'Incompetent for trial' An optimistic Kaplan talks about verdict

SANFORD -"In the long run, I'm still optimistic, that hasn't changed," Eric (Rick) Kaplan said Saturday after, being declared incompetent to stand trial.

"I would have preferred to stand trial," Kaplan said, after a sleepless night in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. "I'm not really tired after not sleeping at all, I guess it hasn't hit me yet."

After a six-hour hearing Friday, Judge Alan Dickey ruled Kaplan incompetent to stand trial on murder and burglary charges in the shooting of a policical opponent's wife last year. Kaplan was running against Rep. Bob Starks.

Kaplan sat quietly throughout the testimony of a number of witnesses including two psychiatrists, court employees. Starks and his own mother.

Tribute: educator with foresight

As much as I try to keep up with you old timers I confess from time to time I miss getting the word when old friends and well-known local folks leave the scene.

Just the other day I passed an resided and thought about a lovely neighbor, Maude Ramssy. I did some checking and found Maude had passed away some months ago. She was, I believe, secretary once to Randall Chase, well-known chief executive officer of Chase & Company. You old timers realize that this too. The good Lord didn't make them better than Maude Ramsay.

Recently, the passing of another old timer escaped me until I got a call from Robert Schmidt. He told me about the death of a man whose life touched hundreds, maybe several thousand folks.

He was Eugene S. Douglass. He left us July 22, at the age of 81. Who was Douglass? Well, a lot of newcomers might be surprised. In the late 1940s and 1950s Douglass was principal of the Lyman School. Notice, please, I did not say Lyman High. Back then the Lyman School was grades one through 12. It was located on the site where Milwee Middle School now stands. Can you imagine the Lyman School serving almost all or South Seminole County? Today youngsters in that section of the county attend a dozen or so elementary schools, numerous middle schools and high schools like Lake Mary, Lake Brantley, Lake

Howell and Lyman High. In the late 1950s, because of his talent, he was made director of vocational education for the entire county. Along with principals Andy Bracken of Seminole High in San-ford and Carlton Henley of Lyman High, Douglass started the county's ☐See Stenstrem, Page 2A

Lake Mary: Changes since the workshops

LAKE MARY — The first reading of the Lake Mary 1993-94 budget and adoption of the miliage rate will occupy commissioners Monday night.

Following several work shop examinations of the overall budget requests, Finance Director Randy Knight has prepared the budget in final form.

The miliage proposed in the ordinance is the same as last year. 3.7649. This is a 2.19 percent increase over the rolled-back rate.

If accepted, the millage will not result in any increase in property taxes for an individual homeowner, but will produce additional revenue to the city due to the increase in population and some increases in

One major item which will be considered Monday night is expected to have an effect on the budget. Small said it will need to be approved so it can be officially included in the budget preparation. It deals specifically with a newly established Personnel Classification and Pay Plan.

Derby Park expansion aired

By MOK PFEIFAU Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Looking to the future, Recreation and Parks director, Mike Kirby. wants the city to consider expanding Derby

Located just off Oregon Avenue, north of W. 25th Street, Derby Park was completed just in time for the annual Sanford Soap Box Derby event on July 11.

Paved race areas and sufficient parking were finished just hours before this year's

The work was accomplished with donated paving material and completed by city crews with hardly any expense to the city. Kirby has drafted a wish list of projects he believes would turn the complex into an area that would serve the people, especially youngsters of the area, on a year-round basis rather than just during derby time.

In a list to be presented to the Sanford City Commission on Monday night, Kirby says, "Because of the scope of work and says, "Because of the scope of work and estimated costs for these amenities, we suggest that they be added in phases as indicated, as funds become available."

He continued, "Potential funding could be from a matching Florida Recreation Development Assistance Program (FRDAP) grant and funds raised from our recreation programs."

Considering the work which has already been completed as Phase I, Kirby has recommended two additional phases.

Phase II would consist of drainage, sidewalks, traffic barriers, paved roadways, landscaping, mulched parking, a press box/concession stand, entrance sign, picnic facilities with covered shelters, tables and BBQ grills, two drinking fountains and perimeter fencing and a gate.

industrial and technical education programs. In 1962, he began a drafting program at SHS and electronic classes at Lyman. A few years later auto mechanical and body, air conditioning, masonry, tile setting and other occupational and cooperative programs were started at all the high schools.

Douglass was responsible for obtaining hundreds of thousands of dollars in federal grants for all of these programs in Seminole County. Until Seminole Community College became a reality Douglass was in charge of the county school board's adult education program. He administered the General Educa-tion Development (GED) pro-grams and tests. He enticed local industries to establish courses in electronics, auto repair, sewing, health and even nursing plus other fields of endeavor.

Many of Douglass' ideas and methods were adopted by the Florida Department of Education and dispersed to vocational programs in other counties throughout the state.

The number of tax-paying, employed graduates who acquired skills from the programs Douglass established would total a thousand or more. And, they, along with newcomers to this brea, ought to know to Douglass was and the outsiting contributions by was strumental in starting in county.

One of the instructors Douglass hired in 1962 to start that drafting program at Semi-nole High was Schmidt. He taught vocational pupils through 1984. For 14 of those 24 years Schmidt was chairman of the vocational department at Semi-nole High. He told me:

"I had more respect for Douglass than any other educa-tor I ever knew. His main concern was his students. His desire was to prepare them to get good jobs in the occupational trades as well as further their education in the arts." Schmidt went on to say:

"He personally visited thee young folks when they wer students. And, he visited then after they graduated and were employed. His integrity was never questioned. He never used his position for his own self interest." Schmidt concluded:

"His criticism was always fair. And, any success I have enjoyed was due to his help. It was an honor for me to have known him and worked under his leadership. And, there are many others who feel the same way."

As we so often do, we wait until a unique person has gone before we salute them as we do this Sunday morning to E.S. Douglass.

Ruling -

Kaplan has been in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility since April 29 when his $100,000 bond was revoked. His bond has been raised twice and is currently $300,000.

Following six hours of testimony, Dickey found that Kaplan was incompetent because he could not get along with his attorney in preparing adequately for his defense. A few months ago, defense attorney James Russ asked to withdraw as Kaplan's attorney. Dickey said he would not rule on the motion until Kaplan's competency was determined. Kaplan filed a complaint with the Florida Bar Association against Russ. Kaplan claims Russ threatened to physically harm him, tried to get him to commit perjury and was intoxicated during some of their meetings. The case is still under investigation.

A major portion of the testimony during the compeniency hearing focused on the lawyer-client relationship. The only time Russ spoke to Kaplan during Friday's hearing was to ask him if he would like his handcuffs removed. For the remainder of the hearing, when not questioning witnesses, Russ sat at the far end of the defense table separated from Kaplan by an assistant.

Kaplan, who did not speak during Friday's hearing, said he thinks one of the reasons his lawyer challenged his (Kaplan's) competency was to lessen the credibility of the charges before the Bar.

Dickey said the court will ask Danzinger's opinion on the appropriate treatment. In making his ruling. Dickey said after reviewing testimony and even letters Kaplan submitted to the court that Kaplan's behavior was, "very bizarre, indeed."

Danzinger testified Kaplan believed he was arrested because right-wing fundamentalists op-posed his liberal views and feared he would defeat his conservative GOP opponent. Kaplan maintains he is innocent of the charges. Before his appointment by the court. Danzinger was hired by Russ to evaluate Kapian. Kapian was examined by a number of psychiatrists for a possible insently plea in the

A second psychiatrist, Dr. Edward Herrera, said he thought Kaplan was competent to stand trial under the legal criteria. although there was a possibility of mental illness.

Assistant State Attorney Tom Hastings said Kaplan will be tried after he is treated and declared competent.

Kaplan will remain in jail until the course of treatment is determined. Should the court find

Building blocks of worthwhile. community

Like the inconspicuous single threads of a beautiful tapestry, the Herald recognizes that many small actions go into building a worthwhile community.

Some events of note this past week include:

And a city's image is often tied to the quality of its housekeeping; shabby streets and buildings speak of a town down on its luck. With the current repaving of Park Avenue, Public Works Director Jerry Herman isn't letting that happen in downtown isn't letting that happen in downtown Sanford. Marked as a scenic route to the lakefront, visitors and residents can glide down the newly surfaced Park Avenue and never spill a drop.

No place is perfect

I am an eighth grade student at Sanford Middle School. I have attended Sanford Middle since I was in sixth grade. I have also attended Goldsboro Elementary and Idyliwilde Elementary. I have read all the articles that the Sanford Herald has put out about the four families taking their kids out of Sanford Middle and putting them in Greenwood Lakes Middle. They said the reason they did it was because the teachers don't give enough attention to students who behave, but, to the students who misbehave. What I don't understand is that the families probably didn't check on the behavior of their students. I had at least one class last year with two of the undense and one of them played the whole tase. So the feacher had to spend more time with that child. Bo if the families want to take their kids out of Sanford Middle School then do it, but, don't talk had about it. Sanford Middle is a good school. The teachers are good, crime is not very bad, and most students are good. I admit there are some problem students, but, hey, no place is "perfect." Lakes Middle. How we place value on human life

Our beloved America's image is continually tarnished by the ever increasing senseless, random murders committed daily across the land. Two recent high profile murders make us all cognizant of what little value may be placed upon one's life by a chance encounter.

The murder of the German tourist in Miami taking a belated honeymoon with his pregnant wife and the murder of Michael Jordan's father.

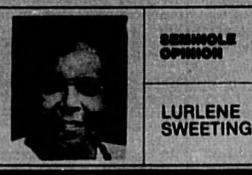

wife and the murder of Michael Jordan's father have a common thread. The perpetrators certainly didn't know the victims but targeted them as prospects to rob and take what they wanted. Any concern for or recognition of the victims' humanity and right to life evidently was not important.

Allegedly young people in their late teens or early twenties are responsible for both of these heinous crimes. Apparently, many young people may be walking volcanos with a great deal of smoldering anger and hostility against society or have a detachment of feelings for others that make these crimes possible.

Most of us have been trained from infancy to hold human life priceless. We can't bear to think of annihilating any of God's creatures much less a human being. When driving we watch for ducks, possums, birds or other creatures cross-ing the highway to avoid hitting them. Only God is able to create life and we have no right to destroy anything that lives. One of the Ten Commandments is very explicit on the subject, "Thou shalt not kill."

As a civilized society something is missing developmentally if young people are growing up to be random killers. A civilized society requires an educated population that lives within the parameters dictated by basic human valuing.

There have been sufficient studies of the population of prisons: county, state and federal to identify the fact that a majority of persons incurcerated are individuals, who have not completed school proposes out of school has completed school. Dropping out of school has become analogous to dropping out of society. Dropping out of society means that one does not share societal values. Many dropouts may have no real plans or hope for their future and sink into the pit of crime.

Our continuing existence as a civilized society depends upon our "saving the children." We must make education available to all children from pre-elementary school until some skill is acquired by which one might support oneself.

No child is born educated and equipped to take his or her place in organized society. Children have to be trained from birth to adhere to the values espoused by their culture. This training should take place in a systematic fashion in order that respect and valuing of others is automatically a part of each individual's reper-

Dropout prevention is the job of adults whether they are parents, teachers or friends of children. Dropout prevention should span an individual's life from birth to death. We cannot afford to have vast numbers of our citizens dropping out of school and society. If we hold fast to the belief that very, very, very few people can't learn then we will set as our prime goal "the education" of our citizens. Ages ago when our government was in its infancy, Thomas Jefferson noted that education was necessary. Booker T. Washington also believed that education and some skill was needed by everyone.

September is for beginners

BOSTON — The fog had fallen over the Labor Day coast like a curtain officially bringing down the summer season. We followed it south, bumper to bumper, riding from vacation to home, passing through toligates that marked time off from time on.

By the next morning, the curtain had lifted in one horizontal time onto a new scene and season. The country sounds of gulls and foghorns had been replaced by the urban sounds of cars, radios and alarms.

To someone who will forever regard the first day of school as the real first day of the real new year, the city seemed momentarily in arrived while we were out of town, unpacking energy and expectations. The streets were humming. At the coffee shops freshmen eagerly scoured course catalogs as if they were

In our neighborhood as well, flocks of small children carrying dinosaur lunch boxes were being ushered into schoolyards by crossing guards. They wore their excitement like new shoes. Maybe for some the optimism about second grade was like the adage about second marriages — a triumph of hope over experi-ence — but it was palpable.

I thought of a teacher who once said that if someday school opened without goosebumps, if she didn't feel a rush of energy meeting a new class of children, it would be time to quit. A sign of burnout.

But walking through the youthful city scene this New Year's Day, counting the harbingers of the season, I find myself wondering more about a country of adults that sometimes seems fresh out of fresh starts. I worry about a triumph of wariness over hope.

In Washington, the fall course catalog in full of tough classes. Reinventing Government I has already begun. Soon we will have Economics II: the NAFTA agreement; and Human Sciences III: Overhauling the Medical

This is a core curriculum for the country, but so far Clinton and Gore have been like energetic professors trying to rouse an 8 a.m. college class to life. They are trying to stir up the possibilities of change while students esti: What will it mean for me this semester, will it be on the final exam?

Seven months ago, they danced into office to the sound of "Don't Stop Thinking about Tomorrow." It was a changing of the guard, a generational change, a change for the sake of change. There was a sense of possibilities.

But now the change agents are again faced with the change-anxious. The long-term reality is that even their own haby-boom generation, who, in their mythologised youth, overhauled a culture, upended tradition, has become change-ambivalent. Not just about government, about everything.

Americans seem to have memorized only the most chilling lessons from the recent history classes. We have memorized "Bosnia" from our course obout The End of the Cold War. We have learned "Job Insecurity" from the New Economics. "AIDS" from the course on Human Sexuality. Even the sudden possibility of peace in the Middle East — that other Forty Years War of our lives — is greeted with as much watchfulness as joy.

Maybe the triumph of wariness, the fear of change, is a func-tion of a ge. Schoolchildren stay the same age but the country is growing older. The "youth generation" is middle-aged. Today only about one out of every three of our bouseholds has a households has a child in it. In some communities, in-youthfulness with the eager sense of possibilities. Exhorted by all sorts of gurus to remember the "inner child" who was in pain. we may forget the one who set off to school in high spirits.

Wariness is wisdom when it cuts our losses But not when it stops a new beginning. Not when it tarnishes a fresh start in public or private life. And that is what seems to be

I am reminded this fall morning of a friend who once told me about a love affair she never began. In midlife and middivorce, she could see across the arc of the affair to the (bitter) end. The called it caution. I called it burnout.

Well, September is not for burnouts. September is for beginners.

We can't fully reinvent ourselves anymore than we can truly reinvent government. But on a clear first day, we can walk again in footsteps marked by fresh sneakers and hear a different lesson: Have a new year.

U.S. Embassy in Moscow is tumbling down

WASHINGTON — It would only take Russia 30 minutes to destroy the United States. But it took two hours last year for the U.S. ambassador in Moscow to return a phone call to the White House because U.S. Embassy phone circuits were overloaded.

This is just one example of the dysfunc-tional U.S. Embassy described in a State Department internal report. From a crumbling edifice to unreliable electronics systems.

the embassy is cracking under the strain of an increased post-Cold War

In the event of another coup or a nuclear accident like Chernobyl. the emen bassy may not even be able to contact Washington, the report warns. "Communications at the Russian posts are dangerously inade-quate. The lack of emergency telephone networks at any of the posts could become life threatening in case of civil disasters or unrest. Inadequate circuitry linking Moscow with Washington ... frequently interferes with the conduct of essential business."

Should a Russian-speaking informant try to pick up the phone and contact the embassy with "critical or life-threatening information," they have to plan on imparting the information during normal business hours. Before 8:00 a.m. the embassy doesn't even have a Russian speaking operator to answer

After a newly built embassy building was found to be bugged in the early 1980s, the House voted to salvage the building while the Senate wants to tear it down and start over.

Meanwhile, embassy employees work in what one former ambassador calls a "rabbit warren" while the new building is completely empty.

in response to a dramatically increasing number of visa requests by Russians, the embassy attached a temporary structure to the side of its Moscow building, which now looks like "an oversized, Third-World shanty." The report admonishes: "The physical appearance of the consulate general office is an absolute disgrace. ... It is difficult for the United States to represent itself as a technologically advanced society when its local premises are so scruffy."

The unreleased 60-page State Department report notes that the embessy is an increasingly important link between the United States and the former Soviet Union, but "could become one of the largest U.S. missions operating under essentially Third World conditions." Employees at the em-basey have had to work at desks made of plywood and saw horses and have had to wear surgical masks to protect against construction dust. Diplomatic business has been discussed at meetings held in janitors' closets for a lack of space.

In the U.S. Consulate General's living quarters in St. Petersburg, temperatures often reach 40 degrees in the winter because Former U.S. Ambassador to Moscow, Jack Matlock, told our associate Andrew Conte that when he left the post in 1991, "There was a lack of appropriate space to have normal working conditions especially since we were dealing with mountains of information." Band works hard for some money

By VICKI DoSORMIER Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - The Sanford Middle School band is growing by leaps and bounds.

According to director Jennifer Scott, the need for money to buy uniforms and equipment has never been greater.

The band has kicked off its annual fundraiser to raise moeny to buy the things they need.

The band, she said, now numbers close to 160, nearly double the size it had just a few short years ago. The Saniord Middle School Band, Scott said, has been providing musical entertainment to the city of Sanford since the school was first opened in 1926.

Though interest in the band has waxed and waned during the nearly 70 year history, there is a great interest in it today.

Students in the band have a good time and prepare for the marching band and performance band experiences in high school.

The band usually marches in the Sanford Chrismas parade as well as presenting a Fall and a Spring concert at the school. They also perform at a variety of community functions. This year, Scott said, the school has established a jazz band to further enhance the community concert appeal. Members of the band and several members of the faculty have also put together a small ensemble to perform carols during the winter holiday

According to officials of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, there is a strong likelihood that this year's influenza season will be predominated by the type A Beljing virus, leading to increased severity of influenza cases. > Those at greatest risk of developing the virus are: those 65 years and older. individuals with chronic lung disease, health care workers, and those with heart and kidney allments.

> In 1990 there were more than 129 million estimated cases of the flu nationwide, resulting in 249.6 million bed days at a cost to our nation of more than $11.5 billion. Additionally, the flu can be deadly. In 1990, influenza and its most common complication, pneumonia, resulted in more than

Study: Lifting weights may not make a swimmer better

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Bigger muscles won't necessarily haul a good swimmer through the

Even though many swimmers lift weights, one study indicates that strength training isn't focused enough on swimming's movements to be a worthwhile training aid.

The muscle training that swimmers do just by practicing their swimming is probably more to the point, said researcher David L. Costill of Ball State University in Muncie, Ind.

"The training you do in the water is maximizing your strength in the water," Costill

The report appears in the American College of Sports Medicine's journal, Medicine and Science in Sports and Exercise.

Costill and his colleagues studied 24 intercollegiate male swimmers over the 14 weeks of a competitive swimming season. Half of the swimmers only swam; the others swam and weight trained. The weight trainers worked out three days a week over eight weeks, doing three sets of eight-12 repetitions each. The exercises were supposed to focus on the movements of the front crawl - for instance, chin-ups, lat pulldowns and clbow

All swimmers were tested, at the start of the project and at two- to three-week intervals, to determine whether they were generating more force in the water, getting more distance per stroke and swimming faster.

The researchers found that difference between the swimonly group and the supplementary weight trainers was so small that it was statistically indistin-groups seemed to slow marginally as the wear of the season went on, but that there was no significant difference between them. Similarly, the overall distance per stroke over the course of the study was relatively unchanged.

The weight trainers did grow stronger. By the end of the training period, they were up by 25 to 35 percent in what they could handle out of the water.

Costill and his colleagues note that it's theoretically logical for some of this to carry over to swimming. For instance, they say, resistance training develops muscle and leads to more storage of the fuel that the muscles burn in sprints. Just the same, it didn't help in this study, and the researchers suspect the principle of specificity is the reason. They believe that weight training aimply doesn't make the muscles adapt to the complex and narrowly focused demands of swimming. Costill cautioned that the study looked at people who were already in competitive condition. Those who are in less-thancompetitive shape might yet benefit from weight training, he

And another researcher warns that Costill's research is not the last word. Other forms of weight both groups generated more training might work, said force in the water, but that the Everett A. Harman, a research physiologist at the U.S. Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine in Natick, Mass.

"All this particular study shows is that the combination of a perticular weight workout and a particular swim workout was not effective," Harman said.

For instance, swimming requires a fast hand motion. Harman said: "As you push through the water, your hand goes through it and it doesn't encounter that much re-

Perhaps a resistance program that emphasizes speed of the lift over the amount lifted might have turned out differently, Harman said.

Stage set for peace ceremony

TUNIS. Tunisia — With the barrier of mutual recognition shattered, the PLO approved a landmark plan for Palestinian self-rule in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank that likely will coax other Arabs into making peace with Israel.

The endorsement Friday by the PLO's executive committee set the stage for a ceremony at the White House on Monday. Yasser Arafat may sign the agreement for the PLO or join in the audience that will include at least two former presidents. Jimmy Carter and George Bush, a senior U.S. official said.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres is expected to sign the agreement for Israel.

The propect of Arafat visiting Washington was sure to shock many who just months ago viewed him as a symbol of the PLO's bloody conflict with Israel. In 1968, the U.N. Worst clan fighting in months

MOGADISHU, Somalia - In some of the worst clan fighting in months, five Somalis working for Cable News Network were killed and four wounded in a three-hour battle that ended with gunfire from a U.S. Blackhawk helicopter.

The fighting came amid worsening violence in Mogadishu.

Earlier Friday, U.N. officials said 27 mortar shells or rocket-propelled grenades were fired at U.N. positions and that Pakistani troops were fired on again while clearing roadblocks. There were no U.N. casualties.

The day before, U.S. helicopter gunships blazed away with machine guns and rockets at Somalis who ambushed Pakistani troops and American engineers clearing a road. Supporters of a fugitive warlord claimed at least 125 men, women and children

WASHINGTON - A Justice Department investigation found that federal prison officials unfairly punished an inmate because he spread claims to the news media during the 1988 presidential campaign that he had once sold marijuana to Dan

Inspector General Richard J. Hankinson concluded that inmate Brett C. Kimberlin was placed in special lock-down detention because of his repeated efforts to contact reporters before and after the 1968 election.

Although there was no "conspiracy to silence" the inmate for political reasons, Kimberlin "was treated differently and held to a stricter standard of conduct ... as a result of his contacts with the press to promote his allegations." Hankinson's report

The report was obtained by The Associated Press under the Freedom of Information Act.

Forest Service sought to obtain bombers

WASHINGTON - The Forest Service sought to obtain 100 tactical bombers from the Air Force in 1991, saying it wanted to convert the aircraft to fight forest fires, government documents indicate.

The Pentagon concluded the request for surplus A-10 "warrhogs" was too steep and there would be technical difficulties in attaching 1,500-gallon tanks to the bombers for use in firefighting, the documents show.

A congressional subcommittee chaired by Rep. Charlie Rose, D.-N.C., is investigating allegations the Forest Service may have been trying to obtain military aircraft that could be used in covert CIA operations.

Those allegations have been fueled by revelations that two C-130 cargo planes the Forest Service had obtained from the military for forest fighting had turned up unexplained in Kuwait after the Persian Gulf War.

Remedies for Miami's violent virus?

By DAM SEWELL Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Uwe-Wilhelm Rakebrand was cautiously fol-lowing the rules when he collided with the law of the jungle. His murder has become a symbol of exasperation for a metropolis that can never quite escape its own violent image.

The German tourist's shooting death in the car he and his pregnant wife had just rented triggered a volley of suggested remedies for Miami's violent virus.

Mayor Xavier Suarez proposed highway checkpoints to look for guns, similar to those used to catch drunk drivers; U.S. Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., urged tougher sentences for career criminals; a Gulf Coast-based citizens' group called Stop Turning Out Prisoners said it will place more billboard Rakebrand was headed toward the lights of Miami Beach's glittering nightlife when he was caught in Miami's darker reality: it is a place not only of dance clubs, fashion shoots and glistening beaches, but also of drug runners and inner-city des-perados who mix guns and gore with the city's sun, surf and cosmopolitan glamour.

Miami Police Chief Calvin Ross had a grim view of future prospects.

after a 19-yard gain on the Patriots' second play of the third quarter. Also, Lake Brantley was whistled for just one 5-yard penalty in the second half after giving up 35 yards on four penalties in the first half.

"We ren a lot of different plays against West Orange and in the first half," said Almon. "That contributed to the number of mistakes."

By chewing up yards and minutes, the Patriot offense took a lot of pressure off the young and improving Lake Brantley defense. And the defense seemed to respond, limiting Lake Mary to just 24 yards in the second half after giving up 119 yards and a touchdown in the first

The Patriots also did a super job on special teams, especially on punt returns. Lake Mary punted four times in the second half; one was blocked, the poor snap on another resulted in a 16-yard loss, and a third went for zero yards.

Those three plays resulted in Lake Brantley taking posession of the ball at the 50-yard line. the Lake Mary 41, and the Lake Mary 27. The Patriots converted the three opportunities into 17

Ricky Hamilton gave Lake Brantley a 7-0 lead when he scored on a 7-yard run with 2:03 remaining in the first quarter. LeCroix kicking the extra point.

All monofilament fishing lines are not created equal, and sometimes the different classifications can be confusing. Most of us are only concerned with lines which are rated by spool strength. All spools of line, from hundred-yard spools to spools weighing two pounds or more, are usually rated by a poundage such as 10, 25, etc.

The actual breaking strength of this line, however, is usually several pounds stronger than what is stated on the spool.

Most anglers are happy to be fishing with line that has a breaking strength which is stronger that what is actually listed on the spool. Most of us are regular anglers, and we are not interested in very expensive fishing line that will eventually get frayed and worn.

There is a group of very serious anglers that are interested in setting world records for specific line classes, and for them, only "tournament" grade fishing line will be acceptable.

Serious light line fishermen want to know the actual breaking strength of their lines, and they do not want line that is stronger than the advertised

FISHING FORECAST

Bass fishing is still very slow due to extreme heat. Bream and catfish are your best bet in fresh water. Fish deep river bends or in local lakes and use crickets. worms, or mussçis.

Sebastian Inlet has been packed with snook anglers, and most are connecting with fish in the 8 to 15-pound range. Nighttime action is best, and oneounce jigs and a wide variety of lures such as Rebels, Rapalas, and Mavericks work just fine. Expect some tarpon, redfish, and ladyfish to be mixed in with the snook.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral has little to report in the way of offshore action. Trolling has been very spotty, and bottom fishing has been slow. King mackerel and cobia are on 8-A reef and Pelican Flats. A few cobia, king mackerel, and tripletail are in the buoy line.

28-7 advantage. Seminole's Todd Braden partially blocked the extra point by Jeremiah Greathouse but the kick still managed to crawl over the crossbar.

Eastside closed out the scoring with Lee's fumble return for a touchdown and a 3-yard run by Willie Johnson.

Seminole had a chance to score late in the fourth quarter after driving to the Eastside 17-yard line in four plays. The threat ended Rickey Williams intercepted a Branch pass at the goal line.

Alton Jenkins led Seminole's ground attack with 30 yards on five carries. As a team, though, the Tribe managed just 54 yards on 14 carries.

You had to be 90 to get into birthday bash

On Aug. 30. Hillhaven Healthcare Center entertained at a big 90s bash. No, this was not for men and women of the 90s, but for residents, ages 90 and above.

And guess what? There were 28 residents honored at this special gathering. Among those 95 and over celebrating were: Eldora Brooks, 103; Belle Tolbert, 101; E.B. Stowe, 99; Hester King, 99; Robert Hickson, 96, a former lieutenant in the Sanford Polic Department: and Amelia Gardener, 95.

According to Sylvia Lormann, activities director at the center, it was quite a big day for residents, their families and friends, Roger Hughes, a blind musician, entertained the group and Eileen Helms, resident council president, made a brief speech and congratulated the celebrants. Adding to the party. atmosphere were refreshments of oldfashioned ice cream sundaes.

This was a special day for E.B. Stowe, prominent Sanford artist and teacher, who celebrated his 99th birthday that day. Mr. Stowe's good friend, Ashby Jones, took him out to lunch and the rest of the day was spent partying.

Sylvia said his friends and former students visited him for three days and he received "loads of flowers and fruit baskets, cards, tape players and paints." She added. "Just give him a can of white paint and he's happy.

At 99, the genial artist still paints daily and his mind is an open book of Sanford. Sylvia says he is overwhelmed at his remarkable mental skills. "His memory is incredible." she said.

Surprise!

Georgia Chorpening never expected anything special on her 90th birthday. For all she knew, she was going to fellowship hall of the First United Methodist to help Barbara Brown clean up after a Boy Scout supper on Saturday. Sept. 4.

When she entered the hall she nearly keeled over with surprise as the "Happy Birthday" song echoed throughout the large room. She was not the least bit suspicious since her birthday was not until Monday.

The vivacious honoree is a bundle of energy filled with love, charity and humility, "It (the surprise," she said. 'I just couldn't believe...little of me...anybody would leave home to come to anything for me.

But they did. Over 100 came bearing covered dishes for the lovely dinner in a setting of balloons, candles and ferns. After dinner, the huge peach and white birthday sheet cake was
