My old friend, Dad Rhoades. who has recently opened up a new machine shop here has an interesting history and it is good to get him away from his lathe once in awhile and get an earfull of news of old times. In talking to Dad a few days ago I mentioned the fact that Secretary Bryan had resigned and asked what he thought about it. To my surprise Dad spoke right up and

"Why that is no more than we thought Bryan would do. Why that fellow is just a grand stand player and has always been one. I knew him out in Illinois before he became great and he was known as a man who played to the galleries all the time. No one from my town ever thought he would stick at anything very long and he hasn't made any ruccess at stocking at anything as

"But, I remarked he seems to be making money, all right and is a big man in the nation

"Sure he is, replied Dad. But what I remarked was that he did not stick at anything and he is just a theory man and not a practical one and that goes."

And in thinking it over I delieve that Dad is more than half right.

With practice you can take and this should appeal to the entire citizenship of Jacksonville and I personally promise my hearty support in their work.

Water System 1

I have within the last few days completed one of the finest gusher artesian wells ever produced in Florida, showing only a very slight trace of sulphur, but in the opinion of medical men and experts a very pronounced pyidence of lithia, with a wonderful pressure; sufficient to force the water in a four to six-story building. I am now buying several thousand feet of mains, starting the first work; in supplying Riverview with a modern water system. This is much more than many of Jacksonville's suburbs can say, who make great claims of the great improvements.

Riverview is developing fast, alz though these talk of hard times we have never ceased to go ahead. Visitors find always something doing here. It looks good to the investor. Property values always advance in a place like this, and in another year or two, when conditions become normal. Riverview will become as a full bloomed rose, and the man or woman who can say they own a Riverview lot, may well be proud of their investment, as Riverview property is just as sure to advance in value with all these public improvements -continually taking place, as the sun is sure to rise in the east and set in the west. We extend a cordial welcome invitation to the public to visit well please with the situation and

SYNOPSIS.

JULY 2, 1915

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders of prominent men. The principal clue to the murderer is the warning letter which is sent the victima, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Eisline, employs Craig Kenmedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. Clutching Hand tries to kill Elsine by means of a diabolical device which generates a polson Hand tries to kill Flaine by means of a diabolical device which generates a poison in the wall paper of her room that is deadly to breathe for any length of time, Again Kennedy's scientific knowledge is brought into play just in season to save the heroine from death,

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

later the door opened and in ran | "Police! Police!" they shouted to Rusty. Straight to Elaine he went, starting to lick her hand.

"Right-her dog," exclaimed the other man, drawing a gun and hastily leveling it at Rusty.

"Don't cautioned the first. "It would make too much noise. You'd better choke him!"

The fellow grabbed for Rusty. Rusty was too quick. He jumped. Around the room they ran. Rusty saw the wide-open window-and his chance. Out he went and disappeared, leaving the man swearing at him.

A moment's argument followed, then they wrapped Elaine in the blankets alone, still bound and gagged, and carried her out.

In the secret den the Clutching Hand was waiting, gazing now and then at his watch, and then at the wounded man before him. In a chair his first assistant sat, watching Doctor Martin.

A knock at the door caused them to turn their heads. The crook opened it, and in walked the other crooks who had carried off Elaine in the suit of Elaine was now almost conscious, as they sat her down in a chair, and partly loosed her bonds and gag. She gazed about, frightened.

"Oh, help! help!" she screamed, as she caught sight of the now familiar mask of the Clutching Hand. "Call all you, want-here, young lady," he laughed unnaturally. "Now, doc," he added harshly to Doctor Martin. "It was she who shot him. Her blood must save him." Doctor Martin recoiled at the thought of torturing the beautiful young girl before him.

"Are-you willing-to have your blood transfused?" he parleyed. "No, no, no!" she cried in horror.

Doctor Martin turned to the desperate criminal. "I cannot do it." "The deuce you can't."

A cold steel revolver pressed down on Doctor Martin's stomach.

The other crooks next carried Elaine, struggling, and threw her down beside the wounded man,

Doctor Martin, still covered by the gun, bent over the two, the hardened criminal and the delicate, beautiful girl. Clutching Hand glared flendishly, insanely

From his bag he took a little piece of something that shone like silver. A moment later, Doctor Martin looked up at the Clutching Hand and nodded, "Well, it's working!

It had not been long before the party came across the deserted runabout beside the road. There they had stopped for a moment.

It was just then that they heard Kennedy's call, and one of them had been detailed to answer it.

"Well, what do you want?" asked the officer, eyeing Kennedy suspiclously as he stood there with the armor. "What's them pleces of tinhey?"

Kennedy quickly flashed his own special badge. "I want to trail a girl," he exclaimed hurriedly. "Can I find a bloodhound about here!"

"A hound? Why, we have a packover there." "Bring them-quick!" ordered Craig. Kennedy held the armor down to the dogs. "Searchlight" gave a low whine, then, followed by "Bob" and the others, was off, all with noses close to the ground. We followed.

In the mysterious haunt of the Clutching Hand, all were still standing around Elaine and the wounded Pitts Slim.

Just then a cry from one of the group startled the rest. One of them, less hardened than the Clutching Hand, had turned away from the sight, had gone to the window, and had been attracted by something out-

"Look!" he cried. From the absolute stillness of death there was now wild excitement among the crooks

Just then the police burst through the secret panel and rushed on, leaving us alone, with the unconscious, scarcely breathing Elaine.

From the sounds we could tell that A policeman now stood beside Elaine and the wounded burglar, who was muttering deliriously to himself. He was pretty far gone, as the policeman knelt down and tried to get a statement out of him.

"Who was that man who left youlast-the Clutching Hand?"

Not a word came from the crook. Doctor Martin had paid no attention whatever to him, but was working desperately now over Elaine, trying to bring her back to life.

"Is she-going to-die?" gasped Craig frantically.

Every eye was riveted on Doctor Martin. "She is all right," he muttered. "But the man is going to die." At the sound of Craig's voice Elaine had feebly opened her eyes. "Thank heaven," breathed Craig. with a sigh of relief, as his hand gently stroked Elaine's unnaturally cold forehead. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

THEIR GROCERY

OF URSE MA WAS MOST ECO-NOMICAL, BUT-

The Family Had to Have Butter and Anything But the Best, and Lots of It, Was Out of the Question.

"Our grocery bill is larger again this month," said pa, glumly, according to the Boston Globe. "We have got to cut down expenses."

"I'm sure I try," replied ma, in an injured tone. "I try to get along as beensibleally as possible, but we must eat, and everything is 'out of sight.' Perhaps you can suggest where we can cut down." "Well, I don't know just where. The children might get along without butter on their bread when they pile on jelly the way they do. Butter is a big Item."

"Oh, pa, that would be terrible." cried Mary. "I guess you never tried just eating bread and jelly."

"Indeed, I have, and thought it was mighty good, too. Why, when I was a boy we made a wifele meal off a couple of thick slices of bread spread with molasses, and no butter, either. could eat a piece now if I had it."

"If you would buy things in the city and bring them home you could probably save money," suggested ms.

"Perhaps I could, but, unfortunately, my time is pretty well taken up earning what is respectfully called a salary. The best thing we can do is to move out where we can raise hens and vegetables. We can't keep on living here if prices keep going up." "Why don't you ask for a raise?"

suggested ma, hopefully "Lots of good it would do. Just now the company is retrenching and is more likely to cut salaries than to incream them."

"The "dea," said ma, indignantly. "The trouble with you is you're afraid to ask. I bet I'd talk up to them. I'd just tell them I couldn't keep a family of six on such a small salary. and that I had to have more money

"They should worry," replied pa. grimly. "I don't know where they are responsible for my having a wife and four children. Of course, if I don't want to stay, I can quit "

They would never let you quit They couldn't get along without you Don't you do all the work, while Mr. Smith draws the big salary? He has a motor car and they go everywhere; said ma waxing indignant

You compliment me I'm sure replied pa. "but you're not just who to mean and stars would continue their daily routine, and the company would still do business at the old stand " "I think they re just horrid, any way, and I'd like to tell them so "

Americanisms. Glancing over a farming article in an American paper, writes a correspondent of a London journal, t found myself "up against" this astounding record, "One calf was nursing two cows." By degrees the things that seemed to stand on their heads came to a natural position, for I remembered that in America it is the suckling that "nurses," and not the nurse. This topsy-turvy is due to a kind of characteristic prudery, which forbids such words as "sucking" or "suckling." But no such explanation applies to the verb "to feed." We feed a pig with acorns or a furnace with coke. The American, invariably, feeds acorns to the pig and feeds coke to the furnace, which is really not oxidation until the paint film is eventugood English.

Under-Water Tocains.

After the burning of the transat lantic steamship Columbia, one of the boats drifted for no less than two weeks in the path of transatiantic liners; but, although the wrecked seamen saw several steamers, they could not attract their attention by signals. Of the 15 men in the boat, 11 died before the boat was eighted. Had the lifeboat carried a submarine bell it could have signaled Atlantic steamers, even at a distance of several miles.

Death of James Creelman Recalls Remarkable Exploit of Newspaper Man.

James Creelman's death in Germany while still in the prime of life recalls an exploit of which any newspaper Consensus of Cases Seems to Show reporter might be proud, observes the Wall Street Journal He was in London at the time of the Haring crisis in 1890, and performed the unheard-of feat of securing for the New York Herald an exclusive interview with the governor of the Bank of England.

It is a matter of history how the governor the right Hon. William H. Lidderdale, handled that crists. He lived to see the Barings successfully liquidated and stronger than ever, with the financial situation in Argentina restored, the £3,000,000 gold which he borrowed by means of acceptances from the Bank of France returned in due course with the seals of the packages unbroken. The London market was tided over a desperate emergency with the minimum of disturbance, although there were some forty failures in the stock exchange.

Lidderdale died not long ago, leaving an estate valued at only £2,000. He was a strong man and an honest one. But the idea of interviewing him was so remote that only an irreverent American would have thought of it. Creelman had no pass key or letters of introduction. He simply went to the Bank of England, and starting with the astonishing "beadle," worked his way up. He was sent from department to department, to the secret amusement of various heads, until he actually found himself in the presence of the governor.

But the joke failed to explode. Lidderdale was a long-headed Scotchman, much too intelligent not to see the value of publicity at such a time. He was no slave to-precedent. He gave Creelman an excellent interview of a frank and reassuring character, which was published in the following Sunday's New York Herald. It was a great scoop; and the London papers spent money frantically on cable toll getting facts on their own situation from New York for their Monday morning issue

A precedent was set, and since that time English financiers have been more approachable. It may be said also that publicity there as in Wall street has done much to clean up admitted wills, and to set honest finance. right with public opinion. The story is well worth recalling, for it has an obvious moral which should never be forgotten

BILL FINALLY GOT HIS INTERVIEW WHEN A MAN MARRIES

IB HE SUPPOSED TO ESPOUSE ENTIRE FAMILY?

That He Actually Marries His Wife and All Her Relatives-How It Works.

"Does a man marry his wife's family?" He claims he doesnit. But a prominent society woman declared not long ago that he does, no matter what he thinks about it, and more recently a prominent college professor made the same statement

Looking around among one's acquaintances, for evidence, it is a pretty general fact that the wife's family is more in evidence than the husband's. One hears more of the wife's kin, and the children seem to be better acquainted with relatives on the maternal side.

When mother's relatives come a-visiting they are made much of and given the run of the house. If any of father's relatives have the temerity to invite themselves for an extended visit there is a chill in the home atmosphere and nobody acts naturalleast of all father, who is made to feel that he is imposing upon the good nature of his overworked spouse.

The wife's relatives feel that it is not only their right but their bounden duty to butt in, no matter what the circumstances. And usually the buttin is accepted meekly and endured more or less amiably by the entire Elton J. Moughton family. Any husband who is a gentleman will do his kicking away from home, or, if he cannot contain himself at the moment, go down and poke the furnace and commune with the cat.

And yet, on the whole, the wife's relatives seldom do the amount of damage that a husband's relatives can do, once they determine to make themselves felt.

When a husband's mother decides that his children are not being brought up right, or that his wife is extravagant or a poor housekeeper, etc, and that her interference is necessary, real trouble starts, not only for the man's wife but even more so for the man himself. His mother inlaw would never dare to attempt what his own mother will do to him. The wife may have a ne'er do well brother who occasionally comes and camps upon her hospitality. But if the husband has such a brother, nine times in ten the brother has married and expects his more prosperous relatives to support a wife and numerous As for fathers in law on both sides they don't count appreciably. By the time a man becomes a father-inlaw he has been so well trained into his proper sphere that he wisely refuses to mix in any kind of family affairs that do not concern his finances. Anyway there is usually a chord of sympathetic understanding between a man and his father in law, while every wife knows the wiles that will bind her father in-law to her for ever and aye -Philadelphia Bulletin.

WOMAN PENSIONER AT 108

Widow of a Veteran of the Confederate Army Is Placed on First Class Roll.

Montgomery, Fla.-Mrs. Esther Dees of Montgomery county, one hundred and eight years old and widow of a Confederate veteran, has been placed on the first class pension roll of the state by Auditor M. C. Allgood.

Mrs. Dees is among the first to be placed on the first class roll under the law which provides that widows of Confederate veterans who are more than seventy years of age shall be entitled to draw a first class pension.

This law was passed by the legislature at its last session and Mrs. Dees is one of the first to qualify.

When Mrs. Dees' application was received, Auditor Aligood placed her name on the first class roll and requested Gardener Courtney of the cap-Itol to send her a handsome bouquet

The last legislature THE CLEARWATER passed two bills relating to bonding for good roads. One was the idea of an issue of $100,000 in county warrants to build as many miles of hard roads as the money would buy. The other was to bond the county for $450,000 to take up the $200,000 issue now outstanding for the special road district and give the remainder of the county the balance of the issue for good roads in every part of the county. At the meeting which reresented practically every part of the county the majority of the delegates were heartly in favor of the bond issue of $450,000 and a committee ter, and the arrest of John J.
