Doing a little extra

WINTER PARK — With some teammates out of town and others sidelined with injuries, the remaining members of the Seminole boys' track team all pitched in and did a little extra Friday night at the person Invitational.

Remembering Vietnam

Vietnam veterans often shun the limelight over an unpopular war they did not create but in which they fought. Twenty-five years after the height of battle, these vets will gather at a Central Florida reunion. How should they have been treated and how should they be treated now?

NAACP leader charts course

ATLANTA — Less than 24 hours after being tapped to lead the NAACP, the Rev. Benjamin Chavis was laying out new directions for the civil rights organization, promising to reach out to younger blacks and build coalitions with other African-American leaders.

"I'm not a lone ranger," he said in an interview Saturday. "It's important early on to exhibit the team approach to leadership. We must be responsive to African-Americans and people of African descent anywhere in the world."

Chavis, 45, was chosen Friday to succeed Benjamin Hooks as executive director of the nation's oldest civil rights group. Hooks is retiring this month after 16 years at helm of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Chavis is a civil rights crusader who spent four years in prison in the Wilmington 10 firebombing case before being freed by a federal appeals court.

Among his intentions for the NAACP are fully computerizing its national office in Baltimore; building an endowment; increasing its lobbying efforts; and extending the NAACP to Hispanics, Asians and American Indians.

Yeltsin sticks foot in mouth

MOSCOW — Boris Yeltsin stumbled Saturday in his campaign for a nationwide vote of confidence. First, he made a historical error that would embarrass any Russian schoolboy. Then he got an earful of complaints from disgruntled shoppers.

Still, the 62-year-old president gamely pushed ahead with his take-it-to-the-people campaign, which promises to inject some freshness into Russian politics before the April 25 referendum.

As he plunged into a crowd outside a vegetable store in southwest Moscow on Saturday, he was barraged with complaints about soaring prices.

His smile fell away and he appeared momentarily at a loss when a middle-aged woman in a red raincoat told him flatly: "Our life is getting worse."

"I cannot agree," Yeltsin said after a pause. "Look how you're dressed. I was just in Vancouver, and they're no better dressed there."

50 arrested during five hour protest

SANFORD — About 50 anti-abortion protesters arrested at a Melbourne clinic Saturday for defying a judge's order may make a court appearance before that judge as early as Monday morning.

Wendy Wright, the spokesman for the Operation Rescue National which had organized the Melbourne protest, said Saturday evening that she felt the protesters would be transported to Seminole County Sunday. Seminole County Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor had said

WINTER SPRINGS — Birds chirped noisily in the trees along the residential street to the west and north of the Women Medical Clinic on State Road 434 in Winter Springs on Saturday morning.

Lawnmowers could be heard rumbling a distance away. Outside the clinic, however, you could have heard a pin drop.

On most days, local observers said, you'd find at least one or two anti-abortion protesters with signs and Bibles standing outside the only clinic in Seminole County where

City to act on cop chief job

By NICK PFEIFAU Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Another attempt will be made to remove three top level city positions from Civil Service jurisdiction when Sanford commissioners consider new ordinances Monday night.

The ordinances are in two forms. The first would remove the positions of police chief, fire chief and city clerk from the Civil Service Board and transfer them to city control.

The second ordinance would only be required if the first is adopted. It would allow the city to add new sections to job descriptions for both police and fire chief positions. The sections would allow for the hiring of persons who may not meet a present qualification requirement: a four year college degree.

There would be no changes in the job description for city clerk.

Earlier this year, an attempt was made to have the Civil Service Board reduce the job qualifications, but the board voted it down. Since that time, an attempt has been made to take jurisdiction over the three positions out of the board's hands, and place them under commission control.

Both ordinances were scheduled for first reading at the March 22 commission meeting, but

Scrambling for Easter eggs

Area hunts draw eager children

By SANDRA ELLIOTT Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Whether the eggs were hard-boiled and brightly colored or plastic with surprises inside, it didn't seem to matter to hundreds of children Saturday who participated in local Easter egg hunts. Kids snapped up the treats in just minutes under a sunny Florida sky.

One of the largest hunts in the area took place at the Central Florida Zoo drawing participants from several counties. People came from Deltona, Mt. Dora, and Orlando as well as local cities and towns.

Hundreds of boys and girls waited anxiously for the hunt to begin in their respective age groupings. Clowns entertained in the roped off hunt areas before the signal was given to begin.

Life in prison for Sanford man found guilty of murder

By SANDRA ELLIOTT Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Sanford man convicted of killing another man to steal some car stereo speakers was sentenced to life in prison late Friday afternoon by Circuit Court Judge Alan Dickey.

The jury, which found George Bellamy Jr. guilty of the first degree murder and armed robbery of Isiah Cohen in February, took about 30 minutes to recommend life in prison with no possibility of parole for 25 years. Dickey also sentenced Bellamy to 15 years in prison for the armed robbery conviction. The jury could have recommended the death penalty for the 1991 killing.

Bellamy killed Cohen and dumped his body in a Midway grocery store parking lot then rushed from his home to Central Florida Regional Hospital.

The jury's sentencing recommendation came after a half-day long hearing on the case.

During the penalty phase of the trial, assistant State Attorney Stewart Stone called only one witness, Isiah Cohen's mother, Lucille, who testified how her son's death had affected the family.

"I'm not over it yet," she said as she sat with her hands clasp together. She said when her remaining three sons and a daughter remember Cohen, they cry.

"We be just cryin' when we get together," she said. In presenting his case, Bellamy's lawyers, assistant Public Defenders James Figgatt and Gary Andersen called a variety of witnesses who testified about his difficult childhood, learning disabilities and a head injury when the defendant was five.

When Bellamy was five and living in Georgia with his mother at an aunt's home, he and a cousin were playing in the yard. The cousin, Leroy Ponder, told the jury he hit Bellamy with an axe causing a head wound. In later testimony, defense attorneys attempted to link the early childhood accident with lower tests scores, a learning disability and impaired capacity.

What Easter is all about

Part 2 of 2

Greetings on this special day. It is Easter Sunday. Millions of Christians the world over have welcomed this Holy Day at sunrise services or will be attending churches throughout the land, celebrating the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Last Sunday we told you part of the story of "Will," pastor of the First Baptist Church; "Charlie," beloved Sanford physician; "Ellsworth," owner of Sanford Electric; "Douglas," a town drunk, and "Della," soloist in the First Baptist Church choir.

We told you how Dr. Brooks and Dr. Park "saved" Jobe's life one night when he nearly died of acute intoxication. We told you Harper kept Jobe on the company payroll. All this made an impression on Jobe but as the country boy would put it, Jobe still didn't "get religion."

But one day he did. He was on a ladder repairing a traffic light at Park Avenue and 13th Street. Suddenly he fell about 20 feet to the brick pavement below. He wasn't injured as bad as he thought he was, but it was enough to make him, as Baptists say, surrender his life to the one whose resurrection is celebrated today. Jobe was baptized into the fellowship of the First Baptist Church. He promised he'd never take another drink and he didn't.

See Stenstrom, Page 2A

Jobe was at church every time the doors opened. He attended every Sunday morning worship service. He was there for every Sunday evening service. He joined the Men's Brotherhood. He became a Sunday School teacher. He had about a dozen 13-year-old boys in his class. He must have been a super teacher, folks. Five of those youngsters became Baptist preachers.

They were Walter Routh, Leonard Jones, Wesley Hamill, Michael Gray and Forrest May Jr. About three months before I was to graduate from Stetson University in June 1950, the Florida Baptist Convention elected me to become executive secretary of the state's Baptist Brotherhood. I was to take over the same day I graduated. Plans had already been made for me to attend a country-wide Baptist laymen's conference, an annual affair at Ridgecrest, N.C.

One night before a Florida State League ball game in Sanford, Jobe came to the press box. He was elated. The church's Brotherhood had elected him to represent them at this annual retreat. He and I started making plans to have a big time in the cool air of the Great Smokies.

It was now late May, 1950. As a Stetson senior I was deeply involved in my last final exams. On a Sunday morning the entire First Baptist congregation listened in awe as a young lady, Della Covington, sang what was a song we'd not heard before. It was entitled "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?" When she finished there was scarcely a dry eye in the sanctuary. When the service ended nearly everyone made their way up and down the aisles to tell Della how beautiful and impressive her rendition had been.

Among the last to reach her was Douglas Jobe. He took her hand and looked at her. With almost an ecstatic expression on his now gentle face, he said "Promise me you'll sing that at my funeral."

Four days later she kept her promise. I had gone to DeLand for my last final exam. It took three hours. As I drove back to Sanford my heart was filled with joy. I had completed four long years of classes, homework, assignments, pop quizzes, mid-term exams, term papers and final exams. Also, I had been driving many nights throughout northeast Florida to broadcast back to Sanford the city's Florida State League baseball games. All of that was behind me, too.

But my elation came to an abrupt halt. When I walked into my apartment my wife told me to call Dr. Brooks right away. I did. I couldn't believe it when I heard him tell me "Douglas Jobe was dead."

Sanford Electric did a lot of work for A. Duda & Sons, the giant agri-business firm headquartered in Oviedo. The company had just completed a 110-foot water tank on one of its farms in Zellwood. Sanford Electric was there to install aircraft warning lights.

Even though Jobe had been injured in that fall at Park and 13th Street he was not afraid of heights. He climbed to the very top of the tower and was using an electric drill. It shorted out. Jobe was instantly electrocuted.

There have been standing room only crowds at some First Baptist Church funerals but none before nor has there been one since to compare with the number of God-fearing folks who paid tribute to a man who only a short time before was considered a town drunk. His life, in such a short time, had become an inspiration when he began living according to the teachings of the Nazareth carpenter whose religious ministry of three short years changed the world.

Many of you at one time or another remember seeing a religious painting of Jesus holding a lantern and knocking on the door of a vine-covered cottage.

It's a unique painting — not for what you see but what you don't see. Jesus represents himself, the lantern tells us he's the light of the world, and the cottage represents the human heart.

What's missing is a doorknob or a latch string on the exterior of the door (the human heart). This tells Christians that to have let Christ in their lives they must themselves open their hearts from the interior.

To be sure, Will, Charlie, Ellsworth and Della each had a major role in this human life drama. But it was Douglas Jobe who unlocked the door of his heart from the inside. It converted a town drunk into a child of God. Without the resurrection it never could have happened. To Christians that's what Easter is all about.

Courtney's friend, Mandy Wallace, 6, Mt. Dora searched quickly for the precious numbered eggs, but neither one found any, bringing both girls back sobbing. Mandy's father, Dan, is a member of the zoo board.

Lindsay Stogdill, 6, a Wekiva Elementary School student said excitedly, "I got an egg with a number on it." The lucky numbered egg holders redeemed them at a prize table stacked with stuffed animals, candy, hats, T-shirts and posters.

After the frenzied quest for eggs ended, many families opted to tour the zoo, watching the animals, posing for pictures with the Easter Bunny, getting their face painted or stopping for some lunch at the concession stand. Brothers Timmy and Travis Hill from Deltona and Stephen and Justin McCarthy, Lake Mary relaxed over hot dogs and chips after finding some eggs. Four-year-old Stephen said he had a good time.

The zoo hunt was co-sponsored by the Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children and Women.

About 100 youngsters at the other end of Sanford enjoyed the city's recreation department egg hunt at Groveview Park off Lake Mary Blvd. Plastic eggs containing a small plastic toy or eraser were featured.

Five-year-old Loren Bennett said, "I'm going to try to find the gold egg. You get a prize for that one."

A golden egg, one for each of the four age groups, was redeemed for a candy-laden Easter basket.

Commission from 1975 to 1983, and was remembered by his fellow commissioners as having served the people of his city well.

"He was an outstanding individual," said Commissioner A.A. McClanahan. "He was always fair in his decisions, but when it came to spending taxpayers money, he was very conservative. He did not like anything he considered to be a waste."

Julian Stenstrom also served with Keith. "While we worked together on the commission," he said, "Eddie was mostly a close friend and I truly enjoyed working with him. Back in the 1970's, I recall he was very active in the commission's work toward revitalizing the downtown area, and he helped get many improvements pushed through."

Dave Farr, executive director of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce said, "I had what I consider as a real privilege in serving with Eddie on the commission for several years. He was one of the kindest and sweetest men I ever knew."

Farr added, "I remember times when Eddie made a decision on the commission which he knew was not going to be appreciated by some of his friends, and although he always did what he thought was in the best interests of the majority of people, he agonized over it even long afterward because he didn't want to hurt anyone. That's the type of character that fine man had."

Keith also served the city as a member of the Planning and Zoning Board for a number of years.

He was born in Brickett, N. Dakota and moved to the Sanford area 56 years ago. During World War II, he served as a member of the U.S. Army's 82nd Airborne Division.

"We have all lost a good friend," Farr said. "Eddie Keith was truly loved by the people of his city, and he will be long remembered."

Graduation sans alcohol

High School graduation time is near. It will be an event never forgotten in a lifetime.

Wearing the cap and gown, walking down the aisle and receiving that diploma mark the end of a great formative period in a person's life. Years of study, homework and exams finally bear fruit.

For some, graduation from high school marks the end of formal education and the beginning of the work-a-day world. For others, it ends one era only to be followed by college and further educational opportunities.

A few however, may choose to celebrate with a few alcoholic drinks. They may believe graduation from high school is a step to adulthood.

Regardless of how one may feel, he or she is not an adult in the eyes of the law. The drinking age in Florida is 21. Imbibing below that age is a dangerous undertaking.

Even if it does not result in an auto accident, it could result in an arrest for driving under the influence of alcohol. Drinking may also bring about other actions that could be hazardous to one's self or someone else.

Law enforcement agencies, schools, churches and others are trying to promote this event as "alcohol and drug free graduation." Parents, and the students themselves should vow to adhere to this decree.

Graduates have worked hard to get those diplomas. They have been well educated. Yet those years could be lost because of one foolish error during the celebration.

Parents have become involved in the educational process through helping guide their youngsters to this point. Some however, might also believe their children are now adults, and offer alcohol during a home party.

Whether a graduation party is at a home or some other location, we urge students to refrain from alcohol and drugs, not only for this one celebration, but in the years to come.

Graduates, you have proven you have obtained an education. Don't let a foolish mistake prove otherwise.

Make this an alcohol and drug free celebration. You'll be glad you did.

Save the black bear

While most Floridians are aware of the severely endangered status of the Florida panther and the manatee, fewer people know that the state's largest land mammal, the Florida black bear, is also threatened with extinction. Perhaps numbering fewer than 1,000 individuals, the Florida black bear faces a wide range of human-caused threats including habitat loss and fragmentation, roadkills, poaching, and legal hunting. Its chances of surviving another 100 years in the wilds of Florida are not promising.

Even though there are probably fewer bears in Florida than there are manatees, the state's five-member Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission has sanctioned the legal sport killing of more than 500 bears in northern Florida since 1980. The Game Commission, which is a law unto itself, intends to continue the sport hunting season in 1993 even though the staff of the Commission and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service consider the subspecies threatened with extinction. The Commission also intends to defy the wishes of Governor Lawton Chiles and 23 of 23 members of Florida's delegation in the U.S. House of Representatives, who have recently called for an end to the sport hunting of the state's bears.

The Game Commission is jeopardizing the future existence of the state's beleaguered bears, just to provide trophy hunters with an opportunity to chase bears with radio-collared dogs, tree them, and shoot the animals from point-blank range. If you are angry about this situation, contact Governor Chiles and demand that he exert greater influence to stop the trophy killing of these remarkable animals.

Decision disappointing

I am extremely disappointed in the Seminole County commissioners concerning their decision to allow a borrow pit to be constructed south of the airport at the Marquette Road/Ohio Ave./Silver Lake Road site.

Commissioner Larry Furlong was the only one voting against it, and I commend him for that. I do not think the commissioners gave nearly enough thought to the negative and deleterious impact this will have on the homeowners in that area, especially the health hazards to nearby residents. Some developers, always looking for the big bucks, have no consideration for the eventual consequences of their greedy endeavors, and I believe really railroaded this by naive commissioners.

This is a beautiful, pristine residential neighborhood and is certainly no place for a borrow pit. Thanks for listening.

Verdict should reflect King's legacy

America in 1993 is quite different from the America of three decades past. Yet it seems the more we seem to change the more we remain the same. During 1963, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. rose to historical prominence because of his appeal to everyone's conscience. Dr. King was a non-violent revolutionist who had studied the non-violent methods of Gandhi.

King, a Baptist minister, was steeped in the Christian ethic. His non-violent approach to activating social change was sometimes misinterpreted as weakness. However, in the face of adversity it takes more love and self discipline to be non violent than to vent anger and become violent.

King realized that real change begins on an individual basis. Each individual possesses an internalized sense of right and wrong. King counted on people's sense of fairness and justice.

King spotlighted the negative oppressive laws and customs that prevailed in America against African Americans. Laws and customs were held up to intense scrutiny and in the process, a great deal of violence was directed to King and the non-violent protestors.

Unfortunately, violence has become more and more an integral part of our daily lives. Anger and hate often erupts into violence.

SEMINOLE

SWEETING

It has been said that a picture is worth a thousand words. The video of Rodney King's beating by the Los Angeles police is etched in many of our memories. The indignity of Rodney King's confirmed in the various polls that were conducted that the beating seemed excessive.

Rodney King, the human being, was beaten, not by someone on the street but by police officers.

The second trial for Rodney King is ending. The aftermath of the first trial was horrible for all Americans. The latent ugliness erupted like a volcano and devastated areas of Los Angeles, even spilling over into other cities. The hate, anger, frustration of many citizens found an outlet in violence that was like molten lava covering the city.

Dr. King spoke about the destructive tendencies of hate thusly, "If I meet hate with hate, I become depersonalized because creation is so designed that my personality can only be fulfilled in the context of community."

The essential question this trial is to answer: "Were Rodney King's civil rights violated? The prosecutors and the defense attorneys have presented their arguments effectively. The jury has been carefully selected to be more reflective of the community. Nations, ours and many others, await the verdict. America is the guardian of human rights world-wide. Consequently, whether we deal equitably with our multi-ethnic population is of interest to the international community."

Dr. King's legacy to Rodney King is the right of citizens to work and change oppressive unjust laws and customs.

If the guidelines of the Los Angeles Police Department's validate the beating administered to Rodney King, then these guidelines need to be changed.

The video of the Los Angeles police and Rodney King did not come with rationalization about behavior. It revealed a group of human beings beating another human being. This is the vision that persists and the beating was excessive.

Custody: Thinking of children

BOSTON — Maybe a custody fight over a two-year-old doesn't deserve to be called a tragedy. Tragedy, after all, is a word that should be reserved carefully. A tug of war is not a war.

The plight of an overwanted child doesn't compare with the plight of unwanted children. A girl who is cherished by four parents might even be considered fortunate by those, and there are many of them, cast adrift from a lone mother or father.

Nevertheless, every child creates a whole world of its own and in less than two weeks, one child's world may be shattered. Unless another court takes this case on appeal, a girl who is known in Michigan as Jessica will be taken to Iowa where they call her Anna.

She will be transferred like a piece of property from Roberta and Jan DeBoer, the only parents she has known, to Cara and Dan Schmidt, a family of biological relatives and complete strangers. And she will have nothing to say about it, the language of the terrible two — tears and tantrums — is inadmissible evidence to a court of law.

Let it be said, right off the bat, that there are no malicious villains in this drama. Cara was an unmarried 28-year-old when she gave birth to this child and signed her away for adoption. The man she claimed to be the father also signed away his rights.

For their part, Robby and Jan DeBoer had every reason to believe that the child they took home to raise would be permanently theirs. For his part, Dan Schmidt had no idea that he was her father when the baby was given up for adoption.

But within weeks after the baby's birth, a despairing and regretful Cara told Dan the truth. In turn, the shocked biological father, a man with two other children by two other mothers — he had abandoned one child and had never seen the other — decided that he wanted his Anna. Only then did the DeBoers discover that their Jessica would not simply, smoothly be adopted.

Custody cases like these do not lend themselves to nice, neat judgments of right and wrong. There isn't even a simple, unambiguous definition of fairness.

It seems unfair for fathers to lose their rights to children they don't even know exist. It is equally unfair for adopting parents to lose children because an unknown man reappears. It's most unfair for a case to drag on and on, leaving both child and parents — all of them — in limbo.

The dispute between the Schmidts and the DeBoers, between Iowa and Michigan, went on for over two years. In this time, Cara and Dan got married and conceived another child to be born this spring. The little girl came to know the DeBoers as her parents and Jessica as her name.

Questions were raised about fathers' rights, about states' rights, about adoptive parents and biological parents. But only occasionally did the phrase and the idea of "the best interests of the child" get into the legal liturgy.

Once, in Iowa, a judge said it would be "alluring" to consider the best interests of the baby girl, but under the law the father's interest came first. Once, briefly, in Michigan.

A judge ruled that the rights of the child "are paramount." But then on March 30, the Michigan appeals court ruled in favor of Iowa and biology and the Schmidts.

The courts had listened to the parents. They had heard the abstract language of rights. But in the end they had mercilessly tuned out the child's life. The claims of legal paternity trumped those of nurturing. They counted the father's claims to his biological offspring and discounted the child's claims to the people she knew as mother and father, her two-year-old world.

For Elizabeth Bartholet, a Harvard Law Professor and author of a new book on adoption, this case was more proof that "We talk about best interests of child but actually give them very little weight, just about zero." Certainly it was true for one little girl.

In the cover story of this month's Atlantic, bearing the tabloid headline "Dan Quayle was Right," Barbara Whitehead makes a case against divorce on the grounds that what may be good for parents is bad for children. At the Summit on Children and Families that met in Washington last week, the swan song of the National Commission on Children was a plea to keep the focus on kids. Everywhere, we are admitting to a national case of child neglect.

But in the Midwest, in the name of biology and with the approval of the courts, one set of parents named Schmidt is getting ready to wrench a child out of her life to take her "home" to an entirely strange world. The woman who may lose this child has said, "While we sit here and debate, is she theirs, is she ours, I realize she's no one's. ... She is an individual who is learning to walk, talk, sing ... and no one has represented her." Which parent would Solomon have chosen?

No, a tug of war is not a war. But it, too, claims victims. One at a time.

Tragedy, after all, is a word that should be reserved carefully.

Drug firms opt for 'image' lobby

WASHINGTON — One month before President Clinton's health-care package is revealed to the nation, health-care lobbyists in the nation's capital are elevating "damage control" to new levels. The White House has seen the new enemy, and it's wearing Democratic colors.

Jody Powell is a prime example. He was White House press secretary during the Jimmy Carter administration. Now a partner in a Washington public relations firm, Powell has taken up the cause of one of the new administration's sworn enemies: the pharmaceutical industry.

No industry is more in need of an image enhancement in the current health-care debate than America's prescription drug makers. A decade of spiraling prices and unkept promises have led Democrats from the administration and Congress to declare open season on drug-price inflation. Hillary Rodham Clinton's health-care task force is widely expected to make price restrictions on prescription drugs a component of the overall health package.

Clinton's onslaught has sent drug companies scrambling to make amends with the public and with key policy-makers. Some, such as industry giant Merck & Co., have gained favor with the new administration by agreeing to limit future price increases to the rate of inflation plus 1 percent on all its drugs. Others, frustrated with what they view as lackluster lobbying tactics by the industry's major mouthpiece, the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, have shifted tactics.

Enter RX Partners, a coalition of six pharmaceutical firms that has given Powell's firm a $2 million budget to reshape the industry's image through a combination of public relations and "direct outreach to policy-makers." The campaign is being orchestrated by Powell, who is getting help on the project from several of his senior staffers. Powell has also enlisted the advice of another prominent Democratic strategist, Bob Beckel.

Powell's firm didn't mince words in outlining its plan to its new clients. "Health-care reform is the cornerstone of the president's economic program, and we all recognize that the Clinton Administration has chosen the pharmaceutical industry as his 'public enemy No. 1,'" according to a copy of the original proposal obtained by our associate Jan Moller.

"We need to sow enough doubt about the pretenses of the Administration's assault on pharmaceutical companies that Mrs. Clinton's task force, other administration policy-makers and key lawmakers will be obliged to give serious consideration to our arguments," the proposal states.

Powell's memo suggests drug companies are willing to pull out all the stops to get the administration to take notice of their plight. Besides recruiting "third-party signers for op-eds in key publications designed to reach key lawmakers in Washington," the coalition also plans to counter the Administration's grass-roots campaign with one of their own. "We will launch a targeted grass-roots effort to influence the decisions of key lawmakers and to counter the Administration's grass-roots machine," the memo states.

Though we were unable to reach Powell directly, a spokesman for one of RX Partner's member companies, Charles Fry, said the focus of the campaign was public relations, not lobbying. "Our effort really was to get a monologue turned into an absolute debate" on the role of drug companies in health-care reform.

The White House has seen the new enemy, and it's wearing Democratic colors.

They were tabled due the illness of Commissioner A.A. McClanahan which prevented him from being on hand for the vote.

In order to change the original ordinance which placed the three positions under the control of the Civil Service Board, City Attorney Bill Colbert had determined it would take at least a four to one vote.

With Mayor Betty Smith continuously opposing the changes, Commissioner Lon Howell observed that such a vote would be impossible at that time. As a result, the commission voted three to one, to table both first readings until the full commission was in session.

The change in requirements, which was also tabled, would need only a majority vote to enact.

For both the police and fire chief positions, essential minimum qualifications now required that an applicant, "...must have four year college or university degree with emphasis in criminology or police administration and minimum of five years progressively responsible police experience in a command level capacity."

The proposed change adds, "Candidates lacking the four year degree may be considered if they possess an AA/AS degree in criminology or related field and a minimum of ten years command level experience in police administration."

Although the requirements for fire chief would change in similar fashion if the ordinances are approved, the city is presently seeking only a police chief.

McClanahan has indicated he has substantially recovered from a heart attack several weeks ago to enable him to be on hand for Monday night's commission meeting. He has previously expressed the feeling that he is in full support of the reduction in qualifications, to allow the city to consider hiring Capt. Ralph Russell as police chief.

Two others had also applied for the position. Sanford police Lt. Lewis "Doug" Bishop, and James McAuliffe. McAuliffe has a bachelor's degree in sociology while Russell and Bishop have two year degrees.

Russell has been serving as acting chief since the resignation of former chief Steve Harriett, at the end of last year.

If the ordinances are passed on first reading Monday night, the second reading and public hearing are expected to be scheduled for the next commission meeting on April 28.

The two ordinances are scheduled to be presented during Monday night's regular commission meeting beginning at 7 p.m., in the City Commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

Order

In his decision Thursday that protesters violating his order limiting demonstrations at the Melbourne clinic would be arrested and transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

"It says in his (McGregor's) order that we have to appear before him by 8:30 a.m. the morning after arriving at the Seminole County jail. We figure they'd be transported Sunday and he would see them Monday morning. They didn't go today (Saturday) because he'd have to see them Easter morning. He'll ruin our Easter but not his," she said.

McGregor could not be reached for comment Saturday evening.

According to Melbourne Police, those arrested in the five-hour demonstration at the Aware Woman clinic refused to identify themselves. Protesters are currently at the Starke Correctional Facility in Brevard County.

Late Saturday afternoon, Seminole County Sheriff's Office spokesman George Proechel confirmed that the protesters would not be transported to the Seminole County jail Saturday.

"We received word about 2 p.m. We were advised they weren't coming," he said. Pro-

...did not know when those arrested would be transported to Seminole County.

Wright said that none of those arrested would give their names.

"We have solidarity," she said Saturday, shortly after the protest ended at 12:30 p.m. "No one will give their name."

According to Wright, 48 adults and four juveniles were arrested. The juveniles would be released before the trip to jail, she said.

She said that only pro-life protesters had been arrested, while pro-choice activists, whom she described as "loud, pushy and angry," were allowed to go free.

"This is an injunction against a belief not against any actions," she said.

Friday, Winter Springs Police Chief John Govorukh said there was no protest activity at the Women Medical Clinic in Winter Springs. Govorukh said the pro-life protesters have not notified him of any scheduled demonstrations.

Thursday, McGregor expanded a 1992 order by creating a 36-foot "bubble" around the Melbourne clinic where anti-abortion protesters may not enter. They are prohibited from approaching patients within 300 feet or shouting, singing or using amplifying devices within hearing distance of the clinic.

They are also prohibited from coming within 300 feet of clinic employees' residences.

The order only applied to the Melbourne clinic and did not address the Winter Springs clinic. The 1992 order prohibiting blockades of clinic access and accosting clinic employees remains in effect for the Women Medical Clinic.

Although several protesters may have violated McGregor's order Friday at Aware Woman, police there said they were not prepared to enforce the restrictions until Saturday.

Witnesses from inside the clinic said about 30 pro-life protesters crossed a street established by McGregor as a boundary and walked along a sidewalk.

Melbourne Police Officer Joe Davis admitted the protesters may have violated the order Friday morning, but said Friday afternoon police did not enforce the order.

"We didn't have the injunction in hand," said Davis Friday. "We are in the process of doing things called for in the order now, establishing a crossway, setting up buffer zones and erecting signs. We'll have everything in place sometime tonight."

Wright said the protesters intended to continue their normal demonstrations at the Melbourne clinic, regardless of whether they violated McGregor's terms.

"The language in the order is so broad that anything we do could be considered a violation," said Wright. "It's a violation of our First Amendment rights. We will continue doing what we have been doing."

Wright would not say whether any demonstrations were scheduled for the Winter Springs clinic.

"We never announce beforehand where we're going to have a rescue," said Wright. "That's part of our success, the element of surprise."

Wright did say a vigil at the Brevard County jail is planned for this afternoon at 2 p.m.

"Rescue" is ORN's term for tactics used to stop abortions. According to testimony presented to McGregor, rescue tactics include "sidewalk counseling," approaching cars entering clinics to distribute materials while other protesters walk in front of the car; congesting clinic telephone lines with numerous telephone calls; and shouting names of patients entering clinics.

abortion services are performed.

"There's usually a couple out there," said Keith Morris, who lives in the neighborhood and regularly walks past the facility on his way to the convenience store a couple of blocks away. "They're quiet and they don't seem to bother no one."

Morris speculated that the local protesters must have traveled to Melbourne to join in the rallies scheduled there by the national anti-abortion forces this Easter weekend.

"That was supposed to be a big national thing," he said. "Everyone was going there, I think."

There was no sign posted at the clinic with opening and closing times or any indication of when the doctor was expected to return, though a call to the business netted a recorded message which asked callers to call again on Monday morning for information and appointments.

According to Wendy Wright, a spokesman for Operation Rescue National, many pro-life demonstrators traveled from Seminole County to join in the protest in Melbourne at the Aware Woman Clinic after a judge's order strengthened laws against protesters at that clinic last week.

She said that, to her knowledge, no one from her group intended to target the Winter Springs clinic during the Easter weekend.

"We will be concentrating all our efforts here (in Melbourne)," she said.

Bubba boosters' boss: Big Bill is no Bubba

By BILL KACZON
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA — Bill Clinton may have run on what some called the "Double Bubba" ticket, but T. Terry "Bubba" Bechtol knows Bubbas — after all, he is one.

And, Mr. President, he sez you shore ain't no Bubba.

"Bubbas don't go to Oxford," Bechtol maintains. "Oxford's got a weak schedule. They never played in the Sugar Bowl."

What's more, says the Bubbas of America president, no Bubba would marry a lawyer.

"Bubba wouldn't let somebody talk about his wife the way people talk about Hillary," Bechtol fumes. "Bubba wouldn't have a cat. He'd have a dog."

As for Vice President Al Gore, the other half of the all-Southern "Double Bubba" team, don't even ask.

"Some of the things I get on about Gore I can't repeat here," Bechtol said in a recent interview.

Bechtol has performed his Bubba banter at corporate, political and other conventions and meetings across the country for the past dozen years.

He oversees his Bubba empire from the second floor of a Victorian house-turned-office building in this Florida Panhandle city. A personal computer keeps track of Bubbas of America's 50,000 members and helps him fill orders for Bubba and Bubbette certificates suitable for tacking on the wall, hats, T-shirts and other Bubbaesque paraphernalia.

"It really happened to me. I didn't happen to it," Bechtol said of the Bubba business. "It wasn't a plan."

He had succeeded in regular business as a loan company manager, tanning salon owner and funeral home partner. He was national president of the Jaycees in 1980. The same year he was Florida chairman of Commitment 80, which supported President Reagan's election. Then he served on the White House transition team.

But his own political career was a Bubba bust. He ran for Congress in 1982 as a Republican and lost to incumbent Rep. Earl Hutto, D-Pensacola.

His brush with politics, however, generated speaking engagements.

"Bubba was something that I've been called all my life, so I just started including it in my introductions and I started doing a thing with Bubba," Bechtol recalled. "People loved it."

How can you tell if you're a Bubba?

"If you think Yasser Arafat has a brother named No Sir, you probably are a Bubba," Bechtol cracks, his 300 pounds shaking with glee.

"If you can eat a Moon Pie, chew tobacco and drink beer all the same time, you probably are a Bubba. If you have more than two brothers named Junior there's a good chance you might be a Bubba."

He even researched the origins of Bubba: "It's a Southern colloquial slang term from small children trying to say brother."

Bechtol came by his Bubbaesque naturally, growing up on the Mississippi Gulf Coast, one of four children his mother raised on a garment worker's salary. He went to junior college on a football scholarship and dropped out of the University of Southern Mississippi when he injured a knee before playing his first game there.

Bechtol is divorced and has two sons, "Bubba Junior" and "Little Bubba."

He has the same Nashville agent as Lewis Grizzard, whom he extols as a his role model, and has been filling the Atlanta newspaper columnist's speaking gigs while he has been hospitalized for heart surgery.

They will meet kids and be available for picture-taking.

Woman's death threatens tourist industry

By JOHN PAGENTI
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Florida tourist officials expected 1993 to be a record year. Instead, crime-related deaths of foreign visitors may put a crack in the state's golden egg.

Florida's multibillion-dollar tourism industry — the state's economic lifeline — has taken a direct hit with a rash of deadly crimes against foreign visitors.

"Florida is hurting now," said Gary Stogner, spokesman for the state Division of Tourism. "All of Florida has been damaged by this, and that's just the way we have to approach it."

The dream vacation in South Florida has become a nightmare for some unlucky foreign tourists who get lost in the maze of Miami's confusing roadways linking the airport, downtown and the resort hotels.

The issue had been percolating all winter with numerous attacks throughout the state and boiled over last week after the brutal attack of a German woman who strayed off of Interstate 95.

Barbara Meller Jensen, 39, became the seventh foreigner killed this tourist season when she was savagely beaten April 2 in front of her two young children and mother.

She was attacked soon after becoming lost leaving the airport in her rental car.

Two men — already in jail for a similar attack later in the weekend — have been charged in her death. They had criminal records and immediately brought complaints that Florida's severe prison overcrowding compounds the problem.

Mrs. Jensen's death set off a worldwide outcry. The governments of Germany and Great Britain issued travel advisories and one German newspaper blared: "Florida: Hunting German Tourists."

Earlier this year when two

Canadians were slain in separate incidents, the Canadian Automobile Association issued a tip guide for would-be travelers to Florida. A German official emphasized the government isn't advising tourists to stay away from Florida.

"We are not telling people to stay away," said Walter Weinberger, German deputy consul general. "This is a beautiful and attractive area and there are some risks and people should be aware. These can be of course limited when you follow certain advice."

"It's pretty scary," said tourist Marie Deering, a former travel agent visiting from Perth, Australia. She was reading an account about the tourist attacks in Friday's newspaper at a Miami Beach hotel.

"I was nervous driving down from Orlando last night in a rental car," she said. "I'm thinking, 'What if we get lost in the wrong place?'"

Tourism officials are worried that Miami might be seen as the wrong place to travel and are beginning to measure the damage on an industry that generated $30.8 billion in taxable sales income last year.

That figure is supposed to go up this year under the Division of Tourism prediction that 42.4 million visitors will come to Florida, up from 40.5 million last year. The record is 40.9 million visitors set in 1990.

Last year's figures exceeded expectations despite Hurricane Andrew, which devastated communities south of Miami.

"People are more forgiving in the case of natural disaster than in the area of crime," said Vicky Knappenberger, spokeswoman for the Florida Department of Commerce.

Preliminary state figures show tourism has been slipping from last year with a 13 percent drop in March in visitors traveling by car and an 8 percent decrease in February. But those figures don't account for air traffic or all auto traffic and may be misleading, tourist officials said.

"The only thing we've seen so far is that there has been one or two cancellations by tour operators of groups between 200 and 300 people," said Mayco Villafana, spokesman for the Greater Miami Convention & Visitors' Bureau.

Travel agent Barry White said he's hearing similar rumblings in the industry.

"A tour operator who does receptive tours for Germans told me he already anticipates it," White said. "He has heard some German tourist operators are already trying to refocus to Orlando instead of Miami."

Robberies of out-of-state visitors have more than doubled in South Florida since 1989 — rising from 1,165 in 1989 to 2,618 last year.

Still, tourism officials are quick to point out that 3.2 percent of crimes in the state in 1992 were committed against non-residents, as compared with 3.5 percent tourists who visited Florida last year.

"We are a relative safe city when you look at our crime statistics," Villafana said. "There is a trend towards tourists, though. The street criminal has decided our tourist makes a nice target."

That trend hasn't just appeared this tourist season, either.

In November 1991, the London Daily Mail called Miami "one of America's most dangerous cities" after a British couple was slain.

"I'm a firm believer that we should have been taking care of this long ago rather than let it come to what it has come," said Richard Gonzalez, a sales manager for A-1 Bus Lines Inc., which caters to foreign groups. "It's a negative publicity that's going out."

Tourist officials in the Miami area say they are combating problems by increasing lighting in certain neighborhoods and adding new signs with international symbols directing tourists towards beaches and the airport. There also are plans to create 500 visitor assistance centers this summer at attractions, hotels and fast-food restaurants.

Gov. Lawton Chiles and his task force on visitor safety have been pushing rental companies to exchange their telltale license plates for new generic ones. The companies are proceeding with the changes, but it will take time.

IN BRIEF

Elks charity hospital celebrates 60 years

The Florida Elks Children's Hospital, in Umatilla, announces that April 14 will mark its 60th birthday.

The hospital, opened on April 14, 1933, was originally called the Harry-Anna Crippled Children's Home.

The current facility, constructed in 1977, sits on the original site of its first hospital.

The 100 bed, pediatric orthopaedic facility is supported entirely by the Elks of Florida and their ladies, as well as contributions from the general public. The hospital provides its services absolutely free to Florida children who suffer from orthopaedic problems or conditions and is funded by contributions from Florida's 90,000 Elk members, as well as from the general public. The hospital recently opened 10 beds dedicated to children with closed head injuries.

Administrator, Ben S. Brown, Jr., said more than 25,000 needy Florida children had received free care from the Florida Elks Children's Hospital over its 60 year history.

Researchers fight against neuroblastoma

ST. LOUIS — Researchers say they have made a discovery that may help treat a cancer that each year kills about 300 children in the United States.

The researchers say they have pinpointed a telltale chemical signal that can be used to distinguish aggressive forms of the cancer, called neuroblastoma, from less aggressive forms. The signal, a protein known as TRK (pronounced "track"), is found on the surface of some tumor cells.

Dr. Garrett Brodeur, an associate professor of pediatrics and genetics at Washington University, led the study; the findings were published recently in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Brodeur and his colleagues examined the amount of TRK on the tumors of 77 children in the United States and Japan over several years. The majority of those who had a large amount of TRK went at least five years with no signs of the disease and were presumed cured. Only 14 percent of those who had a small amount of TRK survived, an indication they had a more aggressive kind of cancer.

Neuroblastoma tumors usually appear in the abdomen or chest. Most of the children it kills are under 5.

The research was supported by grants from Ronald McDonald Children's Charities and the National Institutes of Health.

Tests begin on new chicken pox vaccine

GAINESVILLE — Clinical tests at the University of Florida are under way to determine whether a new chicken pox vaccine will be included in the standard childhood inoculation series.

Clinical trials are being conducted on infants between 12 and 18 months in which the chicken pox vaccine is administered with the required measles, mumps and rubella inoculation.

Some 9,000 children have received the vaccine in various clinical trials since testing began in the United States in the late 1980s. To date, none have lost their immunity to the chicken pox virus, said Dr. Peter Reuman, assistant professor in pediatric infectious diseases and head of the study.

If approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the new vaccine could be available within two years, he said.

Chicken pox is rarely fatal in children, but can be deadly to adults. Almost 90 percent of the adult population have never had the disease, characterized by itchy, blister-like sores. The disease is contracted by 3 million people annually.

Mission Cataract helps indigent

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Free cataract surgery for indigent residents of Seminole County will be available May 1, as part of Mission Cataract USA '93, a nationwide project participated by nearly 200 eye surgeons throughout the United States.

Locally free eye screenings will be given at Florida Eye Clinic, 160 Boston Ave., Altamonte Springs, on April 24, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. by appointment only. This screening will determine those candidates with cataracts and financial need.

Eligible candidates will be scheduled for cataract surgery May 1. The surgeries will be performed at the Florida Eye Clinic Ambulatory Surgical Center and will include lens implants and all follow up care. The procedure takes about 20 minutes and the results of surgery are available the next day.

"We are acutely aware of people in our own area who need cataract surgery, but cannot afford it and are not covered by insurance."

-Dr. John Isler

Anyone who is visually impaired and has financial need can call 834-7778, ext. 194, to make an appointment.

Florida Eye Clinic ophthalmologists participating in the project include: John L. Isler, M.D., Harry R. Pappas, M.D., Robert B. Feldman, M.D., and Stephen M. Brooks, M.D.

"We are acutely aware of people in our own area who need cataract surgery, but cannot afford it and are not covered by insurance."

own area who need cataract surgery, but cannot afford it and are not covered by insurance," said Dr. John Isler.

Dr. Isler, along with the other doctors of the Florida Eye Clinic are volunteering their time to provide cataract surgery with lens implants and follow up care at no charge.

Mission Cataract began in 1991 when Frederick A. Richburg, M.D., medical director of Valley Eye Institute in Fresno, Calif., offered free cataract surgery one Saturday in May to patients of all ages who had no means to pay. This year, nearly 200 ophthalmologists are participating in Dr. Richburg's program to offer free surgeries nationwide for patients who have no Medicare, Medicaid, third party insurance or other ability to pay.

Laser blood test could make lancets obsolete

By Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Russian and American researchers say they have come up with a way to take a blood sample by substituting a laser beam for those sharp little steel lancets.

"We're going to change the whole industry," says Charles Vestal, chairman of Venisect Inc. of Little Rock, Ark. The company refined a device that once was a Soviet military secret.

Lasers already are used extensively in surgery. The new method makes a minuscule opening, up to 0.5 millimeters in diameter and 0.5 millimeters deep. The hole is just big enough to allow the collection of a small blood sample, and it heals like any other tiny puncture.

Researchers say the laser may help ease fears about spreading disease through needles and other sharp objects, since it would not touch blood.

If a patient is infected with blood-borne agents such as HIV or hepatitis B, "the contaminated lancet or needle poses a serious threat to others who come in contact with it," said Dr. Milton Waner, clinical director of the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences Biomedical Research Laboratory.

Vestal said the devices would be cheaper than steel lancets in the long run, because lancets are not reused and must be disposed of as medical waste.

But so far, the laser doesn't save any of the lancet's sting.

A Russian researcher, Boris Zubov, is working in Little Rock to determine if the procedure can be done without discomfort.

Venisect plans to apply for approval from the Food and Drug Administration in the next few weeks. Approval could take up to a year, Vestal said.

Cream takes 'ouch' out of needles

By GONNIE GASS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Doctors now can give children something more than lollipops or balloons to soothe the sting of needles: a pain-killing cream that stops the "ouch!"

The Swedish anesthetic, which is rubbed on the skin to deaden it before a needle prick, is newly available to U.S. doctors and pharmacists, the manufacturer announced.

The drug costs $1 to $3 per application and requires a prescription.

"It is a magic cream," said Dr. Linda Jo Rice, director of pain management at the non-profit Children's National Medical Center. "Now you can take your kid to the doctor and it won't hurt, and that puts an end to the dread and the screaming."

The cream called EMLA, short for eutectic mixture of local anesthetics, is applied to a patch of skin and covered with a bandage. Within an hour, it deadens the skin. Feeling returns within about two hours.

EMLA was approved by the Food and Drug Administration last Dec. 30, said FDA spokeswoman Monica Revelle.

Scientists say rare vine offers hope for AIDS cure

By DONALD EVERHART
Associated Press Writer

KORUP, Cameroon — A foray into the rain forests of Cameroon has yielded a chemical that blocks reproduction of the AIDS virus in the test tube, researchers say.

"Our hope is that it (the research) will go straight through to an AIDS cure," said Duncan Thomas, the British botanist who discovered the vine containing the promising chemical in Cameroon's remote Korup National Park.

But all involved realize any cure or treatment based on the chemical would be years away.

Leaves of the vine have yielded an alkaloid called Michellamine B in laboratory tests at the National Cancer Institute in Frederick, Md., the U.S. government's premier cancer research facility. Researchers there say Michellamine B inhibits replication of the AIDS virus.

"We're excited about something showing this spectrum of activity against AIDS," said Dr. Johnson Jato, vice dean of the University of Yaounde Center for Health Services and the Cameroon liaison for the American researchers.

Gordon Cragg, chief of the U.S. National Cancer Institute's natural products branch, said limited testing is being done on mice and dogs.

The vine, which Thomas has tentatively named ancistrocladus korupensis after the park where it was found, is one of the National Cancer Institute's best leads from an extensive plant-collecting program.

Some 20,000 samples from 25 countries have been tested since 1988. So far, only two other plants, from Samoa and Sarawak in Malaysia, have shown some activity against the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus. Both are in earlier stages of research than korupensis, said Cragg.

A more immediate problem is getting enough vine leaves.

Researchers still do not know how much of the vine exists, over how big an area it grows and how best to cultivate it. Finding the answers brought Thomas, 43, back to Cameroon and Korup last month.

"The local people don't have a use for it. They don't even have a name for it," he said as he walked through the forest, scanning the canopy for the distinctive broad-leaved vine.

It has only been found in a small section of the 740,000-acre rain forest, an area roughly the size of Rhode Island along Cameroon's northern border with Nigeria. It is bound south and east by a palm oil plantation that abruptly ends at the protected forest.

Homicide, AIDS rising cause of early death

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Violence and AIDS are closing the gap on accidents, the nation's No. 1 cause of premature death.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Thursday that accidents in 1991 robbed Americans of 2.1 million years of potential life before age 65. Automobile wrecks accounted for 1.3 million of those years.

Cancer, claiming 1.9 million potential years, was the No. 2 cause of premature death.

Violence — that is, homicide and suicide — and the AIDS virus grew fastest on the annual list and were No. 3 and No. 5, respectively.

Homicide claimed 806,944 years and suicide 674,593 years, according to provisional data for 1991. The nearly 1.6 million years lost to intentional violence was up 4.7 percent from 1990.

"We don't really know what is the one factor that's causing violence to go up," said Dr. Alex Crosby of the CDC's new Center for Injury Control. "Substance abuse, access to guns, poverty, unemployment ... play different roles in different communities."

AIDS stole 776,240 years from its victims in 1991, up 17.6 percent from the 660,261 years lost in 1990.

"People who were getting AIDS when they were 20 are dying now in their 30s," CDC epidemiologist Nana Lopez said. "And it's an epidemic that's growing."

The CDC uses the years-of-potential-life scale to gauge health crises among younger Americans.

Fetal alcohol syndrome leads to longterm brain damage

By RAMBI HATZER SPOTEM
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Babies born with fetal alcohol syndrome suffer long-lasting brain damage, though many physical deformities diminish over time, according to a 10-year German study.

Doctors have suspected that fetal alcohol syndrome — a condition associated with exposure to alcohol in the womb — causes chronic emotional and intellectual damage. But few scientists have traced affected children from birth to adolescence.

The new study shows many of the physical deformities disappeared with time, but an array of emotional disturbances persisted, said Dr. Hans-Ludwig Spohr, a pediatrician at Rittberg Hospital of the German Red Cross in Berlin.

Fetal alcohol syndrome, which strikes one to two babies in every 1,000 live births worldwide, describes a collection of features including a small head, stunted growth and delayed mental development. Doctors do not know the precise level of alcohol that damages the fetus.

The study is being published in the April 10 issue of The Lancet, a medical journal.

Changes coming at Seminole High

SANFORD — Next year's students at Seminole High School will be exposed to many changes.

can even cut back on the number of freshmen who drop out of college after their first year at college.

One change is the daily schedule. Monday and Tuesday will be three two-hour classes. Wednesday will remain a short day. The rest of the week will be the regular one-hour classes.

Seniors from last year and from previous years at Seminole High School have been allowed to go off campus for lunch. They can do that no longer.

Also, it allows teachers more time in which to instruct their students more thoroughly. It also, in a way, encourages creativity on the part of teachers.

The policy has upset a lot of Seniors who looked forward to that privilege.

It is hard enough for a student to stay attentive in a class that is one hour long. Now a teacher must hold their attention for two hours, two days a week.

To compensate for this, a Senior Park was created recently.

High school will never be college, but this schedule can make the transition between the two a little bit smoother. It

The Senior Park is a grassy area, made especially for the seniors, with landscaping and picnic tables.

It seems little for the seeming loss, but the seniors have other privileges. It's like the feeling that a child gets on a holiday when getting underwear instead of a favorite toy.

Double tennis tourney set

HEATHROW — The Emma Spencer Memorial Team Doubles Tennis Championship, to benefit the American Cancer Society, will be played on April 24 at The Racquet Club at Heathrow.

Under the director of tennis pro Gavin Ford, the tournament will follow a round-robin format.

Refreshments and barbeque will be provided, along with T-shirts, awards, and prizes for participants.

For more information, call 323-7629.

AROUND THE STATE

Gold beats Garnet at FSU

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State coach Bobby Bowden settled on a backup quarterback as the Gold defeated the Garnet 27-14 in the spring football scrimmage.

Rising sophomore Danny Kanell guided the Gold to a 27-0 lead and left Bowden more comfortable about an offense that has struggled all spring with the absence of starting quarterback Charlie Ward, who is recovering from shoulder surgery.

Tailbacks Tiger McMillon, Sean Jackson and Lake Howell's Marquette Smith totaled 217 yards and left Bowden anxious for fall and Ward's return.

"Our runners look like they can play with anybody," said Bowden. "With Charlie Ward and runners like we have we could have one heckuva football team."

Varitek helps Tech crush Duke

DURHAM — Freshman Michael Sorrow hit two homes with a 4-for-6 performance that include five RBI as eighth-ranked Georgia Tech defeated No. 20 Duke 20-2 Friday.

Sorrow, freshman Scott Byers, junior Jason Varitek and freshman Ryan Ritter each hit home runs for the Yellow Jackets.

Varitek, from Lake Brantley, went 2-for-4 with three RBI, while Jay Payton was 2-for-3 with three RBI, including a two-run triple in the first inning. Byers was 3-for-3 with two RBI.

Sorrow hit a three-run homer as Georgia Tech scored six first-inning runs off Duke pitcher Scott Schoeneweiss (8-1), who allowed seven hits and nine runs in 2.1 innings.

Sorrow got his second homer with a solo hit in the Yellow Jackets' five-run fifth inning. Byers followed with his home run. Varitek hit a home run later in the same inning, building Georgia Tech's lead to 14-2.

Deese, teammates pull extra duty for 'Noles

From Staff Reports

WINTER PARK — Brent Deese was a busy man Friday night.

Competing in the Mike Roberson Invitational track meet at Winter Park's Showalter Field along with his Seminole High School teammates, Deese ran both the 200-meter dash, the 400-meter dash, and a leg of the Tribe's 4 x 400-meter relay.

Even when you consider the fact that he had to run preliminary heats in both the 200 and 400 sprints, that's not too bad of a workout. What made it a killer was that it was a boys only meet, cutting the normal recuperative time in half.

"We worked Brent to death last night," said Seminole coach Ken Brauman Saturday. "He still had a stellar meet. While he didn't score in the 200, he was third in the 400 (50 seconds) and helped us finish fifth in the mile relay."

"It was good conditioning for him. He put a lot of effort into it, but a couple of weeks from now, he'll benefit from it."

The Tribe benefitted from it Friday night, coming in second to Winter Haven, 51 1/4-43, a finish that more than pleased Brauman.

"We're on spring break, so we had some kids that are out of town," Brauman said. "And we only semi-practiced all week. But the kids who weren't out of town came to every practice. Sometimes it's surprising the commitment they make."

Lake Howell finished 14th with 8 1/2 points while Lake Brantley was 16th with six points.

Bernard Sparrow, in his second meet since regaining his academic eligibility, won both the shot put (60 feet, 1 inch, a new meet record) and discus (155 feet, 7 inches).

Andre Scott also set a meet record in the triple jump, winning the event with a leap of 50, 7 1/2 inches. Scott has cleared 50 feet in each of his last six meets. For good measure, Scott also took third in the long jump with an effort of 22 feet, 4 inches.

Gerard Shine also contributed points in the discus for Seminole, finishing fifth with a throw of 135 feet, 8 inches. The Tribe took fourth and sixth in the 800-meter run, Aswad Duval finishing fourth in 2:02.6 while Ricardo Allen came in sixth at 2:04.1.

Even they're running a makeshift lineup in the 4 x 400-meter relay due to injuries, the Seminoles still finished third in 43.0. Running the event this week were Ansel Davis, Derrick Swain, and Bryan Moore.

In the 4 x 400-meter relay, Deese and Duval combined with Terrance Jones and Gary Rowe to finish fifth with a time of 3:31.0.

For Lake Howell, Matt Bowman cleared 13 feet in the pole vault to finish in a tie for third.

This Friday, April 10, most of the Seminole County schools are schedule to compete in the Lyman Invitational, which will be run at Lyman High School Stadium.

Flat SCC upended by Edison

SANFORD — Ho hum, another non-conference game, another loss.

The Seminole Community College baseball team came home from an very successful Mid-Florida Conference road trip, only to drop another non-conference game to Edison Community College from Ft. Myers 7-6 at Raider Field Friday afternoon.

The Raiders have been outstanding in the M-FC games, winning six straight to move into second place and within two games of first place Florida Community College at Jacksonville. On the other hand, they have dropped five straight non-conference contests.

"This was kind of a throw-away game for us," said SCC head coach Jack Pantellas. "I didn't tell the kids that, because you should always go out to win, but you could see that the intensity wasn't there today. We threw a couple of pitchers today that normally don't start, but if we get to state they are going to have to be ready to pitch."

SCC (21-15) took advantage of an error to score four runs in the fourth inning, while freshman Joey Rice was hurling a two-hit shutout through five innings.

But Edison (28-23) got a run in the sixth and three in the seventh to tie the score at 4-4. The visitors then got to reliever Julio Linares in the eighth inning for a pair of home runs and took a 7-4 lead.

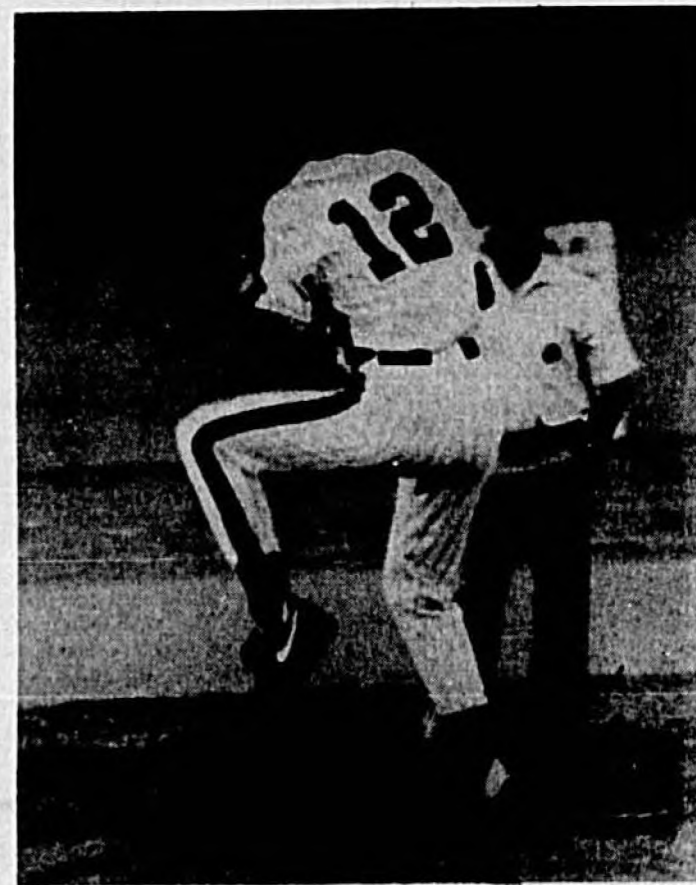

The Raiders did not go quietly, however, as Deltona's Pete Bezeredi and Randy Hagar blasted back-to-

After Mike Rugienius (No. 11, left) and the Oviedo Lions struck for four runs in the top of the first inning Friday night, Mike Carr (No. 12, right) came on to pitch for the Lake Mary Rams and allowed just one more run over the next 8 1/2 innings. Given a chance to get back into the game, the Rams rallied later but fell two runs short.

LAKE MARY — Launching to a 4-0 lead in the top of the first inning and silencing a late inning surge, the Oviedo Lions registered a 5-3 win over the Lake Mary Rams in a non-conference game Friday night.

With the win, the Lions have now won three out of their last four games after a sluggish start.

"We've been getting some breaks going our way," Oviedo coach Mike Ferrell said. "Obviously, tonight, even though we won, we had a lot of breaks. The key I think has been that we are starting to play with a little more confidence."

"Tonight, I think we got a little too cocky after the first inning. They are a good team (Lake Mary) and you can't sit back and let them keep going. We were lucky tonight. To go to their field and for them to leave 15 guys on base, you have got to consider yourself dag gum lucky."

Oviedo jumped on Ram starter Russ Haney in the top of the first inning, getting three runs on three hits in two-thirds of an inning.

Mike Rugienius got things started with a leadoff walk on four pitches. Tim Slavik followed with a single advancing Rugienius to second. After Rugienius and Slavik both advanced on a wild throw, Todd Bellhorn plated Rugienius with a single into left field.

Haney hit the next batter, Chris Walker, to load the bases but got Adam Coleman to hit into a fielder's choice, forcing Slavik at the plate. Mark Metcalf then singled to right field, driving home Bellhorn. An out later, Carlos Martinez drew a walk to bring in Walker.

Ted Brown capped the inning with an RBI single to center field, scoring Metcalf. Mike Carr then came in to relieve Haney and struck out Rugienius, batting for the second time in the inning.

Sanford's Tim Raines tore ligaments in his right thumb making a head-first slide similar to this in Friday's game with the New York Yankees.

Thumb injury sidelines Raines for six weeks

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Chicago White Sox left fielder Tim Raines will be sidelined six weeks with torn ligaments in his right thumb.

Raines, 33, suffered the injury Friday while sliding into second base in the first inning of an 11-6 loss to the New York Yankees in Chicago's home opener.

A graduate of Seminole High School and resident of Sanford, Raines was to undergo surgery on Saturday.

The switch-hitter was batting .250, with a pair of homers and five RBIs.

Raines had 40 stolen bases while batting .294 last year in his second season for the White Sox after spending 10 years in Montreal. He's been relatively free of injuries except for 1988 when he played in only 109 games due to shoulder and leg injuries.

Bass events may need permits, exceptions

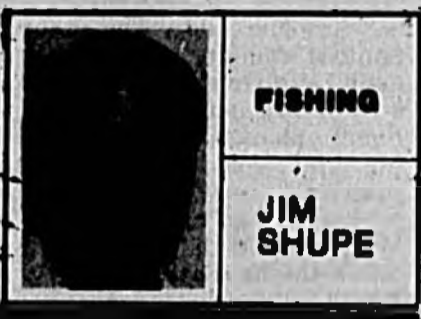

The Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission is reminding bass tournament directors that a permit may be required to host such events in Florida.

In addition to a permit, directors also may apply for an exception to the special daily bag limit that would allow anglers to possess more than one black bass over 22 inches long if they agree to follow specific fish handling guidelines established by the Commission.

Furthermore, all fish caught during an event in which the exception applies must be released alive immediately after the daily weigh-in.

Tournaments with 100 or more participants are required to have a permit to hold an event and directors also may apply for an exception to exceed the special daily bag limit.

For events with 20 to 99 participants, both a permit and an exception are required if they want to exceed the special daily bag limit. Moreover, tournaments with less than 20 anglers are not required to have a permit and cannot receive an exception.

FISHING

Requests for permits must be made at least 60 days prior to an event. Ray Watson, a Commission fisheries biologist in Lakeland, said. Directors are required to submit a report detailing catch and release results to the Commission within 30 days after the tournament.

"We urge all tournament directors to take part in our permitting program," Watson said. "It gives us an opportunity to work with event organizers and anglers on increasing survival rates of tournament caught bass."

Besides monitoring bass tournaments, the program will help the Commission determine impacts of tournaments on bass populations and public resources.

To receive a permit application or further information, interested persons should contact Ray Watson, Tenoroc Fish Management Area, 3829 Tenoroc Mind Rd., Lakeland, FL 33806 or call (813) 499-2421.

SHUPE'S SCOOP

As soon as the weather settles down, we will be in for some of the best fishing action of the year. Action will taper in fresh water with the approach of summer, but salt water angling will get red hot — both offshore and inshore.

FISHING FORECAST

Bass fishing is hotter than hot at Farm Pond 19. Local angler Archie Smith caught over 15 bass to 13 pounds last week on shiners. All bass have to be released, so bring your camera to record your catches. Your friends will not believe you otherwise. Shiners are the only bait to use at Farm Pond 19.

Sebastian Inlet is getting better by the day, and snook in the 8-16 pound range at hitting live bait in the daytime and one-ounce jigs at night. The outgoing tide is definitely the best action. Redfish (season closed), flounder and bluefish are also mixed in with the snook.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral has little to report in the way of offshore action due to high seas and dirty water. As soon as the seas calm, fishing will be outstanding.

Inside the Port, sheepshead, bluefish, and flounder have been keeping anglers busy. Guide Troy Peres reports swarms of redfish back in the south end of Mosquito Lagoons.

It's been mainly sheepshead and bluefish at Ponce Inlet. Some scattered rede are moving through, but they have to be released. A few flounder are still hitting finger mullet on the south side of the south jetties.

Is the 'Man in Black' back on the right track?

By SNIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

Dale Earnhardt isn't sure if there was a missing ingredient last year. Whatever was missing, though, the five-time NASCAR Winston Cup champion is convinced his team has it back in 1993.

After a season with only one victory and an uncharacteristic 12th-place finish in the series points, Earnhardt is off to a fast start, leading the season standings and running at or near the front in every race.

Earnhardt and the rest of stock car's top drivers are enjoying a rare idle weekend, but the man known as "The Intimidator" did spend part of this week testing tires for Goodyear at Daytona International Speedway.

It was there that the 41-year-old from North Carolina had time to reflect on the fast start this year that has given him a 47-point lead over runner-up Rusty Wallace after the first six events of the 30-race season.

So far, Earnhardt has won once, finished second three times and has finishes of 10th and 11th.

"I don't think anything was missing (last season)," he said. "Early in the season we were in great shape. We were feeling good about the team and working hard. It happened along when we broke an engine and finished 40th (July 4 at Daytona).

"It hurt us in the points. Then, we regained some of that momentum, and then it happened again. There were about four races that really knocked us back.

"When that happened, it bo-hummed the team. They would say, 'Let's work hard and try to win a race.' I just don't know if we lost focus as we weren't as motivated."

One new ingredient at Richard Childress Racing is Andy Petree, who replaced longtime crew chief Kirk Shelmerdine when the latter unexpectedly retired at the end of the 1992 season.

"I think the complexion of the team has changed," Earnhardt said. "Like Kirk said when he told us he was going to quit, he thought maybe the change would be good for the team, and it has been."

Richard (Childress) has had a lot of long talks with all the guys on the team, and then we hired Andy, and he's been a good, positive note in the team. I don't think anything's been added, other than Andy, but I think the team over the winter re-thought everything and looked at where they are and how they could get back to where they were. That's hard work, a good attitude and confidence in the team."

Some observers believed that the usually hard-charging Earnhardt had eased off some in 1992 after winning championships in four of the previous six years. Although he would never admit to giving less than his all behind the wheel, Earnhardt agrees that his motivation mirrored that of the rest of the team.

"It works hand-in-hand," Earnhardt said. "It seems like every race I go to, I want to win. I feel like I'm a little more excited about the team. I'm confident and comfortable working with Andy."

"I think the fresh excitement that Andy's brought, being focused on what he wants and what he wants with the cars, has helped to motivate me."

Beginning next week at North Wilkesboro, Earnhardt will have nine straight weekends of racing, including The Winston all-star event. He considers this a key part of the season, as far as championship hopes go.

"My philosophy is to get all you can get while you can get it," Earnhardt said. "While you're running good, you need to do it. If you can get a cushion or pad, you need it, cause if you do have a bad race — and the odds say you are going to have a bad race — you want to have one that you can throw out."

Lake Mary, which left the bases loaded in the second and fourth innings, finally scored in the sixth when Mike Werner and Jimmy Rasuri reached on consecutive errors. Scott Johnston then drove in Werner with a line-drive single to left field.

With the tying run at the plate.

Metcalf struck out the next two batters to ice the win.

Todd Bellhorn started for the Lions and struck out three, walked eight and gave up two hits in 3 1/2 innings. LAKE MARY — Rick Stock is happy to be in Florida, especially Lake Mary. Stock is the manager of the newly opened Bob Evans Restaurant, along Lake Mary Blvd.

"I'm from Dayton, Ohio," he explained, "and I've been with the Bob Evans company for 17 years."

"Three years ago, I was in this area and said that if Bob Evans ever opened a restaurant anywhere near Lake Mary, I wanted to manage it."

He got his wish, and the restaurant began operations this past Monday.

"We not only have a beautiful appearing restaurant," he said, "but we have one of the friendliest staffs I've ever seen, and I don't mean just at Bob Evans Restaurants, but anywhere."

Prior to this past Monday's grand opening, the restaurant held a special fund-raising event for the "Make-A-Wish" Foundation, an organization which helps children with fatal diseases achieve whatever wish they may desire pertaining to visits or other physical wishes.

Guests at the event included Lake Mary Mayor Lowry Rockett, a number of radio and TV personalities, and Dan Evans, CEO and Chairman of the Board for the chain. Evans is a cousin of Stock's. In addition to funds raised during the event, employees even gave their tip money to the foundation.

"In just three hours time," Stock said, "we managed to raise $3,400, which we will be presenting in the near future."

"I'm very confident about being in Lake Mary," he said.

Lake Mary's new Bob Evans Restaurant, located at 3880 Flagg Lane, along Lake Mary Blvd., just east of Interstate-4.

"Once the boulevard widening is completed and we are able to put up our signs, I see nothing but a great future for our business, and continued progress for all of Lake Mary."

Chamber kicks off membership drive

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce is ready to launch its 1993 membership drive. The kick off will take place Monday, April 28.

According to the chamber's executive director Dave Farr, the campaign has a goal of over 100 new members.

"Five teams of volunteers will be inviting prospective members to join the chamber during this campaign," said the chamber's President Larry Strickler. "We want to invite area businesses and individuals to join our chamber's winning team in working year-round to make the greater Sanford area the best place in Florida in which to live, visit and conduct business."

Farr explained the drive. "We will have five cellular phones here at the chamber office, and each team, on a rotating basis, will work a half day each calling prospective members."

"From that point on," he continued, "one member of the team will be designated as a runner, and go to the new member and collect the membership check."

This is the first time the chamber has attempted making phone contacts rather than visiting business owners in person.

"This has worked very successfully in many chambers in Florida and Georgia," he said, "so we want to give it a try here."

The drive will only take two and a half days, beginning Tuesday, April 27, and concluding at noon on Thursday, April 29. "After that," Farr said, "the chamber members will all get together and have a victory party to celebrate the event."

Team captains this year are Brent Adamson of Rich United Corp.; Chet Pierce of McLain, Pierce & Associates; Linda Johnson of William Howard Jewelers; Todd Williams of Security National Bank; and Rick Russel of Tony Russel Insurance.

Robbie Robertson of Thern-O-Tane, who is vice president of the chamber, is chairing the overall campaign.

"If there is a good time of the year to join the Chamber, this is is," Strickler said. "The Greater Sanford Chamber is active on each and every front, from community activities to educational enhancement, to promoting and assisting local business."

"Prospective members should keep in mind that our dues are below the national average for a community our size," Farr said. "Businesses really do get a competitive edge by being chamber members. But they have to join to take advantage of what we have to offer."

One of the tangible perks of being a chamber member is its referral system.

"If someone inquires about a service or type of business," Farr said, "we refer them to those businesses listed in our membership, and we only refer chamber members."

For further information, contact the chamber at 322-2212.

SANFORD — A retired Sanford postmaster finds rejuvenation in a similar field requiring investigative talents he practiced for many years as a government employee.

Fred Rader retired after 37 years of service with the U.S. Postal Department. Rader, who worked as a postal employee for 14 years became a postal inspector, the law enforcement agency of the U.S. Postal Department in 1970. He was fortunate to have assignments which took him to many different areas of the United States including Chicago, Tampa, Miami, Jacksonville, Atlanta and many cities in South Carolina and North Carolina.

In 1981, he was offered a postmaster's position in Arkansas. He took the position because he did not want to move to a metropolitan area in the northeast as a postal inspector. Six years later he was retired. This time in Sanford, he accepted with the idea that he would finally get back home and retire when the time came. Rader retired in November 1992 after five and one-half as postmaster in Sanford.

"Times have changed so much in the past 20 years," he said. "I remember when the postmaster knew everyone in town and they in turn knew him. It is not that way any more." Even the local post office employees, for the majority, are no longer local residents. Many of them live in the other communities surrounding the Sanford area. Rader contributes this to the high population experienced in this area.

Looking back over the years brought back many fond memories to mind. While working in Tampa as a postal inspector he became

...That Easter bonnet'

By DORIS DIETRICH
Herald People Editor

SANFORD — It's the season to buy a new hat. For ages, women have splurged in the springtime on dreamy creations to herald the celebration of Easter. Then came a lull and many a fashionable chapeau succumbed to a desolate spot on the closet shelf to gather dust.

Not too many years back, women wore hats, along with gloves, just about everywhere including shopping. But back in those days, there were no supermarkets, nor were there any shopping malls. Getting all dressed up to go to town on a shopping spree was old hat.

Nonetheless, women wouldn't be caught outside their homes without the proper head covering. Hats are the perfect answer to an unkempt hairdo, transforming mildly from an ugly duckling to a breathtaking, graceful swan. Pop on a pretty hat and look and feel like a million.

Then came the beret and other extreme cultures to replace the lovely hats.

But hold on to your hats. They're back. According to Sara Jacobson, owner operator of Ro-Jay in Sanford, hats are a very popular accessory this season.

"She said," Hats are an attitude — not a look. They create a feeling that starts from within and works its way out to a tilt of a woman's head, a gleam in her eye and a sense of presence in her walk. Hats create a mood reflected in her manner."

Beatrice turns 90; clubwomen review purchase power

Beatrice Laurendine had the surprise of her lifetime Monday when she was honored at a tea on her 90th birthday. The tea was held at her Oak Avenue home and given by her two daughters, Mary Laurendine and Marge Jernigan.

Beatrice doesn't let her 90 years slow her down. The spry homemaker still drives, tends her garden, and just last week, mowed her grass and set out tomato plants.

An active member of the First Assembly of God, Beatrice has been living in Sanford for 20 years and has spent her spare time sitting with patients until last year. Previously, she was an inspectress and housekeeper for several large hotels at Miami Beach.

Beatrice's other children are George, Maitland, Candice Parker, Oregon, and the late Geneva Spaulding of Sanford. She has 18 grandchildren, and six great grands.

Friends called during the afternoon when they were entertained in a party atmosphere and served party refreshments including birthday cake, other homemade cakes, tea, coffee, punch and a variety of candies and nuts.

The birthday girl, who was born April 4, 1903, in Augusta, Miss., received numerous cards, flowers and other gifts.

Purchase power

Barbara Hughes-Gregg, extension home economist at the Seminole County Ag Center, was guest speaker Wednesday at the regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Club of Sanford Inc.

The spirited and vivacious speaker, introduced by Faye Siler, chairman of the club's Home Life Department, gave the women pointers on purchase power and told them to keep a keen eye on ounces when buying supermarket products. Barbara informed the women that manufacturers are cagey and in lieu of raising prices, the weight of a package or can was reduced.

So you think the taste of chocolate pudding is not as intense and delicious? You are right. The package instructions are the same, except the powdery flavoring has been reduced by more than an ounce.

Barbara agrees with Ann Landers on the controversial toilet tissue issue. Ladies, take note. She says the paper should flow from under the roll against the wall. Why? It's harder to pull too much off the roll! She also cautioned the women that more tissue is used from large roll rolls. Why? It pulls off more easily than from a solid roll.

The speaker was well received by the members who asked a series of questions.

Jean Metts, president, conducted the business meeting which was followed by the women taking a tour of the Sanford Police Department. This tour was arranged by Martha Yancy, chairman of the club's Public Affairs Department.

The clubhouse was decorated in an Easter motif. Chairmen of

Easter hat hunt

Women to wear colorful, elegant creations today

It was an afternoon of elegance when more than 25 women went on an Easter hat hunt on Saturday afternoon, April 3, at the St. John Baptist Church Annex. A presentation, Fashions by Elegance, entertained the women and showed them the latest in hats and jewelry. "Style — Eloquence — Class — You!"

The hunt was over as the models, Eloise W. George, Gale Adams Jackson and Juandolyn A. Stewart, modeled the latest in hats and beautiful jewelry to match. The guests beamed as the show progressed with the beautiful hats the women viewed.

Hat stylist, Eleanor Dril of New York described them as the women envisioned themselves as elegant "ladies" in the Easter and summer parade in Sanford. The guests were eager to make their purchases and, yes, you will see many in the Easter parade today.

Proceeds from the sale went to the church.

Church re-dedicated

The Progress Missionary Baptist Church, Midway Avenue and Randall Street (Midway), East Sanford invites the community of Sanford and Seminole County to the re-dedication service on Sunday, Apr. 18, 11 a.m.

The Rev. Emory Blake, pastor, and the Progress family invite all of their many friends and well-wishers who have been a great help and inspiration to them since the fire of 1992. The desire to keep this house of worship in the community brought help from many — from St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Brothers Bob Sonnenberry, Neal Benson, Holy Cross Episcopal Church; The Orlando Sentinel; Gary Taylor; the Sanford Herald; First South Florida Missionary Baptist Association and Congress No. One.

In the year 1918, in the little farming-area community where many families lived, the desire to worship was evident, thus, the Progress Missionary Baptist Church was organized. These Christians of various backgrounds and experiences yet having many things in common came to settle in East Sanford in a community called Midway.

This togetherness on their part led to the coming together of a few spirit-filled Christians, to a dedicated place of worship God had organized to teach His precepts and to bear witness to Him throughout the world.

aware that a lot of treasury checks (retirement checks, social security payments) were turning up missing in the Sarasota-Bradenton area. Every month there would be a large number of checks not received through the mails by the original recipients. At the same time the post office was receiving pictures, from the banks, of females cashing the missing checks.

He worked on this case about six months and just couldn't come up with a lead. One night the Bradenton Beach police department called and said they had a small business owner in their precinct with questions about a treasury check he had received.

Rader continued, "So I went down there and got to talking to him. He was acting kind of funny. I felt that I had gotten his confidence so I asked him about the checks. He admitted that he did get a lot of the treasury checks. He started rattling off some female names which sounded very familiar to me. So I started taking out those pictures we had received from the banks and showing them to him. He recognized them right off. He exclaimed, 'That's Leo and that's John.' It turned out the pictures of the females cashing the checks were actually female impersonators. That was one of the main reasons that we just couldn't seem to put that case together. I wound up arresting eight out of that group. It sure cut down on the missing checks from that area."

He talked about the 1960s, during and after the Vietnam War. "At that time we were working a lot of drug cases. We were getting packages from Thailand and that area loaded with drugs. I was working in Collier County with the local sheriff's department. Either we would dress up as a carrier or let the carrier, if we could trust him, carry the package to the home. When the package was accepted and taken inside we would close in on the home from all directions. One day we were on a case and there was a new deputy in the group and was assigned to go through the door off the patio. When the signal was given to 'hit it,' this new deputy went right through the jalousied glass door. I mean he went right through the screen and the glass door without even slowing down. I guess it never occurred to him the glass door was closed."

Rader has associated himself with an investigative agency started in order to pick up the slack created by the overburdened court system and huge number of cases coming up requiring the talents of good investigative personnel. Hunt and Associates was formed three years ago by a retired postal inspector. The agency has concentrated on many of the civil investigations that are required by attorneys before going into court. The company also works on missing person cases. In one of his current cases, Rader is looking for recipients of an insurance claim that has never been collected.

He has been working with a number of the local attorneys to develop a following for the work that he does. Most of the attorneys in this area are just becoming aware of the service he offers and he hopes in the future he will be able to play a bigger role in relaxing the load on the criminal justice system.

Rader still calls himself semi-retired. He and his lovely wife, Sharon, raised two children and both of them, a boy and girl, are grown, married and have children. One of his biggest thrills is to have the grandchildren over for a day. In his weekly schedule he has set aside time to fish and play golf, his two hobbies which he does not plan to give up for any reason.

Bride breaks bones

Beth Bridges and Attorney William Anthony Abruzzo II were married April 3 in a lovely wedding at Grace United Methodist Church. A reception followed at the Cultural Arts Centre in Sanford.

Perfect.

The following Monday, Beth fell, broke her leg and was hospitalized at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

Bridal party detours

On another beautiful wedding scene when Melony Schroeder and Donald Austin exchanged their "I do's" on April 3, Melony's grandmother could not attend the wedding because she was hospitalized at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

So, after the wedding, the entire wedding party detoured by the hospital, en route to the reception so the grandmother could see them in all their splendor and glory.

The bride's grandmother is Dora Lee Russell who was delighted with the gesture, including a long-stemmed rose. "It was so sweet," she said.

Engagement party

Jan and Don Cahill announced the engagement of their daughter, Allyson, to Joseph Antoine Georgi of Kissimmee, at an engagement party at their Kingswood Court home.

About 60 guests gathered for the formal announcement and to extend well wishes to the lovely betrothed couple.

Guests were served a variety of hors d'oeuvres and other party fare from a beautiful table appointed in the bridal motif. And the bride and bridegroom-to-be were traditionally toasted among sounds of "Cheers."

The event was attended by friends and family members including the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Antoine Georgi of Kissimmee.

Bridge winners

The Wednesday Bridge Club of the Sanford Woman's Club met recently at the clubhouse for a day of bridge, good food and warm friendships.

High score for the day was won by Rose Jacobson. Jane Phillips won second high with Charlotte Smith taking the third high honors.

Other players were Frances Wilson, Jean Williams, Toni Hobson, Carolyn Cornells, Ester Herbst, Audrey Roush and Libby Prevatt.

Fashion Get-Away

"Fashion Get-Away" is coming up April 21 at the Sanford Woman's Club. Proceeds from the fashion show and luncheon will be used for a scholarship for a deserving woman returning to the classroom.

Hours for the show are 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and the donation is $12.00. Advance reservations are a must. For information, call 539-2820 or 323-9064.

Among the models will be Dr. Paul Hagerty, superintendent of Seminole District Schools, and Bob Young, a body builder from Matt Arena Fitness Center. They will join several female models.

A variety of door prizes will also be given away.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
April 11, 1993

Conditions that have a critical effect upon your career could make some unexpected, favorable shifts from time to time in the year ahead. Be ready to move quickly so that you can capitalize on them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you feel compelled to do something for others today which you think is foisted upon you, there's a chance you'll handle it very badly. Aries, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Aries' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your hunches could have a strong influence on your outlook today. Unfortunately, they might not be reliable, so it is best not to give them too much credence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If your opinions aren't readily accepted by your peers today, don't push them to try to get a favorable response. It might cause something that you're not prepared to cope with.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Instead of thinking for yourself today, there's a possibility you might count too heavily on advice from an unqualified source. This might not be a good idea.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Some of your ideas will be quite clever today, but you might not know how to implement them effectively. Poor execution could totally negate your concepts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make a point of not poking your nose into a situation today that you should keep out of, especially if the particular situation deals with a friend's romantic problems.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If it is your lot to delegate assignments to others, don't give a critical task to one who has a very poor performance record. He or she could get it wrong again today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might have a bit of a stubborn streak today and if you yield to it, it could prove to be self-defeating. It behooves you to listen to the advice and suggestions of others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Guard against inclinations today to take chances on both intangible and tangible prospects. There is a possibility your rabbit's foot won't be working.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually you're the type of person who takes time to think things through. However, the impulsive elements of your personality might cause you to behave erratically today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone who has placed his or her confidence in you will be very disappointed today if you broadcast this person's secrets. There is a chance that something might slip out.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something you've been hoping for might carry a much higher price tag than you originally anticipated. To be on the safe side, review this matter before getting in any deeper.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
April 12, 1993

If you exercise patience, cooperation and generosity in the year ahead, these qualities will substantially enhance your probabilities for success and provide you with opportunities you never before experienced.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Usually you're an independent thinker who can assess matters for yourself. Today, however, you might try to please everyone with whom you're involved and satisfy no one in the process.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your disposition is likely to be bright and cheery today, provided that no one gets in your way. If they do, your smiles could become growls.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Conditions may be a bit unusual today in your material affairs. Things you don't seek could come easily, while things you pursue might evade you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try not to let your feelings dominate your behavior today. There's a chance you might be rather moody and others might give up trying to understand you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might choose to dwell on negative factors instead of positive ones today. Conditions could be more favorable for you than you're likely to believe.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In your commercial affairs today, be very careful not to oversell. There's a possibility you'll make a good deal and then proceed to unravel it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Ill feelings could result today if you try to take credit for something in which you've played only a small part. Leave the limelight for people who did the heavy lifting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Instead of treating things in a logical fashion with co-workers today, you might become upset or distraught over things of little significance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't leave important assignments up to others today. The only way you'll have things done the way you want is to either supervise the job or do it yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Timing is extremely important today regarding an endeavor that you're presently involved in. If you try to change things or push ahead prematurely on it, your house of cards could collapse.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Before undertaking something today that you never attempted previously, be sure you have a complete understanding of what you want to do.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be wary about accepting gifts today if they come from people who aren't normally generous. There's a possibility there could be some strings attached. (C)1993, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Players have become more aggressive in the auction these days. This is especially true when it comes to bidding game. Anyone who can smell a game bids a game. It might not make, but the opponents are under constant pressure to find a killing defense. One slip and a game bonus is in the bag.

In today's deal, North was aggressive in driving all the way to game. But he did have a side-suit singleton and prime controls in his two aces.

Actually, the contract was reasonable, and it succeeded when East showed a lack of imagination.

West led the heart king; then, as East had hoped, West switched to the diamond six. Declarer won with dummy's ace, played a club to his king and ruffed a heart in the dummy. Dummy's club ace was cashed before South carefully returned to hand by ruffing a low diamond with the spade king. After ruffing his last heart in the dummy, South was happy to concede just two more tricks. He lost only one spade, one heart and one club.

West wasn't too pleased with his partner. "You can see," he said, "that declarer is going to ruff a heart or two in the dummy. I can't afford to switch to a spade without blowing a trick. Why didn't you overtake my heart king with your ace at trick one and lead a trump? If you do, I think we can defeat the contract."

"Sorry, partner. You're right. The diamonds can wait."

Always take some time at trick one to plan your defense, even if declarer has already called for a card from the dummy. (C)1993, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Miami residents killed in crash

MARATHON — Three men and a woman were killed when their car crossed the highway's center line and slammed sideways into a pickup truck on the Seven Mile Bridge south of Marathon, troopers said.

Florida Highway Patrol Trooper Jim Mason said he saw the southbound 1978 Mercury swerve back and forth across U.S. 1's center line Sunday before sliding into the northbound lane and the path of the pickup.

Mason said he was about to turn around to stop the vehicle when the accident occurred.

All four occupants of the Mercury were killed. None wore their seatbelts, the FHP said.

The identities of the four, all from Miami, were not immediately released pending notification of their families.

The accident on the Seven Mile Bridge about four miles south of Marathon closed the two-lane link between Key West and Miami for 3 1/2 hours, the FHP said.

The driver of the pickup truck, Joseph C. Bridgton, N.J., and his 14- and 12-year-old sons were treated and released from Florida Keys Memorial Hospital. All three were wearing their safety belts, the FHP said.

Rapist arrested in Arizona

MICANOPY — A man accused of raping a woman and her 5-year-old daughter in their home here was arrested in Arizona, police said.

Leonard Victor Huggal, 42, was taken into custody Sunday near a rest area in Flagstaff, Ariz. The Arizona Highway Patrol had become suspicious about the car he was driving and ran a background check on it, said Alachua County sheriff's spokesman Emery Galtney.

The car was stolen in Micanopy on Tuesday, the day the warrant for Huggal's arrest on sexual battery charges was issued in the April 3 attack, Galtney said.

Huggal is accused of raping the 40-year-old woman and her daughter after binding them with duct tape. He knew the woman through her boyfriend, Galtney said.

Huggal, jailed in the Coconino County, Ariz., Jail in Flagstaff, will be returned to Gainesville to face charges of sexual battery of a child under 12 and automobile theft, Galtney said.

He said other charges are pending.

Tampa's oldest hospital burnt

TAMPA — Tampa's oldest hospital, already closed because it couldn't pay its debts, was dealt another indignity this weekend — a fire probably set by vagrants.

"It just breaks my heart," said Lucy Glosue, a neighbor to the abandoned 88-year-old Centro Asturiano Hospital. "I feel like crying."

It took 33 firefighters more than an hour Saturday morning to put out the blaze on the west side of the building, a landmark for Tampa's Spanish and Italian communities.

The fire may have been started by vagrants, officials said. Cigarettes and matches were found at the scene, Tampa Fire District Chief Eugene Shuler said. Less than 10 percent of the building was damaged, and the cost was estimated at $15,000, Shuler said.

First Florida Bank foreclosed on the hospital in 1990 when hospital administrators were unable to pay the bills.

Before then, more than 2,000 members of the social group Central Asturiano Club, which owned the 144-bed hospital, received hospital benefits for $20 a month.

STAFF REPORTER: One of the city's earliest social and cultural clubs was created in 1903 by Spaniards from Asturias, on the northern coast of Spain.

Freak accident takes boy

PENACOLA — A 4-year-old died two days after he dug a hole in the back yard of his family's home and fell in head-first.

Charlie Busbee of suburban Gulf Breeze died Saturday night at Sacred Heart Hospital, where he had been in critical condition since the accident Thursday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The boy was playing alone in the yard when his 13-year-old sister found him, said Chief Deputy Wes Cummings of the Santa Rosa County Sheriff's Department.

The bottom of the 3-foot-deep hole was dry sand and apparently collapsed around the boy's face when he fell into it, said Deputy Chief Richard Delp of the Midway Volunteer Fire Department. Authorities were uncertain how long the child's head was buried.

It is the third such death of a child in the Pensacola area in as many years.

In July 1991, 12-year-old Matthew McCormick died after he was buried in a tunnel he and other boys were digging in a sandy embankment at the Pensacola Naval Air Station.

Richard Nunn, 10, of Columbus, Miss., died in March 1993 a day after being accidentally buried in a 7-foot-deep hole he and friends had dug at Pensacola Beach where his family was vacationing.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Laughs hang in the balance

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

ST. PETERSBURG — A judge who believes there's room in the halls of justice for humor literally draws on experience to lampoon lawyers, clients and even himself — in cartoons.

"We all have a tendency to take ourselves a little too seriously," said Pinellas County Judge Stephen Rushing. "It's kind of an escape from the pressures to look at the lighter side."

That's exactly what Rushing's sarcastic courtroom characters have done for the past decade in legal and business journals across the nation. He recently put his panels in syndication, hoping to broaden his audience by capitalizing on the current feeding frenzy of jokes aimed at lawyers.

"Sharkworld," reads one cartoon. "Adults $5. Children $2. Attorneys free."

Another shows a group of lawyers at a power lunch and one of them asks: "Are you still fighting for truth and justice, or have you decided to make money?"

It's not just lawyers who are skewered. A client on trial in one cartoon gets an accusing finger pointed from heaven with the booming words: "He's guilty as sin." Jurors are shown using a dart board to reach their verdict. And judges are portrayed as holler-than-thou characters who in one cartoon walk on water and in another aren't sure whether to deem a porno movie obscene, demanding "Play it a couple more times!"

"There's a lot of people out there who don't want to be lawyers," Rushing said. "But most of the cartoons I do are meant to be funny, not vicious."

That humor springs from a county judge's daily toiling in the courtroom. Just as the people's court of small claims, petty crime and sometimes as many as 30 uncontested divorces in a row.

"It can be depressing, but some funny things do happen in the courtroom," said Rushing, adding he doesn't draw cartoons on the job but will jot down a quick idea when the mood strikes.

"Sometimes when I get ready to draw, it will be almost like there's a cartoon courtroom in my head. It's almost like I can see these little characters and I can almost freeze frame it to get that idea down."

The 44-year-old jurist, who was elected to the county bench four years ago, admits he's not the type of person to rattle off one-liners and funny stories. Cartoons have always been his hobby, even though he has never had a cartoon in his life.

He began drawing cartoons for his high school newspaper and continued that pastime with a daily strip at the University of Florida.

But with pressures of law school at Stetson University and a budding career as a public defender, prosecutor and private attorney, he put his hobby aside for a decade.

When he picked his pen back up in the early 1980s he sent in a few cartoons to the Florida Bar Journal, which has been publishing them ever since. Through largely word of mouth, nearly 30 other journals from Long Island to Alaska began requesting his cartoons and in 1987 he published a book compilation of his work.

"Who better to see the foibles that go on in court than a judge," said Judson Orrick, editor of the Florida Bar Journal in Tallahassee. "We obviously think they're funny."

Whether a wider audience will see his work remains to be seen. A syndicate is marketing his cartoons to publications worldwide under the title "Legal Insanity." And Rushing said a greeting card company has shown interest in using them in the near future.

"No matter what happens," the judge said, "I would still do the cartoons just for myself as a creative pastime."

NY woman found dead in DeBary

DEBARY — A New York college student who had headed to Daytona Beach for spring break was found shot to death, Volusia County deputies said.

The woman, tentatively identified as Christine M. Lazzaro, 20, of Rochester, N.Y., was scheduled to have arrived in Florida on Friday, said sheriff's spokeswoman Cheryl Downs.

Lazzaro was a student at Monroe Community College in Rochester, Downs said. Investigators were not immediately able to say if she had traveled alone or ever reached the beach.

A man driving to work discovered her clothed body about 7 a.m. Sunday. She had been shot, but the sheriff's department did not say where.

Downs said the woman carried identification and was wearing white shorts, a red-and-white checked top and black deck shoes.

Residents near where the body was found told investigators they had heard popping noises between 4 and 5 a.m. Sunday.

Seminole High class of 1948 to have their ninth reunion

By Julian Stenstrom
Herald Correspondent

For the ninth consecutive time the Seminole High School senior class of 1948 will convene this weekend in Sanford.

And, for the ninth consecutive time the 1948 senior class president Herbert E. Stenstrom will preside over most of the activities.

The class has met every five years for a weekend reunion.

Activities begin Friday night. There will be a banquet Saturday night and a continental breakfast will be served Sunday morning.

In addition to the reunions the class publishes an annual newsletter.

Frequently, annual picnics are held between reunions and there is usually a "Celery Fed" weekend at Daytona Beach.

Much credit for this closely knit class goes to Mona Mills Walker of Sanford. Just over 100 students graduated with the 1948 class and about 60 are still living. Usually 50 or more class members plus spouses attend the reunions.

Current addresses are known for all except O.W. Clark, Betty Hall DeLorenzo, Retired U.S. Coast Guard Captain Keith Schumacher, Chris Jensen, William Lincoln, Loren McGill and Frances Pavlick.

Many members are still "best friends." Dickie and Viola Skinner Frank of the same class will soon celebrate their 45th anniversary.

Two other couples "remet" at reunions are now husbands and wives.

They are Bill and Maggie Partin Inghram plus Dick and Betty Humphrey Tolleferud. All of these couples reside in Sanford.

Other grads who returned to Sanford when they retired are Dr. Wade Garner, Lillian Moran Keith, Retired U.S. Navy Captain John Root Jr., Hazel Routh Madden, Barbara Saunders Chapman and Maryanna Springer Rocky.

POLICE BRIEFS

Sheriff's office damaged

A 17-year old Winter Springs youth was arrested Friday for arson in an occupied building and criminal mischief for attempting to set fire to an interrogation room at the Seminole County Sheriff's Office, 1345 28th St., Sanford.

About $1,000 damage was done to a hidden ceiling camera. Police claim the teen held a lighter to a ceiling tile which concealed the camera. The lighter flame burned the metal strip holding the tile and damaged the camera. The juvenile had voluntarily gone to the sheriff's office to give information about an ongoing burglary investigation.

The teen was alone in the room about five minutes, according to the arrest report. The report states the juvenile was heard on a surveillance tape talking about the hidden camera. During the interview, the officer "observed him continually making eye contact with the hidden camera."

Approximately 80 people work in the office. "The defendant observed people in the building," the report states, "and he knew it was occupied when he used the lighter to start the fire."

After the incident, the teenager was taken to the juvenile detention center.

Bad birthday present

A Sanford woman was arrested on her birthday Friday, along with two men when Sanford Police served a search warrant at her residence at 1123 Oleander Ave..

Leticia Nychele Strickland, 22, was charged with possession of paraphernalia. Two men at the residence at the time also face drug charges. Michael Anthony Thompson, 27, 77 Castle Brewer Court is charged possession of crack cocaine, and John Ashford, Jr., 44, 89 Castle Brewer Court is charged with possession of drug paraphernalia. The police report states a small plastic container containing crack was found on Thompson and paraphernalia was found in Ashford's pocket. A search of the residence turned up paraphernalia in Strickland's bedroom, according to her arrest report.

Battery on ex-wife's friend

A Longwood man has been charged with battery with burglary and criminal mischief after an attack on a man he found in his ex-wife's bedroom last month.

On March 11, Richard Thomas Grimaldi, 46, 157 Durham Road, allegedly entered his ex-wife's house through an unlocked door and went up to her bedroom. A man with her went into the bathroom and locked the door. Grimaldi broke down the door and began hitting him stating he would "kill him" if he found the man there again.

A few days later, Grimaldi told police he went to the house because his 23-year-old son said he was locked out and there was a strange car in the garage. The suspect said he became angry when he got no response at the front door and sought entry in the back. Although he said he may have been "legally wrong" but "morally" did what any father would do. He denied he threatened the other man.

Burglary alleged

Dominic Michael Giambri, 58, 1514 1/2 Charlotte Lane, Orlando, was charged with burglary and criminal mischief Friday after using a key to get into a Longwood house where he used to live. The woman at the Springwood Circle house said he did not have permission to still have the key.

A Sanford woman was charged with battery (domestic violence) after she began hitting her boyfriend in front of a policeman called to the scene. Henrene Collins, 32, 2521 Byrd Ave., Sanford was jailed after the dispute erupted at 3:00 a.m. Friday.

When police arrived at the residence, the victim was lying on top of Collins, holding her arms down trying to calm her. When she was allowed to get up, the police report said, Collins struck the man in the face and kicked him in the leg in front of the policeman. The two were living together and the man said the altercation occurred because he did not want to have sex with the defendant. The man was issued a domestic violence package and advised of his right to obtain an emergency injunction for protection.

Kinkajou carcass returned

WEST PALM BEACH — The battered body of Katie the kinkajou was returned to Dreher Park Zoo, five days after the animal vanished from its cage.

Zoo officials who were too upset Sunday to ask the name of the woman who brought them the carcass of the 8-pound raccoonlike creature. They also didn't know if Katie had been beaten to death or struck by an automobile.

Two monkeys taken the night before Katie disappeared were returned to the zoo Friday after being found in a canary cage at the home of Dennis Holden, 18, of suburban West Palm Beach. Holden, who has been linked to a satanic cult, was being held Sunday at the Palm Beach County Jail without bail.

The night the monkeys were taken, someone released Katie as well. Zoo officials found the South American mammal and a third monkey wandering nearby April 5. But someone cut into Katie's cage again that night.

Pay tribute to Vietnam vets

Most ex-service men and women who fought in our nation's various wars have no problem identifying themselves as veterans. Those who served during the Vietnam conflict, however, are different. With the public demonstrations that were held during the war, and disagreements over whether this nation should even be involved, some vets still hesitate to mention their service participation.

Next week, veterans of the conflict will be gathering together in a nationwide reunion in Central Florida. Approximately 100,000 are expected at the week-long event in Melbourne.

Gary Smith, one of the organizers has expressed the hope that veterans who have hesitated to mention the war to avoid criticism, will come together and learn that people do care about them.

They, as their counterparts in the World Wars, left their jobs and families, and put their very lives on the line. The actual decision to get our people involved came from the government. If there is disagreement over it, feelings should have been directed in that area, not against service personnel.

Regardless of whether or not a person agrees with the reasons behind the conflict, those who served in the military services of this nation deserve to be appreciated.

There are many Vietnam war veterans in Sanford and Seminole County. They served their country well, and should have no shame or embarrassment associated with military service. Many will attend the gathering in Melbourne next week.

In all, 58,156 men and women gave their lives during the Vietnam War. They should be honored and remembered.

Those who returned deserve our thanks for the risks they took and the price they paid.

In recognition of this Vietnam veterans reunion event, we salute these men and women for stepping forward and serving their country.

LETTERS

Rearranging earth

My thanks to Dorothy McReynolds for her timely letter in the March 28th Sanford Herald on a critical subject, borrow pits. As has been stated, a neighborhood is no place for a borrow pit, and this applies to the Joe Baker borrow pit on Sanford Avenue near the expressway.

This means money for the owner of the borrow pit and helps White Construction Co. (who is building the expressway) make more profit, but will more than likely cause problems to our water supply, and leave a blight on a neighborhood forever, which is unacceptable. Our thanks to Commissioner Furlong for voting sensibly against the Sid Vihlen Jr. borrow pit.

Recently, it was mentioned on the local news, that the outlook concerning the underground water supply in Seminole County has become serious. Our county commissioners need to heed this warning. When man tries to rearrange the earth that God has made, we are in big trouble.

Speech code for insensitive profs

In September 1989, Federal District Judge Averm Cohn thumpingly declared the University of Michigan's speech code for students unconstitutional. Intended to prevent a hostile learning atmosphere on campus for women, blacks, gays and lesbians or the handicapped, the policy punished both verbal and physical "discriminatory harassment."

Judge Cohn had no problem with the section on physical harassment but ruled that the prohibition of offensive language was too vague, overly broad and indeed offensive to the First Amendment.

The university's administration refused to be deterred from its civilizing mission. There is in our place at the University of Michigan an "Interim Policy on Discriminatory Harassment by Faculty and Staff in the University Environment." To my knowledge, this is the only college or university speech code in the country directed solely at faculty and staff in their contact with students.

Until now, college policing of language has focused on insensitive students. And that is why — according to Elsa Cole, the university's general counsel — it is only fair that the faculty should now finally be accountable for what they say that might offend.

However, I have spoken to a number of University of Michigan faculty members who do not appreciate the kind of equality that inhibits their freedom of speech. Yet many of them only murmur in dissent.

The language of this faculty speech code is just as vague and overbroad as the yoke from which students at the University of Michigan were liberated in 1989. At issue is discriminatory speech based on "race, color, creed, religion, national origin, sexual orientation, ancestry, age, marital status, handicap, Vietnam-era veteran status."

Subject to disciplinary tribunals is language in those categories — and here is the chilling impact — that "has the purpose or effect of creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive environment for academic pursuits, employment, housing, or participation in a university activity."

There are no further definitions of "intimidating," "hostile" or "offensive."

As one Michigan law school professor, Robert Harris, told me, he fears that this "censorship regime" will result in "a large 'penumbra of deterrence.' Much conduct that is not outlawed by this policy — though who can tell what is and what isn't — will be deterred anyhow, as people stay far, far away from the danger zone."

This policing of faculty speech is not happening at a rigidly sectarian college but at one of the nation's more distinguished public universities. The new Fiske Guide to Colleges approvingly quotes a student there as saying the academic scene is "often exciting and always enlightening."

Maybe not. Always

Why would so important a university insist on casting a pall of verbal orthodoxy over the faculty? A member of that faculty provides a convincing explanation:

"What we see in this censorship proposal is a bowing to the wishes of a collection of groups, all of whom have been socially oppressed historically or recently, or ethnic minorities, women, gays, the handicapped."

Until now, college policing of language has focused on insensitive students.

HODDING CARTER

Let's put genie back in bottle

"Their determination to acquire weapons of mass destruction, I think, leaves Iran as an international outlaw."

With those words, addressed to Congress, Secretary of State Warren Christopher announced a new, tougher American position on Iran's relentless quest for the nuclear bomb. To decry, however, is not the same thing as to prevent. What remains is for the Clinton administration to put in place a comprehensive approach to nuclear proliferation. Yesterday would not be too soon.

Nothing better illustrates just how critical the issue has become than the spate of headlines that preceded Christopher's appearance before a House Appropriations Committee panel last week. Among them:

South Africa admitted that it had successfully developed a nuclear weapons program and was now abandoning it. North Korea, on the pretext that it was outraged by excessive demands for inspection of its nuclear facilities, withdrew from the Non-Proliferation Treaty. A hair-raising article in The New Yorker laid out the story of narrowly averted nuclear war between India and Pakistan during the Bush presidency. And in downtown Manhattan, the massive explosion that rocked the World Trade Center was an emphatic reminder of how easily a nuclear device might have been substituted for the relatively primitive charge that was used. What all those events underlined was the chilling, though unstated, message in Warren Christopher's condemnation of Tehran. The fact is that he could have substituted the names of at least a half-dozen other nations for Iran's. The nuclear genie is not only out of the bottle, it has touched down on every continent in the world.

Sadly enough, the United States is among the leading culprits in the story. For reasons of alleged necessity during the Cold War, we applied a double standard to our non-proliferation policy. Unfriendly regimes such as Iraq were hector, pressured and reprimanded repeatedly. Nations whose cooperation in other fields was deemed necessary, as with Pakistan and South Africa, or whose close association with the United States encouraged benign tolerance, such as Israel, were admonished privately but led to understand privately that nothing would get in the way of more important business.

The United States also repeatedly demanded that other nations watch what it said rather than what it did. While calling for universal adherence to the Non-Proliferation Treaty, it refused to take steps that might cap its own nuclear activities. Washington backed away from a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty with the former Soviet Union because U.S. weapons makers claimed it would weaken our huge nuclear arsenal. Each time we conducted an underground test, governments interested in developing their own nuclear capability would make note of our hypocrisy. Each time we looked away as a friendly regime took another step toward developing or adding to its weapons of mass destruction, less friendly countries were encouraged in their own, similar pursuits.

The end of the Cold War offered the hope that non-proliferation would become a serious, even-handed pursuit. The revelations about the full extent of Iraq's nuclear program and the difficulties faced by the International Atomic Energy Agency (I.A.E.A.) in verifying Baghdad's stand-down were sobering. Even as tentative agreements between the United States and the four nuclear-armed inheritor states of the old Soviet Union offered hope that the threat of a nuclear holocaust had passed, the specter of a world made safe for "lesser" nuclear engagements began to loom larger.

Fourteen months ago Les Aspin offered a paper titled "From Deterrence to Denuking: Dealing with Proliferation in the 1990s." What he wrote as a congressman should be the starting point for the administration he now serves as secretary of defense. Aspin put the case simply and baldly: "The proliferation of nuclear weapons is now the chief security threat we face in the post-Soviet era."

Aspin offered a number of recommendations, some of which have been partially met and all of which are eminently sensible. American laws governing the sale abroad of equipment and material that might be used in a nuclear weapons program have been strengthened. The I.A.E.A., though still more a paper tiger than a strict regulator, has taken on a new bite. Cooperation between Russia and the United States in the non-proliferation field continues to grow.

But the bad news, and even worse developments, outweighs the good. China, for reasons of greed and prestige, has been recklessly supplying would-be proliferators such as Iran. So has North Korea, even as it builds its own capacity. Western business and industry remains infested with companies willing to put profit ahead of common sense or international security.

To decry, however, is not the same thing as to prevent.

Mining and grazing issue worries Dems

WASHINGTON — In his decision to withdraw proposed increases to grazing fees and mining royalties on federal land, President Clinton was heeding political warnings raised in private meetings with Western senators that it could cost Democrats control of the Senate in 1994.

Clinton angered environmentalists by buckling to regional pressure and ultimately removing fees for grazing and mining from his budget. Though the administration sought to package the compromise as an attempt to retain the support of Western senators for his economic package, electoral politics played a much larger role during weeks of negotiations than either the White House or Congress is publicly acknowledging.

That was illustrated most dramatically during a White House meeting last month between Clinton and the "Gang of Nine" senators who forced Clinton's early retreat. Led by Democratic senators Max Baucus, Mont., and Ben Nighthorse Campbell, Colo., the group included Dennis DeConcini, Ariz.; Kent Conrad, N.D.; Byron Dorgan, N.D.; Harry Reid, Nev.; Richard Bryan, Nev.; James Exon, Neb.; and Tom Daschle, S.D.

According to sources, the more than hour-long White House meeting was unusually blunt, with nearly every senator raising the subject of the 1994 midterm elections — and the fact that the president was in danger of imperiling the gains made in the last election when he won several traditionally GOP states in the West.

"This president made inroads in traditional Republican territory," explained one Democratic strategist. "We don't want to lose those inroads. We want to build on that. We can't have a repeat of Jimmy Carter by writing off the West."

Clinton got an earful of electoral politics during the White House meeting. It's reducible to some simple math. Democrats must defend 22 Senate seats compared to just 12 for the GOP in 1994. Currently, the balance in the Senate is 58 seats for the Democrats to 42 seats for the Republicans. Another factor favoring Republicans is that the party that has lost the presidential election has gained Senate seats in 11 of the last 14 midterm elections.

If Republicans capture control of the Senate next year, according to Republicans and Democrats, Clinton would be rendered a lame duck with two years left in his presidency. "We have the opportunity to slice the Clinton presidency in half," one senior Republican strategist told us, confirming the Democrats' worst fears. These were the types of fears that permeated the White House meeting, where Clinton impressed the senators with his copious note-taking and attentiveness.

One source close to the negotiations describes the meeting this way: "I know one of the themes that was sounded throughout was, 'Look, you've done better in our part of the country than any Democrat in recent history. We have a number of Senate races that are competitive. And we're not just talking about (our) incumbents. We have three very vulnerable Republicans in the West, too.'"

Those three Republican senators are Slade Gorton of Washington, Conrad Burns of Montana and Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming. Wallop reportedly may not even run for re-election.

These senators will be watching to make sure the administration stays "reasonable" as it studies smaller increases in grazing fees, which it can raise without the approval of Congress.

According to sources, the more than hour-long White House meeting was unusually blunt.

the expanded facilities to accommodate, among other things, the Academy of Health Careers, which will begin operations in August.

The Academy is designed to not only create a specific career center for the district, but to also increase the student population at Seminole High School. The academy is much like a magnet school.

It is expected to draw about 100 additional students to the school for the next school year.

There is also a request to build an art suite, an exceptional education suite, a closed circuit television studio and several classrooms.

According to Diane Kramer, the district's executive director of facilities planning, the expansion will allow an additional 835 students to be enrolled at Seminole High if needed.

While growth studies of the district show that much of the growth is taking place in the eastern part of the county, near Winter Springs and Tuskawilla, there is also a great deal of growth in the Sanford and northwestern Lake Mary from which Seminole High draws its students. The board is being asked to schedule a work session to discuss the matter.

Dollar figures for the proposed work have not yet been established as the district is still trying to determine what work the school and the school board will agree needs to be done. It is estimated that if all of the requested work is done, the cost to the district for the improvements will be about $13 million.

The work will probably be done in several phases over the next few years once a master plan is approved.

The interdenominational service included: First United Methodist Church, First Presbyterian Church, First Baptist Church, Congregational Christian Church, Freedom Assembly of God, Family Worship Center, Ambassadors for Christ, Restoration Community Church, Faith Bible Ministries and Sanford Meadows Seventh-Day Adventist Church. Mayor Bettye Smith accompanied some of the groups on the piano.

The Rev. Jim Cornell of First Baptist Church, Sanford, led the congregation in a number of popular hymns to warm the hearts and souls of the audience.

As the service came to a close, Rev. Cornell asked all of the members of the singing groups to come together as a choir and lift their voices with the congregation in praise of His name.

The Rev. Tom Tkachuk gave thanks to God, and everyone who attended the service, as the crowd dispersed to continue festivities with family and friends.

attorney. No decision was reached by press time today.

McGregor's exposure to anti-abortion activism moved from his courtroom to his home Sunday when about 50 protesters picketed in front of his Geneva residence. They picketed from 5 p.m. until 6 p.m. then left, said Sheriff Don Eslinger. The protesters were quiet and violated no laws, Eslinger said.

They did distribute a flyer with McGregor's address and telephone number, said Eslinger.

Distribution of the information violates no law because McGregor is a public official, said Eslinger.

McGregor could not be reached this morning, but his wife, Mona McGregor, said the protesters were peaceful.

"We were aware they were out there," said Mona McGregor. "They were off the property. We didn't talk to them."

Eslinger said the protesters appeared at McGregor's home shortly after the three vans arrived from Brevard County bearing the 35 detainees. About 100 pro-life protesters appeared at the jail, said Eslinger.

Last Thursday, McGregor ordered all anti-abortion protesters to stay outside a boundary line set 36 feet from a Melbourne abortion clinic and 300 feet from the homes of clinic employees. McGregor made the ruling after finding violations of a less-restrictive 1992 order had been violated.

The decision did not affect the Womens Medical Clinic in Winter Springs. No protests were reported at that clinic this weekend.

Trash contract bid protested in Longwood

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — An unsuccessful bidder for the Longwood garbage collection contract is protesting the awarding of the contract scheduled tonight by the city commissioners. The awarding of the contract to low bidder Waste Management, Inc. is being protested by Industrial Waste Service (IWS), which submitted the second lowest bid. IWS holds the current contract.

Longwood City Commissioners are conducting the first reading of an ordinance awarding the contract to Waste Management Inc.

On March 24 at the bid opening, six bidders proposed unit prices for the garbage collection contract. IWS claims Waste Management submitted a bid with a "household total" of $10.95. A corrected extension totalled $11.40. After all the other bids were opened, Waste Management presented the city staff with a letter indicating it would honor the incorrect amount of $10.95, rather than the actual extension of bid prices of $11.40.

IWS, which bid $11.61 per household, is asking the commission to throw out all the bids or award the contract to a company which did not submit the lowest bid. IWS claims Waste Management did not correct its error before the bids were opened and that by waiting until all bids were known provided the company an unfair advantage.

IWS Attorney Jan Albanese's letter to the commission states, "Our position remains firm that the city's acceptance of Waste Management, Inc.'s revised bid of $10.95 (when the unit prices on the bid form clearly amounted to $11.40) breached

Families gather for fun

The family fun days in Ft. Mellon Park for children and families, sponsored by Mike Vallot and his family and friends, have been drawing large crowds over the last couple of years.

The Easter Day celebration held there yesterday drew nearly a thousand, from the young to the old.

There were dance contests and celebrations of the elderly.

Vallot and his family worked furiously through the hot afternoon to grill enough hot dogs and hamburgers for the hungry crowd, while Eugene "Mean Gene" Butler provided the music.

Astronauts begin steps to retrieve science spacecraft

By SUSAN NIGHTOWER Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Discovery's crew fired the space shuttle's jets today and began positioning the ship to fetch a retrievable satellite they had dropped off on an automated, two-day solar duty... The crew of five freed the shiny little gold-colored spacecraft Sunday and plans to pick it up on Tuesday...

"But certainly the observations ... are going to take a giant step toward helping the solar physicists understand just how the solar wind is generated and how it propagates and, ultimately, how it affects all of us here on planet Earth."

The shuttle reached a maximum distance of about 200 miles behind the Spartan spacecraft at this morning's engine firing. The burn pushed Discovery into a slightly lower orbit, meaning it began traveling faster than its satellite quarry and will slowly catch up to it by Tuesday morning...

After releasing the satellite early Sunday, Discovery's astronaut launched into the second of their four planned sets of solar observations. The shuttle holds four instruments to measure solar energy and three to study the atmosphere...

Sunday evening, astronaut Michael Foale also took a 10-minute break to report for cable television's The Weather Channel, describing the clouds over Russia and northern China...

"As we gently go from the sunlit side into the dark side, you get this amazingly deep blue, violet, then black, wraps into gray as it crosses the globe," Foale said.

"It's really amazing and I'm afraid we have not yet been able to capture it in film because of the range of light that we see," he said.

Five inmates dead in prison riot

By JIM PRICHARD Associated Press Writer

LUCASVILLE, Ohio — Five prisoners died at the hands of fellow inmates who also held eight guards hostage early today in the tense aftermath of a riot at one of Ohio's toughest prisons, authorities said... At least 18 other people were injured at the maximum security Southern Ohio Correctional Facility, including 10 guards and five inmates, said Sharron Kornegay, spokeswoman for the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction...

ere were involved. Negotiators persuaded the inmates early today to release the bodies of the five dead prisoners, who apparently had been beaten to death, Ms. Kornegay said.

"They suffered extensive injuries," she said. "I think it's probably pretty obvious who killed them. Our staff wouldn't do that."

The inmates released a list of 19 demands, including a request to speak to the media, Ms. Kornegay said. The other demands dealt with prison rules, she said, declining to elaborate.

A call by a pool reporter to an inmate was cut short by prison officials who said they wanted more information first from the prisoners about the hostages. A demand by inmates to appear live on a Columbus TV station was rejected by prison officials.

One guard was hospitalized today in fair condition. At least 10 other people from the prison were treated at hospitals for minor injuries and released. Conditions of the others were not immediately available.

About 200 prisoners who didn't want to be part of the disturbance were moved from a recreation yard early this morning to an adjacent gymnasium secured by prison officials, Ms. Kornegay said.

The remaining 500 inmates remained in the cellblock talking to negotiators.

Scioto County Sheriff's Senior Dispatcher Phil Malone described the scene Sunday as a "full-scale riot."

Ms. Kornegay said she did not know where the fighting began. A union official representing the prison guards said he was told it began at the end of the afternoon recreation period in the five-acre recreation yard.

There are usually about 130 guards assigned to the shift, but as few as 80 may have been on duty because of the Easter holiday, said Don Bargent, regional staff representative of American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 11.

Water was turned off in the L block after inmates tried to flood the area, but electricity was still on early today. The rest of the prison, which holds 1,819 inmates, including some of the state's most dangerous, was in a lockdown.

Students take the challenge

PTA involves student body in spring fundraiser during P.E. class

By SARABECCA ROSIER
Herald Columnist

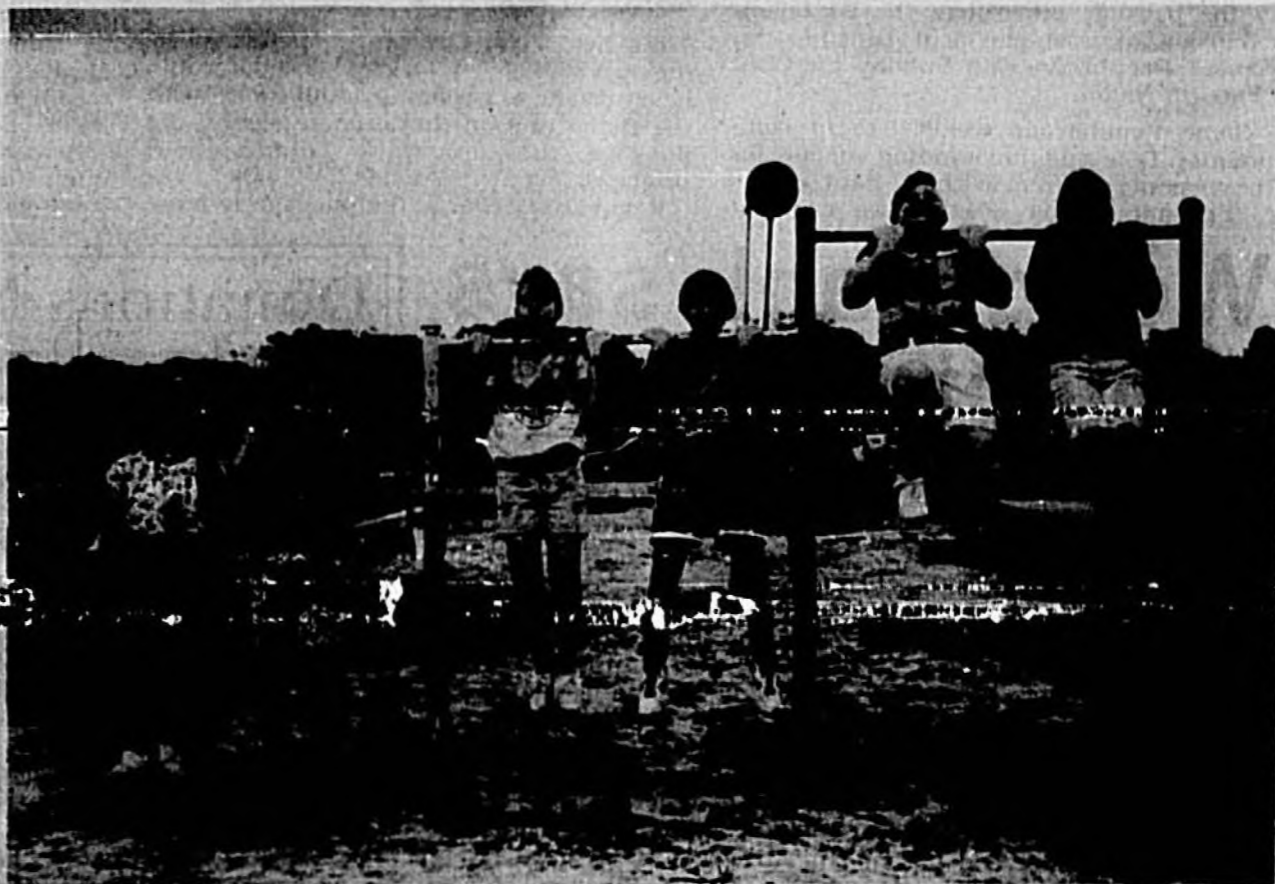

The First Annual Lake Mary Elementary Great Obstacle Challenge put together by the Ways and Means team of the PTA as their spring fund-raiser was held during physical education classes the week of Mar. 19 through Apr. 2.

Students in kindergarten through 5th grades had a series of 15 "obstacles" (such as hopscotch, monkey bars, tunnel walk, crab walk, jump rope, climbing, etc.) to "challenge." They were allowed to complete the course twice for a maximum of 30 obstacles.

Each student had received a "pledge envelope" a couple of weeks prior to this obstacle challenge and were to bring them on the day of their assigned "challenge" time. Then the students completed the obstacle course on their scheduled PE day. The envelopes were recorded by the PTA and Dividends and the envelopes with the number of completed obstacles were sent home with the students so that they could collect the pledges.

All monies are to be returned by the deadline of Monday, Apr. 12.

The entire Great Obstacle Challenge was run by the volunteers of Lake Mary Elementary and the PTA as requested and voted on by the PTA membership at a general membership meeting. All proceeds will remain at Lake Mary Elementary to finance school improvements. Student rewards will be as follows: one Lake Mary Elementary pencil per sponsor (for example, if the student has 10 sponsors, the student will receive 10 pencils), one Lake Mary Elementary cup or visor in addition to the pencils for those students who collect $25. Those students who collect $50 will receive the above-mentioned items and a Great Obstacle Challenge T-shirt. The 50 students who collect the highest amount of money will each receive a Lake Mary Elementary bookbag filled with merchandise and coupons donated by local merchants and all the other incentives, according to Lois Mahoney and Marie Braddock, PTA Ways and Means chairwomen. "Also, in addition to the above-mentioned prizes, each student who participated in the challenge and brought in their pledges will be entered in a drawing to be held on Apr. 19 for one item/coupon donated by the following local businesses: J.L. Hammett Co., Chill's, Litchfield Theatres, Fairlane Bowling, The Orlando Magic, Shoney's, Starbucks and Pizza Hut."

Cancer Society fund-raiser draws sell-out crowd

The Sanford-Lake Mary Cancer Society presented a luncheon and fashion show fund-raiser on Wednesday, Mar. 31, at the Alaqua Country Club to a sell-out crowd!

Members of the board who worked on this luncheon to make it a success were as follows: Emy Bill, Nancy Morgan and Edith McNeill along with friends, Joyce Malone, Lynda Moncrief, Susie Reid, Amelia Royster, Jean Clonts, Martha Yancey, Melinda Wimbish, Sally Rosemond and Daria Lanier.

The board wishes to express its heartfelt appreciation to the following businesses and friends who donated products, services and underwriting dollars to make the event possible: Jacobson's, The Alaqua Country Club, HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital, Greene, Dycus and Company, P.A., Kirchhoff and Associates, Worldwide Orchids, Ixora Garden Blub, Seminole Flower Shop, Bill Edwards, DMS, John B. Wimbish, Dennis Black (Sanford Printing), Security National Bank, Kmart 7228 (Sanford), Lake County Pottery, The Peabody Hotel, Molly Pflueger, Thomas A. Speer.

Judy Wimbish, the chairwoman of the event, said this was a most unusual fund-raiser. "The committee never had a committee meeting, I just used Mr. Bell's wonderful invention," said Wimbish. "Everyone I called said 'yes' with such enthusiasm, it was just great."

A guest speaker was Barbara West of WFTV Channel 9 who mentioned that on May 1 at the studio there would be free screenings for cancer. They are taking reservations for 2000 people. For reservations, call Channel 9's promotions department. Barbara West also spoke about some breakthroughs in the treatment of cancerous tumors.

Following the guest speaker, Shirley Johnson, fashion coordinator of Jacobson's, who herself is a cancer survivor, put on a lovely showing of some enchanting and colorful spring fashions and new looks. The charming and charismatic models displayed their attire by walking around the many, many tables while attendees were enjoying lunch.

The spring theme was also brought out by the table settings with potted orchid centerpieces from Worldwide Orchids and pottery lamps from Lake County Pottery.

Two $110 mammograms were given away as door prizes.

Passover (Pesach)

During the eight day period of Apr. 5 through Apr. 13, the Jewish holiday of Passover, in English, or Pesach, in Hebrew, is celebrated the world over. This is the very first festival the Jewish people ever observed.

The first Pesach took place in Egypt thousands of years ago. The first two nights are celebrated with a seder which brings families and friends together to eat and drink, sing, and recite together the old - yet, ever new story of the exodus from Egyptian slavery.

Each seder guest has a copy of the Haggadah. Haggadah means "to tell" and that is the purpose of the seder - to tell the dramatic and exciting events that Pesach recalls.

Temple Israel where many children from the Lake Mary/Heathrow area attend, put on a children's pre-seder for Passover. Each class, Alph, Bet, Gimmel and Hay made something special for the seder. Bet class decorated an aluminum plate to be used as the seder plate for each of the classes. The seder plate holds bitter herbs (representing bitter times); Karpas (greens) representing the coming of Spring; roasted bone (representing the lamb offering); Charoset (chopped apples, nuts, cinnamon and wine) representing the mortar used to build dwellings in the desert during the 40-year exodus; a roasted egg, and another green. All these items are symbolic of the hardships the Jewish people encountered on their exodus from Egypt and slavery.

Rabbi Londy conducted the children's seder. A special guest, Pastor Henry Watson, watched to learn about the seder so he could in turn show his congregation how to put one on.

Dee Lamar, Emy Bill and chairwoman of the event Judy Wimbish, are all members of the Lake Mary-Sanford Cancer Society.

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Advertise what people want! Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale! Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask, "How much is this?" Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good place for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly areas. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for "Under $1". Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE with purchase of $3". Remember the youngsters, too. Encourage this with small, low-priced items that are appropriate for this purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events.
9. Combine your efforts! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
10. Be specific! When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list individual items. Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers.
11. Be generous! If you have items left over, give them to a charitable organization. If you see that some items are not moving well during the sale, mark them down during the last hours. Remember, the prime reason for holding the sale is to turn your unwanted items into cash!

Stimulus package a hard sell

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Democrats are seeking compromises to win Senate passage of President Clinton's stalled economic stimulus package, but GOP leader Bob Dole says the $16.3 billion measure may be dead.

Republicans are unlikely to support much in the package other than the $4 billion extension of unemployment benefits, the Kansas Republican said Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Some Republicans would like to compromise, Dole said, but winning support for the spending program will be a "hard sell."

"I'm not certain whether we can put together a package that would satisfy Republicans and President Clinton, so if they can't get closure, there may not be a package," he said.

Democrats joining Dole on the Sunday news programs, including Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, said the administration was open to changes that could save the measure.

But Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," said it would be a mistake to get in a "bidding war" with the Democrats on the ultimate size of the package "because we're talking about principle."

Republicans charge the package is more about pork barrel spending than job creation and have mounted a filibuster that has threatened Clinton with his first major legislative defeat.

With 57 seats in the Senate, the Democrats have been unable to muster the 60 votes necessary to end the filibuster.

Dole denied that the Republicans were taking revenge for past Democratic swipes at Republican administrations.

But "when I hear the crocodile tears shed by some of my Democratic colleagues, I always go back and check their voting record and how they tried to block President Bush," he said.

Bentsen indicated the administration might consider delays in implementing some of the spending.

World Bank says projects failing

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The World Bank, which has loaned more than $300 billion to developing countries over the last half century, acknowledges in an internal report it has seen a dramatic rise in the number of projects gone sour.

The number of bank-financed projects with "major problems" doubled over the last decade, reaching a high of one out of five, or 374 out of the 1,870 programs it backed in 1991.

"Deterioration has accelerated over the past three years," said the report, which covered the bank's performance through 1991. The internal audit was made public recently.

The report's authors cited several reasons for failures.

In some instances, they blamed countries for unwillingness to try new methods. In others, they faulted the design of particular programs or the bank's failure to make periodic follow-up visits.

Mostly, though, they blamed bad economic conditions through the entire 1980s in Africa, Latin America and part of Asia that made it harder for the borrowing governments to pay their share of the projects.

The bank says there was a modest improvement in 1992, mostly because some of the worst performing projects were closed. As a result, it said the percentage of problem projects dropped from 20 percent to 18 percent.

The World Bank is owned by 175 countries, both borrowers and lenders, with the U.S. government holding the largest block of shares. The United States contributes about $1 billion a year for loans.

Tests uncover weakening in Boeing wings

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Computer-aided metallurgical tests may have uncovered some clues to help explain the crashes of two Boeing 747 cargo jets in Amsterdam and in Taiwan, according to a published report.

The Washington Post, quoting Federal Aviation Administration officials, said Sunday that Boeing Co. computer simulations found that fuse pins that hold the engines onto the wing of the jumbo jet may react under certain conditions in a way that causes them to break long before engineers had anticipated.

FAA officials knowledgeable about the findings could not be reached Sunday. An agency spokesman, Fred Farrar, said he had no knowledge of the tests reportedly conducted by the Boeing Co.

But the Post quoted officials of the FAA and the National Transportation Safety Board as saying the fuse pins on more than 900 Boeing 747s are strong enough to support the engines properly and pose no safety concerns.

However, the Boeing tests showed that if such pins are corroded or have cracks they may be more susceptible to breaking than previously believed, the newspaper said.

Since the crash last October of a Boeing 747 cargo jet belonging to El Al airlines in Amsterdam, the FAA and Boeing has required closer inspections of the mounting pins to assure they are not corroded or cracking. In both the El Al crash Oct. 4, 1992, and the crash of a China Airlines 747 in Taiwan on Dec. 21, 1991, an engine ripped away from the wing as the jets were climbing after takeoff.

The Post quoted Anthony Broderick, the FAA's associate administrator for regulation and certification, as saying that the Boeing simulations showed the fuse pins reacting under load in an unexpected way that produces eight to 10 times greater stress than engineers anticipated.

While crack-free and corrosion-free pins would still hold up, those that might be corroded or cracked could break, the newspaper said.

It said Broderick believes the new tests show a "credible, reasonable explanation" why the engine pins — about the size of a soda can — on two Boeing 747s broke. Attempts to reach Broderick on Sunday were unsuccessful.

The computer program is being used to validate Boeing's third design of fuse pins, which is nearly complete, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported.

Boeing plans to issue the newly designed pins to airlines this summer. The new pin will be twice as thick as the existing model, which has walls less than a quarter-inch thick at their smallest point.

SANFORD — One divisional leader was upended while the other barely hung on Saturday in Sanford Recreation Little Major Baseball League play at Fort Mellon's Roy Holler Field.

Terrance Daniels and Freddie Hawkins hit back-to-back home runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to rally the undefeated and National Division-leading Railroader Cubs to a 10-9 win over the Sanford Rotary Breakfast Expos.

Later, the American Division-leading Disabled American Veteran Royals suffered their first loss of the season, dropping a 14-9 decision to the Sunniland Red Sox.

In other games played Saturday, the Rinker Material Dodgers blanked the Monroe Harbour Pirates 18-0; the Fisher, Laurence and Deen Blue Jays topped the American Legion Cardinals 9-1; and the Security National Bank Orioles doubled up the score on the First Union A's, 8-4.

The Cubs (7-0) sit atop the National Division trailed by the Dodgers (6-1), Expos (3-4), Cardinals (2-5), and Pirates (0-7). Following the Royals (6-1) in the American Division standings are the Red Sox (5-2), Blue Jays (4-3), Orioles (2-5), and A's (0-7).

SANFORD — The Senior Girls saved the best for last while the Junior Girls found out that 13 was a lucky number in City of Sanford Recreation & Parks Department Softball Spring League action at the Ft. Mellon Softball Field Saturday afternoon.

In the Junior Girls League, the Sanford Optimist Club whipped the Rotary Breakfast Club 13-2 and St. John's River Cruises whitewashed Nichols Marine Center 13-0.

Marlins, WGTO provide reason to carry radio

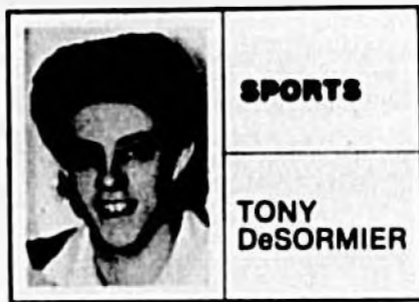

Before heading out to cover an event, I have a mental checklist that I go through of items that I might need before the night is out ... wallet, keys, watch, hat, jacket, scorebook, notepad, computer, and whatever I happen to be reading at the time.

This year, I've added a radio to the list. Why? Baseball, specifically, Florida Marlins baseball.

You don't need me to tell you the historical ramifications of the Marlins. And if you don't know, then you don't care and don't need to be bored with it here.

Anyway ... When the announcement came that Florida would be getting a team, the first thing that came to my mind was that I would finally be reunited with the simple but thoroughly enjoyable pastime of listening to games on the radio.

Going to games isn't that big a deal. Atlanta's just about as close and Vicki and I always plan our annual summer trip to

SPORTS

TONY DeSORMIER

Massachusetts around a Red Sox homestand. And, despite the way that CBS botched its television contract with Major League Baseball and the playground squabble between Cablevision and the Sunshine Network, there's plenty of opportunities to watch games on television.

But listening to games on the radio ... now we're talking big-time summertime fun.

Thank you, WGTO. Perhaps it's because I grew up 90 minutes away from Fenway (a jaunt I wouldn't think twice of undertaking today, but a trek of unimaginable dimensions to a 10-year-old), but I heard more Sox games than I saw every season until I left for college.

And it's not just the Red Sox game, but all the games, the updates of contests underway across the country (now two countries), developing pennant races, trades, injuries, happenings in the minor leagues, and the like.

I could recognize Ned Martin's voice before anyone else's.

Across Florida, there are radio stations in the cities that serve as spring training sites which carry the games of the club that visit each winter. A Winter Haven station carried Red Sox games, for example, but you can only pick up its signal along a two-mile stretch of Interstate 4.

On clear nights when the phase of the moon was right, you could hold your radio so that its antenna would point just so and pick up the Braves from Atlanta, the Cardinals in St. Louis or the Cubs out of Chicago.

The only problem with that is that some local signal (invariably some religious station or political talk show screaming about this or that) almost always insists on bleeding over just when you get to "... and here's the pitch."

No longer. WGTO has already done sports fans in Central Florida a favor by carrying the Tampa Bay Lightning broadcasts. Listening to hockey takes a little getting used to, especially if you're not very familiar with the sport. I'd listen to the games whenever I could, but since I spend most of the winters in gyms, which are notorious for poor radio reception, I didn't bother carrying a radio.

But now, being able to listen to baseball games on the radio is an added incentive to head to baseball and softball games and the odd track meet. We can even pick up WGTO (static-riddled, unfortunately) inside the Sanford Herald office.

Thank you, I look forward to many wonderful hours with you, my radio, and the Florida Marlins this summer.

Daylilies thrive in Florida

Colorful pest-free plants have a long blooming period

Daylilies are among the most popular perennials grown in Florida. These hardy, fleshy rooted plants are relatively pest-free and have a long blooming period. Plants are available in a wide variety of flower types, colors and growth habits. The present flower color selection includes shades of yellow, orange, red, pink, purple, near white and bi-colors.

The adaptability of daylilies to a variety of cultural conditions and the wide variety of colors and plant sizes make them well-suited for landscape use. Like most perennials they are most effective when massed. Clumps of 10 plants or more of the same color will give the best display. Daylilies can be used effectively as foundation plantings to contrast nearby evergreen shrubbery. Keep in mind the color of the building material when selecting varieties. Bright flower colors, such as yellow, should be used against dark backgrounds, and dark flower colors used against white or light backgrounds.

Daylilies over 36 inches tall are suitable for foundation plantings, the back of daylily beds or in mixed borders. Medium daylilies, those 18 to 36 inches, can be used in most settings. Dwarf daylilies, those 12 inches or less, are best used for border plantings.

Most nurseries do not sell daylilies by varieties. If you are looking for specific varieties, you will probably have to go to a daylily nursery, such as Big Tree Daylily Garden in Longwood which grows over

GARDENING

2,500 varieties. When selecting a daylily variety, it is important to remember daylilies have three types of foliage growth. They are:

Dormant — The foliage dies back after frost.

Evergreen — The foliage remains green throughout the year.

Semi-Evergreen — Part of the foliage dies back during the coldest months and grows back in the spring.

Daylilies grow well in filtered shade. The darker colored varieties (reds and purples) grow best in partial shade, while light-colored varieties (yellows, pinks and pastels) need full sun to bring out their lovely colors. Avoid heavy shade because it will cause thin, spindly growth and poor flowering. The light level under pine trees is ideal for growing daylilies.

Daylilies are planted 18 to 24 inches apart, when spaced properly, daylilies can usually grow in one location for 3 to 5 years before division is necessary.

To plant daylilies dig holes larger than the root system and make a mound of soil in the center of the hole and set the center of the daylily on top of the mound, spreading roots out to the sides of the mound. Next, fill in the hole with loose soil, making sure the crown of the daylily is at ground level. Daylilies should be planted at the same depth they were originally grown. Water newly planted daylilies and keep the soil moist until plants are well established.

Most daylily plantings in Florida are virtually pest free and rarely need a pesticide application. However, daylilies may be attacked by aphids, thrips, spider mites or grasshoppers, which may damage the foliage and flower buds. Call the Ag. Center for positive identification and recommendations for control and also ask for Circular 620 "Daylilies for Florida."

Daylily enthusiasts may be interested in a new display garden opening in Eustia. Rollingwood Garden grows over 1,000 varieties of daylilies and will be open to the public Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, Apr. 16 — July 4, and Monday, July 5, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. To get to the garden, take County Road 439 north off State Road 44 near Mt. Dora. Go 3/4 miles to the garden's sign on the left. Also the "Annual Sunbelt Daylily Festival" will be held in Orlando this year on April 30, May 1, and May 2, 1993. For more information call the Ag Center at 323-2500, ext. 5550.

KATHERINE L. REESE

Navy Seaman Recruit Katherine L. Reese, daughter of Dorothy M. Reese of 861 Riverview Ave., Sanford, recently completed basic training at Recruit Training Command, Orlando.

During the cycle, recruits are taught general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 occupational fields.

Studies include seamanship, close-order drill, naval history and first aid.

The 1990 graduate of LeFlore High School, LeFlore, Okla., joined the Navy in September 1992.

Valparaiso, Fla. — Air Force Tech. Sgt. Libby O. Rhodes has arrived for duty here.

Rhodes, a paralegal claims supervisor, is the daughter of Laura Bryson of 1808 McCarthy Ave., Sanford.

The sergeant is a 1973 graduate of Jefferson County High School, Monticello.

JOHN R. SCHELL JR.
FORT JACKSON, Columbia, S.C. — Pvt. John R. Schell Jr. has completed basic training here.

During the training, students received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

Protesters, will you adopt a child?

DEAR ABBY: With the tragic shooting and death of Dr. David Gunn, I think it is time for a reprint of the column that appeared in the Los Angeles Times on Oct. 4, 1989. Thank you.

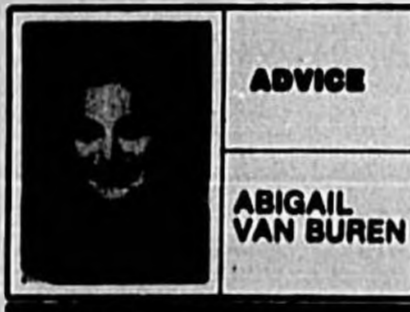

J.B., CALIFORNIA

DEAR J.B.: Thank you for asking. I agree — your request is very timely.

DEAR ABBY: This is a message to those men and women who try to prevent women from entering abortion clinics and carry big signs that say, "They Kill Babies Here!"

Have you signed up to adopt a child? If not, why not? Is it because you don't want one, can't afford one, or don't have the time, patience or desire to raise a child?

What if a woman who was about to enter a family planning clinic saw your sign, then decided not to have an abortion but chose instead to give her baby to you? Would you accept it? What if the mother belonged to a minority group — or was addicted to drugs, or tested positive for AIDS?

ADVICE

Why are you spending your time carrying a sign? Why aren't you volunteering to baby-sit a child born to a single mother so she can work? Why haven't you opened your door to a pregnant teen-ager whose parents have kicked her out when she took your advice and decided not to have an abortion?

As for the taxpayers who resent paying for abortions, who do you think pays for foster care, welfare, social workers and juvenile delinquency? The taxpayers.

Let's talk about something money can't buy: love. Have you ever visited a home for abused and unwanted children? Have you ever been to juvenile hall and seen the children who have committed crimes because they were born to mothers who didn't want them?

I'm not thrilled about abortion, but I don't think anyone has the right to tell others not to have one unless he or she had done the things I have mentioned above.

So, to those carrying those signs and trying to prevent women from entering family planning clinics, heed my message: If you must be against abortion, don't be a hypocrite — make your time and energy count.

HATES HYPOCRITES IN SANTA ANA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't have said it better. Or as well. DEAR ABBY: Please warn your readers that bad breath is one of the early warning signs of periodontal disease, which means something is seriously wrong with the area around the teeth.

I have just been through a three-month course of periodontal treatments, and next month the periodontist is going to decide if additional surgery will be required.

A close friend of mine said, "If your teeth fall out — get implants...it's no big deal."

Well, I had to tell her that periodontal disease can also result in bone loss, and there may not be enough jawbone left to support the implants — so unless she wants to spend the rest of her life eating baby food and soup, she should really see her dentist immediately.

CLEVELANDER

DEAR CLEVELANDER: You gave your friend excellent advice. You might also tell her that implants are indeed a "big deal," which entails dental surgery requiring an anesthetic and beaucoup bucks — meaning several thousand dollars.

DEAR ABBY: I just read that letter from the Swedish woman who married a German man, and she implied that her husband — like all Germans — was a "cold fish."

Well, I happen to be a Minnesota German woman who comes from the huggiest, kissingest family you could possibly imagine!

I am married to a very nice

Irishman who can't even hug his own children, but never would I condemn the whole of Ireland with this unfortunate trait.

I suggest your correspondent return to the University of Minnesota and take a course in statistics.

LOVING, LOVABLE AND GERMAN

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an argument between my husband and me. I read somewhere that after a man's hair turns gray, it has the same coarseness as copper wire. I believe it, because now that my husband's beard has turned gray, kissing him is torture. After we make love the skin on my face is red and raw.

I have begged him to shave off his beard, but he refuses. He accuses me of being turned off to love; I say, if he really loved me, he would shave off his beard. What do you think?

PORCUPINE'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: A beard need not be coarse. Give your porcupine a generous supply of hair conditioner rinse for Memorial Day, and he'll be thanking you until the Fourth of July.

Prognosis is good for heart defect

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was told a year ago I have mitral valve prolapse, thickening of some heart valves and a small hole in my heart. I'm a 44-year-old woman and a non-smoker. I'm not overweight or hypertensive. Why, then, do I have the condition and what is my prognosis?

DEAR READER: You appear to have two conditions that are not related: mitral valve prolapse and a septal defect.

MVP is a common condition that has been estimated to affect up to 20 percent of healthy women. Marked by loss of elasticity of a heart valve, MVP may cause no symptoms whatsoever or can be associated with repeated attacks of a rapid and/or irregular pulse.

The effects of a floppy valve can be heard, however, through the stethoscope, as a "click" or murmur (extra sound) between the two components of the heartbeat. Ordinarily, no treatment is required, but persons with MVP should receive antibiotics (prophylactic therapy) before and after dental cleaning and other medical/surgical procedures that release bacteria into the bloodstream. These bacteria can infect the valve unless they are eliminated.

On occasion, people with MVP who suffer frequent episodes of rapid pulse may require drugs, such as beta-blockers, to slow the heart. MVP appears with age; it is not present at birth. The condition is diagnosed by an ultrasound examination.

On the other hand, a septal defect is congenital: Some infants are born with holes in the tissue separating the heart chambers. If the hole is large enough to disrupt the normal flow of blood through the heart, it must be surgically repaired or the baby will die. Most septal defects are quite small, however, and never cause symptoms. In adulthood, they are often discovered by accident during cardiac ultrasound tests, during which a cardiologist obtains pictures of the heart's interior by using high frequency waves, much like radar.

Your prognosis is good. It's unlikely that either the MVP or the septal defect will affect your health, providing you undergo prophylactic therapy, as I mentioned.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Everyone is familiar with Virgil's line about fearing Greeks who bring gifts. The concept may be applied to bridge. If an opponent offers you a free trick, make sure that its acceptance isn't going to result in a long-term loss - as in today's deal.

North wasn't sure how to bid his hand. Five (or six) of a minor could be better than three no-trump, so he made one effort to describe his distributional hand with a game-forcing jump to three clubs.

West had an awkward lead. He wanted to open a major, but he couldn't decide which. So he compromised by selecting his fourth-highest diamond.

Declarer couldn't see any problems. He won in hand with the 10 and immediately attacked clubs. The 4-1 split was annoying but not very disturbing.

However, when in with his club trick, East paused to consider the defense.

It looked as though four major-suit tricks had to be taken now. If West had A-J-10-x of spades, switching to the nine or queen would work well. But hearts seemed to offer a better chance. If West had K-Q-x-x, K-10-8-x or K-10-7-x, the suit could be run.

Accurately, East switched to the heart jack. West, after capturing South's queen with his king, returned the heart six to East's ace. Now the heart-two return defeated the contract. West having the 10-7 hovering over South's 8-5.

Well defended, but South shouldn't have given them a chance. If he wins trick one in the dummy and plays a club to the nine, he is safe. With West on lead, the defenders cannot take four heart tricks.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
April 19, 1993
Ambitious objectives you establish for yourself in the year ahead have a good chance of being realized. However, beware of trying to do more than you can comfortably manage.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
There's a possibility you might not get the support for which you've been hoping from others today. Trying to force the issue could make matters worse. Instead of facilitating it. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
There are indications today that you might do something that your better judgment warns you against. If you do it anyway, you might not escape the consequences.

ANNIE

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Be wary of involving yourself today in an arrangement with friends where money or something else of significant value is at stake. Someone might come out on the short end of the stick.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Important one-to-one relationships will require tactful handling today. Be as cooperative as possible, even if the other guy isn't.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
If feasible, try to work alone today. Co-workers or helpmates could create more problems for you, destroying anything beneficial they might have to offer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Be selective in whom you place your faith, especially if they are handling your resources for you. A bum choice could cost you money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Try to stifle disagreements between you and your mate today as promptly as possible. If you don't, there's a chance that a number of small explosions might erupt.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
You might have a more difficult time than usual in keeping your comments to yourself if anyone irritates you today. A lack of control could invite a confrontation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Yielding to extravagant impulses is not a smart move today, and instinctively you'll know it isn't. Yet this might be exactly what you'll do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Finding fault with situations or people is easy to do today, but it isn't likely to resolve anything. Keep this in mind before pointing a finger at anyone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Usually you're a person who recognizes shortcomings in others and exercises tolerance when dealing with them. But today you might not follow your book of rules and you might be a bit nasty.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
In your circle of acquaintances, there is a taker you might have to deal with today. He or she thinks you're an easy mark. It will be up to you to prove otherwise.
