The hijackers set a deadline of 5:30 a.m. EST Wednesday for Pakistan to free 92 political prisoners. Gen. M. Rahim Khan, secretary-general of Pakistan's Defense Ministry announced in Islamabad.

Pakistan again offered to release 48 of the prisoners on the hijackers' list, Khan said. Pakistan backed off on its insistence that the hijackers free the hostage passengers before the political prisoners are released.

Khan said Pakistan's position now is that "it can be a simultaneous release" of prisoners and hostages. The hijackers, negotiating through Syrian intermediaries in Damascus, threatened "drastic action" unless their demands were met.

Khan said the hijackers also issued a fresh demand - for the release of 55 prisoners. But he said Pakistani officials did not know if they were among the 92

'Test Tube' Baby Born

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) - Australia's second test-tube baby was born three and a half weeks prematurely today at a private Melbourne hospital. The baby girl, named Victoria, was born by Caesarian section and tests have shown both mother and child are doing well.

The child was conceived by a method developed for women with blocked fallopian tubes. It consists of fertilizing an egg from a woman's ovary in a laboratory with the husband's sperm.

After a gestation period of three to six days, the fertilized egg is then re-implanted in the mother's uterus where it develops until birth.

FIRE BURNS ON ISLAND Seminole County firefighters had to abandon their trucks and take to boats Monday afternoon to fight a fire which destroyed nearly half of the 70-acre Grassy Point Island in

The island's only inhabitants, a pair of middle-aged squatters, were evacuated as the blaze swept dangerously close to their campsite.

The fire broke out about 2 p.m., sending up a large column of thick black smoke as flames swept through 30-40 acres of "mainly sawgrass and a few trees," according to Mike Roush, district commander with the Seminole County Fire Department. The island is located east of the marina and is bounded by Woodruff Creek, the St. John's River and Lake Monroe. The sheriff's department and the state Game and Freshwater Fish Commission provided boat transportation to been going back and forth with Orange County for several days firefighters equipped with portable pumps, Roush said.

A New Sense Of Proportion

Although the Middle East has been pushed off page one by other events - the change of administration in Washington, the hostages' return, Poland — it remains nevertheless a bubbling stewpot of troubles that defies neglect.

The Camp David momentum for peace between Egypt and Israel has been stalled during the months of transition in Washington and will be held up further by the uncertainties attending Israel's general elections on June 30. Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and President Anwar el Sadat of Egypt, who met nine times between November, 1977, and January, 1980, have not seen each other for more than a year. The normalization of trade and travel between Egypt and Israel has been disappointing, consisting mostly of Israeli tourists to the pyramids.

Otherwise, while Israeli-Egyptian relations remain on an uneasy hold, there is no lessening of the conflicts and uncertainties that make the Middle East the most dangerous flashpoint for World War III. The war between Iraq and Iran drags on. Libya has invaded and apparently annexed neighboring Chad. And the Soviet Union consolidates its grip on Afghanistan and prods relentlessly to exploit any opening toward the highly vulnerable Persian Gulf oilfields.

Meanwhile a state of war continues between the Palestinian Liberation Organization and Israel. And even as the PLO continues to enjoy the powerful support of Saudi Arabia, which recently renewed its call for "jihad" against Israel, President Sadat warns that that terroristic Arab group has lost its independence to Syria and the

Fortunately, a new sense of proportion is being brought to bear on this ancient maelstrom. The Reagan administration is entering the stage with -a new U.S. perspective — a pragmatic realization that the Arab-Israeli dispute is not the main ring, not the chief source of instability in the Middle East. Washington's priority concern now is how to safeguard the Western World's oil supply in the Persian Gulf and defend it against increasing Soviet influence. In consequence, Israel as the strongest, most dependable U.S. ally, has been promoted from pawn on the Middle East chess board to the more important role of knight. This is to say the Israelis' are now seen to man a strong and strategic Free World outpost against the Soviet Union and must not be weakened in any illusary peace bid with the Arabs. Indeed, Washington's new sense of proportion appears to be a concept whose time has come. Prime minister Margaret Thatcher's declaration during her U.S. visit that the NATO allies should extend their defensive boundaries to embrace the Persian Gulf is aimed precisely at protecting Europe's energy source and not toward resolving the Arab-Israeli conflict. And even though other NATO members, oddly detached from the Persian Gulf peril, are unlikely in the near future to do more than pay lip service toward extending their roles, Prime Minister Thatcher has made a significant beginning toward a time when Western Europe must reinforce the U.S. in the Middle East with ground and sea forces. When the State Department announced recently that Secretary Alexander Haig will visit Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia in early April, it was at pains to underline the implementation of this country's new priorities. His mission, the object of an even more devastating proposed announcement made clear, is to restore con- cut of almost $1.8 million during the next five fidence in American policy, which has been years. feared for its incoherence, and to demonstrate, in the department's words, "a more robust attitude" JACK ANDERSON toward the Soviet Union.

importance of government efforts to promote energy conservation and to develop alternative fuel sources, President Reagan wants to drastically reduce or totally eliminate many of those federal programs.

Reagan's energy proposals are buried in the detailed package of budget cuts he unveiled in mid-February, but they have been virtually ignored amid the clamor about planned reductions affecting controversial, high-visibility programs.

The president's priorities for program curtailment or termination would adversely affect work now underway on almost every form of advanced energy technology, including nuclear, solar, biomass, geothermal In calling for additional cuts in federal conservation efforts, the White House apparently oblivious to the budgetary pressures faced by middle-and low-income families — argues that spiraling prices for oil and other fuels will induce conservation without the need for government in-

In many instances, the justification offered by Reagan for his decisions is replete with specious reasoning, contradictory explanations and discredited theories.

In proposing a cut of more than 27 percent during the next five years in capital construction costs for subways and other urban mass transit systems, for example, Reagan says "the central focus of the federal transit assistance program in the future will be on the maintenance and improvement of existing, proven transit systems."

But the president also calls for abolition of all government spending for mass transit operations, thus depriving energy-efficient systems such as New York City's subways which clearly meet his test of being "an essential part of a large urban transportation - of needed funds.

Also scheduled for elimination is the Cooperative Automotive Research Program, a joint government-industry effort to design safe, fuel-efficient passenger cars for the

In proposing withdrawal of all federal aid for research and development of gasohol as a fuel for future cars, Reagan calls for "termination of feasibility studies, cooperative agreements and loan guarantees for alcohol

Advanced nuclear power development is likely to be thwarted by a reduction of $40 million during the next five years in the Energy Department's general science programs in life sciences, nuclear medicine, high-energy physics and nuclear physics. Substance Abuse Blamed For Half Of All Crime

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) - As much as 40 percent of the reported crime in the United States can be linked to drug and alcohol abuse, says a noted expert on sub-

Dr. Winton H. Beaven, vice-president for education at the Kettering Medical Center in Ohio, told educators Monday the soaring U.S. crime rate is directly linked to society's failure to combat excessive drinking and

Armed with FBI statistics, Beaven told educators and mental health workers that almost half the violent crimes such as murder, rape, arson and aggravated assault are committed by persons under the influence

Moreover, law enforcement officials in south Florida, southern California and Hawaii are spending 20 percent to 30 percent of their resources in a losing battle against drug traffickers - and burglary and robbery rates are increasing almost faster than the rest of the crime index combined.

Strike, Shuttle Both 'Go

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) - The contract dispute at Kennedy Space Center between Boeing Services International and 1,000 striking machinists is no closer to being resolved than it was three weeks ago. Mediator Richard Deems called representatives of BSI and the International Association of Machinists in for talks Monday, but recessed them after three hours when no significant progress was made.

The two sides are hung up over the issue of cost of living raises. The company wants to cap the COLA at 7 percent, the union want an uncapped adjustment. Officials insist the strike will have no impact on the maiden launch of the space shuttle, now set for the week of April 7, because most of the 1,000 strikers are plumbers, electricians, welders and other craftsmen who are not involved directly with the launch.

Videotaped Testimony OK

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) - A House subcommittee has approved a measure that would allow disabled crime victims and witnesses to testify by videotape in certain criminal trials.

The measure (PCB 2), approved 6-0 Monday, now goes to the full House Criminal Justice Committee. Proponents said the bill is intended to spare disabled persons, including those infirm from age, from the trauma of having to tesitfy in a crowded courtroom against criminals who victimized them. The videotaped testimony initially would have been limited to disabled crime victims but was expanded by the subcommittee to include witnesses as well. whether called by the defense or the prosecution. The bill authorizes either side in a felony criminal trial to petition the judge to allow videotaped testimony and gives judges the power to authorize it.

Pete Millett, state deputy education commissioner praised Education Secretary Terrel Bell Monday for showing a new "spirit of cooperation."

Millett is chairman of the bi-racial Monitoring Committee, a panel created by state Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington to oversee implementation of the higher education desegregation plan adopted by the Cabinet in 1977-78. "I'm pleased to see the secretary of education has seen the error of the intent of the letter that was sent to Florida and that we are returning to a spirit of cooperation to achieve our goals and their goals," Bell, in a major speech last week in Washington, back-tracked from the hard line taken by the Carter administration to implementation of a court order to fully integrate state higher education systems. The Department of Education may have moved too quickly against Florida and seven other Southern or Border states, he said.

"I'm trying to move back to the discussion table."

Officials Testing Virus WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) - Health officials

don't expect to know until the end of the week at the soonest, what type virus caused the heart inflamation that killed a 2-year-old Lakeland boy last month. Dr. William Hill, director of the Polk County Health Department, said Monday a viral culture sent to a state laboratory in Tampa last week did not provide enough of the suspected virus to enable biologists to complete testing. He said another culture was geing grown for testing.

The virus was found in the heart tissue of Joseph Spring who died of myocarditis, a heart inflamation that causes heart failure.

The child was one of two who died of myocarditis within a three-day period in Lakeland. Both were related and had been cared for by the same babysitter. The 17-year-old babysitter since has become ill with a viral infection, as have several other children she cared for, all of whom are related.

Joswick said formal announcements of the move in operations from Sunnyvale to Lake Mary were not made earlier although the plans have been on-going since December, because no new jobs are to be created with the move.

The operations at the Lake Mary plant which will be moved to the I-4 park are essentially the industrial section of the corporation, Joswick said. Supplies manufactured at Lake Mary are sold to major corporations like Martin-Marietta and Ford Motor Co.

"What we now have we will begin to phase down," he said, adding the work can be done at other NCR plants. He said technicians and engineers at the Lake Mary plant will have to be retained for other work.
