Jackpot jumps to $16 million

TALLAHASSEE — Nobody matched all six winning numbers in this week's Florida Lotto drawing, so the jackpot rolled over to an estimated $16 million for next week, lottery officials said.

The winning numbers in Saturday night's drawing were 4, 17, 19, 20, 24 and 44.

Although nobody won the grand prize, more than 351,000 tickets qualified for smaller prizes. Payouts were:

- 258 tickets matched five of six to win $4,271.50.
- 17,042 tickets matched four of six to win $94.50.
- 334,322 tickets matched three of six to win $4.50.

The $16 million estimate for next week's jackpot is based on a single winner, paid in 20 annual installments.

Score is astronaut's discovery

CAPE CANAVERAL — After reviewing a set of instructions and a news summary faxed to his crewmates aboard the shuttle Discovery on their first full day in space Sunday, rookie astronaut Bruce Melnick had a question.

"We noticed we got all of the most important football scores but we noticed that the most important one was missing," said Melnick, 40, the first astronaut chosen from the Coast Guard. "And that was the Coast Guard Academy's homecoming game. We wondered, 'What the score was on that?'"

"We'll check for you," responded astronaut Marsha Ivins from Mission Control Houston.

She broke the bad news a short time later. "Got a note for Bruce here," Ivins said. "The score was Wesleyan 14, Coast Guard 13. Sorry."

"That's why you didn't give it to me in the first place," said Melnick, a Coast Guard commander who was selected as part of the astronaut class in 1987. "Thanks."

In an interview before Saturday's blastoff on a mission to dispatch the Ulysses probe on a five-year mission to the sun, Melnick said: "I take a lot of pride in having been selected as the first Coast Guard astronaut."

Maneuvering under way for 1992 county commission races

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Even though the 1990 political season won't be over for another month, already names are being bandied about as possible contenders for the Seminole County commission in 1992.

1992 is the year three seats on the commission will be up for election, Districts 1, 3 and 5. The District 2 commissioner was decided Oct. 2 by Republicans, who re-elected Bob Sturm to a fourth four-year term. District 4 won't be decided until Nov. 6 when incumbent Republican Sandra Glenn faces Democratic political newcomer Larry Furlong.

District 1 is now held by first-term commissioner Pat Warren, former county administration office manager and aide to her District 1 predecessor Barbara Christensen. District 5 is also held by a first-term commissioner, Jennifer Kelley.

District 3 is held by established party leader Fred Streetman, now serving his second term.

Many of the people mentioned by party insiders as possible District 3 candidates in 1992 hinge their commission aspirations on whether Streetman will seek re-election.

After the "Bloody Tuesday" of Oct. 24, 1989 when county manager Ken Hooper and the two deputy county managers resigned after Hooper from favor of Warren, Kelley and Glenn, an irate Streetman announced his plans to consider resigning from office. He later backed off the statement, saying he had no immediate plans to.

SANFORD — Three members of the Navy's famed Blue Angels precision flight team are scheduled to be performing a limited routine in the skies over Sanford at approximately 5:30 Sunday afternoon as part of an aviation career day at Comair Aviation Academy.

While the five hour program is open to the general public, Comair officials say the main emphasis of the day is to attract and inform prospective aviation students as well as individuals who are already involved in aviation.

Following their in-flight aerobatic demonstration, the Blue Angels will be available to meet with students.

Budget war politics shift battleground

By BUD NEWMAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The budget battle moved to the Senate following House passage early Monday of a Democratic-crafted budget plan that gives a House committee power to ease Medicare cuts by $18 billion and alter a previously defeated plan's tax package.

The 250-164 mostly party-line vote came at about 2:30 a.m. after two hours of sometimes bitter partisan debate. The Senate was expected to consider the new budget plan later Monday, along with a temporary spending bill that would end the two-day shutdown of most federal agencies and services.

The House passed the stop-gap funding bill at about 3:45 a.m. EDT Monday after approving the budget.

SANFORD — Seminole County should relax zoning restrictions and provide financial incentives to encourage more affordable housing to be built.

That's the conclusion of a special task force appointed by county commissioners to find ways of making homes more affordable to first-time homebuyers and low-income residents. Now, many of the people who can't afford to buy a home in Seminole County either buy homes in Deltona and commute to Seminole and Orange counties or rent apartments.

"We're not talking about the stereotypical slums kind of affordable housing," said task force chairman Lynn Lawrence. "We're talking about something for some of the finest people we have in the county that can't afford to buy a home here. I'm talking about our policemen and teachers and firemen."

The county's Program Review Committee will review the task force findings and recommendations during the next month. The PRC and task force will make their final report to county commissioners in December.

The task force's research found the number of low-income residents in Seminole County continued

Music industry reeling from Florida rap cases

By WILL DUNHAM
United Press International

WASHINGTON — When Elvis Presley swiveled his hips on national television, some Americans gasped. When John Lennon suggested the Beatles were bigger than Jesus Christ, some Americans burned records by the Fab Four.

The music industry has had its share of controversies over the years, with assorted allegations of offensive antics, lyrics and lifestyles of some recording stars. But the musicians, both naughty and not, and those who sold their records traditionally have been insulated from legal consequences stemming from the music itself.

The tune has changed as a result of legal actions in Florida.

In Fort Lauderdale, a jury convicted a record store owner on misdemeanor obscenity charges for selling an album by the controversial rap group 2 Live Crew, whose album, "As Nasty as They Wanna Be," had been ruled "obscene" by a federal court judge in June.

The cases have sent shock waves through the music industry, with accusations of censorship and those of a chilling effect on people who write, perform and sell music.

"It's a sad state of affairs when you can be arrested for selling a song," said Dana Kornbluth, spokeswoman for National Association of Recording Merchandisers, the trade group representing some 600 record distributors.

"Retailers will have to take a second look at what they are carrying, out of fear," Kornbluth said, adding that some scared record store owners might "go through their shelves and start pulling albums that may fall under obscenity statutes."

Lake Mary arts festival attracts record turnout

By LACY DOMEN
Herald People Editor

HEATHROW — Tired but pleased volunteers for the Fourth Annual Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts continued to disassemble the site at L & L Acres Ranch this morning after more than 100,000 art lovers trekked through the grounds Saturday and Sunday, according to Chairman of Volunteers, Don Steedly.

"I'm still recovering," Steedly said.

Over 450 volunteers on 26 committees worked for up to one year to make the event a success.

"It couldn't have happened without the volunteers," Steedly said.

Steedly's wife, Tomi, said the volunteers' enthusiasm was contagious.

"It was a labor of love for all of us. It was fantastic," she said.

Many of the people pitching in to help were high school and college students, Steedly said. The festival raises money for student scholarships in the arts.

retire from the seat — but still leaving the possibility open.
"I have decided I will not retire today," Streetman said Thursday. "A lot of it had to do with what happened at around 7:30 or 8 o'clock Tuesday."

That was the time fellow commissioner and Streetman friend Sturm had secured a defeat over challenger Dick Fess, supported by a camp that included many party outsiders.

As far as seeking the seat again in 1992, Streetman says he "hasn't given it much thought."

But there are some people that have given some thought to seeking a District 3 seat that was vacated by Streetman. Dick Van Weide, a long-time party faithful, says he would consider running for the District 3 commission seat if Streetman didn't seek re-election. Van Der Weide, of Longwood, moved to Sanford in 1988 to wage an unsuccessful Republican District 5 run-off bid against Kelley.

While Van Der Weide doesn't rule out another move to Sanford to challenge Kelley again, he says he would have to "think about that real hard."

Another name that has been mentioned is Dick Harris, president of the Wekiva Homeowners Association. Harris has been active in the party's county executive committee and has been appointed to serve on several county committees.

"1992 is a long way away," Harris says. "If Fred chooses to run again I would be happy to support him. If not, then that changes a great deal. Whether I would decide to run depends on things at the time. But I have definitely thought about it."

Altamonte Springs Mayor Dudley Bates has been mentioned as a possible contender for the District 3 seat, but Bates says it is unlikely he would seek the seat.

"I have just been elected to another three-year term which would take me to 1993," Bates says. "I would seriously doubt I would step down early to seek another office."

A fourth possible candidate for the District 3 seat is Ginger Bowman, who is chairman of the county's Program Review Committee and has served on other county committees.

Although she has been active in several campaigns, Bowman sought party support for a bid against Sandra Glenn but found none and has since distanced herself from party regulars. Bowman says she is "considering" a District 3 commission bid even if Streetman seeks re-election.

In District 5, Art Davis says he is considering a rematch against Jennifer Kelley. During his stint as a Democrat, Davis edged out Kelley in District 5 by six votes, but lost countywide by a 65 to 35 margin. Davis has since returned to the Republican party and says he is considering a primary challenge to Kelley.

One other name has been mentioned as a possible District 5 candidate is Ken Wright. A resident of Sanford, Wright ran a brief District 5 campaign in 1987 but dropped out before the first primary. Wright most recently served as campaign manager to Dick Fess, who lost to Sturm Oct. 2.

"I haven't given any thought to it," Wright says. "I just came off (the Fess) campaign and I'm just glad it's over. Jennifer is doing a good job so I don't have any immediate plans to seek that office."

In District 1, former county manager Ken Hooper is most often named as a Pat Warren challenger. The rift between the two extends back several years. In 1987, Hooper supported a proposal by former deputy county manager Montye Beamer to eliminate Warren's position. Warren was promptly hired by Christensen to serve as her administrative aide until Warren announced plans to seek the commission seat being vacated by Christensen.

After Warren was elected, she sought a review of the county's legal actions and a reduction of county legal staff. When she expressed dissatisfaction with then County Attorney Nikki Clayton's report, Clayton resigned and one other vacant assistant attorney's position was eliminated.

The county will expand the legal staff by two attorneys to catch up with the backlog of work created by the eliminated positions and the increasing workload.

Then, with the encouragement of Warren and Kelley, Glenn suggested to Hooper his style of management was no longer wanted and Hooper resigned, along with Beamer and deputy manager Jim Bible.

Hooper insists the bad blood doesn't linger, but he is considering a shift to politics and would like to consider challenging Warren. Hooper says he has also looked at property for a new home in Geneva and might run against Kelley should he move then decide to run for office.

Another possible Warren challenger is Dave Knickerbocker who lost to Warren in 1988. Knickerbocker says he isn't making any plans for 1992 yet, but is waiting to see how state and county district reapportionment will reshape legislative and commission districts.

"I have some interest in the House race, but that depends on redistricting," Knickerbocker says. "I have some interest in the county commission race, but that depends on redistricting. We'll just have to see."

There appears to be a national trend toward cracking down on stores stocking "obscene" albums — police in more than a dozen states reportedly are warning against the sale of such records. The outcome of an appeal of the Florida case could set the tone for the rest of the country and industry groups are hoping the conviction is overturned to nip the trend in the bud.

"People are looking for scapegoats for the ills of society and they're looking to the arts," Trish Heimers, spokeswoman for the Recording Industry Association of America. RIAA represents 55 U.S. record companies, including the CBS, Polygram, Warner Brothers, MCA, Capitol and Atlantic labels.

Discovery crew: Playing with fire

By MARY SCHLANSBERG
United Press International

An experiment aboard the shuttle Discovery will help space engineers learn more about how fires burn in a gravity-free environment and how to extinguish them quickly should the need arise, scientists say.

Shuttle commander Richard "Dick" Richards started the experiment Sunday, using two cameras to film burning material inside a 2-foot-long chamber to show Earth-bound scientists how flames move and develop in the absence of gravity.

Television views showed a small fire inside the apparatus for about 70 seconds before it sputtered out. The fire did not appear to burn steadily but instead appeared to flash irregularly, brightening and dimming before finally dying.

Robert Altenkirch, dean of engineering at Mississippi State University and principal investigator for the Solid Surface Combustion Experiment said before launch that learning more about how fires behave in space can lead to improved safety.

"The object is to figure out the reasons why the flame moves, then to use that information, ultimately, to design a safe spacecraft environment with respect to fires from the point of view of materials selection and how you would extinguish a fire," he said.

The thought of a fire aboard any spacecraft seems a bad idea but Richards said in a pre-flight interview he had no qualms about the experiment.

"It's a very tight container," he said. "This is a seven-second controlled fire. As far as I'm concerned, it's a non-problem on board the orbiter."

Richards was aboard the shuttle Columbia during an August 1989 Department of Defense flight in which a short circuit in a cable to the shuttle's teleprinter ignited a small fire.

The crew reported seeing sparks, and smoke was recorded by a cabin smoke detector, but the smoke was not sufficient enough to trigger fire alarms in the orbiter, NASA said.

"If anything, I endorse this sort of thing because we can never learn enough about fire safety on board Discovery," he said of the experiment aboard Discovery. "We have taken steps to learn from that lesson."

Altenkirch said the experiment is extremely safe.

"The chemical reaction is contained within that chamber," he said. "The amount of fuel being burned is generally no more than a match ... The amount of fuel is so small you could stick your hand on that chamber and you'd never know the experiment had occurred."

The flame of a burning candle in Earth's gravity has a characteristic shape because air flows upward from beneath it, sweeping away burning products and bringing oxygen to the flame.

"If you remove that flow by removing gravity, the first question is, 'Will the flame continue to exist or extinguish?' and 'What will its shape and characteristics be?'" Altenkirch said. "The propagation characteristics are different in the absence of gravity."

Twachtmann won't resign from DER job

United Press International

TAMPA — Dale Twachtmann said too much has been made of his nomination as assistant secretary of the U.S. Army and he does not plan to resign as Florida's chief environmental regulator — unless he gets the federal appointment.

But leading environmentalists, who have bedeviled Twachtmann for the past three years, read far more into the letter Gov. Bob Martinez sent President Bush in late August.

They said the letter recommending Twachtmann for the Army post is an indication Martinez plans to replace the secretary of the Department of Environmental Regulation if he wins re-election next month.

"I think he's going to be out of there one way or another," said David Gluckman, a Tampa-area lobbyist who represents several environmental groups, told The Tampa Tribune.

In the letter, made public last week, Martinez told Bush that Twachtmann is well-qualified to replace Robert W. Page, who is retiring on Oct. 16.

FDA, police say ozone machine may be unsafe

United Press International

FORT LAUDERDALE — Police have launched an investigation of a company that makes an unapproved and potentially dangerous "ozone therapy" machine used to treat patients with AIDS, cancer and other ailments.

The machine and the company that sells it, Anglo-American Research of Fort Lauderdale, were already under investigation by federal immigration authorities, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the state Department of Professional Regulation, the Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel reported Sunday.

Fort Lauderdale police joined the investigation after talking to people who had undergone the ozone treatments.

SANFORD — A false lead early today failed to turn up a suspected gunman in the Saturday night shooting death of Oilber Reginald Shaw, 33, Sanford Police Lt. Mike Rotundo said. Thomas Penn, a 41-year-old black man, who stands 5 feet, 10

Rotundo said police allege Penn drove up to 1602 W. 13th Street, at about 8:15 p.m. Saturday and fired four shots from a handgun into a car where Shaw sat with two women.

Penn allegedly fled east on 13th Street in a red Pontiac Firebird.

Rotundo said Shaw was apparently dating Penn's ex-girlfriend. He was apparently slain in a dispute over the woman, whom police decline to identify, for her own safety.

Witnesses reportedly recognized Penn as the gunman. Rotundo said he was recently released from prison and returned to Sanford.

"We all know him. He just got out of prison. We've been dealing with him for years," Rotundo said.

Chopper pilot helps track stolen car

SANFORD — Dr. Benjamin Newman, who serves as the county's physician, aided Seminole County sheriff's deputies by helping them track down a fleeing car, as Newman piloted his private helicopter above Interstate 4.

Deputies began a pursuit of the car that fled from an attempted traffic stop in rural Altamonte Springs at about 4 p.m. Saturday.

The chase moved to the interstate, where the suspect traveled at 100 mph and a pursuing deputy lost sight of the car. Newman, who was flying above the roadway was spotted by the deputy, who followed Newman's lead off the interstate at State Road 46, west of Sanford. There the deputy blocked the path of the fleeing car and the driver ran into nearby woods and was captured.

Former CCIB chief gets promotion

By SUSAN LEBEN

SANFORD — Donald Estinger, 33, slated to become Seminole County's undersheriff Jan. 1, has been promoted to the rank of major as an interim measure.

By promoting Estinger last week Sheriff John Polk formalized Estinger's key administrative and planning duties performed in support of Polk. Polk, waiting word on a possible heart transplant for himself is on very light duty.

As a lieutenant, Estinger, who has been with the department 11 years, commanded the City County Investigative Bureau. Undersheriff Duane Harrell, who has served Polk 21 years, is slated to retire early next year.

"I'm looking forward to working for the sheriff and the people of Seminole County in this capacity," Estinger said. His promotion, made Thursday, has brought a salary increase from about $35,000 to $53,000 per year.

Cop saved when gun wouldn't fire

SANFORD — A defective shotgun apparently helped save Sanford Police Officer Terry Mullins from a gunman.

Mullins reported that about 1:28 a.m. Sunday he confronted Lamar Mills, 34, of 1771 Burrows Lane, Sanford, as Mills allegedly pointed a double-barreled shotgun at a woman. The incident occurred outside 1419 Celery Ave., Sanford. Mullins said Mills ran when he saw Mullins approach. Mullins ordered Mills to stop, but Mills allegedly ran and took cover behind a trash dumpster.

Mullins reported Mills pointed the shotgun at him, from his shielded position, and Mullins heard the hammer of the gun click. The gun failed to fire. Mills allegedly broke down the barrel of the gun and moved a shell to the second barrel. He locked the barrel in place and pointed the gun at Mullins again. The barrel jammed.

Mullins drew his police sidearm and ordered Mills to drop his gun. Mills allegedly said "...I'll kill you," as he again tried to fire. The chamber area of the gun broke open, rendering the gun inoperable.

Mills ran and threw the shotgun into nearby brush. He tried to flee on foot, but Mullins grabbed and arrested him.

Mills is charged with aggravated assault with a firearm, aggravated assault on a police officer, possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, use of a firearm in a felony and resisting with violence. Bond is $10,000.

Children gather round a birthday cake to sing "Happy Birthday" to the city of Casselberry.

Casselberry celebrates birthday

By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald correspondent

CASSELBERRY — "Absolutely incredible" — that's how honorary mayor for the day Talley Hattaway described the city of Casselberry's 80th birthday celebration.

"I've enjoyed every minute of it. The city's done a tremendous job," he said as he watched celebrants of all ages dance the night away Saturday to live Big Band Era music in front of city hall. New and old residents alike seemed reluctant to leave and break the spell cast by the day of nostalgia and community spirit.

Hattaway and his wife, Alma, now living in Longwood, were honored earlier in the day as signers of the city's incorporation documents on Oct. 10, 1940. The group of residents, including fern grower and developer Hibbard Casselberry, incorporated their property as a reality "tax-free town."

It was given the name Casselberry, which was how the railroad identified the siding from which ferns were shipped. Hibbard Casselberry, who died in 1989, served as the first mayor.

The first town marshal, Hattaway recalls his job was an easy one. "There was no crime so we didn't need a jail. We knew everybody and if anyone did something wrong, I just talked to them and they stopped. Everything has changed so much in 50 years."

Casselberry's surviving children, Hibbard Jr. of Fort Lauderdale, Leonard, John, and Lillian Selph, all of Casselberry, were recognized and recalled memories of their father and the city's early days.

Mayor Andrea Dennison said, "I'm very pleased with the crowd. So many people have told me they want to do it every year, that we should have a birthday party every year. One person told me 'This whole celebration was down home and that's what Casselberry is all about.'"

"I saw different generations from babies to 83 having fun," Dennison added. "'Bridging the gap' was our theme and I think we did it."

The city showed its appreciation to city attorney of 33 years, Ken McIntosh, by proclaiming the week of Oct. 6 through Oct. 13 Ken McIntosh Week. Mayor Dennison presented him with a ceremonial key to the city and a real one to the back door of city hall. There is only one city attorney in Florida who has served longer.

The Anniversary Park and new children's playground behind city hall on Lake Concord will be dedicated at noon with music by the Casselberry Elementary School Pils and Drum Corps. Winners in the school's essay and poster contests were awarded prizes. Gifted students from the school placed items, such as a lotto card, Bart Simpson and 50th anniversary T-shirts, in a time capsule in the playground so that children of the future generation could see what 1990 was like.

Deposit danger

Americans had reason to be concerned recently when Comptroller General Charles Bowsher told the House Banking Committee: "Not since it was born in the Great Depression has the federal system of deposit insurance for commercial banks faced such a period of danger as it (now) does."

Bowsher added that the failure of a single major bank or the onset of a recession could deplete the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's $12 billion fund. The FDIC guarantees $2 trillion in insured deposits nationwide. Following this gloomy assessment, the Congressional Budget Office predicted that no fewer than 600 banks will fail during the next three years.

These grim warnings conjured up images of taxpayers having to shoulder another enormous financial burden as hundreds of banks fail. Taxpayers already are stuck with spending more than $200 billion to bail out failed savings and loan institutions.

It is tempting to draw parallels between the S&L debacle and the problems besetting the banking industry. But that temptation should be resisted, because it is based on the false premise that these financial institutions are in essentially the same sorry shape. In reality, there are significant differences between America's banks and the S&L industry.

To begin with, banks made $26 billion last year, while the S&L industry lost more than $19 billion.

It also should be noted that hundreds of S&Ls are destroyed during a period when the government gave them a free hand to make risky investments under the cover of federally guaranteed deposit insurance. Banks, on the other hand, are subject to much tighter regulatory restrictions. And the rules have become even tougher in the wake of the thrift blowout.

Moreover, S&Ls are structured very differently from banks. As closely held institutions, many failed savings and loans were undercapitalized and therefore vulnerable to looting by unscrupulous managers. That is not the case with major banks, most of which are publicly held corporations and thus obliged to open their books to public scrutiny.

In recent years, banks have been pressured by regulators and the markets to increase their capital reserves. This is the first line of defense against unpaid loans. With some $200 billion in equity capital, banks have greater protection against the kind of tidal wave that swamped hundreds of thrifts.

This doesn't mean the banking industry is without problems. During the last decade, the economic decline in the oil patch, the farm belt and the Third World has caused scores of bank failures. Add a receding real estate market, regional recessions, declining bank stocks and increased competition for business, and the industry could be in for even heavier weather in the years to come.

Despite their problems, banks still have an opportunity to regain the financial health they enjoyed not so long ago. But in order to do so, they must first adapt to a highly competitive and rapidly changing environment.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, underscored this point recently when he said a successful banking system must be able to attract and maintain a higher level of capital. To accomplish this, reforms are required to streamline the banking system without sacrificing basic safeguards.

Power and puzzles to the people

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. — "Vote yes on no," says the satirical radio commercial for Proposition Zero, a fictitious initiative on California's November ballot. "Say no to agitprop from big oil, big business and big-mouth political consultants."

Conjured up by a radio talk show host, the Proposition Zero spoof is a parody of the wildly conflicting claims for and against the dozens of ballot initiatives that face the state's voters in every election year.

But the advertisement deftly uses humor to make a serious political statement. "Say no to the tactics of distortion, lies, innuendo and personal attack," it proclaims. "Protect your constitutional right to have no opinion and keep it to yourself."

The message is clear: Some Californians are overwhelmed by — if not disenchanted with — the proliferation of complicated ballot measures that are promoted or denigrated through simplistic slogans and deceptive advertising.

Ballot initiatives and referenda are hardly unique to California. Plebiscites on issues are lawful in approximately half of the 50 states. In recent years, voters from Florida to Arizona and Maine to Washington have been faced with decisions at the polls on AIDS, abortion, auto seat belts, catfish promotion, state lotteries, strip mining, judicial procedures, handgun sales, hog farm ownership, historic landmarks and scores of other issues.

Nowhere, however, is the process more routinely relied upon — or more widely publicized outside the state — than in California, where it was initially promoted early in this century by Gov. Hiram Johnson, a populist Republican.

Although he and others viewed citizen lawmaking as an antidote to the influence exercised over the state legislature by wealthy corporations and powerful political machines, a Los Angeles Times analysis notes that the process has undergone profound changes in the ensuing decades:

As the issues become more complex, so do the ballot propositions.

"The system seems to have slipped away from the citizens. It was intended to serve into the hands of the very kind of special interests it was meant to contain. Merely qualifying a measure for the ballot can cost as much as $700,000 and consume more time than most citizen groups can muster."

"Taking their place is a whole new industry of consultants, professional petition circulators, pollsters and media gurus who have been lured away from traditional campaigns by special interests willing to spend whatever it takes to promote or fend off these measures."

There are other problems. As the issues become more complex, so do the ballot propositions — but few, if any, voters have the time to read them, much less the specialized knowledge required to analyze and understand them.

For example, the semi-technical text of just one of the initiatives on next month's ballot — the "Big Green" omnibus environmental protection measure — is almost 16,000 words long and fills more than 38 single-spaced typewritten pages.

Sophisticated opponents of such ballot propositions understand that merely advocating their rejection engenders negative responses among voters — so they fashion their own alternatives.

Keeping an eye on prescriptives

WASHINGTON — Maybe Elvis would be as "ALIVE!" as the tabloids say he is if legislation now pending before Congress had been passed 20 years ago.

To curb addictions to prescribed drugs and black market sales of those drugs, Congress is considering policing prescription drugs and saving some money in the Medicare budget at the same time.

Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., has proposed requiring all doctors to write prescriptions in triplicate — one copy for the patient, one for the doctor and one for the state health agency. The theory is that doctors will be less inclined to over-prescribe addictive drugs if they know the state is counting. And Stark thinks he can save $1 billion a year in Medicaid payments now going to unnecessary prescriptions.

Drug companies are terrified of the proposal, but they have been strangely silent on Capitol Hill. Instead, they have left the lobbying to patient-rights groups that bark warnings about putting Big Brother in the doctor's office. For all their good intentions, the patient-rights advocates are not as small and powerless as they appear. Many of them are heavily backed with contributions from the big drug companies.

For example, in 1968, the Upjohn Co. contributed $127,951 to the Phobia Society, more than the group received that year from its entire membership. The group now goes by a new name — the Anxiety Disorders Association of America — and is among those lobbying against Stark's legislation.

We asked Upjohn how much the pharmaceutical company gave to patient-rights groups last year. A spokesman for the company couldn't find the records, but he noted that Upjohn feared Stark's bill could keep patients from getting drugs they need. "We don't like seeing a distant group of bureaucrats setting themselves up as a reviewing board," he told our associate Jim Lynch.

Police and federal investigators think the triplicate prescription idea will put a chill on unnecessary and illegal prescriptions, not on legitimate ones. The illegal sale of prescribed drugs is big business — $25 billion a year on the black market, according to the Drug Enforcement Administration. Prescription drugs kill or injure three times as many people as heroin each year. One-third of the overdose cases brought into emergency rooms involve legal drugs.

The problem rarely gets attention unless a celebrity like Elvis Presley overdoses or a public figure like Kitty Dukakis admits an addiction.

Three doctors in Los Angeles were recently accused by the Medical Board of California of over-prescribing addictive drugs to actress Elizabeth Taylor. According to the complaint, the doctors gave Taylor more than 1,000 prescriptions for 28 controlled substances.

On the street, the market for prescription drugs is so busy that it takes a full unit of the DEA to keep track of it. One veteran federal investigator told us about a bust of "doctor shoppers" in Georgia who rounded up elderly cancer patients and drove them around to different doctors for prescriptions of Dilaudid, also known as "drug store heroin." The pills sell at a pharmacy for about $1 each, but on the street they are worth $50 each.

What will state agencies learn by getting copies of all prescriptions for addictive drugs? A spot survey by federal investigators offers one example. They recently discovered that one doctor in New Mexico prescribed about one-fourth of all the tranquilizers paid for by Medicaid in that state.

DAVID S. BRODER

O'Brien's final victory was party's

WASHINGTON — Lawrence F. O'Brien, who died last week of cancer, was many things: a key figure in John F. Kennedy's "Irish Mafia," an architect of Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society legislation, a Cabinet member, the target of the Watergate break-in that eventually cost Richard M. Nixon the presidency and, later in life, a most successful commissioner of the National Basketball Assn.

But above all else, Larry O'Brien was a Democrat — a politician devoted to the nurture of his party. To salute him and his work is to defend what is now most denigrated in American politics: the principle that parties matter, even more than personal ambitions or the policy clashes of the moment.

The son of immigrants from County Cork who ran a rooming house and restaurant in Springfield, Mass., he was different from the others in the Kennedy circle — and not just because he had no enthusiasm for touch football. O'Brien had been actively involved in Democratic politics before JFK came along and he stayed involved long after he was gone.

Devoted as he was to President Kennedy and to his brother, Robert Kennedy, it was perfectly in character for O'Brien to give generously of his talents to President Johnson and to Hubert H. Humphrey, when they carried the Democratic banner after the deaths of the Kennedy brothers.

Some Kennedy courtiers never forgave O'Brien for that. But anyone who understood him knew that his concept of loyalty went well beyond the individual to an institution he genuinely believed served the interest of most Americans — the Democratic Party.

I met O'Brien during the West Virginia primary of 1960. We hooked up one day at the Kennedy headquarters in the basement of the Kanawha Hotel in Charleston, where he and Matt Reese and Bob McDonough worked the phones 18 hours a day, and drove together down to Beckley. By the end of the drive, I'd not only had a lesson in O'Brien's techniques for political organizing but an insight into the values that framed his life.

He was a small-d democrat as well as a Democrat. He believed that the people could and should rule. But unlike so many of the current crop of self-proclaimed "populists," who visualize themselves as personal embodiments of the mass will, O'Brien understood that popular rule required mobilization. And mobilization required political party organization.

The secret of his success as a political organizer was no secret at all; he laid it out in simple terms in the "O'Brien Manual." It is all about participation, about techniques for expanding the campaign from the cadre of insiders to wider and wider circles of volunteers; of reaching people at the doorstep and giving them a sense of involvement in a candidacy. My dog-eared copy reads: "Volunteers are essential to the success of any political campaign.... There is no such thing as having a few volunteers.... There is always work to be done in a political campaign."

It is no accident that the campaigns he helped design in the 1960s saw levels of turnout the Democrats have not been able to match ever since.

His techniques as a congressional liaison for Kennedy and Johnson rested on the same principle — finding ways to involve members of Congress enough in the framing of a program that they acquired a sense of ownership in seeing it passed. It wasn't easy, for Kennedy had too few allies on Capitol Hill and Johnson had almost too much ego to let others play. But O'Brien did the job with skill, in large part because he never let himself become a cynic.

"I always felt," he wrote, "that we could never discount any member of Congress, no matter how much we might disagree with him. The people of his state or his district had elected him; he spoke for them and he was, therefore, deserving of our respect."

O'Brien understood that the goal of politics was not just to win, but to govern. The policy issue that concerned him most, always, was education. He knew, as well as Mr. Jefferson, that democracy without education was a contradiction in terms. I don't believe I had any interview with him during the Kennedy years that he did not express his frustration at the lack of votes to pass a federal aid-to-education bill. I know he was never happier than when Johnson signed the landmark education bills of his presidency.

But the job O'Brien valued most was the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee, though the two times he held it between 1968 and 1972 were hard times for his party. "I'm proud to be known as a politician," he wrote in his memoirs. "Politics is the art of the possible, and it is an intensely personal art."

O'Brien practiced that art as well as anyone Washington has seen in a long, long time. He titled his book "No Final Victories," because he was always a realist. But his final victory was sustaining the Democratic Party.

Some Kennedy courtiers never forgave O'Brien.

The patient-rights advocates are not as small and powerless as they appear.

and 1989, although the percentage of low-income residents to higher-income residents decreased from about 40 percent of all residents to about 35 percent.

The number of residents in the prime first-time homebuyer age groups of 25 to 34 years also declined in relationship to other age brackets during the decade. In 1980, that age group represented 23 percent of all age groups in the county. By 1989, they had decreased to about 22 percent.

The task force concluded the statistic gave evidence first-time homebuyers may be moving out of the county to buy homes.

And the task force found the employment trend in Seminole County was towards more lower-paid service jobs. Between 1980 and 1989, the number of people working in service jobs increased 175 percent, compared to higher-paid manufacturing jobs, which increased only 36 percent.

While the number of low-income people continued to increase, the cost of housing in Seminole County also continued to increase. In 1980, the median resale cost of a home in the Central Florida area was $80,530. By 1989, the price had escalated to $80,098. Using 1980 dollars, the 1980 house would have cost $57,101, 40 percent less than the median cost of a resale home in 1989.

By comparison, the task force determined a home would have to cost about $62,000 or less for a family of four earning about $25,000 annually to afford monthly principal, interest, taxes and insurance payments.

And the cost of new home construction also continued to increase. In 1980, the average reported value of new home construction, less the cost of land, was $37,079. By 1989, the construction cost had more than doubled to $89,767, again, excluding the cost of land, which can add $25,000 or more to the overall home cost.

Although the county attempted to encourage more affordable home construction in 1977 by creating two zoning classifications that allowed smaller homes on small lots, few homes were built under that zoning. Task force members decided a small-lot zoning district coupled with other cost-plan. But the money measure was identical to the one Bush vetoed on Saturday, and Republicans warned Bush would veto the bill again because it lacked a provision he demanded.

Rep. Dean Gallo, R-N.J., who supported a bipartisan plan defeated by the House early Friday, said on the floor early Monday that President Bush may oppose the new Democratic-crafted budget plan.

"We just got word that the president is not in favor of the way this has been handled," Gallo said.

"We'll be reviewing the package today and awaiting the Senate vote," assistant White House press secretary Douglas Davidson said early Monday.

Debate on the budget plan opened with House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., telling colleagues, "We are tonight a government in crisis, and it is extremely important that we move forward with this budget resolution. ... We can no longer engage in just partisanship or games."

The new budget plan would still cut the huge deficit by about $40 billion in fiscal year 1991, which began Oct. 1, and by $500 billion over five years. But it would significantly reduce the Medicare cut and give the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, which is controlled by Democrats, broad latitude to devise the tax component.

The new plan, according to several Democratic congressmen, would cut Medicare spending by $42 billion over five years instead of by the $60 billion Medicare would have been cut in a bipartisan budget plan negotiated by President Bush and congressional leaders but rejected by the House early Friday.

saving incentives were required to encourage more affordable home construction.

As a result, the task force recommended creating zoning areas where homes could be built on lots about one-third the size of conventional 80- by 120-foot city lots, allowing more homes to be built on the same amount of land. They also recommended waiving some county building fees and site development requirements to further induce developers to build affordable homes.

But in return, the developers must agree to build affordable homes by signing commitments with the county.

The task force also recommended the county participate in affordable housing development through down payment assistance programs and even providing some site development for affordable subdivisions.

But whether the zoning incentives will actually encourage affordable housing to be constructed is uncertain.

Task force member Bill Miller, past president of the Home Builders Association of Mid-Florida, admits throughout the last 10 years, builders made more money by building bigger homes.

"A builder of a $60,000 to $80,000 home is not going to make the same margin (of net profit) than the builder of a $200,000 to $1 million home," said Miller.

Miller, president of Suda Inc. which specializes in building $65,000 and up homes, said a net profit margin on a $60,000 home might be 5 percent or less, compared to a 10 to 15 percent net profit on a home costing $200,000 or more. Although Miller said competition and a declining housing market have forced upper-end homes to be sold for more competitive prices, reducing profits.

But Miller said the task force's recommendations should attract more builders to the affordable market.

"We are trying to help people accomplish the American goal, which is to own your own home," Miller said. "There is extensive interest in the industry to build affordable housing, but there has been a very strong deterrent towards that by infrastructure and development costs and the high land costs. I think this will help."

Festival

"We did all this for the kids. We feel we're putting our money back into the young people of the community with the success of this festival," Steedly said.

Chairman of the Finance Committee, JoAnne Lucas, will now tally proceeds and parking results for the festival's financial report. Deserving high school and college students will benefit from the proceeds through scholarship awards.

"The festival can be the difference between a talented student hanging in there or dropping out," Steedly said.

Patches of rain did little to dampen spirits yesterday. Steedly said artists and committee persons felt the crowd, estimated at over 50,000 Saturday, was even larger Sunday. Total two-day attendance last year was 70,000.

"People just jumped inside the tents during the three little patches of rain Sunday. But they kept on coming," Steedly said.

Although traffic at times yesterday was backed up past Longwood-Lake Mary Road west on Lake Mary Boulevard, and crawled almost a mile along the interstate exit ramps to the festival, Steedly and Sgt. Mike Messer, from the Seminole County Sheriff's Department, said everyone did the best they could with record crowds.

"We parked everyone on the site. Even if they had to wait a little while to park, they didn't have to walk far when they got there," Steedly said.

"We tried to park more people than we were equipped to handle. I'd say between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. we had more cars come through than we did all day Saturday," Messer said. "Feeling that many cars onto two-lane Lake Mary Boulevard is bound to be a problem. It was frustrating," Messer said.

As tents are packed and grounds are raked, plans are being made for next year's event.

"Next year will be our fifth anniversary," Vice Chairman Larry Lucas said. "It will be an encapsulation of the first four years; so much art, so well done. We're already working on it," Lucas said.

planning on military aviation as a career, as well as member of the general public, according to Margo Barr, director of marketing for Comair.

"Emphasis of the day will be on informing people of the employment needs and requirements in the aviation industry," she said.

She said there will be a static display of a number of aircraft including military, corporate and commercial planes.

"FAPA, the Future Aviation Professionals of America, a nationwide organization, will be conducting seminars during the afternoon on the future of aviation, hiring practices and future job requirements," Barr said.

Comair, operating from a 50,000-square-foot facility at the regional airport, is a flight training school teaching not only beginning flight students, but providing classes for pilots who want to upgrade their current license classification.

A number of the nation's major commercial airline companies including Northwest, Eastern and Delta Airlines will have information booths set up, as well as displays of their aircraft to be flown in for the event.

The thrust of Sunday afternoon's program is to promote aviation as a career, whether it be military, commercial or private.

The career day event will be held from 1 to 6 p.m., near the Comair Aviation Academy's flight school area, on Flight Line Avenue at the foot of Carrier Ave., at the Central Florida Regional Airport.

BASKETBALL

A's go up 2-0

BOSTON — The longest playoff game in American League history only served to prolong Boston's frustration against the Oakland Athletics.

Bob Welch delivered the post-season start of his career and late-summer acquisition Harold Baines drove in three runs Sunday night, sending the A's halfway to an AL playoff sweep with a 4-1 victory over the Red Sox.

In a game that took three hours and 42 minutes, Welch — who had never survived the sixth inning in six post-season starts — went 7 1-3 innings. Boston tried stepping out of the box against Welch, but that didn't work and neither did much else.

He gave the A's a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series, and they can clinch their third straight pennant by winning two of the next three games. All are scheduled for Oakland Coliseum.

Before a crowd of 38,070, Welch allowed just six hits and positioned Oakland for its second sweep of the Red Sox in three seasons.

Locals excel at Showdown

From staff reports

ORLANDO — Seven students from Menefee's Martial Arts Academy in Sanford traveled to Oscar D. Alicea's American Open Karate this past weekend for the Florida Showdown.

It ended up being a very good weekend for the Sanford students according to Langston Menefee, director of Menefee's Martial Arts Academy.

"The seven fighters we took all placed," said Menefee. "It was good experience for them. This meet will help them get ready for state. If they continue to fight as well as they are right now, they all have a good chance of placing in the state championships."

The Florida Karate Championships will be held at the Orlando Expo Center on Nov. 17.

The Sanford martial artists got off to a good start as they swept the fighting portion of the Pee Wee Division. First was Talton Pooley, second was Shawn McCray, third was Mario Roberts and fourth was

Hawks tie for third at Dr. Phillips

From staff reports

ORLANDO — Buoyed by strong performances from Tanya Lewis, Joanna Abbott and Diann Lowe, the Lake Howell Silver Hawks tied for third in the Dr. Phillips girls volleyball tournament on Saturday.

Lake Howell swept through its pool without losing a game before being eliminated by the host Dr. Phillips Panthers in the semifinals 15-11, 15-7. There was no consolation final, so the Silver Hawks shared third place.

"We played them real tight in the first game," said Lake Howell Coach Jo Luciano. "Then they were pretty much in control of the second game."

"We were a little tired, but they (Dr. Phillips) had played just as much as we had. They're very well coached. They have more height and the block and hit very well. We hung in there in the first game. Then a little mental and physical fatigue set in."

The Silver Hawks breezed through pool play without really

DOUBLE TAKES

It hasn't taken Troy Todd (No. 18) very long to become a key contributor to the efforts of the Lake Mary High School football team. Already this season, Todd, a junior defensive back, has returned a pair of fumbles for touchdowns. He is also on the Rams' kickoff return team.

Try as they might, Seminole High School Coach Beth Corso (pointing) and her varsity volleyball team haven't come up with a way to beat rival Lake Mary, getting swept in two games both times this season.

No surprises in exciting first half of football season

Time flies when you're having fun.

It seems like the school year just started and we're already halfway through the varsity football season.

And the most surprising thing about the season so far, other than Lake Howell's season-opening upset loss to Winter Park, is that nothing really surprising has happened.

Everything has gone pretty much according to plan.

For starters, Seminole and Lake Howell are dominating their opponents (with the one noted exception). And both are ranked in the top 10 of their respective state polls. Seminole at No. 6 last week in the 4A rankings while Lake Howell was 10th in the 5A poll.

And there aren't any surprises about how the Seminole and Silver Hawks are going about winning games. Seminole is led by Kerry Wiggins, the county's leading passer, while Marquette Smith, the county's leading rusher, spearheads Lake Howell's attack.

The two go head-to-head in what will probably determine the Seminole Athletic Conference title on Thursday, Oct. 11, at Seminole's Thomas E. Whigham Stadium.

SPORTS

After the two leaders, the other four schools in the county are in a pack led by Lake Mary.

The Rams, led by seniors Chris Haney and Joe Menello, are playing .500 through their first four games, a marked improvement over their 0-4 start last season. So far, Lake Mary has avenged losses to Lake Brantley and Oviedo this year.

Lyman, which started 2-0 before losing its next three, and Oviedo, which started 0-2 before winning two of its next three, are both 2-3 overall and 1-2 in the conference.

For Lyman, Cedric Bouey has been a workhorse, carrying the ball 102 times for 601 yards, second-best in the county. Toby Durham has been a pleasant surprise, having rushed four times, caught four passes and scored four touchdowns.

Oviedo has experienced growing pains, so to speak, this year. Sophomores Drew Jackson, Leon Lohman and Ervin Alexander, along with junior Simon Harper, are the leaders of the Lion offense. They've exhibited remarkable talent but have been prone to inexperienced mistakes and injuries to key players, specifically four-year starting linebacker Barry Coleman.

Lake Brantley has suffered through an 0-5 start that is very deceiving. Except for the losses to state-ranked Lake Howell and undefeated Mainland, the Patriots have been in every game. Like Oviedo, Lake Brantley has talented but inexperienced players at the skill positions.

There have been several interesting individual accomplishments so far this season. To begin with, Oviedo's Frank Diaz was the only player last year to pass for a touchdown, rush for a touchdown, and catch a pass for a touchdown. This season, Seminole's Kerry Wiggins and Henry Williams have already done it.

Through Friday, the top six rushers in the county are from six different schools. After Smith and Bouey are, in order, David Sprinkle of Lake Brantley, Haney, Oviedo's Dana Allen and Seminole's Bruce McClary.

By contrast, Seminole has three of the top 10 receivers in terms of yardage. Tony Chavers and Williams are first and second while JoJo Murphy is ninth. Oviedo also has three in the top 10 with Harper (fifth), Lowman (seventh) and Alexander (10th).

It's been an exciting, if predictable, first half. If we're lucky, the second half will be more of the same.

Veterans save Dolphins

MIAMI — It was the good old days all over again for the Miami Dolphins.

Veterans Dan Marino and Mark Duper rescued the Dolphins Sunday, scoring on their first two plays of the game to rally Miami to a 30-16 victory over the New York Jets.

The Jets led 15-0 at halftime. Marino has not had the spectacular year he has enjoyed in the past because Miami, 4-1, is running more this year. But the running game failed Sunday, gaining only 72 yards.

Enter Duper and Marino. After opening the second half with an eight-play drive covering 90 yards, including an 11-yard run for a score by Mike Logan, Marino led fly with the 69-yard touchdown pass to Duper.

"Mark made some great catches for us," Marino said.

Plant strawberries through November

Strawberries! Just the mention of the word makes one's mouth water. In addition to their taste appeal and attractive appearance, strawberries are well suited to Florida conditions and are relatively easy to grow.

And now we are rapidly approaching the proper time to plant strawberries in our area.

The strawberry plant is perennial by nature, but is grown as an annual in Florida. The plant goes through a cycle of vegetative growth, flower formation, fruit production then runner development. For those of you familiar with growing strawberries in the north, it is important to note that our production season is totally reversed.

Strawberry plants should be set out during October and November. The cool nights and short days of winter stimulate the plant to produce flowers which develop into fruits ready for harvest in about a month. Plants set out in mid-October should produce ripe fruit by Christmas.

Strawberries are sensitive to climatic conditions like day length and temperature and it is important to select varieties adapted to Florida conditions. Varieties like DOVER and FLORIDA BELLE yield large fruit and are resistant to a common plant disease called anthracnose. Other recommended varieties are FLORIDA 90, TIOGA and SEQUOIA. Everbearing varieties are not recommended in Florida.

Strawberries should be planted on raised beds approximately six inches high. For a 100 square foot area, broadcast about 2 lbs. of 6-2-6 fertilizer and incorporate it into the soil before making beds. Add the same amount of fertilizer in bands six inches deep and to the side of the beds. After the beds have been formed, fertilized and well moistened, cover each with a sheet of 1/4 mil black plastic. Place soil in the edges of the plastic to hold it in place. Then cut slits in the plastic where the plants are to be inserted. Space the plants 13 inches apart in the rows.

Always start with certified, disease-free plants which are available at your favorite garden center. Keep them moist before planting. It is extremely important to plant them at the correct depth so that the crowns are not covered and the roots are not exposed. Additional information can be obtained by calling the Agricultural Center and requesting Bulletin VC-9 "Strawberries in the Florida Home Garden." With proper maintenance and a bit of luck, you should enjoy fresh strawberries in a few months!

Extension programs are open to all regardless of race, sex, creed or national origin.

Softball

Sanford Christian started Sunday but came up with three big innings in the middle of the game to drop First Nazarene.

Doing the damage in the 20-hit attack for Sanford Christian were Joe Casolin and Bruce Preston with three hits each while Sam Christian, Tom Preston, Buddy Christian, Kevin Driscoll, Chris Shupe and Dave Minton had two hits each.

Driscoll tripled while Sam Christian and Tom Preston hit doubles.

First Nazarene only came up with five singles with Jim Gilmore driving in the run and Phillip Butherford scoring.

Neighborhood Alliance scored in every inning but the fourth in handling Church of God.

Leading the home-run parade of some were Bill Bantz, Bud Curry, Scott Kaley and Paul Lindstrom with two hits each. Bryan Davis had a triple and scored three runs. Ed Davidson also scored three runs.

Church of God was led by Randy Yates with three singles and the run scored and Clayton Nichols with a double and the RBI.

Once Chapman went ahead 3-0 with three runs in the bottom of the first inning, but the Holy Cross Lutheran scored the next time to pick up the win.

Providing the offense for Holy Cross were Al Schmidt (single), Tom Hight, Gary Ringer (triple) and Jim Hight (triple) singles and John Turner, Joe White, Ed Powell and Don Owsen (two singles each).

John Gillich was the hitting star for Church of God with a double, Joe C. Schmitt with a double and Charlie Cuffield had two RBIs.
