-day regular session of the Legislature on time.

No agreements were struck during morning and evening conference committee meetings, but House negotiators said they might be prepared to accept higher taxes on bar tabs, hefty new impact fees on vehicles brought into Florida, and corporate fees in the Senate tax package.

Senate negotiators, meanwhile, shifted toward the House's plan to raise about $41 million in higher auto tag and drivers license fees.

The stage was set Tuesday when House Speaker Tom Gustafson and Senate President Bob Crawford agreed upon the bottom line needed to keep the state running in the fiscal year that begins July 1.

Although the House and Senate have agreed upon where they want to go with new taxes, they differ widely about how to get there.

Senate Finance Chairman Tim DeFuria, R-Indian River, said a large date of delays has been set for reaching a compromise.

"We have to look at what the bottom line revenue needs of this state are," said House Finance Chairman Anne McKenzie, D-Fort Lauderdale, pointing to a summary of the House and Senate tax plans. "It will take a mix of what is here to raise the proper amount of money."

The negotiators also wanted to bring Gov. Bob Martinez into the talks, worried that their eventual compromise could contain taxes or fees unacceptable to a governor who has already vetoed the Legislature's transportation package over a 4-cent increase in the state gasoline tax.

Major disagreements between the House and Senate bills include:

The House would boost the tax on cigarettes by 9 cents per pack and also increase taxes on other tobacco products including cigars to 45 percent. The Senate wants an increase of 9 cents on cigarettes only.

The Senate would impose a 3 percent use tax on autos and light trucks brought into Florida by new residents and upon which Florida sales tax has not been paid. The House envisions a flat fee of $100 for such registrations.

The Senate wants a 10-cent per drink surtax on alcoholic beverages served in bars on certain days of the year. The House wants a 10-cent per drink surtax on all days of the year.

Offshore drilling report disclosed

WASHINGTON — A Cabinet-level task force has recommended President Bush indefinitely delay deciding whether to permit oil drilling in three new areas off California and Florida until more scientific studies are conducted. It was revealed Wednesday.

Details of the panel's recommendations, kept confidential since its report was submitted to Bush in early January, were publicly disclosed in copies of the report obtained by Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., and distributed by her to reporters.

Bush appointed the task force last year to re-evaluate Interior Department plans to sell drilling rights to three vast tracts of the sea floor — located off the southern and northern California coast and the Florida Keys.

For Florida, the report recommended three options that ranged from suspending the "lease sale" until at least 1992 to not allowing leasing "before 2002, if ever."

Bathing suit ban rewritten

SARASOTA — City commissioners have rewritten an anti-nudity ordinance that had banned skimpy bathing suits after five beachgoers were arrested for displaying buttock cleavage.

The commission voted 3-2 Tuesday to do away with the part of the ordinance that required residents to cover "up what the law called the "anal cleft."

The action came after the arrests of four men and a woman last week for wearing T-back bathing suits on Sarasota's secluded North Lido Beach.

"(The portion of the ordinance) doesn't make any sense to me at all," said Commissioner Jack Gurney, who joined Mayor Kerry Kirschner and Commissioner Fred Atkins in voting to rewrite the ordinance.

They said it didn't make any sense to restrict bathing attire when other public beaches do not do so.

Commissioners Lou Ann Palmer and Gene Pillot voted to leave the ordinance intact.

Prison teachers lobby against cuts

TALLAHASSEE — About 150 teachers in the state corrections system rallied outside the state capitol Wednesday, protesting job cuts being considered by the Florida Senate.

One of the protesters was Sheryl Walden, who teaches English and math to 15 inmates at River Junction Correctional Institute in Chattahoochee. She is the corrections teacher of the year for 1990.

A management review team has recommended the River Junction Institute hire at least two more teachers, but Walden said her own job is in jeopardy because of budget cuts being considered by the Florida Senate.

She also said more teachers are needed to meet the needs of hundreds of illiterate and semi-literate inmates in the state prison system, as state law requires.

"There's no way we can do what the law mandates right now," said Walden, who is also the 1990 corrections teacher of the year.

But instead of getting more teachers, the program is facing job cuts.

Mathis Dairy recalls milk products

ATLANTA — Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin said Wednesday Mathis Dairy has recalled some milk products after antibiotic residues from the penicillin family were found in samples of the products.

Irvin said the residues were found Tuesday in milk designated for home delivery routes in Georgia and Florida.

As a result, the company has withdrawn all half-and-half and skim milk products with a May 30 date in the two states. All other Mathis products were found to be free of residues.

Irvin said inspectors in Georgia and Florida are checking to make sure all the products are removed. Customers who bought any of the milk can obtain a refund from Mathis Dairy by calling 1-404-289-1616.

He said the milk was produced on the Maastock-owned farms located in the Montezuma area. Two tankers of milk were found to contain the antibiotic residues of Beta-Lactam of the penicillin family, Irvin said.

Son of gubernatorial candidate missing

OLDSMAR — The 6-year-old son of Republican gubernatorial candidate Anthony Martin was reported missing Wednesday after he failed to meet his aunt after school, Pinellas County Sheriff's deputies said.

Sgt. Wallace Colcord, a spokesman for the sheriff's office, said the child, Anthony Martin IV, was seen getting into a late-model silver or gold car driven by an unidentified woman at the Oldsmar Christian Elementary School about 3:30 p.m.

The sheriff's office issued a national bulletin on Martin's disappearance, calling it a "possible parental abduction."

"He is possibly in the company of his mother, Helga Gehrke, who also goes by Steward and the possible destination is Shokan, N.Y.," said Colcord.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

'Stop questioning young victims'

United Press International

JACKSONVILLE — A circuit court judge has issued a ruling that could affect criminal trials statewide, saying defense lawyers do not have the right to take sworn statements from young crime victims and prosecution witnesses prior to trial.

The ruling came Tuesday from Circuit Judge R. Hudson Oliff in a case against Cleveland Lee Hines, 51, who is accused of assaulting seven children in Jacksonville last year. Oliff ruled that taking statements from the children violates their right to privacy under the Florida Constitution.

"These young victims and young witnesses... have a right to privacy," Oliff said.

Prosecutors have long contended that taking such depositions prior to trial is traumatic for youthful victims and wit-

Death-row inmates say stop executions

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Attorneys who help defend death-row inmates plan to file suit next week to vacate all death sentences now pending in Florida because of this month's botched execution of Jesse Tafero.

Jay Nickerson, who is an associate with the state-funded office of Capital Collateral Representatives, said Tuesday the suit will be based in part on the Eighth Amendment, which bars cruel and unusual punishment.

nesses, and is a violation of privacy. The ruling was also applauded by an attorney who represents the seven victims.

"I'm glad to see that he (Oliff) has recognized the full extent of the right that was granted by the Constitution," said attorney Don Lester.

Oliff's action does not prohibit the taking of depositions in all state cases. But that could be the outcome if appeals courts uphold it, said prosecutors.

"We hope this has far-reaching impact," said Assistant State Attorney Dale Campion.

Florida is one of only about a dozen states where the deposition practice has been allowed. But prosecutors have not been allowed to take pre-trial statements from defense witnesses.

"It looks like it's limited to one kind of witness," said Chief Assistant Public Defender Bill White, who said he plans to appeal Oliff's ruling.

CLEANING THE AIR

Indoor Clean Air Act threatened

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Two anti-smoking legislators said Wednesday they would rather scuttle the state's new Clean Indoor Air Act than accept an amendment that forbids employers to reject job applicants who smoke.

Sens. Jennie Malchon, D-St. Petersburg, and Tom McPherson, D-Fort Lauderdale, said no one has a constitutional right to smoke. Therefore, they said, employers wanting to hold down health-insurance costs should continue to be allowed to discriminate against smokers in hiring.

The two lawmakers were joined by representatives of the Florida Medical Association, Heart Association and Lung Association during a brief news conference at the Senate's front doors. Malchon and McPherson are co-sponsors of a bill (SB 516) that would expand the 1985 clean-air act by requiring restaurants seating more than 50 people to set aside at least 35 percent of dining space for non-smokers.

It would also ban smoking in common areas of condominiums, such as lobbies, corridors and conference or recreation rooms.

The Senate Regulated Industries Committee last week added the amendment forbidding employers to refuse a job to a smoker, simply because the applicant smoked. McPherson and Malchon said they would rather kill the whole clean-air package than accept the hiring-discrimination ban.

"That single amendment makes the bill unacceptable to us," said Malchon. "This is a health issue, not a civil rights issue. There is no constitutional or basic right that people have to smoke."

She said some studies have shown that it costs an employer $4,000 more per year — in hospitalization insurance, lost work time and health effects on non-smoking coworkers — to hire a smoker. Malchon said the amendment directly conflicts with a law enacted last year requiring all fire fighters to be non-smokers for one year prior to hiring.

Teen pregnancy bill wins OK in state House

By JEFF SCHWEERS
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Legislation requiring sex and family education at all grade levels and promoting school-based health clinics passed by a 2-1 margin out of the House Wednesday.

Debate on the controversial bill (CS-CS-HB 1789) was limited to two minutes per side before the 76-40 vote, a day after opponents attempted to strip the bill of the proposed $6-million grant program for local school clinics failed.

"If you are truly concerned about kids, remember the thousands of kids in this state who need medical care and that's all this bill does," said Rep. Lois Frankel, D-West Palm Beach, the bill's sponsor.

Opponents said they had no problem providing health care to needy children, but were opposed to the school clinics that would treat everything from sore throats to pregnancy, and to the sex-education program.

Rep. Stephen Wise, R-Jacksonville, argued that national studies have showed that providing contraceptives to teenagers does little to reduce the pregnancy rate, but supporters questioned his information.

"The social situation for our children today has reached combat levels," said Rep. Ben Graber, D-Coral Springs.

Rep. George Albright, R-Ocala, said the two issues that the bill deals with are providing health care for children who don't have access to proper medical treatment and providing accurate information to help children make responsible decisions about sex.

U.S. House gives its OK to far-reaching clean air bill

By GEORGE LOBENZ
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Congress took another big step toward cleaner air with House passage of legislation that would halve acid rain emissions, limit toxic releases from factories and cut smog-causing pollution from cars and industry.

The far-reaching clean air bill, approved by a 401-21 vote Wednesday night, would impose at least $21 billion per year in additional pollution reduction costs on a wide array of industries, ranging from giant chemical and steel plants to the corner dry cleaner or gasoline station.

States ban on cigarette machines cited

UPI report

WASHINGTON — Health Secretary Louis Sullivan, escalating his anti-smoking crusade, plans to urge states to ban cigarette vending machines, sources said Wednesday.

Sullivan is scheduled to present his idea Thursday to the Senate Finance Committee, which is holding a hearing on children's access — legal or illegal — to cigarettes.

Forty-four states and the District of Columbia have laws prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors.

Children's rights amendment passes committee test

By MICHAEL MOLINE
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — A proposed constitutional amendment extending to children the right to basic needs such as food, shelter and medical attention ran into a firestorm of criticism Tuesday in the Senate Judiciary-Criminal Committee.

The proposal by Sen. Eleanor Weinstein, D-Palm Beach, would guarantee children's right to "healthy minds and health bodies" and "guarantee freedom from want." It also guarantees their right to food, clothing, protection from disease and exploitation, and to have responsible adult supervision.

Weinstock said the idea was to force the state to at least seriously consider Florida's neglected children. But critics feared the proposal would interfere with parents' rights.

"We're going to guarantee freedom from want?" sneered Sen. Dick Langley, R-Clermont. "I want a motor scooter? I want an AK-47 (assault rifle)?"

"This is probably the most anti-family bill I've ever seen," Sen. Fred Dudley, R-Fort Myers, said heatedly.

The proposal was ultimately approved on a 5-4 vote. If it clears the Legislature, it would have to be ratified by the voters.

Weinstock noted that Japan adopted similar language during the 1950s.

"I would think it might be time for Florida," she said.

The same committee defeated by a 7-3 vote a proposed seven-day grace period in which mothers who surrender their newborns to adoption would be permitted to reconsider and keep their offspring.

Critics said the bill (SB 1803) would let women renege on private agreements in which adoptive parents pay their medical bills.

But Sen. Marlene Woodson-Howard, the sponsor, said similar language is already in the state's law regulating surrogate parenting agreements and should extend to other adoptions.

Judge's error may provide killer's break

United Press International

ORLANDO — A man accused of shooting a high school cheerleader, leaving her with severe brain damage, could have 33 years knocked off his sentence because a judge failed to justify the prison term on time.

Circuit Court Judge Michael Cymmanick was to resentence Efram Law, 23, Wednesday.

On Jan. 28, Cymmanick sentenced Law to 50 years in prison after the defendant pleaded guilty to attempted first-degree murder for shooting Tarsha Anderson, 16, three times in the head on June 25, 1988.

That prison term exceeds state sentencing guidelines by 33 years, and Cymmanick did not offer a justification for the extra time until April 27.

Three weeks ago, the Florida Supreme Court ruled that a judge who fails to justify a long sentence at the time he issues it could be forced to resentence the defendant only within the guidelines.

That would reduce Law's sentence to 12 to 17 years.

"You take a man that cold-bloodedly shot her and made her a vegetable for whatever life she has left and because of a technicality, he could get off," said Orlando Police Chief Danny Wilson. "To me, this is the kind of thing that leads to vigilantes. People will say, 'There's no justice.'"

Because the state attorney general has asked the Supreme Court to reconsider its ruling, it is not final.

Rape evidence against Powers not admissible

FORT MYERS — A circuit judge ruled Wednesday that prosecutors may not introduce evidence about three previous rape convictions at Robert Power's first-degree murder trial.

Power, 29, of Kissimmee, is accused of raping and slashing the throat of Angeli Bare, 12, who was slain Oct. 6, 1987, in a field near her south Orange County home.

Wednesday was the second day of jury selection at Power's trial, which was moved from Orlando to Fort Myers because of extensive publicity. A jury was seated shortly after 6 p.m. and opening statements were scheduled to begin Thursday morning.

Power has already been sentenced to 10 consecutive life terms for the rapes of a Longwood woman and two Kissimmee sisters, crimes that took place within a few days of Bare's killing.

Prosecutors had asked Orange County Circuit Judge Gary Formet to allow them to present jurors with information about those crimes.

Assistant State Attorney Phil Townes said the evidence would show similarities in the way the victims were bound and gagged, the kind of weapons used and the locations chosen for the attacks.

However, Formet denied the request.

Prosecutors are expected to rely on hair samples found on the girl's bed and the accounts of two people who saw Power in the field where Bare's body was found.

Power says he is innocent.

Ripoff in the national parks

At Yosemite National Park, MCA, the private company that runs the hotels and other concessions, currently pays the government less than one percent of its revenues for an exclusive contract. And Yosemite isn't the only place where the park service has virtually given away the store. Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan wants to put an end to those sweetheart deals; but he's running into stiff resistance from — where else? — the companies that have been profiting from them.

An unpublished Interior Department audit found that in 1988, concessionaires in the national parks took in $490 million but only paid $12.5 million in franchise fees — a shamefully low 2.5 percent rate of return for the taxpayers. Overall, the report estimates, the government lost $80 million in revenues between 1984 and 1988 because of these "inadequate" fees, and that it will be shortchanged another $100 million over the next five years unless the contracts are overhauled.

Although the concessionaires dispute some of those estimates, and though they point out that many of the agreements can't be rewritten until they expire, no matter how much money the government is losing, they conceded there's a need for higher fees in general. That doesn't mean they are all ready to embrace the 22 percent rate of return that the park service recently negotiated at Yellowstone Park. But it's not the fees so much as some of Lujan's other ideas for reform that worry them most.

Lujan wants to put relations between the parks and the concessions companies on a more equal footing. Currently each park negotiates its own contract. Most park rangers, however, aren't trained to deal with the professional negotiators and high-powered lawyers that these companies send to the bargaining table. To protect the public interest, Lujan wants to give individual park managers more of the backup they need.

At the same time, he wants to open the contracts for truly competitive bidding. Now anyone can bid when a contract comes due for renewal, but the rules give incumbent concessionaires the inside track. He wants shorter terms for new contracts — no more 20-year deals. And he wants to make clear that anything the companies build in the parks in the future will belong to the public. Under many contracts today, even if a concessionaire goes out of business, the government has to buy back its facilities or the company can sell them to someone else.

Lujan is on the right track. With MCA leading the pack, however, the concessionaires so far have displayed much of the same resistance to reform that has become all too familiar in MCA's management of Yosemite. To stop that sort of arrogance, Congress and the administration must make it clear they are going to stand with the secretary, for the sake of the parks, the public and the budget.

SSC on financial collision course

WAXAHACHIE, Texas — One local businessman has named his auto body shop Super Collider Collision Repair. A nearby restaurant proprietor is doing a thriving business in Collider Burgers — a concoction of barbecue beef, melted cheese and fried onions.

Here in the rolling cattle and cotton country south of Dallas, everybody from honest entrepreneurs to land speculators to fast-talking wheeler-dealers is looking forward to making a profit off a Texas-sized piece of scientific equipment — a particle accelerator known as the Superconducting Super Collider.

Among residents of Waxahachie, whose business district is dominated by an unforgettable one-of-a-kind Romanesque Revival courthouse, the SSC is viewed as an economic bonanza. For people living elsewhere in the country, however, the SSC — financed principally by the federal government from public funds — will be a very expensive project of dubious value.

The SSC's principal purposes are to produce an improved understanding of matter and energy and to learn more about the "Big Bang" many scientists believe gave birth to the universe 15 billion years ago.

Its promoters claim the project also will advance technologies ranging from "the Dick Tracy watch with a telephone" to magnetic resonance imaging, which enables physicians to view with unprecedented clarity the inside of the human body without using either surgery, X-rays or even CAT scans.

Initially proposed by the Department of Energy in the mid-1980s, the SSC was originally estimated to cost $3 billion to $4 billion. That price rose to $4.4 billion in 1987, to $5.9 billion in 1988 and now stands at $8 billion with future increases likely.

The SSC will consist of an oval tunnel 54 miles in circumference surrounding Waxahachie. Inside that ring, 150 feet beneath the surface, physicists will guide two beams of protons traveling in opposite directions and accelerating to a phenomenal 200,000 revolutions per minute — almost the speed of light.

For people living elsewhere, the SSC will be a very expensive project of dubious value.

When those beams meet in a controlled collision at a very high energy level, scientists can examine the subatomic particles — quarks and leptons, muons and gluons, protons and neutrons, photons and bosons — released by the force of the impact.

The SSC will be the biggest, but it certainly will not be the only, particle accelerator. The Fermilab Tevatron in Illinois and the Stanford Linear Accelerator in California have been operational since 1983 and 1987, respectively.

Perhaps more significantly, the CERN Large Electron-Positron Collider in Switzerland, operated by a European scientific consortium, went on-line last year. It is far larger than the two U.S. facilities, but the SSC will be much bigger than it.

That global, very-high-technology version of keeping-up-with-the-Joneses leads to an inescapable conclusion: The SSC is being built not because the world needs another atom-smashing accelerator but because of jealousy within the scientific community.

"If considered on its scientific merits, the SSC would be relegated to the lower ranks of an overflowing list of unmet needs in and around American science," says Daniel S. Greenberg, editor and publisher of Science & Government Report, an authoritative Washington, D.C., newsletter.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Poor impaled on cutting edge

MADISON, Wis. — The children, school-tripping through this elegant statehouse, have set down briefly in the Cabinet room. Their heads are covered in hand-painted baseball caps, their feet dangle from the grown-up chairs.

On the ceiling above them are murals and mottos of an era that held a more heroic image of government. "The Progress of a State is Born in Temperance, Justice and Prudence." "The Will of the People is the Law of the Land."

This is Wisconsin, the state that gave America both the progressive Robert La Follette and the reactionary Joe McCarthy, the state that introduced the concepts of income tax, workman's compensation, child support and welfare. A place where social policy-making is a vocation and politicians stake their futures on such matters as welfare reform.

On this bright May morning, Gov. Tommy Thompson describes it this way to his visitor: "We have always been on the cutting edge." The edge we are talking about today is Learnfare, a program that Thompson carved from legislation with his own executive knife.

To put it simply, Learnfare is based on the notion that families on welfare have an obligation to send their children to school. If a teenager doesn't go, if he or she is chronically truant, then the family's benefits are cut.

It is the sanction part of Learnfare, the punishment of a family for a teenager's truancy, that has become the focus of enormous controversy. Some regard this "cutting edge" as a tool to sever welfare dependency and get people off the dole. Others call it a weapon that further impoverishes the poor.

But this visitor sees another "cutting edge" to the welfare program. Learnfare is one of a number of attempts to put parents back in charge of their children. Even if we have to punish them for the "sins" of their sons and daughters.

Five years ago, this state passed a law requiring some parents of teenage mothers and fathers to support their grandchildren. Last year, Los Angeles decided to hold parents responsible for teenage gang members. This month, the mayor of Mechanicville, N.Y., made parents liable again for arrest if their children under 16 break a 10 p.m. curfew.

Learnfare, punishing families for their teenager's truancy, fits neatly into the new mode. Despite little evidence that the children of AFDC families skip school more than others, poor parents are targeted by the state when they "fail."

In many ways this trend grows out of decade of frustration and anxiety about the breakdown of families, about kids who are "out of hand." Americans are more likely these days to assume that parents have abdicated their role.

Even Gov. Thompson, while fervently talking about Learnfare's power to "break the cycle of poverty," harkens back to images of his own parents. "I come from a poor family, but there was no question I would go on to college."

What's missing today, he suggests by comparison, is that parental push out the door to school. What the government can provide, he says, is "tough love." In a world of single-parent families, Thompson adds, "I believe Learnfare acts partially as a substitute for the second parent, a role model, an authority figure." Social program as patriarchy.

The earnest administrator of Learnfare, Silvia Jackson, defends the program because of its carrots — day care for teenage parents, transportation, alternative education. But she too defends the stick as a way "to get families more involved in the behavior of their children." She says, "Taxpayers want someone to ensure that kids go to high school. If the responsibility is not in families, where are you going to put it?"

The problem of course is that families are more disrupted, problems more complex, solutions more elusive than we may like to believe. The threat of sanctions doesn't automatically empower the parent of a 16-year-old truant. Rather, there is evidence that it may empower a teenager whose attendance record is worth $100 a month to his family.

Nor does taking money from the poor (over 6,000 families were sanctioned in the first 14 months) break the cycle of poverty through impoverishment. It saves the government money, but doesn't appear to save the kids. After the dueling statistics are analyzed, Learnfare can't claim credit for any teenager's return to school. Yet the governor now wants to expand it down to the families of first-graders.

Any social engineer with the vision of a caring parent for every teenager, a dependable teenager for every parent, can try to construct a support system to strengthen those ties. But a government cannot punish families into harmony, nor can it enforce parental control by controlling parents.

Some regard this 'cutting edge' as a tool to sever welfare dependency. Others call it a weapon...

EPA toxic waste rules on hold

WASHINGTON — George Bush is playing in a field of dreams if he still thinks he's the "environmental president." He has balked twice so far on the issues of clean air and wetlands, both times following the bad signals of White House Chief of Staff John Sununu. Now Bush and his minions can add toxic waste to their hall of shame.

For almost two years, the Environmental Protection Agency has been waiting to issue rules for the cleanup of toxic waste sites around the country. And for almost two years, the Office of Management and Budget under Richard Darman has shuffled those rules from desk to desk.

Darman probably thinks he's doing industry a favor, but he isn't. The longer the rules are delayed, the more expensive and extensive the cleanup problem becomes. And if Darman thinks he is saving the federal government any money, he is wrong on that score too. The U.S. government owns 338 of the 4,615 hazardous waste sites on the cleanup list. It would be costly to clean them up now, but it will be more costly to clean them up later.

The toxic wastes are industrial leftovers, and in the case of most of the federally owned sites, hazardous waste generated by the military. What the EPA can't seem to pry out of Darman and his underlings are the "corrective action rules" to put into effect the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. The act simply orders the cleanup of industrial sites where toxic waste is generated. But the rules specify how the cleanup must be done, and until businesses have those rules, it would be a waste of their time and money to begin.

The law was passed in 1984 and amended in 1987. By this time, the cleanup effort should have been in full swing, but it isn't. The OMB's delay tactics have forced the EPA regional offices to proceed with only a fraction of the cleanup efforts mandated by the law. An April 1990 report from the General Accounting Office notes that none of the 4,615 sites has been completely cleaned up yet.

The EPA isn't the only angry party. Congress is fed up with the delays too. And industry giants have figured out what Darman and his staff can't — that the longer they wait, the more the cleanup will cost. Environmentalists are concerned that the longer this hazardous garbage sits around, the greater threat it will pose to air, water and soil.

Our associate Tim Warner obtained correspondence between the EPA and OMB dating back to 1988. In a letter last month, EPA Assistant Administrator Don R. Cray wrote, "I will reiterate my frustration regarding the length of time that the review process for this proposed rule has taken." What EPA gets from OMB in response to its pleas are repetitive responses calling for more and more speculative data to substantiate the restrictiveness of the proposed rules. This isn't the first time the OMB has dragged its feet to the detriment of the environment.

In 1986 it took a ruling from a federal judge to get the OMB to move on some EPA regulations mandated by Congress. Congress goofed this time because it didn't set a deadline for the toxic waste cleanup rules. Congress preferred to let EPA move at the pace it deemed appropriate. The lawmakers trusted the EPA to do the right thing, but they didn't reckon with the OMB. If OMB continues to drag its feet, Congress may step in with a stern lecture and firm deadlines. We asked the OMB to respond to complaints about the delays.

For almost two years, the OMB under Richard Darman has shuffled those rules from desk to desk.

New ship safety rules rejected

MIAMI — The United States should not impose tough new safety standards on foreign cruise ships because it could damage foreign relations, the Coast Guard commandant said.

In a letter released Wednesday, Admiral Paul Yost conceded safety problems exist aboard cruise ships. But he said the United States should work through international maritime organizations rather than act unilaterally to improve safety.

"Many developing nations, as well as some advanced maritime nations, may object to such proposals in terms of sovereignty and infringement on their national prerogatives," Yost wrote in a 19-page letter to the National Transportation Safety Board.

The letter, written May 19, rejects the NTSB's October 1989 recommendation that the government require stricter vessel safety.

The Coast Guard action is a blow to NTSB efforts to get Congress to impose U.S. safety rules on foreign cruise vessels. The maritime industry contends the NTSB proposals are unnecessary.

However, Yost agreed with NTSB recommendations that a majority of the crew speak a common language and that sprinklers and other advanced fire protection devices be installed.

The Coast Guard will bring up those concerns at meetings of the International Maritime Organization, Yost said.

The IMO sets worldwide standards for ship passenger safety but the NTSB has criticized it as weak and slow-moving.

Yost also rebuffed an NTSB recommendation to allow U.S. investigations of accidents aboard foreign ships based in this country.

The recommendation stems from the Feb. 10, 1989 collision between Carnival Cruise Line's ship Celebration and a Cuban freighter. The cruise line's headquarters are in Miami but the ship is registered in Liberia.

The NTSB tried to investigate the collision but was blocked by Carnival.

"Accidents which occur aboard foreign vessels outside U.S. territorial waters are, as a matter of national sovereignty, properly beyond our normal jurisdiction," Yost wrote.

The cruise industry, which has opposed placing U.S. safety rules and standards on foreign ships, applauded the Coast Guard's position.

Shipping companies register their vessels in foreign countries in part to avoid more costly U.S. safety rules and salaries. Some have threatened to abandon Florida for ports in the Caribbean if the NTSB proposals are adopted.

Yost's letter comes two weeks before industry representatives are expected to tell a House subcommittee that the NTSB proposals are unnecessary. The NTSB had no comment on Yost's letter.

Train crossings and drawbridges pollute

FORT LAUDERDALE — Exhaust pipes from motor vehicles waiting at railroad crossings pump 7,438 pounds of carbon monoxide and 494 pounds of hydrocarbons into the air every day in Broward County alone.

The long waits not only contribute to south Florida's pollution problem but also cost motorists $1.8 million a year for wasted gasoline and wear and tear on their vehicles, the Broward County Transportation Planning Division calculated.

The agency has just completed a study of the long waits drivers face at railroad crossings and drawbridges, concluding that the problems will worsen dramatically by the year 2010 unless something is done.

"Increasing train and auto traffic will increase the delays at the crossings," said Mark Wilkes, county transportation engineer.

The Florida East Coast Railway tracks, which parallel Dixie Highway, have 74 crossings in the county, averaging 12 trains per day.

Each train takes an average of four minutes to pass each crossing, the study said. That adds up to 15 hours and 27 minutes a year of waiting time for drivers stopped at the crossing every day.

The county recommended building bridges over the tracks, restricting train crossings at rush hours, moving the rail corridors and regulating the length and speed of freight trains.

But transport officials said it is almost impossible to restrict the railroads without legislation.

"It's going to be a tough battle. The trains operate like a sovereign nation. They have their own laws," said Fort Lauderdale city commissioner Jim Naugle, who sits on the county's Metropolitan Planning Organization.

Drivers fare no better at drawbridges, the report said. Waiting at drawbridges costs motorists $720,000 a year in fuel and wear and tear on their vehicles, and pumps 4,057 pounds of carbon monoxide and 270 pounds of hydrocarbons into the air daily.

Tax

bottle or can of soft drinks; and a $50 fee for people selling cigarettes at retail. None of those are in the House bill.

—The House wants to increase to 9 percent the state tax on surplus insurance lines, or hard-to-insure matters such as rock concerts or athletes' knees; add a $5 annual surcharge on PIP insurance; and increase the gross receipts tax on utility services, expanding that tax to include cable television. None of those items are in the Senate bill.

Another difference involves the House plan to boost the 50-cent surcharge on rental cars to 75-cents per day, and to impose a 50-cent surcharge for multi-day and a 25-cent surcharge on single-day cruises. Those increases would raise about $10 million for tourism promotion, an area that House leaders said would suffer a second straight year of budget cuts absent the new money.

In other action Wednesday in the Legislature:

—The Senate voted 35-0 to ban oil and gas exploration in state waters extending 10 miles into the Gulf of Mexico and 3 miles into the Atlantic Ocean, a bid to protect Florida's tourism and fishing industries from spills.

The Legislature voted last year to ban drilling from Naples to the Florida Keys. The measure (SB 1642) approved Tuesday extends that protection zone the length of Florida's coastline.

The no-drilling ban would extend only seven miles into the Gulf between Naples and Apalachicola since the outer three miles in that area is already leased to Coastal Petroleum Co. But all other state waters would be covered.

Florida can get along without oil and gas exploration, said Sen. Vince Bruner, D-Fort Walton Beach. "But I don't think we could get along without the tourism. It's not worth the risk." Ann Whitfield, a lobbyist for the Florida Public Interest Research Group, said the state action would strengthen the hand of Florida's political leaders in trying to persuade the federal government to ban drilling in federal waters.

—The Senate approved by a 34-0 vote legislation (HB 2687) banning hazing at any private college or university where students receive state financial aid. They would be required to institute anti-hazing programs similar to those already required of state institutions.

—The Senate adopted by another 34-0 vote legislation (HB 2961) to require insurance companies to grant 25 percent rate breaks for motorists who install anti-theft or vehicle recovery devices in their cars. Sen. Howard Forman, D-Pembroke Pines, said the bill would help reduce losses from stolen vehicles, estimated at $334 million in Florida in 1988.

—The Senate adopted 33-0 a bill (SB 2146) clarifying that only inmates with records of serious sexual crimes should be denied the provisional release credits routinely handed out to ease overcrowding.

Sex offenders are not eligible for such credits, but the Department of Corrections was reading that law too broadly, in the view of some, to include even minor violations such as men going barechested in public. The result, said Sen. Curt Kiser, R-Palm Harbor, was that minor offenders were going to be held longer than even some violent offenders.

orange in color," he said.

"We need to convince consumers that the juicier, better-tasting oranges they are looking for are found in the light-colored wrappers," Gunter said.

Citrus department Advertising Director Valerie Barnett said, "Many people think that a Florida orange just looks unripe."

The results of a survey that quizzed dozens of consumers in New York, Atlanta, Boston, and Charlotte, N.C., showed that most people weren't attracted by the color of the Florida orange, she said.

"They thought (Florida oranges) weren't appealing looking," Barnett said.

Television advertisements are tentatively planned for New York, Chicago and Atlanta, the state's largest markets for its fresh oranges. Officials estimate that about $2 billion a year is spent on fresh oranges by U.S. consumers.

The California fresh navel orange market has been prospering for more than 70 years, and officials there say they aren't worried about the proposed Florida campaign.

"Obviously, the navel is better eating," said Cliff Holland, director of grower services for California Citrus Mutual in Visalia. "I say that tongue in cheek, but the navel does have extremely beautiful skin, it eats well, and a mother can just hand a child an orange, who can peel it."

Unlike the seedless California navel, ripe Florida oranges can be green and light orange in color. The skin does not peel away easily, and most Florida varieties have seeds.

of the project was about one home per acre, many of the homes would actually be built on smaller lots.

Many residents opposed Sylvan Glade because of its small lots. Residents living around Lake Sylvan opposed the project because of the increase of activity on the still-clean lake.

Arnold agreed to restrict public access to the lake to the lakefront homes and also agreed not to build on a total of 147 acres of wetlands and uplands on the site. The county and state agreed.

Tuesday, when commissioners reviewed the preliminary site plan for the development, Sylvan Glade engineer Hugh Harling said the shape of the home lots were changed slightly to allow garages to be built on the side of the home. As a result, about 4.8 percent of the previously designated conservation area would be needed for development.

County land development coordinator John Dwyer called the request "marginal," but he would agree to the use of the conservation lands. County planner Tony VanDerworp said the request also marginally met county requirements, but was acceptable.

Arnold also requested a pedestrian path to be built to the lake to allow residents living in the interior of the development to use the lake. Arnold asked commissioners to allow those pedestrians to be able to launch canoes and other non-powered boats.

Dwyer said he had interpreted the development order to mean no access of any kind would be allowed to the lake except for lakefront residents. But commissioners disagreed, saying they interpreted the order to mean no boats, but not to restrict people.

Commissioners also blocked another request by Arnold. In 1988, records of meetings show Harling stated a conservation area along the southwestern portion of the development on the lake would be owned by the homeowners association and preserved. Additionally, a county conservation easement would be placed over the area to further protect it.

Tuesday, Harling asked that the area be split among 10 lots and owned by individuals instead of placing the site into association ownership. Harling argued the site would receive greater protection if individuals owned the land rather than the association. He said individuals would be required to gain permits to disturb the area. Earlier drafts of the site plan on file with the county show long paths extending through the area from nearby lots.

Dwyer said the area could not be subdivided without a change to the master development plan for Sylvan Glade. He said there would be more potential for the sensitive area to be harmed by homeowners clearing unsightly brush that might actually be protected vegetation.

Commissioners agreed and voted 4-1 to allow the changes, with commissioner Pat Warren opposing.

Warren said the site should be allowed to be sold to homeowners who would offer more protection to their own private property rather than a sometimes quarrelsome homeowners association.

WORLD BRIEFS

Non-communist Hungarian sworn in BUDAPEST, Hungary — Democratic Forum leader Jozsef Antall, summoning the "faith and will" of the nation for a difficult economic transition period, was sworn in as Hungary's first non-communist prime minister in 43 years.

The Parliament Wednesday elected Antall and his 16-member Cabinet by a vote of 218 to 128 following a long and sometimes heated debate over a government program that includes sweeping economic reform and a break with the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact military alliance.

The 58-year-old librarian and museum director appealed to opposition parties to "give the government 100 days" of good will to enable it to take the first "painful steps" toward a market economy.

Israel opposes U.N. force in territories

JERUSALEM — Israel, the target of international criticism for its handling of violent protests sparked by the mass slaying of seven Arabs, took exception to Washington's willingness to consider supporting a U.N. force patrolling the occupied territories.

The territories were calmer Wednesday than in previous days, but observers said the international ramifications of the crisis appeared to be escalating.

In Washington, Secretary of State James Baker said the United States for the first time was willing to discuss the possibility of sending an international observer force in the territories, the site of violent protests since the seven Arab workers were killed Sunday in Israel by a deranged Israeli with an assault rifle.

Baker's comments were expected to create further friction in the U.S.-Israeli relationship, which has been under strain since the peace process that Baker is trying to mediate stalled this year.

Gorbachev blundered over Yeltsin?

MOSCOW — Radical Russian republic lawmakers believe Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev made a political blunder when he lashed out at Boris Yeltsin, accusing the maverick communist of trying to unravel the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev, his voice rising with emotion in a 45-minute speech Wednesday to the Russian republic's new Congress of People's Deputies, called his radical critics "political rogues" and accused them of "unscrupulous and dirty methods."

Gorbachev said that while he favors strengthening the sovereignty of the Russian republic, Yeltsin was using the guise of greater independence for Russia to promote the breakup of the Soviet Union.

Mohawk editor released on bail

VALLEYFIELD, Quebec — An outspoken Mohawk newspaper editor charged with murder in the war over gambling at the St. Regis Indian Reservation was released from jail Wednesday on $12,750 bail.

Doug George was charged with second-degree murder in the death of Harold "J.R." Edwards, an apparently neutral bystander in a May 1 gun battle over gambling.

The court also set a series of other conditions for the anti-gambling crusader, including reporting to police once a week on Fridays, adhering to an 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew and handing over any weapons.

Steve Lazore and Mitchell are officers in the 14-man indigenous Akwesasne Mohawk Police force. The three were charged with being accomplices after the fact.

Brady ups cost of S&L bailout

By BUO NEWMAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Taxpayers may have to pay $57 billion more than estimated to save failed savings and loans for a bill of up to $130 billion, and almost 300 thrifts are likely to collapse during the next two years, officials said.

The new bailout figures were presented Wednesday to the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady. Later, Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., the committee's chairman, said, "We're looking at losses that are substantially higher than were indicated before."

Brady serves as chairman of the oversight board of the Resolution Trust Corporation, created last year with the task of closing failed thrifts and selling their assets. The sale of assets helps the government to repay the cost of covering insured deposits in up to 1,000 thrifts that have failed or are expected to falter.

The most troubled thrifts still operating represent 12 percent of all savings and loan institutions and "are expected to be transferred to the Resolution Trust Corporation," said Timothy Ryan, director of the Office of Thrift Supervision.

They are concentrated in California, Texas, Florida, Louisiana, Illinois, Ohio and New Jersey, and have a total of $193 billion in assets. Those assets account for 18 percent of industry assets.

"There are too many unknowns to provide a single estimate of the ultimate cost (of bailing out thrifts)," Brady told the committee.

"Taking into account all of the uncertainty and all of the variables, it appears that the cost of resolving institutions which are likely to come under the control of the RTC will be in the approximate range of $90 billion to $130 billion," Brady said.

Last year, the administration projected a $73 billion bailout cost. Brady's new estimates — he said they are certain to change — represent an increase in the range of $17 billion to $57 billion over earlier estimates.

Quarter of nursing homes in U.S. fail to provide proper drug care

By JANET BASS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Government inspections showed Wednesday that nearly one in four nursing homes administered drugs improperly and about the same number failed to provide adequate personal hygiene for residents.

The 1988-1989 findings were part of the second annual Medicare-Medicaid report on the performance of more than 15,000 U.S. nursing homes. The Health Care Financing Administration issued the report.

Inspectors found that 24.2 percent of nursing homes improperly administered drugs, 25.5 percent did not provide proper daily hygiene, 20.8 percent did not follow proper isolation techniques to prevent the spread of infection and 19.8 percent did not provide each resident with a urinary catheter with proper routine care.

More than a third of the homes did not follow sanitation rules for food preparation, the survey showed.

"It is a sad fact that enforcement of existing regulations in nursing homes across the nation is grossly inadequate," said Ken Hoagland, spokesman for the National Council of Senior Citizens. "This latest report merely tabulated some of the more egregious violations and points up the continuing necessity for enforcement of existing regulations and for enactment of stronger regulations."

Gail Wilensky, administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, said the report provides "a snapshot" of conditions at inspection time. She urged consumers to talk to doctors, long-term care ombudsmen and nursing home representatives when choosing a nursing home.

The American Association of Homes for the Aging expressed concern that consumers might use the report as "one-stop shopping."

Coke warns of can contest quirks

By United Press International

Coca-Cola purchased full-page advertisements in newspapers across the country Wednesday, alerting consumers to a possible malfunction of the cash-containing cans used in its newest promotional contest.

The ads in the The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Los Angeles Times and several other major newspapers explain how to identify the so-called MagiCans, which are designed to pop out prize money when opened.

The ads said prize mechanisms may jam in some cans, and showed side-by-side diagrams of a properly working MagiCan and a malfunctioning container.

The ads said the mechanism "in a very small number of MagiCans" detaches from the inside of the can, preventing the prize from popping out. "Rest assured, however, the mechanism can't come out of the can," the ads said.

The MagiCans, disguised to look — and sound — like ordinary Coke cans, contain chlorinated water instead of cola, the company said. The advertisements did not say whether the chlorinated water was dangerous, but said the liquid "should not be accessible and is not meant for drinking."

The company said more than a dozen people have reported defective cans and an 11-year-old Massachusetts boy said he accidentally drank the chlorinated water used to give the can weight, the Atlanta Constitution reported Wednesday.

The advertisements told consumers the chance of finding a malfunctioning MagiCan "is extremely remote."

The full-page advertisements, which carry a large headline saying "Take a good look," told consumers to look inside Coca-Cola cans to make sure they contain cola, and to listen for a rattling sound inside the defective cans.

News women less visible on television

By STEPHEN WADE
United Press International

CARBONDALE, Ill. — It has always been tough for women to crack the male-dominated world of network television correspondents — and it seems to be getting even tougher, a researcher said Wednesday.

Joe Foote, Southern Illinois University professor of radio and television, said only eight of the most frequently seen 100 correspondents on ABC, CBS and NBC television networks in 1989 were women. The number is down from 15 in 1988, Foote said.

Although women made up only eight of the top 100, three women appeared in the top 10. Lesley Stahl of CBS was No. 3 followed by No. 4 Andrea Mitchell of NBC and No. 8 Rita Braver of CBS. The most frequently seen network correspondent in 1989 was NBC's John Cochran.

The figures are compiled from the Vanderbilt University Television News Index.

"It's pretty good news for women at the top and not such good news for the rest," said Foote, who has been doing his Network Correspondent Visibility Study since 1983.

"There is an assumption in American society that women are upwardly mobile in the workplace, but that's not the case in network television news," Foote said.

When it comes to men, Foote said the networks tend to draw their anchors and superstars from the correspondent ranks.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

GOP, Democrats split on anti-crime bill

WASHINGTON — With members pledging to get tough on crime, the Senate is locked in a partisan battle on anti-crime legislation that could lead to a Republican filibuster or a veto by President Bush.

Key votes Wednesday exposed partisan splits as the Senate narrowly approved a partial ban on assault weapons and rejected a plan to set limits on the number of times a death row inmate can seek court reprieves.

The Senate planned to vote Thursday on an effort to reverse the death-row provision.

Fans to seek memories of 'Aunt Bee'

RALEIGH, N.C. — If Frances Bayer, "Aunt Bee" to millions of Andy Griffith Show fans, had sold her unwanted personal possessions, she probably would have chosen a yard sale.

A glimpse of her furniture and personal effects displayed Wednesday in an unused television studio looked just like a yard sale, with one exception — the ceramic cats, drinking glasses and antiques will be sold at much higher prices to fans who want to capture memories of the fictional Mayberry, N.C.

Penny ban has Americans seeing red

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Americans like their pennies — in jars, in piles on the dresser, or jingling in their pockets — and nearly two-thirds of them want to keep the one-cent coin in circulation.

A Gallup survey released Wednesday also found more than three-fourths of those questioned said proposals before Congress to eliminate the penny and round cash prices up or down to the nearest nickel would just be an excuse to raise prices.

Generally speaking, the Gallup Poll survey of 750 people over age 18 found more than half believe wiping out the penny would just be confusing. At the bottom line, 62 percent said they oppose legislation to discontinue the penny, while 26 percent said they would favor it.

The survey was conducted April 23-26 for Americans For Common Cents and has a margin of error of 4 percentage points.

Baker defends summit strategy

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State James Baker defended claims by critics who said the United States made too many strategic arms concessions to the Soviet Union during negotiations for the upcoming superpower summit.

Under fire from some conservatives for engaging in a "headlong rush" to reach an arms pact on long-range missiles, Baker briefed reporters Wednesday on his trip to Moscow and President Bush's summit goals of completing an agreement on nuclear weapons and conventional forces by the end of the year.

In talks preparing for the May 30-June 3 summit, the U.S. and Soviet Union agreed to limit cruise missiles and pinned down most of the basic language in a 500-page draft treaty, but left some issues unresolved.

"The reality is that this treaty is shaping up largely on original United States concepts and original United States proposals in terms of what we've given and what we've taken," said Baker, who was in Moscow last week for talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. "We've done very well indeed."

But Frank Gaffney Jr., director of the Center for Security Policy, said in a report by the conservative think tank that the draft treaty is "dubious" and "remarkable in its shortsightedness."

Baker noted he received support from the U.S. military leadership and said it "would appear to me" the critics are those who oppose the concept of arms control agreements with the Soviets.

"I don't think you should look just at one negotiating session," he said, noting that "there is very strong support for this agreement among the military leadership of the United States... as a good agreement that is very much in the national security interest of the United States."

Baker said, "The president will work toward finalizing a Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty this year which would reduce the superpower arsenals, not just cap the levels of weapons."

A strategic arms reduction treaty has been an elusive goal for U.S.-Soviet summits since 1987, when President Ronald Reagan and Gorbachev embraced the idea of a 50 percent reduction in nuclear arms as a step toward total elimination.

Despite the dramatic warning of relations since then, technical details and long-held suspicions have blocked agreement on an accord. Bush and Gorbachev are expected to resolve some pending details and approve a broad outline for nuts-and-bolts negotiators to complete.

Baker told reporters that Bush, during his Oval Office meetings with Gorbachev, will "raise our concerns over developments in Europe," where the "military situation is lagging behind" the changes in the political landscape.

Power boat races on TV tonight

By J. BRADLEY DILLINO
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A few years from now, the Coors Light-Sanford Super Challenge boat races could be airing in Japan, said one promoter. And if the deals that the race promoters are shooting for work out, the race has the potential to be viewed by more than 8 million households statewide.

But for this week, Sunset Sports Associates is content to have the love of their laborers broadcast over the Sunshine Network tonight at 8 p.m.

SSA, the group that promoted the hydroplane boat races the weekend of May 13, commissioned Gateway Productions, of Sanford, to film the event.

The finished product will be broadcast over Sunshine Network tonight. Viewers who subscribe to CableVision of Central Florida and Storer Cable may see the program on channel 9 on Central Florida CableVision.

Sunshine Network, which distributes programming to CableVision and Storer Cable, agreed to broadcast the program in exchange for six minutes of commercial time. There are 14 minutes available for commercials, and all of it will be used, said Michael Hyams, a principal for SSA.

"It was a barter deal," Hyams said. "We gave them six minutes of air time to do anything they wanted with in exchange for airing our races. It's done a lot in this business."

One minute of the remaining eight will be devoted to advertising designed for the Seminole County Tourism Development Council, which SSA promised the group when it agreed to give the promoters $12,000 toward expenses for the event. There will be two commercials, 30 seconds each, advertising tourist attractions in Seminole County. One commercial will be at the beginning of the program and one will be at the end.

But unlike the other 13 minutes of commercial time on the tape, those two commercials become a permanent part of the broadcast, no matter where or when or how often the races are replayed, Hyams said.

"If this thing airs in Japan, Seminole County and Sanford will be advertised," he said.

Raborn asks opponent for school debate

By NICK PFEIFAUF
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — M.L. "Sonny" Raborn, candidate for Seminole County District 5 School Board, has challenged his opponent, Daryl McLain, to a series of debates.

"Now that Mrs. Neiswender has decided not to stand for re-election and Mr. McLain has announced his intention to run for school board district 5, I invite Mr. McLain to join with me in a series of debates of the issues concerning the very important upcoming election for a replacement on the school board from district 5," Raborn said. "The voters are entitled to know where each candidate stands."

Ann Neiswender, present chairman of the Seminole County School Board, announced at Tuesday night's board meeting she did not plan to seek re-election. She has been a member of the board since November, 1986.

Board member Pat Telson Monday had announced she would not seek re-election. Larry Betsinger, the third member whose term will expire this year, said he had not made a decision yet, although he reportedly has told others he would not run.

In issuing his challenge, Raborn said, "I look forward to the opportunity to let the voters know my views on year round schools, elected vs. employed superintendent, proper long-range planning, limited bond issue for special needs, portables/portable schools, full-time school board members, the need to make sound business decisions with the taxpayers money and the many other issues which should be presented to the voters."

Raborn suggested debates could be sponsored by various city and county chambers of commerce, home owners associations, etc. At the present time, Raborn and McLain are the only two announced candidates seeking the District 5 school board job. They are both Republicans.

The Yankees had to travel to the Metrodome before acting like Bronx Bombers. New York slugged six home runs and Tim Lary pitched a four-hitter Wednesday night, leading the Yankees to a 12-0 rout of the Minnesota Twins.

Steve Balboni contributed two homers to the barrage, his first two of the season in his 11th career two-home run game.

Delon Sanders, Roberto Kelly, Mel Hall and Jesse Barfield hit the Yankees' other home runs to support Lary. 2-4, who struck out 11 for his 11th in other AL games. Kansas City beat Boston 4-1. Chicago defeated Baltimore 6-3. Detroit pounded Texas 5-1. Oakland pummeled Milwaukee 12-5. Seattle edged Cleveland 4-1, and California shaded Toronto 5-4.

Boyd throws second shutout

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd appears rejuvenated in a Montreal uniform.

"I feel great now," said Boyd after pitching a five-hitter Wednesday to lead the Expos to a 4-0 victory over the San Diego Padres. "It shows that you can't keep a good man down. I have good control. I eat, sleep and drink baseball. I am ready to go nine each game."

Boyd, 3-2, pitched eight seasons with Boston before signing with Montreal as a free agent during the offseason. He recorded his second shutout of the season Wednesday and matched his 1989 victory total.

Boyd also singled off former Boston teammate Bruce Hurst, 3-5, igniting a two-run fifth inning. It was his first major league hit.

Both of Boyd's shutouts have come against San Diego.

Elsewhere in the NL, Los Angeles defeated Chicago 4-3. San Francisco beat St. Louis 6-1 and Houston outlasted Pittsburgh 7-3.

Two headed for Division I

By ROBBIE STOCK
 Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — The cream of the crop was golden.

Two students from Lyman High School received athletic scholarships to major Division I schools this year, highlighting the 17 Greyhounds currently inked by colleges.

Octavius Holiday will star in the secondary at Duke University. Holiday, who carries a 4.0 and scored over 1300 on his SAT, also plans to major in engineering while at Duke.

Teddy Mitchell, who paced his way to three consecutive state two-mile championships, will race next year for Tennessee University.

He plans on running both cross country and track for the Volunteers.

Although the football team suffered through a disappointing 5-5 season, nine players signed on with other schools. Four starters, Kennis Morris (tailback), Lynn Anderson (defensive tackle), Mike Madry (linebacker) and Marvin Reed (tailback), all will perform for Cheney State in Pennsylvania next season. Morris and Reed could possibly play both offense and defense.

"We feel real good about the kids and they have a chance to play where they're going," stated Lyman coach Bill Scott. It is a good chance for each player to do something for themselves." Tight end Chad Fisher and defensive end Kane Kettles both will play for Morris Hill College in North Carolina next year.

Quarterback Paul Bowen will power Potomac State, a junior college associated with the University of West Virginia. Flanker Rob Salem will suit up for Carson Newman in Tennessee.

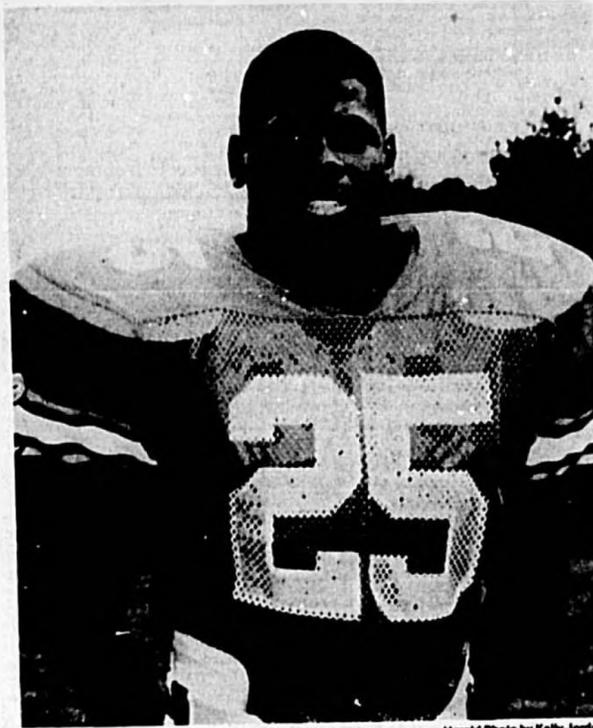

For the soccer team, which won the district title with a 5-0 swabbing of Lake Mary, All-American Jo Jo House plans to don the uniform for the South Carolina Gamecocks while his main partner in crime, all-state selection Eric Leiben, is headed for American University.

Troy Hamilton will defend his ground for the Naval Academy and Johnny Mairs will play for Presbyterian College. Craig Terrett will walk on at Florida Institute of Technology.

"These guys had great careers," said boys' soccer coach Ray Sandidge. "You really can go only as far as your seniors take you. They worked really hard and got the rewards that were due to them."

The girls soccer team, meanwhile, landed three players in college.

Defender Tammy Fulsang and teammate Kerry Musante will rip up the competition on the ninth-ranked UCF soccer team. Jennifer McAvoy plans to attend either Lees-McCray or Brevard College, both in North Carolina.

Octavius Holiday will join Teddy Mitchell as Lyman Greyhound athletes who will be competing for NCAA Division I programs next year. Holiday will be playing football for Atlantic Coast Conference champion Duke University while Mitchell will be running track for South Eastern Conference power Tennessee.

Jackson, Grayson pace Greyhounds

By ROBBIE STOCK
 Herald Correspondent

KISSIMMEE — Historically, the Lyman football team didn't play a spring jamboree.

But this year, head coach Bill Scott changed that tradition. And he's glad he did.

Brain Grayson rushed for over 120 yards in nine carries and the Greyhounds streaked to over 230 yards in total offense and pounded Kissimmee Gateway 20-6 in a spring jamboree held Wednesday at Gateway High School.

"I think we did a real good job," stated Scott. "I was pleased with Jeff Jackson as quarterback."

Jackson, who played behind Paul Bowen last year, took the option offense and sliced through the Panther defense like it was butter. Also adding valuable ground yardage for the Greyhounds was Chris Cotton, who scored the team's second touchdown and his brother, Cornelius Cotton, who ran for Lyman's final score. Bobby Washington added a 70-yard jaunt.

Besides playing quarterback, Jackson also kicked an extra point. Jason Green added the other.

On defense, Tracy Dunn turned in a strong performance at strong safety while Grayson stunned Panther runners at his linebacker spot. Jeff Adell provided support at nose tackle. Chris Cotton also helped out in the secondary.

"Overall, I think the boys did a good job, our running backs ran the ball hard, our defense pursued well and we got some good hits on them," said Scott. "I'm pleased with the effort."

Jeff Jackson (12) and Brian Grayson were the headliners as the Greyhounds beat Gateway 20-6 in Spring football jamboree action.

OVIEDO — They call him "The Hammer".

And on Tuesday night at the Oviedo High School senior awards, John Knutson nailed down yet another honor, taking the student-athlete of the year award.

In a year when Knutson received many awards such as a $60,000 scholarship and the school PRIDE contest for social studies, this one had its own special place.

"It represents a lot of things I've gone for," stated Knutson, who didn't play football until his freshman year in high school. "Athletics have always been my favorite thing to do and I've tried to do good in school. I tried to do good in both."

And that he did. In football, Knutson used his deceptive speed and smart style of play to garner a spot on the all-conference two

Altamonte's Big Leaguers rip four home runs to win

From staff reports

ORLANDO — The Altamonte Springs Big League won its fifth game in six starts Wednesday with an 11-7 triumph over Dr. Phillips at the Dr. Phillips Little League Field.

Altamonte used home runs off the bats of Mike Merthle, Jason Varitek, Jason Sewell and Neil James to claim the victory.

The home run by Merthle was his third in six games after a two year layoff from baseball. Sewell's was his first since he was 12 and James' came as a left-handed hitter, which he has started to do since the end of the high school season.

Merthle was 2-for-5 with five RBI to pace the Altamonte attack. Also contributing were Neil James (3-for-4, three RBI), Sewell (2-for-4, RBI), Joey DeFrancisco

Hunt, Ingram keep KofC on winning track

From staff reports

SANFORD — Quentin Hunt tossed a five-hitter as the Knights of Columbus Cardinals continued on the winning track with a 20-9 shellacking of the Kiwanis Club Orioles in Sanford Recreation Department Junior Major Baseball League action at Chase Park Wednesday night.

In the other game the Rotary Club Royals broke a 7-7 tie with three runs in the top of the seventh and went on to post a 10-8 victory over the Moose Club Pirates.

The Juniors will now take a week off for the Memorial Day Holiday before getting back into action next Wednesday at Chase Park. At 6 p.m. the Royals will take on the Cardinals and at 8 p.m. the Orioles will challenge the Pirates.

The standings for the second half are unavailable at this time because of protests and questions over the use of alleged ineligible players. A recap of the first half showed the Cardinals earning a spot in the City Championships with a 7-2 record, followed by the Pirates (5-4), the

Florida fears NCAA death penalty

GAINESVILLE - The University of Florida is worried the NCAA will shut down its football or basketball team.

"This puts us at risk for the death penalty," said university President John Lombardi after receiving the NCAA's letter of inquiry charging 10 violations.

"Coming after the 1984 (violations) and given the fact that these are major violations, then the NCAA would say this is death-penalty territory."

"The death penalty is used if it's determined that a program is not salvageable. I don't think that's the case here. This program has already begun to rebuild."

The university received an official inquiry from the NCAA Tuesday outlining 10 violations, including three charges of major rules infractions in both the basketball and football programs.

The letter also listed two charges of unethical conduct, one each against former football coach Galen Hall and former basketball coach Norm Sloan, and two charges against the university for lack of institutional control and compliance.

"Now everything is on the table," said Gator guard Renaldo Jarcla, who has seen the basketball program go through two head coaching changes since last fall. "A lot of us didn't even know what the allegations were. You hear a lot of talk and you don't know how much is true. It's somewhat a relief hearing it's not so bad."

One allegation that an assistant coach in 1986 loaned a player $100 surprised new football coach Steve Spurrier.

who was hired by the school five months ago from Duke.

"That one's very disturbing," Spurrier said. "Every assistant coach in America knows you can't lend a player money. That's a shame that one happened."

Kirk Kirkpatrick, a 10th-year tight end, joined the football team in 1986 as Florida was completing its final year of probation for NCAA violations under Coach Charley Pell.

"Right now, I think we have one of the cleanest programs in the nation," said Kirkpatrick. "Athletic Director Bill Arnsperger has gotten rid of the people who have done the damage, and if the NCAA penalizes Florida, it'll be penalizing the players. So it's all still pretty scary."

Porter gives Trail Blazers 2-0 lead

PORTLAND, Ore. - Terry Porter scored 23 of his 28 points in the second half, including the go-ahead basket with 12.7 seconds left, helping Portland make the biggest comeback in NBA playoff history Wednesday night and giving the Trail Blazers a 108-107 victory over the Phoenix Suns and a 2-0 lead in the Western Conference finals.

Portland trailed by 22 points with 96 seconds left in the second quarter, but the Trail Blazers rallied behind Porter and Jerome Kersey, who had 10 of his 29 points in the final period. The Suns were held to 16 points in the last quarter.

Portland extended Phoenix' five-year losing streak at Memorial Coliseum to 19 games. This year the Suns have lost four times on the Blazers' court by a total of six points.

The best-of-seven series shifts to Phoenix for games Friday night and Sunday, but the Suns are in trouble. Only six teams have overcome a 2-0 deficit.

The comeback was all the more staggering given the fact the Blazers scored just 40 points in the first half - one point shy of the franchise record for fewest points before intermission.

Portland, which has won 14 of the last 18 meetings between the teams, is 8-0 at home in the playoffs and 1-3 on the road.

Tom Chambers, who led the Suns with 28 points, hit two foul shots following a questionable foul call on Kersey to give Phoenix a 106-103 lead with 50.1 seconds left, but Porter drilled a 3-pointer to tie it with 28.4 seconds remaining.

Kevin Johnson was fouled by Kersey on an inbound play with 27.2 seconds remaining, but he made just one free throw for a 107-106

Phoenix lead.

After a timeout, Porter nailed his winning 10-foot jumper over Johnson to give the Blazers their first lead since the game's opening seconds. Eddie Johnson of the Suns missed from the baseline with two seconds to go and time expired.

Clyde Drexler had 16 of his 20 points in the second half for the Blazers. Kevin Johnson and Dan Majerle each had 22 for the Suns. Majerle scored 18 in the first half.

The record playoff comeback bettered the one in 1948 when Baltimore recovered from a 21-point deficit to beat Philadelphia.

The Suns opened the final quarter by missing nine of their first 10 shots. The Blazers, meanwhile, ran off eight straight points to pull within 93-90 on Drexler's layup. And when Porter's 3-pointer rolled around the rim and fell, Portland was within 97-95 with 5:38 left.

Porter, held to 5 points in the first half, poured in 15 in the third quarter and the Blazers fought back, outscoring Phoenix 41-32 to get within 91-82 entering the final period.

The first half was another matter altogether. The Blazers stumbled badly, making only 35 percent of their shots while committing 15 turnovers. To epitomize their ineptitude, they received a technical foul in the half for having only four players on the court.

The sellout crowd of 12,884 vented its frustration on officials Jack Madden, Jess Kersey and Paul Mihalak. It got so bad that Kersey ejected Blazers' team photographer Art Gee sitting along the baseline with 88 seconds left before intermission.

Last amid the chaos was a brilliant effort by Majerle, who sank 8 of 10 shots in the first half, including a pair of 3-pointers, and had 4 rebounds.

Russell wins third straight Late Model feature at New Smyrna

Special to the Herald

NEW SMYRNA BEACH - This Saturday night's card will feature the End of the Month Championship Events - Late Models: 100 laps, $2,000 to win (sponsored by D.J.'s Auto Sales (Jim Sills). Also "A" and "B" Bombers, Mini-Stocks, Florida Modifieds and spectator races for street legal cars (cash prize to winner).

When race leader Stan Eads' engine seized-up with three laps to go in the F/SCAR-sanctioned 25-lap Late Model feature, Russell was there to take advantage of the situation.

Russell, who had moved into the runner-up spot very early in the race, was handed his third victory in a row on the high-banked half-mile of asphalt. He will be a strong favorite to win this Saturday's 100-lapper and the $2,000 attached to the victory.

Finishing second was Pete Starr, followed closely by Joe Middleton, Eads, who coasted across the line two laps down, and our resident racing grandmother Alice "Granny" Tatroe.

Ronnie Burkett survived a late race restart and held off hard-charging Von Crews to score his first Sportsman victory of the year. Crews was second, followed by Allen Rhodes, Mike Kubanek and Darrell Frye.

The 20-lap "B" Bomber Special was marked by a spirited duel between Rick Johns and apparent winner Ricky Marshall.

During a surprise post-race technical inspection, Marshall refused to pull the springs to have them checked. So he was consequently disqualified and the win was awarded to Johns.

Dick Lee was second, while Sanford's John Ripley, who had won five straight between the two FASCAR tracks, had to settle for third, ahead of Barb Pierce and Jim Harris.

Ted Vulpinus accomplished a nearly impossible feat, when he outran and passed defending champion Bobby Sears to win his first Mini-Stock final of the season. Sears has been an extremely dominant figure again this season.

After trying for months, the Narmore clan finally talked Jim Rathman Chevrolet into sponsoring their team. Sporting the dealer's name on the rear quarter panel for the first time, Donnie scored his fifth consecutive "A" Bomber feature win, as he held off Dave Savicki's "Purple Chevy Eater" Plymouth for the victory.

The Spectator Races Oval Drags went to Sam Lacy.

at Orlando SpeedWorld

In the 100-lap United Stock Car Alliance Late Model Championship on Friday night at Orlando SpeedWorld, apparent first and second place finishers Dick Anderson and Pete Orr were later disqualified because of illegal carburetor spacers.

So defending United Stock Car Alliance champion Eddie King, who mounted a late-race charge for third, was declared the winner around 2 a.m. He was at the wheel of Southern Road Builders/Inaultech/Bartow Motor Parts Parts Ford Thunderbird.

USA regular Mark Crawford drove a steady race, passing a fading Greg Cecil for second on the last lap. Rounding out the top five were Bart Weatherford and the winner's brother David.

USA points leader Kevin Durden tangled with Cecil midway in the event while running third. The mishap sidelined him for the remainder of the race.

In FASCAR-sanctioned racing action, Von Crews drove his Dixie Decor Camaro to an easy Sportsman win over Ronnie Burkett and George Dease.

Glen Carter outgunned Gary Salvatore on a restart to claim his ninth Florida Modified win of the season, while Chuck Abell went wire to wire

at LII' 500 Go Kart Track

MAITLAND - FASCAR Late Model standout Pete Orr proved that he can win in a Go-Kart too, by taking the special 30-lapper on Sunday at the LII' 500 Go Kart track in Maitland.

The event, co-sponsored by FASCAR, LII' 500 and "Run-A-Bout" Auto Sales, raised $1,290 for the Central Florida Children's Home, a home for kids who can not be properly taken care of by their families.

Orr led a 1-2-3 sweep by Late Model drivers, as he preceded David Russell and Jeff Yates to the finish line, over Mini-Stock racers Russ Thompson and Richard Newton.

"B" Bomber driver John Ripley of Sanford surprised everyone by setting fast time, worth an automatic berth into the feature event.

Qualifying heats were won by Orr, Russell, Thompson and "B" Bomber driver Steve Redditt. The non-qualifiers consolation went to Mini-Stocker Carl Green. In other events, Von Crews won the special Late Model vs. Sportsman drivers challenge. Hefty Ray Smith won the Coke and hot dog race, while Butch Pierce bested his wife Barbara in the "pie-in-the-face" race.

Thirteen-year old flagman Jimmy Wilson outran Col. Don Tyndall in their match race, while Rick Bristol won the wild officials race over FASCAR announcer Dave Westerman and chief scorer Audrey Wilson.

Drivers Pete Orr, Von Crews, David Russell and Bobby Sears had their race cars on display.

The event was a huge success and will be held again in the fall, with a goal of raising another $2,000 for the Central Florida Children's Home.

Knutson

consecutive years. One of his best games included a one-and-a-half sack and five tackle performance his junior year against Lake Mary.

In baseball, Knutson didn't see much varsity action until this season, when coach Mike Ferrell found him a valuable closer. Knutson pitched 18 scoreless regular-season innings, posting a 1.0 record and notching four saves. Much like in football, opponents often wondered how Knutson always got the job done - but he always got the job done. Perhaps his best game occurred when he held the 4A-state champion Lake Brantley Patriots scoreless for four innings, striking out five.

Knutson's academic record stands out as impressively as his athletic ones. His 3.69 GPA ranks in the top 10 percent of his class and his 1330 SAT score put him in the top 15 percent nationally.

For his efforts, Knutson was rewarded with a Marine/Navy ROTC $60,000 scholarship, which he will use at Carnegie Mellon.

Despite many athletes' troubles in balancing books and sports, Knutson found it no problem - as long as a school comes first.

"School has to come first," commented Knutson. "Let the sport take care of itself. Make sure you have fun at sports. For me, football was a good stress release at the end of a day of school."

In his high-school life, Knutson saw two football coaches, head coach Jack Blanton and defensive line coach Bob Becker, impact his life greatly.

"Coach Blanton is a great friend, he treats you as an equal," said Knutson of the school's seventh-year coach. "And Coach Becker has made me such a better player."

It could also be said that genetics played a part in Knutson's success. His dad won the student-athlete of the year award when he was in high school.

Juniors

Orioles (4-5) and the Royals (2-7).

The Cardinals scored 10 runs on only three-hits in the bottom of the first inning as they took advantage of wildness on the part of Orioles pitchers Corey Anderson and Demetrius Jackson.

Hunt and Cornelius Martin had two-run singles and Eric Ingram a bases loaded triple to highlight the big Cardinals first.

The Cardinals kept up the pressure in the second scoring five more runs. Three walks loaded the bases before Troy Brown scored a pair with a single. A walk reloaded the bases for Craig Merkerson, who unloaded a double to clear the bases.

The Orioles finally got to Hunt in the third for five runs. One out singles by Ricky Baden and Joe Tittle preceded an inside-the-park home run by Ray June to get the Orioles on the board. Three walks and a Jamie King single led to the other two runs.

The Orioles came up with four more runs in the fourth to close the gap to 15-9. Three walks and three errors led to the scoring.

But the Cardinals decided it was time to go home and scored five runs in the bottom of the fourth, with no one out, to end the game by the mercy rule.

Two walks were followed by an Ingram double, a Hunt double, a Charlie Farmer triple and a Johnny Dennis single and the game was over.

Providing the offense for the Cardinals were Ingram (triple, double, two runs scored), Hunt (double, single, two runs scored), Farmer (triple, two runs scored) and Merkerson (double, two runs scored).

Also contributing were Dennis, Martin and Brown (one single and two runs scored each).

George Beasley and Anthony Morales (two runs scored each) and Joshua DeLaura (run scored).

Pacing the Orioles attack were June (home run, two runs scored), Baden and King (one single and two runs scored each), Tittle (single, run scored), Robert Huffman (single) and Anderson and Jeremy Dolenberg (one run scored each).

The game between the Royals and the Pirates was a barn burner with the Royals taking early command only to have the Pirates come fighting back to tie the game.

A single by Tarrus Davis, a walk to Clifton Branch, a Don Hunt single and a Curtis Peterson ground out scored three first inning runs for the Royals.

The Pirates answered with a pair of runs of its own in the bottom of the first. Three walks, a Corey Donaldson squeeze bunt and a Matt Harris sacrifice fly scored the runs.

The Royals came up with three more runs in the second when Joe Young and Andre Rawlings singled before a Davis triple. Davis scored on Branch's ground out.

The Royals went ahead 7-2 in the top of the third when Peterson singled, stole second and third and scored on a wild pitch.

Doing the damage for the Royals were Davis (two triples, single, three runs scored), Branch (triple, single, two runs scored), Rawlings (single, two runs scored) and Hunt, Peterson and Young (one single and one run scored each).

Leading the Orioles were Roberts and Harris (one double and two runs scored each), Williams (single, run scored) and DeWayne Bell and Donaldson (one run scored each).

Urinary infection requires follow-up

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a bladder problem: frequent urination with burning. My doctor placed me on sulfa which helped, but once the pills were discontinued, the problem returned. Is this something I must take all the time? I'm reluctant to add another medication, since I'm already on gout medication, something for my blood pressure and Voltaren for my bad knee.

DEAR READER: The symptoms you describe suggest a urinary infection. Painful, frequent urination — with or without blood in the urine — that improves with sulfa antibiotics is a classic description of cystitis (bladder infection). However, your case is unusual because the symptoms returned once you completed a course of antibiotics. Either you have a chronic infection, which was not eradicated by the sulfa, or you are experiencing repeated, acute infections.

In my opinion, a urine culture will provide the answer. During the test, your urine is collected in a special way (to avoid contamination). Samples of it are then added to material that has been enriched to aid the growth of bacteria. After a day or two in an incubator, the culture is examined by a laboratory technician to determine whether any bacteria from your urine have thrived and grown. Normal urine is sterile; it contains no bacteria, and the test is negative. If your urine is infected, the bacteria can be isolated in the lab, identified and further tested to discover which antibiotics would be the most effective treatment. For instance, your urine may be infected with microorganisms that are inhibited but not killed by sulfa. Therefore, as long as you take sulfa, your symptoms are controlled; once the antibiotic is stopped, the bacteria are free to grow and cause a new round of symptoms. In this case, an alternative, more effective drug would be required to rid your urinary tract of all microorganisms. After a second (or third) course of antibiotics, you should have another culture to make sure the medicine has been completely effective. If you are having repeated attacks of bladder infection, your urine culture will show bacteria when you have symptoms and will be free of microorganisms at other times.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Netherlands player Piet Borst made three no-trump in today's deal by correctly placing the cards and the distribution. After three passes, he bid one no-trump and North raised to game. East won the opening heart lead with the ace and returned the 10. Declarer played the jack, and West won the queen and cleared the suit. Next came the queen of clubs, ducked. A second club went to East's ace, and East led the jack of spades. Declarer now had enough information to avoid the error of playing the queen. East had shown with two aces plus the heart 10 and the spade jack, and would surely have opened the bidding in third seat with a king more. So declarer rose with the spade ace, played a diamond to dummy's jack and began playing out the club suit. South discarded a diamond and a spade on two good clubs as West also shed a diamond and a spade. On dummy's last club, declarer threw another spade and watched closely to see which card West would relinquish. In fact West now discarded his last good heart, and the key decision that South had to make was whether West had already unguarded his diamond king and was left with king and a small spade, or was down to the bare spade king and still had a small diamond. Reasoning that the opening lead might have been a spade if West had started with four in that suit, declarer got off lead with the queen of spades, and hapless West had to lead from the K-9 of diamonds to give South nine tricks.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

Joint ventures look very promising for you in the year ahead, provided you link up with capable, industrious persons. Lazy associates won't be of any value at all.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Competitive developments must be realistically assessed today, or else you might get involved in a situation where the odds are stacked against you. Don't kid yourself. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Instead of viewing situations with logic and objectivity today, you might resort to the unproductive luxury of emotionalizing. This standard of measurement won't work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you are wishy-washy today, there's a chance you could be drawn into an undesirable activity that does not serve your best interest. Don't let companions dictate your schedule.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An important relationship could be jeopardized today if you are rebellious rather than cooperative. Work with others, not against them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Systematize your work efforts today and establish an achievable agenda. Nothing productive will result if you proceed in a disorganized fashion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Keep everything out in the open and as uncomplicated as possible, especially in your social involvements today. Coyness or secret maneuvers could be interpreted as deceitful by your peers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today if your mate does something that displeases you, it is best not to review this behavior for the benefit of outsiders. This will only make a bad situation worse.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't be reluctant to defend your position today if co-workers try to palm off their responsibilities on you. You can only be used if you permit it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A little further down the line you might be denied doing or having something you want if you're too extravagant in the present. Don't learn this lesson the hard way.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It isn't likely your family will cater to you today if you have a cranky disposition. Members of your household won't be in the mood to pamper a bad temper.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let your impulsiveness gain the upper hand today and cause you to jump to erroneous conclusions. If you get off track, it could be very difficult to get back on again.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Usually you're pretty good at getting maximum mileage from the dollars you spend, but today could be an exception. Count your pennies with prudence.

Beer habit should be nipped in bud

DEAR ABBY: My son-in-law thinks it's perfectly all right to give his 3-year-old son sips of his beer and wine. He has been doing this for some time. I am extremely concerned over this, as the child seems to like beer and wine, and there is a history of alcoholism on both sides of the family. My daughter has expressed her disapproval of this, but he pays no attention to her.

Abby, please comment on this subject, as my son-in-law is extremely stubborn and nothing my daughter and I have said changes his mind. Maybe he will believe you.

CONCERNED GRANDMOTHER
DEAR CONCERNED: I hope he believes me when I say — unequivocally — that giving a child sips of beer and wine is child abuse, whether there is a history of alcoholism in the family or not.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your advice to "Sad," who had strong suspicions that her trusted friend was stealing from her, add this to the thousands of letters you'll receive from lawyers throughout the country. Our judicial system requires jurors to be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, not a "shadow of a doubt," as you stated. It is unlikely that any of our overworked prosecutors would even attempt to overcome the burden of "shadow of a doubt," coupled with a plea of "not guilty."

Further, since it was painfully obvious that "Sad's" friend was stealing from her, the friendship can never be the same, as she will always have a reasonable doubt as to his honesty.

ROYCE GUINN, ATTORNEY AT LAW, CLEVELAND
DEAR MR. GUINN: I did not receive "thousands" of letters advising me that the correct term was "beyond a reasonable doubt," but I did hear from half a dozen sharp-eyed readers.

Thanks to the others who wrote — two from New York, one from Florida and three from Nevada!

DEAR ABBY: Your suggestion that telephone operators eliminate the "ma'ams" and "sirs" to avoid mistakes is a good one.

If the woman sounds like a man, she should give up her four-pack-a-day habit. And if the man sounds like a woman, lifting barbells might help.

Red poppies worn to honor war dead

SANFORD — During May, 1915, young soldiers spent week after week crouched in trenches which filled with spring rain and turned the frozen earth to mud.

On those spring breezes came waves of mustard gas — and the smell of death.

That same rain made the wild poppies grow, field after field filled bright and red; red as the blood that had soaked the earth where thousands of soldiers had died.

A young doctor, John McCrae, struggled each day to save lives. He saw the number of crosses marking those lost in battle grow.

McCrae wrote a poem, "In Flanders Field," as a plea from those who lay dead to brave men who were still alive to fight on. It became a stirring emotional plea for all of us to remember those who had died in World War I.

The red poppy became nature's memorial to all men and women who died serving their country in four wars.

The American Legion Auxiliary assumed the total responsibility for making and distributing poppies in 1924.

In 1989, over eight million poppies were handmade by veterans in Veteran's Administration (VA) Hospitals. They earned $266,513 for rehabilitation programs.

The American Legion Auxiliary Post 53 in Sanford will be distributing poppies May 25-27 in the Sanford area. They ask that you honor American veterans this Memorial Day weekend and wear a poppy with pride. Poppy Chairman Cayrl Hogsett says it is a personal statement which simply says "I remember."

Left: Mayor Bettye Smith accepts a poppy from American Legion Auxiliary Chaplain Sue Hill and Poppy Chairman Cayrl Hogsett. Donations will be accepted during the distribution of the flowers May 25-27.

Infantry division reunites

DELAND — A sure way to start a riot is to walk into a room full of World War II veterans and call them all Sons of Bitch, unless that group happens to be the 100th Infantry Division Association who use that nickname, says President Bill Santopietro of Lake Mary.

The nickname comes from the fact that the city of Bitch, in southern France and the fortress Camp de Bitch, which had withstood many attacks of many warring armies over the centuries and never before taken by force, was liberated by force on March 16, 1945, by these same men who were then young American soldiers.

The mayor of the town gave them the name when he declared that all the members of the 100th Division were honorary "Sons of Bitch."

Florida Chapter of the 100th Infantry Division held a successful reunion at the Deland Hilton recently where the new officers were elected. They are President Bill Santopietro, First Vice-president Wayne Blankenship, Second Vice-president Wilkes Gibson, Secretary and treasurer Hugh Creveling, and Chaplain Lester Frew.
