Seminole County learned yes terday afternoon that Volusia County may have "sunk" the proposed Lake Monroe causeway by its reluctance to coeperate . . . and with the state road dept. reporting bond vali-dation would be impossible without Volusia co-operation since the roadway would connect the two counties.

Now, comes a wonder. A few short years ago Volusia County informed Seminole County it is up to its ears in new road projects and is not interested in improving SR 415. That's the highway which crosses the St. Johns River to connect Volusia and Seminole to the east. Does this mean Volusia going to "sink" the proposed Osteen bridge, too? It is doubtful, since the Osteen bridge is on the state's priority list for 1970.
