SANFORD - It's cold out there, baby.

But not that cold!

While many of us are bundling up as if we're heading off on an artic expedition, the temperatures in Sanford are nowhere near a record low.

"Goodness, no," said Milt Brown of the Southeastern Regional Climate Center in Columbia, S.C. where such records are kept. "You aren't even close."

Brown said the record low temperature, going back to the earliest records in 1948, is 19 degrees.

That temperature was reached on both Jan. 21, 1985 and Dec. 24, 1989.

"As far as we can see there hasn't been anything any colder than that, but 38 (the temperature overnight on Wednesday to Thursday) is not even close to breaking any records," Brown said.

According to a spokesman at the University of Florida Sanford Agricultural Research Center, there is no chance the record will fall any time soon.

Sports hero, wife prove Christmas is in the giving

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — One local sports hero and his wife know the true meaning of Christmas is in the giving, rather than the receiving of nifes.

Tim and Virginia Raines say they have truly discovered that meaning and now, for the fourth year in a row, they are sharing it with those in Sanford who might not have much at this season so often measured in terms of gifts.

Tim Raines, an outfielder with the Chicago White Sox, and his wife Virginia are both natives of Sanford. In the off-season they spend their time here with family and friends.

One Christmas about four or five years ago. Virginia said, they were visiting his mother and children from the area were coming in and asking Tim to buy them toys.

"Later on we talked about it and said 'why not?"," she said. "We decided we would do it." Their first attempt paired them with a radio station that helped distribute the toys, but which took the leftovers to Orlando. The Raineses wanted the gifts to stay in Sanford.

The next year, they decided to oversee the project themselves and invited residents from public housing to Holy Cross Episcopal Church to pick up their gifts.

Last year, students who are on free or reduced price lunches were invited to Hamilton Elementary School to select presents.

This year, they offered the same opportunity at their elementary alma mater, Goldsboro.

"We were very pleased to have the Tim Raines Holiday Partyhere," principal Ron Nathan said.

The line of youngsters and their parents who had arrived at the school stretched from one end of the campus to the other, winding down hallways into the cafeteria which had been transformed into a

Man freed after appeal

OCALA - A Virginia man who spent four years in prison since he was arrested and later convicted for his wife's murder was freed as a judge carried out an appeal court's order that he be acquitted.

Thomas Smolka walked out of the Marion County courthouse Wednesday after a brief hearing before 5th Circuit Judge Jack Singbush. Smolka had been sentenced in March 1993 to life imprisonment for killing his wife, Betty Anne.

In August, the 5th District Court of Appeal in Daytona Beach reversed Smolka's first-degree conviction and ordered his acquittal, ruling there was insufficient evidence to convict him. Smolka's three children now live with Betty Anne Smolka's parents, Willis and Betty Stephenson of Virginia Beach. None were present at Wednesday's hearing. Stephenson has filed a $10 million wrongful death lawsuit against his son-in-law.

AAA Auto Club South, based in Tampa, is extending its "traffic trap" designation for the tiny North Florida towns of Waldo, Lawtey and Hampton. Last summer, the towns were branded the nation's only speed traps by AAA.

"They're giving out tickets as fast as Santa Claus gives Christmas presents," AAA Auto Club South Vice President Kevin Bakewell said Wednesday.

In the past three months since the designation was given, 15 officers in the towns have written 3,240 speeding citations worth an estimated $162,000, Bakewell said.

The club — which represents 1.5 million members in 47 Florida counties, Georgia and most of Tennessee - said police enforced traffic laws in the communities to generate money, not make roads safer.

STUART - A wealthy businessman proposed giving a donation to a charity to avoid jail for driving drunk - and prosecutors are steamed.

"That would do the society we live in a lot more good than putting a man in jail and having to house and feed him for a few days," attorney Richard Kibbey said.

Prosecutors accused McEssy, who is trying to avoid jail for his second drunken-driving conviction, of wanting to buy his "It sends the wrong message (that) if you have enough

Lopsided justice

Our court system recently handed down a sentence for a puppy killer that is much stiffer than some handed down to those who have killed humans. An Associated Press report from Miami Wednesday reports that a man has been sentenced to 91/2 years in prison for killing a 2-month old puppy.

For those who are not familiar with the story, a circuit court judge, in handing down the sentence, said Alian Laboy "showed total disregard for life" when he smashed the puppy on a sidewalk in August of 1994, after complaining the puppy's barking woke him

This is not to say he should have been let off. This is not to say that he shouldn't have been given a prison sentence. What we are saying however, is that our laws are often lopsided in punishement meted to criminals.

This is proven time and time again when people who have been found guilty of killing another person, child or adult, ends up walking free in just a matter of a few years.

We aren't blaming the circuit judge for this decision. We are however, blaming the laws which establish the sentencing guidelines he is allowed to use.

Now however, we have too many laws enacted which seem to offer more protection to the criminals than the victims. Every time someone complains about his or her rights being taken away, up comes some new law which not only protects that person, but carries along tens of thousands of other people who may find themselves in the same dive hervior trood best man

An example of this may be found in the media almost once a week. People who have admitted guilt to a crime, or may have been proven guilty in a court of law, use some loophole and their cases are thrown out. They are able to get away with virtual murder, and continue to be allowed to roam free in our society.

We have a new year coming up. It will have its share of elections, and the Legislature will once again meet to create new laws.

Let's keep the rights of victims, human beings, in mind when choosing a candidate to support, or writing to legislators urging support of various items.

If we continue to exercise severe punishment to some while allowing the worst of our criminals to go free, we can't help but see a continuing deterioration of our lifestyles in the years ahead. As we enter into 1996, let's make it a goal to do whatever we can to work on better victim rights and less criminal rights. We can think of few projects to undertake for this new year which would better serve the honest public.

Good news from budget crunchers brought attention to some new data that should shake the credibility of the central economic argument of our time, espoused by politicians as diverse as Bill Clinton and Pat Buchanan. Not a moment too soon. The idea that in recent years Americans have made little economic progress or have actually lost ground -- that the rich got richer while the poor got poorer - is wrong and Take, for example, the Bureau of Labor Statistics data showing that price-adjusted median weekly earnings of all full-time workers from 1979 to 1994 has decreased by 6 percent. It sounds bad.

But most economists have long acknowledged that the Consumer Price Index has been overstated in recent years. That is, actual inflation has been somewhat lower than the published rate. Now, with balanced-budget negotiations at center stage, that idea is suddenly very much in play.

An interim report from the Advisory Com-mission to Study the Consumer Price Index says that the CPI as now constructed is likely to overstate future inflation by 1 percent per year. (The study panel, appointed by the Senate Fi-

The budget battle has a good side. It has nance Committee, is known as the "Boskin Commission," after former Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors Michael Boskin.)

A Boskin-revised CPI would lower the deficit by $85 billion in 2002. Most of the additional moneys would come from somewhat lower cost-of-living ad-justments (COLAs) paid out by the Feds iparticularly in Social Security) and from more taxes by tax-payers moved into higher federal tax brackets tas their real incomes were recalculated upward).

Accepting such a readjustment and picking up some loose change would

The budget good side. Republicans and Democrats to reach budget accord. The bad news is that the functional equivalent of even a minor Social Security cut and a tax hike is fraught with political danger unless all sides agree to back it simultaneously.

Economics columnist Jonathan Marshall of The San Francisco Chronicle has used the 1.5 percent Boskin assumption in conjunction with data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics (which had already been adjusted for previous miscalculations in housing costs). Marshall finds that the tale of recent economic gloom is inac-curate. Remember that 6 percent decrease from 1979 to 1994? When the data is corrected for the 1.5 percent overstatement of inflation there is an increase of 18 percent, not a 6 percent decrease! Among other things, that works out to "the poor getting richer," although probably at a slower rate than the rich are getting richer.

That's a swing of 24 percent, which is a big swing indeed, particularly since it takes into consideration a deep recession in the early 1960s and a mild one in the early 1990s.

Do freshmen or Newt run House?

"The great question in Washington," said a top side to President Clinton, "is does Newt Gingrich control the freshmen or do the Republican freshmen control Gingrich?"

"That is a great question," responded one freshman, Rep. John Shadegg, R-Ariz, "And the answer is... yes. On some issues, we run him and on some issues, he runs us."

What the White House really wants to know, of course, is whether Speaker Gingrich can convince the arch-conservative freshman class to accept a budget deal — assuming Gingrich to accept a budget deal -- assuming Gingrich and President Clinton reach one. If he can't, it could sink a budget compromise or force Gingrich to rely on Democratic votes to pass it. fracturing GOP unity and damaging his

But Gingrich's spokesman, Tony Blankley, says that Gingrich simply won't cut a deal that he doesn't think will enjoy near-unanimous support of the 236-member House GOP conference, the 73 freshmen included.

Just in case, though, the freshmen are laying down a challenge to the GOP leadership, as they often do. Recently, about 20 members, most of them freshmen, declared that they did not intend to vote for any budget deal that increases spending beyond the $12 trillion over seven years called for in the GOP budget

Particularly, they said, they want the $135 billion in extra revenue that the Congressional Budget Office expects to come in over the next

Budget Office expects to come in over the next seven years to be used solely for deficit reduction and not for "spending."

Conceivably, this could be a deal-breaker. Clinton wants that $135 billion to go for education and environmental programs. AmeriCorps and Medicaid. The freshmen say that he ought to fund those programs mainly by cutting others, though they show some slight give on the terms of tax cuts.

So, how much bargaining room does Gingrich have? Blankley says that the freshman no-spending declaration was "not an absolute position." And freshmen like Reps. Mark Souder, R-Ind., and Lindsey Graham. R-S.C., agree that so far they have declared only an "intent" to vote against a deal that contains new spending.

"If it looks like things are getting out of hand, though, we could easily change that to a pledge," says Graham.

"Pledge" is a polite word for "threat," which fits with the complex relationship between Gingrich and the freshmen.

The freshmen lately have formed so-called

The freshmen lately have formed so-called "tiger teams" to talk to journalists about themselves, and in one such session. Shadegg. Graham and Souder repeatedly used the term "they" to describe the House leadership -- the way restive workers might refer to man-

Reid Souder, "They pull us into a room before almost every vote and yell at us.... They say, 'This is a test of our ability to govern' or 'This is a gut check' or 'We've got to stick together on this' or 'I got you here and you hired me as your coach to get you through, but if you want to change coaches, go ahead."

According to Shadegg, 'The leadership has one mantra: Pass something.' It's deemed a failure not to pass something. We want to pass something close to what we came here to pass. We are necessarily adverse to one another."

Thethree Just in case, though, the freshmen are laying down a challenge to the GOP leadership, as they often do. freshmen agreed that every time Gingrich and Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, have delivered an impassioned a peech to the freshmen on the need to stay together, the leaders have prevailed -- as when freshmen threat-ened to oppose the balanced budget con-stitutional amendment because it did not require a three-fifths vote of Congress to raise taxes and during deliberations over a debt ceiling extension and continuing resolutions just before Thankagiving.

Said Graham, "I am impressed with Newt Gingrich. He has the ability to make you question yourself. But the longer we are here, the harder it is." Shadegg added. "Each time he makes the speech, that's one less time it's going to work."

The freehean clearly assuit in their role as

The freshmen clearly exult in their role as burrs under the saddle of the leadership. Shadegg said that during the three-fifths fight, he charged that Armey "had a personal credibility problem." Ever since, Shadegg said, "Armey has been the advocate of the freshman class. Newt is more working with the moderates."

The freshmen say their record of success is long. They imposed term limits on the speaker and committee chairmen. They forced the leadership to address gift reform. They defeated a defense appropriations conference report and forced the leadership to give rebel freshman Rep. Mark Neumann. R-Wis., a spot on the Budget Committee when he was fired from Appropriations.

from Appropriations.

One widespread theory about the freshman-leadership relationship is that Gingrich encourages the first-termers' radicalism as a club to get his way in negatiations with the Senate and the White House.

Diary glimpses JFK the journalist

WASHINGTON -- The president who's become an icon of American liberalism might become an icon of American liberalism might have felt right at home in House Speaker Newt Gingrich's Republican Revolution.

A recently published diary written in 1945 by John F. Kennedy suggests the future president was far more conservative -- at least by today's standards -- than many of his current admirers choose to believe. From his criticisms of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to his views on the formative stages of the United Nations, the young Kennedy seems a far cry from the raving liberal that his detractors have portrayed him to be. The diary covers two months, that Kennedy spent touring post-war respondent for whose lawyer argues that it's being published in violation of copyright laws. The rights to the diary were purchased by Regnery Publishing from Dierdre Henderson, who says Kennedy gave her the diary while she was working as a research assistant in his senate office in 1959-60. Kennedy's lawyer says any profits from the book should go directly to the JFK Library Foundation.

from the book should go directly to the JFK Library Foundation.

The diary describes vividly the devastation he saw in post-war Europe, and chronicles his encounters with high officials and aristocrats in England, Ireland and Germany. At the time, Kennedy was a 28-year-old veteran of the war, whose family connections helped him gain access to a world of decision-makers and diplomacy usually the province of men twice his age. During much of his European travels, Kennedy was in the company of Navy Secretary James Forrestal, who was a close family friend and confident.

Although most Kennedy biographers tend to glase over his brief forsy into journalism, the diary makes clear that the young Kennedy was already thinking hard about America's future in the post-war world.

The most notable entries are not about Europe but about the domestic situation in America. His sharpest criticism, for example, was reserved for the most popular Democratic president this century. Franklin D. Roosevelt, It's a critique that could just as easily have come from the mouths of today's OOP revolutionaries:

"Mrs. Recesselt has contributed density to

"Mr. Roosevelt has contributed greatly to the end of Capitalism in our own country, although he would probably argue the point at some length," Kennedy wrote in one notation. "He has done this, not through the laws which he sponsored or were passed during his presidency, but rather through the emphasis he put on rights rather than responsibilities."

responsibilities."

At the same time, he was quite complimentary of the military hero he would later succeed as president. Of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Kennedy wrote, "He never lost that humble way and therefore easily won the hearts of those with whom he worked."

The diary begins with Kennedy's take on the United Nations conference in San Prancisco, which the young reporter viewed.

Francisco, which the young reporter viewed with as much suspicion as many of today's with as much suspicion as many of today's conservatives.

"The conference at San Francisco suffered from inadequate preparation and lack of fundamental agreement among the Big Three; from an unfortunate press which praised it beyond all limit at its commencement, which paid the way for subsequent distillusionment both in England and in this country (United States)." Kennedy wrote. "The finished Charter is a product of these weaknesses."

Students at Lakeview Middle School recently railled to help the family of Artie Daniels make it through the holidays. After Daniels passed away on Dec. 2, leaving four children ranging in age from 17 months to 10 years, the children are being cared for by their grandmother and an aunt. Their first Christmas without their mother will be a difficult one. Carrie Baker's 5th prade class at Lakeview Middle School recently purchased a cornucopia of gifts for the Daniels children and brought them to the family. The youngeters brought cheer and smiles to a sullen, undecorated house. As a final gift, the stu-dents decorated the outside of the Daniels home with bright lights and Christmas cheer.

Brevard counties. Presently 25.728 parents are listed as delinquent.

A spokesman with the state Department of Revenue in Tallahassee said the numbers included everyone who may be as little as one month behind in their child support payments, to persons who may never have paid a cent.

With specific Seminole County figures not broken out, it is also not known how many residents are due rebates on auto impact fees, and how many may have the fees withheld.

The $295 fee, levied on Floridians who registered vehicles brought in from other states, was declared unconstitutional by the Florida Supreme Court in September 1994. The court ordered the impact fees to be refunded, and began mailing checks last month to qualified persons.

The legislature has now authorized the Department of Revenue, through the State Comptroller's office, to deduct past-due child support obliga-tions from the impact fee refunds.

On-again, off-again budget talks

WASHINGTON - The on-again, off-again budget talks between the Clinton administration and Republican lawmakers were on again today as 260,000 furloughed federal workers stayed off the job for a sixth day.

After the White House angrily canceled a top-level negotiating meeting Wednesday, presidential chief of staff Leon Panetta, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio, scheduled planned a breakfast meeting at the Capitol today.

They hoped to arrange for President Clinton, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich to meet face-to-face later in the day.

Such a meeting didn't happen Wednesday as hoped. "Obviously some problems have developed" a somber Panetta said after he met with Gingrich and failed to find common ground.

House Republicans were balking at reopening nine partially shut-down Cabinet agencies while discussions proceeded on reaching a seven-year balanced-budget agreement by New Year's Day.

Telecommunications bill close to law

WASHINGTON - A wide-ranging bill that would allow cable TV and local and long-distance companies to get into each others' businesses, lift price regulations on millions of cable customers and restrict smut on television and computers is a crucial step closer to becoming law.

The White House and key congressional negotiators said they reached agreement Wednesday on contentious media ownership provisions, the last big hurdle to reconciling separate telecommunications bills passed by each chamber this

The bill, which would be the most dramatic overhaul of U.S. communications law in 60 years, is supported by broadcasters and cable and local Bell telephone companies, and opposed by consumer groups. It was unclear whether the bill will satisfy long-distance companies, who have waged a multibillion-dollar lobbying campaign against provisions allowing the Bells to provide long-distance.

Overhauling welfare

WASHINGTON — A massive overhaul of the nation's welfare system, designed to get more people to work and give states more control, is moving toward final votes in the House and Senate.

The GOP-led House, which made welfare reform a part of its "Contract with America," was preparing to take action today, The compromise bill faces a tougher path in the Senate where critics worry it cuts spending too much - something that also could prompt a Clinton veto. The aweeping legislation would replace the 60-year-old federal Aid to Families with Dependent Children program with block grants to states; trim food stamp benefits; and curb aid to immigrants, disabled children, drug addicts and alcoholics. It also would include an experimental change in the federal school lunch program instead of turning it totally into a state-run program financed with federal block grants.

The bill would save an estimated $58 billion over seven years, House Ways and Means Chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas, said Wednesday after the blended version of the House and Senate bills emerged from a conference committee.

Mission: Police the peace

MRKONJIC GRAD, Bosnia-Hersegovia — Many of the foreign soldiers here aren't new to Bosnia. But their mission as NATO troops is fresh - police the peace instead of often watching. hands tied, as people are slaughtered.

Here and elsewhere, some of the soldiers who will be serving under NATO are former U.N. peacekeepers. They switched helmets Wednesday — from the U.N.'s baby blue to NATO's green and brown — as the U.N. peacekeeping mission wound down and NATO's began.

They soon embarked on no-nonsense actions meant to show that they won't be pushed around, as U.N. peacekeepers frequently were.

"This is more like it. This is what we're used to," said Staff Sgt. Ken Saxon as he ordered a huge buildozer to plow over a Bosnian Croat barrier at the Black Dog checkpoint near this porthern Bosnian town.

But unlike the lightly armed U.N. peacekeepers, NATO soldiers now setting up in Bosnia have a clear mandate, heavy weapons and a peace plan aigned by all sides.

Patriots a win in CFC By GARY COATOAM Herald Staff Writer

OVIEDO - Deyon Williams hit a three-point field goal as time expired Wednesday to give Lake Brantley a 60-57 win over Edgewater in the first round of the Oviedo Rotary sponsored 1995 Central Florida Classic at the Oviedo High School Gymnasium.

"I had an open shot, so I took it," Williams said. "As soon as I released the shot. I knew I would make it."

Brian Whitman came up with a steal for Lake Brantley with four seconds left in the game and called timeout. The Patriots then advanced the ball into the front court with three seconds remaining and called two more timeouts to set up for the final shot.

However, even Lake Brantley coach Steve Jucker was surprised with the way the game ended.

"We were trying to get the ball to Tim Pollock in the corner for the last shot." Jucker said. "Kyle Becker had already fouled out of the game, and I thought we were going to play overtime."

In the other first round game played Wednesday evening, West Orange dominated the middle two quarters, outscoring Rockledge 37-22, as the Warriors (6-4) dumped the Raiders (5-3) 60-48.

Edgewater took an early 13-8 lead, but Lake Brantley fought back for a 17-17 tic at the end of the first quarter.

The Eagles then pulled out to a 25-17 lead, but the Patriots set the tone for the game by rallying once again. Two Jimmy Adamczyk three-pointers, another by Whitman and a Becker layup cut the Edgewater lead to 30-28 at halftime.

A James Gilchrist layup tied the score 30-30 to start the second half. and Williams' first three-pointer of the game gave Lake Brantley a 31-33 lead with 6:45 left in the third quarter. The Eagles took a brief 35-33 lead, but the Patriots had a 42-39 lead at the end of the period.

Edgewater took a 47-42 lead to start the fourth quarter, but Lake Brantley closed the margin to 47-45 on a three-point play by Williams. The Eagles expanded the lead to 55-47, but the Patriots rallied once □See Basketball, Page 2B three-point play by Gilchrist, along with field goals by Adamcsyk and Pollock, pulled Lake Brantley within 55-54 with 41 seconds remaining. Edgewater then took a 57-54 lead, but it was not enough to stop surging Lake Brantley. Two Gilchrist free throws and another by Williams knotted the score at 57-57 with just 11 seconds remaining to set up the dramatic finish. "We were a little lethargic at times," Jucker said. "When you lose four games in a row like we had coming into this game, its hard for our players to get enthusiastic about playing. We needed this win."

Adamcsyk hit six of the Patriots' 10 three-point field goals and led Lake Brantley, now 6-5 on the season, with a game-high 22 points. Also in double figures for the winners were Williams with 12 points and Gilchrist with 11 points. Pollock chipped in with nine points.

The Eagles, which fell to 4-6 on the season, were led by 6-foot-11 University of Florida signee Obiora Nnaji and Blair Salmons, who hit four threepointers, with 14 points each.
Tyrone Washington was also in double figures with 10 points.
