Court upholds sobriety snares

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of sobriety checkpoint programs designed to snare drunken drivers today.

The court, in a 6-3 ruling by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, said the stops that are widely used to light drunken driving do not violate the Constitution's ban against unreasonable search and seizure.

In upholding the programs, Rehnquist noted the "magnitude of the drunken driving problem" and said that reports of "death and mutilation on the nation's roads are legion."

"Conversely, the weight bearing on the other scale — the measure of the intrusion on motorists stopped briefly at sobriety checkpoints — is slight," he wrote.

Carl Kessler, presiding judge of Montgomery County Common Pleas Court, said his endorsement of the plan is a reversal of his earlier opinion that crack addicts were incurable.

But Kessler said a visit to Miami, where acupuncture is being used with addicts, convinced him that crack addicts could be helped with intensive treatment.

Star-spangled controversy

Americans celebrate Flag Day with mixed emotions

United Press International

President Bush led an early-morning flag-raising ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial today to mark Flag Day, which this year is awash in a conflict of emotions over Old Glory.

Ever since 1916, Americans have used June 14 to celebrate the birth of the flag, which was originally approved by the Continental Congress on that date in 1777.

But the focus of Flag Day 1990 was not solely on traditional events designed to honor Old Glory.

Instead, the spotlight also fell on the raging national debate over whether desecrating the flag is a legal form of free speech and whether Congress and the states should take the major step of amending the Constitution to protect the flag.

Bush, who has led the drive for the amendment, used the day to quietly and solemnly push his cause.

Accompanied by an entourage of Secret Service, but without first lady Barbara Bush, the president arrived at the Vietnam memorial adjacent to the Lincoln Memorial at about 6:35 a.m. EDT.

Old Glory becomes issue in gubernatorial campaign

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Bob Martinez promised Wednesday to promote a constitutional amendment forbidding desecration of the U.S. flag, while his leading Democratic opponent was endorsed by a key Panhandle Republican.

Campaigning for reelection in Madison County, Martinez also linked his current crusade against dirty rap music lyrics to his "quality of life" campaign theme, stressing initiatives in crime, environmental protection, ethics reform, education and tax policy.

Noting that today is Flag Day, Martinez said he is considering calling a special session immediately following the November elections to push an anti-flag-burning amendment through the Legislature.

For the second time, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled last Monday that burning the flag is a protected form of political free speech. A bipartisan group of congressional leaders has vowed to get an amendment through both chambers and submit it to the states for ratification before the Fourth of July.

"These values were inculcated in me."

Local residents offer range of opinions

From staff reports

As flags waved in honor of Flag Day across Seminole County this morning, local residents voiced a range of opinions on the recent Supreme Court decision on flag burning and efforts in Congress and in Tallahassee to make such a display illegal.

Many people said they were opposed to a state law or constitutional amendment forbidding flag burning.

Connie Li, an immigrant from China who lives in DeBary, believes Americans take their freedoms for granted and should be taught respect rather than be forced to do things by law.

"I think Americans have no respect for anything," Li said. "The flag represents this country and children should be taught to respect it. We don't need laws or changing the

Recycling of garbage gets closer

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — By October, Seminole County residents probably will have three plastic bins at their homes to toss in aluminum cans and plastic and glass bottles.

Members of the Seminole County intergovernmental task force on solid waste voted Wednesday to recommend awarding the county recycling contract to Southeast Recycling Corp. of Longwood to collect all the recyclable materials collected in the unincorporated portions of the county plus any cities electing to participate in the county program.

Cities may establish their own recycling programs or opt to participate in Seminole County's program. Lake Mary and Altamonte Springs already have established curbside programs.

The task force also voted to divide the approximately 44,000 unincorporated homes appearing on county tax roles among the 12 current hauling companies, requiring each to provide recycling bins to residents without charge. If approved by county commissioners, the establishment of the franchise areas could occur Sept. 1 this year, meaning many residents may have new garbage haulers.

The recommendations will be reviewed by Seminole County commissioners July 24.

The task force recommendations culminated 18 months of research into ways the county can meet the state's mandate to decrease the amount of garbage going to garbage dumps 30 percent by 1994.

Garbage haulers won a concession and lost a concession Wednesday.

They asked task force members to continue their current six-day hauling schedule, which they said would allow them to pay for new garbage trucks quicker and prevent long delays at the county dump or transfer station. The six days would allow them to continue three twice-weekly pickup schedules, they said.

County commissioner Bob Sturm, chairman of the task force, said task force members sought a five day schedule to prevent garbage trucks from driving through neighborhoods on Saturdays, when there are more children and cars on the streets.

John Jennings, president of Dumpall Inc. and a task force member, said with only five days, haulers would have to contend with only two twice-weekly pickups.

COMMUNITY LEADERS

Lucia Weaver accepts Woman of the Year Award from Kiwanis Awards Chairman William Fraasa during Wednesday ceremony.

Kiwanis honors volunteer

By J. BRADLEY DILLING
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The Sanford Kiwanis Club yesterday presented Lucia Weaver with the club's Woman of the Year award.

Weaver, who appeared moved to the verge of tears as club members stood in line to congratulate her, said, "I couldn't believe it." She referred to the contributions that Bill Fraasa, the club's Awards Chairman, cited as criteria for the award.

"I just do it because I enjoy doing things. I thank the Lord for it. When I found out ... I just sort of sat around in a daze," she said.

Weaver was nominated for the award by the Sanford Seniors Club.

Fraasa said the criteria for the award was that the individual be a member in good standing of the organization that sponsored her, that she is recognized as a civic and community leader either in the pursuit of her club's activities or service within her community, and that she is chosen for services performed over and above those normally expected of her by her club or organization.

"She works harder than I do," her son Claude Weaver laughed. "I

Mercer named Rotary district governor

By J. BRADLEY DILLING
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — When John Mercer was named Governor of Rotary International's District 6998, encompassing central Florida, it probably didn't come as too much of a surprise to local club members.

Mercer has been a member of the club for 40 years and has garnered a perfect attendance record for 35 of them.

Mercer is retired banker and currently serves as Chairman of the Advisory Board of Southeast Bank in Seminole County.

As governor, Mercer will be responsible for organizing new Rotary Clubs and strengthening the 63 existing ones everywhere from Sanford south to Okeechobee and from Stuart west to Wildwood.

"I'll go visit all of them at least once, and some of them more than that," Mercer said.

Rotary official John Mercer

In his 26 years in Sanford, Mercer has served as president of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, Chairman of the Airport Authority and as a member of the Sanford City Commission.

Upon taking office July 1, this year, Mercer's first priority as rotary governor will be to institute project RISE: Rotarians Involved Serving Education.

Although the idea is in the talking stages, Mercer said that the goal for the Rotarian clubs in district 6998 is to offer any help that they can to keep kids in school.

"We were really upset last fall when we heard that said Florida had one of the highest high school dropout rates in the country," Mercer said. "We really have to do something about that. We'll do it with one-on-one counseling or as a group — however we can."

Mercer said that he joined the Rotarians 40 years ago when a friend invited him to a meeting.

Governor undecided on growth veto

LIVE OAK — Gov. Bob Martinez said he is undecided on whether to sign a measure that would exempt many smaller towns and less-populated counties from some provisions of the state's growth management law.

Martinez made his remarks Wednesday during a campaign swing through north Florida.

Environmentalists have urged Martinez to veto the measure, saying some of those areas communities represent the most pristine portions the state.

The Legislature approved a bill earlier this month that would allow less populated areas to be exempt from some state requirements. Current law requires all cities and counties in the state to submit growth plans to the state Department of Community Affairs for approval.

The measure would allow counties with fewer than 25,000 people and cities with populations of less than 3,500 people to apply for the exemption.

Convicted murderer denied new trial

TAMPA — A man convicted in last year's murder of a Domino's Pizza manager has been denied a new trial.

Hillsborough County Circuit Judge Manuel Menendez denied the request of Stephen James Oakley for a new trial, despite the introduction of a surprise witness in the case.

Oakley was convicted of killing Domino's Pizza manager Max Bagwell in the Brandon area last November. He faces at least 25 years in prison without the possibility of parole.

Bagwell was Oakley's boss at the time he was killed. Oakley claimed during the trial that Bagwell was shot by Christopher Abbott, the state's star witness in the case.

Abbott also was charged with murder in the case, but charges were dropped in return for his testimony. Three witnesses testified that Abbott was at home when the killing took place.

In May a surprise witness showed up at Oakley's sentencing hearing with testimony that matched Oakley's story, but the judge rejected the plea for a new trial, noting there were too many questions about the testimony.

State control of water urged

BROOKSVILLE — A Pinellas County commissioner is calling for the creation of a state agency to control Florida's water supply.

Pinellas County Commission Chairman Charles Rainey says Florida's problem with water is not one of supply, but rather one of distribution.

Rainey contends a central state agency would do a better job of deciding how to provide needed water in various parts of the state.

Rainey said agency could arrange for the transfer of water from north Florida to central and south Florida, where it is needed. But Estus Whitfield, an advisor to Gov. Bob Martinez, says getting agreement to such a plan would be a political impossibility.

Suicide machine debated

ORLANDO — Although the so-called suicide machine in Michigan has sparked legal and ethical questions, a health care expert told a convention of retired people that debate about the case is healthy.

James Speer told delegates to the American Association of Retired Persons convention Wednesday that the case of Jack Kevorkian, the Michigan doctor whose patient recently used a machine to kill herself, is disturbing.

But Speer said the case has made people think, and that is constructive.

Speer, who is on the faculty of the University of Washington School of Medicine, said the right-to-die issue has been under discussion for years within the medical community.

Disney ignites 'Dick Tracy' premiere

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Walt Disney Co. geared up Wednesday for the splashy, star-studded premiere of "Dick Tracy," a $35 million movie, starring producer-director Warren Beatty and Madonna.

Beatty, Madonna and co-stars Dustin Hoffman, Al Pacino, Mandy Patinkin and Paul Sorvino were expected at today's world premiere, which is being held at an unadorned multiplex theater on Disney property.

The Touchstone Pictures movie is based on the comic strip character created by Chester Gould. His daughter, Jean Gould O'Connell, was to be on hand, as were Dick Locher and Max Allen Collins, who now draw the strip.

The stars are scheduled to attend the screening, then motor down a re-created Hollywood Boulevard at the nearby Disney-MGM Studios Theme Park and place their handprints in cement.

The Tracy premiere is the highlight of a weekend of star appearances and movie screenings at Disney Florida.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Blast rips through Miami museum

United Press International

MIAMI — A powerful bomb exploded early Thursday at the Cuban Museum of Arts and Culture, causing extensive damage to the front of the building but no injuries, police and museum officials said.

The museum, which has been at the center of a political controversy within Miami's large Cuban community, was rocked by the explosion, which occurred shortly before 1:30 a.m. EDT, said Miami Police spokesman Angelo Bitis.

"The FBI has classified this as a political terrorist act," he said.

Oswaldo Monzon, the museum's executive director, said the blast damaged the front of the building and three works of art inside, valued at $10,000.

"There was no one inside at the time," he said.

Bitis said the bomb blasted a small crater in the sidewalk in front of the building, about one foot in diameter and two inches deep.

Monzon said the FBI evacuated nearby homes following the blast, and established a four-block perimeter around the building, as agents searched for clues into the explosion.

Monzon said a bomb had exploded outside the museum once before, in 1988.

"This is much more extensive. The FBI described it as a high density bomb. The other was a projectile," he said.

"At this point, I have absolutely no idea why anyone would want to cause such destruction," he said. "I think the community is in a tense situation right now, when very important subjects are being discussed." Including the possibility of a dialogue between exiles and the Cuban government.

"I believe the museum is being targeted because it took the role of a museum seriously, and refused to censor art," Monzon added. "The museum is a cultural institution. It has no political stand. It does have a very strong stand that art should not be censored on the basis of a political ideology."

Miami's Cuban community has been rocked by periodic explosions for a number of years. Most of those bombings have been linked to political disputes.

The museum touched off a controversy in 1988 when it auctioned off a number of paintings by Cuban artists. A group of museum directors resigned at the time, charging that some of the artists had not renounced all ties with Cuban dictator Fidel Castro.

The museum was rocked by an explosion several weeks later, Monzon said.

The disgruntled directors later formed a group called the Cuban Museum Rescue Committee, and since have sought to oust the current management, which is considered more moderate and pragmatic.

In December, the group convinced the Miami City Council to vote to evict the museum, which occupies a city owned building, but the council later backed down after learning it did not have legal grounds to proceed.

The museum currently is displaying works by artists who left Cuba in the 1980 boatlift from Mariel. Monzon said the exhibit has not been controversial.

"We have not had any controversy for the past six months," he said.

However, the blast comes at a time when the museum is making progress in its efforts to raise money and solidify its presence in Miami, Monzon said.

"It comes at a crucial time," he said. "Those who have always wanted to see the museum destroyed have picked the right time to do so."

Although the museum will be forced to close temporarily, Monzon said the closing would not be permanent.

"The museum will not close," he said.

Judge blocks KKK rally plans

United Press International

BROOKSVILLE — A judge Wednesday blocked a move by a white supremacist to organize a rally this weekend to protest the death of a white teenager in a fight with blacks last month.

Hernando County Circuit Judge John W. Booth ruled that Tony Bastanzio, a former imperial wizard of the Dixie Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, had a First Amendment right to organize the rally, but had failed to obtain a permit.

Bastanzio and his followers "are enjoined and prohibited from marching or meeting within the city of Brooksville," until they apply and are issued a permit by the city, Booth wrote in his court order.

The city Booth wrote, must "accept and act on such application in a reasonable time."

Brooksville and Hernando County officials had sought an injunction to block the rally from being held for 45 days, to allow time for local tensions to ease.

Racial tensions in the southwest Florida town have been strained since the May 19 death of Russell Coats, 19, who was killed in a brawl between groups of whites and blacks.

Bastanzio, who has organized three Ku Klux Klan rallies in the last two years in Brooksville, vowed to organize a rally of white supremacists Saturday if civil rights and hate crime charges weren't brought against the seven blacks facing first-degree murder charges.

The exposure that has accompanied the rallies in Brooksville, Bastanzio said, could be used as a launching pad to Tallahassee.

Malaria advisory issued

UPI report

TALLAHASSEE — Residents and campers in Gulf County were warned Wednesday to use mosquito netting and repellent following confirmation that a camper has contracted malaria.

"There's some evidence it may have come in from out of state through another carrier," Adams added. A mosquito that fed off the suspected carrier might have subsequently bitten the camper, passing along the disease, he said.

The case involves a person who spent Memorial Day weekend camping in the Willis Landing area of Gulf County.

"This appears to be an isolated case, and there is no danger this person passed malaria on to anyone else," said State Epidemiologist Robert Calder. "This is because transmission of this disease from one person to another requires development in a mosquito for approximately 10 days."

Calder said HRS is now trying to determine if there are any more cases of malaria in the Willis Landing area, and to identify the source of the disease within Florida.

In most cases, malaria is easily treatable with the anti-parasitic drug Chloroquine. Common symptoms include chills, rapidly rising temperatures, headaches, nausea and profuse sweating.

Blue Angel pilot blamed for collision

UPI report

PENSACOLA — Pilot error caused the collision of two Blue Angel jets during a practice session in January, but the pilot should not be punished because he followed proper procedure, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

Marine Corps Maj. Charles Moseley, 34, was faulted for the Jan. 23 collision with Cmdr. Pat Moneymaker, 43, near the team's winter practice airfield at El Centro, Calif. The Pensacola News Journal reported.

Even though he was faulted for causing the accident, a Navy report of the investigation obtained by the News Journal said that Moseley followed proper procedures before and during the accident, and was therefore not negligent.

The accident occurred when Moseley tried to clear formation because his F/A-18 Hornet was not flying smoothly. Moseley said that as he tried to clear formation he realized his plane was too close to Moneymaker's jet.

New space shuttle's maiden flight will be rescue mission

By WILLIAM HARWOOD
UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA will mount a bold spacewalk-rescue mission during the 1992 maiden flight of the new shuttle Endeavour to rescue a $150 million communications satellite stranded in a useless orbit, officials say.

The owner of the Intelsat 6 satellite — the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization — agreed Wednesday to pay NASA some $90 million to attempt the dramatic rescue.

The organization also will award a contract to satellite-builder Hughes Aircraft Co. of El Segundo, Calif., to supply a new booster rocket for the crippled satellite along with other required equipment.

"All of us at NASA are pleased with today's announcement," said former astronaut Robert Crippen, director of the shuttle program. "The rescue offers us the opportunity for expanding our experience base in the planning, training and performance of (spacewalks)."

NASA has tentatively scheduled the flight for February 1992, the first voyage of the space shuttle Endeavour, which is being built in California to replace the ill-fated Challenger.

Endeavour also is scheduled to carry a science satellite into orbit.

The mission, the fourth satellite rescue flight attempted by NASA, will cost Intelsat about $90 million, subject to negotiation, with an initial payment of $4 million required by July 2.

The Intelsat 6 spacecraft, the most powerful commercially built television, telephone and data-relay satellite ever built, was stranded in a useless orbit March 14 when it failed to separate properly from the second stage of its Titan 3 launch rocket because of an improperly wired Titan ejection system.

The only way to get the satellite away from the spent second stage was to separate it from a rocket booster that was to have fired the relay station toward its planned orbit 22,300 miles above the equator.

Engineers then sent radio commands to fire on-board liquid-fueled thrusters to boost the satellite into a stable 345-mile-high orbit where it will be safe until the rescue mission is mounted.

The rescue plan calls for Endeavour to carry a new "perigee kick motor" into orbit to replace the one cut away from Intelsat 6. After the shuttle completes a rendezvous, two space-walking astronauts will bolt the satellite to the motor.

Accused masked robber arrested

SANFORD — A man accused as a masked robber of the Coastal Mart, 2623 S. Orlando Drive, Sanford, at about 10:35 p.m. Monday has been arrested by Sanford police.

WINTER SPRINGS — A man who allegedly grabbed a woman by the neck and hit her hip with a fencepost during a Winter Springs fight was arrested there by city police.

Kenneth Thomas Carter, 30, 160 N. Fairfax St., Winter Springs, was arrested at home at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday. He is accused of also hitting another woman in the face to try to keep her from calling police to his house during the fight. Neither victim was named in a police report. Carter is charged with aggravated battery and battery.

Telson slams board's selections

All-male, all-white advisory group approved by board

By VICKI DeBORMIER

SANFORD — Seminole County School Board member Pat Telson is disappointed with the selection of people named to the Business Advisory Committee selection committee.

"There's not a woman on the list," she said. "And, as far as I can tell, there is not a minority either."

The Business Advisory Committee, composed of business and industry leaders from Seminole County who are chosen to give advice to the board in the business decisions that they make. It was originally hoped the committee would help the board better use money from a $519 million bond issue to build new schools.

When the bond referendum failed to win approval of the voters in February, the board decided to form the committee to get business input in their discussions on ways to deal with tight budgetary restrictions in the face of unprecedented growth in Seminole County.

Telson said she was worried that the board had not been given the opportunity to review more than a collection of resumes before they were asked to approve or reject the slate of nominees. They were expected to accept or reject the whole list of selectees rather than pick and choose the members they wanted from the selection committees' choices.

"I think it would behoove the board to meet these people before we make any final decisions about making any final decisions," she said.

Board chairman Ann Neiswender said she also found it unfortunate that there were no women placed on the slate by the selection committee, but there were only two women who asked to be considered for any of the 15 spots on the committee.

Member Joe Williams was also upset at the lack of minorities and women represented on the committee.

"But," he said, "I'm in a quandry. We should have a better representation of minorities and women, but we are behind schedule with this committee as it is. I believe we should let the committee begin operation."

All board members expressed a displeasure with the choices of the selection committee, but agreed with Williams' assessment of the situation.

"We need to get going with this," member Nancy Warren said. "We will be doing the budget soon and we will need their input."

With Telson and member Larry Betsinger voting against accepting the slate of nominees, the board voted 3-2 in favor of the committee.

Brothers charged in blackjack beating

By SUSAN LODEN

SANFORD — A 22-year-old DeBary man is charged with aggravated battery and his brother is being sought by police for allegedly beating their uncle with an axe handle and blackjack in rural Sanford.

James Fredrick Allen was jailed by Seminole County sheriff's investigators at about 1:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Investigator Kevin Crozier reported the victim Albert Bint 38, was called out of his house at 4357 State Road 46, rural Sanford, by the suspect who remains free today. That man Charles Nelson Allen, 22, allegedly met Bint on his back porch and tried to prod him into a fight at about 11:30 p.m. Sunday. Crozier said there is apparently, an on-going family dispute involving the two suspects and their uncle.

A witness told Crozier she heard Charles Allen say, "Just do something so I can hit you." Bint reportedly replied, "I don't want to fight you."

Charles Allen allegedly took a blackjack from his pants pocket, and according to Bint, beat Bint on the head with the blackjack. James Allen allegedly approached Bint from behind and hit him at least twice across the back with an axe handle. Bint passed out.

The witness told Crozier she came out of the house and saw James Allen standing over the victim's body while holding an axe handle. She said he pointed the handle at her and threatened her as she fled to call sheriff's deputies. When she returned to the house the witness said she found Bint standing on the porch alone, bleeding from head wounds. He was transported to Orlando Regional Medical Center, where it took more than 100 stitches to close his wounds. Crozier said. Bint has been released from the hospital.

James Fredrick Allen was arrested at 718 Monroe Harbor Place, Sanford. Crozier said Charles Allen was still being sought early today and faces the same charge of aggravated battery in the case.

Beach attire regulations met with outrage, apathy

By DE'ANN WEIMER

Florida's new beach wear dress code designed to keep sun worshippers from baring it all or nearly all in revealing swimwear on state beaches sparked outrage among beachgoers Wednesday and apathy among local officials.

"I like bathing with my top off," said Shelly Soel, 20, a topless bather on Miami Beach. "How you sunbathe is your own business. This is censorship. They're just taking away our freedoms."

"If they tell me I can't wear this (a G-string style suit), I'll just go without one. I love to see the young ladies walking about in them," said Bob Holloway, 50, as he sunbathed on Miami Beach

Astronomer: Bright lights polluting nighttime skies

United Press International

ORLANDO — An internationally known Arizona astronomer has brought his campaign against light pollution to Florida, saying the number of bright lights being burned at night should be cut back.

Astronomer David Crawford, who works at the Kitt Peak National Observatory near Tucson, Ariz., said light pollution from the world's cities is destroying the view of the nighttime sky — even for professional astronomers with powerful telescopes.

This destruction is comparable to spoiling a pristine forest and must be stopped, Crawford said. He is visiting light-saturated cities like Orlando, around the country with his warning.

"In a few years the only place people will be able to see the universe is in a planetarium," said Crawford, who made an appearance in Orlando Wednesday. "The idea of lighting is to improve visibility, not destroy it at night."

The astronomer has worked with some Western cities to develop strict outdoor lighting ordinances that are helping to decrease the glow of growing urban areas.

Crawford also is executive director of the International Dark Sky Association, a 500-member group that promotes the use of efficient, directed lighting outdoors.

Samaritan deserves Navy praise

Cmdr. Mitchell Grayson deserves a medal, not a fine. If San Diego Naval Hospital plastic surgeons are allowed to perform liposuction and tummy tucks, surely a surgeon who works for free to correct deformities in poor Mexican children is worthy of commendation.

Instead, the Navy has levied a fine of $2,000 against Grayson, a Naval Hospital surgeon, for using a few government medical utensils to perform surgery to correct cleft palates and cleft lips on Tijuana, Mexico, children whose families cannot afford such medical treatment. Grayson is well-known for his volunteer work in performing surgery in the Third World. Three years ago, he founded the San Diego Chapter of Operation Smile, a organization that provides free medical care worldwide.

The Navy should be proud of this Good Samaritan. Instead, the Naval Investigative Service spent more than four months investigating his alleged crimes, and then Grayson was reprimanded by his commanding officer at the Naval Hospital.

Ironically, this is the same hospital where San Diego Tribune reporter Jim Michaels discovered that Navy surgeons were performing liposuction, tummy tucks and other cosmetic operations on members of the service, their spouses and retirees — all at the expense of taxpayers.

In an era when plastic surgeons become millionaires, it is gratifying to hear about a doctor like Grayson, who has continued performing free surgery at a Tijuana clinic despite his harassment by Navy command. What's more, we believe U.S. taxpayers would much rather see a few government-owned surgery utensils used to help poor, deformed children than pay the hospital costs of removing cellulite from flabby thighs or taking a few inches off the waistline with a scalpel.

While the use of government equipment must be closely monitored, the Navy should proudly take part in local charitable causes by allowing some medical equipment to be used in helping the less fortunate.

No. 17

After all the similar reports, the report issued by the United Nations on quality of life around the world is hardly news. Still for the United States, which used to take for granted that it had the world's highest standard of living, this report ought to be something of a cold bath.

In the United Nation's definition, life expectancy, adult literacy and general access to a "decent standard of living" — meaning health care, decent housing, schooling — are large parts of the standard. The first 10 nations on the list are Japan, Sweden, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Canada, Norway, Australia, France, Denmark and Britain. The United States ranks 17th, tied with Ireland and Austria, and just ahead of Israel and East Germany.

One can argue with the criteria, but there's no arguing with the fact that the gaps between rich and poor in this country — between those who can and can't afford decent housing and health care and schools — are larger than in any developed nation on earth. Should anyone be surprised, therefore, that in measuring social progress against economic capacity, the United States gets poor marks? That isn't something that just happened to us. It's the result of a conscious choice the country has made. And by a conscious choice, the country could get itself out of it, if it wanted to.

Democrats accused of mischief

WASHINGTON — Democrats are charging that a top White House political aide pulled a dirty trick to embarrass Massachusetts Democrats and sabotage their state political convention.

The Democratic convention at the Springfield Civic Center was disrupted for several hours when a local police union — with close ties to White House operative Ronald Kaufman — suddenly set up picket lines and tried to prevent delegates from entering the auditorium. Reportedly, the picket line was manned not only by local off-duty police, but also by off-duty officers from both Rhode Island and Connecticut.

The picketing virtually shut down the convention at a time when delegates were supposed to be voting for the gubernatorial nominee. Many delegates were union officials or members and so would not cross the picket lines. Others who tried were jostled by pickets. The incident ended several hours later when a state judge issued an emergency order declaring the picketing illegal.

Kaufman is being accused of masterminding the picketing from a hotel in nearby Holyoke, where he spent the weekend along with Alexander Tennant, executive director of the Massachusetts state Republican Party. The two deny any involvement, saying they were near the Democratic convention site to act as commentators for several television stations.

Kaufman, who is from Massachusetts, was a top staffer in George Bush's 1988 campaign there. He was responsible for using the pollution in Boston Harbor as an issue to attack Gov. Michael Dukakis and also for getting a number of police unions — including Springfield's — to endorse Bush.

Robert Jacobson, head of the union, declined to talk about the incident. He has already told reporters that Kaufman had nothing to do with the action, and he also denied that the pickets had physically accosted delegates trying to get into the hall.

Kaufman originally told reporters that he had not even talked with Jacobson that weekend.

The Democratic convention was disrupted for several hours when a local police union set up picket line.

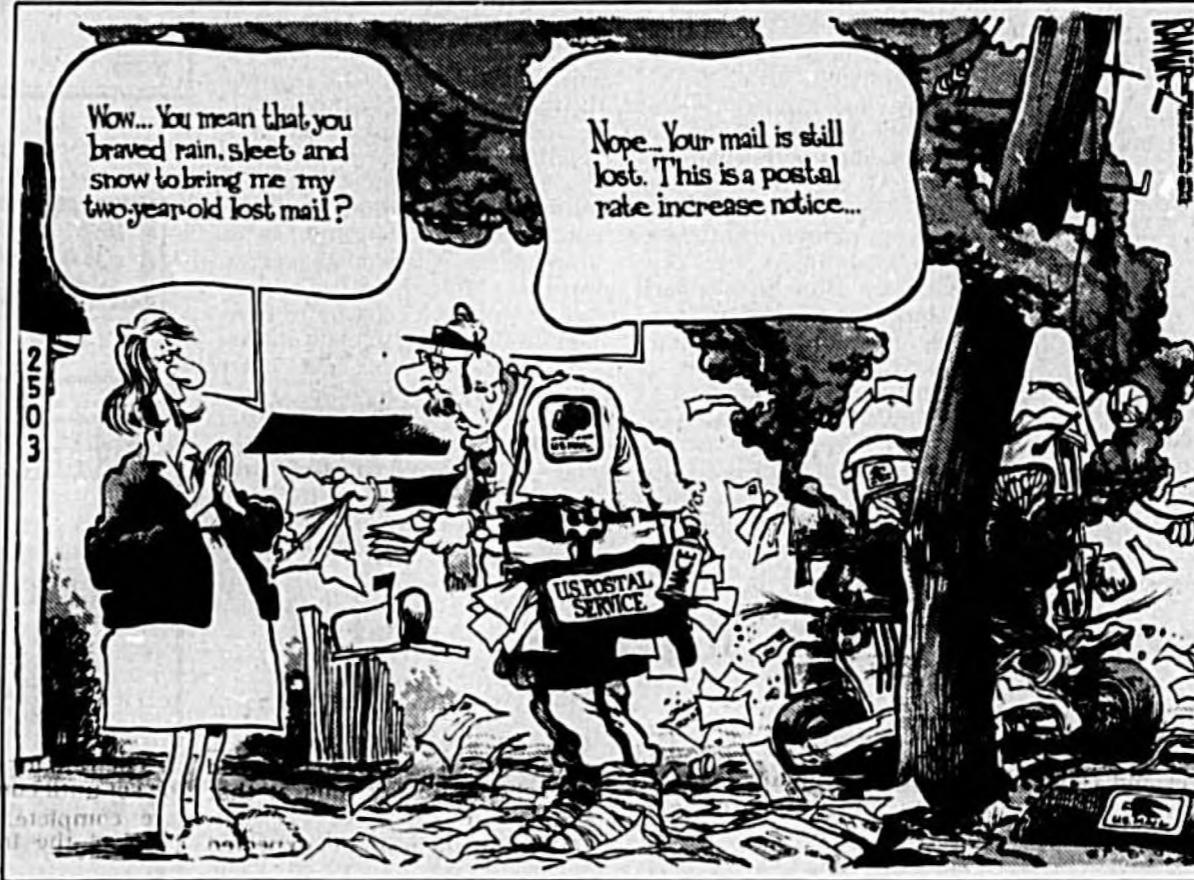

However, he later admitted that he "spoke briefly" with Jacobson the night before the convention. But, Kaufman insists, their meeting had nothing to do with picketing.

Meanwhile, local news stories quote police union sources as saying that Jacobson and five other union officials met with Kaufman at length when the police officers were in Washington several weeks ago for a ceremony honoring officers killed in the line of duty.

Jacobson acknowledges that meeting, but denies that plans to picket were ever discussed.

Kaufman, one of the top White House political operatives, is deputy personnel director in charge of political hiring. Kaufman is also the brother-in-law of Andrew Card, who is Chief of Staff John Sununu's top deputy. Card, also from Massachusetts, was widely rumored to be considering a run for the state's GOP gubernatorial nomination this year, though he finally took himself out of the running.

Sununu, Card and Kaufman are reportedly very active in Massachusetts gubernatorial politics. Given the state's budget crisis, new taxes and Dukakis' popularity slide, the GOP has visions of wresting control of the state from the Democrats.

GEORGE F. WILL

Brits rebel against 'Thatcherism'

LONDON — The red flag has been furled. Neil Kinnock is socialism's white flag of surrender. The death of the socialist idea in its myriad forms is represented not only by the fall of East European regimes but also by the rise of Kinnock as the re-definer of Britain's Labor Party. He soon will have been leader of the opposition longer (since 1983) than anyone in British history.

It is said (even by some of his Labor colleagues) that he would be the most intellectually negligible prime minister since the 1832 reform bill began the broadening of democracy. He speaks with what friends call Welsh brio but what actually is the garulousness of a mind through which winds blow. He is more prolix than Hubert Humphrey was, but without Humphrey's honest passions or serious purposes. His wife is seriously left-wing and severely anti-American, but he is Labor's post-socialist persona: amiability substituting for ideology.

A critic says Kinnock has the sort of problem with adjectives that alcoholics have with whiskey: overindulgence. But it is with nouns denoting substance that socialists nowadays are abstemious.

When Labor came to power after the war a party leader solved the definitional problem by saying that socialism is whatever a Labor government does. But there has been no Labor government to do anything for 11 years, and all that Kinnock says about what the next one would do amounts to (this from a bemused conservative) supply-side socialism. That is, it would do what all governments do — spend on education, training, infrastructure — only more of it.

Kinnock's task, to which he is sublimely suited, is to be so bland that conservatives seem overwrought when they say that electing a Labor government would be "an act of national recidivism, squarely against the grain of the times." The grain of recent times has indeed run rightward in the nations with the three strongest capitalist economies (the United States, Germany, Japan). In the fourth strongest, France, reality quickly drove President Mitterrand off a socialist path eight years ago.

Nowadays Britain's gun-shy socialists confine themselves to statements that are false as history and vacuous as promises. For example, "Our basic stance should be that there is nothing inherently unsocialist about the market mechanism... if properly regulated and monitored." However, Labor occasionally commits the sin of specificity, as when proposing that "the lowest-paid worker will receive an hourly rate of not less than two-thirds of that received by the male median full-time worker." So a "properly regulated and monitored" labor market would aim for the old egalitarianism that produced an economy with "the British disease" and then three consecutive conservative governments.

Kinnock trots out the tired old praise of Sweden's "middle way." Such praise is not much heard in Sweden nowadays and, anyway, Sweden is clearly a capitalist society, albeit one suffocating beneath statism. A plausible criticism of conservative policies — that in the name of consumer sovereignty they have produced too much consumption and too little investment — sounds, when coming from socialists, even from the reformed sort, like a coded call for "planning," the old socialist dislike of any social result that is not compulsory.

Down the years, the label "socialism" has denoted a multitude of sins but in Western Europe it has always been, for middle-class adherents, a rationale for editing and improving the tastes of the masses. But aside from censorious intellectuals, socialism has had far too few middle-class adherents.

The very name of Kinnock's party — Labor — testifies to a wrong turn socialism took long ago. The study of socialism is now almost entirely retrospective and focused on failure. This is partly because of developments early in the century.

Both theory and practice — Marxism's identification of the industrial proletariat as the engine of history, and worries about the working class defecting to communism — caused socialist parties to define themselves on a class basis. Thus the socialist movement became self-consciously working class and turned into a cul-de-sac. Capitalism did not produce an ever-larger and more militant working class. Capitalism did not even guarantee a perpetual majority of industrial workers.

Today, a fashionable formulation, earnestly discussed by what remains of the socialist intelligentsia, is "Fordism," a category coined long ago by an Italian communist. We live, say today's socialist thinkers, in a post-Ford period.

Henry Ford pioneered production with large industrial units served by armies of unskilled or semi-skilled workers. But then came affluence, product differentiation, market research, advertising, packaging, design.

All that Kinnock says about what the next one would do amounts to supply-side socialism.

Desperate emigres bilked over visas

WASHINGTON — Many would-be emigrants will do almost anything to get out of oppressive countries, and those who have money will pay almost anything. The combination of desperation and cash is like a beacon to con artists.

Some residents of Hong Kong were hoodwinked into buying bogus visas to non-existent islands in the Pacific. They were in a hurry to get out of Hong Kong before the Chinese government takes it over in 1997, but the only place they were taken was to the cleaners.

Some Hong Kong residents thought they had bought their way into Venezuela. But in February, Venezuela's top immigration official, Felix Arroyo, was fired after Chinese immigrants began appearing in his country carrying fake visas with his signature on them.

According to local police, more than 1,000 people had bought fraudulent visas for nearly $10,000 each through the Venezuelan consul in Hong Kong.

The immigrants are now being detained in Venezuela as the investigation into the multimillion-dollar racket continues. Sources tell us that Arroyo was the second Venezuelan immigration chief fired for falsifying documents.

Venezuela isn't the only place with a visa problem. Last year, authorities in Paraguay issued arrest warrants for four former Cabinet members known as the "golden quartet." Among their many crimes under the rule of former dictator Alfredo Stroessner was the sale of Paraguayan immigration papers to high-bidding foreigners.

For years, Asians have paid top dollar for bogus Paraguayan documents. International terrorists have also bought papers through the racket. Although at least two of the former Paraguayan Cabinet members have been arrested, sources told our associate Dean Boyd that officials in the new government are up to the same old tricks.

High ranking government ministers have been fingered, but the local authorities lack the stomach to investigate the charges.

Ciro Noriega, the consulate general of Panama under his uncle Manuel Noriega, has also been accused of running an illegal passport ring in Hong Kong. Panamanian immigration officials estimate that since 1985 people in China and Hong Kong paid between $10,000 and $15,000 each for papers to enter Panama.

The profit from a single document sale amounted to more than the annual salary of many of the Panamanian bureaucrats involved in the scam. Panama has allowed many of the unfortunate immigrants to stay, but some 1,200 have been sent back home. Cubans trying to get away from Fidel Castro have met a similar fate at the hands of Manuel Noriega and his minions. Over the years, Panama has had a deal with the United States and Cuba to allow Cuban emigrants to stay in Panama while they apply for U.S. visas. In reality, the halfway house concept has been hell for the Cubans. Thousands of them were stranded in Panama for nearly a decade and harassed by the Noriega regime. Noriega's people would routinely seize the Cubans' passports when they arrived and then charge the Cubans $300 to get their own documents back.

Other Panamanians specialized in preying on the Cubans by selling them fake documents. Roberto Diaz Herrera, a former aide to Noriega, is reported to have made a personal fortune off the Cubans.

For years, Asians have paid top dollar for bogus Paraguayan documents.

constitution. We need to teach respect."

An employee of the states attorney's office who declined to give her name thought Americans should spend their time and energies on more important matters.

"We worry too damn much about flags, bare buns and rap music," she said. "This country is going to hell and we're worried about the flag. If we spent as much time worrying about crime, education and homelessness, we'd be better off."

Rev. Steve Stevens, 57, pastor at Lake Mary Presbyterian Church, said he was "100 percent opposed to flag burning, but also 100 percent opposed to a constitutional amendment on it."

"Once you begin making amendments, you open the flood gates for other amendments, and whether or not one believes that the first amendment should be changed, something like this will definitely damage that amendment, and our freedoms are too precious to do that," Stevens said.

A number of people spoke out in favor of making flag burning illegal, while opposing any measure to tamper with the nation's constitution.

David McFadden, retired from Navy after 30 years and now living in Sanford, believes flag burning is not a right and should be made illegal.

"If we don't make it a law, we'll be in very, very big trouble," McFadden said. "Burning the flag is treason. To me, I don't know if it is a moral question or a question of patriotism, but I know that God and the flag are together. From the time I was a Boy Scout, to the time I was sworn into the Navy and the time I retired from the Navy, I respected that flag. When I die they'll give me a beautiful flag over my casket. That's my right for serving my country. Burning the flag is not a right. If someone wants to wrap themselves up in a flag and pour gasoline over themselves then I'm all for them burning that flag, but other than that...no way."

Linda Teeter, 42, Lake Mary, said, "I understand what they (Supreme Court) want by protecting certain freedoms but we need to do something to protect our flag."

James Mathews, 50, Lake Mary, said, "Whenever we have something like this, like a flag burning ban, there are those who say it's cutting into their freedom, into their Constitutional rights. But I don't think our forefathers who wrote the Constitution meant it to be that way."

Pat Duffy, 52, Lake Mary, said, "It's a disgrace that they're burning the flag, and it's ridiculous that we can't do something to prevent it. It's the symbol of our country and people who burn it should be punished. If they want to burn the flag it shows they don't believe in our country and they should be made to leave."

Bob Boyce, 43, Lake Mary, said he was fully against flag burning, that "there should be a Constitutional Amendment against it."

Marian Emory, a cashier at Touchton's Rexall Pharmacy and a Sanford resident, was in favor of making flag burning illegal.

"I think they should put a fellow in jail if he burns a flag," Boyce said. "It should be a law. I mean the flag is America. It is what we are. Burning flags isn't freedom of speech, but we can't go messing with the constitution about it."

Langston Ross, of Delton... a retired handy man, would like to protect the flag against desecration with a law.

"We need to protect the flag from these people who think that burning it and wearing it on their asses is freedom of expression," Ross said. "Growing up, I thought it was a law, that's what they told us. Just make it a law so we can force people to at least pretend to respect it. I think adding a constitutional amendment just opens the door to all kinds of weirdos getting their own amendments on the constitution too."

Glenn Horton, an unemployed carpenter from Sanford, said, "I think we need a law that tells these jerks who burn the flag that we're gonna punish them if they burn it. We can't let them keep doing this. I don't want to screw with the constitution though. If we do that (you) women will start up with that ERA again."

Residents of Lake Mary appeared to be fully behind the need to prevent people from burning the flag but were divided in the way it should be accomplished. While some believed the Supreme Court was wrong in declaring that flag burning is a constitutional right of protest, others believed the high court is misinterpreting the intent of the Constitution.

"I don't think they should say 'you can't do this' and 'you can't do that,' even though I wouldn't do it myself," said Rebecca Rawls, a Deltona native who was passing through Sanford today. "That's like a kind of dictatorship."

"I don't like it," said Charlie Mathis, of Sanford. "I'm a red-blooded American. But as far as putting people in jail or something, I don't agree with that. I think they should be fined for it — enough to keep them from doing it again."

"It's really not something I would do, but I would not like to see it done," said Wilmer Pinkney, who was a radio operator for the U.S. Army during the Korean War. "I'm better off here than those people were in their country. I don't think you should get arrested, but I don't think you should burn it."

"Yeah it would be against the law," said Joe Watkins, owner of Joe's Bar and Package, at the corner of 13th Street and Olive Avenue. "I've got one and I put it up every now and then. I'd go along with (Martinez' proposal)."

try to keep up with her."

Fraasa said there were other individuals in the community who made contributions to the community on behalf of their workplaces or other civic organizations, but that Weaver stood out because her goal was the personal satisfaction she gained from doing good deeds.

"There are lots of people around who raise lots of money for good causes and that's a good skill to have, but we wanted someone who really gives from the heart," Fraasa said. "That's why we chose her. She's just a sweet lady who wants to do things to help people."

Fraasa said that the committee was particularly moved by a letter from the Sanford Senior Citizens Club, that mentioned Weaver's delivering Meals on Wheels to people who have trouble cooking. The letter also said Weaver brings her friends to talk to shut-ins, among other contributions. The letter said

Candidates

Martinez told an audience of civic club members. "If you don't stand up for family values, for what you believe in, then everything becomes negotiable."

Of the proposed amendment, he said, "It certainly fits my view of what values are and respect for authority and respect for life and tradition — and therefore, it's an important part of my make-up."

Martinez also said he was not bothered by criticism of his campaign to rid record stores of the 2 Live Crew album. "As Nasty as They Wanna Be," which a Broward County judge ruled last week is obscene. Sheriff's deputies arrested three members of the Miami rap group on obscenity charges after a weekend performance in Hollywood. Now they are threatening to arrest people who play the music in their cars.

"In my reading of the U.S. or Florida constitutions, I have never seen anywhere that obscenity is a protected freedom of speech," Martinez said. "I've been criticized by some liberal elements, but I've never seen their publish any of those lyrics."

Former U.S. Sen. Lawton Chiles, considered the front-runner for the Democratic nomination for governor, also endorsed both the flag amendment and the rap-related obscenity arrests.

"The flag I think is a symbol, and I think we ought to try to protect a symbol," Chiles said.

"I think it's the government's place to try to prohibit pornographic material, pornographic literature, in compliance with a decision handed down by the U.S. Supreme Court," he said.

Chiles was asked about the two controversies during a news conference in Tallahassee, where he accepted the endorsement of former Florida Republican Party chairman Tommy Thomas and announced plans to form a Republicans for Chiles committee. He will have to find a different name for it, however. State law gives parties the right to block the use of their names in such efforts, and current Florida GOP chief Van Poole sent Chiles an unequivocal answer to a request to use the Republican Party's name.

"My answer is not only NO, but HELL NO," Poole wrote in a letter to Chiles.

"I fail to see how you represent in any way, shape or form any values that Republicans stand for or hold true," Poole wrote.

Former state GOP chief Tommy Thomas of Panama City, former Florida patronage chief for President Reagan, saw it differently. He endorsed Chiles during a Tallahassee news conference.

Thomas was one of those who helped persuade Martinez to switch to the GOP in 1984. His support was critical in swinging conservative Panhandle Democrats to Martinez in 1986.

Now Thomas says he bitterly regrets that early support for the governor, and has resigned his post on the local and state party executive committees to campaign for Chiles and running mate Kenneth "Buddy" MacKay, a former congressman from Ocala.

"I'm still a Republican. I'm going to stay a Republican, but there's no way I can support the current governor," Thomas said. "I think he's been a disaster for the state of Florida."

Thomas said Martinez abandoned his campaign rhetoric about bringing efficiency to state government by embracing the ill-fated services tax in 1987. Then, stung by the political damage that caused him, Martinez got boxed into a rigid no-new-taxes posture and couldn't bend this year when new taxes were needed, Thomas said.

"The problems Florida faces right now require the gray hair and vast experience these two fellows have," Thomas said, gesturing toward Chiles and MacKay.

Flag Day

The president carried a folded American flag, which he handed to two uniformed Marines, while two National Park Service rangers lowered the flag already flying atop the flagpole at the front of the memorial.

Once that flag was lowered, it was handed to two other Marines who folded it into the traditional triangle as the other Marines attached Bush's flag to the flagpole.

Bush stood at attention as his flag was raised and then toured the black granite wall bearing the names of 58,156 Americans who died in the Vietnam War.

The president stopped to admire one of the several wreaths lying at the foot of the wall and at one point removed his glasses to read some of the names etched into the granite.

He shook hands with a man, but said nothing to reporters before leaving the site.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters that Bush "thought this was the appropriate way to observe Flag Day." Another aide said, "The White House flag was his (Bush's) gift on flag day."

On Capitol Hill, congressional Republicans also planned events to add impetus to their drive for the amendment.

But other forces also planned to use the day to fight the amendment and warn that allowing new limits on free speech would set a dangerous precedent.

In Washington, the American Bar Association scheduled a news conference to stress its opposition to the president's amendment.

It was only a week after Flag Day of 1989 that the Supreme Court touched off a storm of protest with a 5-4 ruling that said burning the flag was protected by First Amendment free speech guarantees.

Since then, the often bitter debate cooled, only to be revived again Monday with another 5-4 Supreme Court ruling that threw out a flag protection law designed to reverse the court's 1989 decision.

Congress immediately dove into a fresh fight over the issue. Bush's suggested constitutional change took its first halting steps Wednesday when a House subcommittee, on a 5-3 party-line vote, sent it to the full Judiciary Committee, but recommended that it be defeated.

The full committee is expected next week to send the 20-word amendment to the full House.

By itself, the amendment would not outlaw flag desecration, but would allow Congress and the states to pass laws outlawing the practice. It states: "The Congress and the states shall have power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States."

The amendment, if ratified, would be the first to limit the Bill of Rights in nearly 200 years. It would be the 27th amendment to the Constitution and the first since 18-year-olds got the vote in 1971.

Recycling

Task force members conceded and voted unanimously to continue the six-day schedule.

But garbage haulers lost their argument over how county households should be divided into the exclusive franchise districts. Rick Hutchinson, the county's solid waste consultant, said the total number of homes served by haulers in June 1989 compared closely with the total number of unincorporated households on tax rolls at that time.

Hutchinson said he expected to find fewer homes had garbage collection service. Because the county plans to begin mandatory garbage collection in 1992, Hutchinson said the franchise areas were originally designed to provide haulers with the same number of paying customers they now have, with an automatic 15 to 17 percent increase in customers generated when mandatory collection begins. The areas would also include undeveloped areas with future development potential.

Hutchinson said with about 97 percent of county homes receiving service, the automatic mandatory collection benefit would be almost eliminated. Hutchinson recommended the county should continue to use the tax rolls, because in 1992, county garbage fees will be paid along with property taxes.

But haulers said an audit should be performed of themselves to determine exactly how many customers they actually serve, then franchise areas should be determined by those actual customers.

Al Kinard, regional manager of Central Services Corp., a Waste Management Inc. company, said inaccurate customer lists provided by other haulers could lead his company to potentially lose 800 customers in their franchise area. Waste Management official Kyle Adams said their company surveyed their proposed franchise area and found only 60 to 70 percent of the households would pay for service before 1992.

"If we went directly into mandatory, we'd have a different breed of car here," Adams said.

Task force member Bob Lewis, executive vice president of the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, said he agreed with haulers that an audit should be performed.

"It's a question of fairness," Lewis said. "This is a substantial dollars and cents issue."

Task force members decided an audit, which Hutchinson said could take three to six months, would delay the recycling program too much.

"I don't think the delay would be to the benefit of the residents," said Casselberry Mayor Andrea Dennison. "It may be to the benefit of the haulers, but not the people."

Task force members voted 13-2 for Hutchinson's recommendation, with Lewis and Kinard opposing.

The rate for each hauler won't be set until contract negotiations are complete. During the first year of the franchise program, the hauler will bill the homeowner individually. When mandatory collections begin in 1992, a standard rate will be charged throughout the county.

Task force members voted 14-1 for the draft contract with haulers and 14-1 for the recommendation to select Southeast Recycling to receive all of the county's recyclable materials.

Three companies bid for the recycling contract. The county's recycling consultant, R.W. Beck, recommended Southeast Recycling.

The franchise hauler will provide each home with the three stackable plastic bins to collect all colors of glass, plastic and aluminum weekly. Newspapers will also be collected by tucking them between the bins at the curb.

Kinnard, whose company Waste Management bid for the recycling contract, opposed the vote. Task force member Lee Constantine, an Altamonte Springs city commissioner, also opposed the recycling and hauler contracts. He said he had not received drafts of the documents

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Aging 'baby boomers' worried

NEW YORK — Maturing U.S. "baby boomers" are very gloomy about their financial prospects in the 1990s and worried about being squeezed by personal obligations, a survey said.

Americans as a whole, a Gallup poll carried out for the International Association of Financial Planning said, "overwhelmingly view the 1990s as a decade of decreasing economic opportunities" and heavier burdens.

"The long-term outlook of the American psyche is depressed," said the report, noting that 86 percent of interviewees feared inflation and 69 percent were apprehensive about a possible prolonged economic recession.

But baby boomers born in the immediate post-World War II era have the most deeply pessimistic outlook, the report said.

May wholesale prices up 0.3 percent

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices nationwide climbed by 0.3 percent in May on higher food costs after three consecutive monthly declines, the Labor Department reported today.

The increase was in line with forecasts by private economists.

Wholesale food prices surged 0.6 percent last month, offsetting a 1 percent decline in wholesale energy prices, according to the monthly report compiled by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Bubble blower back in court

FRESNO, Calif. — World bubble gum champion Susan Williams of Fresno is in trouble with the law again, this time for a far more serious offense.

On May 14, Williams was convicted of disrupting a courtroom by popping her gum too loudly in a courthouse hallway and ignoring orders from bailiffs to stop the noise. She received a $150 fine and six months probation.

Durenberger tells ethics panel he's sorry

WASHINGTON — Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., apologized and asked senators investigating ethics allegations against him to consider his full record when deciding his fate.

Durenberger, 55, chose to forgo a detailed public defense, and the committee abruptly ended its public inquiry into the matter Wednesday.

Durenberger and his lawyer, James Hamilton, told the panel they would not call witnesses and would be satisfied to let the case be judged on written evidence submitted by both sides and presentations made during two days of hearings.

I am the emblem of the greatest sovereign nation on earth. I am the inspiration for which American patriots gave their lives and freedom.

My red stripes are symbols of the blood spilled in defense of this glorious nation. My white stripes signify tears shed by Americans who lost their sons, husbands, lovers and friends. My blue field: the heavens under which I fly. My stars clustered together unify 50 states as one for God and country.

"Old Glory" is my name and I wave on high, proudly.

I have led your sons into battle since Valley Forge. I walk in silence with each of your honored dead to their final resting place beneath the silent white crosses, row upon row. I have flown in peace and war, strife and prosperity, and in all times, I have been respected.

IN BRIEF

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Clemens wins 11th

It's the last thing the last-place Yankees needed: Roger Clemens in a groove.

The Boston right-hander Wednesday night became the major leagues' first 11-game winner, carrying the Red Sox to a 4-1 victory over the Yankees in New York.

"Momentum comes your way when you are doing things right," he said. "Every one goes at me harder since I won the Cy Young. I'm used to it."

Clemens, 11-2, pitched six-hit ball over eight innings in posting his seventh straight victory. He walked none and struck out eight before giving way to Jeff Reardon, who picked up his ninth save.

In other AL games, Oakland edged Texas 3-2, Chicago pounded Seattle 11-2, Milwaukee beat Baltimore 7-2, Detroit nipped Cleveland 5-4, Toronto dumped Minnesota 10-1 and Kansas City defeated California 11-4.

Sanford Awards Banquet

The City of Sanford's Recreation Department will be hosting banquets on Friday and Tuesday at the Civic Center to honor its Little Major and Junior Major baseball teams.

The Junior Major banquet will be Friday, June 15th at 6:30 p.m. Food and festivities will be the order of the evening. Awards will be given to all players and sponsors at this time. The featured team will be the Knights of Columbus Cardinals that won this year's City Championship.

The Little Majors will hold their banquet next Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. After a meal awards will be given to all competitors with the Rinker Materials Dodgers (City Champions) and the Disabled American Veterans Royals (champions of the American Division) being the honored guests. The Most Valuable Player Award will also be announced at the banquet.

RECREATION

Summer playground offered

The City of Sanford Recreation Department is offering a summer playground at two sites for children ages 6-12. The City runs camps at Ft. Mellon Park and Lee P. Moore Park (located in the Hidden Lakes sub-division).

The program runs Monday-Friday from 8 a.m. until noon and features many activities for the young people, including softball, kickball, frisbee and other special events.

For more information call the Recreation Department at 330-5697.

YOUTH BASKETBALL

SBA to host Nationals

The Sunshine Basketball Association has announced that it will be the host for both the boys and girls 11-and-under A.A.U. National Championship Tournaments this summer.

This will be the third consecutive year that the SBA has hosted the boys national tournament. Tournament dates for the girls are June 23-30 and the boys July 1-8.

"Last year 34 boys teams from 23 states participated. This year we have 40 teams from 31 states and the District of Columbia participating," stated John Smith, SBA President.

Help is needed on preparing and running these tournaments. Anyone interested in working with the SBA are encouraged to call Tom Bieri (578-2349) or John Smith (339-5360).

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Wilson tosses one-hitter

Trevor Wilson gave his dad an early Father's Day gift Wednesday night.

The 24-year-old San Francisco left-hander, making his second start of the season, held the San Diego Padres without a hit for eight innings before yielding a leadoff ninth-inning single to Mike Pagliarulo. He then finished with a one-hitter to give the Giants a 6-0 victory.

Wilson's father, Paul, drove down from his home in Ontario, Calif., to watch his son pitch. Wilson was attempting to become the first Giant pitcher to throw a no-hitter since John Montefusco did so in 1976.

Elsewhere in the National League, New York swept Chicago 15-10 and 9-6, Cincinnati pounded Atlanta 13-4, Montreal edged Philadelphia 4-3 in 10 innings, Pittsburgh downed St. Louis 6-5 and Houston topped Los Angeles 5-1.

Adcock stops Bullets

Five runs in seventh keys win

From staff reports

LONGWOOD — Adcock Roofing (Seminole), in past years easy prey for the Bullets' (Lyman's) highly touted program, is now sending out ominous smoke signals that a new program is on the rise after stopping the Bullets 7-2 at Lyman High School Wednesday night in a non-league baseball game.

After struggling early in Buddy Lake League play Adcock has now won two of its last three games to improve its record to 8-5 and are searching for scalps.

But overpowering pitching by the Bullets' Andy Spolski, especially through the first three innings in which he struck out seven, left Adcock hungry, frustrated, and even beleaguered.

But W.L. Gracey led off the fourth inning with a bloop single, his team's first hit, that seemed to cause a spark in Adcock's offense. Harvey Clinger followed with another single. The runners advanced a base on an error. Gracey was nailed at the plate trying to score on a wild pitch with Clinger moving to third. Clinger raced home on another wild pitch to score the first run of the game.

Meanwhile, Adcock pitcher Jon Eltonhead calmly tranquilized the Greyhounds with a sharp curve and a paralyzing palm ball. He got defensive help from Clinger and Brett Henderson. Clinger made a diving catch to open the game while Henderson made a spectacular grab on a long drive that saved at least one run.

But Lyman managed to rally in the 5th and took a 2-1 lead. Bouley led off with a walk and Rob Davis followed with dying qual single. Shawn Stuckey singled home Bouley and Ramirez singled to score Davis.

But Adcock came right back to tie the score when the Bullets pitcher could not find the strike zone. Gracey, Clinger, Demetry Beamon and Steve Wilbur walked to force home Gracey with the tying run.

After Eltonhead retired the Bullets in order in their half of the 6th, Adcock showed what has head coach Mike Powers, so optimistic about the future.

Anthony Roberts led off with a slash to right which he legged into a double. Scott Ferguson's liner was snagged by the Bullet third baseman. Gracey walked and stole second before Clinger laced a double to right to score Roberts, with what proved to be the winning run, and Gracey. Clinger advanced to third on a wild pitch as Henderson walked and scored on Beamon's single. Henderson stole third and scored on a wild pitch. Wilbur was hit by a pitch and Robby Morgan walked. Beamon scored the final run on a wild pitch.

Adcock played errorless baseball and showed class in winning a tough game. "Eltonhead pitched a nice game, he had one bad inning there, but settled down nicely," said Powers. "Clinger had a double and W.L. had a nice base hit to right. There were no errors, that's nice to see. That's what it takes to win Lyman played well, but walks and errors lost the game for Lyman. We capitalized on their mistakes."

After a bit of a rough start, Adcock looks strong. Most importantly, they seem to have found that elusive formula necessary to be winners. According to Powers, "The younger guys are mixing in good, there seems to be less confusion than in the past. This makes it more pleasant in the dugout."

With all its other successful sports, it seems Seminole may finally have a baseball program to be proud of. Says Powers, "We have a solid defense. If our pitching staff and hitters come around we'll have a pretty good solid team next year."

Adcock gets back into action this Saturday with a doubleheader in the Buddy Lake League at Sanford Stadium. Adcock plays the Patriots at 9 a.m. before taking on the East Coast All Stars at 11:45 a.m.

Crazy Wings posts 16-1 D League win

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald sports writer

SANFORD — Duane Smith had three hits, including a home run and a double, and scored three runs to lead Crazy Wings to a 16-1 defeat of Waddles in the opening game of the Sanford Recreation Department Wednesday Night Men's "D" Slowpitch Softball League at Chase Park.

In the other game the Sanford Police Benevolent Association scored nine runs in its first three at bats and held off Harcar Aluminum Products 10-6.

Next weeks schedule has RMC taking on Harcar at 6:30 p.m., Waddles facing SPBA at 7:30 p.m. and the Killer B's challenging Crazy Wings at 8:30 p.m.

Crazy Wings scored two runs in the first inning, six runs in the second and three runs in the third to take an 11-0 lead.

Russell Holloman led off the first with a single and Mike McLohan walked. Tom Barnes grounder forced Holloman at third, but Jim Smith followed with a double to score McLohan and Barnes.

Seven singles and D. Smith's home run accounted for the six second inning runs. With one out Jerry Hensley singled and Smith blasted his homer. Following the homer, Craig Appel and Erik Echer singled and Holloman doubled to score Appel and Echer. Holloman scored on McLohan's single and McLohan later scored on a Brian Rogers single.

In the third, Chris Davis and Hensley singled before D. Smith banged a double for two more runs. Smith scored on Echer's single.

Waddles scored its lone run in the fourth on three consecutive singles by Steve Richards, Shawn Wyman and Brian Jones.

A five run fifth by Crazy Wings ended the game by the mercy rule. Hensley walked, D. Smith singled and Appel had an RBI single. Echer walked to load the bases and Holloman drove in two more runs with a single. Mickey Smith singled to score Echer and Rogers doubled to score Holloman with the final run.

Fourteen different players either had a hit or scored a run in the 23-hit Crazy Wings attack. D. Smith drove in four runs with his three hits. Helping Smith were Holloman (double, two singles, two runs scored, four RBI), Rogers (double, two singles, two RBI) and Appel and Echer (two singles and two runs scored each).

Russell Holloman (top) and Duane Smith (being congratulated below) carried the big sticks for Crazy Wings in a 16-1 defeat of Waddles in the opening night of the Wednesday "D" League play. Holloman had a double and two singles and drove in three runs while Smith had a home run, double, single and three RBI.

Next action for Altamonte Springs will be Sunday when they travel to Eustis for a doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. The second game is set for 4 p.m.

The win by Altamonte Springs keeps them tied for first in the Central Florida Big League with Dr. Phillips at 9-2. South Orange falls to 0-11.

Merithe is away at a basketball camp. James is in Sarasota watching his brother Greg play with the Chicago White Sox and Varitek is playing with another team in the Central Florida League.

Wildness on the part of South Orange starter Ronnie Gossett led to four first inning runs by Altamonte Springs. Gossett walked the first five Altamonte Springs batters he faced and hit the sixth one before being removed from the game. Paul Stein greeted the South Orange

Volunteer honored

SANFORD — Marie Taylor recently received the Outstanding Community Service Award from the Seminole County Retired Educators Association (SCREA), the organization for which she has served as community participation chairman from 1984 to present. The citation was served in conjunction with American Association of Retired Persons.

SCREA has established two outstanding programs: delivering Thanksgiving food baskets to needy families, averaging 15 deliveries per year, and contributing $10 in each deceased member's name to the Marie Taylor Needy Children's Fund. This money, which averages $80 per year, enables Seminole County school social workers to purchase hearing aids for the hearing impaired children in area schools.

Taylor began her educational career in the classroom. She worked as a social worker in Georgia before moving to Florida in 1949.

She was the director of physical education for girls in Hamilton County.

Taylor moved to the St. Petersburg area in 1962, where she worked in testing and placement of exceptional children until 1966.

She moved to Seminole County to work with exceptional children until 1970.

In 1970, she established the Social Services Program for Seminole County Schools and remained as the director until she retired in 1984.

Upon her retirement, she received community service awards from the State Department of Education and Gov. Bob Graham. Taylor received the Jefferson Award in 1978 for community service. In 1982, she was honored for her eight years of service as president and board member of the Seminole County Mental Health Association.

In 1988 Taylor was recognized as the Retired Educator of the Year by the Seminole County School Board.

Since retiring, Taylor spends her time visiting shut-ins and hospital patients and doing projects for needy families.

She gave 200 hours to victims of Hurricane Hugo, delivering clothing, food and medicine. She also did some counseling, filled out forms, did telephone work and transported hurricane victims.

Taylor said of her active volunteerism, "A rolling stone gathers no moss, but it sure gets a good polishing."

SCREA members have average 12,000 hours of community service every year, working with hospitals, jails, church centers, nursing homes and youth groups.

The organization does not endorse any particular political activity, but encourages voting and supporting all things that are in the welfare of educators and children.

Grieving woman prefers brevity

DEAR ABBY: I recently lost my husband of 51 years. After his death, I received many comforting letters telling me what a fine, kind and gentle man he was. This did much to help me bear my loss.

However, I am writing to tell you about one letter I received from a longtime friend saying that she had heard of my husband's "decease" — then she went on to describe in great detail her busy social calendar, her new apartment whom she had visited, and who was visiting her, etc.

Abby, please tell people that when they write a letter of condolence, the recipient is usually not in the mood for social chitchat.

When my daughter was in the hospital, dying of leukemia, a friend called to "cheer her up," and kept her on the phone for half an hour describing the Caribbean cruise she had just returned from — and the wonderful plays she had just seen in New York!

How can people be so insensitive?

SOUNDING OFF: DEAR SOUNDING OFF: For the thoughtless and self-centered, it comes naturally. And to the well-intentioned who attempt to entertain or distract a grieving friend with a cheerful, newsy letter. Please consider instead a brief message expressing your sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's "baby sister" (age 34) is getting married for the fourth time (one annulment and two divorces). She chose our wedding date for her wedding. It will be a civil ceremony, but she's having a big blowout just like it was her first.

My husband wants to attend her wedding and the big party the night before — which will kill the whole weekend. I had been looking forward to a personal celebration for our wedding anniversary, but it won't be possible now that his sister screwed up all our plans. With 365 days in the year, wouldn't you think this selfish girl could have picked another day to get married?

I know I'll have a miserable time at her wedding, as it won't be easy to hide my resentment. I'm not sure I can handle this.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR NOSE: You can if you really want to. Be a good sport and handle it with grace and generosity of spirit. "Baby sister" has already had three strikes against her; perhaps your lucky day will prove lucky for her, too.

If you anticipate a miserable time, you'll have one. Most people are about as happy as they make up their minds to be. Think positive and turn this lemon into lemonade.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "STILL HURTING IN EUGENE, ORE.": All love affairs would be palatial if both parties quit caring at the same time. But unfortunately, they rarely do so late it — it's over. One way to dull the pain is to invite another woman out there unless you survey the scenery.

Dermatologists treat causes of baldness

DEAR DR. GOTT: Will you please comment on alopecia in women, to include the thinning and/or loss of the eyebrows and eyelashes? How much of a role, if any, could herpes, hormone imbalance or an imbalance of nutrients contribute to the condition?

DEAR READER: Hair growth on the human scalp is a mosaic of activity with alternating periods of growth (anagen) and rest (telogen) separated by a transitional phase (catogen). Scalp hair grows about .3 millimeters per day (6 inches a year). Normal people shed 50 to 100 hairs a day; each is replaced by a new one. As people age, they experience gradual hair thinning because new hair growth progressively diminishes.

There are more than 60 recognized causes of pathological hair loss; therefore, anyone noticing abnormal hair loss should consult a physician to determine whether the loss is due to disease — such as infection or a skin disorder — and what can be done about it.

Alopecia areata is the most common cause of deficient anagen. It affects all races and both sexes equally and commonly begins before the age of 25. The condition is marked by round, bald patches that usually occur on the scalp but may affect other areas of the body, including the beard and eyebrows. Evidence suggests that the disorder is related to autoimmune diseases (self-allergies) because patients with alopecia areata often show other manifestations of autoimmunity, such as thyroid malfunction, diabetes or vitiligo (permanent whitish patches on the skin).

Although the hair loss of alopecia areata eventually stops and new hair grows in without treatment in about three years, physicians can speed hair growth by injecting cortisone into the bald areas or by using a variety of topical applications, including dinitrochlorobenzene and anthralin.

Alopecia (baldness) can also be caused by infection (such as herpes), drugs (including female hormones, anti-depressants and medicine for Parkinson's disease), poor nutrition (including crash dieting and anorexia nervosa) and glandular disorders (such as hyper- or hypothyroidism). Treatment depends on the cause. In women, pregnancy and oral contraceptives are frequently associated with hair loss, for unknown reasons.

Although alopecia is usually a source of alarm to the men and women who experience it, many types are curable.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

When the opponents' bidding indicates a massive trump fit, the business double of a contract that was obviously bid to make asks for an unusual lead. That was the case here, but West overlooked this nuance in his partner's business double and then missed the suit-preference connotation of East's play to trick one. West jumped to three spades — a strong invitation to game based on his long suit and diamond void. North bid game in diamonds, realizing that even as little as six diamonds to the Q-J in the South hand might be enough. East, with a sparse takeout double based on distribution, doubled for penalties.

expecting that West would know to lead a club. A club opening lead would defeat the contract by two tricks (ruff, back to the ace of spades, another ruff, and the ace of diamonds still left). But West opened the ace of spades. The six was played from dummy, the nine from East and the eight from declarer. Since West could see that East's nine was the lowest spade he could play, he should certainly have interpreted this card as asking for a club. Instead West played jack of hearts, and school was out. Little sympathy to West. North apparently expected to make five diamonds, and East's double was begging for an unusual lead.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 15, 1990

In the year ahead, you are likely to establish several objectives for yourself for which you would have never dared previously. Growth in both character and material circumstances are possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There's a possibility you may have been pursuing an elusive and unattainable objective up until now. Your success will be dependent upon realistic targets. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Rumors must not be taken as gossip today, especially if they come from questionable sources. Be sure your information is accurate before you pass it on to others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your ability to judge others effectively might not be up to its usual standards today. There's a possibility you might link up with the wrong person for a special endeavor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try to avoid competitive involvements today, especially where your career is concerned. There's a chance you might get drawn into something where you're slightly overmatched.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The harder you work today, the luckier you are likely to be. However, should you begin to slow down, fickle Lady Luck may move on to one who is more energetic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Keep your guard up socially today, because you might have to deal with an individual who is both manipulative and crafty. Don't let yourself be used as a pawn.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Both you and your mate must be careful today not to put your interest and desires about the other. An impasse will result if you each insist upon having it your own way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When talking with friends today, it's best not to say anything about absent pals that could be interpreted negatively. Your every word may be relayed to your target.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Some changes might be in store for you today where your material interests are concerned. The effects could be both adverse as well as advantageous.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be cognizant of the interests and aims of associates today, but, by the same token, don't let them restrict your own mobility. You can accommodate them as well as yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Actions predicated upon sober evaluations should produce desirable results today. In instances where you are impulsive or indifferent, the results aren't apt to be gratifying.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Instead of getting more deeply involved with a person who is presently indebted to you, it's best to settle his/her old account first before proceeding further.
