Advice for tomato growers

One of the most widespread problems with tomatoes this time of year is failure to set fruit or blossom drop. Florida gardeners each year encounter this problem. While all of the reasons for poor fruit set and bloom drop are not completely understood, some of the most common causes are excessive nitrogen fertilization, high nighttime temperatures, variety, time of planting, excessive shade, drought or overwatering or insects.

Seminole rakes in water fines

SANFORD — Congratulations Seminole County, you have the dubious distinction of having the highest number of watering violations of the four counties which have undergone two-day enforcement "sweeps" by the St. Johns River Water Management District.

A total of 45 $50 fines were issued by water management employees during their two-day patrol of Seminole County Friday and Saturday. Thirty-five consent orders were signed by violators Friday and 10 were signed by violators Saturday. Violators agree to pay the fine and avoid a court appearance by signing the consent order.

During sweeps in recent weeks in three other central Florida counties, fewer consent orders were issued. For example, 34 fines were issued in Volusia County.

Sandra Glenn, chairman of the Seminole County commission, was protective of residents. "I don't think our residents are trying to be flagrant violators," Glenn said. "I think it's more of miscommunication."

Glenn said she would not consider county fines on violators unless the water-use restrictions become permanent. Seminole County has included the watering and car-washing restrictions on several monthly bills, said Gary Cinder, director of Environmental Services.

Jackpot jumps to $15 million

TALLAHASSEE — Nobody matched all six winning numbers in this week's Florida Lotto drawing, pushing the jackpot to an estimated $15 million for next week. Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said Sunday.

The winning numbers in Saturday's drawing were 9, 25, 27, 28, 39 and 44.

Although no one won the jackpot, more than 265,000 tickets qualified for smaller prizes.

LAKE MARY — The city government is now operating out of brand new facilities at 100 West Lake Mary Boulevard.

Phone calls are now being directed to a new number, (407)324-3000.

It will be a while yet before everything is operating at peak efficiency, as there are still the inevitable task of unpacking boxes and

City Clerk Carol Edwards said this morning. "If everything would be put away and in place, it would be super." She added, "But this is really a wonderful place to work."

State approves 334 legal fireworks

SANFORD — What would the Fourth of July be without fire crackers? How else could we have our own celebrations in the back yard?

Bob Christian, assistant fire marshal for the Seminole County Fire Department, warned that while there are 334 legal fireworks approved by the state fire marshal, there are still plenty of prohibited items that can be a safety hazard.

"If they have too much black powder," he said, "they can blow up and cause injury or fire."

Christian said possession and use of an illegal firecracker is a misdemeanor, but usually offenders are not sent to jail, rather the contraband is taken from them.

"We just confiscate the material," he explained. "Charges in Seminole County have never been pursued."

If the fire inspectors have anything to say in the matter, illegal fireworks won't be available in Seminole County, though Christian said many people travel to Georgia, where restrictions are far more lax, to purchase items like bottle rockets, Bombers and M-60s which are not legal in this state.

If you haven't yet purchased your pyrotechnic paraphanelia, there are eight places in Sanford where you

"We issued them peddlers licenses and they each got a special exception from the city commissioners which keeps them from having to move every two hours," Mason said. Under normal circumstances, a peddlers license would require the retailer to move to a new location which is at least 2,000 feet away every two hours.

Deputy bust helps cocaine moms

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole County Sheriff's Investigator Dan Prast, the first lawman in the world to make a solid case against a cocaine mother accused of delivering cocaine to her unborn child in her womb, has made a third similar arrest.

The latest suspect, Diana Francis Maddox, 29, 500 Ford Drive, rural Altamonte Springs, is from the same neighborhood as the two other women Prast arrested on similar charges more than one year ago.

To avoid prosecution, Prast said, Maddox has agreed to enter a new Seminole County rehabilitative program for cocaine mothers, which begins at the county jail.

This option wasn't available until April of this year. When Toni Hudson became the first woman in the world arrested for delivering cocaine through her umbilical cord to her two unborn babies born in 1987 and 1988, Prast said he had no option but to arrest and jail her.

The same was true of Jennifer Johnson, who was the second woman Prast charged with this crime. Both of these arrests and Johnsons

Garbage proposal on agenda tonight

LONGWOOD — City commissioners will discuss a new citywide solid waste collection proposal at its meeting tonight.

Five separate refuse contractors operate within the city limits, and the city believes it can improve service and have better control over the collections if only one contractor is involved, with an exclusive contract.

City Clerk Don Terry said, "We have requested and received proposals from the various refuse collection companies, and it appears as though Industrial Waste Service, Inc., has made the lowest bid and proposed the best service." IWS presently serves 55 percent of Longwood residents.

"If the exclusive contract is approved," Terry said, "some of the smaller users who have been signed with other companies may benefit through lower charges, while other residents will find either no change in cost or only a slight increase." Charges and rates are established by the City for these services. For solid waste, in approved containers, the unit

Two children killed in mobile home fire

JACKSONVILLE — Children playing with matches or a cigarette lighter apparently caused a mobile home fire that killed two small children, Jacksonville authorities said.

Four adults and three children lived in the mobile home, which caught fire Sunday afternoon. One of the children and her mother escaped the flames, but the other two children died. They were identified as the 6-month-old and 19-month-old children of Jake and Rosalice Jakubtina.

Neighbors said the father was away at work, and the mother ran to nearby mobile homes for help. Friends tried to save the children inside, but were only able to turn a garden hose on the burning home until firefighters arrived.

Investigators said the mobile home park had been plagued with electrical problems, but that they were not the initial cause of the blaze. Records show there have been four fires in the last 10 years in the same park.

Men arrested after interstate shooting

FORT LAUDERDALE — Two Miami men were arrested on charges of carrying a concealed weapon in connection with a shooting on Interstate 95.

Police said Stephen Wyche, 20, and Colin Forde, 22, were arrested after opening fire from their Cadillac while chasing a man driving a Nissan on Saturday. The two told troopers that the driver of the Nissan had stolen money from them at gunpoint.

They were arrested on the interstate in southern Broward County and were released from the Broward County Jail on $500 bond.

The Highway Patrol was still looking Monday for the driver of the Nissan and another man who was riding in the Cadillac.

Armed jail escapees captured

TRENTON — Gilchrist County authorities captured two men just two hours after they escaped at knifepoint from the county jail.

Officials said inmates Johnny Stewart and Curtis Joe Johnson overpowered a guard Sunday night and forced him to let them out of the cell area, then forced a dispatcher into a closet.

The men were armed with a knife, but authorities have not determined where they got it.

The prisoners ran from the jail, while deputies locked down the remaining 24 inmates. One deputy fired a shot at the escaping men, but did not hit anyone.

Officials said Stewart and Johnson took a shotgun from the jail, but it was found abandoned in a wooded area. Deputies with bloodhounds found the escaped prisoners about two hours later and took them back to jail after a brief struggle. No one was injured.

Klan plans march in West Palm Beach

WEST PALM BEACH — The Ku Klux Klan is seeking court permission to march down Palm Beach's exclusive Worth Avenue shopping thoroughfare in their white robes, permission that city authorities have denied.

Klan leader Richard Ford of Lantana and lawyers from the American Civil Liberties Union planned to argue before U.S. District Judge Norman Roettger today that city officials are obligated under the First Amendment to permit Ford and his group to demonstrate.

Ford calls himself the national Wizard of the Fraternal White Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, the smallest of three Klan groups operating in Florida.

Palm Beach officials said no one in Palm Beach is interested in anything the Klan has to say.

Klan watchers dismissed the case as an attempt to attract new members by stirring up controversy.

"I hate to have to say it, but in principle I support their right to march," said local NAACP President Maurice Hall.

Argument snowballs into protest

MIAMI — An argument over a pair of pants snowballed into two days of angry protests that trapped a merchant inside his store, worsened relations between Miami's blacks and Hispanics and cost $200,000 in extra police protection.

About 1,000 angry Haitians trapped the store owner inside the Rapid Transit Factory Outlet Saturday to protest the alleged beating of a Haitian customer on Friday.

The siege ended peacefully Saturday night when police sneaked the store owner out through the back door. The owner, who usually opens on Sundays, heeded police advice and stayed closed Sunday.

No one was injured or arrested during the two-day protest, although city leaders estimated the bill for police protection will cost taxpayers more than $200,000.

The crowd said a Haitian customer, Abner Alexi, was unfairly beaten by store employees and then unfairly arrested by Miami police Friday. They said store owner Luis Reyes should have been arrested.

FORT LAUDERDALE — A 14-year-old mentally handicapped boy shot and killed his grandmother Sunday with a gun he found in her purse while looking for peppermint candy she usually kept there, police said.

Azzie Coper Inman, 67, was pronounced dead on arrival at Broward General Medical Center shortly after the incident at 1:05 p.m. Police said no charges were filed against the youth, whose name was withheld because of his age, because the shooting was thought to be accidental.

The family had just returned from church and the youth was watching Inman iron clothes in preparation for a family reunion in Georgia about 1:05 p.m. in a bedroom of the house they had moved into about a month ago.

Inman was talking to friend Cheryl Graham, 42, when the boy decided to go in her purse and look for the candy. Instead, he found the .22 caliber handgun inside, police spokesman Ott Cefkin said.

"He said he found the 8-shot revolver and, believing it to be unloaded from previous experience, he turned it toward her and fired and the bullet slammed into her chest," Cefkin said. "She then said, 'You shot me,' and staggered into the hall and collapsed."

The shot was heard by Sadie Grava, neighbor and friend, who called police.

"I heard a shot and I thought it was a firecracker," she said. "So (the youth) ran to the door and he told me, he said, 'Sadie, please go call the police. Go call the police.' I said, 'What happened?' So I came to the step there, I didn't come in, I heard the shot and I knew somebody was shot."

Herbert Carter, the woman's husband was asleep in another room, Cefkin said.

He said the youth, a seventh-grade student, broke into tears after the shooting. He said the boy had been living with his grandmother for about six years.

"The youth was released to other family members, pending action by child welfare officials and a review by the Broward State Attorney's Office," he said.

Sweeping proposal would ban all construction for two years

United Press International

SARASOTA — Sarasota County voters probably will decide in the Sept. 4 primary whether to enact a two-year ban on all building in the county, the most sweeping proposal yet to limit growth in Florida.

The moratorium would appear on the ballot as an amendment to the County Charter, according to a Sunday report in the Tampa Tribune.

As of Friday, elections officials had verified 7,811 of the 8,183 signatures needed to put the issue up for a vote, and had more petitions to check. The deadline is July 9 and the sponsors said they had already collected more than enough signatures to qualify.

It promises to be one of the most emotionally charged and bitterly contested election issues the county has ever faced.

"Everybody is watching us right now," County Commission Chairman Jim Greenwald said.

Proponents said growth has run rampant in the county for years and that a moratorium is the only way to control it before Sarasota's environment and quality of life are destroyed.

Opponents deny that and say a moratorium will cost thousands

Bank bailout could cost $7 billion

United Press International

MIAMI — The cost of rescuing CentTrust Federal Savings Bank could exceed $7 billion when interest costs and losses from bad investments are figured in, making it the nation's costliest savings and loan bailout.

Federal regulators seized CentTrust Feb. 2 and sold it Friday to California's Great Western Bank for $98 million, an unusually quick resolution.

CentTrust depositors are now customers of the healthiest thrift in the nation.

But behind the scenes are billions of dollars in junk bonds, consumer loans and high-rate brokered deposits that CentTrust took in from professional investors. Those are yet to be liquidated.

Government officials estimated a few months ago the CentTrust bailout would cost taxpayers $2 billion. When interest costs and losses from bad investments are figured in, the total expense balloons to more than $7 billion, according to a Sunday report in The Miami Herald.

"What CentTrust has done is guarantee Miami a place in banking history — as the place where the costliest ever S&L failure took place," said Kenneth Thomas, a Miami banking analyst.

Great Western bought 71 CentTrust branches, which hold $5.2 billion in deposits. But Great Western only wants to keep $2.1 billion of the deposits. Those are retail deposits, belonging to consumers, and are generally the kind of accounts financial institutions covet.

To back those accounts, the federal government has fronted Great Western $1.8 billion.

But there are also $3.1 billion in deposits that Great Western doesn't want because of their high rates. Those are brokered deposits, high-rate accounts placed by professional investment firms.

Great Western says it will lower the rates and in all likelihood the brokers handling the deposits will move the money elsewhere.

That is a sound policy but it means those brokered deposits will come for their money, which CentTrust does not have. CentTrust invested the cash in risky vehicles such as junk bonds.

Growth hits city fire department

By AMY WILSON
Herald intern

Sanford's third fire station under construction on Upsale Road.

SANFORD — The Sanford Fire Department has requested a $67,800 budget increase which, if approved by the city commission next week, could mean a matching state grant.

The request includes four new personnel — three firefighter/paramedics and one emergency medical service coordinator.

The fire department says it needs the people for its third station, which is currently under construction at 1300 Central Park Drive and should be completed by mid-October, according to Assistant Chief Ron Neel.

Neel said Thursday the department can respond to emergency calls such as heart attacks more quickly than ambulances, which are dispatched mainly through hospitals. However, their current personnel are not authorized to administer advanced life-support methods like intravenous drugs and cardiac defibrillation, the shock method for treating heart attacks.

"It's very critical in heart attacks to get there in three to six minutes. Usually we get there before they (ambulances) do — it usually takes them seven to ten minutes to respond."

The requested firefighters will be trained paramedics, and can administer the advanced life-support procedures. None of the department's present 55 personnel are paramedics.

"If we're first on the scene we can start these procedures and maybe save more lives," Neel said.

City Manager Frank Faison has proposed the new budget to the city commission for discussion next week. The proposal calls for one EMS coordinator at $27,181 and three firefighter/paramedics for $60,699. He said the state has offered a matching grant which would help pay for new medical equipment.

"If the grant is approved, and if the city commission accepts the proposed budget, we will only be paying for half of the manning and equipment — and that's a good deal," Faison said.

City Commissioner Whitey Eckstein said he will support the increase. He said the city "has no choice" but to provide personnel for the new fire station because of the matching grant for the Advanced Life Support program.

"It's a once in a lifetime opportunity, and we have to take advantage of it," he said. "We're one of the only cities that does not have the ALS system."

'God squad' uses subtlety to keep peace

United Press International

VIRGINIA BEACH — A team of area ministers on a mission of peace is patrolling this resort city, wary for signs of trouble and wearing white T-shirts ballyhooing their mission: POLICE CHAPLAIN.

Rev. Larry Edwards, a Daytona Beach chaplain flew in last week to train ministers and police on how to collaborate to defuse arguments before they erupt into fistfights.

Edwards has helped form similar systems in Daytona Beach and other Florida municipalities, the Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star of Virginia Beach newspapers reported. Edwards said that in Daytona Beach, which is about one-third black, the alliance between police and mostly black clergy has gone a long way in easing relations between officers and some blacks who mistrust them.

"I think it's better than having a cop," said Tarik Eaquerra, 18, a black man whose two black male companions had been in a shouting match with a white woman whose white boyfriend had been arrested for starting a fight with another black man.

"They're not as forceful," Eaquerra said in an interview published Sunday. "Police overuse their authority. A chaplain keeps things from escalating. They're more subtle with their authority."

"People are really polite and responsive," said the Rev. Bill Dale of the Church of the Ascension, who wore a black clerical collar with his T-shirt.

Grim prospects

Backed into a corner by Yasser Arafat's waffling on the fundamental issue of terrorism, President Bush had little choice but to suspend American contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Nevertheless, the action further polarizes the increasingly volatile confrontation in the Middle East.

The breakdown in the U.S.-PLO dialogue is the direct consequence of a foiled terrorist raid on Israeli beaches last month by PLO extremists. Ironically, the assault probably achieved its ultimate political objective, which was to undermine the American-sponsored peace process and, more specifically, to disrupt the on-going talks between U.S. and PLO representatives. Anti-American hardliners within the PLO are no doubt gleeful that the White House has broken off the exchanges.

State Department officials are convinced Arafat did not order the attack on May 30. Rather, it was planned and executed by the notorious Abul Abbas, leader of a radical PLO faction and the mastermind behind the 1985 hijacking of the Achille Lauro cruise ship. But Arafat refused to condemn the raid in unambiguous language or to take disciplinary action against the ringleader.

Thus, the PLO chairman was violating the conditions under which the dialogue with Washington was initiated 18 months ago. Those terms included the PLO's recognition of Israel's right to exist and a renunciation of terrorism. Arafat's reluctance to take action against Abbas apparently stemmed from his fear of alienating powerful extremists within the PLO.

Although the administration gave Arafat and other PLO moderates ample time to repudiate the raid, the President was forced into action by Congress. A resolution urging suspension of the U.S.-PLO dialogue was about to be approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. That would have left the White House in the politically embarrassing position of appearing to be soft both on terrorism and Israel's security. Accordingly, Mr. Bush's decision was largely a pre-emptive move.

The risk now is that, without the moderating influence of the U.S.-PLO discussions, the Palestinian movement will become increasingly radicalized. Fanatical PLO elements singularly committed to the destruction of Israel have certainly gained the upper hand, at least for now.

To get the talks back on track, all that Arafat has to do is denounce the raid on the Israeli coast and presumably, expel Abbas from the PLO. Whether he actually has the power base to challenge Abbas, is however, uncertain.

In an effort to salvage the peace process, President Bush also prodded the newly reorganized Israeli government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. The White House, in a letter to Shamir, asked Israel to reconsider its rejection of U.S.-sponsored negotiations with the Palestinians. The talks would be to arrange elections in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip; that would be followed by negotiations to create a permanent Palestinian homeland.

These events, ranging from the revival of PLO terrorism to the formation of an Israeli government opposed to the American peace initiative, make the prospects for peace ever more grim. As has occurred so regularly in the past, the forces of extremism in the Middle East have prevailed over reason.

Drug deals that burn

A new trend for drug companies is to discount their drugs for state Medicaid programs. The state gets a deal on the drugs and the pharmaceutical company gets a guaranteed share of the Medicaid market.

That's fine for everyone except you. Drug companies can only afford to discount their prices to certain clients for two reasons. Either those prices were grossly inflated in the first place, or the retail customers are charged more to make up for the loss on the discount sales.

Either way, you lose.

Memories of Berlin Wall still fresh

WEST BERLIN — For the past two weeks, the city has rung with the sound of woodpeckers, in reality they're wallpeckers, tapping out the last pieces of the Berlin Wall. All this activity because, after this week, goeth the mayor, "Nevermore." On June 14, West Berlin Mayor Walter Momper announced that he wanted the wall down as of today, the day East and West German currencies are unified. Momper will not leave it there to be picked at until even the dust is gone. He wants it out of the way now.

The prickly problem of who would take it down was settled before Momper's June 14 announcement. Negotiations had been going on since November between East and West, and it was decided that since East Germany put it up, at $60 million a mile, East Germany should take it down. It will be used for road gravel. The prodigious task is increased by the dimensions of it. The wall is not one but two walls with a "death zone" of land mines and booby traps in between. There are at least 60 miles of double wall and enough barbed wire to circle the globe almost twice.

Tourists and entrepreneurs did not wait for Momper's demolition order. They have been driving, flying and running to the wall with hammers and chisels — or renting the tools from hawkers at the wall for $3. The less ambitious simply buy pieces of the wall (some bogus) from stalls that stretch from the Brandenburg Gate to Checkpoint Charlie.

We visited the wall at Bernauer Street and witnessed the last minute rush of chiseling. Scenes which would have been extraordinary a year ago are becoming routine. A high-school girl climbed the 13-foot wall on the toothholds created by the scavengers and then couldn't get down. She uttered obscenities until a patient East Berlin border guard — the same guard who might have shot her for climbing the wall a year ago — arrived with a ladder and helped her down, with a scolding for risking her life and limb.

The souvenir collectors are mostly tourists. East and West Berliners aren't particularly interested in saving a piece of the monstrosity that hemmed them in and out. It was evident as we watched construction cranes knock open the Bernauer Street crossing that the Berliners don't need physical reminders.

Some were tearful as they recalled Aug. 13, 1961, when they woke up to a prison of barbed wire. An apartment building became part of the wall and when East German police arrived to seal the windows, desperate tenants began leaping to freedom in the West. West Berlin firemen rigged safety nets, but four people died from the fall. One father saw his son land safely in a net, and then jumped himself and broke his spine. "I would jump again if I had to," he declared. Lost forever is the huge evangelical church, consecrated in 1894, that wound up in the no-man's land when Berlin was divided. The East Germans tolerated the church for years until it was used to screen a few escape attempts. Finally, in 1985, they blew it up with dynamite.

Ironically, it was the Church of Reconciliation. As former parishioners walked over the grass where the church used to be, they spoke of a need for reconciliation between East and West — a task that will require as much spiritual strength as economic subsidies.

Tourists and entrepreneurs did not wait for Momper's demolition order.

GEORGE F. WILL

Court makes—not decides—law

WASHINGTON — Einstein preferred his violin to science. Mozart would rather have been a dancer than a composer. One wonders what the five members of the Supreme Court majority would rather be doing. Clearly their hearts, not to mention their minds, are not in constitutional law.

Last week, the Court, now the second legislative branch of the federal government, continued its campaign to purify American democracy, this time by ridding it of a blemish (as the Court sees it) traditional to democracy. The tradition is patronage. It is a practice as old as this republic, one favored by the Founders but, we now learn, incompatible with the Constitution they wrote and ratified.

In 1980, Gov. Jim Thompson of Illinois, a Republican, instituted a hiring freeze under which state officials were forbidden to hire, fill vacancies or create new positions without the governor's permission. Various aggrieved people sued, claiming that under the freeze the governor was running a patronage system. When granting exceptions to the freeze, the governor's agency emphasized party registration support.

Justice Brennan, joined by White, Marshall, Blackmun and Stevens, argues that the Court is only making a minor extension to 1976 and 1980 rulings. Those rulings said that conditioning public employment on political affiliation unconstitutionally inhibits the exercise of fundamental rights in a way "tantamount to coercion."

Justice Scalia, dissenting, says: "The public official offered a bribe is not 'coerced' to violate the law, and the private citizen offered a patronage job is not 'coerced' to work for the party." Furthermore, Scalia, joined by Rehnquist, O'Connor and Kennedy, argues that patronage can conduce to good government.

Scalia cites various arguments that patronage serves the public good. They include: Patronage strengthens party discipline and combats political fragmentation, thereby protecting elected government from small, cohesive interest groups.

Patronage thickens the ranks of party activists and allows them to rely more on people-intensive and less on money-intensive campaigning. By concentrating party cadres on practical rewards, patronage discourages ideological excesses and encourages moderate two-party systems. Patronage has often been a means for the political inclusion of previously excluded minorities.

Scalia stresses that the Court need not find these arguments persuasive; neither need it ignore the undeniable drawbacks of patronage systems such as incompetence and corruption. The Court should only see that balancing the good and bad facets of patronage systems is a political judgment best left to political institutions. Scalia's contention is only that the Court should acknowledge that a patronage system can be a reasonable political choice that the people's elected representatives are permitted to make.

Some disbursement of jobs on the basis of political affiliation must be constitutional. Otherwise, every President's Cabinet would be unconstitutional. How deeply the patronage knife should cut is a question about which reasonable communities can differ. And not all answers will be reasonable. But "unreasonable" and "unconstitutional" are not interchangeable adjectives.

The Court, intoxicated by its institutional arrogance and ideological abstractions, offers no deference toward the wisdom of American communities, expressed through the democratic process, as they adopt various mixes of patronage and merit systems. The Court is unprincipled — it must be — when it asserts a constitutionally correct line between these two components of any government hiring system. No constitutional principle regarding the correct mix of patronage and merit systems can be wrung from the document.

Once the Court rejects the constitutional relevance of America's political tradition, and once it also acknowledges, as it must, that some politically based employment is permissible, then the Court says Scalia, "has left the realm of law and entered the domain of political science." But because politics is not a science, the Court must legislate its preferences.

The Court is both doctrinaire and imprecise. The Court says patronage is impermissible except when party affiliation is an "appropriate requirement." Meaning what? Nobody knows. The Court will legislate on that in future cases.

Lower courts, struggling to implement the Court's previously expressed preferences, have held that it is constitutional to discharge on political grounds a regional director of a rural housing administration, but not a director of roads; the second-in-command of a water department, but not the vice president of a development bank. Such incoherence is the result of the Court's capriciousness, which is unconstrained by constitutional principles.

Balancing the good and bad facets of patronage systems is a political judgment.

Concern for fireworks safety

Whether or not fireworks are as prevalent in your area as they were a generation ago, or whether they are illegal or not — they still injure thousands of Americans across the nation each year.

There were approximately 9,500 individuals injured this way in 1989 and many of those were injured seriously. Most of the injuries were to young persons, some of whom lost sight as a result.

This will likely happen again this year unless we can in some way get to the public with a message of danger. Please help.

As president of the Florida Society of Ophthalmology, and in the interest of the safety of any potential Florida fireworks accident victim, I ask your help to alert our fellow citizens to the dangers. Many who never see or handle fireworks think they are no threat in their area, especially since at least 25 states have attempted to limit their sale and use.

The approximately 500 medical eye doctors of the Florida Society of Ophthalmology heartily encourage families to enjoy community-sponsored fireworks displays, but they warn that knowledgeable adults should oversee individual use of fireworks, even relatively safe fireworks such as sparklers. Adult supervision may not be sufficient unless each person is familiar with the dangers and general rules of fireworks safety.

These rules include the following:
● If possible always wear safety glasses or goggles when setting fireworks.

● Do not put firecrackers in bottles, tin cans, or under clay pots, since these objects can shatter and shoot fragments into the eye.

● Don't throw sparklers into the air or wave them near a person's eyes.

● Be sure the firework has a clearly printed manufacturer name, address and cautionary label. Fireworks lacking this information are probably illegal. More than one out of four reported injuries each year are caused by illegal fireworks.

● Read the instruction label before igniting a product. A majority of firework-related injuries were caused from misuse rather than product defect, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC).

● In case of an eye injury, do not press, rub or touch the eye. Seek immediate care from an ophthalmologist or a hospital emergency room.

We Florida eye physicians are saddened at the thought of any child losing vision, or suffering the removal of an eye because they were unaware of the danger involved in explosive fireworks. We hope all our citizens will work towards making this the safest holiday possible.

In some states cocaine mothers have been arrested for child abuse, but Johnson's conviction was the first ever under a drug dealer's delivery statute, Prast said. Hudson pled guilty to a lesser charge, and Johnson was successfully prosecuted in 1989, on the delivery charge. Both received community rehabilitation assistance and were sentenced to probation.

Prast said the idea to prosecute the mothers for delivery of cocaine was an innovative. "Looking out for these children is probably my main objective. But the mother has a problem, too, and we want to make sure she gets some type of attention," Prast said.

Prast said in 1987, when he and other officials were trying to determine how to deal with women who abuse drugs when pregnant, they realized the women couldn't be prosecuted under the state's child abuse statute, because no doctor could testify to actual abuse or damage attributable to the mother's cocaine use, a requirement under Florida law. Urine tests at birth determine if cocaine is in the child's system delivered through the mother's system via the umbilical cord.

Studies are still incomplete on the long-term impact of prenatal use of cocaine on a baby, Prast said. Babies born to cocaine mothers often have serious health problems, and the long-term impact on the children is unknown, he said.

In investigating the Hudson and Johnson cases, Prast said, he was breaking new ground. He covered all bases, and has now come up with a plan for other investigators to follow when pursuing this type of investigation.

In an earlier interview, Hudson said because of fear and her state of mind altered by cocaine use, at the time of her arrest she would not have voluntarily come forward and asked for help.

Both women now urge addicted pregnant women to take advantage of the help offered to them in Seminole County. They said they are grateful for the help they received, although at first they felt officials had no right to intervene in their lives.

"It's very rewarding to see they (Hudson and Johnson) are doing well," Prast said. "In all these cases, the mothers wanted their babies. I think they knew they were harming their babies, but they couldn't stop."

Prast said during her pregnancy Johnson would become high on cocaine and call rescue workers when she could no longer feel her baby moving in her womb. These emergency trips to the hospital to determine the baby was still alive, Prast said, helped him document Johnson's cocaine use while pregnant.

Prast said he believes Maddox was high on cocaine, and was in possession of drug paraphernalia when he arrested her four days after she gave birth to her son June 18 at Florida Hospital Altamonte. Maddox's reportedly negative attitude when arrested, "was expected," Prast said. "She told me she's Toni Hudson's cousin. That really got me. She should have seen what Toni did and went through, and she still went ahead and did it herself."

"I don't know how many others are out there," he continued. "I hope the success of Toni and Jennifer sheds a ray of hope for some. I just hope they aren't getting the message that if you have a crack baby in Seminole County, you're going to jail. We want them to get help and we now have an alternative to jail time. The program and what we're trying to do isn't meant for jail time, unless they don't want to get help."

Maddox, who is accused of using cocaine about three times a week up until two days before her son was born, received no prenatal care. Prenatal care is a requirement for expectant, suspected cocaine mothers who enter the new program, Prast said.

Maddox is in the county jail and her baby is in state custody.

She is one of the first accused cocaine mothers to commit to the unique, local in-jail, and out-of-jail program of rehabilitation, called Cooperative Rehabilitation Abuse Contract (CRAC) initiated here in April. If she breaks her contract and fails to complete the program, Prast said, Maddox may be prosecuted.

CRAC, the brainchild of Sanford Police Detective James McAuliffe, who has also arrested at least one suspected cocaine mother who has opted to join the program, gives police and prosecutors a tool with which to offer an option other than arrest or prosecution for cocaine mothers, Prast said.

"We have to prove the program works, but it's there for those who want to utilize it," Prast said. When suspected cocaine mothers are identified before giving birth, the program offers them prenatal care and treatment for their addiction in lieu of arrest. If arrested after giving birth they can enter the rehabilitation program at the county jail and possibly avoid prosecution, Prast said.

"Our objective wasn't to jail Jennifer (Johnson), but to bring attention to a very serious problem here that we had to do something about," Prast said. Hospitals are required to report the births of cocaine babies to the state, who in turn notifies local lawmen who investigate the cases.

"A few years ago I recall HRS (state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services) asking us if we were working cases (against cocaine mothers). We had to say no, because we had nothing to work with. We found we had a definite problem. In 1987 we had a baby born who was very messed up. The baby died. We came up with this concept of prosecution under drug laws," Prast said.

And McAuliffe came up with an alternative to arrest and prosecution, which through help from various county service agencies, gives cocaine mothers a second chance.

price is $2.42 per cubic yard except in cases requiring special handling due to weight, size or type of materials.

Terry said, "The city has been receiving 80 cents for every cubic yard picked up by the various contractors. Under this exclusive contract, we'll be getting 75 cents per cubic yard, which means a guaranteed minimum of $175,000 per year, which will certainly help in the city's revenue."

If the contract is approved, IWS will be required to operate an office in Longwood, resolve all complaints within 24 hours of notification, and meet various standards of performance established by the city.

Terry said IWS has also agreed to cooperate with the city in a planned future expansion of the city's recycling program.

The proposal will be up for first reading at 7 p.m. tonight at the Longwood City Hall commission chambers, 175 W. Warren Ave.

issued peddlers licenses to those retailers, the county issued retail licenses, which they said makes it "impossible" to keep track of the number of retailers selling firecrackers.

"I'd guess we've had four or five people come in here to get a license," said one Seminole County licensing official who did not want to be identified. "I don't know if fewer people are selling more firecrackers or if firecrackers are just not as popular as they once were."

Mason said vendors must receive a certificate from the Department of Insurance and Treasurer as a seasonal retailer before they can apply for the city license.

The city license which, according to Mason, can be used for only a few weeks from "about the middle of June" until July 5 is issued at the half-year price of $66.25 per location.

Mason said some of the peddlers who had applied for licenses in Sanford had done so for multiple locations around town.

In addition to the state certificate and the license, Mason said each vendor must have the fire department inspect their inventory to be sure that all items are safe and legal for sale.

Christian said the fire inspectors check the inventory of each site against the list of legal items and those which are not on the list are confiscated. Periodic checks by inspectors are made at each site without notice.

"We try not to harass these people or their customers," he explained. "We just walk through and look at the inventory. If there's an illegal item then we confiscate it. If not, we go on."

He added that last year, there was only one large seizure of contraband fireworks. A large portion of their inventory was taken from a vendor in the Winter Springs area. Christian said the same seller has returned this year, but an inspection of their inventory has not yet been conducted so they can not begin selling to the public.

He also said action can not be taken against people who use illegal firecrackers on their own property, but they will confiscate materials which are involved in a fire or an injury.

"The best we can do is warn people about the dangers of using illegal fireworks," Christian said.

even months before we know anything for sure."

All Kazi, industrial waste program manager for the Department of Environmental Resources said a report from his investigators charged S&H with building without a permit a facility that produces industrial waste, operating without a permit a facility that produces industrial waste and discharging industrial waste off the production site into the environment.

"That is what we believe," Kazi said. "What we are concerned with is where wastewater is going — the point of discharge and how it affects ground and surface water."

Kazi said the DER investigation confirmed the FFGC report of a subatane flowing over the facility's parking lot, and that the manufacturer of aluminum auto parts sends its wastewater to a wastewater retention pond on its property which has been overflowing into Mill Creek. Kazi said DER has been investigating the area around the plant since April 30.

"We believe that this has been going on for a number of years, but we can't say for sure," Kazi said. "We will determine later if they have done irreparable damage (to the environment)."

Kazi said officials from S&H are aware of the investigation and that the facility has stopped the discharging the industrial wastes.

S&H President David Nighbert and company founder James Hutchings could not be reached for comment this morning.

Kazi said part of the industrial waste consisted of nitric acid used to clean the grease off aluminum tubes that the plant produces.

Kazi said no formal charges have been filed yet and that so far S&H had stopped the overflow of the wastewater from the retention pond.

S&H, a $100 million-a-year plant, has operated in Sanford since 1968.

"It was an example of real shoddy housekeeping," game commission Lt. Don McMillen said. "But it's one of the more serious cases we've seen in Central Florida."

S&H could face civil and criminal charges for the latest violations, according to DER officials. McMillen could not say whether the game commission would file charges, but other officials said the DER intends to lodge civil charges within the next few weeks.

Small plane collision kills four

MUSCLE SHOALS, Ala. — Two single-engine planes collided in flight Sunday night, killing all four people aboard the two craft, authorities said.

Two people were found aboard each of the airplanes after the mid-air crash, said St. Florian Police Chief William Hendrix. Hendrix said he had no details of the accident, which occurred about 8:24 p.m.

The names of the victims were not immediately available.

Yeager escapes flaming aircraft

JACKPOT, Nev. — Jeana Yeager, pilot of the Voyager airplane that flew around the world on a single load of fuel, escaped unhurt with her co-pilot after their experimental aircraft caught fire during a weekend race.

Flames broke out in flight Sunday during the race over Nevada, forcing the plane into an emergency landing with burned brakes that sent the craft careening off a landing strip, officials said.

NOW vows all out fight

SAN FRANCISCO — The National Organization for Women ended its annual convention by re-electing a slate abortion rights champions, vowing to support candidates favoring its position in elections around the nation.

Delegates Sunday also passed a resolution aimed at intervening in Louisiana if a strict anti-abortion bill becomes law.

Most populous nation starts census

BEIJING — China began in earnest its most ambitious census since the 1949 revolution, hoping to yield an accurate count of the world's most populous nation despite its vast number of transients and unregistered children.

Nearly 7 million census-takers fanned out Sunday morning into the alleys of the country's teeming cities, mountain villages and rural hamlets to gain what officials hope will be an accurate profile of China's estimated 1.1 billion people.

The 10-day census, the fourth since the 1949 founding of communist China, is the first since 1982 and the first in which census-takers will go door-to-door and compile detailed survey forms on each household.

Victim's father carries fake bomb to U.S.

LONDON — A Briton whose daughter was killed when Pan Am Flight 103 exploded over Scotland said he breached security at London's Heathrow Airport and carried a dummy replica of the Pan Am bomb undetected on a flight to New York.

Jim Swire said Sunday he smuggled a radio cassette player filled with marzipan, an almond paste resembling the plastic explosive Semtex, on a London-to-New York flight three weeks ago to demonstrate security remains too lax to thwart terrorist acts.

Peace Corps volunteer kidnapped

By CARLA COOPER

BACOLOD, Philippines — Communist guerrillas kidnapped a Peace Corps volunteer in the central Philippines last month, telling his wife they wanted to "borrow" him "for questioning," authorities disclosed Sunday.

The officials said guerrillas of the communist New People's Army on June 13 kidnapped Timothy Swanson, 26, an agricultural extension volunteer from Cheyenne, Wyo. In his house in the village of Patang in the mountainous municipality of Sibay on Negros Island.

Swanson's Filipino wife, Merle, said Sunday in Sibay that three armed men came to her house that day and said they were "borrowing" her husband. "They were very courteous. ... They promised to send him back after two days," she said.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrage said in Manila that American officials learned of the kidnapping Saturday while trying to contact 261 Peace Corps volunteers to enforce Washington's decision to recall them from the Philippines after receiving intelligence reports that guerrillas planned to kill or kidnap them.

"U.S. government policy is we do not negotiate with terrorists and kidnappers, nor give any ransom," Schrage said. He said all the Peace Corps volunteers had been accounted for except Swanson. Most had left the Philippines and the rest will leave Monday, he said.

Negros Occidental Gov. Daniel Lacson met Sunday with U.S. officials dispatched to Bacolod, 300 miles south of Manila, to inquire about the kidnapping. Lacson said he learned about the abduction only Sunday.

Merle Swanson declined to discuss the kidnapping, but indicated that her husband, who speaks the local longo dialect, knew the men who came to the house.

She said five days after her husband disappeared, he sent a letter asking her not to inform authorities about the kidnapping and asking her for his reading glasses, books, clothing and other personal belongings.

She said she put the items on the porch and the rebels picked them up during the night.

New deutsche mark fares well

By CLIVE FREEMAN
United Press International

EAST BERLIN — The new German deutsche mark fared well Monday, trading slightly higher in Tokyo in its first test on a major international market since East and West Germany merged their economies in a significant step toward total unification.

Tens of thousands of East Germans jostled through lines Sunday to trade their nation's practically worthless money for the powerful deutsche mark of West Germany.

In Tokyo, foreign exchange dealers said the mark was traded actively in the wake of

Mariners rough up Brewers

SEATTLE — Nothing like a good fight to spoil a fine baseball game.

With the Mariners ahead 6-2 in the eighth inning, Brewers reliever Bob Sebra smacked Tracy Jones with a pitch. Jones began fighting with Brewers catcher B.J. Surhoff prompting a 10-minute, bench-clearing brawl.

"Depending on your perspective that was the worst one or the best one ever," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said.

Seattle won its fourth straight, 6-2, on the strength of two Jeffrey Leonard homers and Erik Hanson's five-hit pitching.

"I've been in the game for 17 years and I've never seen a fight like that in my life," said umpire crew chief John Shulock.

"I drilled him," Sebra said. "Yeah, I hit him on purpose. Things aren't going right for me or the team. It's time for someone to take a lump."

Elsewhere in the AL, Boston routed Texas 15-4, Cleveland downed California 5-3, Toronto edged Oakland 4-3, Detroit clocked Kansas City 9-4, Chicago blanked New York 4-0 and Minnesota nipped Baltimore 4-3.

WIMBLEDON

Graf takes on Capriati

WIMBLEDON, England — Jennifer Capriati's happy daydreams will become hard reality Monday when she looks across the net of Centre Court Wimbledon and faces, for the first time, her idol, Steffi Graf.

The bubbly 14-year-old, who just joined the pro tour in March, is excited about her inaugural meeting with the top-ranked women's player.

"I really can't wait. I've always wanted to play her," said Capriati.

The round of 16 meeting between tennis' reigning queen and her heir apparent will pose a variety of contrasts. The blond and businesslike Graf, the defending champion, possesses the finest forehand in women's tennis and the best footspeed, an ideal combination for grasscourt play. The dark-haired Capriati, seeded 12th, is less stern on-court and not so quick, but her groundstrokes are hard, deep and consistent.

Men's defending champion Boris Becker faces 1987 champion Pat Cash and 1988 titlist Stefan Edberg will play Michael Chang for the first time since losing to the American in last year's French Open final.

WORLD CUP

England, W. Germany advance

ROME — Gary Lineker ended Cameroon's improbable World Cup run Sunday with two penalty goals, advancing England to a semifinal date in Turin, where dislike for the English runs deep.

The Redoubtable Lions, who had already made tournament history by being the first African nation to make the quarterfinals, looked like certain winners when they led 2-1 with time running out on the English.

But Lineker drew two fouls in the penalty area in the 83rd and 105th minutes and took the penalties himself, the first earning his team extra time, and the second completing a 3-2 victory.

The win earned England a Wednesday matchup with West Germany, who reached their third successive semifinal by beating Czechoslovakia 1-0 in Milan earlier Sunday.

The game will take place in Turin, the northern city which is home of Juventus, the club team whose fans were trampled to death at Heysel Stadium in 1985 before a European Cup match with Liverpool.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Salazar returns with a bang

Luis Salazar's return to San Diego was highlighted by fond memories of his playing days for the Padres as well as game-winning home-run power for the Cubs.

Salazar, whose played for San Diego on three separate occasions since 1980, smashed a three-run homer Sunday to cap a four-run eighth inning that lifted Chicago to an 11-10 victory over the Padres.

"I still hear the cheers (here)," said Salazar. "It's very nice. They've remembered me for a long time. I have good memories and I miss this place a lot."

Trailing 10-7 in the eighth, Doug Dasenczo and Ryne Sandberg singled with one out and both runners advanced on a groundout. Dasenczo then scored on Andre Dawson's single, setting up Salazar's blast.

Elsewhere in the National League, New York clipped Cincinnati 3-2, Philadelphia topped Houston 8-4, Montreal ripped Atlanta 5-1, Pittsburgh pounded San Francisco 8-5 and St. Louis nipped Los Angeles 6-5.

Trevino overcomes lightning, Nicklaus

United Press International

PARAMUS, N.J. — On the way to winning the U.S. Senior Open on his first attempt, Lee Trevino had to overcome two terrifying obstacles.

He dealt with the first one on the fourth hole when a sudden lightning storm struck the Ridgewood Country Club, and once this blew over, Trevino was left to contend with Jack Nicklaus.

When all the battling was over, Trevino emerged with a score of 5-under-par 67 for a two-shot victory over Nicklaus.

"This is just great," Trevino said. "I wish I would have played with him (Nicklaus). That's the only way the icing could have been on the cake. It's always a feather in your cap when you can beat Jack Nicklaus."

Trevino was struck by lightning while playing in the 1975 Western Open, and this may have been the cause of the back problems he has suffered since. Still, he wasn't disturbed at Sunday's storm.

"I wasn't concerned with it," he explained. "The USGA (U.S. Golf Association) did a good job putting us in vans, but the only trouble is we were in a clump of trees."

"I thought if a tree fell on the van, there we go."

Trevino's victory was assured when Nicklaus, needing a birdie on the par-5 17th hole to create a playoff, missed a 4-foot putt for bogey, the ball hitting the outside of the cup and veering right. Oddly, a light rain started falling again while Nicklaus was playing No. 17, and it was the first and only bogey for Nicklaus on a par-5 hole all week.

Why pitchers kill outfielders: Hawkins loses no-hitter

United Press International

CHICAGO — The New York Yankees, who own the worst record in the majors, raised the art of losing to an historic level Sunday.

Andy Hawkins set a major-league record for largest margin of defeat in a complete-game no-hitter, being victimized by two outfield errors as the Chicago White Sox scored a 4-0 victory over the Yankees.

"You can't put it into words," Yankees Manager Stump Merrill said. "The guy gives you that kind of performance, and you end up giving up six outs in the inning."

Hawkins, nearly banished to the minors in early June, pitched the third no-hitter of this weekend and the sixth in the majors this season. The veteran right-hander went eight innings and

Lyman graduate Teddy Mitchell

Mitchells shine all over country

From staff reports

Lyman High School graduate Teddy Mitchell keeps adding to his list of accomplishments.

On Saturday in the TAC Junior National Championships in Fresno, Calif., Mitchell finished second in the 19-and-Under 10,000-meter run, posting a time of 31:03.

Mitchell just missed qualifying for the Junior National team that will compete in an international competition in Bulgaria later this summer. He will try again later this month.

His second-place finish is just the most recent in a long list of state and national accomplishments for Mitchell. In the last 12 months, he was won the Class 4A high school state championship in cross country and two-mile run, finished second in the mile run and won the 11th annual Kinney Cross Country Championship South Region Meet.

Two weeks ago, Mitchell was sixth in the two-mile run at the Keebler Invitational.

But he wasn't the only Mitchell to shine this past weekend. Younger brother Jeremiah (10) and sister Jessica (8) both qualified for the Sunshine State Games to be held in Miami later this month by winning their events in the Orlando Sports Festival on Saturday.

Jeremiah won both the 1,500-meter run and the high jump while Jessica took first in the 1,500-meter race walk. Should they finish in the top three at the Sunshine State Games, they will qualify for the Junior Olympics.

Also, 2-year-old Matthew Mitchell was third in the 10-and-Under high jump competition.

allowed no earned runs. He walked five and struck out three. The White Sox did not bat in the bottom of the ninth.

"I don't know. I'm stunned," Hawkins said. "I really am. You dream of throwing a no-hitter. The thought of a loss never crossed my mind. You expect to walk off that field and shake everybody's hand like you've seen a thousand times before."

Hawkins breezed through the first 7 2-3 innings before Sammy Sosa reached on an error by third baseman Mike Blowers. The center-field scoreboard flashed a hit, but the official ruling was an error.

Sosa stole second and Hawkins, 1-5, walked Ozzie Guillen and Lance Johnson to fill the bases. Merrill visited the mound but said he never thought of taking Hawkins out.

"Not until he gives up a hit. No way," Merrill said.

Rookie Robin Ventura followed with a slicing line drive to left fielder Jim Leyritz, who fought the wind before dropping the ball for a three-base error.

"I made the wrong move to the wrong side," Leyritz said. "It got caught up in the wind a little bit, and I didn't think I could catch up to it. When I did, I dropped it."

The next batter, Ivan Calderon, then fled to right field, where Jesse Barfield lost the ball in the sun before letting it fall. Official scorer Bob Rosenberg ruled the play an error.

Rosenberg, an official scorer the past four years who will score this year's All-Star Game, said there was no question on any of the three Yankee errors in the inning.

Growing tomatoes worth the effort

One of the most widespread problems with tomatoes this time of year is failure to set fruit or blossom drop. Florida gardeners each year encounter this problem. While all of the reasons for poor fruit set and blossom drop are not completely understood, some of the most common causes are excessive nitrogen fertilization, high nighttime temperatures, variety, time of planting, excessive shade, drought or overwatering or insects.

In most cases, the tomato vines are large, healthy and growing vigorously with an abundance of flowers. The flowers, however, either drop off or wither up and turn brown instead of setting fruit.

Tomato production is usually best when only enough nitrogen is available during the first couple of months after planting to permit development of a large sturdy vine, but not enough to cause excessive vegetative growth. Later, when the plant has a heavy fruit load and the tomatoes begin to ripen, the nitrogen requirement will be less.

High amounts of nitrogen late in the season can cause a lack of blooms or blossom drop. High nitrogen availability can cause the plant to grow excessive and lush at the expense of blossoms and fruit set. If your tomatoes display this type of growth, reduce the nitrogen fertilizer a few months after you plant them.

Tomatoes have a very narrow optimum temperature range which is best for bloom set and for fruit production. Tomato fruit sets best at a nighttime temperature around 62 degrees F. Summer nighttime temperatures in Central Florida average around 70-80 degrees F. So once summer rolls around, tomatoes stop setting fruit. (Cherry tomatoes are the exception to the rule as they will continue to set fruit all summer long.)

CELESTE WHITE

This is why it is important to plant tomatoes at the correct time in spring. Planting tomatoes or any vegetable out of season is a common error and puts the plant under environmental stress resulting in poor growth flowering. Tomatoes should be planted early in March. Planting late in the spring subjects tomatoes to high night temperatures.

Variety selection is of utmost importance for all vegetables including tomatoes. Varieties other than those recommended by the University of Florida for this area will not be adapted to our climate or soil conditions. Poor growth, blossom drop and poor fruit set can be expected from planting varieties not recommended for this area. Be careful when selecting seeds out of northern catalogs. Recommended tomato varieties include Floradel, Florida de Floramerica and Better Boy.

Watering habits that subject tomatoes to wet then dry conditions as opposed to consistent moisture can result in bloom and fruit drop. This wet-dry cycle can also cause a physiological disorder called blossom-end rot, especially in container plants. Remember that few plants like "wet feet" so try not to water the plants so that the soil is soaking wet all the time.

Tomatoes require at least six hours of full sun each day. If tomatoes get less than that, poor blooming or blossom drop can occur.

Last, various insects, both sucking and chewing can feed on the flowers and partially developed fruits of tomatoes. Either blooms or your fruit may drop as a result. Insects that could cause this problem include thrips, grasshoppers, aphids and spider mites. Check developing blossoms and fruit carefully to identify the insect.

After noting all these problems that can cause a lack of tomatoes, you may wonder why anyone would want to grow them, however, after tasting your first vine-ripened tomato fresh off the bush, you will realize that it is worth all your efforts!

For more information about tomatoes, just give me a call or drop by the Agriculture Center for a free fact sheet.

Carts liberated from grocery store aren't free

DEAR ABBY: Please address the problem of people who steal shopping carts. This is a national disgrace we can't blame on Russia, the drug pushers or Congress.

The elderly use them instead of walkers, kids use them for carrying their books to and from schools, residents in affluent neighborhoods keep them in their private garages or in the parking lots of their expensive condominiums or in their laundry rooms. Some are just abandoned at the curb or in an alley.

No one seems to take this stealing seriously, yet is this any different from picking up someone's unchained bicycle and taking it home for one's own use?

Abby, you reach millions of people, so please print a column about this alarming thievery going on daily, right under our noses.

Two-wheeled carts are available at nominal prices. They are sturdy, fold flat, easy to store and hold a lot. They also go up and down stairs, which supermarket carts may have trouble doing. I bought one for about $10 four years ago, and it's still going strong.

For once, let's point the finger at "us" and clean up our own

ADVICE
RUTH FREUND
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

garbage.

RUTH FREUND, ESCINO, CALIF.

DEAR RUTH: Thanks for an important letter. According to the Food Marketing Institute in Washington, D.C., cart theft in California alone costs the grocery industry about $14 million a year - and that cost is passed on to the consumer. The worst offenders are often the elderly or the poor, or college students who don't drive and live in apartments within walking distance of the stores.

There is a solution. If people did as you did - and bought their own carts - the problem would be solved, the grocers would pass the savings on to their customers, and we would be a kinder, gentler and more honest nation.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in desperation. My problem is the plague of computerized telemarketing calls. I know that I can hang up if I am at home, but believe it or not, I have missed several important messages this week because the cassette on my answering machine was filled with long-winded offers for cruise bargains, free gifts, marvelous prizes, etc.

I am really outraged that my answering machine has been abused to the point that it is rendered almost useless! To make matters worse, I then have to listen to these idiots all the way through in order to use my machine again the next time!

My telephone company tells me there is no law against it, and advised me to write to the Federal Communications Commission, but I doubt that one letter will do it. Abby, with your wide readership, if you were to publish this letter, you might see what kind of response you get from others. I'm sure I'm not alone in this suffering.

Who knows, if there are enough of us, we might even get some relief from this harassment. The message I missed because two of these calls filled my entire machine cassette one afternoon was a life-and-death matter. Can you see why I am outraged?

DEAR FURIOUS: I hear you - loud and clear. If anyone has a solution to this problem, I'll share it. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column on spanking children, you indicated that your readers' response to spanking was 10-to-1 in favor. You may be interested in the results of a 1990 survey done by the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, which measures attitudes and actions about child abuse and its prevention. Of the parents in the survey who have children under the age of 18, 49 percent said that they never spank their children. And 26 percent said that they "hardly ever" spank or hit their children. In addition, 72 percent said they believe that physical punishment of a child can lead to injury. Overall, as an organization dedicated to the prevention of child abuse, we were encouraged by these new statistics.

Parenting is a challenging, sometimes very difficult job. When pressures build up, it is tempting to use physical punishment on a child. However, spanking a child when you are angry can be dangerous. Children are often injured when an angry parent loses control.

Rectal polyps should be removed and examined

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you explain the difference between hemorrhoids and polyps? Does a person have to be operated on for either one, or is there a medication available that will help my condition?

DEAR READER: A hemorrhoid is a swollen vein in or around the lower rectum and anus. Initially, it appears as a soft, small, purple lump that may cause some discomfort. The hemorrhoid may enlarge, causing stinging and tenderness. Eventually, the blood in it can clot (thrombosed hemorrhoid), leading to pain, particularly during evacuation.

Hemorrhoids are common and harmless unless they bleed, requiring surgery or other therapy. Small hemorrhoids are best treated with suppositories (to facilitate bowel movements) and warm baths (to reduce swelling).

A polyp, on the other hand, is a benign growth arising from the intestinal lining. It causes no symptoms and usually grows high up in the rectum or in the colon, well above the location of hemorrhoids. The two conditions are rarely confused by an experienced doctor.

Some polyps are pre-malignant, meaning they will eventually turn cancerous. Therefore, unlike most hemorrhoids, polyps should be removed. Polyps are easily excised at the time of proctoscopy or sigmoidoscopy, during which a specialist examines the lining of the bowel using a lighted instrument. This is an office procedure, in most instances.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach To Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would iron supplements or a multi-vitamin cause dark stool?
DEAR READER: Oral iron supplements turn the stool black. This can be quite a shock to someone who is unprepared for the change, but it is a harmless consequence of iron therapy.

On the other hand, intestinal bleeding can cause darkening of the stool. This can be differentiated from the effects of iron by

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

When West led a heart against three no-trump and East played the 10-spot, declarer knew who had the A-Q of hearts. He also knew that it would be better for him if he could develop his nine tricks without letting East win the lead. So he won the jack of hearts and played a diamond to dummy's ace. Then he led the jack of spades. If East held the king, declarer would have nine top tricks. Unfortunately West took the king of spades and played back a diamond. That left South with only eight tricks, so he looked to the club suit for the extra needed trick. He cashed another diamond and one good spade, and then led his jack of clubs and let it ride. East won the king and returned a heart to set the contract. South made the right play in the club suit if there was nothing else to be considered except the best way to take the most club tricks. But he made the wrong play in three no-trump. The contract is safe if declarer can develop an extra club trick without allowing East to gain the lead. Can South make the contract when East holds the king of clubs? Only if the king is alone. He should play the ace of clubs, on the chance that East holds the singleton king. If West holds the king, he has sacrificed some overtricks, but he still makes his contract.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
 July 3, 1990

Bonds with someone with whom you're already deeply involved look like they will be further strengthened in the year ahead. Increased mutually shared devotion will benefit both parties.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) For the sake of expediency today, you might make an agreement without thinking through the consequences. Impulsive actions of this ilk could put you in an awkward position later. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your attention span might be rather limited today and this could create complications, especially if you're working on something intricate that demands total mental focus.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If someone who has never been overly friendly towards you in the past showers you with attention today, be on guard, because he/she might have ulterior motives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you are lackadaisical today your achievement level will be extremely low. It will require both desire and dedication to achieve important goals or objectives.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Juicy tidbits you know are gossip rather than gospel should not be passed onto others today, even though they might be the most interesting things you'll have to talk about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Financial situations could be rather difficult for you to manage today. You'll have a fair handle on the larger matters, but the small expenses might throw things out of kilter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Unless you are able to see things from the other guy's perspective today, both parties might find themselves in an arrangement where each thinks he/she is getting the short end.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Yesterday your hunches were reasonably reliable, but today they could lead you down the garden path. If you have to put stock in anything, make it your common sense and logic.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's best not to do things for friends today hoping they'll be able to do something for you in return. If your gestures have strings attached, you could end up being the one tied in knots.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your behavior will be under a magnifying glass in your dealings with your peers today. Keep everything out in the open so that your actions aren't deemed questionable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today if you're required to give verbal or written instructions to another, be sure what you write or say is very concise and easy to understand. Don't depart from your premise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extremely selective today as to whom you reveal your confidential, financial information. There's a possibility you might be inclined to talk to the wrong people.
