POLICE BRIEFS

Gun, beer cans lead to charges

Tony Hunt, 41, of Deltona was charged with carrying a concealed weapon and with driving with an open container of alcohol by Longwood Police.

Police said they were informed that a man was driving around town with a gun.

Hunt was stopped at a local business and informed of the situation. He told police he did not have a gun and that he did not point one at anyone.

The vehicle was searched, police said, and a .25 caliber semi-automatic handgun was found. There were five rounds of ammunition in the magazine and one round in the chamber, they said. The gun's safety was not on, they said. The gun, they said, was not securely encased and was readily accessible.

There were also two open, empty cans of beer found in the car, police said.

Hunt was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1,500 bond.

Warrant arrests made

● Kathryn Marie Penzol, 36, 104 LaCosta Ct., Sanford, on charges of failure to appear in court on charges of obtaining property with a worthless check. Bond was set at $350.

● Frederick Leon Redding, 21, 125 Hidden Dr., Sanford, on charges of failure to appear in court on charges of carrying a concealed weapon and loitering and prowling. Bond was set at $500. He was also charged with violating the terms of his probation on aggravated assault charges. He was held without bond on those charges.

● Shawn Michael Flynn, 19, 102 E. 18th St., Sanford, was charged with failure to appear in court on battery charges. Bond was set at $1,000.

● Bobby Colfield, 122 Centennial Dr., Sanford, was charged with violating the terms of his probation on two counts of possession of cocaine.

He was held at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility without bond.

Lives better now for two families linked by disaster

By KAREN TESTA
Associated Press Writer

PERRINE — The single mother and her two teen-age sons, forced from their public housing complex as the building is ripped to shreds. The affluent couple, huddled together as rains and winds play havoc with their house, theater and office.

Two very different families, linked by one disaster, and by a surprising conclusion: Despite the fear, the loss and the bureaucracy, they say Hurricane Andrew somehow managed to make their lives better than they were before the storm.

Brenda Boynton moved three times before settling down. "I was looking and looking and looking and looking for something in my range," said the 35-year-old custodian, who now lives in a $450-a-month, two-bedroom duplex. "I like it because I have my own yard. And I can plant my little plants."

Boynton and her sons, 13-year-old Roderick and 16-year-old Terracish, moved into one of 10 trailer homes donated by NationsBank immediately after the storm. Construction was slated to begin on the land beneath the trailers, however, and after four months there, she had to pack up again and move in with her 70-year-old bedridden mother.

The three-bedroom home was filled to capacity with Boynton's sister, brothers, in-laws, nieces, nephews and children — more than a dozen under one roof.

"We didn't have a choice to be around one another," she said. "Everyone needed a place to stay."

In the first days of August this year, the Boyntons finally were able to settle into their new home, less than a mile north of the public housing complex that once was their home. All that remains of those gutted buildings are walls bearing the spray-painted message: "WE NEED HELP."

"I don't care if I don't go back," she said, as she chopped cabbage and stirred the turkey wings steaming on her kitchen stove.

"I think I'm doing better than a lot," she said hopefully. "It's the way you do it — not the area. It's how you want to live."

Unlike Boynton, Larry and Barbara Stein never left their home during or after the hurricane. But between their house, dental office and equity theater, they suffered more than $800,000 in damages.

"We got three-for-three," joked Larry Stein. "The lucky thing is no two hurricanes have ever hit in the same place."

Almost a year after the storm, he still is fighting a battle with insurers and landlords for repairs to his dental office in suburban Kendall. He said he is frustrated but hopeful the repairs, including constructing a ceiling to cover a 10-foot hole, soon would be completed.

"You're trying to work under sterile conditions, you know. It's very hard," said Stein, who with a temporary ceiling and lighting was able to reopen two weeks after the storm.

Actor's Playhouse, a two-stage theater located at the opposite end of the same shopping plaza as the dental office, was almost devastated. The main stage had to be reconstructed, there were repeated power failures, the seats needed to be replaced, and props and equipment were destroyed.

But Actor's Playhouse didn't miss a curtain call.

"We changed from a world premiere to a two-person comedy, but it was still a wonderful show and people loved it," said Stein, who opened the playhouse with his wife about five years ago.

For the Steins, Andrew's impact on their lives has been a great nuisance to be taken in stride. The brochure for the upcoming season exemplifies their attitude:

"We blew you away last season, but we're going to nail you to a seat this season," it reads.

Of course, no one wants a replay of the past year. Barbara Stein said she already has a game plan during her vacations to protect her home, which endured $350,000 in damage, including $14,000 to restore a Steinway piano.

Abortion shooting

Suspect's letters praise accused killer as a hero

The Associated Press

PENSACOLA — Letters sent by a woman accused of wounding an abortion doctor to a man accused of killing one praises him as "a brave soldier" and hero in the fight against abortion, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Rachelle Renee Shannon, 37, of Grants Pass, Ore., was arrested Friday at the Oklahoma City airport just hours after allegedly shooting Dr. George Tiller in both arms in Kansas. Shannon did not threaten to kill anyone in the letters to Michael Griffin, who faces trial Sept. 20 in the shooting death of Dr. David Gunn, but she supported his actions.

"I think it would be a good time to picket with a sign that says 'Execute Murderers/Abortionists,'" she wrote April 10 in a letter obtained by the Pensacola News Journal. "(Am I sick?)"

The letters indicated she had become disillusioned with nonviolent abortion protests, upset that some anti-abortion activists had condemned Gunn's shooting March 10.

"Someone made my day (right on Easter) by telling me another killing center got sent back to where it came from (burned up) in Missoula, Mont.," an April 17 letter said. "I applaud people who burn the places down to stop it. Excuse me. I get a little carried away sometimes."

Shannon's husband, David, said he knew his wife and Griffin had been in touch but knew nothing more.

The state has been a recent center for abortion protest following Operation Rescue National's move to Melbourne and the controversy over Gunn's slaying.

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement alerted its branches Friday "to keep their intelligence antenna out there," said Ron Sachs, communications director for Gov. Lawton Chiles.

"The message here in Florida is that no one intent on violence should come into Florida with any expectation that they will be welcome," Sachs said Saturday. "No one should hatch any plan to make Florida their headquarters for any act of violence."

The letters to Griffin contained frequent religious references and were often signed "Love in Christ." Many envelopes had Christian crosses stamped on them.

Letters sent in April and May gushed over Griffin.

"I know you did the right thing," she wrote. "It was not murder. You shot a murderer. I was more like anti-murder. I believe in you and what you did, and really want to help if possible. I wish I could trade places with you."

"Wow Michael, you are the awesome, greatest hero of our time," another letter said. "I pray God will raise up more like you."

The letters indicated Griffin wrote and called Shannon.

What is this thing called love?

Many men may not have agreed with a recent article regarding how men select prospective mates. It was, none-the-less, interesting reading.

The concept, advanced by the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, determined that one important first enticement for men may be women whose waistlines are small, when compared to their hips.

The suggestion smacks of the early days of American history, when (or so we have been told) men selected their mates based on the ability to bear healthy children.

We believe people have a tendency to select mates with which to spend the rest of their lives, based on response.

When one person glances at another, the response must be equal. A man would not look at a woman for very long if she greeted him with a frown or smirk.

It brings to mind the wording of an old song: "I was looking back to see if she was looking back at me."

Another response is suggested by the closing words of the old Nat King Cole song "Nature Boy." The words say, "The greatest thing .. you'll ever learn .. is how to love .. and be loved in return."

The song again explains that face-to-face contact and response is the most important factor. Loving is not a one-way street. It must be generated by both in order to have a successful marriage.

If the waist to hip ratio was the prime consideration, there would be many women who would be unable to find a mate because of their figure.

We agree with several men who were interviewed regarding the assumption that the first consideration is the waist to hip ratio. Balderdash!

Hitting close to home

This is in response to your question of where is citizen input and concern relating to the moving of the zoo, the air show name, and monies to the Orlando Science Center and other "important issues."

I believe individual citizen concern in its truest and most viable form is shown when issues are closest to home — their neighborhood — and when their concern is encouraged by responsive elected officials and the local media with an attitude of protection, preservation and enhancement.

I have not found that attitude to be foremost in the responses of local and county officials and the media. Local neighborhood citizen groups are continuing battles to protect neighborhoods from increased crime, borrow pits, expressways, and airport expansions. Citizens are labeled as "short-sighted" and "diehards" and "against progress" when they persist in their efforts.

It is apparent to me that local and county officials and those in the media have eagerly accepted being encompassed by the "power base to the south" with no thought of what consequences will be faced by the local neighborhoods. A specific example is the destructive impact of Project 2 of the expressway on five local neighborhoods.

No specific details of benefits to Sanford citizens or neighborhoods to offset the destructive impacts have been offered to justify the willingness of elected officials to promote this toll road as it takes commuters "around" Sanford into Orlando. It does make us certain of one thing. Our focus will need to remain close to home as we await what further negative impacts uninformed, outdated "progress" and "growth" decisions will have on our neighborhoods.

I believe apathy in Sanford/Seminole County is a learned response. It has resulted from the delays and obstacles thrown in front of citizens as they try to continue in efforts to protect their neighborhoods. Too many "done deals" and "Where were you when" are offered by elected officials in order to silence questions they would rather not try to answer.

Citizens will indeed protect what they value. When local government becomes more responsive and makes it easier for the "average" person to truly have a voice in decisions affecting their neighborhoods, perhaps we will have more time and energy left over to be aware of other "important issues."

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Letters to the editor are welcome. All letters must be signed, include the address of the writer and a daytime telephone number. Letters should be on a single subject and be as brief as possible. The letters are subject to editing.

A salute to the interstate crowd

Driving to work on Interstate Four daily certainly helps the adrenalin flow. The pace can be hectic or slow. The earlier one travels the better. There is less chance of gridlock. It has been my experience that the best hours for travel are prior to 7:15 or after 8:45 a.m. Traveling these hours helps one from being enmeshed in traffic.

Embarking on my journey to Orlando via I-4 begins with endeavoring to enter the interstate. The traffic always seems to be whizzing by. I bravely attempt to gain a space on the road. Everyone at that point appears to be traveling at excessive speeds.

There is a sense of satisfaction that engulfs one as one safely takes his/her place on I-4 without becoming embroiled in an accident.

If one finds oneself slowing down to a snail's pace before even reaching Lake Mary, one understands that they are in "stop and go" trouble. One might mentally debate exiting at Lake Mary and taking other routes. The possibility of re-entering I-4 at Longwood or

SEMINOLE OPINION

LURLENE SWEETING

Altamonte Springs becomes a real consideration.

As you continue your trip you are challenged by the lane changers although all lanes practically are not moving. There are some drivers who evidently are convinced they are making progress sideways by changing lanes. These daredevils like to squeeze into the smallest spaces. If one likes to leave adequate braking space, you are fair game for lane hoppers.

An added attraction on I-4 are the signs that inform motorists how many minutes they are going to be tied up between certain segments on the road. These signs evidently are to calm you as you check your watch to determine whether you will make it to work on time.

Perhaps I-4 travelers should be equipped with cellular phones. Once the minutes of delay are made known, your employer might be called.

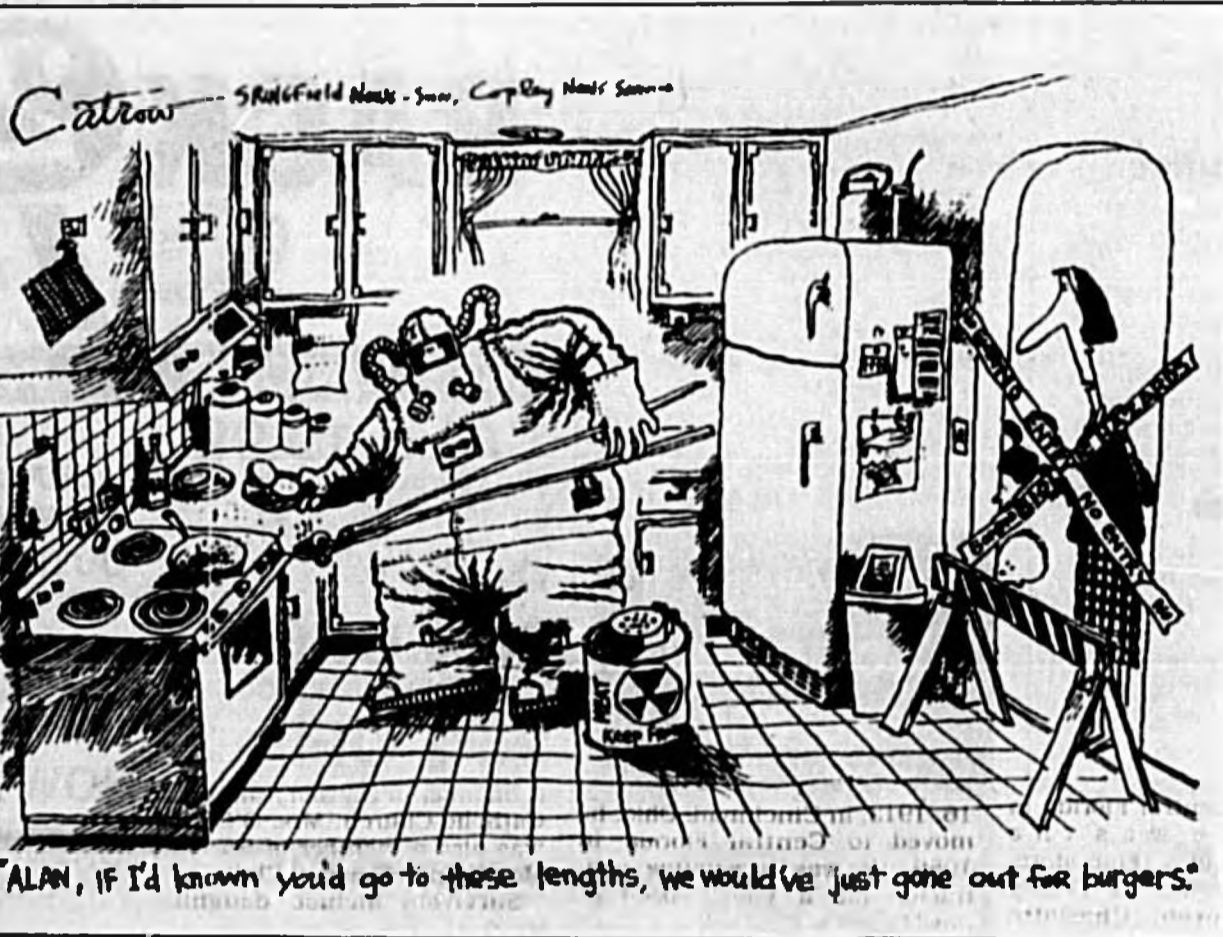

Occasionally a scene that seems entirely out of context comes into view. A police officer will be writing a ticket. The puzzle is what the violation could possibly be. It couldn't have been for speeding.

One morning the thought of avoiding the usual crowd occurred. Following this thought I traveled 17-92 to Orlando. The only accomplishment was meeting a different crowd. There were many, many lights and it took much longer.

Having concluded that I-4 was faster I returned to that route. As a resident of central Florida I-4 is one of our principal arteries.

Are there any answers to the I-4 crush? Staggering working hours and dismissal time is an option that might be seriously considered by some industries.

At any rate I salute everyone who daily joins the I-4 crowd. Remember to be courteous, alert and drive safely.

Family is what family does

BOSTON — Last year, the raging custody fight in America was between the political parties. Republicans and Democrats spent the long campaign season arguing about which owned the family issues. Not only did Dan Quayle go after Murphy Brown, but the GOP chairman said Hillary Clinton was an unfit first family member because she'd written in defense of children's rights.

This summer, the custody fights in the spotlight have been of a different and personal dimension. The ones that have riveted public attention have been between the DeBoers and the Schmidts, between the Mayses and the Twiggs. And we have watched through the eyes of the children.

First the country witnessed with horror as a tearful 2½-year-old Jessica was forcibly transferred from her adoptive home to her biological parents. Then the country watched 14-year-old Kimberly Mays, swapped at birth, go to court to divorce her genetic parents, Ernest and Regina Twigg. On Wednesday, the judge, who stopped short of granting a divorce, ruled that the Twiggs should have no contact with the teenager.

In each case the public has been overwhelmingly on the side of the children's rights, children's feelings and, by and large, their non-biological ties. There was barely a peep of support, even from the religious right, when the Twiggs' lawyer said, in his closing statement, "God gave Ernest and Regina Twigg the right to decide what is best for Kimberly."

What's going on here? Some vast and sudden rewrite on the traditional family script? Or enough confusion to typify a family reunion?

Our attitudes toward families change slowly over decades and then instantly over a single story. They aren't just mixed. They are chopped, diced, sliced, Cuisinarted and reconstituted. A composite portrait of our opinions would look like a school cafeteria after a food fight.

Given the option, most Americans would still award every child a complete set of biological, loving, solvent, attentive parents for life. But after that consensus is put aside, the plates start flying.

When the Census Bureau reported on unwed mothers this summer, the numbers were up across all ages and classes. But attitudes are up, down and all over the place.

Most Americans are dismayed at unwed teen-age mothers and splintered in their attitudes toward unwed older-and-wiser mothers. For the most part they regard motherhood without wisdom as selfish if it is planned, and foolish if it is an accident, and dubious unless it is by adoption. Adoptive single mothers, in turn, get approval unless they have motives like Michelle Pfeiffer's: "I thought, I don't want some guy in my life forever who's going to be driving me nuts."

Welfare families in particular are regarded as parasites unless they were left destitute by men and are, therefore, victims. If however, the mothers have another child on welfare, they become "breeders." Unwed fathers are variously labeled as sperm fathers, deadbeat dads, or in the case of fathers with custody, saints.

As for the bonds between parents and children, most believe that parents know best, but if they don't buckle their children's seat belts they should be arrested. We believe that it's hard to create a haven in a heartless world, but if a child joins a gang or skips school, some cities punish the folks. We demand strong families, but all we give them to defend their children against violent messages is a list of parental warnings for movies and television.

Stitched together, we believe in parental authority and children's rights; the right to spank and the wrong of abuse; the ties that bind and the times when they should be severed.

But somewhere in this huge, conflicting, muddle of opinions and deeply divided attitudes toward family, it is nevertheless possible to find a common thread. To put it simply: Family is what family does.

So it is that Americans who argue about family values, agreed that Jessica should have stayed with the parents who raised her. The same Americans who believe in an abstraction called the sanctity of family agree with the judge's decision that Kimberly and her legal father should be free from interference by her biological parents.

Case by case, tale by tale, we are building an emotional consensus that people earn their family stripes through sweat equity through caring, and taking care. As the architects like to say, form follows function. So, gradually, does the form called family.

In each case the public has been on the side of the children's rights.

Oklahoma Dems differed on budget

WASHINGTON — During the cliffhanger vote on the Clinton budget plan, Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., was on the House floor with tears welling up in his eyes.

"I was ashamed to be an Oklahoman congressman," he later told staffers. "That was the first time in 15 years."

Synar was "ashamed" that fellow Democrats in the state's congressional delegation deserted Clinton and voted against the $496 billion "deficit-reduction" package.

Synar implored them to stand their ground. But in the end he and White House officials felt Oklahoma Democrats buckled in to Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., the state's towering political figure and Clinton antagonist, who opposed the plan because it didn't go far enough.

Synar has been accused of being overly exuberant and even impetuous, but no one has ever accused him of not standing his ground.

In fact, he's made a career out of living dangerously. He's taken on all the heavyweight special interests: tobacco, the National Rifle Association, big oil, insurance companies, ranchers. This has earned him laurels but landed him at the top of several special-interest hit lists.

Taking on Oklahoma's most popular politician — and defending the least popular (Clinton) — may wind up costing him re-election next year. But Clinton counts Synar as one of his most steadfast allies, which is much more than can be said about Rep. Bill Brewster, D-Okla., and Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla. They were predisposed to support Clinton — as they had on an earlier vote — but feared incurring the wrath of Oklahoma public opinion, which Boren was helping to galvanize against the plan, according to congressional sources.

"When Boren came out against it ... we certainly understood the consequences," one White House official told us. "It's very hard for a member of Congress to vote against a popular senator who gets a lot of positive press."

Synar believes that Brewster and McCurdy possessed enough political capital to take a courageous stand, to vote for the budget plan.

In one private meeting with McCurdy and Brewster, according to sources, Synar illustrated the point by scribbling three numbers on the back of a napkin: 53, 71 and 75. These were the winning margins registered by the three men last election. In the general election, Brewster romped with 75 percent and McCurdy with 71 percent, but Synar eked out a 56-percent win. In the primary, Synar won with only 5 percent in a runoff. Synar was the only one who should be cowering; he was tangling with a senator who won every single voting precinct in the state.

As he lobbied Brewster and McCurdy, Synar sought to paint the decision as one of those litmus-test votes that can make and break careers, according to sources familiar with the discussions. Synar predicted that the superambitious McCurdy would forfeit his chances of attaining a leadership position in the House. For his part, Brewster was warned that even though he's a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, a vote against Clinton might mean getting frozen out of upcoming health-care negotiations.

Synar also pointed out that in Brewster's district, one out of every three families is going to get a tax break, and only 590 are going to get a tax increase. "This is like a 5,000-to-1 better proposition for the majority of the people," he told Brewster. The savings for McCurdy's district were less dramatic.

The White House feels it was betrayed by Boren, Brewster and McCurdy.

He was on the House floor with tears welling up in his eyes.

Land

On July 25, the commission requested the director of Planning and Development, Jay Marder, to develop alternate master plans for use of the site.

Marder responded by providing the results of a study that had already been made in September of 1986, when the school board still owned the land.

The original study recommended a number of uses for the property, which contains three separate parcels of land:

- The School Board property evidences a high potential for relocating either or both of the city's public safety functions (police station and main fire station).

- The school board property's central location within the city would be advantageous for a community swimming pool.

- The site is large enough to support a community shopping center of approximately 125,000 square feet. (The report added), "However the approved center on the west side of French Avenue plus concerns regarding neighborhood land use compatibility may discourage both the feasibility and appropriateness of another community shopping center located on the school board property."

- Professional office complex. Similar to retail development, office development totaling approximately 125,000 square feet could be physically supported on the site.

- Multiple family housing development. At a density of 16 dwelling units per acre, approximately 180 dwelling units could be accommodated on the 11.6 acre site.

- The site could accommodate the city's public safety functions plus a community swimming pool/recreation complex.

Each of these suggestions were made in 1986 regarding the car in motion.

Nothing was said regarding one parking restriction removed from the original city ordinance. According to the "line-outs" in the old ordinance, stopping or parking a vehicle in a highway tunnel in Lake Mary is now permitted.

The other proposed ordinance changes submitted by Beary touched the city's alarm ordinance. Beary had recommended minor changes to the various definitions. He also suggested a reduction in fines from $100 to $50, placed against homes or buildings where extensive false alarms occur during a six month period.

"Our purpose here is to encourage people to maintain their alarm systems," Beary said, "not to punish people."

Both matters are scheduled to come back for second reading and final approval during the first regular city commission meeting in September.

Nothing was said regarding one parking restriction removed from the original city ordinance. According to the "line-outs" in the old ordinance, stopping or parking a vehicle in a highway tunnel in Lake Mary is now permitted.

The other proposed ordinance changes submitted by Beary touched the city's alarm ordinance. Beary had recommended minor changes to the various definitions. He also suggested a reduction in fines from $100 to $50, placed against homes or buildings where extensive false alarms occur during a six month period.

"Our purpose here is to encourage people to maintain their alarm systems," Beary said, "not to punish people."

Both matters are scheduled to come back for second reading and final approval during the first regular city commission meeting in September.

Maude

Sandy Derrick, 5, said he enjoyed seeing Maude and likes coming to the zoo. "When it isn't too hot and there aren't a lot of bugs."

It was about 92 degrees and small insects were flying around the youngster at the time.

He was joined on the trip by Jenny, 7, Benjamin, 2, and baby sister, Joy, seven months.

Courtney Stieblein, 5, had earned two stars in her Deltona kindergarten class entitling her to a zoo trip so she attended the party with her mother, Pat and sister, Ashley, 3.

Andrea Farmer, zoo public relations manager, said several people had sent Maude birthday cards. She estimated a few hundred people attended the party.

Not one to stand on ceremony letting Maude have the first bite, Mary's trunk swooped down encircling several of the carrots and apples which were quickly deposited in her mouth. Both elephants enjoyed the fruit and vegetable topping before the hay bale was broken. Maude picked up a section of hay and tossed it onto her back. Most of the bale was consumed in a few minutes.

Johnson said Maude was caught in the wild and purchased by the zoo from Busch Gardens while Mary was born in captivity in a small circus in Europe before coming to live at the zoo.

After Maude and Mary enjoyed their cake, zoo visitors lined up and consumed three large sheet cakes, the white and chocolate varieties, with pink and white frosting. Everyone was given the opportunity to sign their name in icing on two of the cakes. The third cake was decorated with an elephant's face and said, "Happy 19th Birthday, Maude."

Three-year-old Alden Bunyan and his mother, Louise, from Clermont, weren't aware it was Maude's birthday until they arrived for a zoo visit. As Alden dove face first into a big piece of white cake, he said he would not like a cake like Maude's for his next birthday.

special projects assigned by the city manager."

The document also includes activities associated with rental rehabilitation, emergency repair/shelter, and liaison responsibilities with other governmental and quasi-governmental agencies, social service organizations, and community-based organizations as they relate to social, commercial, economic and community development."

Simmons is suggesting the department be staffed with a complement of eight. Salaries for four would be financed from multiple grant-type funding. Two would be paid through general funds, and the remaining two by a combination of general funds and grants.

Simmons predicts the department of Community Development would consist of two divisions, responsible to the director: Community Development Division, and Licensing Division.

The creation of the department is scheduled for discussion during the work session meeting beginning at 4:30 Monday afternoon, and as part of the regular meeting agenda beginning at 7 p.m. at Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

It states, "It is the mission of the Department of Community Development to provide responsible coordination of all activities associated with the City of Sanford's efforts and initiatives involving economic social and community development and enhancements."

The statement continues, "The scope of this responsibility will include activities such as project/program coordination of affordable housing, weatherization, block-grants, and general commercial, economic and social development/planning issues and

IN LOVING MEMORY OF

WILLIAM B. BRINSON, JR.

August 19, 1992

God looked around His garden and found an empty place. Then He looked down upon earth and saw your tired face. He put His arms around you and lifted you to rest. God's garden must be beautiful. He only takes the best. He knew that you were suffering. He knew you were in pain. He knew you would never get well on earth again. He saw the road getting rough and the hills were hard to climb. So He closed your weary eyelids and whispered "Peace be thine". Though the smile is gone forever and your hands we cannot touch. We will always have sweet memories of the one we loved so much. Gone but not forgotten! We love you Bill, Wife, Marilyn, Children and Grandchildren.

Let's

Ask Teena

DEAR TEENA: I can't even begin to figure out fashion. My friends all go into the store and know just exactly what we are "supposed" to wear for school and I come out with the stuff that I like and I don't look like the others.

Am I a total geek or what? How do I learn about fashion stuff?

GEEKY, SANFORD
DEAR GEEKY: You don't sound like a geek to me.

Don't worry about what everyone else is wearing. Wear what you like and are comfortable and don't try to be a carbon copy of everyone else.

Just because everyone else is wearing grunge and lace doesn't mean you need to wear it.

If you're more comfortable in a pair of nice jeans and a t-shirt or even in a business suit, that's what you should wear.

There's nothing to figure out about fashion if all you want to do is look like everyone else. But if you want to be your own person, then wear what you like.

DEAR TEENA: My brother got his girlfriend pregnant and now he won't even talk to her.

She hasn't got any money and her parents are going to kick her out of the house when they find out that she's pregnant.

I want to help her, but I'm afraid to get involved.

It's really none of my business, but I really feel for her... she's a nice girl, but she made a mistake getting involved with my brother.

What should I do? Should I help her or pretend I don't know the situation and hope she goes away.

NOT MY BROTHER'S KEEPER, BUT... LAKE MARY

DEAR NOT: You seem like a very compassionate person. It's a pity your brother doesn't seem to have that same quality.

You're right to see that it is your brother's responsibility to take care of his girlfriend if he got her pregnant. The two of them need to get together to decide what they want to do next.

Will they keep the child (it certainly doesn't appear that would be your brother's first choice)? Will they put the child up for adoption?

Talk to your brother. Ask him if he is afraid of the responsibility or the financial burdens. May be there are people in your family or her's who would be willing to help out financially if they decided to stay together?

It isn't up to you to make any decisions for them, she and your brother should do that, but if you want to and think that you can help out with anything from moral support to money, do it.

But, first and foremost, try to convince your brother to face up to his responsibilities and make some tough decisions with this girl.

DEAR TEENA: My dad's a jerk.

I mean he's a real jerk. Not that he doesn't let me do things that I want to do or that he doesn't give me use of the car or anything like that.

He either yells at or ignores all of my friends. (None of them are good enough.) I'm almost ashamed to bring any of them home.

He treats my mother like dirt. He ignores her feelings. He has had two affairs in the last few years and makes no effort to even hide that from any of us. He makes it seem like every time he lifts a finger in the house it is the supreme sacrifice.

I read about those kids who take a gun and shoot their parents and I understand how they feel. I could never kill the man because I don't believe that would solve anything. I want to know how to help him.

JERK'S SON, LAKE MARY

DEAR SON,
For heaven's sake, don't take the violent way out... you're right, that wouldn't solve anything.

If your father is unwilling to talk about his problems which are obvious to you, but maybe not so much to him, you and your mother need to get some counseling to find ways to deal with the abuse you are experiencing.

Abuse comes in many forms. He may not be hitting you, but you are being mentally abused by his anger and his ignoring you.

You need to talk to a professional who can help you and your mother gain the confidence and the self-respect you need to deal with your father.

Mentors sought by district

People needed to help kids with support to stay in school

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Seminole County public schools are always looking for parents, members of the business community and others who are interested in helping keep students interested in school.

Sometimes students, even good students, lose interest in school when they fail to see how the things they are learning in the classroom could have anything to do with the things they will need to know the rest of their lives.

Other times, students just need a friend to help them get through what could be the most difficult, though probably the most memorable days of their lives. The school system, through the Dividends volunteer program, is looking for volunteers who are willing to offer a helping hand or a listening ear.

Most of all what they need are people who are willing to take the time to be a "personal cheerleader" for students who need some special attention.

They are looking for Mentors. Mentors do all of those things and more.

According to Jane Lane, who coordinates the district's Mentor program, the Mentors who have worked with students in the past have been a "vital part of the decrease in the school drop out rate in Seminole County."

The volunteers are trained to work with students who need that extra little push to get them interested and pull them through.

They then meet on a weekly basis for one hour at the middle or high school where students are experiencing academic and/or attendance problems.

"It may just be that a student is not motivated, not that he or she is unable to do the work," Lane said. "We're looking for people who can help the students experience success."

The district will train interested volunteers free of charge.

The full schedule is as follows:

• Thursday, Aug. 26, 8 a.m.: Lyman High School, 1141 S. County Road 427, Longwood.

Students want to get on with life with a three year degree

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — An increasing number of college-bound high school seniors favor speeding up the time it takes to get a bachelor's degree, according to two surveys.

Seventy-seven percent of 2,000 students in one poll said they would be more inclined to choose a school that let them finish in three years instead of the traditional four. That was up from 42 percent when the question was asked in 1983.

And 54 percent of 646 potential applicants to Oberlin College said they would prefer to get a bachelor's degree within three years.

"We knew that there was interest in this, and we knew it was the sensible thing both educationally and financially, but we were surprised at the very significant number of students who had come independently to the same conclusion," said S. Frederick Starr, president of the Ohio school and a chief proponent of the idea.

Fifteen presidents and chancellors met last month in Washington to discuss accelerated degree programs, year-round classes, combined undergraduate- and graduate-level education, and other ways to expedite a college education.

Among the schools and systems pushing or considering accelerated bachelor's degrees are Stanford, the State University of New York, the Higher Education Council of Virginia and the California state university system.

Finding your way with your friends

Students at Seminole High School are ready for the start of school tomorrow. They, along with their counterparts at other schools across the county, spent some preparation time at the schools this week, learning their schedules and locating their lockers. Most of the students are happy about getting back to school, it seems, though there are a few who would like just one more day...

Mel Blanc was the genius who supplied the voices for some of the best-loved cartoon characters in history — including Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck and Porky Pig. In 1961, a near-fatal car crash left him in a coma for 21 days. One day, his neurosurgeon addressed the unconscious "man of a thousand voices" as "Bugs Bunny," asking him how he felt. Blanc answered in "Bugs" voice, "Just fine, doc" — and from that moment, he began his slow recovery!

Treatment of Alzheimer's Disease

Dementia means loss or impairment of mental powers. It is commonly called "senility" or "hardening of the arteries." It causes mental confusion and intellectual impairment in a clearly awake person.

The symptoms of dementia can be caused by several different diseases. Some of these diseases are treatable and others are not. The cause of the illness is known in some diseases and unknown in others. Some dementias progress slowly while others rapidly.

Alzheimer's Disease appears to be the most frequent cause of slowly progressive dementia in adults. The cause of Alzheimer's Disease is unknown but advanced age, head injury, or family history increases the risk.

Diagnosis is made by tests to exclude other causes. Brain biopsy is the only way to make a definitive diagnosis. Though memory and improves the functions temporarily. Though it is effective, it is not a cure. Because it's safety is not proven, it remains an experimental drug. It is currently available from selected doctors on a voluntary basis. Very soon, it may be available for general use.

Though the side effects are bothersome, the results are phenomenal for some patients. Many times the families were more pleased than the patients. It is not the medicine for everyone, it is not a cure, but a step in the right direction.

Growth hormone no muscle-building miracle

By IRINA DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Human growth hormone is not the muscle-building miracle drug some athletes hoped for, researchers say.

The supplements, instead, may just make them retain water, said researcher Kevin E. Yarasheski of Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis.

His study, in the American Physiological Society's Journal of Applied Physiology, is among the latest to look at genetically engineered hormone supplements.

In normal conditions, growth hormone does what its name says — stimulate development. It helps muscles gain protein. And some earlier experiments had indicated supplementation would help people gain lean body mass, getting bigger without getting fatter, a sign they were gaining muscle. This led some athletes to try genetically engineered hormone, even though the supplements are banned in many sports.

But later work that focuses specifically on muscle development finds that supplements don't help, Yarasheski said.

Yarasheski and his colleagues studied seven high-intensity, low-repetition weight trainers with an average age of 23, who had been working out for at least three years.

For 14 days, the men received synthetic growth hormone in dosages a bit above what their bodies would theoretically produce in a day. During the study, they continued their normal training. Researchers took blood and muscle samples before and after the period.

There was no overall increase in protein uptake in the skeletal muscle, indicating synthetic growth hormone wasn't making any changes, the journal article said.

The study fits a pattern that indicates hormone supplements don't help an athlete become stronger, Yarasheski said. Exactly why isn't clear, but the body seems to have a way to control excess hormone, he said.

Increasing lean body mass, as shown in the earlier experiments, is not necessarily the same as adding muscle, Yarasheski said. It's possible that supplements stimulate growth in organs such as the liver and kidney, and more likely that supplements make users retain water, he said.

The implication for weight trainers who buy synthetic growth hormone is clear, Yarasheski said. "They are wasting their money," Dr. Daniel Rudman, a growth hormone researcher at the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, agrees. "For healthy athletes to take growth hormone as a medication is useless." Rudman's work in people over 60 had found that supplements increased lean body mass and shrunk fat, effectively reversing some of the changes that come with age.

Rudman and Yarasheski also agree that overdoses can be dangerous.

"A general principle in endocrinology is that too little causes one set of adverse effects, and too much causes another set," Rudman said.

Too much growth hormone can lead to diabetes. In some cases, it also can create acromegaly — excessive bone growth that can deform the hands, feet and face.

Another expert accepts the conclusion that synthetic growth hormone does not increase muscle in the dosage given, but contends this does not predict what could happen if the drug is abused at higher doses.

However, Dr. Alan D. Rogol notes that the drug's high cost will make it hard to abuse. The professor of pediatrics and pharmacology at the University of Virginia Health Sciences Center in Charlottesville treats children who lack growth hormone.

"You're probably talking about $50,000 or more in an adult," Rogol said. "That's if they took a replacement dose (equal to what their body makes) for 50 weeks, and we think that would not do them any good."

A New Breakthrough In Hernia Repair

Hernia repair is no longer major surgery. Recent advances like the mesh technique have made it as simple as a one-day "walk-in, walk-out" procedure.

A new laparoscopic technique now available at The Hernia Center of Central Florida has simplified things even further. Because this procedure requires only small incisions, it lessens pain and further shortens recovery time.

The Hernia Center is operated by Surgical Associates, an established team of skilled surgeons who have practiced in Central Florida since 1973 and have performed literally thousands of hernia operations.

children and their children's children when these animals become extinct," was one comment in a letter published in the Sanford Herald Friday. Other Tiger's Eye support letters similarly question the commission's concern about endangered species.

Martin said the IGC is a non-profit corporation formed in 1991 and activated this year to preserve wildlife. IGC programs include an "Adopt-a-Bear" campaign to support preservation of the dwindling Florida bear population and an effort to ban ocean dumping. Martin said the organization has about 100 members.

Copies of the spiral-bound booklet were distributed to area media Friday by county commission chairman Bob Sturm.

In the booklet, Martin reported his research on the Tiger's Eye issue and concluded "It is our finding that this is not an 'endangered species' issue. Despite the fact that David has successfully rallied his students and volunteers behind the issue of 'endangered species' I.G.C. does not believe this to be the issue at all. The issue is that the school does not belong in the area it is now located in."

McMillan expressed surprise at learning of Martin's position Friday and said he had not seen the booklet. McMillan said as recently as Thursday, Martin gave him his full support. When asked for a reaction to Martin's findings, McMillan said "That's his opinion."

When told of McMillan's comment, Martin said he had mailed McMillan a copy of the position booklet Aug. 16. Martin added he spoke with McMillan Thursday and told him it would be inappropriate for him to continue attending strategy meetings since he supported the commissioner's position.

Martin said he has offered to aid McMillan find a new location for the school, one of only two of its kind in the United States, but McMillan has refused.

"I told him, I would be happy to work with you if you took a positive track on this," said Martin. "The real issue seems to be 'What can I do to smokescreen the public and get them off the real issue?'"

Martin said he decided to investigate McMillan's statements when he was approached by him for support.

"I got into this when he came to me," Martin said. "I wanted to be sure this was something we could support."

Martin wrote that at two meetings McMillan stated the neighbor's opposition was due to intentions by those neighbors and commissioners to develop their property.

County zoning manager Herb Hardin said Friday he had met with one of David McMillan's neighbors, Robert Foote, two to three years ago about subdividing his property into five-acre lots, but has not heard from him since. No other verbal or written request has been submitted for any subdivisions in the area, said Hardin.

June 22, commissioners voted 4-0 to reject McMillan's request to extend his special permit three years for Tiger's Eye on Oak Hollow Lane in rural southeast Seminole County. More than a dozen people, both students and supporters, spoke in favor of the request. They said the training provides a valuable service to the public through education of the plight of endangered species.

Neighbors complained about excess traffic along the narrow roadway caused by students, visitors and large trucks delivering meat for the 10 large cats at the McMillan's property.

McMillan and his wife Paula McMillan were first granted a two-year special permit to operate the school for six students at a time during business hours on weekdays on Oct. 23, 1990. Then, commissioners overturned the unanimous Board of Adjustment rejection of the original permit and granted the McMillans three years to operate the school amid the objections of neighbors.

Residents of the area told commissioners they were concerned about increased traffic on their rural road and the commercial encroachment in the neighborhood.

At the time, according to the official county record of the meeting, Paula McMillan told commissioners two years would be adequate to find a permanent location for the school and would be willing to sign an agreement to do so.

According to the record, Commissioner (Fred) Streetman affirmed with Mr. McMillan that it is a matter of the record that he has no plans to come back before the board for a renewal and his word is bond.

When a reporter attempted to read the passage to McMillan by telephone Friday, he interrupted and, raising his voice, said the statement was taken out of context and the subsequent statement in the record explained the issue. McMillan said he expected a new school to cost about $500,000. Because the economy slowed since 1990, he was unable to raise the money needed for the school.

McMillan then stated the Sanford Herald was not trying to fully report the issue and hung up.

The following statement in the record reads "Commissioner Streetman stated that Mr. McMillan would not have a right to operate the school on the subject property except by going through this process to obtain a special exception and that is what gives him the right."

Sanford to offer instructional baseball program

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — Softball, volleyball, and football will not be the only sports being contested in the Sanford recreation leagues this fall.

For the first time ever, the Sanford Recreation Department will sponsor a Youth Instructional Baseball Program this fall, starting Saturday, Sept. 11, at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

"It's something that we have wanted to do for a couple of years but just didn't have the facilities to do it," said Sanford Recreation Department supervisor Rocky Ellingsworth. "Now, with the city taking over control of the stadium and the coaches willing to get involved, it gives us a chance to improve our program and keep the kids interested in baseball."

The program is being set up to teach the young players the fundamentals of the game and to improve the individual skills of the participants, not to just put the players on the field to play games.

This program should be a definite asset to the Sanford players, giving each player an opportunity to learn about the game of baseball from several individuals while allowing the time for more one-on-one coaching.

The program will kick off with a coaches meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 8, starting at 6:30 p.m. at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

Any coach who is interested in helping instruct the young players is encouraged to attend.

The program will be open to any player between the age of 10 and 15 years old and will start with an open registration at Sanford Memorial Stadium on Saturday, Sept. 11, at 10 a.m.

Cost for the instructional program will be $15. Sessions will be conducted each Saturday at Sanford Memorial Stadium through Thanksgiving.

Plans call for individuals to go through an instructional session and then break up into teams to play games.

Pre-registration will begin on Wednesday, Sept. 1. Interested players can bring their money and birth certificate to the Downtown Youth Center, lower level of Sanford City Hall, 300 North Park Avenue, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"If interest is high enough between coaches and players, there is a possibility that we will hold a regular league next fall (1994)," said Ellingsworth. "With the stadium at our disposal, we now have a place where we can do some different things. We hope to keep the stadium busy with different activities all year round."

The program will be limited to teaching players about the fundamentals of baseball for the first month. A coaches teaching program will be run along with it.

The Sanford Recreation Department will hold a coaches meeting for any individual who is interested in coaching in the Spring Baseball Program next year on Wednesday, Oct. 6, at 6:30 p.m. at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

"We are going to need new coaches for all of our baseball leagues next spring," said Sanford Recreation Department Supervisor Jim Schaefer. "And we will also be offering a new program in

Williams scores Match Play win

Special to the Herald

SANFORD — The week's play reported by Bow! America-Sanford again was highlighted by an exciting Saturday Match Play Tournament on Aug. 14.

This week's tournament started with 16 qualifiers and came down to a final matchup between Don Caniglia and Cliff Williams.

Williams advanced through the double-elimination tournament undefeated, while Caniglia came out of the loser's bracket.

Caniglia forced a winner-take-all game by handing Williams his first loss of the tournament, 259-237. But Williams refused to wilt, coming back to edge Caniglia, 286-267.

In league play, Barb Richards was the top bowler for the week, claiming top series honors in three different senior fun leagues.

Richards' highest series, which was also the highest individual series for the week for the women, came in the Wednesday Senior Fun League, when she put together a 550.

She also had the highest individual game score, a 211, but it came instead in the Saturday Senior Fun League.

Don Bangs was almost as impressive as Richards as he lead men's play with two high series wins and a third place finish in another league.

Bangs' highest series was a 577 in the Wednesday Senior Fun League, but that was not the highest series of the week. Ray Devens claimed that honor by rolling a 593 in the Porzig Realty League.

The highest individual game of the week for the men was a 223 turned in by Charles Conklin in the Wednesday Fun League.

Close races highlight Playtime league play

Special to the Herald

SANFORD — Can it get much closer?

Nine weeks into the Playtime Darts League schedule and no-one is pulling away in any of the five leagues. The largest margin enjoyed by any league pacesetter is the six-game edge the Bamboo Bullets out of the Bamboo Cafe has in the Mixed A League.

In the Mixed B League, Lake Mary Pub's Family Feud leads by five games.

After that, Bamboo Cafe's The Family has a two-game edge in the Men's League while Good Answer from the Lake Mary Pub and the Bamboozlers out of the Bamboo Cafe lead the Women's and Men's B League, respectively, by one game.

Also, all but one of the third-place teams are within eight games of the lead. The exception also happens to be the Mixed A League, where the Bamboo Bullets are 16 games up on the third-place squad.

HOT SHOTS

Topping this week's listing of individual standouts with six wins each are Kristin Meeks of Ron's Kids from Uncle Nick's in the Mixed A League and Bobby Pilgrim from Sir Walter's Team No. 5 in the Men's A League.

Also making this week's women's Hot Shot list are Jean Richer, who throws for Nick's Nieces out of Uncle Nick's, and Penny Creech of M.T. Muggs' Mugg Shots, with four wins apiece.

Among the men, Rick Mann had five wins for Bamboo Cafe's Crazy Darts in Mixed B League play. Collecting four wins, one bull, and a nine-throw dartout each were Chuck Darrow and Rick Marcello, both of Bamboo Cafe's Rick's Team in the Men's A League.

Budd Stumpf posted four wins and three hat tricks in Men's B League play for Whiskey River's River Rats. Notching four wins and a bull each were Lawrence Duncan (who throws for Bamboo Cafe's Eliminators in the Men's A League) and Rusty Boyd (the captain of the Whiskey River River Rats).

Becker aiming to extend domination over Courier

By HANK LOWENKRON
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Third-seeded Boris Becker, who has never lost to second-seeded Jim Courier in six previous meetings, will get a chance to extend the streak today in the championship match of the U.S. Hardcourts.

Becker, No. 4 in the world, held off the challenge of No. 139 Patrick Rafter of Australia 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 in Saturday's first semifinal at the Indianapolis Tennis Center.

Courier, a former resident of Sanford who will reclaim the role as the world's top men's player when the new rankings are released Monday, defeated No. 70 Luiz Mattar of Brazil 6-3, 6-2 in the other semifinal.

Becker and Courier haven't met in a tour event since Becker won the final of the ATP Tournament last November on a carpet court in Germany.

"I think he is stronger outdoors," said Becker, who has a 12-4 set advantage over Courier. "He is going to give me a hard time tomorrow. I am convinced."

"He has played well every time we have played, pretty simple," Courier said when asked about Becker's success against him.

"I put in 100 percent today, and he was just too good when it counted on the big serves, big points, putting in big serves," said Rafter, the 20-year-old Australian playing in only his 11th official tour event.

Becker and Rafter both made big weapons of their serve-and-volley games, recording identical 82 percent marks on their first serve. The difference was 28 unforced errors by Rafter, who was 3-6 in matches this year until he reached his first semifinal with the help of a stunning three-set triumph Friday over two-time defending champion Pete Sampras in a match that included three tiebreakers.

"Boris never gave me a chance on his serve, really. I found it really hard to get under with a lot of turns," Rafter said. "I was hanging in there just as tough as I could, but I really had no more to give. I played a lot of matches, long matches in the heat and doubles as well, it takes its toll."

Becker and Rafter each had two service breaks in the 2-hour, 15-minute match.

Becker posted his victory with three consecutive service winners, saving a break point with a serve clocked at 112 mph. He gained the advantage with a 120 mph bullet and won the match when Rafter couldn't handle a 119 mph shot.

"It was my best match so far of the tournament," Becker said. "I served well and I moved well, even though I was down break point in the last game."

Becker, who won the tournament in 1988 and 1990, had the only break of the first set when he

Snook hookers wait patiently for Sept. 1

With the approach of September 1, many snook addicts are getting geared up for some serious fishing. The season has been closed for three months, and snook have been getting thick at Sebastian Inlet, Ft. Pierce, and other local waterways.

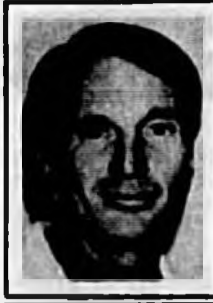

Sebastian Inlet is perhaps the most popular spot, as shore-bound anglers stand an excellent chance for success. The practice for Sebastian Inlet is standard — fish the outgoing tide for the best action. It is on this tide that bait is funneled out to the awaiting gamefish.

Live bait is best in the daytime, and lures work well at night. Live shrimp or finger mullet are the most popular live baits, while one-ounce jigs remain the most popular artificial. Many veterans tip their jigs with a plastic worm to add action.

Ft. Pierce Inlet offers some excellent snook action, but a boat is needed to reach the best fishing spots. This would be a good bet to fish on a vacation, but it is a little far to fish for only one day.

Many Seminole County anglers choose to fish the west coast near the Englewood/Pine Sound area. This stretch of coast is dotted with many passes such as Redfish, Captiva, and Boca Grande — all of which offer fantastic snook fishing. Pine Island Sound is located with snooky flats and channels.

Most locals use live bait for good daytime action with snook in the 8-15 pound range. An exciting and productive method is to "chum" a known snook hole with live bait in order to trigger a feeding frenzy. A hooked baitfish is then tossed into the boiling water for a sure strike.

Not only is this portion of the west coast excellent fishing, it is also a beautiful area. The water is super clean and is full of miles of grass flats. It is impossible to fish this area and not catch a good mess of trout.

If you're ready for a change, snook fishing might be just the answer. Be aware, however, that this type of fishing is very addictive. Once you've caught your first snook, you will be hooked forever.

SHUPE'S SCOOP
Make sure that your snook lures have extra-strong hooks. These fish make powerful surges that straighten factory hooks.

FISHING FORECAST
Bass fishing is still very slow in local lakes and in the river. Conditions will not improve until cooler weather. Bream and catfish continue to bite in spite of the heat.

Many snook are having to be released at Sebastian Inlet, but September 1 is rapidly approaching. Tarpon, redfish, flounder, jack crevalle, and ladyfish are keeping anglers very busy at this popular fishing spot.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports spotty offshore action. A few anglers seem to do well, while many are getting skunked or catch only peaky barracuda. Bottom fishing is also slow due to cold currents.

A few king mackerel, cobia and huge jack crevalle are roaming the buoy line. Inside the Port, it's mainly sheepshead, jack crevalle, and a few flounder. Trout are slow on the flats, but redfish are rated as good.

Live or dead shrimp at Ponce Inlet will produce action from sheepshead, drum, redfish, jack crevalle, flounder, and a few pompano. Trout and redfish are rated as fair in Mosquito Lagoon.

the spring, it will be a Tee-Ball League for players ages 5 and 6.

The Sanford Recreation Department offers baseball leagues for boys in the Tee-Ball League (5-6 year olds), Pee-Wee League (7-9 years old), Little Major Baseball League (10-12 years old) and Babe Ruth Baseball League (13-15 years old). "This meeting will give us an early start on next spring," said Schaefer. "And any coach who wants to come out to watch and learn from the more experienced coaches in the league are encouraged to attend the Saturday instructional program."

"Jeff Small (who coached the KORG USA Expos in the Babe Ruth League and was the Babe Ruth All-Star coach) will be coordinating the instructional program and wants to see not only players but coaches come out, because that will improve the whole baseball program from top to bottom. I think this program will be extremely successful."

Anyone interested in coaching or joining the program, or needing more information, should call the Sanford Recreation Department at (407) 330-5697, during normal working hours, Monday through Friday.

passed Rafter on set point. Each then held serve through the first six games of the second set when Becker was broken after taking a 40-love lead in the seventh game.

A double fault started a streak of 10 consecutive points by Rafter. The streak ended after Rafter, leading 5-3, won the first point in the final game of the second set and captured the set when Becker doublefaulted again.

Becker came back to break Rafter in the opening game of the final set and each player held from then on.

"I knew today that I have to be on top of my game," said Becker, who is in the title match of the tournament for the fourth time and is 25-2 in five appearances. "I was very, very sharp at the beginning of the match and I basically stayed sharp throughout the whole match."

Courier lost only five points on his serve, winning 22 of 26 of his first serves and 15 of 16 second serves. Mattar got only one break point in the match, which Courier saved with a service winner.

The Federal Practice Section represents approximately 13,000 lawyers throughout the nation. Askew was appointed to the position for a period of one year, beginning at the conclusion of the annual meeting of the American Bar Association in New York City this month, and ending at the next annual meeting in New Orleans in 1994.

The appointment was announced by Wesley P. Hackett, Jr., Chair Elect of the section.

Publix protest

By The Associated Press

ALBANY, Ga. — Publix Super Markets Inc.'s new Albany store is drawing protests over the chain's hiring practices and decision to fill top jobs with non-Georgians.

"If more Georgians aren't hired as managers and women and minorities as workers, you will see a request for all labor to boycott Publix food stores," Georgia State AFL-CIO President Herbert H. Mabry said Wednesday after a protest near the new Publix store, which will open early next month.

Several speakers complained about a published report in which Publix Chairman Howard Jenkins said the Lakeland, Fla.-based chain's culture did not exist in Georgia so the group was forced to bring in its own management team.

"We don't need Florida culture or transplanted bosses and workers from Florida," said Edward J. Lyness, president of the Albany Southwest Georgia Labor Council. "We don't need Publix in Georgia. All Publix can do is take away existing jobs from Georgia workers."

Locals are losing jobs to outsiders across Georgia, said state Rep. Lawrence Roberts, D-Albany.

Publix spokeswoman Rita Owens said the group misinterpreted Jenkins' remarks.

"Everybody at Publix is passionately focused on customer service and customer value and to give superior customer service we need people to come from that background," she said.

SANFORD — A Central Florida public relations and marketing organization has been hired to assist with the ground breaking and grand opening activities on the new Seminole Towne Center Mall to be built in Sanford.

Todd Persons Communications has been retained by Melvin Simon and Associates to provide media relations services for the 1.2 million square foot two level enclosed mall scheduled to break ground Thursday, Sept. 9.

"We're very excited about working with Melvin Simon & Associates on this project," said Bud Brewer, vice president of Public Relations for Todd Persons Communications.

"Seminole Towne Center will bring substantial economic development to Sanford and the surrounding community while offering the latest and finest in mall shopping to Central Florida consumers," he added. "We're delighted to be a part of these activities."

Seminole Towne Center will feature six anchor department store tenants including Dillard's, J.C. Penney, Parisian and Burdines, plus 130 retail stores.

Negotiations are still underway to have Sears as a fifth anchor store, with the sixth still to be decided.

The mall is scheduled to open

Get ready for the ADF A penny per container

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

Beginning Oct. 1, many Florida businesses must begin collecting an Advance Disposal Fee (ADF) of one cent for each bottle, jar and other container sold in the state. Wholesalers will generally collect the fee but sometimes retail establishments and even manufacturers must collect it.

John Moore, with the Department of Revenue, said, "In most cases, the wholesaler will charge the retailers for this fee. While there is no reason for the retailer to boost the price for liquids contained in such containers, we expect many of them probably will do so."

To help businesses understand the requirements of the fee, the Florida Department of Revenue will conduct a series of training seminars around the state this month. Two sessions will be held each day, at 2 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

In this area of Central Florida, the meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, August 18, at Orlando City Hall, 400 S. Orange Avenue, 2nd floor Council Chambers.

Other meetings are scheduled later in the month in Tampa, Jacksonville, Fort Lauderdale, Miami and Pensacola.

Moore said there is no admission for the seminars. "We want to give everyone an opportunity to learn more about this ADF," he said, "and the meetings are open to the general public as well as people who will be involved in this fee."

Department of Revenue employees will be available at each session with written material, a video and answers to questions the public may have concerning the ADF.

The one cent ADF fee will be imposed on sealed glass, plastic or plastic coated paper cans, bottles, jars and beverage containers provided the container is five ounces through one gallon in size.

Aluminum and steel are exempt because the Department of Environmental Protection found these materials are being recycled at a rate greater than 50 percent. Other containers may be exempt next year if their manufacturers can meet other requirements under the law.

Moore commented, "I expect several producers will set about proving that their products go over the 50 percent mark on recycling and will be applying to us for an exemption within the year."

Spotlight on volunteer

Retired Senior Volunteer Program shined the spotlight on a really extraordinary volunteer, Geneva Green.

Green joined RSVP in 1991 and has been a tireless worker since. She loves to create things with her sewing and knitting and for the past two years has served as coordinator for the sewing groups.

Recently Green established two more sewing groups bringing the seven the number of groups that she serves. These groups make many of the items for the RSVP Christmas store and many other community projects.

Green visits each group bringing supplies and new ideas and picking up finished items on a regular basis. Plus she still finds time to make many items herself.

She also serves on the RSVP Advisory Council, the Christmas Store and Whole of Sale committees.

RSVP officials say they are truly blessed to have Green on board.

RSVP is an organization of volunteers whose life skills are matched to volunteer positions in the community.

Partners fight crime

Man's best friend is a top-notch canine cop

By ED KORGAN
Herald Correspondent

A terrific companion and an excellent crime deterrent.

Deputy Bill Shaffer has been with the Seminole County Sheriff's Office for seven years and in that time he has trained and worked with three police dogs. The dogs which have turned out to be a great investment have been involved in many criminal apprehensions because of their ability to get into many tight places, chase down fugitives and sniff a trail of a felon to its end. Shaffer's current companion, Hero, is rated high in all those categories.

Hero, a German Shepherd, was bred in Germany. His training was started in Europe and continued when he was imported to the United States. At approximately three years old, Hero met his current companion and he and the deputy began training together.

Shaffer explained, "When we get them, we go to school with them for 10 weeks and it's almost or close to 600 hours of initial police training that we do with them. It includes tracking, area searches, building searches, article searches, such as checking for pieces of evidence and criminal apprehension. There is a lot that we have to start out with when we get them and that forms a good basis for their continuing training."

He continued, "Our training is constant throughout the dog's career. Usually I try to do something with him every night and then every other Thursday we have a whole shift in which the three dogs and the deputies train together."

Hero lives with Shaffer and his family. He said working with the dog is a pleasurable job.

"It is both. I obviously enjoy working with the dog but on the other hand it is a lot of work because of the amount of time you have to spend in the training. When I take him home he is just like another big kid. So there is a lot of responsibility and also making sure the dog is handled and cared for in the proper way."

Shaffer said, although Hero is trained to be a police dog, he has an amiable side to him. He was lovable and could be petted and hugged just as any small child would do to such a good looking animal. The viciousness a criminal might see trying to escape would never be seen by a child. Shaffer has two children at home and Hero is very protective of those boys.

Hero is even tempered for a reason, Shaffer said. "In police work we don't want vicious guard dogs. We want a dog we can take to public demonstrations and can work in the public and we don't have to worry about them biting or attacking people. The dog has to have an even temperament where he knows when it is time to

Love and clean living make long marriage work

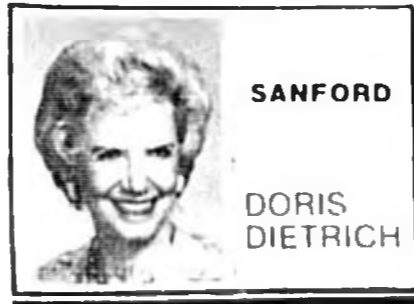

Randall and Edna Priest celebrate their 55th anniversary

Love a lot and clean living have resulted in a happy and successful 50-year marriage for Frances and Delma Willis, according to Frances.

The couple observed their anniversary on June 12 but were late celebrating since their daughter from Chicago could not attend until August 14 when the couple celebrated at the Sanford Church of Christ on Park Avenue.

The Rev. Tony Black officiated as the couple renewed their wedding vows at the church where they are both so active. Following the ceremony about 150 relatives and friends gathered in the church fellowship hall for a gala reception.

The hall was festively decorated and the tables featured greenery runners with a mixed arrangement of gold and white flowers decorating the main table. A bouquet of red roses graced the punch table.

Tracy Willis, granddaughter from Jacksonville, presided over the guest book. Shirley Willis poured the punch and Cheryl Willis cut and served the cake.

Go into the hedges, byways and highways and carry the message of the Master. This was indeed the purpose for the 50 members of the Morning Glory Missionary Baptist Church, where the Rev. Andrew Evans is pastor, and the Community Fellowship Choir, under the guest directorship of Mary Whitehurst and Faye Williams, director and musician.

This group of dedicated Christians from various churches traveled to present "A Night of Praise in Concert" at the Progressive Baptist Church, Egan III, where the Rev. Willie Lane is pastor. The concert was held at the Newby-Hugheson Community Center. She is the daughter of Mrs. Whitehurst.

Truly the praises of the Lord went up to the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. The concert was a success and the success of this group of dedicated musicians.

On Sunday morning the choir members joined Pastor Lane and his choir for the morning worship and fellowship service at the Progressive Baptist church. The spirit was indeed high as the choir marched in from both churches and the pastor, the Rev. Andrew Evans, extended a warm welcome to the visitors and gave with his message. God was indeed in the building as the message of the morning was heard each soul.

After the dinner meal everyone boarded the bus to return safely to Sanford. All members gave praise and thanks to the Progressive Baptist Church, Egan, and Pastor Lane and his wife, Mrs. Lane, to Sister Netwyn Henderson for the hospitality.

Beach-goers return to nature
Making the trek there from Sanford

By JOHNA KUMISKI
Special to the Herald

Emerald green waters caress a pristine sandy beach. Echelons of pelicans fly overhead, pausing now and then to crash dive into the sea for a snack. Ghost crabs scurry along on the sand diving back into their burrows at the first sign of an intruder. All this and more describes Canaveral National Seashore.

The seashore stretches gloriously undeveloped for 23 miles between New Smyrna and the Kennedy Space Center. The last such stretch of beach on Florida's east coast. While some sun worshippers choose beaches lined with high rise condos and like to dodge automobile traffic to take a swim, others prefer to see their beaches as God made them, shaped by nothing more than the forces of nature. Canaveral National Seashore offers these people such a beach.

The seashore is so undeveloped a 12-mile stretch is accessible only by foot. The beach at the north end of the seashore is called Apollo Beach. State Road A1A extends down along Apollo Beach, and five parking lots offer access to beachgoers.

At the southern end by the space center, the beach is called Playalinda. Thirteen large parking lots allow plenty of bathers to congregate here. Between the south end of the north road and the north end of the south road is the 12-mile stretch of sand called Klondike Beach. Folks wanting to visit Klondike beach had better be prepared to walk. There is no road access.

At both ends of the beach, all the typical things people do at beaches are done. Swimming, sunbathing, surfing, sandcastle building, and surf fishing all have their devotees. By Apollo Beach though, other options await.

A visit to the old Eldora House offers photo opportunities and a glimpse of life in Florida in an earlier age. Walk around Turtle Mound, enjoying the profusion of plant species, and think about how many oysters this area's natives had to eat to build this huge pile of debris. Stop in at the Visitor Center and learn about sea turtles and how they lay their eggs on this strip of unaltered beach.

Don't expect much in the way of services here. A chemical toilet will be found at every parking lot (The Park Service keeps them quite clean.) Other than that, it's just you and the beach — no cars, no loud music. Be sure to bring food and water in addition to your sunscreen and beach toys.

Summer storms come on quickly. People on the beach are favored targets of lightning, especially if they hold those lightning rods called fishing rods. Get off the beach when storms approach.

The Canaveral National Seashore is more than worth a visit. Make the trek over there. You won't be disappointed.

Getting there from here

To get to Playalinda, take S.R. 44 east to U.S. 1, heading south. In a few miles you'll go over a bridge and see the Indian River on your left. Take the next left at a traffic light and go over the river on the Max Brewer Causeway. Going straight on this road will bring you to Playalinda Beach.

To get to Apollo Beach, take S.R. 44 into New Smyrna. After going over the South Causeway, look for the traffic light and take a right on Saxon Drive. This road will bring you to S.R. A1A. Go south on A1A about five miles and you will enter the seashore. The five parking lots here fill up quickly on hot summer weekends — get there early.

A word to the wise — the park rangers at both ends strictly enforce the rather slow speed limits. Don't hurry! The beach has been there a long time. It can wait a few more minutes for you. Enjoy your trip!

responsibilities and one of the memorable incidents was when I took a Lake Howell High School leadership group to Tallahassee. At that time, I even had to drive the bus myself! We went to the Florida State campus and the bus would not fit through the archway to the Florida State University campus. I had to make a three-point turn to get out of this predicament and the leadership group really seemed to be enjoying the show.

"Originally, I had applied for the principalship of Lake Howell High School. However, Supt. Hagerty made a decision to make some transfers at that time. So the former principal, Don Smith from Lake Mary High School, went to Lake Howell High School as their new principal and I was transferred to Lake Mary High School.

"I found Lake Mary High School to have strong traditions and an excellent history in terms of student performance, both academically and in extra-curricular activities, which makes for an exciting situation coming into Lake Mary High School."

Beehive of activity

Beginning last Monday,

August 16, Lake Mary High School has been a beehive of activity. Freshmen procedures began at that time and five stations were set up for freshmen to obtain their class schedules, locker assignments. Guidance was set up for any students who had an immediate schedule conflict. Yearbook pictures were taken as part of the early distribution schedule. The attempt was to lessen the number of disruptions in English classes during the school year. Students were encouraged to come groomed and dressed for the yearbook photo. A make-up day will be available later for those students who were unable to take advantage of the early distribution. The fifth station was for ID cards but was not available as originally scheduled. When available there will be a new barcoded photo ID card and they will be distributed to all freshmen to facilitate library usage and serve as an identification card in the school and community.

Distribution schedules were even earlier for sophomores, juniors and seniors. These schedules began as early as Wednesday, August 11.

On Thursday, August 19, there was a general open house where students were able to locate their classes and meet their teachers. Also on this date, schedules were only available for students who were unable to pick them up during the previous week.

Lake Mary High School principal, Raymond L. Gaines

Junior and seniors were able to purchase parking permits. Additionally, seniors were able to submit the correct spelling of their names for their diplomas and be measured for their graduation caps and gowns. Although the school preferred to clear the cap and gown orders early, they sent out a letter indicating that if students were financially unable to do so, they could wait until later in the fall. However, the fee may increase after the beginning of the school year.

With a song in their hearts

The Sound of Sunshine Chorus of Sweet Adelines International announces that they have been invited to sing on the current "The Gift of Life - Benefiting Hospitals for Children," an album of Christmas songs and readings done annually for the last four years which is produced in California. Proceeds for this special album help to sustain and enhance pediatric medical programs in hospitals for children throughout the country. Each year in the United States and Canada, more than 5 million kids who are seriously ill or injured, receive medical care in special hospitals. The common mission of these hospitals is to make quality healthcare available to every child in need. All monies raised from the sale of the albums locally will go to the Arnold Palmer Childrens Hospital. The Kiwanis group has agreed to assist in the local distribution of the album on tape and CD and it was previously arranged to be distributed nationally through Wal-Mart and Nordstrom's. Some of the other more well-known artists or groups on the album will be Paul McCartney, The Lettermen, Melissa Manchester, Mickey Dolenz, Freddy Cannon, and Brian Hyland, Henry Mancini, Jimmy Stewart, James Earl Jones and many more. Past participants have included Frank Sinatra, Lorna Luft, Lou Rawls, Natalie Cole, The Moody Blues, the Four Seasons and numerous others. The Sound of Sunshine Chorus, Orlando, Florida, is a 110-voice barbershop chorus comprised of women from six different central Florida counties, including Seminole. They are members of Sweet Adelines International, a non-profit organization, with choruses located throughout the world. The Sound of Sunshine Chorus is the 1993 regional championship chorus and will be competing with other regional championship choruses, October 1994, in Reno, Nev. YOUR BIRTHDAY

Aug. 22, 1993

A great deal of personal emphasis may be focused on improving your financial lot in life in the year ahead. When you stop merely thinking about it and start taking actions, that's when things could begin to happen.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today when dealing with subordinates leave them room to use their imagination and make their own decisions. If your directives are too exacting, they won't comply with them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) When you quit waiting for things to happen today and begin to take positive, assertive action, only then will your depression and self-defeating thoughts begin to leave.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be very careful how you deal with a friend today in an involvement where the expenses are shared. This is an extremely sticky area where a problem could erupt.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today if you are aggressive or dictatorial when dealing with others, you are apt to evoke reactions you won't like. Treat associates with the same considerations you expect.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Instead of going out of your way to help a friend with his/her problems today, you might pretend you're totally unaware of them and go your own way. Later you'll regret your play.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Being drawn into another person's complicated affairs might teach you a quick lesson today. You won't be caught off guard a second time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A valued relationship could require extremely diplomatic handling at this time. Even though this association is precarious, kindness can help mend the misunderstandings.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If properly used, your determination could be a very valuable asset today. If misused, there is a chance you might persist with something unproductive that should be scrapped.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Overindulgence could play havoc with your system today.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

You have excellent leadership qualities today, but you might use them only as a last resort instead of expressing them in all situations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you're not a good listener today, you could be asking for problems, because you'll hear only what you want to hear and little else.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Treat friends in your usual considerate manner, but be very careful that you're not taken advantage of again today by someone who did a number on you in the past.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In order to achieve important objectives today, you must remain focused on your targets at all times. If you deviate even briefly, you could get way off course.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your judgment is likely to be a bit sounder than persons with whom you'll be involved today. Unfortunately, however, you might not believe this yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today if you work in fits and You're not likely to be too trusting today of persons you do not know too well. If you need assistance with something special, deal with individuals you know and like.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do not use or deplete funds today for frivolous things you have earmarked for something serious you'll need later. Once they've been spent, they could be hard to replace.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's very important today that you pace yourself properly. Don't take on more tasks or assignments than you should. If you do, it'll negatively affect your overall performance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Excellent judgment on your behalf will be required today, because there are some situations where you should be a bit of a risk taker and others where you should be very conservative.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A close friend's feelings might be hurt today if you fail to show him/her the same cooperation this person has consistently shown you in the past.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

When you spot a good line of play, don't automatically follow it. Always look for hidden risks. Also, remember that there may be an alternative line that is better.

Today's deal demonstrates this. How would you plan the play in four hearts. West leading the diamond jack? Four diamonds was, of course, a transfer bid.

Most declarers at the Bridge Federation of Asia and Middle East Championships won the first trick and immediately tried to discard North's diamond losers on their spades. But East ruffed the third spade, cashed the diamond king and played a club to his partner's ace. A club return left declarer employed in the North hand. Declarer had to concede a trick to West's heart king: one down.

Wahid El-Ahmady, one of the Egyptian players, foresaw this possibility. And even if the three spades do stand up, what next? Playing a fourth spade is dangerous. So do you finesse the heart nine or play low to the queen? If you run the nine and it loses, East will cash a diamond and return a trump to endplay North to lead away from the club king for one down. If you play low to the queen and West has king-third, you look pretty silly.

Wahid ducked the first trick, won the diamond continuation and finessed the heart nine. If it had lost, he was hoping that East was out of diamonds. If so, and if East didn't hold the club ace, he was much more likely to switch to spades than to clubs. However, after the finesse worked, declarer picked up the trumps, ran the spades and ended with an overtrick. Nicely thought out.

Buttafuoco may be examined in nude

By PAT MILTON
Associated Press Writer

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Prosecutors want Joey Buttafuoco to disrobe to see if he has the moles and other features described by Amy Fisher.

The Nassau County District Attorney also is seeking to have Buttafuoco's blood tested for genital herpes, which Fisher claims she caught from Buttafuoco after having sex with him in July 1991, court papers said.

Prosecutor Fred Klein has asked the court to have a physician examine Buttafuoco for possible evidence in the statutory rape case.

Klein claims Fisher can describe Buttafuoco's genitals, knowledge she would not have if she did not have an affair with him, according to court papers filed recently in Nassau County Court.

Fisher claims Buttafuoco has moles on his genitals and back, according to a source who spoke Friday only on condition of anonymity.

Buttafuoco, 37, was indicted last April with on charges of having sex with an underage person, sodomy and endangering the welfare of a child. Buttafuoco denies the charges.

Fisher, now 18, has claimed she had sex with Buttafuoco several times while she was still 16 years old, considered a minor in New York.

Buttafuoco's attorney, Marvyn Kornberg, declined to comment on the prosecutor's request, citing a gag order in the case.

Fisher, the so-called Long Island Lolita, is serving a five-to-15-year prison term for the shooting of Buttafuoco's wife, Mary Jo, on the doorstep of the couple's Massapequa house.
