Man shoots couples for lobsters

MARATHON - A Lakeland man raced two Bonita Springs couples to what he claimed was his lobster hole — then shot at them to shoo them away.

John Jones, 48, ended up jailed on one count of aggravated assault with a firearm to open this summer's lobster mini-

Monroe County Sheriff's deputies also setzed Jones' 28-foot Make motor boat and an assault rifle they found in the boat then began diving in the area looking for the handgun he allegedly fired at the two couples.

"That's my lobster hole," investigators say Jones thundered at the foursome as they sped in a pontoon boat to the same spot Jones was heading, about 50 yards off The Quay Restaurant in Marathon.

Once everybody got in the water to grab some of the succulent crustaceans, investigators said Jones began hitting members of the Bonita Springs group with his tickle stick and his net.

Then, the group later told deputies, Jones threatened to go back to his boat and get his gun. And that was he did, according to Deputy Sam Holton.

Holton says, Jones fired once.

And the two couples from Bonita Springs? "They gave me a statement and went right back to that hole," Holton said. "I'm beginning to wonder ...

Big Sugar gets support of Big Labor in the Everglades fight

By SMINION DATE Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Traditional foes big sugar and big labor have become friends to take on a common enemy: a penny-per-pound sugar tax to help clean up the Everglades.

The Florida AFL-CIO announced Thursday it would oppose the Save Our Everglades' ballot initiative designed to clean up the pollution flowing through the "River of Grace.

In past years, labor unions have fought sugar farmers, who resisted attempts to organize the largely migrant population of cane cutters who used to harvest the sugar. But AFL-CIO president Marilyn Lenard said sugar and labor would work together this year to protect jobs.

The sugar industry employs 16,000 workers — including 3,000 unionized machinists, electricians and others. Lenard said another 24,000 jobs are dependant on the well-being of the industry, and would be lost if the tax were levied.

"We as an industry, we need the jobs," said Jay Scruggs, an electrician from Canal Point who has worked at U.S. Sugar Corp. for 15 years.

But backers of the sugar tax said a healthy Everglades supports about 365,000 jobs in tourism and fishing in South Florida and Florida Bay. "Why aren't they worried about all the other jobs in Florida," said Mary Barley, the millionaire environmentalist organizing the sugar-tax petition drive.

Barley said she was disappointed that the state AFL-ClO leaders backed the sugar industry when some local labor groups - including the Central Florida AFL-CIO and the Orlando Building and Construction Trades Council.

"I think they're subverting the will of their own membership," Barley said.

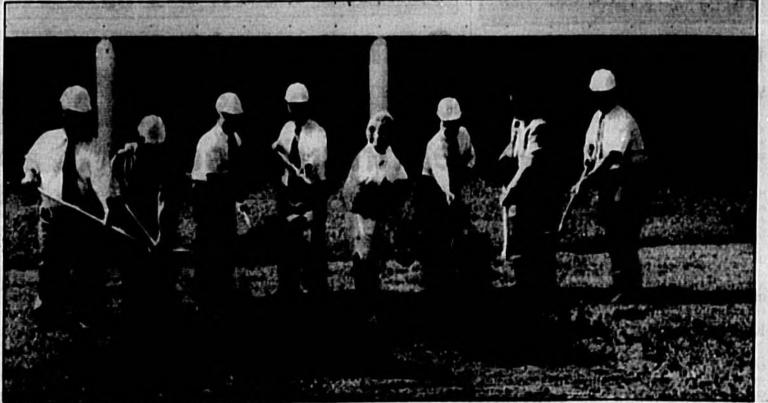

Barley's group, the Save Our Everglades Committee, is awaiting certification of 700,000 sets of signatures it collected on petitions to place the sugar tax on the world market.

November ballot. The sugar industry filed lawsuits in federal and state courts to keep the initiative off the ballot. "When you get $200 m year in corporate welfare, you tend to litigate to keep it." she

Record number of adults earn high school equivalency diplomas

AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON - A record half-million adults earned high school equivalency diplomas last year, joining a roster of well-known test takers that includes Bill Coeby, the late Navy Admiral Jeremy Boorda and Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell.

Last year, nearly 724,000 adults in the United States and Canada completed the General Educational Development test. commonly known as the GED. according to a report released today by the American Council on Education.

Severty-the percent, or 523,463 people, passed and received credentials — the largest number since the test began in 1943 to help World War II veterans earn high school

"I've always been proud of the fact that I did it and I've given talks to motivate others to do it," said Campbell, R-Colo. "I tell them if they want to straighten out their lives, the GED is part of that opportunity."

Campbell took the test while serving in the Air Force in the early 1950s. A self-described "troublemaker." Campbell dropped out during his senior year at Placer High School in Auburn, Calif. In 1992, he returned to the school to walk through commencement with the graduating class.

More than 10 million adults have earned GED credentials in of adults earning GED diplomas has increased by 19 percent during the past decade, the report says. The GED is a battery of five tests that measure the general academic skills and knowledge usually acquired in four years of high school. They test writing skills, social studies, science, interpretation of literature and the arts, and math.

"Those who take the GED test are a richly diverse group." the report says. "Some have recently dropped out of school. Others have been out of school for several years. Most take the tests to qualify for further education, and others hope that passing the GED will encourage their children or their grand-children to stay in school."

Dave Merkowitz, a spokesman for the American Council on Education, which operates the test, said it has been more heavily promoted in recent years, increasing awareness and raising the number of adults signing up to take it.

"The GED is a gateway to further education and training, and with the premium that's being placed on education in the workplace, more people want to take it." Merkowitz said.

Still, only 1 percent of adults without diplomas in the United States and its territories earned GED credentials last year, the report says. In 1990, more than 45 million adults in the United States and territories did not the past 25 years. The number have a high school diploma.

Senate OKs national sex offenders list, anti-stalking bill

WASHINGTON - A central database where law enforcement could track sex offenders is one step closer to existence after the Senate overwhelming approved two popular anti-crime bills.

In addition to endorsing a national registry for sex offenders, senators voted Thursday to make it a federal crime to cross state lines to harass or threaten someone.

"I hope we'll be able to prevent the harassment and even murders of women and children," said Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, author of the anti-stalking bill. The measure allows the FBI to investigate if a person travels to another state to intimidate a person or their immediate fam-

The bill also includes language by Sen. Frank Lautenberg. D-N.J., prohibiting people con-victed of domestic violence from possessing or owning a firearm if they have an attorney or access

An identical anti-stalking bill - minus the gun possession prohibition — passed the House on May 7, and the Clinton administration supports it. The legislation would expand the 1994 crime law, which applies only to interstate stalking by current or former spouses or intimate partners.

In a separate voice vote, the Senate approved a bill by Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Joseph Biden, D-Del., requiring creation of a national registry to track people convicted of sex crimes involving violence or minors.

Although 49 states already operate or are establishing their own registries, as mandated under the 1994 anti-crime law. there is no central database that allows law enforcement to keep track of sexual offenders once they move to another state. Gramm and Biden said.

"The problem with the state laws is that people are moving across state lines to try to avoid detection," Gramm said.

Biden termed the absence of a national tracking system a 'gaping hole."

Under the bill, convicted sex offenders would have to register with the FBI if they live in a state that doesn't have a registration program. The bill would also require that the FBI put into a central database information each time a sexual offender moves, whether within the state or out-of-state.

State and local law enforcement would have access to the national registry.

Researchers: Spinal

WASHINGTON - Scientists are expressing new hope of correcting spinal nerve damage and restoring paralyzed limbs to full function as a result of a Swedish laboratory rat experiment.

Researchers at the Karolinska Institute in Sweden reported today in the journal Science that new nerve connections were grown in the severed spinal cords of laboratory rate and that the experiment restored some motion and sensation to the hind legs of the animals.

Lars Olson, a Karolinska researcher and senior author of the study, said all 23 of the test nals regained some motion and that some of the animals recovered up to 20 percent of the function.

"About a month after treatment, the rate began to pull their hind legs back under their bodies again," said Olson. "They began to flex their legs" he said, noting "there was movement in each of the joints.'

Control rats, who received no treatment, could only drag their lifeless hind limbs and never showed improvement, he said.

"If this can be replicated in other labe, we are looking at a researcher at the University of Piorida College of Medicine. "It could be a landmark paper."

Dr. Wise Young, a nerve system researcher at the New York University Medical Center in New York, said Olson's work lays to rest the long-held belief that severed spinal cord nerves can never be reconnected.

"Suddenly, we can be very hopeful," he said. "It shows for the first time (in mature animals) that the spinal cord can regenerate and give functional results."

He emphasised, however, that the experiment proved only the principal of regrowth and not the technique.

"The bridge technique they used can never be applied to humans," said Young. "But it shows that the task of getting regeneration is going to be easier than we thought."

Years of research will be re-quired before such a treatment would be available for human patients, however, he said.

New nerve growth in the spinal cord is blocked by a natural protein that is found in a nerve structure called the white matter. Another part of the cord, called the gray matter, does not have this protein and nerves can regenerate there.

Olson and his colleagues restored some function in the appropriate was by grating nerves to connect the gray new axons, or nerve connec-tions, along the cord. And in ways still not understood, the axons made the correct connections with undamaged nerves in the cord to allow impulses to move between the legs and the brain.

To start the experiment, the researchers cut a 0.2-inch section from the spinal cords of the rats. Olson said his group then transplanted 18 nerves from elsewhere in the rats to form a bridge across the spinal gap. There was axon regeneration only in those rats with transplanted nerves connecting white matter to gray matter. White-to-white connections, he said, did not work.

The transplanted nerves were held in place with a glue made of fibrin, one of the proteins in a blood clot, and fibroblast growth factor, a protein that prompts nerve growth.

Within a month, the test rats started to move their hind legs. Some of the animals eventually were able to fully flex the limbs and partially support their bodies. None, however, ever achieved full function. Olson

Olson said new experiments now will determine if regenera-tion occurs in rats whose spinal cords were severed and then allowed to heal. He said such

Sanford's own Olympics

Compared to what is taking place at the world Olympic Games under way in Atlanta and surrounding areas, the little Olympic games for some 80 youngsters entered in the Sanford Recreation Department may seem like small potatos.

Yet what was done here was an excellent program. It was clearly well planned right down to the most elementary detail.

Just as in the real games, it gave youngsters not only the opportunity to compete in athletic type events, but with the team competition, gave them some valuable training in working together.

Even though all of the youngsters are from the Sanford area, dividing them into teams representing different countries was another excellent idea. We suspect it had a tendency to expand this feeling of camaraderie.

The city recreation department also arranged for gold, silver and bronze medals. Naturally, they weren't real gold or silver, but they were medals nonetheless. We would be willing to bet that our Sanford youngsters were just as proud of their make-believe medals as some of the major athletes of the world are in Atlanta.

Then too, every youngster deserves some recognition for a job well done. What better way than to give them something which can be shown to frientle and/or displayed with pride at home.

In announcing the winners of the various events, the countries which they represented (just a way to determine individual groups), were listed. While each of the countries represented took its share of top awards, those who benefited the most were the youngsters

It's unfortunate that games with this control couldn't be held on the beld on the couldn't be held on the cour youngsters. They would certainly draw large numbers once the word got out.

We have competition on an annual basis every November with the Golden Age Games. The seniors get an opportunity to show off their athletic and artistic abilities, and they draw competitors from around the state and even other states. Samford is becoming very well known for this.

Now, if we could have something for youngsters, (and we support ages six through 12 as were with the summer recreation program), we could not only bring the city into even more prominence, but we would have a goal for the youth of today to pursue in addition to their educational work.

We believe such annual games for youngsters may, be worth considering. Perhaps not exactly a part of the summer recreation program, but conducted in the same neral pattern as we do for the Golden Age

In the meantime, we believe a great deal of appreciation should be extended to the city, the recreation department, recreation staff members and all others who worked so diligently on this year's program.

They did an outstanding job, and we believe they did a great deal in helping to mold the competitive and sportsmanship spirit of our future adults.

Abortion issue

Editor, Sara Eckel says that Bob Dole is guilty of double-speak on the rather polarized abortion use. All we want are the facts, Sara.

On the left hand we have the feminazia and feminists who think the decision to terminate a pregnancy should be made by the woman without government interference (feminazies believe every pregnancy should end in abortion). On the right hand we have a large group of men and women who believe abortion is the moral equivalent of killing a child; they believe it should only be performed in cases of rape, incest or danger to the life of the pregnant woman. Between these two uncompromising poles we find another large group of men and women who have a pragmatic approach to the abortion issue. Let us call them pragmatists.

Pragmatists believe that abortion on demand as a form of birth control is morally wrong. However, they know that no law will stop a woman who wants an abortion from having one. They believe that lest we return to the days of back-street abortions, doctors must be allowed to legally perform them. They also believe that except in cases of rape, incest or threat to the life of the mother, the woman should pay for her own elective abortion. Then, let her live with her personal decision and not throw a guilt trip on the American

Each of the Peace Now colonels had fought in Israel's wars - some in all of them. As I listened to the colonels in Jerusalem and later in New York, it was clear that they were not naive and certainly not pacifiets. In emphasizing the need for Palestinian independence, the colonels also stressed that there must be rigid security arrangements so that a Palestinian state could not become a launching pad for invasions of the Jewish state or for subversion.

I had rarely seen such a combination of idealism and pragmatism. The colonels were convinced that unless the Palestinians were set free, the Jewish state would never entirely be

At the beginning of the "intifada." Rabin believed he could smash it by sustained force. "Break their bones," he ordered his soldiers. But he came to realize how deep and abiding was the Palestinians' desire to rule themselves. As Ze'ev Schiff, a widely respected Israeli commentator said. "The intifada was Rabin's school."

The crucial question now is whether the new prime minister, Benjamin "Bibi" Netanyahu, will have to go to the same school before Israel can be truly secure.

Netanyahu is absolutely correct, however, in declaring that no lasting agreement can be made

Amendment helps safeguard nukes

WASHINGTON - The most important new legislation passed this summer came not with a bang but with a whimper.

By unanimous vote, the U.S. Senate last month approved a $235 million amendment to the Pentagon's budget bill to shore up America's defenses against rogue nuclear nations. Sponsored primarily by two of the Senate's most respected members - Democrat Sam Nunn of Georgia and Republican Richard Lugar of Indiana - the legislation makes major strides in America's efforts to safeguard itself against a terrorist attack.

Because the amendment didn't spark partisan debate or filibusters, this measure didn't make much news. Yet coming as it did. just days after the bombing of the U.S. military barracks in Saudi Arabia and weeks before the explosion of TWA Flight 800, it couldn't have been more timely.

As defense spending goes, this is a bargain. resumptive Republican presidential nominee Bob Dole, whose campaign has been criticized for lacking new ideas, is busy fighting the Cold War on the campaign trail. The centerpiece of his national security platform is a national missile defense system that congressional analysts predict will carry a 860 billion price tag. Such a plan would put billions of dollars in the pockets of defense contractors, but may be largely irrelevant to future needs.

Most security experts agree that the next major attack on American soil won't be delivered by missile. Rather, it will come in a suitcase, a moving truck or an airline luggage compartment. Despite years of efforts to control and reduce the nuclear stockpile in the nations of the former Soviet Union, the threat of such an attack is as strong today as it was five years ago, when the Soviet Union col-

"We have found that the former Soviet storage facilities are unsafe and insecure, Lugar notes. "We have learned that there are people and organizations in the world who are attempting to acquire these weapons and materials for terrorist purposes."

A new report by the Center for Strategic and International Studies is even more succinct: "In the near term, several key variables in the nuclear smuggling equation appear likely to remain bad or may even worsen," it begins. Barring an unlikely economic turnaround in the former Soviet Union, struggling nuclear workers will continue to be tempted to steal material. Disarray in the Russian military is apt to worsen in the near term, threatening security at nuclear weapons storage sites."

The Nunn-Lugar amendments take three important steps to stop this. First, they provide money for domestic preparation in case of a nuclear, chemical or biological attack. Second. it provides money and expertise to help Russia seal its borders and upgrade its safety procedures. Finally, the amendments create a single office charged with coordinating the dozens of scattered agencies and departments that share responsibility for curbing these

There have been several notable victories in recent years. The original Nunn-Lugar legislation has been instrumental in removing all nuclear warheads from Kazakhstan and Ukraine, two former Soviet republics that could have become nuclear powers in their own right. In Belarus, the last warhead will be removed this year. Overall, more than 4.000 nuclear warheads have been dismantled since 1991. There have already been too many close calls. It takes only 15 kilograms of highly enriched uranium to make a simple nuclear weapon that can fit in a briefcase.

AUDITING THE AUDITORS - The Internal Revenue Service apparently doesn't hold itself to the high standards it demands of others. Congressional investigators recently turned the tables on the IRS, performing a comprehensive audit of the tax-collecting agency's financial records from 1992-1995.

The results are alarming. As it turns out, the IRS - notorious for fingering others for poor record keeping - has major problems maintaining its own books. The audit questioned the "reliability of IRS's financial statements" and cited "fundamental, persistent problems" with IRS record keeping methods.

Congressional investigators at the General Accounting Office report that the "amounts of total revenue ($1.4 trillion) and tax refunds ($122 billion) cannot be verified or reconciled." Further, the audit found that the "IRS incurs billions of dollars in operating expenses," of which "a significant portion ... cannot be

Revolutionary GOP keeps on spending

The people who signed a contract with America recently sponsored a "Reform Week" for the purpose of fixing Congress. The remodeling began on July 15 and ended on July 19.

Very little. The junior Republicans managed to stymic a cost-of-living pay hike of $3,000, leaving the lawmakers stuck at an annual $133,600 salary for the fifth straight year, but they had to fight the leadership to pull it off. "Members of Congress are not overpaid," growled Rep. Bob Livingston, R.La., chairman of the Appropriations Committee. "They give up the prime productive years of their life to come here. They could do other things."

That is an interesting concept, and I'll come right back to it. But first I want to give you an idea of a few of the things that Congress has managed to accomplish recently.

The appropriations committees on both aides of the Hill have been drafting bills to fund the government next year, and guess who has been agitating for more, more, more? Why, those rabid revolutionaries. that's who. Sen. Robert Bennett, R-Utah. wanted extra funds for federal arts programs. Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., wanted additional money for the improvement of poultry. Rep. Dan Miller, R-Fla., wanted to study the 'red tide." Rep. Harold Rogers, R-Ky... thought the State Department was under-

The House Appropriations Committee drafted a Defense spending bill that gave the Pentagon $10 billion more than the Clinton administration requested, and more than the Defense Department wanted. They resolved this dilemma by putting ships, planes and weapons on an accelerated procurement schedule, and by dumping $1 billion into something called the National Defense Sealift Fund. And guess where a lot of the extra scalift money is going? Well, to a shipyard in Louisiana, where Rep. Livingston lives. And to shipyards in southern Mississippi, where new Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott lives. And so on.

My point is, it makes little difference whether Congress is controlled by Republicans or by Democrats: the place is jampacked with scoundrels. Indeed if all the mountebanks under that dome had to wear brightly colored budges, they'd be calling the place Rainbow Hill. Nobody has figured out how good people can get elected and turn into oals overnight, but there's a doctoral dissertation in it for somebody: "Hometown Sage to Capital Clod: The Congressional Experience as a Metamorphic Phenomenon."

Which brings me back to Mr. Livingston's comment. Members of Congress could do other things. Indeed, in the interest of national survival, we should force them to do other things.

Deal paves way for health insurance, minimum wage

By CARGLYN SCORES Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Congressional negotiators agreed to a four-year test of tax-exempt medical savings accounts, removing a major obstacle to a bill that would allow workers to get new health insurance, even if they have pre-existing illnesses.

Thursday's agreement by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, also freed another popular election-year measure — a bill that would raise the minimum wage. The minimum wage bill had been held up in the fight over medical savings accounts, which an insured person could use to pay routine medical expenses.

The House and Senate both have passed differing versions of the health insurance bill, the main thrust of which provides that anyone who changes or loses a job would be able to get health insurance, even with a pre-existing medical condition. After the agreement was reached Thursday, the Senate choose conferees to work out a compromise health insurance bill with House negotiators.

The health insurance bill "will allow American workers the security of knowing that they will not lose their health coverage if they change their jobs," President Clinton said in a statement. "Raising the minimum wage for millions of America's hardest workers is also the right thing to do." Archer said, "The American people are going to be the winners now because we're going to move with this health reform bill and there's no reason why it shouldn't pass both houses."

Kennedy had blocked progress on the health insurance legislation, which he had co-sponsored with Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., because he objected to Republican attempts to include medical savings accounts in the bill.

The minimum-wage bill got caught up in the dispute when Nuseboum denied on Thursday that he ever told Sculimbrene that Mrs. Clinton recommended Livingstone. "I am mystified and outraged that someone would attribute to me something I never said." he said.

Although Thursday's agreement removed the main roadblock, the health bill negotiators still must resolve other problems, such as exactly what would be required of insurers to create the portability protection, and whether to require that insurers give the same coverage for mental illness as they do for a physical aliment.

The agreement between Armedical savings accounts test that would involve up to 750,000 policies for the self-employed and people in busi-nesses with 50 or fewer employees. Under a medical savings account policy, werkers and employers would pay meathly premiums to the health insurer.

Add immunizations to to-do list

Almost 80 percent of young adults, including college students, are not aware they may be at risk of contracting measles, according to a recent study released by the Gallup Organization. More than half of the students polled said they have not received the recommended second dose of measles vaccine.

"This study shows that a significant portion of adults who are at risk for measles, including college students, have not protected themselves from the disease," says Harry E. Cotugno, Ph.D., vice president, Publicly Released Research, Gallup Organization Inc., Princeton, N.J.

Students should make every effort to get a second dose of measles vaccine, says Gregory A. Poland, M.D., chair of the steering committee, National Coalition for Adult Immunization, and chief, Mayo Vaccine Research Group. University students are considered at special risk, because they often live in close quarters, increasing the chances of spreading the highly contagious virus. Spring break, holidays or summer vacation are excellent times to get the second-dose shot.

Since 1989, a second dose of measles vaccine has been recommended for 4- to 6-year-olds or before middle school. says Stephen Redd, M.D., chief, Measles Elimination Activity, National Immunization Program, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). However, the majority of people who are presently of college age were already past middle school when the recommendation was made and so may have missed the second dose.

"All 50 states require children to be immunized with a single dose before entering school. So, by age 5, we have a 98-percent success rate," Dr. Redd says. "The second-dose recommendation has not been implemented as widely. Right now, thousands of college students may be at risk for measles." Measles remains a significant public-health threat on U.S. campuses. Despite this, 28 states do not require a second dose of measles vaccine prior to college entry. Without a requirement, too often, the student is not aware of the recommenda-tion, Dr. Redd adds. "Every student in every college should have received a second dose of measles vaccine."

The survey, conducted by the Gallup Organization, interviewed 1,000 young adults from across the United States. Adults at especially high risk include health-care workers, international travelers and college students. Of those included in the Gallup survey, 187 were students, most of them in college.

Measles can cause life-threatening pneumonia and brain inflammation, middle-ear infections and severe diarrhea. Though the number of cases of measles has plummeted in the United States since the introduction of the measles vaccine in 1963, the disease is still a serious threat. Measles is responsible for more than 2 million deaths worldwide each year.

Survey results are based on telephone interviews with a national sample of 1,001 adults, 18 to 38 years of age. Interviewing was conducted from July 27 through Aug. 30, 1995. For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95-percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be plus or minus three percentage points. In addition to sampling error, question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.

Understanding can help children handle problems

While many children can't wait to go back to achool, some are nervous about what the new school year will bring. Choosing friends, making the team, getting along with new teachers and earning good grades are just some of the pres-sures children will face, and those are enough to worry even the best students.

To advise parents about how to help their children deal with common school problems, Dr. Judi Craig, a clinical psychologist, has written "What Happened at School Today?; Helping Your Child Handle Everyday School Problems" (William Morrow). Giving practical, down-to-earth advice, Craig covers topics from social and behavioral troubles to grades, homework and achievement, offering parents tools they can use to help solve problems before they get out of control.

The following is just some advice Craig offers in her book.

Teachers are a vital aspect of education. They not only teach children the basic subjects, but they also affect how these children feel about school and learning. If students don't like their teachers, they may not work to their full potential.

When children have a problem with a teacher, parents need to be understanding. They should listen to their children's feelings about the situation. Then, they should ask the children why they think the problem is occurring and offer alternative ideas, if appropriate. After discussing the possible causes of the problem, parents should ask the children what they think could belo remedy the situation. Not only does this show the children that their opinions are respected, but it also helps them learn to solve problems.

If the trouble continues after the children have tried the discussed soluproblem further.

tions, parents should make an appo

SOCIAL SITUATIONS

ment with the teacher to look into the School teaches children much more than the three R's. It also teaches them how to act in a social setting; they learn how to get along and work with other people. However, this may be intimidating to some children, who, in y not get involved in school.

To help avoid this situation, parents should encourage their children to participate in school activities and even take part in the events them-selves. If there is a school carnival, parents should go to it with their children, and they should chaperone a field trip if possible. If their parents are involved in school, children are more apt to be also.

ACHIEVEMENT

Many factors affect children's achievement in school, including vision and hearing, the classroom environment, intellectual capability, and family situations. Another important factor is motivation.

To get their children motivated to do well in school, parents should be understanding. When children bring home report cards with some bad grades, parents should comment on the positive aspects first. Then, they should discuss the poor grades calmly and matter-of-factly, giving the children an opportunity to say why they think they got the bad marks. Parents can then set up a plan that will help the children improve their grades.

While there are many problems that children will face at school, understanding and caring from their parents can make it easier to handle - and lead to an A+ school year.

A good way to find out what kinds of foods kids would like to be munching on is to get them involved in the packing of their lunches, and ask them what kinds of things they would like to have for lunch. Your family's attitudes can help the writing natural and fun for chil-m, rather than frustrating and diffi-it. Lay the foundation for a love of titing by reading and telling stories your child. Children who listen to white as they grow up develop a nat-al understanding of how sentences if ideas are put together and how smiles work. They tend to have an size time understanding when these lies are "taught" to them in school.

Children who enjoy reading and want to make up their own stories are more caser to write on their own and for school assignments. To help prepare your child for a life-long love for reading, the Teachers & Writers Collaborative and The National Endowment for the Arts suggest trying

• Read aloud to children, even when they are very little. Reading aloud offers a moment of intimacy with parents that brings about a good reeling about reading and books. Taking the time to read shows that you respect written words. Be sure to keep reading to your children, even after they learn to read on their own.

· Encourage children to read by taking them to the library. Even children who enjoy only simple books will move onto more advanced books as they mature. As a reward or present, give your child a book.

Asswer your child's questions and listen to their stories. If children don't think you care enough about what they say and the stories they tell, they will not feel confident enough to express themselves, either aloud or on paper.

Your response to your child's writing is extremely important. If you are proud and praise their written work, they will be proud of it and want to continue writing. Point out what you like about your child's writing. Praising their strengths instead of pointing out weaknesses is a much more effective measure to encourage writing. Be specific and honest when praising. If you comment on everything they write with the same compliments, the effect will be lost.

Praise what is unique and unexpected in your child's work. This will not only encourage individualism, but will help them view writing as a form of self-expression.

If you do criticize, always be very gentle. Introduce criticisms and concerns after some praise. If you are too critical of their words, they will find writing more difficult. The purpose is for children to enjoy writing, not to become a full-fledged author, yet. As long as they keep writing, the quality of work will improve.

For children just starting to write, don't be too pushy. Many children become afraid of failure due to pressure. They feel they must be a flawless writer the first time they pick up a pen-cil and are afraid of making apelling mistakes. Encourage them to write what they feel first, then review to check for spelling and gramm er mistakes. Once children feel confident in their ability to write well on their own, writing in school will seem like less of a task — and they'll actually enjoy writing and completing assignments. Students will receive better grades and feel less pressure, which will make the school year a lot easier and more fun.

Getting less than you paid for

"To counterfeit is death", read a New Jersey banknote during the colonial era. A forged note carried the same warning.

Paper money didn't appear in the British colonies until 1660. when Massachusetts introduced bank notes. By the 1760s, eight of the 13 colonies were circulating some form of paper money, and forgers quickly followed. Since many colonists could not read or write, even crude forgeries might pass. In mid-1775, the Continental Congress, desperate to finance the Revolutionary War, added to the confusion by issuing notes backed only by the anticipation of tax revenues. By January 1776, however, a printing press aboard the British ship H.M.S. Phoenix had begun turning out fake Continentals, as the currency was called. The combination of dramatic depreciation and widespread counterfeiting soon gave rise to the phrase "not worth a Con-tinental".

Congress recalled the Continental in 1781, and for the next 80 years, the federal government issued no currency as we know it today. Instead, the tates chartered private banks to oue currency.

Eventually, some 1,600 private banks issued more than 7,000 varieties of these state notes. Amid the profusion of real notes, counterfeits flourished. By the time the Civil War began, more than one-third of the currency in circulation was fake.

This led Congress in 1861 to authorize a new paper currency. Printed with inexpensive green ink on one side, these green-backs could not be copied with the cameras of the time. Cones standardized US bills in 1863, incorporating deterrents such as the seal of the Freasury Department, fine-line intaglio printing, and a distinctive paper with embedded red and blue fibers.

In 1865, the treasury established the Secret Service to wage war against forgers. One of the most notorious was William E. Brockway. This New York based "king of counterfeiting" passed hundreds of thousands of bogus bills between 1850 and 1890. Aided by the recently introduced deterrents, which forced professional forgers to use spe-cialised skills and equipment, the Secret Service suppressed cialized skills and equipment, the Secret Service suppressed the largest counterfeiting rings, including Brockway's.

US currency has undergone several changes since then. In 1869, the treasury introduced a watermarked paper with bands of dark jute in the substrate. In 1879, it changed the means to a service of the several of the several changes and the several changes to a several change of the several change of t 1879, it changed the paper to a linen stock containing parallel red and blue silk threads and eliminated the watermark. Standardizing each denomina-tion's portrait prevented counterfeiters from raising a note's value simply by altering in 1990, two new features appeared: a metallic security thread and a line of microprinting around the portrait. The threat posed today by casual counterfeiters using color copiers has prompted the treasury to suggest several ad-ditional changes.

"There is no single, perfect deterrent", says Thomas A. Perguson, assistant director of research and development at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. In fact, "an awful lot of people don't know about the

(deterrent) features already in the bill: most of us have never gotten a counterfeit.

"And that's the goal, to keep it that way

WHAT'S WITH THAT NEW MONEY?

This year, the government has started issuing a new kind of currency, beginning with the $100 denomination Federal Reserve notes. These new bitincorporate counter measures thwart the growing threat of attempted counterfeiting through the use of the latest digital scanning and reproduc-tion technology. Why the $100 bill? By itself, that denomination accounts for some $208 billion of the more than $350 billion in US paper currency now in circulation, more than twice as much as the total value of any other denomination. Following the introduction of the $100 bill. lower denominations ($50, $20, $10, and so on) will be issued at the rate of about one denomination per year.

The answer is so simple, it's shocking; actions speak louder than words. Does he act like he loves you? In he respectful and considerate of your feelings? Christian coffeehouses: a wholesome night out

MCK R.I. — In an old

"How many people are excited tonight about Jesus?" cried Dennis Kessinger, after his band banged out a rockabilly tune, "I Dia't Knew What You Came To Do, I Came To Praise The Lord."

Reseinger, pastor of the Amacing Grace Church, and other church members have opened a Christian coffeehouse called Crossroads, where the devout can nurse a cappuccino and their spirit.

"When you become a Christian, and you want to go out at night, what do you do? Go bewiing?" Kessinger said. "Christians need a different place to go, someplace with a nice, clean environment."

To set the tone, Crossroads founders transformed the bot-tom floor of an old mill from bare-brick industrial to Old guitars and a double base case hang above the stage. Red leather booths line the far edge of the room. The only visible cross is on a bumper sticker on the wall for the Christian rock group, "Raging Grace."

Pat Medeiros, a Coventry resident, said she comes to Crossroads every weekend.

"The first time I came here I fell in love with it." Medeiros said. "I'm single and I won't go out in the world on a weekend night. ... If I weren't here, I'd be home."

Dave Herbert, a 17-year-old from West Warwick who said he

Forget herbs for absent-mindedness

al million older Americans who is affected by absent-mindedness. A health newsletter I received in the mail proclaims the virtues of Ginhs to correct this condition. It can be bought in any health-food store and can be quite expensive. Would you comment on the product?

DEAR READER: As we age, all of us become more absent-minded. Called "benign forgetfulness of old age," this harmless (but often annoying) condition must be differentiated from more serious neurological disor-ders, such as Alzheimer's disease and "mini" strokes.

In my opinion, you should address this issue with your family physician, who may choose to order special blood tests and a CT scan of your

Certain forms of early dementia can be treated - for instance, with thyroid hormone or vitamin supplements but benign forgetfulness needs no therapy: It just comes with the ferritory.

Despite the claims of health-food faddists, I am not aware of any scientific studies proving that herbs, such as Ginko, improve absent-mindedness. I think that you would be better served by seeking medical attention from your family doctor.

DEAR DR. GOTT: About four months ago I began awakening every two hours. I obtained a prescription for Restoril and use it every other night. When I don't take it, I'm exhausted the next day. Also, I seem to require aspirin to fall asleep after awakening. Could the insomnia be caused by depression?

DEAR READER: Yes, it could. However, the pattern of your insomnia - frequent awakening - suggests that your lack of sleep may be caused by stress and what psychologists call nighttime problem solving." Your brain may be using your sleep time as an arena in which to address problems and conflicts that beset you during the day.

Ask your doctor about this, if you are experiencing unusual tension, some stress counseling may be in order

On the other hand, if you feel discouraged and depressed most of the time, your physician may conclude that anti-depression drugs, such as Prozac or Elavil, could help you. Depression typically causes a pattern of insomnia marked by early awakening followed by an inability to fall back to sleep. leading to fatigue, anxiety and selfreproach. However, depression can manifest itself in many ways. Your doctor should be able to sort this out.

In any case, Restoril and other sleep aids should only be taken for short periods, not to exceed two weeks. More prolonged use can result in habituation, forgetfulness and other disorders of cognitive function.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently had a blood test and my triglycerides were high at 410. I'm 68 and used to eat a lot of fast feeds. Now, however, I'm follow-ing a dist. Do my former listits have a bearing on my elevated reading?

DEAR READER: A high level of trighycerides (above 200 milligrams per deciliter) can be the result of an impru-dent diet that contains too much thit. The condition is also common in diabetics.

Further, the affliction may be associated with one's inherited genetic makeup. Elevated triglycerides (hypeririglyceridemia) may cause inflammation of the pancreas and other health problems I think that you made a wise choice to alter your diet; fewer fatty foods and more natural fat-free edibles (such as fruits and vegetables) should lower your trigiyeeride level. Stick to the diet, follow your doctor's instrue tions, and have another triglyceride blood test in a few months to monitor your progress. P.S.: Your cholesterol level should fall, too, on this diet and this will give you additional health benefits.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report Eating Right for a Healthy Heart." Other read who would like a copy should send 12 plus a long, selfaddressed, stamp I envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. He sure to mention the title

Logan Pearsall Smith, the Anglo-American essayist, pointed out, "How many of our daydreams would darken into nightmares, were there any danger of their becoming true."

South found this deal an unexpected nightmare. How should be have planned the play in four hearts after a spade lead?

West was thin for his overcall, but any time you can bid spades, it is usu-ally right because the opponents must go up a level to outhid you.

Declarer won the first trick in hand with the spade king and, thinking everything was under control, played the heart queen. However, after win-ning with the ace, West guessed well to switch to the club nine. Declarer played low from the dummy, winning with his ace after East contributed the six. South drew the last trump, played a spade to dummy's ace and tried the diamond finesse. However, West won with the king and returned a club, defeating the contract.

True, declarer was unlucky with the He of the minor suit kings, but he still should have succeeded. He overlooked the value of dummy's diamond jack.

After winning trick one in hand, declarer should have continued with the ace and queen of diamonds, West wins with the king and switches to a ciub, nut South wine in hand, leads a sp to dummy's ace and discards a club leaer on the diamond jack. Now South plays a trump, his lesers being only one heart, one diamond and one club.

When everything looks cozy at the bridge table, be especially vigilant. The moral? Never lose concentration.
