Drug Abuse Battle To Set Sail

An armada of hope and action will set sail in Sanford Tuesday to combat drug and alcohol abuse among local youths.

Sanford C.A.N. (Chemical Awareness Network) will launch a program of determination Tuesday aboard the Star of Sanford on Lake Monroe with a dinner and dancing cruise featuring a 4-hour introduction to the problems of drug abuse among the young.

More than 225 invited civic and business leaders are expected to attend. They'll hear a prepared program, expert discussions, and a guest speech by Circuit Court Judge Dominick J. Salfi.

The event will be video-taped, said Phillip Goldstick, of Sanford, president and chairman of the newly formed organization.

"We're rolling along," Goldstick said. "We've got a lot of written comments, including one from the First Lady, Nancy Reagan. We're well over the 200 confirmed reservations mark which is very gratifying."

The cruise, the first public consciousness-raising event of the Sanford Chemical Awareness Network, is to bring the problem of chemical abuse to the attention of community leaders, to let them know that there is a drug and alcohol problem, who has the problem, and how it can be combated.

"We're forming and developing a fantastic program for the future, programs that will put some teeth into the problem of drug abuse in our community," Goldstick said.

"We're trying concrete things. We're trying to revolve around the education of the parent and the child. The education of the parent to drug and alcohol abuse is foremost in our mind. The education of the parent and child is something we can build on."

Among the more than 225 people planning to attend the event are most of the local elected officials in Seminole County, its cities and several prominent businessmen, said Mary Graff, who coordinated the invitations under the direction of the organization's publicity chairman, C. "Tony" Liberatore, of Lake Mary.

Deputy Fired For 'Reckless' Gun Use

Accidental Shot Hit Classroom Ceiling

A Seminole County sheriff's deputy who accidentally discharged a pistol at Lake Howell High School, sending a bullet into the ceiling of an occupied classroom, was dismissed today for "reckless display of a firearm."

Investigator Jason Pauska, a six-year veteran with the sheriff's department, will stay on the payroll for 30 days, however, during which time he can appeal the decision by Sheriff John Polk through the department's civil service board.

No criminal charges will be filed in connection with the Jan. 10 incident, Polk said.

The school's resource officer, deputy Paul Schuck, to whom Pauska was showing a new 9mm pistol when the weapon fired, was today suspended for 30 days without pay.

Neither man could be reached to comment on whether they will appeal Polk's decision.

According to sheriff's spokesman John Spolski, Pauska, 30, was in the process of loading and unloading the pistol in Schuck's office when the gun discharged. No one was injured in the incident, but the bullet wound up in the ceiling of an adjoining classroom occupied by students, he said.

Pauska was the the school to conduct an investigation, but the shooting was in no way connected with the probe, Spolski said.

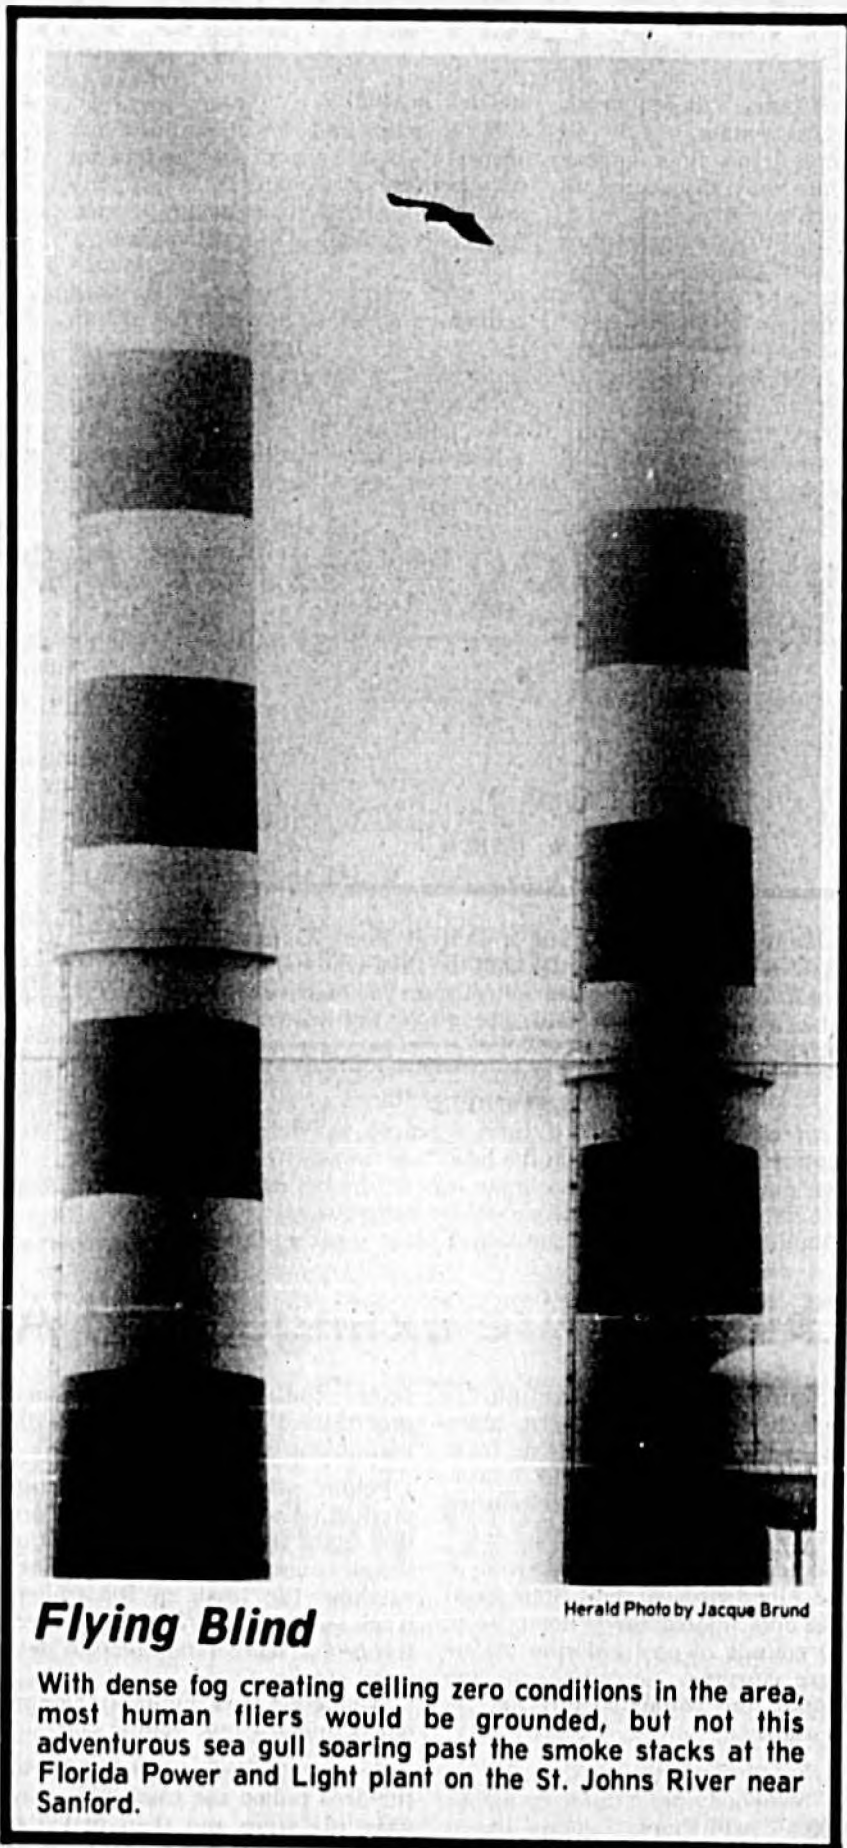

The pistol was Pauska's personal weapon and was unholstered in violation of department policy, he said.

About nine months ago, sheriff's Sgt. Jerry Riggins was reprimanded in a similar incident.

He was demonstrating a weapon used by SWAT teams to a class at Tuskawilla Middle School when the weapon discharged.

Riggins was placing the bolt of the rifle back in position when it accidentally went off. No one was hurt in the shooting and because of his outstanding record prior to the incident, Riggins was only reprimanded, Spolski said.

Anti-Poverty Agency Threatens To Sue State, County Over Funds

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole Community Action, may take a state department to court over its refusal to grant funding to the anti-poverty agency and "the county is inviting itself to the same kind of action," an executive of the 17-year-old anti-poverty agency said today.

"Inasmuch as the county is holding hands with the state Department of Community Affairs, it could be subject to a lawsuit as well," said Rev. Amos Jones, executive director of SCA.

The county commission has refused to release to SCA some $6,000 it is holding in a contingency fund until the agency clears up its "accountability" problems with the state DCA to the county commission's satisfaction, Commission Vice Chairman Bob Sturm said today.

Sturm declined comment on Jones' court threat.

SCA has been locked in battle with the DCA since last July when it was notified that as of June 30, 1983, some $100,000 in state funding from U.S. government money was being withheld.

The reason for withholding the funds, the department said, was because of SCA's failure to clear up questions asked by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services about its use of federal money over previous years.

In a hearing before a Community Affairs officer in October, Jones said his agency is continuing discussions with the federal government to clear up the questions.

Jones also said the state agency has no right to use previous audit negotiations with the federal government as a reason for cutting off the state funding.

Jones said today Community Affairs department secretary John DeGrove has neither upheld nor rejected the hearing officers' recommendation that the funding denial be continued.

Until DeGrove makes a decision, SCA cannot get a formal hearing on the issue.

"I feel confident if this matter gets to the formal hearing stage, the matter will be settled," Jones said. "If not we will move to court."

Jones said he sent the county a letter clearly showing that SCA has evidence that the manner in which the state department denied funds to Community Action is illegal.

"The state agency does not have legal authority to mandate an arbitrary time to settle negotiations with a federal agency. Talks with a federal agency cannot be limited to 60 days, 90 days or 6 months," he said. Jones said discussions are continuing with U.S. Health and Human Services in an attempt to answer all their questions about programs that are several years old.

Jones said he is concerned about the kind of scenario where the county refuses funding because of the action of a state agency.

"The fact remains that the county should be first and foremost concerned about services being provided to Seminole County and if that were their first concern the commissioners would have no hesitation about supporting SCA and releasing what can only be described as a drop in the bucket."

He said the county commissioners are ignoring the fact that services are being provided to the poor in this county on a voluntary basis. This, he admits, cannot go on forever. He said he has no idea how long SCA can survive with volunteers staffing the office without pay.

"I think the county commission, maybe not entirely, is attempting to wish us (SCA) away," Jones said, adding that SCA was one of the first community service agencies to receive regular annual funding from the Seminole County Commission.

"SCA has had as much as $800,000 come through the county in a year during the heyday of federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act," he said. "It is a question of whether the county is now saying their funds were not properly spent." CETA employees worked for SCA.

Reagan Talks Of Jim And Ivan, Not Megatons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan attempted to put world peace and the global arms race in common terms Monday, forgoing megatons and throw-weight in favor of Jim and Ivan.

In a nationally televised address that was also beamed to Europe, Reagan outlined his principles for dealing with the Soviets: Realism, strength and dialogue.

But, as he closed his address, Reagan said the differences between the Soviets and the United States are differences in governmental structure and philosophy.

"The common interests have to do with the things of everyday life for people everywhere."

"Suppose, for a moment, Ivan and Anya found themselves in a waiting room, or sharing a shelter from the rain with Jim and Sally, and there was no language barrier to keep them from getting acquainted. Would they debate the differences between their respective governments? Or, would they find themselves comparing notes about their children, and what each other did for a living?"

"Before they parted company they would probably have touched on ambitions, hobbies, what they wanted for their children and the problems of making ends meet. And as they went their separate ways, Anya would be saying to Ivan, 'Wasn't she nice, she also teaches music.' Jim would be telling Sally what Ivan did or didn't like about his boss. They might even have decided that they were all going to

Did High Court Give Arsonists Upper Hand? TODAY

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

Several arson cases under investigation in Seminole County may be jeopardized by a Supreme Court ruling that investigators must have permission of a property controller or a warrant from a judge to enter a fire scene.

The high court ruled that arson investigators do not have a free rein to inspect fires of suspicious origins and must obtain permission to search a burned building or get a warrant from a judge. The ruling, which is yet to be distributed, may require fire inspectors to have a probable cause to investigate a fire scene.

"If that's the case, we could run into some problems. It would give the arsonist the upper hand," said chief investigator for Seminole County Ray Pippin.

For the past two years, fire investigators in Seminole County — under city and county ordinances — have been able to enter a burned area without a warrant or permission if the investigation was conducted within a reasonable time after the blaze, Pippin said.

A reasonable amount of time, he said, varies with the type and extent of fire and is not an established amount of time. A reasonable amount of time after a house fire may be a few hours whereas the reasonable amount of time after a large business fire could be three days or more, he said. The shortest set reasonable amount of time Pippin was aware of is in Massachusetts — 12 hours.

The authority to enter a burned area after an emergency has past was established by a Supreme Court ruling two years ago — Taylor vs. Michigan — which stated that after a reasonable time, the fire investigator needed permission or an administrative warrant to enter a burned area, Pippin said.

If the court removed the reasonable time element in its Wednesday ruling and now requires an investigator to get permission or a warrant to enter a burned area, the court "may have come up with something off the wall that may knock the hell off us," Pippin said.

The problem, Pippin explained, is that the state of Florida does not have the type of warrant that would allow a fire inspector, city, county or state, without probable cause to enter a burned area to investigate but not to collect evidence.

The type of warrant needed, Pippin said, is an administrative warrant issued by a judge. It allows investigators or other authorities to enter a burned area when they have no evidence that the fire was of suspicious origin, especially when the property controller denies access.

If a fire inspector enters a burned area with an administrative warrant (or as recently practiced within a reasonable amount of time) the moment the investigator locates evidence that might prove the fire was suspicious, the investigator must halt the investigation and get a search warrant to collect the evidence, he said.

Without a reasonable amount of time proviso or without administrative warrants, which are issued by a judge, Pippin said he would have to rely on search warrants which are difficult to get.

"You can't get a search warrant because you can't prove a crime has been committed. I need evidence to get a search warrant, but I can't get evidence without a search warrant. The ruling will affect every fire investigator in the United States," Pippin said.

He said the ruling will not affect any of his cases started before the opinion and will not effect the operations of his department until the state fire marshal's office and the attorney general's office issue an opinion.

Don Stevenson, chief of the arson bureau for the state fire marshal, said if the Supreme Court ruling in the Clifford Case, as it was called, tightened the activities of fire investigators by reducing or eliminating the reasonable amount of time clause, "then we've got some problems."

He said his office relies upon the clause

NATION IN BRIEF

'We Will Not Allow Diablo To Go On Line'

AVILA BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Anti-nuclear protesters say they will try to peacefully invade the grounds of the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant as part of what may be a last ditch effort to keep the plant from opening.

A spokesman for the Abalone Alliance — an umbrella organization for a coalition of anti-nuclear and environmental groups — said small clusters of protesters would try to breach security at the plant today.

"We're showing our opposition to Diablo in whatever form of action we can," said Jeff Kalbach, an Abalone Alliance spokesman. "We will not allow Diablo to go on line."

On Sunday, an estimated 1,500-2,000 demonstrators sang, chanted and carried banners in a march to the main gate of the $4.3 billion, twin-reactor plant, which could begin low-power testing soon pending a vote by federal regulators tentatively scheduled for Feb. 17.

Explosion Rips Apartments

BROOKLINE, Mass. (UPI) — An invalid man and his daughter were missing and believed trapped in the rubble of a three-story brick apartment house after a "tremendous" explosion and fire ripped out the entire rear wall.

Terrified residents scrambled to safety out windows of the building that was left to look like "a doll's house." At least 40 people were left homeless in sub-freezing temperatures.

The cause was under investigation but firefighter Kevin Lynch said, "We assume it was gas." One neighbor said the explosion erupted after an odor of gas was detected in the building.

get together for dinner some evening soon.

"Above all, they would have proven that people don't make wars. People want to raise their children in a world without fear and without war. They want to have some of the good things over and above bare subsistence that make life worth living. They want to work at some craft, trade, or profession that gives them satisfaction and a sense of worth. Their common interests cross all borders."

But Reagan also said: "I believe 1984 finds the United States in its strongest position in years to establish a constructive and realistic working relationship with the Soviet Union."

He called on the Kremlin to join in a "struggle for lasting peace that enhances dignity for men and women everywhere."

Reagan, however, offered no concrete proposals, instead urging a broad search for "genuine cooperation" in areas of "mutual interest."

"The fact that neither of us likes the other's system is no reason to refuse to talk," he said. "Living in this nuclear age makes it imperative that we talk."

Initial reaction from the Soviets was markedly cool. The Novosti news agency said the world expects concrete action from the United States, "not demagogical rhetoric," and cast Reagan's remarks as obvious campaign rhetoric.

But, saying his policy is not "just for this year, but for the long term," Reagan emphasized that if Moscow "cannot meet us halfway, we will be prepared to protect our interests."

Addressing himself to three distinct constituencies — the Soviets, the Europeans and American voters — Reagan acknowledged the strident war of words between Washington and Moscow has spawned fears of an increased danger of conflict.

"This is understandable," he said, "but profoundly mistaken."

Instead, Reagan insisted his arms policies and use of military force are "making the world a safer place — safer because now there is less danger that the Soviet leadership will underestimate our strength or question our resolve."

Debate Erupts Into Shouting Match

HANOVER, N.H. (UPI) — No clear winner emerged, but the eight Democratic presidential candidates gave the country a round of good theater in their televised debate, including a shouting match between Walter Mondale and John Glenn.

The three-hour debate, televised nationally Sunday by the Public Broadcasting Service just six weeks before the Feb. 28 New Hampshire primary, was generally a gentlemanly discussion of issues until Sen. Glenn, D-Ohio, appearing irritated with Mondale's statements, accused him of promising everything to everybody.

"That's the same vague gobbledegook of nothing that we've been hearing throughout this campaign," Glenn said.

Mondale tried repeatedly to interrupt Glenn, saying, "Point of personal privilege! Point of personal privilege!" He finally said, "There's just been a six minute speech and all of it is baloney."

Both men jumped to their feet before a stunned but amused audience of about 800. Mondale shouted as Glenn tried to interrupt him: "I have the floor! I have the floor!"

"The reason we have a $200 billion budget deficit is because you voted for Reaganomics," Mondale scolded Glenn. "He voted for the B-1 bomber, poison nerve gas. And he uses voodoo numbers to say what my programs would cost. My position is responsible."

Jesse Jackson attempted to soothe the troubled waters, admonishing the two that with the country watching, "We have to conduct the affairs of this business in a serious vein."

Walter Mondale

John Glenn

Generally, the debate was serious, dealing with nuclear arms, the economy and social issues. But it was clear that Mondale was a target of almost everyone, particularly Glenn and Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo.

"You cannot lead the country if you promise everybody everything," Hart said. Mondale said afterward the debate "helped the public understand what we are up to." Standing in the snow outside his headquarters, he told reporters, "One thing I really felt honored about, they all attacked Walter Mondale." Asked later if he thought the exchange between him and Mondale might be considered petty, Glenn said, "That wasn't petty. That's spelling out our differences."

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said he was concerned that the candidates focused too much on each other.

"I thought it went well," he said. "But I think we all tried to hard to throw a net over each other, when we should be putting the net over Ronald Reagan."

In all, the Democrats agreed on far more than they disagreed and all were critical of Reagan. Although there were nuances of differences, they agreed off the bat that they would make nuclear arms control their No. 1 issue, and that they would consider a woman as a running mate.

All of the candidates came to the debate, sponsored by House Democratic Caucus, with something to prove, and all managed to make some progress in their efforts.

Mondale wanted to appear as the presidential front-runner, Glenn as the clear challenger. Hart and Sen. Alan Cranston as viable alternatives, Jackson as a responsible man of ideas, Hollings and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew as having different ideas, and George McGovern as a serious candidate.

...Arsonists May Have Advantage After Ruling

to allow investigators time to travel to fire sites. The state fire inspectors are charged by state statute to determine the cause of fires of suspicious origin.

"We depend upon an early call from the local fire department," he said.

Without the reasonable amount of time clause, Steverson said his department would have to rely upon permission and search warrants which could cause his department problems.

Lt. Ronald Neel, fire investigator for the Sanford Fire Department, said the ruling, if it requires a warrant to inspect a burned area will assure "there'll be no arson convictions in the state."

Neel said many arson fires appear accidental and are only discovered to have been set upon inspection.

Neel said the investigation procedure in Sanford is to start the inquiry while the responding firefighters are still at the scene. If the firefighters have left, that is, turned the scene back to the property controller, "you've got a problem."

"I know for a fact, that once a fire department leaves a house for any moment, then you have to have a warrant or written permission to go inside," he said.

Neel, who had been Sanford fire inspector for 2 1/2 years, said he has not had permission denied by a property controller to enter a fire scene because he usually does not ask for permission.

"We don't need to ask for permission," he said explaining that a Sanford ordinance states that every fire within the city which causes injury and or property damage be investigated.

"It is our duty to find out what caused a fire, he said."

Neel said when he thinks a fire is of suspicious origin, he contacts the state fire marshal's office and they investigate.

He said the new ruling probably would not effect the eight suspicious-cause fires in Sanford in the past six months.

Another agency the ruling may effect is the insurance industry, according to Neel.

He said there are many "cosmetic fires," set to collect insurance money.

"A cosmetic fire," such as intentionally leaving a pot of the stove and letting it catch on fire, is usually determined to be such by the fire inspector. The report is usually used by the insurance company to deny a claim payment.

Woman Receives Apology After Being Raped

A 22-year-old Winter Park woman reported to Seminole County sheriff's investigators that she was raped by an unknown assailant in an apartment, which she thought was in Altamonte Springs.

The woman reported that she was leaving Woogie's Pub, U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford, around 3 a.m. Sunday when she met two men in the parking lot. One was about 40 and the other about 19, the woman said. The men reportedly followed her to the Hotline Bottle Club in Altamonte Springs. The trio reportedly stayed there until about 5:30 a.m. after which the woman said she followed the men to an apartment that may be located in Altamonte Springs, a sheriff's report said.

At the apartment, the men reportedly left the woman with a third man whom she said hit her across the face, cutting her nose. She said he forced her to have intercourse and then left the apartment, the report said.

The older of the two men who had brought the victim to the apartment returned and apologized. The victim couldn't find her purse and keys, so she left her car at the apartment complex and the older man drove her to Albertson's on State Road 436, Altamonte Springs, where she called her mother, the report said.

The woman was taken to Winter Park Hospital and was later transferred to Central Florida Regional, Sanford.

AUTOBURGLARIES

Kandy E. Ansley, 21, of 1102 N. Reams St., Longwood, reported that her purse containing cash and checks with a total value of $300 were taken from her locked car while it was parked at Red Bug Lake Park, Red Bug Road, Casselberry, between 9 and 10 a.m. Monday, a sheriff's report said.

James D. Becher, 37, Sarasota, reported that someone broke the window of his car and took his briefcase, which contained a check book, a savings account book, a calculator, a stapler and a slide rule, with a total value of about $150. Becher told sheriff's deputies that his car was parked at Zayre Plaza, 100 State Road 436, Fern Park, when the incident occurred abt about 4:50 p.m. Sunday.

MOTOR MISSING

A 25-horsepower outboard boat motor was taken from a 17-foot fishing boat at the Marina Isle Fish Camp, near Geneva, Wednesday or Thursday.

James A. Shannon, 28, of Retreat Road, Geneva, reported to sheriff's deputies that the thief who took his motor also pulled the water plugs from his boat which sank, a sheriff's report said. The motor was valued at $1,500.

PISTOL WHIPPED

An 83-year-old Sanford man reported to sheriff's deputies that he was hit on the head four times with his own gun by someone who broke into his home on the southwest corner of Kings Avenue and Water Street. Randolph Mathews, who is almost blind, reported that he could not identify his assailant, or even say if more than one suspect may have been involved in the break-in and assault which occurred at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The only thing reported missing from Mathews' home was $30 and a .22-cal. pistol with which the assailant hit him. Mathews had four minor cuts on his head and did not require medical treatment, a sheriff's deputy reported.

VEHICLE THEFTS

A 1978 Impala valued at $2,000 was reported stolen from the used car lot at Willett Toyota, 1371 N. U.S. Highway 17-92, Longwood. Used car sales manager Gerald R. Jennings, 40, of Sanford, reported that the car disappeared Wednesday or Thursday, a sheriff's report said.

A 1982 Suzuki motorcycle valued at $500 was taken from the driveway of Eugene A. Baldwin, 61, of 137 Jewel Drive, Forrest City, between 10 a.m. and 11 p.m. Thursday.

The cycle had been chained to a metal pole and secured with a padlock which was cut by the thief, a sheriff's report said.

Chlorine Fire Extinguished At Albertson's

Seminole County firefighters rushed to a 5:57 a.m. alarm today expecting to find an outside trash bin afire. What they found, however, was a hazardous chemical burning.

When the firefighters arrived at the Albertson's store at State Road 434 and Montgomery Road, 30 to 40 pounds of pool chlorine tablets were burning, according to Ray Pippin, the county's chief fire investigator.

No one was injured in the fire. "Somebody did a dumb or foolish thing," said Pippin, adding that a store employee dumped damaged containers of chlorine in the bin rather than following the usual procedure of returning them to the manufacturer.

Pippin said either a petroleum product, which he could not identify, or the high moisture content of the air caused the chlorine to ignite, catching the trash in the trailer-truck size bin on fire. The fire then released a dangerous chlorine gas-laden smoke.

"One good breath of it and you're down, unconscious" Pippin said.

He said a trash service truck in the area pulled the trash bin away from the store and then tipped it over. Once the fire was put out, a member of Seminole County's Hazardous Materials Team directed the clean-up.

Because of the small amount of fire and the breeze-less morning, the nearby area did not have to be evacuated. No one was injured in the burn which was still under supervision as of late morning.

"We roped off a corner of the parking lot. It was a potential problem until we got it cleaned up," Pippin said.

He said the chemical, once cleaned up, would be placed in sealed containers and transported to a water plant and dumped into the water system. He did not know to which water facility the material was to be transported.

$6 Million Of Cocaine Found On Fishing Boat

MIAMI (UPI) — The Florida Marine Patrol officials said one of their patrol agents on Biscayne Bay made the largest bust ever on south Florida water Sunday afternoon.

Police spokesman Frank Doolan said the officer, whose name was being withheld, uncovered a cache of about 400 pounds of cocaine worth at least $6 million on a 37-foot sport fishing boat. Doolan said the boat was thought to be coming from Bimini.

Doolan said the arresting officer noticed equipment and registration violations on the boat about 12:30 p.m. Sunday. He boarded the boat to check the violations and found a sealed bait well.

The wells are usually easily opened and the officer became suspicious. When it was opened officers found eight Styrofoam coolers filled with liquid cocaine, powder and base to make more of the drug.

No-Show Costs $100,000

ORLANDO (UPI) — A jury ordered country-western singer Hank Williams Jr. to pay nearly $100,000 to a promoter for not showing up at an outdoor concert in 1982.

Williams contended he did not show up because the concert was canceled due to bad weather. The ruling marked the second time in three months Williams was found guilty of breaking a performance contract.

The jury ruled Saturday that Williams, 34, breached his contract with B & K Productions, of Kissimmee, by not appearing at an April 10, 1982, concert at the Central Florida Fairgrounds and awarded the promoters $98,606 in damages.

The promoters said they were left with thousands of angry fans and 200 cases of hot dogs after the cancellation.

Police After Hat Snatchers

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Miami Beach police are out to stop a band of teenagers who have been stealing the traditional hats of elderly Hasidic Jews going to evening prayer services.

Police said the hats are worth up to $800, but the youths are snatching them more to harass the ultra-orthodox Jewish community on south Miami Beach than for the value of the traditional garb.

Maj. Kenneth Glassman assigned an undercover officer to roam the streets of the island dressed as a member of the sect. The officer's work hasn't netted any arrests yet, but police feel his presence may curtail the harassment.

Kidnapped?

Army Unsure If U.S. Soldier Was Abducted

STUTTGART, West Germany (UPI) — A U.S. soldier who claimed he was kidnapped by West German anti-nuclear protesters was under observation today in an Army hospital and officials said they did not know if he really was abducted.

Cpl. Liam T. Fowler, 21, of Port Orange, Fla., was taken to the Army hospital in Stuttgart Sunday night from his Pershing missile base at Schwaebisch-Gmuend from which he disappeared Friday afternoon.

A farmer's wife found Fowler lying in a barn covered only with curtain material Sunday morning 38 hours after he said he was abducted. The barn was near the town of Miesbach, 30 miles south of Munich and 150 miles from his unit, the 56th Field Artillery Brigade.

Maj. Anthony Maravola, spokesman for Fowler's unit, said he could not confirm Fowler's story of being kidnapped but denied German press reports that Fowler was a braggart and not well liked.

"We do not know whether he really was kidnapped," Maravola said. "Police are investigating."

German police searched for his missing automobile, which had U.S. armed forces license plates. Fowler claimed the car was hijacked by six Germans.

He also claimed the protesters threatened to kill him unless American media published within 72 hours a statement saying West Germans do not want U.S. cruise and Pershing-2 missiles deployed in the country.

Maravola expressed surprise at German press reports disparaging Fowler.

"I have known him since he was assigned to the brigade in 1981 and he is not a braggart," Maravola said. "He is not outgoing and he does not have a bad opinion of himself but he certainly is not a loudmouth.

Fowler's mother in Port Orange said she believed her son's story. She talked to him Sunday night by telephone.

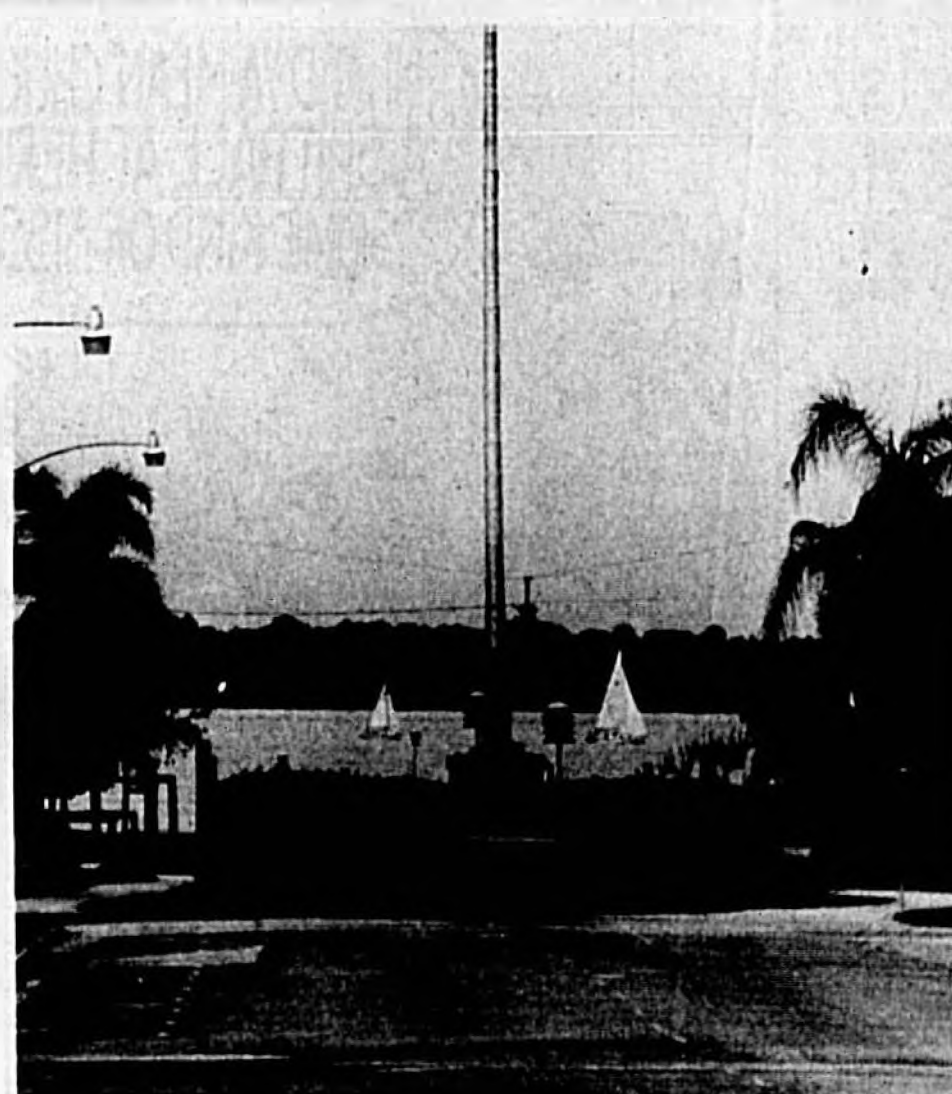

"Naturally, I am very shocked and very distressed that of all the soldiers in Germany they would have chosen him," Flora Daun Fowler told UPI.

"He loves people. He loves his wife. He loves his country. He's an all-American boy," she said.

After his discovery Sunday morning, Fowler was taken to a German clinic at Miesbach and treated for exposure.

"He is in fairly good condition but somewhat exhausted," Maravola said. "He probably will return to his unit tomorrow."

Fowler said he had been kidnapped by an anti-nuclear organization calling itself the Pacifist Initiative Group.

Sleepy Sanford

On Sunday afternoons, downtown Sanford is pretty much deserted, this usually bustling area between Sanford City Hall and the Seminole County Courthouse devoid of people and cars. The only traffic seems to be the weekend sailors on Lake Monroe.

U.S. Warships Pound Lebanese Militiamen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Marine gunners backed by U.S. warships off the Lebanese coast pounded the positions of Moslem militiamen who fired at the Marine base and closed Beirut airport.

No casualties were reported in the attack Sunday on the Marine positions, Pentagon spokesman Lt. Col. Charles Suits said in Washington.

The U.S. forces retaliated after their base, as well as Lebanese army units and Beirut airport, came under fire from artillery, anti-aircraft guns and small arms, state-run Beirut radio reported.

The Marines used howitzers, mortars and machine guns against the Druze Moslem attackers before the battleship USS New Jersey and destroyer USS Tainall opened up with a barrage of about 120 5-inch explosive shells, a U.S. military spokesman said.

The naval barrage, one of the heaviest by U.S. forces in months, silenced the fire by the Syrian-backed militiamen.

The fighting came as special U.S. Middle East envoy Donald Rumsfeld returned to Beirut and met for more than two hours with Nabih Berr, chief of the Shiite Moslem militia known as Amal.

Berr's spokesman said the two men discussed a proposed security plan for greater Beirut, which calls for a disengagement of warring parties, as well as the Israeli occupation of south Lebanon.

The fighting between the Marines and the Druze lasted about an hour, and at one point an oil storage tank was set ablaze, dropping a curtain of thick black smoke over the Marine compound.

It was only the third time the New Jersey had fired since the 59,000-ton battleship arrived off the Lebanese coast in September to back up the 1,200-man Marine force in Beirut.

There are more than a dozen ships of the 6th Fleet in or near Lebanese waters, and U.S. commanders have called for naval gunfire 11 times since American involvement began in the Lebanese crisis.

The clashes forced Beirut International Airport to close for nearly four hours.

French peace-keeping forces came under another attack when a rocket-propelled grenade was fired at their headquarters in west Beirut, a French spokesman said. The grenade struck a wall and caused no injuries.

Rumsfeld returned to Beirut from talks in Israel and Syria on the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon and a security plan to separate warring Lebanese factions.

The Syrian government of President Hafez Assad, which actively supports the anti-government Moslem forces in Lebanon, demanded once again Sunday that American and Israeli forces be withdrawn from the country.

Official Damascus radio said this was a precondition to the pullout of Syrian troops.

The London Sunday Times, reporting on a trip to Damascus this week by British Foreign Minister Sir Geoffrey Howe, said the Syrians were confident American public opinion would force a Marine withdrawal. Syria will make no concessions, the newspaper said.

Workers Protest Staggering Inflation

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Thousands of workers protested outside government buildings in Jerusalem today over a devastating 190.7 percent inflation rate as postal and railway workers nationwide stayed off the job for a second day.

Protesters, including union leaders from 23 communities around the country, gathered outside Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's offices to demonstrate. No violence was reported.

A crippling strike by postal and railway workers went into its second day today and the country's 60,000 civil servants threatened to stage a 3-hour strike Tuesday — the second in three days — over the nation's economic crisis. The workers Sunday staged a 2-hour warning strike.

Despite job actions by thousands of employees over the last two weeks, officials, including Finance Minister Yigal Cohen-Orgad, have vowed to press ahead with tough measures designed to slash government spending, curb inflation and spur exports.

Rebels Attack Capital

Salvadoran rebels fought into the heart of a northern provincial capital, killing seven soldiers and wounding 15 others before being forced to retreat by government forces supported by jet fighters, the Defense Ministry said.

In Nicaragua, church and opposition groups Sunday called for the easing of a State of Emergency law to guarantee free elections scheduled for sometime in 1985. A top government official rejected the appeal.

An estimated 500 Salvadoran guerrillas of the Popular Liberation Forces used 90mm cannons, mortars and automatic weapons Sunday in the attack on Chalatenango, the capital of Chalatenango province.

A Defense Ministry communique said seven soldiers were killed and 15 wounded in the six-hour battle for the city of 15,000 located 29 miles northeast of San Salvador. The communique claimed at least 80 rebels and one civilian died.

Pentagon Readies News Rules For Future Grenadas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As a result of the stinging criticism that resulted from the decision to bar the media from the invasion of Grenada, the Pentagon is developing a plan for dealing with news coverage of future military operations.

"We've got to come up with a system of protecting the mission but still permitting the media to cover an operation," Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said.

"We're trying to develop some sort of plan that can cover all sorts of contingencies," Burch said. "It's difficult, but we've got to try. It's our responsibility to the public."

The study, he said, will try to determine "how we might be able to accommodate the media and still maintain security for the mission and not jeopardize the lives of soldiers."

Disclosure of the study by other Pentagon officials came several days after 10 major news organizations urged the Reagan administration to affirm the principle that reporters will be able to cover U.S. military operations.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, interviewed by the Mutual Broadcasting Co. last week, said the media issue was "overlooked" in planning the Grenada invasion. "Now, I think we probably could have preserved secrecy with a very small pool of reporters involved from the first," Speakes said.

Men Still Far Ahead In Pay Race

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new government study says 6 million wives earned more than their husbands in 1981, but married working women generally still have a long way to go to catch up with men.

The Census Bureau report released Sunday said the figure represented about 12 percent of American couples.

The study, titled Wives Who Earn More Than Their Husbands, said on the average women earned 40 percent as much as their husbands and they made 59 percent as much when the comparison is of full-time workers.

"So it is still the atypical case in which the wife is the major contributor to the family income," the report said. "But the number of families relying solely on the husband's earnings has declined substantially."

The study also noted the rising number of married women working outside the home. Just after World War II, about 20 percent of all wives were employed but by 1982 more than half of them were in the paid labor force, it said.

Nearly one-fourth of the wives who make more money than their husbands had completed four or more years of college, the report said, and 38 percent had more years of schooling than their husbands.

"Wives who earn more than their husbands are not really superstars," the study said. "They usually became the family's breadwinner because their husbands have problems with their jobs. There is also a group of women who raise children all by themselves."

Wives who outearn their husbands were more highly concentrated in professional and managerial jobs and wives who earned less were primarily in clerical, service and sales jobs, the study said.

It said black couples were more likely than white or Hispanic ones to have a wife as the sole breadwinner or the spouse with a larger paycheck. One in five black couples were in these categories compared with about one in 10 white or Hispanic couples, according to the study.

Graff said she had a definite confirmation from Sen. John Vogt and Representative Art Grindle that they would attend, with several other state-level officials expected to confirm their participation. Among the business leaders expected to attend are Tom Stevenson, Paulucci Enterprises; George Pope, ITT; Howard Volpert, Burdines; Dave Joswick, N.C.R.; and Carlo Frappolli, Stromberg-Carlson.

Behind the group's interest in the drug and alcohol problem among local youths, is a survey that showed half of the local high school seniors had been drunk within two weeks of the survey. Over 64 percent of them had some experience with marijuana or hashish.

The same survey reported that 20 percent of the high school seniors had used cocaine and that the statistics for younger school-age children were similar.

Sgt. William Bernosky, of the Sanford Police Department, who coordinated the organizational meeting of the Sanford Chemical Awareness Network, said police are very supportive of the new group and that Police Chief Ben Butler is willing to commit police time and effort to their cause.

The cruise sets sail Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. and Goldstick said there would be a "gentle surprise," which he preferred not to disclose, for every woman who attends.

The organization's next meeting following the cruise is scheduled for Jan. 31, at the Sanford Civic Center. It will be open to the public.

High-Tech Treason ...

Two decades ago, author Werner Keller argued in his book East Minus West Equals Zero that most of the Soviet Union's technological "progress" had been in fact only the result of technology purchased or stolen from the West. Keller may have overstated the case just a bit, but it is nonetheless true that the Soviets have historically placed a paramount priority on obtaining the secrets of more technologically advanced nations. Indeed, doing so is a Russian tradition that dates back to Peter the Great.

The Soviets, of course, are interested in more than just learning how to make better washing machines. Their decades-long objective has been to gain military superiority over NATO and the United States partly by out-producing the West in arms and partly by catching up to it if not surpassing the technological sophistication of Western armaments. The Soviets achieved the first long ago and, during the last decade especially, have made ominous strides toward the second.

A 1982 CIA report declared that the Soviet KGB and GRU (the Kremlin's secret police/espionage and military intelligence services, respectively) "have been so successful at acquiring Western technology that the manpower levels they allocate to this effort have advanced to the point where there are now several thousand collection officers at work under various covers ranging from diplomats to journalists to trade officials throughout the world."

The Pentagon estimates that the Soviets in recent years have met fully 50 percent of their need for advanced military technology by purchasing or stealing high technology in western Europe, Japan, and the United States.

Recently, the CIA supplied the Senate with a partial list of what the Soviets had acquired from the West. The list included a wide range of computer hardware and software, laser equipment, automated and precision machine tools, advanced inertial guidance and navigation components, furnaces for producing titanium plates for submarines, jet engine fabrication technology, acoustical sensors, electro-optical sensors, and air defense radar designs. The military applications of these technologies are too obvious to require elaboration.

In general, the Reagan administration has reacted with commendable vigor to this hemorrhage of vital technology to the Soviet bloc. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is pushing for more restrictions on export of high technology goods. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan is overseeing Operation Exodus, a U.S. Customs Service program to intercept illegal exports of sophisticated technology. And FBI Director William Webster has assigned hundreds of agents to frustrate Soviet espionage in high-technology areas.

But the White House has been curiously reluctant to force a more cooperative approach from the Commerce Department, an agency traditionally more interested in promoting American exports than protecting technological secrets.

Secretary Weinberger would like authority to review all export license applications, and not just those the Commerce Department chooses to submit for Pentagon approval. Weinberger is getting no help from the White House. Treasury Secretary Regan would like to move all export enforcement authority from a traditionally lax Commerce Department to the Treasury Department's Customs Service. Again, no help from the White House, although a tough fight on just this issue is brewing in the Senate.

The bill in question is opposed by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and a powerful coalition of business interests apparently less fearful of helping the Soviets than of losing potential exports. President Reagan is obviously reluctant to overrule Secretary Baldrige or to intervene in this squabble among cabinet officers. But doing nothing now effectively sustains the status quo, which in turn means the administration will be doing less than it could, and should, to keep vital technology out of the hands of this nation's most dangerous enemy.

That cannot be what President Reagan really wants.

BERRY'S WORLD

The expected passage of Proposition 1, the "citizens' choice amendment," by the people of Florida in the November general elections will mean financial disaster to the taxing bodies in Seminole County, a special committee has reported.

The committee, led by Altamonte Springs City Manager Phil Penland, said the city and county governments and the school board in Seminole County will lose an estimated $48 million annually as a result.

The amendment calls for a roll-back in taxes and fees to the 1980-81 level with an allowance for increases of no more than five percent per year unless approved by the voters in special elections.

Penland in a report to the Council of Local Governments in Seminole County said a full report from his committee will be submitted to the council in the next 90-to-120 days. He said the committee believes each of the governments involved should create its own method of informing its citizens of the effect the amendment will have, asking those citizens for their views on what services should be cut.

He said while the report may not be neutral, it will be "empirical" — based on observation and experience.

Members of Penland's committee are: retired school district Assistant Superintendent for Business and Finance Roger Harris, Sanford Assistant City Manager Steve Harriett, Assistant County Administrator Jim Easton, Longwood City Administrator David Chacey, Lake Mary City Manager Kathy Rice, Casselberry City Clerk Linda Zike, Winter Springs Deputy Mayor Buck Adkins and Oviedo Mayor Bob Whittier.

Each of the committee members listed losses in revenues their governments expect the first year with Proposition 1 as follows: School Board, $29 million; Seminole County $9.25 million; Altamonte Springs, $6.5 million; Longwood, $1 million; Casselberry, $900,000; Sanford, $750,000; Lake Mary $250,000, and Oviedo $100,000.

In other business at the meeting, Altamonte Springs Commissioner Lee Constantine was re-elected chairman of the Council of Local Governments, while Whittier was elected vice chairman and Adkins was re-elected treasurer.

As predicted in the Evening Herald during Longwood's election week in December, 10-year city commission veteran J. Russell Grant has been elected mayor of the city by his commission colleagues.

Grant was elected unanimously last week at the city commission's reorganizational meeting. Elected deputy mayor was Bill Mitchell, city commissioner from the Winsor Manor area.

Grant served for several terms as council chairman before a new charter was passed in 1978 calling for a commission form of government and eliminating the office of mayor as a post elected directly by the people. So, chairing the meetings is nothing new to him.

New Twist On An Old Life-Saver

By Jan Ziegler
UPI Science Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new kind of tiny balloon that pulls clots out of blood vessels is helping doctors save patients' lives and limbs without surgery.

The device, developed by a team at Michael Reese Hospital and Chicago Medical School, is being tested in hospitals across the country, according to Dr. Edward Goldberg, the team leader.

The technique itself, in which a tiny inflatable balloon is used to drag a clot out of a blood vessel and prevent tissue damage that could result in paralysis or death, is two decades old.

The Chicago team uses a different material — silicone — for the balloon and tube to which it is attached.

"What essentially this is, is an improvement on a very special device that has been developed and used worldwide for about 20 years," Goldberg said in a telephone interview.

Dr. Peter Block, head of the cardiac catheterization lab at Massachusetts General Hospital, said the technique may show promise, but he said doctors have used the old method "very successfully for a long, long time and will continue to do so."

Traditional catheters are made of a vinyl material with a latex rubber balloon. The two materials are incompatible, Goldberg said, so the balloon has to be tied on.

This means a balloon can come off inside a blood vessel — a difficult and dangerous problem, though one that doesn't occur frequently.

Also, latex balloons can damage the inside of vessels, causing them to become atherosclerotic — hardened with scar tissue — and increasing the likelihood of further blockage.

Silicone is slicker than latex and takes less pressure to inflate. This means the balloon can be withdrawn more easily and the blood vessel, which reacts to inflating balloons by constricting, has to do less work.

Using the silicone balloon, he said, "We're able to remove the blood clot with less pressure, less force, so we therefore do less damage to the blood vessel."

It is so flexible it can be used in blood vessels of the brain where surgery would be impossible, Goldberg said.

Clotting, which can close off a blood vessel anywhere in the body, is a major problem in surgery, Goldberg said.

The removal technique involves making a tiny incision in the blood vessel, and passing a tube called a catheter into it. At the end of the catheter is the deflated balloon.

The catheter's tip is passed through the clot, the balloon is inflated and then withdrawn slowly, bringing the clot with it.

Failure to remove the clot would mean blood to the surrounding tissue would be cut off, which could result in paralysis, brain damage or worse — depending on where the clot is.

"It often makes the difference between saving a leg or an arm and losing it," Goldberg said of the technique.

USIA Chief Gets French Pep Talk

WASHINGTON — Charles Wick, the irrepressible director of the U.S. Information Agency, was discussing high strategy the other day with his No. 2 man, Leslie Lenkowsky, and the former head of French intelligence, Count Alexandre de Marenches.

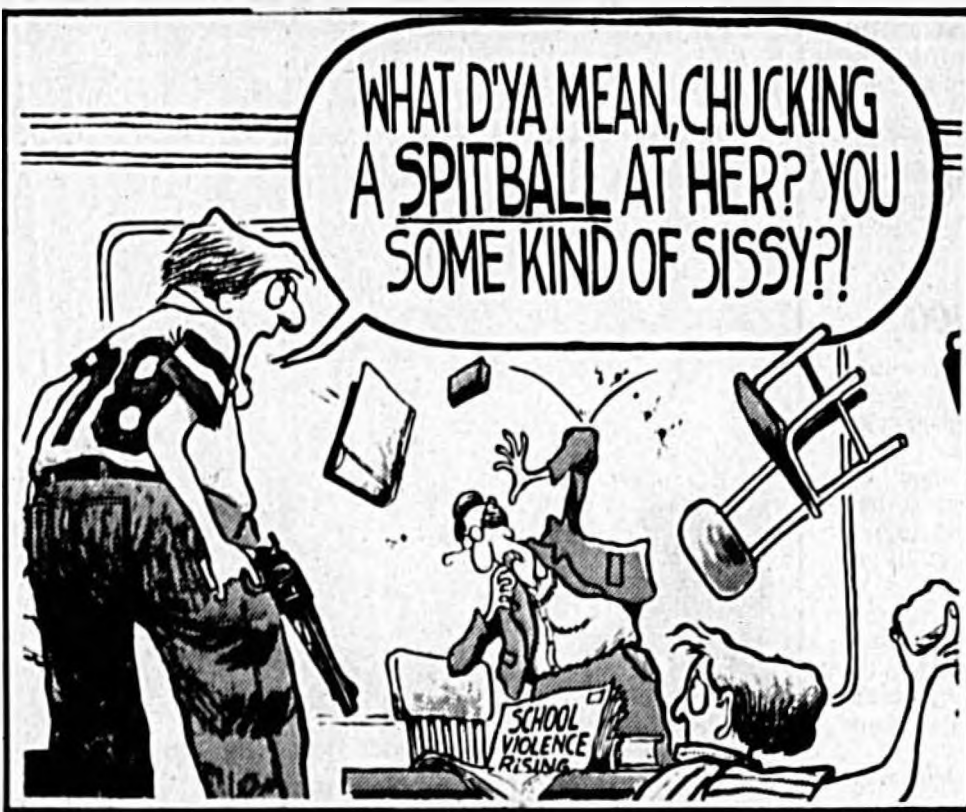

It was a most solemn session, duly chronicled in a 17-page transcript intended for official eyes only.

Putting first things first, de Marenches brought up the Soviet Union. It should not be called the Soviet Union, he said. He told Wick the USIA "should always say the Soviet Empire." Then the problem came up of what to call Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov.

"I don't like the word 'defense' when you are talking about the Russians," said de Marenches.

"Minister of war?" asked Wick. "I was going to say that he would be called the 'minister of war, minister of global aggression,'" suggested the count. "That is what he really is."

Speaking of "war," he reminded the USIA policy makers that their agency is

Social Security Talk II

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Earlier this year a national commission recommended a series of changes designed to stave off a financial crisis in the Social Security system. Congress, in what has been called a "political miracle," enacted many of these changes into law. The Social Security Administration now says the system is financially sound well into the next century.

But the national commission did not address a financial problem which most experts think is much more acute than the one faced by Social Security. Simply put, without radical changes, the Medicare system is going to be broke around the end of the decade.

Medicare is actually two separate trust funds. The Supplementary Medical Insurance Fund, also known as "Part B," covers such things as doctor bills, diagnostic tests, drugs, medical supplies and certain kinds of outpatient services and home health services. It is growing rapidly, with expenditures expected to increase from $14.2 billion this year to $31 billion in 1988.

But it is funded directly out of general tax revenues. So while its growth is alarming, it is not considered to be in financial difficulty because Congress can continue to appropriate enough money each year to pay the cost.

It is the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, "Part A," that is in so much trouble. The fund covers inpatient hospital care and certain home health costs including skilled nursing care. It is the fund which is financed by payroll taxes as part of the Social Security system.

Using what it calls "conservative figures" the Congressional Budget Office estimates that near the end of the present decade the fund will be technically bankrupt and by the year 1995 the actual cash deficit in the fund will be around $310 billion. A number of experts say they do not believe the deficit will be that great but even they concede it may exceed $200 billion.

As with the other Social Security trust funds, the Hospital Insurance fund is supposed to be self-sustaining. But almost since it started in the mid-1960s it has been paying out just about what it has been taking in each year.

The problem is two-fold: an aging population and rapidly spiraling medical costs. When Medicare was enacted in 1965 there were 16 workers paying into the fund for each beneficiary. Today, that ratio has shrunk to 3.2-1 and by early in the next century the ratio will be down to 2-1.

As far as costs go, the figures are startling. Within the next two years, workers retiring today will, on average, get more back from Medicare than the total they paid in during their working lives. Before these workers' spouses die they can expect, on average, to receive over $60,000 more than the workers paid in.

Over the last several years Congress has made several stabs at the problem. Under current law, beneficiaries pay the deductible cost of the first day of a hospital stay and the fund pays for the next 59 days. After that beneficiaries pay $87.50 of the cost of the next 30 days and $175 of the next 60 days. The beneficiary must pay all costs for any time spent in the hospital after 150 days.

In 1981 Congress tried to increase the annual income to the fund by increasing costs to beneficiaries. The annual deductible for hospital insurance was increased by 27 percent to $304 in 1983 and $350 in 1984.

Then in 1982 Congress made a stab at reducing outgo by setting rigid limits on the amount it would reimburse hospitals. Last year, as part of the Social Security amendment package, Congress went a step further by setting hospital reimbursement rates in advance for various costs and procedures.

Congress caught a great deal of flack from the elderly when it increased costs to beneficiaries. Similarly, health care providers were irate when Congress tried to set limits on hospital reimbursements.

Yet the CBO estimates the changes made over the last three years will save the fund only about $20 billion over the next five years. This is a mere drop in bucket when the potential deficit being faced over the next 12 years is in excess of $200 billion.

Worry Over Early Poll News

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The news media, notably the television networks, are doing the right thing for the wrong reasons. The politicians, on the other hand, are doing the wrong thing for the right reasons.

The predictable result is a senseless conflict which has escalated in recent years. Now, in the state of Washington, it has spawned an unnecessary legal confrontation with national implications.

At issue is the three commercial television networks' reliance upon two relatively new techniques — "exit polls" and ballot counts from "sample precincts" — to obtain exceptionally quick yet highly accurate election results.

Exit polls are surveys conducted by temporary network employees who stand outside polling locations on Election Day and interview voters immediately after they have cast their ballots.

Sample precincts are scientifically selected by psephologists (experts on the statistics of voting) because they are dominated by identifiable demographic groups — blacks or whites, blue-collar workers or farmers, rich or poor people — and provide a reliable indicator of how others in those categories can be expected to vote.

CBS News began exit polling in 1967, followed by NBC News in 1974 and ABC News in 1980. In all three cases the motives were similar and less than salutary — to be first with the results and be able to boast about it afterward.

That glorified form of ambulance-chasing reached its nadir on election night 1980, when NBC News proclaimed President Reagan's victory at 4:15 p.m. Pacific standard time, almost three hours before most polls closed in the West.

It's easy — and very popular these days — to denigrate exit polls and sample precinct results. But they are, if properly used, an extraordinarily valuable source of information about voting patterns.

The size of the sample is huge. The country's most respected survey research organizations typically query about 1,500 people for a nationwide poll. But on Election Day 1982, NBC News surveyed more than 10,000 voters, and ABC News questioned almost 23,000 voters.

A number of states, especially those in the West, have become rightfully concerned about the premature use of that data, but the legislatures in Alaska, Florida, Hawaii and Washington have overreacted by passing laws restricting media access to polling places.

Washington's law, prohibiting surveys within 300 feet of a polling location, now is being challenged in a civil suit filed in U.S. District Court in Tacoma, Wash., by the three networks, the New York Times and the Everett (Wash.) Herald.

They're defending an important principle — journalists' access to news — but their case would be strengthened if the networks would cease abusing the election data.

THREE-MILE COVER-UP: The five-member Nuclear Regulatory Commission is trying to decide whether to allow the undamaged reactor at Three Mile Island back on line. Questions of "management integrity" have sharpened since the facility's owner, General Public Utilities, was indicted last fall on charges of falsifying safety data.

NRC Commissioner James Asselstine directed the agency's general counsel to draw up a list of the integrity questions involved, and then make the list public. But Chairman Nunzio Palladino quickly vetoed release of the list. He even refused to give Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., a copy of the list.

Asselstine turned over the list to Specter and is trying to persuade fellow commissioners to back public release of the document. So far he has convinced Commissioner Victor Gillinsky. The issue — daylight or darkness — will be resolved by the full commission any day now.

Payton's Free Throws Lift Raiders Over Scots

By Chris Flister
Herald Sports Writer

With his team trailing by 10 points, 75-65, with 3:20 remaining in the ball game Saturday night, Daytona Beach Community College coach Ray Ridenour told his team they would have to start fouling Seminole Community College's Raiders at every opportunity. And, while Ridenour had a brief bout with an official, DBCC assistant coach Roger Dorio told the Scurryin' Scots to "foul anyone but number 21."

Number 21 is SCC's Jimmy Payton. And, when the game came down to free throws, the Raiders put the ball in Payton's hand and let him do the rest. With Payton handling the ball most of the time, Daytona Beach could do nothing but foul him and he responded by hitting 8 of 8 free tosses in the last three minutes to lift the Raiders to a 92-80 victory over the fourth ranked (state Junior College poll) Scots at the SCC Health Center.

"They were fouling us as soon as we touched the ball," SCC coach Bill Payne said. "So, we tried to make sure Jimmy (Payton) had the ball."

Payton's deadly shooting from the charity stripe, 18 of 19 for the game, enabled the sophomore guard to record a game-high 30 points. Payton was joined in double figures by Mike Tolbert with 17 points, Bernard Merthie and Luis Phelps with 14 each and Lenny Grace with 10. Grace also came up with a game-high 11 assists.

Six players scored in double figures for the Scots, including Charles Stevenson and Edwin Haynes with 14 points each, Sam Smith and John Ramsey with 11 apiece and Jim Gable and Tim Branham with 10 each.

The Raiders improved to 12-8 overall and 1-1 in the Mid-Florida Conference while Daytona Beach fell to 14-5 overall and 1-1 in the conference. SCC is back in action Wednesday at St. John's while its next home game is Saturday against Valencia CC.

It was a back and forth struggle for most of the first half, but the turning point came with three minutes remaining and the Scots holding a 28-25 lead. Ridenour was slapped with a technical foul after arguing a call and Payton connected on both free throws to make it 28-27. SCC went on to outscore Daytona Beach, 14-2, the remainder of the first half to take a 41-30 halftime lead.

While it was Payton's free throws that lifted SCC down the stretch, Tolbert came through with his top scoring effort of the season and ignited the Raiders to a big lead early in the second half.

SCC held a 10-point lead, 45-35, when Tolbert scored six straight points to give the Raiders a 16-point lead, 51-35, with 15:19 remaining in the game. About seven minutes later, Tolbert went on another binge, scoring five straight points and giving the Raiders a 17-point lead, 62-45, with 8:53 remaining.

The Raiders went up by as much as 22 points in the second half only to see the Scots trim the lead to eight, 82-74, with 1:54 remaining. Artis Johnson then dropped in a layup to put SCC back on top by 10, 84-74, and Payton converted a pair of free throws to give SCC a 12-point lead, 86-74, with 1:12 left to play.

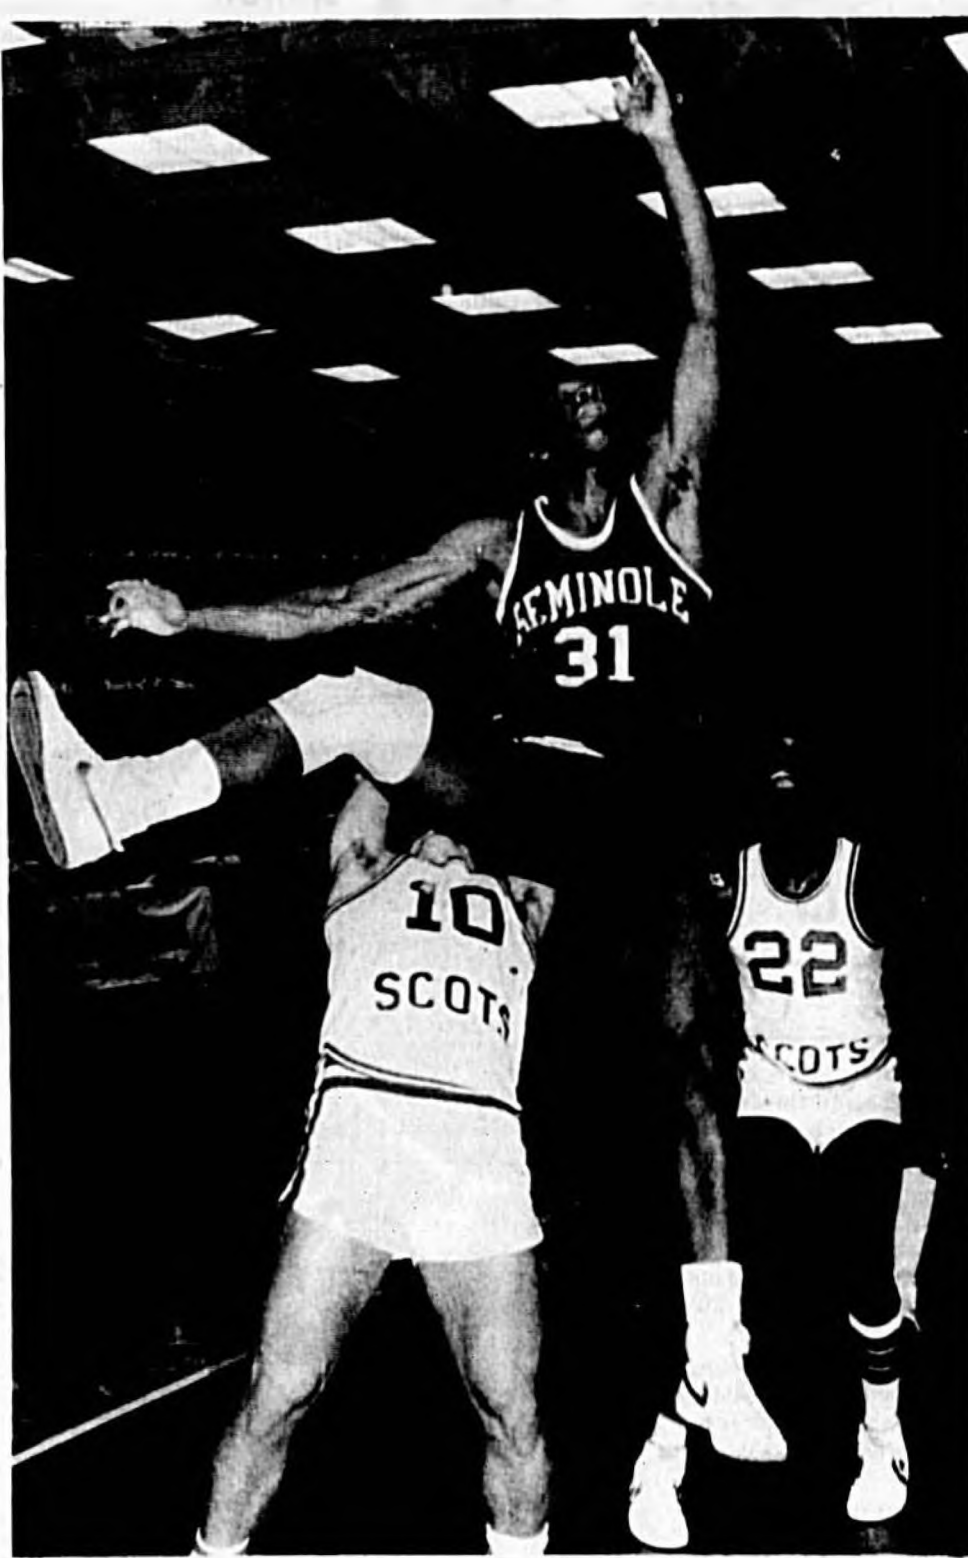

Daytona Beach scored two quick buckets to pull back within eight points, 86-78, but the Raiders then hit 4 of 5 free throws in the next 30 seconds to sew up the victory.

"Patience was a big key for us tonight," Payne said. "We knew Daytona Beach had a fine team, they beat Lake City, and we knew the wouldn't quit. Their press bothered us some, but we were able to maintain our composure."

SCC's Artis Johnson goes up for a layup while Daytona Beach's Tim Branham arrives too late — and pays for it. Johnson contributed five points and some strong inside play Saturday in the Raiders' 92-80 victory over the Scurryin' Scots. Jimmy Payton led SCC with 30 points, including 18 of 19 from the free throw line, where both teams spent a lot of time at Saturday. SCC shot 47 free throws and Daytona Beach took 33.

Lady Seminoles Go After 16th

Girls basketball is in the county sports spotlight tonight as five teams are in action with one inter-county matchup highlighting the night of action.

Sanford's Lady Seminoles will try to improve their record to 16-2 tonight against Metro Conference power Orlando Evans. Seminole is still sitting atop the Five

Prep Basketball

Star Conference with a 9-0 mark. Although tonight's game isn't a conference matchup, the Lady Seminoles will be fired up since Evans defeated them twice last season.

Seminole is led by the outstanding backcourt tandem of Mona Benton and Maxine Campbell along with the inside strength of center Dieldre Hillery. Forwards Gene Stallworth and Catherine Anderson provide added strength underneath. Andell Smith is the leading scorer off the bench.

The inter-county matchup tonight pits Lyman's Lady Greyhounds up against Lake Brantley's Lady Patriots at Lake Brantley High. The Lady Greyhounds are riding a three game winning streak thanks to the hot shooting of Valerie "Pam" Jackson. Strength underneath is provided by Kim Lemon and Kim Forsyth while guard Kim Goroum contributes added scoring punch and is also a fine ballhandler. Fleet-footed Schowanda Williams also starts at guard and bench strenght comes from Ulanda Bouey and Denise Stevens.

Lake Brantley will try to snap a three-game losing, but all three of those losses were close ones and against three good teams, DeLand, Seminole and Lake Brantley. If the Lady Patriots continue to perform well, tonight's game will go down to the wire. Lake Brantley's will need the scoring punch of its leaders, Michelle Brown and Linda Nunez along with strong inside play from Tracey Meikle, Kim Waln and Cammie Twaddell. Additional outside shooting comes from Kim Luebenow and Sherry "Ice" Asplen.

Lake Howell's Lady Silver Hawks will try to stay in second place in the conference as they travel to Spruce Creek. The Lady Hawks are two games behind Seminole with a 7-2 conference mark.

Tammy Johnson, the county's leading scorer, is coming off a 33-point performance in her last outing. She is joined in the backcourt by assist-leader Mary Johnson. Inside strength comes from Janene Brown, Monica McNeil and Christy Scott. Scott has become a terror underneath for the Lady Hawks and is moving up among the top rebounders in the county. The good-looking senior has a high rebounding game of 23 this season which is tops in the county.

Oviedo's Lady Lions will have their hands full tonight against Jones in an Orange Belt Conference matchup at Oviedo High. Jones took 4A powerhouse Orlando Edgewater into overtime last week before bowing out. Oviedo is led by Mary Lokers and Brenda Redway inside and the fine sophomore guard tandem of Stephanie Nelson and Natalie Barth. Nelson pumped in a season-high 16 points in her last outing. — Chris Flister

Bosox Fans Live Out Fantasy

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) — Two dozen avid baseball fans, most of them from New England, are back at home today after living out a childhood fantasy playing baseball with — and against — members of the 1967 American League Champion Boston Red Sox.

Most of the campers paid $2,550 for the privilege of playing ball with ex-Sox players including Cy Young Award winner Jim Lonborg, George "Boomer" Scott, Mike Andrews, Russ Gibson, Dick Radtitz, and Gary Bell.

"I had to take out a loan for this, but it's well worth every penny," said Ken Sacha, a pre-school teacher from Winoski, Vt.

"You can't measure these memories in dollars." The camp team partially avenged the Red Sox defeat in the '67 World Series at the hands of the St. Louis Cardinals, who were conducting a similar baseball camp in St. Petersburg.

Before the game, the former Red Sox players told their proteges a victory would help ease the 16-year-old pain of defeat.

The two squads of campers met Friday, with the "Sox Exchange" jumping out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning, then holding on for a 10-5 victory.

"I'd like to thank you guys for kicking the Cardinals butts," Bell told the team during a boisterous bus ride back to the Sox training camp in Winterhaven.

Despite the camaraderie that developed over the five-day camp, the big leaguers didn't hold back when they faced their charges Saturday before about 350 fans.

The Red Sox bats rolled up 15 runs, and Bell, Lonborg, Radtitz and Darrell Brandon held the campers to just three hits for a 15-0 thrasher.

But for most of the campers and ball-players, the win over the Cardinals was the highlight of the season.

"It was really big for us," said Gibson, who was a rookie catcher in the Red Sox 1967 "Impossible Dream" pennant race and now coaches baseball at a junior college in Fall River, Mass.

Robinson Rolls; 12 Spectators Injured In Crash

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — Shawana Robinson, of Des Moines, Iowa, drove her twin-turbocharged 1980 Kenworth to a spectacular victory in the 15-lap short track diesel feature in front of a standing room only crowd Sunday afternoon at the New Smyrna Speedway. Robinson, 19-years old, is the one and only female in the world of truck racing.

Finishing second, a scant few feet behind Robinson, was fastest qualifier and fast heat winner E.J. Utley, who drove a twin-turbocharged 1980 Mack truck.

In the closing laps of the second heat, three local drivers, Barry Ownby, Lee Genest and Duke Southard, tangled coming out of turn four while battling for the lead. One of the trucks smashed into a concrete retaining wall, sending chunks of cement flying into the grandstand. Twelve spectators were injured and all three trucks were destroyed.

Steve Pickney, a three-year veteran truck racer, went on to do his first ever truck stunt.

Mandy, Barnes Lead Lyman Past Lady Rams, 2-0

By Chris Flister
Herald Sports Writer

Lake Mary's girls soccer team took a giant step forward Saturday while Lyman's Lady Greyhounds continued to roll. Lake Mary defeated powerful Vero Beach St. Edwards, 2-0, to advance to the finals of the Burger King Girls Soccer Classic at Lake Mary High, but the Rams couldn't get past Lyman in the finals as the Greyhounds claimed a 2-0 victory and the tourney title.

Alyson Barnes scored early in the first half and Sheila Mandy added a goal early in the second to boost the Lady Greyhounds. Mandy had earlier pumped in three goals to lead Lyman to a 3-0 victory over defending state champion Gainesville Buchholz. Kelly Broen scored both goals for Lake Mary in its semi-final victory over St. Edwards.

"St. Edwards was a big win for us," Lake Mary coach Bill Eisselle said.

"They were 10-0 going into the game. Lyman is a moral victory for us, we lost to them 9-1 a month ago. Now we have to work on getting the ball into the goal against them."

Lyman's devastating offensive attack had Lake Mary on the defensive most of the game. But, it was the outstanding effort of goalkeeper Debbie Howell that kept the Lady Rams in the game. Lyman took 22 shots on goal Saturday, and Howell accounted for 18 saves. For her impressive effort in the tourney, Howell was named the Most Valuable Defensive Player. Barnes was the offensive MVP.

Eisselle also commended defender Marianne Dittucci for her fine job of covering the explosive Mandy and Jody Thomas for her fine play against St. Edwards.

In the third place game Saturday, Buchholz upended St. Edwards, 3-0, and, in the consolation match, Lake Brantley ripped Trinity Prep, 4-0.

The All Tournament team included, goalie — Andrea Deyrup (Buchholz), forwards — Mandy, Boyenson (Lyman), Broen (Lake Mary), Katie Sama (Trinity Prep), midfielders — Annie Richardson (St. Edwards), Kim Mitchell (Lyman), Michelle Herbst (Lake Brantley), defenders — Sherry Erbes (Buchholz), Karen Abernethy (Lyman), Jennifer Josephs (Lake Brantley).

Experts Neutral On Outcome Of Super Bowl XVIII

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Where do you get your information? How about trying the actual source? Generally, that isn't a bad idea, but it won't get you anywhere with either the Washington Redskins or Los Angeles Raiders.

They're taking a rather narrow view, all of them. The Redskins like their chances in Super Bowl XVIII, and the Raiders firmly believe they're going to win even though they're three-point underdogs. So where does that leave you? Right back where you started.

The proper way to do this, I thought, to find out who will win next Sunday, was to track down some other respected sources. Authoritative, but more impartial ones. Football men who knew what they were talking about and could give us some line on what to expect.

L.C. Greenwood was the first guy I button-holed. Dick Butkus the second and John Madden the third. That's an awful lot of football experience and ability there.

Greenwood put in 13 years with the Pittsburgh Steelers and was one of the most able defensive linemen they ever had. He played against most of the present Redskins and Raiders. Butkus, who was with the Chicago Bears nine years, still is regarded by many as the greatest linebacker ever. And everybody knows big John Madden, the man who forged such an impressive 103-32-7 record during the 10 seasons he coached the Raiders and led them to a victory in Super Bowl XI in 1977. He has become an even better known personality in his own right with his incisive and illuminating comments about football on TV.

You would think that among these three excellent sources, they could give you some clue, some idea, whether the Redskins or the Raiders will win, but the fact is they don't know much more than you do. Would you believe they don't have one good strong honest opinion among them?

"I like both teams," said Greenwood, who retired from the Steelers 15 months ago but played in four Super Bowls with them before that.

Both teams? C'mon, now, L.C. "I mean it," he said. "I'm glad I'm not a betting man. I wouldn't know where to put my money."

Greenwood did feel the determining factor would be either of the two quarterbacks, Joe Theismann or Jim Plunkett.

"I think that'll be the key," said the Steelers' former tackle who now runs a coal and engineering corporation in Pittsburgh. "Theismann is tougher to defense against because he's more mobile. I've heard people say Plunkett doesn't have mobility, but he seems to get around pretty well under pressure. I think if Plunkett gets hot, he'll have a real good day. He's a student of the game, always thinking out there, which is what you have to do."

"Both him and Theismann have been in this situation before. That's why I say the quarterback will be the key. Oakland has a very good defensive secondary. That could create a problem for Theismann." Greenwood does the same thing a lot of others do. He still calls the AFC titlists the Oakland Raiders instead of the Los Angeles Raiders from force of habit. That doesn't really matter. He knows the players. Greenwood has made the adjustment from player to spectator quite well.

"It's great sitting back and watching 'em," he said. "Of course, there isn't as much money this way, but I don't hurt as much, either."

Butkus, who made All-Pro every year he played, is happy over the new TV series he's starring, "Blitz Thunder," but he can't tell you any more about who's going to win next Sunday than Greenwood.

"I have no pick," he said. "On one hand, I live in Los Angeles and I suppose I gotta be a hometown boy, but Richie Petitbon (one of the Redskins' assistant coaches) is a very good friend of mine. So what do I do? I stay neutral."

Butkus differs from Greenwood in that he sees John Riggins, the Redskins' tough running back who gets all that yardage for them, as the key, not either of the quarterbacks. "I think the Raiders will try to stop Riggins to make the Redskins throw the ball," Butkus said. "If that happens, the game could turn out to be one of those track meets up and down, with the team that scores last winning the game."

What Butkus was saying was that the Redskins know all about the Raiders' superlative cornerbacks, Lester Hayes and Mike Haynes, and strong safety Mike Davis. Washington would much rather run the ball than throw it. That's where Riggins comes in.

Which brings us to John Madden, whom you imagine would naturally be leaning toward the Raiders. He probably is, but he'll be working Sunday's game for CBS so he'd like to at least try to stay as unbiased as possible.

"Last year, I picked Washington to upset Miami, but this time I'm not picking anyone to win yet," he said. "You have two exceptionally fine teams here and I think it'll be a real good ball game."

Now, that one we could've figured out for ourselves, couldn't we?

Mandlikova Upends Bewildered Martina

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Martina Navratilova looked bewildered as she entered her locker room after her loss in the finals of a $150,000 women's tennis tournament.

But who could blame her. After all, it was the first time in a long while she had been in a loser's locker room.

Hana Mandlikova, the tourney's eighth-seeded player, fashioned her court speed and a seldom-used lob shot into a stunning 7-6 (8-6), 3-6, 6-4, upset of Navratilova — the world's top-ranked woman — to take the crown Sunday at the tournament, sponsored by Virginia Slims.

The defeat marked the latest setback in Navratilova's quest to claim the consecutive match winning streak of 56 set by Chris Evert-Lloyd.

Last year, Navratilova rolled to an incredible 86-1 record in singles play but a loss to Kathy Horvath in the French Open ended her hopes of surpassing Evert-Lloyd's mark in 1983.

Heading into Sunday's final, Navratilova had won 54 straight matches.

The finals showdown between the two players had received much publicity as a heated battle between Czechoslovakia's current top-ranked women's player and Navratilova, that nation's best player until she defected to the United States over five years ago.

Both women had said in the past they did not like each other. However, aside from a few icy glares, the players did not exchange any gestures until they shook hands quickly after the match.

In the first set, Navratilova broke Mandlikova to tie at 5-5 and both held serve for 6-6. In the tie-breaker, Navratilova hit a backhand volley into the net to give Mandlikova a 7-6 lead and made the same error again to give Mandlikova the set.

In the second set, Mandlikova decided to change her strategy and it proved to be a costly error as she lost her serve twice and the match was knotted at a set apiece.

In the ninth game of the deciding set, umpire Lee Jackson called a Navratilova forehand volley long but Martina disagreed. Having become unsettled, Navratilova fell prey to an effective Mandlikova lob and lost her serve to fall behind 5-4.

Mandlikova said she went to the job right after Navratilova argued about the call because she wanted to surprise her.

"I have never used the lob against her before," Mandlikova said. "All I wanted to do was stay close in the third set and then wait for my break."

Having gotten the break, Mandlikova wasted little time claiming the title — her second Slims title in as many weeks — as she served out the set.

Martina Navratilova had her winning streak halted at 54 matches Sunday by Hana Mandlikova in the Virginia Slims championship.

Mancini TKO's Chacon

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini said Referee Richard Steele of Las Vegas was right to stop his attack on Bobby Chacon Saturday.

Mancini retained his World Boxing Association lightweight championship with a third round technical knockout at Lawlor Events Center in Reno.

He said he knew Chacon was in trouble in the third round when he stepped back to wipe the blood from one eye and believes Chacon's corner might have stopped it if the referee hadn't.

Steele, who has now refereed 21 title fights, defended his decision saying "I stopped it when Bobby wasn't answering."

"I thought Bobby suffered enough," he said.

Chacon said the decision was premature.

"I think the referee reacted a little too quick," he said. "But later in the post-fight press conference, he said his corner had threatened to stop the match if the cut over his left eye got worse. That cut required nine stitches."

Mancini described his fourth title defense as "my best fight, technically."

"Who said I can't box tonight," he said. "I was throwing some good jabs."

But even with the addition of a stiff jab, the attack was vintage Mancini. He came out brawling and, although Chacon matched the attack in the first round, he was unable to match Mancini's power.

Midway through the second, Chacon was up against the ropes trying to dodge the barrage. Although he slipped numerous punches and countered with solid blows himself, many more got through.

Mancini said he pressed the attack because "I felt he didn't have the power."

"He wasn't stinging me," he said. "Most of the damage came from Mancini's right hand, but it was a powerful left hook which nearly floored Chacon, throwing him back into the ropes. Steele started forward, but stopped as Chacon battled back with a shopping right to Mancini's jaw."

Then Mancini connected again with a right hand and followed with several more punches and Steele stepped between them.

The bout drew a near capacity crowd of 11,104 despite being televised live nationally and in Reno on HBO. Promoter Robert Andreoli said the gate was $801,925. He said afterward he hopes to promote more fights in Reno.

Chacon, former WBC featherweight and super featherweight champion, was trying to become the eighth fighter to win three world titles. He was stripped of the super featherweight title in May, 1983, for refusing to fight Hector Camacho.

Mancini won the lightweight title with a first round KO of Art Frias in Las Vegas in May, 1982, and retained it in Denver, 1982, with a fourth round KO of Duk Koo Kim. Kim died of his injuries.

His record is now 29-1, the only loss coming at the hands of Alexis Arguello.

Free Throws Boost BC—Bradley's 32 Bops Jax

NEWTON, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston College Eagles used a sweet touch at the foul line to remove a sour taste from their mouths.

"We needed this win. The loss to Providence last Wednesday felt like three losses," said Michael Adams, who hit two free throws with four seconds left to lift the No. 20 Eagles to a 69-67 Big East victory Saturday night over No. 9 St. John's.

Adams, held to 3-of-20 shooting from the floor, hit eight straight free throws to help the Eagles, who last season snapped a 14-game St. John's winning streak, again derail the Redmen.

The Eagles, who raised their record to 11-3, dropped a 63-62 decision to Providence earlier this week. The way they bounced back didn't do much for the morale of the Redmen, 11-2.

Boston College, now 3-1 in the league, delighted a full house of 4,000 by hitting on the last eight straight foul shots to hold off a series of St. John's comebackers.

Chris Mullin, St. John's scoring leader, hit for 25 points, and Jeff Allen had 17. The Eagles got 18 from starting center Roger McCready and 14 each from regular scoring leader Jay Murphy and Adams.

In Sunday's games, No. 11 Fresno State was upset 53-51 by Fullerton State in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association game, Georgia Tech handed defending national champion North Carolina State its fifth straight loss, 56-47, Florida whipped Vanderbilt 73-59.

No. 7 UCLA and No. 18 Georgia also dropped league games Saturday. UCLA fell to Oregon 62-51 in the Pac-10 and Alabama knocked off Georgia 65-60 in the Southeastern Conference.

College Basketball

Elsewhere, No. 2 North Carolina defeated Wake Forest 70-62, No. 3 DePaul walloped Alabama-Birmingham 98-63, No. 5 Houston shaded Texas A&M 70-61, No. 6 Maryland dumped Duke 81-75, No. 8 UTEP slammed Hawaii 70-54, No. 10 Illinois nipped Ohio State 55-53, No. 12 UNLV downed Utah State 93-88, No. 14 Oregon State clipped Southern California 51-45, No. 15 Oklahoma hammered Nicholls State 107-51, No. 16 Tulsa dumped West Texas State 99-93, No. 17 Louisiana State crushed Mississippi 93-70 and No. 19 Arkansas defeated Texas Christian 70-62.

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Charlie Bradley led the University of South Florida with 32 points in a 57-48 victory over Jacksonville University Sunday.

Guard Keith Douglas was second-high scorer for South Florida with 10 points. Otis Smith led the Jacksonville Dolphins with 12 points, followed by Ronnie Murphy with 11.

South Florida took the lead early in the first half and led 21-14 at halftime. Jacksonville clawed back to within one point at 45-44 with 1:57 remaining, but South Florida scored 12 points to the Dolphins' 4 in the closing seconds.

South Florida is 8-5 for the season, and Jacksonville is 7-7.

Simons Putts Out

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Jim Simons let his putter do the talking for him Sunday, and his putter has a stutter.

Simons backed away from a three-foot birdie putt that he needed to stay alive on the second sudden death playoff hole of the $150,000 Bob Hope Classic.

He stepped back up to the ball and pushed it several inches wide, giving John Mahaffey the victory and the $72,000 winner's check.

Simons, who lost $29,800 by missing the easy putt, stalked off the course "without a word."

"I couldn't believe he missed it," said Mahaffey. "I feel great that I won, but I also feel bad for Jim. It's an empty feeling, I've been there."

"When I won the Pleasant Valley tournament in 1978 (in Sutton, Mass.) I had quit smoking for two weeks and I felt great. Then I started again and felt lousy. Now I've stepped for good, and that had an awful lot to do with winning this tournament."

"I feel stronger, sharper and more alert. It's great. I feel so much better today."

The same can not be said for Jim Simons.

Know Your Ballet Guild Dancers

Ballet Guild of Sanford-Seminole is in its 16th season. Auditions are held annually for dancers to perform in the current company.

This year's company was adjudicated in September and dancers are rehearsing for the forthcoming performance, "Professor Peppercorn and His Amazing Outdoor Traveling Show."

The circus-type outdoor extravaganza with a carnival background will be held in the stadium of Lake Mary High School on March 24.

Ballet Guild is a non-profit organization sustained by community support. The guild was founded by the present artistic directors and choreographers, Valerie Weld and Miriam Wright.

BGS company dancers are required to get sponsors to help defray production expenses as well as establish a scholarship fund for deserving dancers.

Lynne Dickey and Shell Wilbur are two of the 20 BGS company dancers.

SHELL WILBUR

Shell Wilbur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Wilbur of Sanford, was selected as a Ballet Guild of Sanford-Seminole dancer during the 1982-83 season.

She is a ninth grade student at Seminole High School and her ambition is to become a professional dancer. Her hobbies are dancing and journalism.

Shell auditioned for the Ballet Guild because, "I love dancing and I want to become the best I can."

Shell continued, "Also because I enjoy working with Miss Valerie and Miss Miriam."

LYNNE DICKEY

Ballet Guild since 1978. Her hobbies include dancing, swimming and horseback riding.

Lynne wanted to become a member of Ballet Guild where she could work toward her life's ambition to become a professional dancer.

Salvation Army Helps Find Lost Relatives

DEAR ABBY: I was told that the Salvation Army locates missing relatives who haven't been heard from for years. Is that true?

I lost track of my brother 19 years ago. He was my only living relative and I would give anything to find him. He can't find me because I moved to another state, got married and now I go by my husband's name, which my brother doesn't know.

Please tell me if the Salvation Army can help me, and if so, how I go about requesting this service.

Dear Abby

M.A.G. It's true. The Salvation Army is expert at finding long-lost relatives. Its Missing Persons Locator Service extends to 86 countries and will make a search for the modest fee of $5. (Yes, $5!)

Interested parties should be aware of the following basic guidelines:

1. The person you want to locate must be a close relative — not a friend.
2. You must be able to provide essential information about the missing person.
3. The Salvation Army reserves the right to reject any request based upon consideration of reasonableness, feasibility or motive. (For example, it will not track down people for the purpose of collecting debts; neither will it hunt for men or women who have deserted their families. And it will not search for people in adoption situations.)

To obtain information and/or a missing persons inquiry form, contact your local Salvation Army office or write to the nearest territorial headquarters: 860 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60610; 120 W. 14th St., New York, N.Y. 10011; 1424 Northeast Expressway, Atlanta, Ga. 30329; 30840 Hawthorne Blvd., Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif. 90274.

P.S. If the Salvation Army comes through for you, please let me know so that I may rejoice with you.

DEAR ABBY: Dudley and I are planning our wedding. It's going to be a formal church wedding and we want it to be perfect in every detail.

We agree on everything with one exception: Dudley hates to wear a necktie.

What do the fashion experts suggest as a compromise?

DUDLEY'S DARLING

DEAR DARLING: The tie that binds in a wedding has nothing to do with what the groom wears around his neck. If Dudley hates neckties because they're uncomfortable, he can leave the top button of his shirt unbuttoned. But the fashion experts say there is no compromise. A man is either formally attired or he isn't.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you last week regarding a very personal problem. Since then, I have been living in fear — if not complete terror — that my letter might be printed.

I requested a personal reply, but if for any reason my letter were to appear in your column, that would be the end of me and my husband's career. We live in a very small town and are well-known here.

Please reassure me. Thank you.

LOSING SLEEP

DEAR LOSING: Have no fear. If you requested a personal reply and enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope, you will receive a personal reply. Pleasant dreams.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Sanford To Get New Pontiac Dealership

A Pontiac dealership, expected to provide jobs for 40 people to be hired locally, is scheduled to open in Sanford the first week in February.

Kim Hackett, Louisville, Ky., president and general manager of the dealership, said he expects to have 60 new Pontiacs on the lot opening day.

Courtesy Pontiac, Inc. is to be located at 3219 U.S. Highway 17-92, on premises formerly occupied by a Volkswagen dealership. The car lot will be leased but Hackett said extensive improvements will be made to the lot and buildings, including doubling the size of the current parking area. Bids for the improvement work are expected to be returned by the end of the week, he said.

The dealership will be affiliated with Sam Swope Pontiac, Inc., Louisville, where Hackett is vice president and general sales manager. Swope, chairman of the board of the new dealership, and Hackett will own the firm.

Hackett, who has been in the automobile sales business seven years, said the dealership will immediately offer a full line of new Pontiacs and a full service department offering all mechanical work. The service department will not have the capability to do body work initially, but plans are to add a body shop in the future. The firm will also sell used cars.

Models sold by Pontiac include the new compact Fiero.

Trans Am, Firebird, Phoenix, Grand Prix, Bonneville and full-size Parisienne.

"It will be a full product line," Hackett said. "Pontiac offers one of the fullest lines in the GM division."

Among staff to be hired locally, Hackett said, will be 5 managers, 15 salesmen, 15 technicians, and 5 secretarial and accounting employees.

In announcing the new firm, Swope said the greater Orlando area is the most dynamic market in Florida, the fastest-growing state in the nation.

"Courtesy Pontiac has an unusual opportunity in a very fast growing market and we expect great things from it," he said.

Martin Luther King's 55th Birthday Remembered

United Press International

The birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. won't become a national holiday for two years, but that didn't stop Americans from celebrating the day.

Coretta Scott King, who led the fight for a federal holiday that becomes official on King's birthday in 1986, attended a concert of gospel music in the Newark, N.J. Symphony Hall featuring speeches by civic leaders.

"You in New Jersey helped keep the memory and spirit of Martin Luther King alive," she said to a crowd of about 250 people. She praised the state for being the first to officially commemorate her husband's birthday.

...birthday will become national holiday in 1986

Nobel Peace Prize, was assassinated April 4, 1968 in Memphis, Tenn. He would have been 55 Sunday.

Gov. Thomas Kean, who attended the reception in Newark, said America is a "much better place to live because Martin Luther King lived."

"He was and is an example to us all. He proved neither race nor age has any monopoly on wisdom," Kean said.

Council President Ralph Grant presented Mrs. King with a street sign bearing her husband's name. High Street in Newark was renamed Martin Luther King Drive.

Civic leaders in Pittsburgh renamed a Port Authority Transit of Allegheny County bus line that opened last February the "Martin Luther King Jr. East Busway."

While most Americans talked of King's ideals, Sen. John Daniels, D-New Haven, said King's dreams have yet to be realized. "As I look around ... I'm somewhat discouraged," Daniels said.

"Poverty and unemployment is higher today than 20 years ago and blacks have less of a chance to get decent and affordable housing."

Latin American Policy

'Give Us Time; We're Working On It'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidents have appointed commissions so frequently to study U.S. relations in Latin America, rather than simply announcing a policy, that the word "commission" has almost come to mean, "There is no policy, but give us time; we're working on it."

The most recent commission is President Reagan's panel headed by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, but it is by no means the first.

There was, in 1969, the well-publicized report of the (Nelson) Rockefeller Commission, which proposed, among other things, that U.S. tariff barriers be dramatically reduced to give easier entry to Latin American products.

That policy recommendation — countersigned by the national security adviser in the White House, a relatively young intellectual by the name of Henry Kissinger — lived for a few months and then a combination of farmers, trade unions and conservatives persuaded Congress that American jobs were more important than Latin American prosperity.

Nearly 15 years have passed, and the problems in Central America, compounded by war and the rapacious price increases in imported petroleum, have become dramatically worse. The Kissinger commission, appointed by Reagan last summer, was assigned to make long-range policy recommendations, and to stay away from current events. They found out they couldn't do it.

Analysis

They discovered the situation was so urgent and critical, so close to economic and military collapse in El Salvador, that they had to deal with the present, because if they didn't there wouldn't be any future.

In the final language of the Kissinger report, the dozen members came to the sobering conclusion the Soviets did not invent the misery of Central America, although the Kremlin may try to take advantage of a situation that has developed a life of its own.

No question before the commission was more controversial than the twin issues of human rights and the spread of communism.

Three members — Kissinger, Boston University President John Silber and former Sen. Nicholas Brady, R-N.J. — dissented to their own report by saying it would be wrong to punish El Salvador for human rights failings, such as the continued activity of the death squads, if that meant the Salvadoran government would be replaced by a communist one.

Said one member, "It's absurd to bring about, in the name of human rights, a regime that follows the model of the Soviet Union, which crushes human rights all over the globe."

According to one account, the most convincing evidence of Nicaragua's membership in the Soviet bloc came from the Nicaraguans themselves who, without being asked, gave the commission members an intelligence briefing on the activities of U.S.-backed "contras" fighting the Sandinista regime.

The briefing, according to the account, "was stunningly accurate and thorough" about the CIA-sponsored operation — so good "that it was clear that Nicaragua had a world-class intelligence system that was plugged into the Soviet and Cuban operations."

Kissinger said that the depth of the Nicaragua information "really shook up" the White House, which had apparently imagined that its covert operation was still undercover, despite numerous reports about it.

In the torrent of leaks that preceded the publication of the commission report, much attention was paid to dissenting minority views. But in the final agreement there is vastly more agreement than disagreement among members.

That is an important point which may serve to comfort some Latin Americans who remember other U.S. commissions, whose reports have sunk without a bubble.

In the final form, the report is unanimous on one crucial point: U.S.-backed governments and ideas in parts of Central America are close to the point of collapse and unless there is an immediate injection of U.S. money and attention, the battle will be lost.

Poll: 58% Favor Press Access In Grenada

LAKE BUENA VISTA (UPI) — While many Americans have taken a moderate view of military censorship of the press in times of combat, more than half or 58 percent of those surveyed during a recent EPCOT Poll believe the press should have been permitted access during the Grenada invasion.

Of the 5,400 people polled at Walt Disney World's EPCOT

Center, a total of 72 percent, however, felt that to save lives, press censorship may be necessary at times. Only one in 10 felt unexplained censorship was appropriate, while an equally small number felt that no censorship whatsoever should be imposed on a free press.

The response was mixed on censorship during the Grenada invasion with 58 percent believing that the press should have access, with or without military cooperation. A total of 35 percent felt that the military should bar the press without explanation.

As might be expected, younger people with some college education tended to lean toward an unfettered press.

Mild Peyronie's Not A Hindrance To Sex

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 16-year-old boy and a virgin. I noticed in one of your letters you mentioned a man who had Peyronie's disease. I'm concerned about this because I may have the same condition. When I have an erection, my penis curves slightly to the left. Will this prevent me from having sex?

DEAR READER — It depends on the degree of the curvature. A slight angulation isn't uncommon in young healthy males. Minor differences, which you probably have, don't cause any problems with sexual activity.

Peyronie's disease can cause sexual difficulty, but it usually occurs in middle-aged or older men.

It's caused by a fibrous thickening of part of the shaft to the penis. The involved area can't expand when the rest of the penis expands, and during an erection this causes the penis to bend. With extreme bends, it becomes painful or impossible to engage in sexual intercourse.

Mild cases of Peyronie's disease may not interfere with sexual activity. The more severe cases should be seen by a urologist. There are limited things that can be done to correct the condition. In some cases, surgery is helpful. In those instances, a hard fibrous area can be removed.

Since you are young, I'm sure you will be interested in reading The Health Letter 17-4, Male Reproductive Functions, which I am sending you. Others who would like this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me. In care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — You had a column about a 29-year-old man who had Burger's disease. I am 58 and I've had the same problem corrected.

My doctor removed the arteries to my legs and replaced them with synthetic arteries. Before the operation I could hardly climb stairs or cut my lawn without stopping every few minutes to rest my legs.

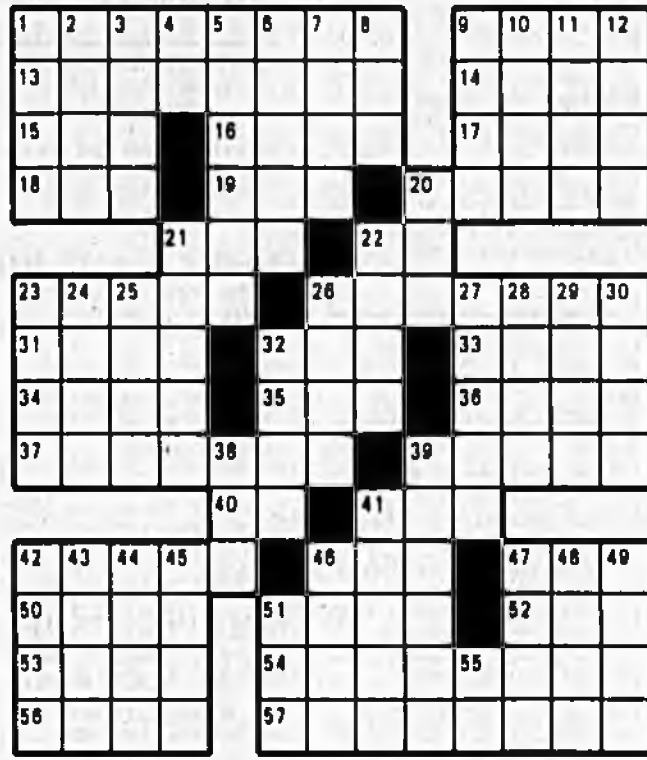

I was told I would lose my leg in three months without the operation. I had the operation and now do as I please. I quit smoking, walk a mile in less than 15 minutes and feel great. Encourage him to have the operation.

DEAR READER — Thank you for your suggestion. You may have a different disease from the young man. Many people develop fatty-cholesterol blockage of the arteries to the legs. When the arteries below the blockage are open you can have surgery to bypass or replace the obstructed artery. In these cases, it's a great operation, as you have discovered.

Burger's disease is associated with growth of the inner lining of the arteries. It's made worse by smoking. It may not be just a localized area of blockage that is easily replaced by a graft.

In any case, the thing to do is have an examination and if surgery is suggested, it probably should be done.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

knockout. In a field that included nine of this year's top McKenny leaders, a dozen world champions, and the current Spingold winners, we didn't figure to last long but we played over our heads and won. In the finals against the current Spingold champions we won by only 24 IMPs, our smallest margin in the tournament.

"Here is a hand played by Al Chiles after Jim Chew had made a very light opening club bid. Jim's two no-trump rebid showed a minimum, so Al just bid six after Jim had given a spade preference. It was a wise decision. The other team didn't get to six after North passed as dealer."

Jim: "Al won the heart lead with his ace and led the king of trumps. Then he cashed the diamond ace and noted the fall of the nine. Maybe it was a singleton. Now Al led a heart to dummy's king and led a second diamond from dummy. East could ruff or discard, but the slam was home whether East ruffed or discarded. If Al had led a second trump, West would have been able to lead a third trump after winning a diamond and would have beaten him."

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

Jim: "The Dallas Bridge Association decided to honor you by naming the knockout team the Jacoby Team. You played in it with a team composed of Jim Chew of Tulsa, Al Chiles of Little Rock, Howard Parker of Baton Rouge, Byron Greenberg of Houston and Charles Weed of Dallas."

Oswald: "Charley Weed put the team together to get me to play in the
