Manning: Group will try again to abolish Longwood cop force

I won't put up with any of their bull. I don't deal in personalities, I deal in issues.

-Police Chief Greg Manning

By GEORGE DUNCAN

LONGWOOD — Longwood Police Chief Greg Manning charged Thursday that two city commissioners want to abolish the police department and will attempt to do so in spite of the recent consolidation referendum that was defeated by voters.

Manning said incumbent Paul Lovstrand and newly-elected Steve Miller will make the attempt in spite of the wishes of voters.

"Both he (Lovstrand) and Miller have already stated to individuals that they will try to get rid of the police department and go against the referendum. They are serving their own agenda and not the needs of the people they represent," Manning said.

County was loyal to Bush

By J. MARK GARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Most Seminole County neighborhoods remained loyal to President George Bush, presenting him with wins in 118 of the county's 127 precincts with voters.

President-elect Bill Clinton won only nine of the precincts in Seminole County, most of them in predominantly Democratic precincts in the Sanford area. Independent Ross Perot won no precincts, but did obtain second-place standing — mostly behind Bush — in 12 precincts, including three Sanford-area precincts.

The precinct vote was released by the Seminole County Supervisor of Elections office Wednesday.

Voters in Midway, Bookertown, Precinct 19 in southwest Sanford, and the small Sanford precincts 124 and 125 gave their majority vote to the Democratic governor from Arkansas. Two Altamonte Springs precincts also voted for Clinton.

Despite his Democratic Party affiliation, U.S. Sen. Bob Graham attracted the votes of Seminole County residents in droves. Graham breezed past GOP challenger Bill Grant in 104 precincts. Grant claimed victory in only eight precincts.

Work on power lines to continue

By NICK FREIFAUF

LAKE MARY — While Seminole County continues working with Insurance Company of North America to obtain a new contractor for the Lake Mary Boulevard widening, Lake Mary has protected itself.

During last night's city commission meeting, City Attorney Ned Julian revealed that an agreement had been reached with St. Paul surety, the city's bonding company, to obtain a new contractor to complete the undergrounding of power lines, part of the original overall contract with Mahoney Construction Company.

Mahoney had been handling the undergrounding work along the boulevard, in conjunction with the widening project being handled by the county. The project stopped in July when Mahoney revealed he could no longer continue due to financial problems.

Julian requested two separate approvals from the commission; that they officially determine a declaration of default against Mahoney, and approve a takeover agreement with St. Paul, to obtain a new contractor to handle the undergrounding work.

The City Commission unanimously approved both requests, with little hesitation.

Julian said St. Paul expected the

Sanford Historic Trust Tour of Homes

Bob Cassels relaxes with one of his many four-footed friends.

Lush nostalgia, but atmosphere is homey

By DEL FREEMAN
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Bob Cassels formerly owned a home in downtown Orlando which didn't have as much charm as he would have liked, he said. Now as the fourth owner of his historic home on Oak Avenue, he has all the charm he could ask for. He will share that charm with ticket-holders to the upcoming Sanford Historic Trust Tour of Homes in December.

"I always wanted to do an old house," said Bob, who like the privacy factor of the home. Taller than its neighbor on one side, and boasting an empty lot on the other, it could well be the only residence in the area.

While he's kept the furnishings to the burnished treasures of another era, in an effort to repeat the history of the home, he's modernized such things as the entertainment center, with none the wiser. A larger-than-life chest in the living room opens mirrored doors which slide back into the interior to reveal stereo equipment which is wired throughout the home, and a television which pulls out and swivels for viewing.

Just next door, a painting of a cache of tethered game birds in the parlor, done by his grandmother in 1904, has the texture of the Old Masters; and many of the touches added by a former owner, French in ancestry, complement the historic theme.

"When you stand at the front door, (which is the original beveled glass), you notice that the house isn't built in a shotgun manner, and I like that," he said. A visitor at the door can see only the front room, as the doors of the interior are all slightly askew so as not to afford a view through the interior.

Bob had done some of the work on his 3,200 square foot himself, and has contracted other work. An upstairs porch has been matched to the exterior of the downstairs porch, and is accessed by stepping through large windows, (from the movie, Swamp Thing), in an upstairs bedroom. From here, you overlook the gargoyles he has placed on the porch pillars, and get a view of the three-pattern shingles of the home's exterior.

A third floor bedroom boasts the original gas fixtures from another era, and offers a half bath and a sitting room with breathtaking view. Looking out the fan-shaped window at the rear, one gets a close look at the tin roof that seems to await the first good shower in order to lull its owners into a peaceful sleep.

Judge orders release of documents

GAINESVILLE — A judge has ordered prosecutors to release about 2,400 more documents on the Gainesville student slayings by Dec. 1.

In a four-page order issued Thursday, Circuit Judge Stan Morris said the state must make public reports detailing the murder investigation of five college students in August 1980.

Exempted from the order are documents which Morris has determined would prejudice the rights of Danny Harold Rolling, 38, who is charged with five counts of first-degree murder in the grisly mutilation murders.

Some 112 documents were released Oct. 27 and gave glimpses into the extensive murder investigation and suspect Rolling, plus other suspects considered by investigators.

Still to be released, however, are crime-scene investigation reports and documents on the murder probe that led investigators to the Rolling to the crimes.

The reports Morris ordered released are those that Public Defender Rick Parker has reviewed and has not sought to keep sealed until Rolling's trial, scheduled for September 1983.

TV station refuses ads from singer

MIAMI — A television station has refused to air concert ads for Argentine folk singer Mercedes Soza, an international symbol of resistance to her nation's right-wing military regime in the 1970s.

WLTW-TV, the most-watched Spanish-language station in Miami's conservative Cuban-American community, initially agreed to run her ads, but then reneged, said Soza's promoter Norberto Cobo of Laser Productions.

"The head of sales told the saleswoman that it wasn't going to go for the simple reason that the lady is a communist," said Cobo.

Antonio Oquendo, the new general manager of the station, strongly denied Thursday that the commercials were blocked because of Soza's leftist politics.

"We are sold out and we just couldn't accept it," he said. "That would have been true for anybody." He said post-hurricane and pre-Christmas ads were keeping WLTW busy.

He also said the station had the right to reject any commercial, but stated WLTW has no policy of reviewing the political leanings of the person or organization taking out the ads.

7 indicted for telemarketing fraud

TAMPA — A task force to prosecute telemarketing fraud in the retiree-rich Tampa Bay area opened for business indicting seven people on charges they ran a phony campground resale ring.

U.S. Attorney Robert Gensman said Thursday five of the suspects arrested so far were part of the Nationwide Campground Resales telemarketing organization, which operated in Palm Harbor and Las Vegas, Nev.

Prosecutors said the company would offer to resell campground memberships for fees ranging from $250 to $400, but made little effort to do so. The defendants were charged with conspiracy, mail and wire fraud.

Gensman said the task force of federal, state and local agencies was formed after a congressional report last year estimated $40 billion in yearly losses to telemarketing fraud. Many of the victims were elderly, and Florida was among six states with the most "boiler room operations," it noted.

Ocala woman's body found in N.J.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — An Ocala, Fla., woman's body was discovered in a wooded area in New Jersey Thursday. Authorities searched for a woman missing in an unrelated case.

The body of Dorothy Ann Grant, 55, was found off a dirt road near the Rutgers University Athletic Center in Piscataway, said Middlesex County Prosecutor Robert Gluck.

Grant, who had been missing since Oct. 7, was found shot in the right temple. A suspect, Robert Miller, 34, of Piscataway, killed himself as police approached his car Oct. 12, officials said.

Authorities were searching for a Piscataway woman whose 3-year-old daughter said a man forced his way into her mother's van, and then apparently dropped her off outside a day care center.

They were combing wooded areas for 50-year-old Gail Sholler, who authorities believe was kidnapped Tuesday night while she went grocery shopping with her daughter.

The little girl was found at 6:30 a.m. on the lawn of a day care center in Piscataway and the family's unoccupied blue van was parked close by.

The child was wet and cold, and suffering from exposure, but unharmed. She told police that a black man wearing a black sweatshirt, dark jeans and black sneakers came into the van when her mother waited at a light.

"We have no reason to believe she is necessarily dead," Gluck said. "We don't necessarily have a murder ... We have a missing person."

Snipers prompt warning

AAA cautions use of stretch on Florida interstate

By RON WORD
Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Jacksonville's business community worried about the effects of a warning by a national auto club for motorists to avoid Interstate 295 amid fears of further shooting or rock-throwing attacks.

Debra Lewis, who has a bullet lodged in her jaw and can't hear out of her left ear, worries about who could be next.

"When you go on 295 right now ... it's playing Russian roulette," she said Thursday.

Such attacks and a fatal assault by rock-throwers prompted the American Automobile Association to warn motorists away from the road ringing the south and west sides of Jacksonville.

State officials and some business owners are concerned the unusual warning will harm Florida's image on the eve of winter tourist season, though the state's own visitors' center is advising motorists to avoid the road.

"I'm afraid it has hurt us, all of us," said Joan Reid, co-manager of La Quinta Inn on I-295 near Orange Park. "Hopefully, they can catch their doggone culprit."

She said snowbirds from New York and Canada account for about 20 percent of her business.

The Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce announced Thursday it had received pledges of $32,000 in reward money for information leading to the arrests of those involved in the attacks. Two-thirds of the money was offered by AAA of Florida and the Chamber.

About 19 confirmed violent incidents have been reported since June and 100 other reports are unconfirmed by police. One motorist died July Fourth when he was hit in the head with a piece of concrete and lost control of his car. There have been no arrests.

Sheriff Jim McMillan is asking the Florida National Guard for help in providing night-vision equipment and possibly troops to patrol the highway.

"This is not vandalism or a malicious act. This is attempted murder," he said.

Police suspect several people have been involved, including copy cats.

Mrs. Lewis, 38, said she is in favor of whatever can be done to stop the violence.

"I just hope they catch whoever it is," she said.

Mrs. Lewis returned to work part time this week.

Chiles asks agencies to trim $300 million to help cut budget

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles' latest request to cut state spending and payroll has agency heads looking for new places to trim.

"What we're trying to do is get the agencies to help us find where we can cut the bureaucracy in a way which least damages their ability to deliver programs," Budget Director David Coburn said Wednesday.

Chiles is asking agencies to trim $300 million from their budget requests for the 1983-84 fiscal year that begins next July.

They're being asked to come up with plans to cut 20 percent of their top managers, in addition to programs that can be sacrificed.

"I think there is a perception out there that government is loaded with people that push paper and don't do anything else," Coburn said. "We're trying to find out if we've got managers in the bureaucracy who aren't doing anything."

Several agency chiefs said they've already cut staff to the bone. John Joyce, spokesman for the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, said his agency has trimmed 123 positions and $11 million from its budget in the last few years.

"It's getting to the point where we can't squeeze anything out," Joyce said.

FDLE has identified 13 positions that could be cut in 1983-84, but "we really don't feel like we can afford to let them go."

The governor's office has asked the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services to cut 50 management positions. Spokeswoman Lynda Russell said that request is doubly difficult because the agency is trying to reorganize and create four new districts with no money.

Department of Insurance Chief of Staff Herb Clark also said it's hard to comply with the governor's request.

"We have been as cheap as we can be," Clark said.

Coburn said he is aware of the difficulty in making some cuts, but said revenues for next year may fall short of preliminary estimates.

"I'm not at all sure that we could cut 20 percent (of top managers) and still deliver the same product," he said. "But we don't know until we look."

The governor's budget for the fiscal year that begins July 1 must be delivered to the Legislature by Dec. 18. Legislators will consider the budget in the regular session beginning in February.

Cargo plane goes down in ocean; crew saved

By SHOMAS WARREN
Associated Press

DANIA — A cargo plane developed engine trouble and narrowly missed high-rise buildings in a heavily populated resort area before ditching offshore early this morning.

FAA spokeswoman Kathleen Bergen said from Atlanta the crew of the four-engine propeller-powered DC-7 had just left Miami International Airport for Santo Domingo in the Dominican Republic at 2:15 a.m. when trouble struck.

"We lost one engine on takeoff," the pilot, Bernard Leowit, 58, said in broken English. "It was a heavy load. We cleared the buildings on the beach and started dumping fuel to get light."

The struggling plane, which lost a second engine moments later, was airborne only about ten minutes total, he said. "We never climbed more than 400 feet."

Leowit said he'd hoped to set the craft down at nearby Opa-locka Airport, but was flying so low he feared he would crash somewhere in metropolitan Miami. So he continued east over Miami Beach, then turned north along the coastline.

"It was a sight, man — we saw 'em fly over the boardwalk," said police Sgt. Vincent Rosiak of nearby Hollywood.

"There were no flames but it was flying low — about 150 feet."

The plane, carrying five people and 31,000 pounds of textiles, went down in 8 to 12 feet of water about 80 yards offshore at John U. Lloyd State Recreation Area, about a half-mile north of the Dania city pier, according to the Coast Guard.

After impact, it floated long enough for the crew to inflate a small yellow raft and jump out of an emergency exit. They reached the beach dry and a bit bloody.

The crew was treated for minor injuries by emergency medical technicians, said Petty Officer Paul Zimkowski. One crew member was taken to Memorial Hospital in Hollywood; an administrator there said he was in stable condition and had asked that no further information about him be released.

"I'm still scared," said crew member Carlos Marchini. He sat in a police squad car, his white uniform shirt bloodstained from a small gash on his head.

He couldn't recall which of the high-rise hotels or apartment buildings along Miami Beach the plane might have just missed.

"During that kind of situation, you don't have time to remember."

Prosecution of lewd or lascivious requires more sight or sense

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Masturbating in front of a child isn't a crime unless the child sees or senses something lewd is going on, the state Supreme Court has ruled unanimously.

The unsigned decision upheld a lower appellate court ruling that reversed the conviction of a man sentenced to a year in jail after being charged with lewdness for masturbating in front of his 15-month-old daughter.

"While the child need not be able to articulate or even comprehend what the offender is doing, the child must see or sense that a lewd or lascivious act is taking place for a violation to occur," Florida's high court said Thursday.

"It ... is a triumph of good judgment and common sense over the state's cramped and tortured view of the law," said Bruce Rogov, a Fort Lauderdale attorney who represented Martin Werner.

Nancy Palmer, an Orlando attorney representing the Florida Bar Family Law Section, had filed a brief in support of Werner's conviction and expressed dismay at Thursday's ruling.

The justices hadn't considered research in how much a 15-month-old takes in about what's going on nearby, Palmer said.

"I don't think we should take chances," she said. Werner had told his wife he had masturbated in the presence of their daughter shortly after the incident in December 1987, Rogov said the charges were pressed after Werner and his wife got a divorce.

Werner was charged with violating a statute that makes it a second-degree felony to commit knowingly "any lewd or lascivious act in the presence of any child under the age of 16 years."

The Hollywood man was found guilty October 1990 but didn't serve any of his sentence — a year in jail and 11 years' probation — before the 4th District Court of Appeal reversed his conviction.

At his trial, Werner's attorney argued that lawmakers were talking about acts in front of a child who sees something, but doesn't know what.

Cop scandal goes before grand jury

By Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — A new grand jury is looking into a fatal double shooting by an off-duty police officer at his home and charges that two police officers planted drugs on suspects.

The 23-member grand jury started its six-month term this week and will begin its closed-door meetings next week.

"All we're trying to do is start off with as fair and as impartial a group as we can," said Assistant State Attorney Wayne Ellis. "I don't want to get anybody that's a close friend ... of these three officers. I also don't want somebody with an ax to grind."

Potential grand jurors were questioned about their knowledge of a drug scandal that led to charges against two officers and what they knew about the double slaying.

The potential grand jurors said they did not know any of the participants in the two cases.

In the drug case, officers Scott R. McRae and Thomas D. Kypke were arrested last week amid allegations they planted crack cocaine on suspects. They face up to 25 years in prison if convicted.

Five officers who also work on the elite Community Problem Response team are still under investigation in the scandal.

that "the state does not have to prove in any way, fashion or form that the child perceived the act of masturbation. All the state has to prove was the fact that the defendant masturbated in front of the child," the Supreme Court opinion quotes.

The 4th DCA ruled the law can't be broken unless a child sees or senses that something lewd or lascivious is occurring "although the child's perception does not have to include comprehension of the nature of the act."

"The question presented to this Court is one of statutory interpretation, determining the meaning of 'presence,'" Thursday's opinion reads.

The high court upheld the reasoning of the lower appellate court.

"We find that the complete definition of 'presence' encompasses sensory awareness as well as physical proximity," the court wrote, citing both Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary as well as Black's Law Dictionary.

"Florida courts have interpreted 'presence' in other legal contexts as encompassing more than mere physical proximity," the Supreme Court noted.

Joan Fowler, an assistant attorney general, did not return a phone call Thursday. Sharon Wolfe, an attorney representing the Guardian Ad Litem program in Miami, had filed arguments backing up the state's position but said Thursday she preferred to not comment.

Longwood police consolidation issue not over

In a democracy, it is a fact of political life that voters have the final say when they cast ballots in a voting booth.

In Longwood, though, there are now allegations that several city commissioners want to undercut the voters' decision in a recent referendum. Sixty-seven percent of Longwood voters cast ballots against consolidating the police department with the Seminole County Sheriff's Department.

Now Police Chief Greg Manning has charged that an incumbent city commissioner, Paul Lovstrand, and newly-elected commissioner Steve Miller will attempt to do legislatively what they could not do at the ballot box, i.e. consolidate the police department with the sheriff's department.

There are both honest and dishonest ways to deal with what may be a continuing issue in Longwood.

The honest way is simply to deal openly with it. Mr. Lovstrand and Mr. Miller want to continue to gather facts and information about consolidation and, sometime in the future, present their case to the voters again. That is legitimate. Democracy allows proponents to make their case again if they so desire.

However, no commissioner should use his office to try to undercut or dismantle an issue where the citizens have already spoken and opinion decisively.

It also seems clear that, if the Longwood police department is ever consolidated, that change should come in another referendum and not through the vote of the commissioners. A commissioner is not the taxpayer's representative in a referendum, and the taxpayer's representative should be the voters.

However, consolidation of the police department can continue to make their case through facts, persuasion and legislation. So can opponents for that matter.

That's what democracy is all about.

Voter's have spoken

I am disappointed in your Year End page articles in the Oct. 26 edition regarding the community college in the Space Coast area.

Your editorial was the standard "institutional good" type. It was more than that - how about an institutionalized institution? A lot of dollars are being spent to maintain a continuing of the character of the local community. A community like ours cannot be destroyed in a referendum, and your editorial is a referendum.

Also, how can you expect us to do a better job than the incumbent if you let us govern the community? If you let us govern, we will let you govern. We will let you govern, we will let you govern.

For all the Seminole County citizens and students who have voted for Space Coast, they have elected a man with a proven record, character and a comprehensive approach to state and local problems.

An effort for starving Somalia

A full-page advertisement in The New York Times a few days ago caused me to reflect on Cain's contemptuous response to the Almighty's inquiry about his brother's disappearance: "Am I my brother's keeper?" That story did not have a happy ending.

But history has decreed otherwise. Through the ages, the Cain-Abel biblical tragedy has become a defining hallmark of our moral obligation to suffering neighbors, friends and foreign refugees.

Today, our political, religious and national heritages incorporate an answer confirming that we are our brothers' - and sisters' - keepers.

That enlarged definition of our humanity was the reason the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee for Somali Relief took out a full-page ad in The New York Times.

"Help us build a humane-refugee center for 20,000 Somalis," the ad implored its readers. After the center is completed, it will be handed over to the U.N. High Commissioner on Refugees.

Although titled "An Appeal to American Jews," the ad touched thousands of non-Jews like myself. Humanity is indivisible when suffering is universal.

There is a universality of horror in the face of a people's suffering that may result in 1.5 million Somalis starving to death. There is a universality of compassion for the 80 percent of all Somali children who are barely able to eke out an existence due to severe malnutrition.

If any people on this earth understand what it is to suffer recurring threats to their existence and still prevail, it is the Jewish people. Nobody could even begin to fault world Jewry if it concentrated its resources and energies on just trying to maintain a secure and stable Israel as an eternal sanctuary for Jews in the diaspora.

When thousands of Ethiopian Jews, the Falashas, were endangered by starvation and religious persecution, Israelis mounted Operation Exodus and rescued them for resettlement in Israel.

But 99 percent of the Somali people are Sunni Moslems. That religious fact is irrelevant to the sponsoring agency, the Jewish Coalition for Somali Refugee Relief.

"As Jews, we cannot stand silent in the face of Somali suffering - especially during this High Holy Day season," the ad said. "Our own history cries out to us to do all we can to save these people before it's too late. To recognize their pain with the compassion of a fellow victim (my emphasis)."

A few weeks ago, I wrote about the countrywide starvation in Somalia that threatens to decimate its future. "Thousands of children are dying each day," a very dear friend, Somali's vice president, Omar Mohallim Mohammed, told me and my wife during a recent reunion. (We had not seen each other in 22 years.)

It's possible that my heart particularly reaches out to Somalia because of our love for Omar, but it is natural humanitarian instincts that govern the desire to save unknown babies across the ocean.

Those same instincts inspired the Jewish Coalition's ad.

Am I my brother's keeper? That story did not have a happy ending.

Subsidies squander taxpayer funds

No one really knows how much of the people's money is wasted on environmentally destructive government subsidies, but one thing is for sure: It's plenty.

Rep. Mike Spier, D-Ohio, who chairs the House subcommittee on environmental, energy and natural resources, says, "The federal government loses billions of dollars each year in subsidized sales, leases, rents and exchanges of taxpayer assets."

Some subsidies begin as sound policy meant to ease the pain for a budding industry, then lead like a comet after the original intent has been served. Others are the result of the "Quack Club" crowd, the high-priced lobbyists who have the ear of Congress. Once established, subsidies develop constituencies who quickly counter claims that the sun is no longer in the public trough for so long as the Republic stands. No cry of anguish is quite as American as that of a member pleading that some public giveaway is really the story behind the broken promises of democracy.

Our national efforts will be more effective the more we focus the spotlight on public programs that drain the U.S. Treasury to a lesser extent. As a sample of public subsidies, consider the following:

Subsidized timber sales are a plague on our national forests. They artificially increase demand for virgin forest timber, depress the market for alternative building supplies and swallow $200 million a year in the deal to build roads leading to public lands. The Forest Service admits that 74 of the 130 national forests lose money on timber sales that cost more to administer than they realize in receipts for felled trees. By some accounts, timber sales programs in 89 of the national forests are chronic money losers. And who picks up the tab to replant the forests once they have been cleared? The taxpayer.

The Treasury also gets hit for about $50 million each year to subsidize grazing on public land because few to grass cattle and sheep don't meet the costs to run the program. In the process, large tracts of public lands are in bad shape from overgrazing.

If paying nothing to graze on a public resource is an indirect subsidy, then the 1873 Mining Law breaks the mold. Approximately $9.5 billion worth of hard rock minerals like gold and copper were extracted from public land in 1990, according to recent estimates, but the Treasury didn't receive a red-cent in royalties thanks to this archaic statute. Because there are no royalty payments, the mining companies keep all the cash.

Subsidizing the price of water to grow surplus crops with the double-whammy benefit of subsidized policy. Figures on this one are hard to pin down. Each year by the most conservative official estimates, taxpayers pick up a $200 million water bill so some farmers can irrigate crops that are in turn subsidized to the tune of $300 million in payments other farmers receive not to grow those crops. It's funny.

Since the end of World War II, the GAO tells us, taxpayers have lost billions of dollars in a Department of Energy program to provide enriched uranium to the nuclear power industry. This has occurred because a provision in the law has been ignored that requires the full costs be recovered by the price charged for the service. And additional billions are said to be locked on when taxpayers get the bill in de-commissioning the enrichment plants.

The most recent subsidy bonanza to come to light involves defense contractors that have been allowed to charge pollution cleanup costs to the Pentagon. In providing material to fight the Cold War, some contractors have, for example, contaminated groundwater with toxic chemicals. Even in cases where the contractors were warned to advance to avoid such contamination, the cleanup costs are now being ruled an "ordinary business expense" that's being passed on for payment to the taxpayer. The bill may reach $1 billion for the top 10 contractors alone.

Advertisers will support sound policies based on genuine need. Fairness, compassion and a willingness to encourage innovation are part of our national tradition. But costly and environmentally destructive handouts neither deserve a place in that tradition, nor should they be allowed to continue.

Other subsidies are the work of the Quack Club crowd.

Postmaster general may earn nickname

WASHINGTON - The next time you feel like exploding at a spouse who forgets to put the cap back on a tube of toothpaste, heed this advice from the postmaster general: "Express your anger honestly but with love and respect."

Marvin Runyon has been dispensing such monthly homilies to postal employees like an arm-chair shrink in what some observers believe is a matter of life and death for the shell-shocked Postal Service staff of more than 700,000.

The blizzard of brochures and flyers falling on postal employees suggests that Runyon realizes he may be sitting on a time bomb. One of his "Healthy Steps to Releasing Anger" includes a cartoon depicting a female controlling her temper over the fact that some toothpaste has seeped into her sink because of her husband's neglect. It lists four steps "to release (anger) and maintain the respect of others."

Since taking office last July, Runyon - a.k.a. "Carvin Marvin" - has presided over the break-up of the largest civilian workforce in the United States. He has vowed to eliminate 30,000 postal management jobs this year as part of a sweeping restructuring plan. He's already closed more than 50 regional management offices and shaken up various departments.

Days after Runyon announced the shake-up, workers at postal headquarters were informed that "many of our employees will be facing decisions that may cause undue stress, (so) all headquarters employees will be offered the availability of group stress reduction workshops and personal counseling...."

"Some people have become concerned that we may be making these changes too quickly," he told a congressional panel. "However, with change of this nature and magnitude, there's no way to do it slowly."

Some also fear there may be no way to do it non-violently. Congressional investigators have been concerned about violence in the postal workplace for a long time. At least 38 people have been killed by current or former postal workers over the last six years, including five in a widely publicized case in Michigan last year when a disgruntled former employee murdered four supervisors and then took his own life.

Last week, Runyon visited that Michigan post office and told employees there that "for any company like the Postal Service to be successful, there can't be an adversarial relationship between employees and managers," according to a postal spokesman.

But close observers are concerned that Runyon's changes are fueling an already explosive situation. "There's anger in the way it was done," Vincent Palladino, president of the National Association of Postal Supervisors, told our associate Ed Henry. "Especially the speed of it and some of the tactics that are being used to carry it out."

Palladino complains that some managers have been given 48 hours to take a down-graded position with a frozen salary for two years. Since it's a demotion, the employee's pay is likely to be cut at the end of the two years.

Those who refuse this option are thrown into a "pool," where they wait at a transition center, hoping that another job will open up. Critics call these centers "concentration camps" because employees are taught how to put together a resume so they can apply for a new Postal Service position - or an outside job.

Express your anger honestly but with love and respect.

Manning

 A referendum to consolidate the Longwood Police Department with the Seminole County Sheriff's Department was defeated this week when 87 percent of the voters opposed it. Lovstrand backed the referendum.
 Several opponents of the measure charged it was a personal vendetta against Manning.
 Manning said a personal dislike of him was "part of it," but said the overriding issue was who would control the city.
 Incoming Commissioner Steve Miller said he had only spoken to Manning once and said the police chief's charges were "ridiculous."
 "I think what Mr. Manning is trying to build is a defense about what may or may not happen in the future. He made a comment, heard a rumor about this or that. That's ridiculous. What Mr. Manning should do is to ask me, that's what he needs to do and I've only met him once."
 Miller said he never made such statements nor, to his knowledge, had Lovstrand.
 "It did not happen in the referendum but it probably will in time, even Chief Manning has admitted that," Miller said.

Miller said he was upset by the charges, but said his job was watching the taxpayer's money, not engaging in personality disputes.
 "My job is to watch out for the taxpayer's money, not the police chief," he said.
 Lovstrand said although he still believed that consolidation was an idea whose time had come, he accepted the will of the people.
 "I'm sure it (consolidation) will come up in the future as the budget needs dictate, but not in the near future. I accept the will of the people at this time," Lovstrand said.
 Manning also charged that retired Longwood resident Jimmy Ross was influencing the two commissioners in their effort to abolish the police department and to control the city.
 "As stated publicly before, we've had eight city managers in seven years. They've been able to control who's elected and who's not," he said.
 Manning said he had been singled out by the group because, "I won't put up with any of their bull. I don't deal in personalities, I deal in issues."
 He said if any of his opponents had a legitimate complaint, he would handle it but "they want people to do whatever they say."

 Ross had a right to his own opinions but "he doesn't have a right to inflict his own beliefs on the city. He doesn't have the right to run other people's lives."
 Miller said he doubted Ross had anything to do with the consolidation measure.
 "I don't think Mr. Ross had anything to do with it. Mr. Lovstrand did the research on it as a tax-saving measure," Miller said.
 The referendum closed the issue for now, but there was still a question of cost that had to be watched, he said.
 "The people have spoken, for now the subject is closed. If costs spiral, that's something that will have to be looked into later," he said.
 Lovstrand said he would comment on Manning's charges because both he and the police chief were public officials but said he would not bring in the name of a private citizen "who is merely exercising his constitutional rights."
 Ross was unable to be contacted after repeated attempts.
 Manning said the aim of the referendum's backers was not just to consolidate, but to abolish the local department.

 combine symmetrically for an overall decorator-finish effect while losing none of the comfortable feel of the home. An old black stove, formerly situated in what was once a separate building housing the kitchen, has been moved into the dining room. The hard pine floors throughout the downstairs are bare, reflecting the glow of the old pieces Bob has placed strategically throughout.
 Moving through the foyer, formal parlor, living area and dining room, the hallway angles off on the ground floor to provide a half bath on one side and a pantry-like affair on the other. Pocket doors which were removed from the front of the house have been retrofitted to conceal a storage area, and the kitchen gives way to the outdoors.
 Though it's hard to choose, the kitchen is certainly one of the more striking rooms. Done primarily in aqua, the eye is drawn to an aqua bench along one wall which Bob explained is a Boston trolley car seat. Patented in 1967, the former trolley car seat is the type that used to be flipped by the conductor at the end of the line so as to face in the ongoing direction.
 Bob is delighted, he said, with the old house. He always wanted but never thought he could afford. "This is one of the few areas where prices have gone up in the last few years," he said. Although he expects to live happily here for a number of years, it is heartening to him that a house down the street recently sold for $149,000, should he ever need to sell.
 In keeping with his privacy theme, Bob has turned the outside yard into an Eden of delight. A cistern which formerly caught water for washing for the first tenants has been converted to a pool, complete with dolphin fountain. Wooden walkways lead around the side of the home to a hot tub, and further along the side of the home to an outside seating deck. Directly across from the back door is the carriage house, complete with carport, which used to be a rental unit.

 "We've decided to keep it as a guest house in the future and will perhaps get a pool table for it," Bob said, "because good tenants are so hard to come by." It was formerly rented, he said, to an 87-year-old woman. Situated so that the guest cottage kitchen fronts the cistern-cum-pool, Bob said she would frequently unlatch her kitchen window, swinging it to the interior and chatting with him while he cooled off in the pool.
 "There are a lot of things you can't feel what you want to do about until you live in a home for a while," Bob said, "and they say it takes about seven years to really do an old home."

 Still, for all its lush nostalgia, this is a home to be lived in. Bob's three dogs and two cats roam freely throughout the rooms, bounding up and down stairs and making themselves completely at home.
 He would still like to add a columnar front gateway with picket fencing and perhaps a restored drive, he said, but whether on the inside looking out, or the outside looking in, this house looks and feels done, and done mightily well.
 All that is left is to kick back with some mellow music on the stereo, a glass of wine for sipping, the ease of whichever pet elects to sidle up alongside for scratching, and let history repeat itself.

Recap

 voters were loyal to their former city police veteran Charley Fagan in the Seminole County sheriff's race, but not all. Fagan edged past GOP victor Don Ealinger in 21 of the 127 precincts. Fagan gained the top vote in 10 Sanford-area precincts along with Midway, Bookertown and Goldsboro.
 But Fagan lost three wholly-Sanford precincts. He lost 20, which includes Hidden Lake; 23, in the Celery Avenue-25th Street core area; and 128, northwest of State Road 46 and Myrtle Avenue.
 Many Democratic Midway voters apparently crossed party lines to support Ealinger. Many residents of the black community east of Sanford were angered last summer when Ealinger staged a raid on a boarding home where a white woman said she was raped by up to 15 black men.
 Although Precinct 3 voters granted their overwhelming vote for Fagan, voting suggested many black Democrats showed their support for the Republican sheriff.
 Fagan received 79 percent of the vote and Ealinger, 21 percent. Party registration in Precinct 3 is 84 percent Democratic and 13 percent Republican. Precinct 3 includes 1,170 black voters and 245 white voters. Of the black voters, 1,120 are Democrats. Of the white voters, 144 are Republicans.

County commission voting was nearly a mirror image in each of the three district races. Ray Bertrand won 12 precincts in his unsuccessful bid against incumbent Pat Warren, again, mostly Democratic voting areas that supported Fagan. Ginger Bowman won 14 precincts in her opposition to Republican Dick Van Der Weide.
 Fred Harden proved to be the most popular local Democratic candidate, collecting 43,032 votes and topping GOP candidate Daryl McLain of Sanford in 16 precincts. Fagan received the second-highest number of votes in a local race in the county, 41,119.

 Although Harden was a founder and past president of the Friends of the Wekiva River Inc., residents in the two Markham Woods Road precincts which border the river voted for McLain. Harden also lost in his own Precinct 3. All three of the northwest county precincts are predominantly Republican.

 power line undergrounding, and related irrigation line undergrounding might be able to resume within four to six weeks.
 "Now we have some good news," commented City Manager John Litton. "Mr. Julian has an early Christmas present for us."
 Julian explained, "In seeking a contractor to handle the project, St. Paul has obtained a bid that is lower than that we originally agreed on with Mahoney. As a result, the project will cost us $100,000 less than originally projected."
 In response to a question from Commissioner George Duryea, Julian assured the commission the city will not incur any additional liability in agreements through St. Paul with a new contractor to handle the power line project, which will be done in cooperation with Florida Power Corporation.

 Mayor Randy Morris assured Julian it was indeed a welcome gift. "This will give us a great additional amount of money to work with as this project continues," he said. "Of course, it will be up to the next commission to take care of how the money might be used."
 Morris, along with Commissioner Paul Tremel, will be replaced in December, when newly elected Mayor Lowry Rockett and Commissioner Gary Brender are sworn into office.

Tougher smog testing could cost motorists

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Millions of car owners can expect repair bills as high as $120 under a tough new federal vehicle inspection program designed to improve air quality in urban areas.

The Environmental Protection Agency announced revamped, biannual inspection and maintenance requirements Thursday, saying they were among the most cost-effective ways to reduce smog and carbon monoxide pollution — by up to one-third — in cities and urban counties.

The new, 10-minute tests are expected to be phased in by states beginning Jan. 1, 1994, with all required test programs to be in place by 1996, the EPA said.

The rules don't reduce the level of allowable exhaust emissions; they simply improve and extend testing methods. In areas that have emissions testing, some vehicles that now pass muster may fail the tougher inspections.

The rules will cover 181 cities and metropolitan areas from Maine to California, but the most stringent new testing procedures will be necessary in 83 areas that currently have serious, severe or extreme air quality problems.

In those 83 cities and metropolitan counties, vehicle testing will include not only exhaust emissions, but evaporative engine and fuel-system emissions. Cars will be tested on a treadmill, rather than allowed to idle, to better simulate actual driving, officials said.

In the remaining areas, which have modest or marginal air pollution problems, the new tests will be similar to those already being conducted in many parts of the country, although in some cases some requirements will be tightened or new procedures imposed.

Mandatory testing of automobile tailpipe emissions already is in place in 125 urban areas. The new rules would require vehicles to be tested for the first time in an additional 56 areas and impose a much broader "enhanced" testing program using more advanced technology in 83 cities and metropolitan areas.

EPA officials said that under the new testing programs, about one in every five cars will likely have to be repaired at a cost ranging from $30 to $120. Federal law waives the requirements after repairs of $450.

EPA Administrator William Reilly said in most cases repair costs will be offset by fuel efficiency increases of 7 percent to 13 percent.

The environmental payoff will be significant. Reilly added, with carbon monoxide emission from cars cut by 31 percent and smog pollutants reduced by 28 percent in the urban areas.

Assuring that cars and light trucks are maintained properly is "the single most significant action I know to reduce air pollution," he said.

The EPA estimates that air quality improvements from the tougher vehicle inspection requirements will cost about one-tenth of what it costs to gain the same pollution reductions from industrial sources.

The EPA estimated that because of poor maintenance and faulty emissions control equipment, cars now on the road emit three to four times the amount of pollutants allowed for new vehicles under federal manufacturing standards.

In areas where enhanced testing is required, testers will be prohibited from doing repairs to avoid a possible conflict of interests.

Childhood asthma means 10 million missed school days

By BRENDA G. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — Childhood asthma causes 10 million missed days of school each year and 200,000 hospitalizations annually, and it's on the rise nationwide, researchers say.

"Asthma is the most common chronic disease in childhood. It's the leading cause of days lost from school," said Dr. William R. Taylor of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, lead author of a new study.

The study provides the first nationwide data confirming regional reports that asthma is striking children at an increasing rate, said Dr. Kevin B. Weiss, an asthma researcher at George Washington University who was not part of the study.

The study, published in the November issue of the journal Pediatrics, said 2.7 million children suffered asthma in 1988, the latest year for which data are available.

That was 4.3 percent of all children younger than 18, compared with 3.2 percent in 1981, the previous year in which data were collected in the National Health Interview Study, the researchers said.

Black asthmatic youngsters suffered more impairment in daily activities and more frequent hospitalizations than others, said the study, co-written by Dr. Paul W. Newacheck of the University of California, San Francisco.

That may be because blacks, who lack insurance more often than whites, are more likely to go without a doctor, wait until the last minute and rely on emergency-room care, Taylor said.

"When dealing with a chronic disease, we need to focus much more on preventing dysfunction," Taylor said.

Thirty percent of the sufferers had some limitation in activity, compared with a 5 percent rate of limitations of activity in non-asthmatic children, the researchers said.

Asthma caused 10.1 million missed school days, 7.3 million days restricted to bed, 12.9 million contacts with doctors and 200,000 hospitalizations resulting in 1.9 million days of hospitalization, the researchers wrote.

Black children suffered asthma at a 25 percent higher rate than whites. Also, almost 8 percent of black children with asthma could not perform major activities, five times the proportion for white asthmatic children.

Besides getting less routine medical care, black children are more likely to live where known asthma triggers exist, including pets, dust, pollution and household members who smoke, he said.

The CDC reported last month that the national rate of asthma deaths among all ages rose 46 percent during the 1980s, to about 4,700 deaths in 1989, the study's last year. About 10 million Americans have asthma.

Weiss reported in March that asthma costs the country $6.2 billion.

Scientists do not know why asthma is increasing.

Possible reasons include more energy-efficient, tightly built homes that trap irritants inside; greater survival of low-birthweight babies, who may be more asthma-prone; more cigarette smoking by mothers; and more day-care use, which could expose more youngsters to viral infections that may promote asthma.

NOTICE OF CERTIFICATION HEARING ON PROPOSED ELECTRICAL TRANSMISSION LINE CORRIDOR

An application from Florida Power Corporation, number T88-09, for certification to authorize the location of a transmission line corridor, the construction, operation, and maintenance of a 230 kilovolt electrical transmission line, and maintenance of the transmission line right-of-way, was received by the Department of Environmental Regulation on July 2, 1992. The transmission line will run from an electrical generating plant in the vicinity of DeBary, Florida, to a substation in the vicinity of Winter Springs, Florida. The transmission line is commonly referred to as the DeBary-Winter Springs transmission line. The case is pending before the Division of Administrative Hearings, Case No. 88-40187L, prior to action by the Governor and Cabinet, pursuant to the Florida Transmission Line Siting Act, Chapter 403, Part II, Florida Statutes. The corridor will pass through the following local governmental jurisdictions: Volusia County, Seminole County, City of Sanford, City of Lake Mary, City of Longwood, City of Casselberry, and the City of Winter Springs. The transmission line right-of-way to be located within the proposed corridor will typically range up to 150 feet wide for new right-of-way and 175 feet wide for existing right-of-way. In areas where the DeBary-Winter Springs transmission line will parallel existing transmission lines within an existing right-of-way, the combined right-of-way range up to approximately 340 feet wide. The entire corridor area shown will not be utilized.

Pursuant to Section 403.527, Florida Statutes, the certification hearing will be held by the Division of Administrative Hearings commencing on January 26, 1993, at the Orlando-Alamonte Springs Holiday Inn, 230 West Highway 436, Alamonte Springs, Florida, commencing at 10:00 a.m. The purpose of the hearing is to determine whether the application should be approved in whole, approved with modifications and conditions, or denied. In making this determination, the Hearing Officer, and ultimately the Governor and Cabinet, shall consider whether, and the extent to which, the location of the transmission line corridor and the construction and maintenance of the transmission line will:

1. Ensure electric power system reliability and integrity;
2. Meet the electric energy needs of the state in an orderly and timely fashion;
3. Comply with nonprocedural requirements of agencies;
4. Be consistent with applicable local government comprehensive plans; and
5. Effect a reasonable balance between the need for the transmission line as a means of providing abundant low-cost electrical energy and the impact to the public and the environment resulting from the location of the transmission line corridor, and construction, maintenance, and electric and magnetic field effects of the transmission line.

Consideration of individual private property rights, equitable compensation for condemnation proceedings which may be necessary to obtain access and use of the right-of-way, and the electrical need for the transmission line will not be heard at this hearing. Need for the transmission line was previously considered by the Public Service Commission at a separate public hearing.

As requested by Seminole County and Volusia County, local public hearings where members of the public not a party to the certification hearing may testify under oath as to relevant facts and be subject to cross-examination by all parties shall be held on January 26, 1993, at 7:00 p.m. at the DeBary Community Center, 26 South Shell Road, DeBary, Florida, and on January 27, 1993, at 7:00 p.m. at the Orlando-Alamonte Springs Holiday Inn, 230 West Highway 436, Alamonte Springs, Florida.

State agencies and local governments will be studying the application and preparing testimony and evidence for the certification hearing. It is recommended that interested individuals review the applications and bring matters of concern to the appropriate agency's attention as soon as possible (see below for listing of participating agencies).

The application for certification, which more specifically depicts the corridor, is available for public inspection at the following locations:

Florida Power Corporation offices:
General Office
3201 34th Street, South
St. Petersburg, Florida

Longwood District Office
583 East State Road 434

Consideration may be given in this proceeding to corridors alternate to the route preferred by Florida Power Corporation. The applicant may propose corridors secondary to the primary corridor in order to preserve its options, and persons other than the applicant may also propose alternate routes for portions or all of the corridor. To propose an alternate corridor, persons must request to become a party to the proceedings (see below), and then must file a notice of proposed alternate corridor with the Hearing Officer pursuant to Section 403.5271, Florida Statutes, with all parties, and with any local governments in the jurisdiction of which the alternate is proposed, by no later than December 7, 1992. The filing must include the most recent United States Geological Survey 1:24,000 quadrangle maps, with a precise delineation of the specific corridor boundaries, a description of the proposed alternate corridor, and a statement of the reasons why the proposed alternate should be certified. Each party proposing an alternate corridor shall have the burden of providing the data necessary for the agencies listed in Section 403.526, Florida Statutes, to prepare a supplementary report, and the burden of proof on the certification of the alternate corridor at the certification hearing. See Section 403.5271, Florida Statutes, and Florida Administrative Code Rule 17-17.543 for further information and requirements.

Regarding becoming a party to the proceeding, Section 403.527(4), Florida Statutes, provides that:

(a) Parties to the proceeding shall be the applicant, Florida Power Corporation; the Department of Environmental Regulation; the Public Service Commission; the Department of Community Affairs; the Department of Natural Resources; the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission; the St. Johns River Water Management District; the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council; Volusia County; Seminole County; the City of Sanford; the City of Lake Mary; the City of Longwood; the City of Casselberry; and the City of Winter Springs.

(b) Any party listed in paragraph (a), other than the Department of Environmental Regulation or the applicant (Florida Power Corporation), may waive its right to participate in these proceedings, if any listed party fails to file a notice of its intent to be a party on or before the 30th day prior to the certification hearing (December 24, 1992), such party shall be deemed to have waived its right to be a party unless its participation would not prejudice the rights of any party to the proceeding.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of Chapter 120, Florida Statutes, to the contrary, upon the filing with the Hearing Officer of a notice of intent to be a party by an agency or corporation or association described in subparagraphs 1. and 2. or a petition for intervention by a person described in subparagraph 3. no later than 30 days prior to the date set for the certification hearing

(December 24, 1992), the following shall also be parties to the proceeding:

1. Any state agency not listed in paragraph (a) as to matters within its jurisdiction;

2. Any domestic nonprofit corporation or association formed, in whole or in part, to promote conservation of natural beauty; to protect the environment, personal health, or other biological values; to preserve historical sites; to promote consumer interests; to represent labor, commercial, or industrial groups; or to promote comprehensive planning or orderly development of the area in which the proposed transmission line or corridor is to be located;

3. Any person whose substantial interests are affected and being determined by the proceeding.

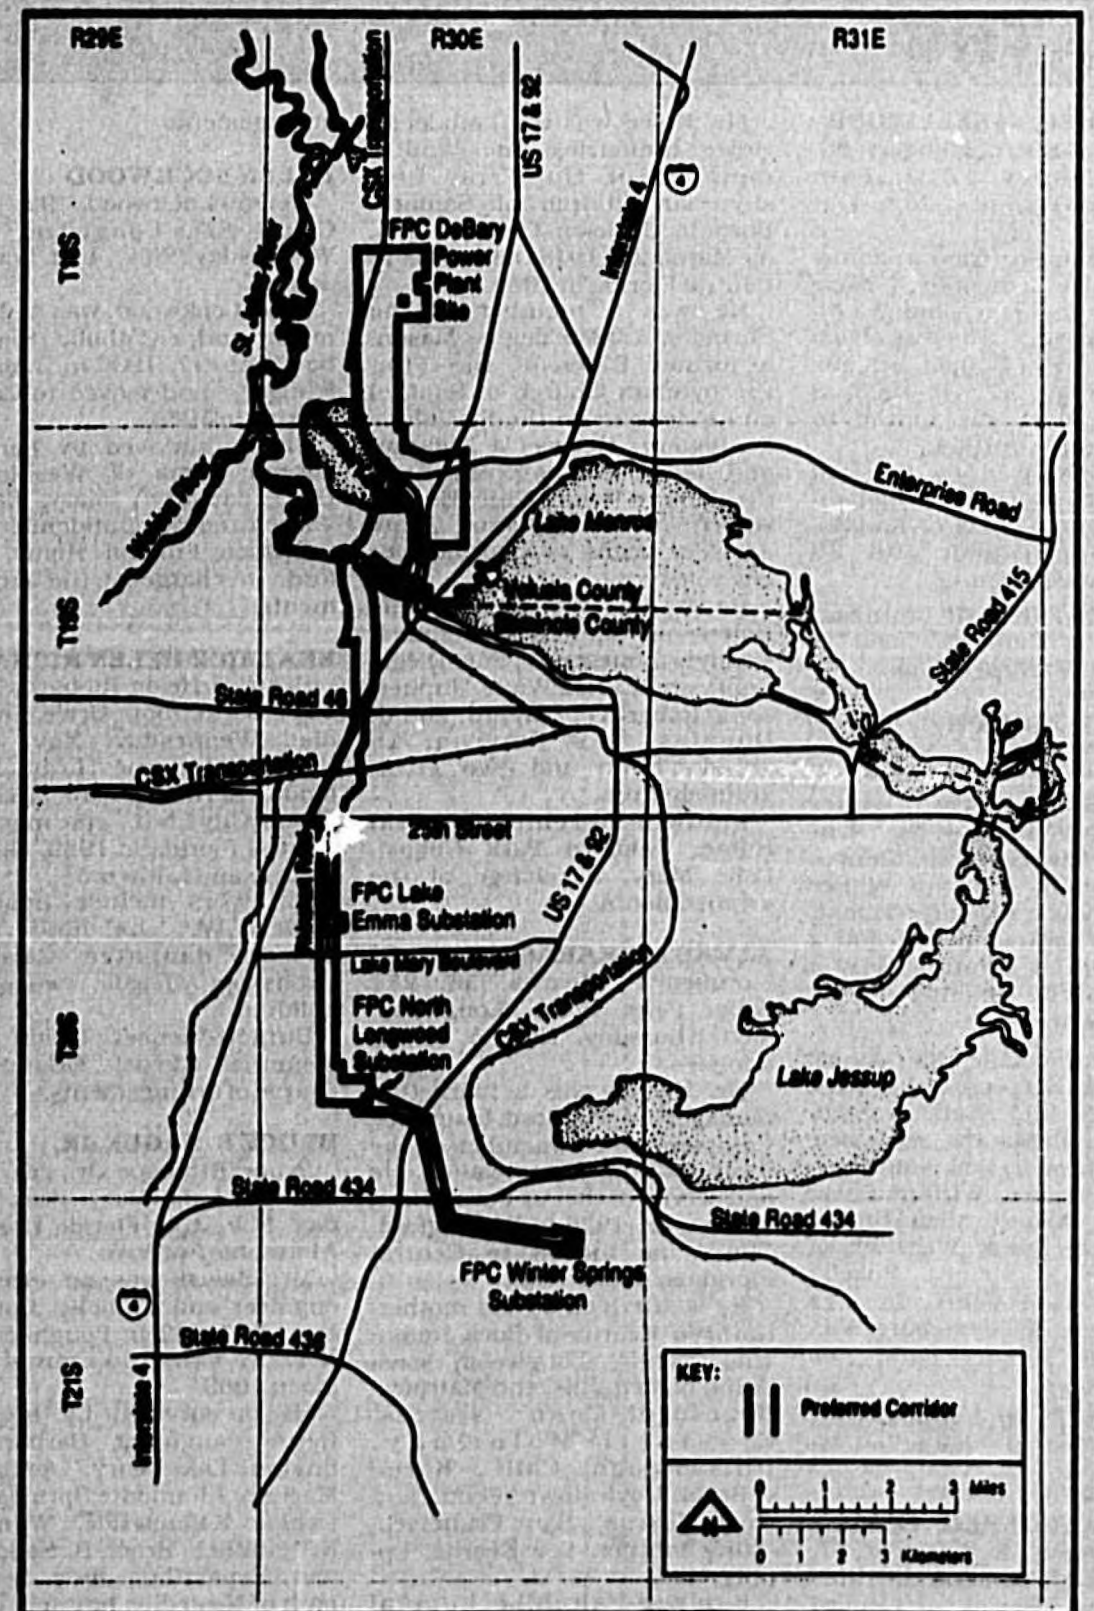

(d) Any agency whose properties or works may be affected shall be made a party upon the request of the agency or any party to this proceeding.

Anyone wishing to become a party to the proceeding should file an appropriate petition pursuant to Florida Administrative Code Rule 28-5.507 with Diane K. Goeling, Hearing Officer, Division of Administrative Hearings, DeSoto Building, 1250 Apalachee Parkway, Tallahassee, Florida 32399-1850. Copies of the petition should be sent by mail to all parties. Those wishing to intervene in these proceedings, unless appearing on their own behalf, must be represented by an attorney or other person who can be determined to be qualified to appear in administrative proceedings pursuant to Chapter 120, Florida Statutes, or Florida Administrative Code Rules 17-105.020 and 221-8.008.

A term or condition of the certification, if granted, may provide for the subsequent submission of information necessary for agencies to monitor the effects arising from the location of the transmission line corridor and the construction and maintenance of the transmission line to assure continued compliance with state water quality requirements or compliance with other agency nonprocedural rules and standards, particularly with regard to dredging and filling activities, without any further government action. A person whose substantial interests may be affected by such submissions or monitoring must petition to become a party to this proceeding if they desire an administrative determination relative to the post-certification monitoring process in that this certification proceeding provides such a person with the opportunity for a hearing as required by Chapter 120, Florida Statutes, and the Transmission Line Siting Act. Failure to petition to become a party within the time herein set forth in this notice constitutes a waiver to an administrative determination (or hearing) pursuant to Chapter 120 and the Act on the post-certification review and monitoring unless otherwise specified by a term or condition of certification.

This notice is in lieu of other notices, including those relating to variances, changes to zoning ordinances, and local governments' plans, or any other nonfederal government licenses or permits.

Trade war brewing

By ELIZABETH D. WISE
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium — European Community officials, angered by Washington's imposition of 200-percent tariffs on white wine and other imports, are plotting their strategy in what could become a full-scale trade war.

The EC's response to the United States' salvo may not be known until Monday, when the bloc's foreign ministers are to gather in Brussels. But officials have made it clear they intend to fight back.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills on Thursday announced that the tariffs would take effect Dec. 5 in retaliation for EC refusal to reduce subsidies to its farmers, as the United States has demanded.

The delay could provide enough time to avert all-out trade war, which could affect the prices of any number of goods, and potentially hundreds of thousands of jobs.

France has led resistance to farm policy concessions, and was the main target of the U.S. move.

Washington contends the subsidies make some European farm products unreasonably cheap, thereby depriving U.S. farmers of a potential $1 billion in exports. The EC is the United States' largest market; exports to the EC totaled about $98 billion in 1990.

The dispute has blocked completion of negotiations to revise global trading regulations and now threatens to escalate into a cycle of retaliations that could end up costing hundreds of thousands of jobs on both sides.

EC trade chief Frans Andriessen said this week that the Community would retaliate proportionately for any U.S. trade sanctions.

French Agriculture Minister Jean-Pierre Soisson said Thursday that Paris would demand a swift reprisal.

Despite the threats of retaliation, President Bush said he was only trying to resolve the trade dispute in a way that would be acceptable to U.S. interests.

"No trade war. Just looking after the interest of world trade," he said.

President-elect Clinton declined to state an opinion on the dispute, but an aide said Clinton generally believes the United States "must get tough" when foreign countries refuse to open their markets.

The tariffs effect an estimated $300 million in imports. White wine accounts for about 60 percent of the targeted products; rapeseed oil and wheat gluten make up the rest.

The U.S. tariffs are targeted at a total of 250 European white wines — most from France, but the list includes products from Italy, Germany and other countries.

French winemakers said the resulting tripling of prices, now about $8.50 a bottle on average, would virtually halt sales of their wine in the United States.

American wine importers said they have enough stockpiles to last through Christmas.

Hills on Thursday issued a list of $1.7 billion worth of other European goods that could be targeted for punitive tariffs unless the dispute is resolved.

France's adamant stance on the farm subsidies is believed to be the reason for the Thursday resignation of EC farm chief Ray MacSharry from the global trade negotiations, which are being held under the auspices of the Geneva-based General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

EC sources have said for several weeks that EC Commission President Jacques Delors of France was trying to strongarm MacSharry into slowing down the talks. Delors has ambitions to be president of France in 1995.

Although the tariffs had been expected for several days, Andriessen said Thursday he was "profoundly disappointed."

"The decision will make difficult the continuation of conversations which, even in the opinion of EC and American negotiators, should have been pursued," he said.

Enjoying Sanford between events

By VICKI BUSHMAN

SANFORD — Lavina Jameson of Euclid, a bag full of new clothes for her grandchildren tucked between her feet, sat on a bench in Ft. Mellon Park yesterday afternoon and licked an ice cream cone.

"He comes down here to be athletic," she said of her husband George, a participant in the Golden Age Games. "I come for the ice cream."

Jameson isn't the only one associated with the games who is patronizing local businesses.

In downtown Sanford many Golden Age Game participants and their spouses relax on benches, shop in the stores and eat in restaurants.

Mary Lake of Deltona said she really can't afford to eat out when she comes to take part in the games, but she likes to sit on the lakefront and nibble on the bag lunch that she brings with her.

"It's pretty out here," she said. Michael Klen of Orlando had planned to participate in the games this year, but an injury kept him on the sidelines.

"We came anyhow to cheer some friends on and to eat at some of the restaurants down here," he said. "Sanford's a nice place."

Many of the athletes go to the Sanford Civic Center, the official headquarters of the games.

Some say that they like to go there to talk to other athletes while others say that it is a good place to go to get information about what else there is to do in Sanford.

"I just come here to look at all the pretty ladies," said one older gentleman who wanted to protect his identity and refused to give his name.

Not rain nor syrup nor missed flips stalls the pancake race

By VICKI BUSHMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — It was a tense time prior to the start of the Golden Age Games Pancake race at 1 p.m. yesterday. The event, held on a ball field at Fort Mellon Park, was threatened by rain.

With black clouds and heavy rains evident on the western and northern side of Lake Monroe, and Seminole County under a temporary tornado watch situation, co-chairman of the games Jim Adams, called the contestants together.

"We have a choice," he said. "We can hope the rain passes us by, or we can move the pancake event to the Salvation Army building. What is your choice?"

Overwhelmingly, the participants voted to keep the event at Fort Mellon park. Moments later, the clouds drifted further north and the sun lit up the flipping course.

Participants ran in groups of five. Each carried a skillet, with a pancake approximately 6 inches in diameter. At the starting whistle, they were to flip the pancake, run down the course, flip it again at the middle, at the other end, then at the middle again on the way back, and finally just before crossing the finish line.

With the first five gathered for the start of the opening race, the whistle blew, and the participants started running and flipping. Harriett Boyd, of Lake Mary, who had won the event in past years, stood at the starting line, unaware of the starting whistle. As others were already starting on the return route, she gallantly ran the course and completed it nonetheless.

As with all athletes who are strongly committed to perfection in their sport, the pancake flippers were no exception. Some complained that their pancakes were out of balance, and one said hers would not flip properly.

No one suggested being allowed to eat the pancakes after the event, due to the fact that many flipped onto the ground rather than back into the skillet.

While this is the third consecutive Golden Age Games in which Pancake Flipping has been a competitive event, winners will not be qualifying to enter into the national Golden Age Games competition in Baton Rouge, next spring. The nationals do not consider pancake flipping a sport.

Winners in the various age groups are listed elsewhere in today's edition.

Seniors take a leisurely walk through historic city

By VICKI BUSHMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Golden Age Games officials call it a leisure walk, but some participants this morning were anything but leisurely. Although still at a walking pace, many were taking very rapid strides as the five mile walk got underway through the streets of Sanford.

A total of 23 persons started the race shortly after 8:30 this morning on Seminole Boulevard behind the Sanford Civic Center. The weather was just beginning to turn cooler, as a cold front entered the area from the north side. The five mile course began on the lakefront, traveled south on Ponce de Leon Avenue to 24th Street, then in a jagged easterly direction to Summerlin Avenue, north on Summerlin and Scott avenues to 2nd Street, west to Mellonville Avenue, then back to the lakefront area and the finish line near the Civic Center.

For the safety of the walkers, aid stations were set up at the two and four mile markers, and an emergency medical unit followed the final walker throughout the route.

Although they left the starting line at the same time, the rapid walkers had over a one block lead by the time the group reached the 1st Street area.

Other events this morning included shuffleboard at Fort Mellon Park at 9 a.m., archery competition at 9 a.m. at Seminole Community College, bowling at 9:30 at Bowl America, and dominoes beginning at 10 a.m. at the Senior Center.

This afternoon's events include bridge at 1 p.m. at the Women's Club, and track and field events at 2 p.m. at Seminole High School.

More track and field events will be held at Seminole High School tomorrow morning beginning at 9 a.m., and horse-shoe competition will be held at Fort Mellon Park at 9:30 tomorrow morning.

The leisure walk event was sponsored by the Seminole Baptist Association.

Shuffling off
Virginia Moxley, Sanford, shuffles off in the shuffleboard competition Thursday during the annual Golden Age Games. The games end Saturday.

Standing in the way

Tribe must deal with Patriots, then go after 'Jackets

By TONY DeSORMIER
 Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — Coach Emory Blake is getting his Seminole High School football team ready for its biggest game of the season, the 4A-District 7 championship-deciding clash with Leesburg seven days from now.

The only problem is, the Seminoles play at Lake Brantley in a key Seminole Athletic Conference contest tonight at 7:30 p.m.

So Blake and his staff are faced with the quandry of making sure the Tribe is prepared for the very physical challenge the Patriots will present tonight while trying to keep the Seminoles from leaving their game in Altamonte Springs.

And as if the physical demands weren't enough, Leesburg is off this week and Blake fully expects the Yellow Jacket coaching staff to be in the stands at Tom Storey Field tonight, watching every move Seminole makes.

"Winning the conference is nice, it's a pride win," explained Blake. "But you can win the conference and not make the playoffs. And making the playoffs is what it's all about."

"We'll go out and play our best with what we have. We feel good about our defense and about our kicking game. This (the game with Lake Brantley) should be a battle of defenses. Our offense is going to have to compliment what our defense gets done."

Seminole's efforts will be aided by the addition of several key members from the Tribe junior varsity, which completed an undefeated season last week. By rotating the new faces in, Blake hopes to keep the frontliners fresh and injury-free for Leesburg while helping the newcomers get acclimated quickly.

To aid in the adjustment of the former junior varsity players (and to give any Leesburg spectators little to work with), Blake and staff have had the Seminoles working on basic offensive plays and formations in practice.

"Hopefully, we've done some things and made some adjustments here at the end of the season that will help us over the next couple of weeks," said Blake. "The game with Lake Brantley will come down to the team that makes fewest mistakes will come out on top."

"You know what Lake Brantley's going to do

(from the flexbone). You have to stop it. It'll be our speed versus their size. I just hope we can hang in there so they don't grind us out and tire us out. We need to try and keep our defense off the field."

The Patriots will be conducting their annual Parents' Night celebration this evening while three other Seminole County schools will be involved in homecoming contests.

Both Lyman and Oviedo will be celebrating their homecomings tonight, the Lyman Greyhounds hosting the Edgewater Eagles while Oviedo's Lions will entertain the Spruce Creek Hawks in a 5A-District 4 game.

Meanwhile, the Lake Howell Silver Hawks travel to Daytona Beach Municipal Stadium to provide the opposition for the homecoming-celebrating Mainland Buccaneers in another 5A-4 contest. Mainland leads the district standings and could clinch the championship with a win over Lake Howell.

Finally, Lake Mary travels to DeLand for another 5A-4 confrontation.

All five games are scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m.

Lorrie Boger (No. 6, left) handed out 27 assists during Lake Mary's 5-15, 15-13, 15-8 win over Oviedo in the championship match of the 4A-District 9 girls' volleyball tournament Thursday, setting up kills for teammates Nikki Preece (No. 15, right) and Jennifer Graissing. Lake Mary advances to the 4A-Region V match next Tuesday.

Rams defend 4A-9 crown

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Writer

LAKE MARY — They were at the brink, but the Lake Mary Rams were not ready to give up their crown.

Thursday night at the Lake Mary High School gymnasium, the Rams were down one game and trailed Oviedo 13-11 in the second game with the Lions holding the serve.

But the home team held off six service chances by Oviedo and rallied back to win game two 15-13, then ran off to a big lead in the deciding game and held off a late surge by the Lions to win 15-8 and repeat as the 4A-District 9 girls' volleyball champions.

"This was by far the hardest and most unlikely win I've ever had," said Lake Mary head coach Cindy Henry. "In the second game I had such feelings that it (the match) was over. It was a great feeling to win the second game because of those lost feelings and the fact that nothing was going right. After the second game, the third game felt like a new match."

The two teams reached the finals by winning semifinal matches earlier in the evening. Oviedo advanced with a 15-4, 15-8 victory over Lake Howell and the Rams moved on with a 15-4, 15-11 triumph over Deltona.

The Lions jumped on top quickly behind its strong serving game, taking leads of 9-2 and 13-3 before winning 15-5.

Lake Mary came back to win the first two serves of the second game, but Oviedo won the seven points to go up 7-2 and looked it like the district title was in the Lions' bag.

Mom shouldn't pick up tab for wedding

DEAR ABBY: Our 25-year-old daughter is engaged to be married. She has been living with her fiance since 1986. We live in California and she lives in New Jersey. She asked me to come to Jersey to help her plan her wedding. She wants a traditional church wedding with a wedding party and huge reception for 100 people. (The cost is about $20,000.)

Mom shouldn't pick up tab for wedding

She and her fiance makes $40,000 a year together. My husband and I make less. However, she knows that I came into an inheritance two years ago when my father died, but she doesn't know how much.

Mom shouldn't pick up tab for wedding

She and her fiance have no money saved up. When I visited her, I noticed they had plenty of money for beer, bingo and cigarettes.

Mom shouldn't pick up tab for wedding

I need your advice, Abby. Should I offer to pay for my daughter's wedding? If you say no, I will accept that. If you say yes, I will not be paying for the wedding. I will be paying for the honeymoon.

Mom shouldn't pick up tab for wedding

DEAR ABBY: I know you'd get tons of mail on the wind chimes issue. Wind chimes are as much a marital choice as being beaten, the Beatles or Wagner.

Mom shouldn't pick up tab for wedding

For three years, I convinced my brother in Boston (by phone) when two sets of neighbors (one on either side) installed wind chimes. He complained civily to his neighbors. One cared, the other didn't. Fudge the police. What serious harm can come from the tinkling sound of innocent wind chimes?

Mom shouldn't pick up tab for wedding

In summer, rather than suffer sleepless nights, my poor brother kept his windows closed. He finally moved. Free at last! WELLS WELLS.

DEAR ABBY: A woman who has been living with her boyfriend for six years should not expect her parents to foot the bill for a traditional church wedding with gown, tuxedo, and a reception for 100 guests.

Mom shouldn't pick up tab for wedding

Your daughter decided her independence at age 19 when she left home to live with her boyfriend. Let her finance her own wedding with any kind of money for beer, bingo and cigarettes.

... it has always been inconceivable that there would be an invisible power which would violate the inner workings of the human body. The only source of such information was the dreaded prospect of surgery. Yet, today, body scanning is routine, saving needless pain and suffering.

There is another power, one which has existed since the conception of the universe. That power is God. He not only has the power to influence the inner workings of our bodies. He knows our thoughts and our desires ... even our souls. The philosopher, Angelo Patri, stated it well when he observed, "Spiritual power is a hidden power, locked in the silence of the soul."

God is waiting for the opportunity to save us from needless pain and suffering. Go to Him in worship this Sabbath. Get the inside story.

Binging, dieting cycle can lead to bad health

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a compulsive overeater. Does dieting to control weight followed by binge eating have any effect on my overall health?

DEAR READER: Recent studies have shown that overweight people who lose and gain weight cyclically are at greater risk of health problems (such as heart disease) than are stout folks who maintain constant weights.

Therefore, unless you're so motivated to lose that you're willing to stick to a consistent diet, I recommend that you swear off the binging cycles. You'll feel better about yourself and life will certainly be less complicated for you.

Check with your doctor about this to make sure that you don't have an undiagnosed ailment, such as diabetes, that may be contributing to your problem. Also, because of your addictive pattern of eating, you might consider counseling.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Thirty years ago during a routine visit with my doctor, I mentioned I had a slight rash on my lower back. He diagnosed me with shingles and gave me a shot of either vitamin B6 or B12. Two or three days later I had another shot and the blisters dried up and the pain went away. Since then, I've known several people with shingles who have suffered for months and this treatment was never suggested for them. Why not?

DEAR READER: Shingles, a type of herpes infection of nerves in the skin, causes painful blisters. However, not all patients with this affliction progress to a full-blown rash; some have only a few minor lesions. This is what probably happened in your case, because I doubt the vitamin shots played any role whatsoever in your recovery. Such shots are completely ineffective in curing shingles. Of course, in the 1960s, there was no treatment for this virus infection, so doctors often felt obligated to give some form of therapy, even if they knew it was ineffective.

There are certain card combinations that are as safe as Fort Knox if one opponent attacks the suit, but are like a leaky boat if the other opponent leads it. One simple example is king doubleton opposite two low cards. With a lead around to the king, you must win a trick. With a lead through the king, you are only 50-50 to win a trick.

Some of these positions are less obvious, though. Take today's deal from the NEC World Team Olympiad. How would you play in three no-trump against a low heart lead?

South's opening bid was slightly eccentric, but he knew he had a way to show a long club suit if his partner used a Stayman inquiry — which is exactly what happened. The suit that is most troublesome to South is spades. If East leads a spade, South should be held to one spade trick only. West will win the first round with the queen, and then the defenders will duck the second round to declarer's now bare ace. But if West leads a spade, declarer has two guaranteed spade tricks. So, trying to keep East off the lead, declarer called for dummy's heart jack rather than run the lead around to his 10. When it held, declarer immediately led dummy's club.

When East played low, South finessed his 10. With the actual distribution, this was remarkably successful. Declarer continued clubs, establishing nine tricks: one spade, two hearts, one diamond and five clubs. But even if the club finesse had lost, declarer was still in a good position to make his contract. Always fight to keep the danger hand off the lead.

By Bernice Bode Oost YOUR BIRTHDAY Nov. 7, 1992

Probabilities for having things work out to your ultimate satisfaction are exceptionally good in the year ahead. This could be especially true when dealing with tangibles, such as money or goods.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Everything has its price today, and this will be especially true where your objectives are concerned. Use your smarts to figure out ways that penalize you the least. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91425, Cleveland, OH 44101-3425.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you handle serious matters with the respect they deserve today, things should work out smoothly for you. However, if you treat them in a frivolous fashion, it's another story.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to restrict your expenditures today to basic essentials. If you let your extravagant whims get control of your wallet, you'll regret it later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your first ideas are likely to be your best ones today. But, if you overanalyze them, self-doubts could creep in and begin to convince you they really aren't too nifty.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you are an impulsive buyer, there's a chance you might pay much more for something today than it's actually worth. Before you negotiate your deal, have a firm price in mind that you won't exceed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The course you establish today is likely to be realistic and reachable, provided you stay on it and aren't sidetracked by frivolous impulses.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today is not the day to slack off and coast. With a little extra push and perseverance, you should be able to get over a hurdle that's been plaguing you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There is justification for the optimism you feel regarding an endeavor in which you're presently involved. Even if observers make a negative assessment, you must believe in yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Worthwhile gains are possible today when dealing with individuals who are willing to accept their share of the responsibility in a joint venture. Pull together.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might feel it is necessary to go to a friend for counsel today pertaining to a matter that concerns you. This pal might not tell what you want to hear, but don't reject the advice on that basis.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even if it is inconvenient for you today, live up to your obligations. It will enhance your reputation if you behave responsibly; it will tarnish your image if you don't.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You might have to make a difficult decision today that affects others as well as yourself. Don't look for an easy out; it will only perpetuate the situation, not resolve it. (C)1992. NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
