

Double Taxation

Knowles Says It Is Back To Peg 1; Rose: County Never Admitted To Problem

(First of two stories)

Double taxation does not exist in Seminole County. Despite the honeymoon celebrated by city and county officials last December over the solution of the double taxation situation which plagued the relationship between the city and county governments in the county officially for eight years, "we are back to square one," said City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles.

And County Administrator T. Duncan Rose said the county never acknowledged that double taxation in its narrow sense of "real and substantial" exists.

"We are saying we have solved the substantial problems of double taxation and are continuing to work and wrestle with this issue of equity," Rose said.

"I have talked with each of our commissioners and their opinions are no different. They are all of the opinion that we are trying to resolve equity in the sheriff's department patrol, but there has been no acknowledgment that double taxation exists," Rose said.

"This has the ring of the county's closed outlook of the past eight years," Knowles said.

Meanwhile, Lake Mary Mayor Walter Sorenson, who had served on a Council of Local Governments in Seminole County committee that believed it had compromised with the county as represented by then-County Administrator Roger Neiswender to solve the double taxation problem, expressed anger at Duncan's statement.

"It does not appear to me that the county acted in good faith and in the spirit of the resolution. I'm prepared to move from that position, but it sounds like the county tried to sneak a letter by that is not a response to double taxation," Sorenson said.

Knowles said he will turn over copies of the latest information on the county position to members of the special CLG committee and see whether it wants to start meeting again.

Meanwhile, Altamonte Springs City Commissioner Lee Constantine says a meeting of the Council of Local Governments can be called at any time and in any event it appears that double taxation will again have a place on the agenda for the July 8 meeting.

Last December, the issue appeared solved when after holding meetings for some 90 days the double taxation committee announced a compromise on double taxation.

During the three months representatives from each of the seven cities met with Neiswender, Assistant Administrator Jim Easton and various other county appointed staff members.

The basis of the work by the committee was a study completed by the DeLand consulting firm, Kelton and Associates. The cities commissioned Kelton and Associates to study county operations and determine whether double taxation exists in Seminole County. The report of the consultants from their study, which cost the cities about $26,000, said that double taxation exists in almost all county departments.

Kelton's staff members said the double taxation the study found fit the court definition of "real and substantial" and that many county operations do not provide real and substantial benefit to city residents although city residents pay in their taxes for the county services.

In line with the report and on the advice of Kelton and Associates, each of the seven cities adopted resolutions directed to the county outlining where double taxation exists and requesting correction.

The identical resolutions gave the county a certain number of days to provide a solution.

The resolutions were sent in preparation for a court battle with the county.

The committee composed of representatives of all the cities was formed and Knowles was chosen as its chairman. A team from Kelton was present at the meetings to explain its study and Neiswender who had earlier announced his resignation as county administrator attended as the county representative.

The committee decided early in its deliberations that a compromise in a "spirit of cooperation" would be acceptable and preferable to court action. During its deliberations, the committee agreed to follow dual tracks on county operations and taxing, noting which are inequitable and which did not fit the "real and substantial" definition. It was decided that the group would bring to the Seminole Legislative delegation's attention where inequitable taxing was found and would ask the delegation to correct those inequities through legislation. Knowles did this.

The conclusion of the committee in mid-November was that clearly "double taxation" exists in the areas of Sheriff John Polk's department patrols and investigations, the group said, provided to the cities only as a smaller part of the law enforcement operation for the unincorporated area.

Knowles: Governor's Marina Bill Veto Mistake

Sanford City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles called Gov. Bob Graham's veto of local legislation to correct an error in the legal description of the city owned lake-bottom around the Sanford Marina "a misunderstanding" today.

Graham vetoed the legislation introduced by Sen. Richard Langley, R-Clermont, Thursday, and in the veto message said there is no provision in the state Constitution to grant land for commercial revenue generating activities such as a marina or other business complex.

Knowles said he called Graham's office this morning to explain that the legislation merely corrected an error in the legal description of the lake-bottom given to the city under a special act of the Legislature in 1965.

When the city was trying to help Charles "Chuck" Volk, operator of Monroe Harbour, get permission from the state Department of Environmental Regulation to do some maintenance dredging of the harbor and channels, the error in the legal description was discovered.

Volk believes once the special act with the correction becomes law the permit will be released. The dredging is needed because of silt that has accumulated in the harbor and in channels to the St. Johns River from Lake Monroe, Volk has said.

And the city of Sanford has endorsed a bank loan for Volk to pay for the dredging operation.

Meanwhile, separate and apart from this work Volk is planning to increase his slips for boats on the city leased land by some 82. This can be accomplished without additional land, using the land already leased by Volk.

There was apparently some confusion in the governor's office that the legal description correction granted more property to the city of Sanford for the purpose of the slips expansion, which Knowles said today it does not.

Meanwhile, state Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, and chairman of the county's seven member legislative delegation, all of whom approved the proposed special legislation, said he will be discussing the veto problem with Graham today by telephone and during a meeting with Graham scheduled for Monday as well.

Mayor Lee P. Moore said he doesn't understand the veto, and the legislation is "more a technical thing than anything else."

Following Indictments

3 Ex-Sheriff's Force Workers All Surrender

By Diane Petryk
Herald Staff Writer

Three former Seminole County Sheriff's Department employees surrendered at the Seminole County Jail Thursday after being indicted on charges of stealing property from a family they evicted in 1980.

Aaron Claude Sanders, 24, Stephen Ray Parrish, 28, and Edward William Schuckman, 34, were indicted by a grand jury Wednesday, but the indictments were sealed until the arrests.

All three were charged with grand theft and Schuckman was additionally charged with perjury.

Sanders and Parrish were released on their own recognizance while Schuckman was released on $2,000 bond.

Allegations that 40-50 sheriff's department employees were involved in a theft ring preying on evictees were investigated by Alachua County State Attorney Eugene Whitworth on orders of Gov. Bob Graham. Whitworth presented evidence to the current grand jury.

Schuckman, 545 Devonshire Boulevard, Longwood, a former reserve deputy who lists his current occupation as arbitrator, is accused of stealing a remote control television, a pendulum clock and a watch during an eviction. He had been already charged with dealing in stolen property in Orange County after disclosure of the property there. The indictment accuses Schuckman of making a statement while testifying "which he did not believe to be true."

He told the grand jury, according to the indictment, that 17 to 30 members of the sheriff's department were involved in the thefts.

Police arrest records show Sanders, 101 Country Club Circle, Sanford, a former deputy, is employed as a guard with Globe Security. He and Parrish, 113 Laurel Drive, Sanford, a former communications officer now listed as a bartender at the Why Not Lounge in Altamonte Springs, are accused of taking a stereo receiver from a Seminole County man they were evicting.

During evictions, Seminole County Sheriff John Polk explained the evicted persons property is put out of the street right-of-way, unless the property owner makes some other arrangements to move it.

Polk said the three indictments are the end of the matter as far as he knows and said he is pleased that it has been shown 40-50 people were not involved in the theft ring.

Crepe Myrtle Favorite Tree In Lake Mary?

The crepe myrtle is way ahead in the voting in Lake Mary for a mascot tree for that community.

Barbara Gorman, utility administrator, said Thursday that of the 100 votes cast at city hall and tallied so far, those for the crepe myrtle total more than half of all those cast, with the dogwood registering second in popularity.

Far behind after the crepe myrtle and the dogwood in this order are: the bottlebrush, the loblolly bay and the Palatka holly.

The tally so far is: crepe myrtle, 52 votes; dogwood, 26 votes; bottlebrush, 13; loblolly bay, 11, and Palatka holly 6.

A rush of additional votes are expected along with the payment of water bills today, Mrs. Gorman said. Residents in the community were asked on their most recent monthly water bills to cite their preference of one of the nominated five trees on their bills when they are returned to city hall with payment.

In addition, City Commissioner Russ Megonegal, who lives in the Forest Mobile Home Community, has asked residents in his development to cast their votes in the community building at the mobile home park and he will take them to next Thursday night's City Commission meeting.

The winning tree is to be announced at the July 7 City Commission meeting. Residents of Lake Mary may vote until 4:30 p.m., July 7 at city hall, 158 N. Country Club Road, Mrs. Gorman said.

It is expected that one of the community associations such as the Civic Improvement Association will take on selling the selected tree as a fund raising project.

City Commissioner Ken King, an environmentalist, gathered information on many trees, while consideration was underway by the City Commission, to select nominees.

King's report said the following about the crepe myrtle, the dogwood and the loblolly bay:

—The crepe myrtle — "This handsome shrub-tree has been extensively planted in the south. It is winter hardy as far north as Baltimore. Flower colors range from white to pink to red to violet. Crepe myrtle is a shrub or a small tree that grows to a height of 23 feet.

"Its habitat is throughout the south and the crepe myrtle is most abundant in the southeast United States.

"Among its disadvantages are that it escapes from cultivation and grows wild in the countryside. Containment may be a problem. It bares its leaves in winter.

"Its advantages are that it is winter-hardy and grows in a wide variety of soils. Flowers are attractive, varied in color and numerous," King says.

— The dogwood — "Tiny, greenish-yellow flowers in clusters surrounded by four blunt-tipped, white petal bracts, born in early spring and followed in fall by clusters of small scarlet, egg-shaped seed pods, each with a solitary seed embedded in coarse yellow pulp. It grows to a maximum height of 60 feet.

"The dogwood is native to North America and its habitat ranges from Massachusetts to south Central Florida.

"Its disadvantages are that its flower abundance is limited to some extent by winter temperatures. It bares its leaves in winter and is a slow grower.

"Advantages are that it grows well in ordinary soils, and requires minimum maintenance," King says.

— Loblolly bay — "It is an attractive, small to medium-sized tree native to the coastal plain from North Carolina to Central Florida. It is usually found growing in shallow swamps and moist depressions. Flowers are large white, showy, fragrant, 2 inches to 3.2 inches in diameter, produced singly at the junctions of the younger leaves.

"Its habitat is shallow swamps and moist depressions.

"Its disadvantage is that it is short lived and its advantages are that it is a fast growing evergreen which requires minimum maintenance. Flowers are attractive," King says.

Meanwhile, Seminole County Agricultural Agent Frank Jasa supplies the following information about the bottlebrush and Palatka holly.

Of the Bottlebrush, Jasa says it is a very attractive shrub or small tree with showy spikes of blooms consisting mainly of colorful stamens.

Jasa said the Palatka holly is more properly known as the "East Palatka", variety of the American holly. It is an upright dense grower with spine tipped flat leaves. "It fruits freely, grows quickly and shears well," Jasa said.

The East Palatka grows to a height of 40 to 50 feet and has a spread of 15 to 25 feet. Its foliage is small, thick, flat and glossy green and its fruit is bright red.

"Hollies generally prefer partial shade, but most will tolerate full sun. Well drained soils are essential and slightly acidic soils with high fertility are desirable," Jasa said.

Robinson Is Returned

Clarence Eugene Robinson — Florida's most-wanted fugitive before he surrendered in Miami earlier this week — has been secretly transferred to the Orange County jail.

A spokeswoman at the jail confirmed that Robinson, under guard by U.S. marshals from Miami, was booked into the Orlando facility late Thursday.

Robinson, 38, was the object of an all-out manhunt by the FBI and Florida law enforcement officers for five days.

He voluntarily surrendered to the Miami FBI Tuesday night.

A U.S. magistrate ordered him held without bond Wednesday and Robinson waived extradition to the Florida Middle District U.S. Court at Orlando.

Authorities had kept quiet about the 230-mile transfer until it was completed.

Robinson will stand trial in the Orlando federal court on two counts of assaulting a federal officer. If convicted, he could face a maximum 10-year prison sentence on each count.

The bearded, 6-foot, 200-pound former boxer, also is a suspect in three murders. Before his surrender, he had eluded Florida police for nearly six years and was tagged as Florida's most-wanted fugitive.

The FBI and Robinson's Miami attorney Stephen Rosen said Robinson's woman companion, Darlene Boyd of Melbourne, mother of an infant son, was instrumental in convincing the fugitive to give himself up.

Robinson is accused by state authorities of masterminding a drugstore robbery in Longwood on Dec. 28, 1977, during which a reserve Seminole County deputy sheriff was killed. He also is suspected in the murders of two accomplices to the robbery, who turned state's evidence and were killed after their release from prison.

Robinson also faces charges of bail jumping and dealing in drugs.

NATION IN BRIEF

Wholesale Prices Go Up Only 0.3 Percent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Higher energy prices triggered a 0.3 percent increase in wholesale prices in May, the first increase this year, the Labor Department reported today.

If producer prices continued to increase at the May's seasonally adjusted level for 12 months, they would register a 3.9 percent annual rate, a department spokesman said.

The department also revised its estimate for February wholesale prices, previously reported as a 0.1 percent increase, to no change. The record now shows price declines or no increases in each of the first four months of this year, making the May figure the first increase since December 1982.

The 0.3 percent increase in the May Producer Price Index largely reflected sharp upturns in energy prices, particularly home heating oil and gasoline, which had dropped over the previous five months, the department said.

The index for energy prices tends to lag by one month, actually recording changes that took effect in April.

No Hurry On Fed Choice

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — President Reagan's decision on whether to reappoint Paul Volcker to another term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board "is not imminent," a White House spokesman says.

The statement was issued Thursday in an attempt to calm the intense speculation in the press and on Wall Street about Reagan's much-anticipated decision on Volcker.

A senior administration official said the announcement, one of the most important economic decisions Reagan will make this year, will not come before next week, "and it may well go beyond that."

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes appeared before reporters traveling with Reagan to read a terse statement by White House chief of staff James Baker saying Reagan had made no decision on Volcker's status and "a decision is not imminent."

Speakes said the unusual statement by Baker was prompted by "4,900 questions to me today," triggered by news reports Reagan has narrowed the candidates to Volcker and Republican economist Alan Greenspan and could announce his choice shortly.

Suits Stop Drug Output

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The anti-nausea drug Bendectin has been taken out of production because of hundreds of lawsuits blaming birth defects on the morning sickness medication, the president of the company that produced the drug says.

"Bendectin is safe," David Sharrock, president of Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals Inc., a subsidiary of Dow Chemical Co., said Thursday in making the announcement. "It is a victim of these litigious times."

There are 327 lawsuits pending against the drug, a spokesman at Merrell Dow's Cincinnati headquarters said.

Tom Tate, attorney for a child with a birth defect who was awarded $750,000 dollars in a Bendectin lawsuit, said: "There's no doubt, even though the words were not used, that this is tantamount to withdrawal of the drug from the market."

Civil Service Board Sued

Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

"If they get sued for this, who will defend them?" asked Sanford City Attorney Bill Colbert at a Sanford Civil Service Board hearing 10 days ago after that board, ignoring his advice, met behind locked doors for 55 minutes.

Today, with the filing of a law suit by the Sentinel Communications Co., publisher of the Orlando Sentinel, against the board and its five appointed members for violating Florida's "Government in the Sunshine" by holding that executive session, Colbert researched the question.

From what Colbert found, it appears that the board can hire any attorney it pleases.

Colbert has been battling with the Civil Service Board over its refusal to ratify the firing of a city employee for "insubordination, disgraceful conduct and a poor job performance." Colbert said the board's decision on May 12 was improper because the only evidence introduced was against the employee, who did not testify on his own behalf nor did he make any defense at all.

The board at its closed meeting decided to re-hear the city's case at 8 p.m. next Wednesday and announced the decision at an open meeting. Only member Gordon Frederick voted against the re-hearing, he confirmed after the meeting.

Colbert said today after researching the Civil Service Board law that the board has authority to employ an attorney "on a need basis to represent it" in any controversy which may arise. He added that the law says that attorney "shall be paid by the treasurer of the city of Sanford."

A section of the sunshine law notes, in addition, Colbert said that if a court determines that board members acted in violation of this law, the court may assess costs against the individual members.

The suit was filed in the circuit court at Sanford Thursday. The suit says the board and its members, Dr. John Darby, Frederick, Donald Jones, William McQuarters and Dr. Luis Perez "should not have barred" a reporter from the meeting.

It also asks for a temporary and permanent restraining order to prevent the board from holding any future closed meetings and asks that the board and its individual members pay the newspaper's attorney fees and court costs.

At that May 31 meeting, an Evening Herald reporter also was barred from the executive session, and at one point was standing at the doorway with the door open when Frederick informed that reporter that the meeting would not proceed until the reporter left and the door shut.

Colbert warned the board prior to going into executive session that their action could subject them to prosecution under the "Sunshine" law.

...Double Taxation Debated Again

The committee declared that in these specific operations of the Sheriff's Department, residents of the cities receive "no real and substantial benefit." Court decisions earlier said that a county operation wherein it could be shown that city residents received "no real and substantial benefit" would be double taxation. And double taxation is forbidden under the 1968 Florida Constitution.

The committee decided that the best way for the county to solve the dilemma of city taxpayers paying for road patrol provided primarily to unincorporated areas would be through the county creating a municipal service taxing district whereby unincorporated county residents would pay in large part for the patrols. It was noted that by creating the special taxing districts, city residents would be relieved of some tax burden. But the committee agreed that the method of solving that problem should be left to the discretion of the county commission.

Neiswender, who said he was keeping the county commissioners informed of discussions and progress of the committee, said the city representatives had been responsive on the issues and added that they should have "some reasonable expectation" that the county commission will develop some alternatives and phase in some changes.

Knowles, meanwhile, urged the committee members to tell their respective governing bodies that "double taxation is not worthy of going into a dog fight so long as the county works toward resolving the problem." He said that it appeared the county was trying to solve inequities in its taxing and that Neiswender had shown the county had made remarkable steps.

"Perhaps Neiswender has contributed toward that course of action," Knowles said at the time, adding that, "Heaven only knows what will happen after this month" when Neiswender was scheduled to leave the county employ.

Neiswender suggested a time schedule to which the county would adhere to note its cooperation and agreement with the cities, citing the best dates when budget information for 1984 could be shared with the cities and the county could thus demonstrate its willingness to take some action concerning unincorporated area funding for road patrols and investigations.

The committee in December reported its findings to the Council of Local Governments and urged adoption of a resolution, noting the dates Neiswender suggested. Identical resolutions were adopted by the cities individually.

The resolution called that double taxation exists in the sheriff's department specifically in the areas of road patrol and investigation. It said that in those two service areas city residents do not receive "real and substantial benefit" from the $2 million in taxes they pay annually for the department.

The resolution called on the county to make changes in its 1983-84 budget to correct this disparity and to assure the cities by Jan. 15 of its willingness to cooperate by accepting the judgment.

It called for the county to suggest to the cities by May 15 the method it would use to remedy the double taxation situation in the upcoming budget year, adding by June 15, the cities are to decide whether they are satisfied with the county's proposed solution.

On Jan. 11, 1983, the county adopted a resolution noting the committee's work and noting that the County Commission is "committed to working cooperatively with the municipalities within Seminole County to resolve any areas of concern identified by the municipalities."

Included with the resolution was a cover letter from Commission Chairman Sandra Glenn. In the cover letter, Mrs. Glenn said the county by May 1 would provide information that will be available for review outlining the approach to budget adoption for the 1983-84 fiscal year to include the sheriff's budget and that the county would notify the cities of any decisions that resulted from the budget work sessions.

It said the county's office of budget and management would prepare a calendar identifying key dates regarding information and decisions.

The letter concluded: "Nothing contained in the attached resolution, this letter or in prior negotiations should be construed or interpreted as a waiver by the county of any rights or defenses it may have under existing statutes or case law in the event the dialogue contemplated above is unsuccessful for any reason."

residence and threatened to kill a man. Johnston was found about 20 minutes later two blocks away. He is being held at the Seminole County Jail in lieu of $8,000 bond.

MICROWAVE TAKEN

A microwave oven and miscellaneous jewelry, together valued at $667, were taken from apartment 102 in Seminole Garden sometime between 7 a.m. and 3 p.m. Tuesday, Sanford police report. The items are the property of Marie Hampton.

MOWER MISSING

A self-propelled Jacobson lawn mower valued at $280 was taken from the carport at the Charles V. Miklius residence, 702 Lake Mary Blvd., Sanford, police report. The orange colored mower was noticed missing early this week.

COATHANGER HEIST

A coathanger was apparently used to open a Chevrolet parked in the Zayre's parking lot in Sanford between 11:45 a.m. and 12:34 p.m. Monday, police said.

About $420 was taken from visitor William S. Maxwell of Latrobe, Penn.

OFFICE RANSACKED

A complete list of missing items is being prepared for police following the ransacking of Cleaning Service and Sales, 1120 West 1st St., Sanford, between 8 p.m. Saturday and 7:45 a.m. Monday.

Police said burglars entered through the business's north rear door and went through drawers, desks and closets removing a small black and white television, a stereo system and petty cash.

GUNS TAKEN

Two handguns that were in a locked cabinet were stolen from the Albert Mackey residence, 217 East 3rd St., Sanford, between 8 p.m. Sunday and 12:30 a.m. Tuesday, police report. The guns were valued at $400.

FROZEN PIZZAS GONE

Burglars of the Fern Park Nursery school got away with $20 in frozen pizzas in a heist between 10 a.m. Saturday and 6:56 p.m. Sunday, police said. Nursery director Joann Sanderlin said frozen pizzas were also taken in a burglary at the school eight months ago.

PISTOL RANGE HIT

A five-pound fire extinguisher valued at $70 was taken from the Altamonte Police Department's pistol range in Altamonte Springs between 4 p.m. May 29 and 3:47 p.m. Monday, Seminole County sheriff's deputies said.

For the second time this week, Brucato's Deli and Game Room, U.S. Highway 17-92 at State Road 434, Longwood, has been hit by game machine bandits.

On Monday about $300 in quarters were taken from machines apparently by a couple who knew how to open the money boxes surreptitiously while the deli was open for business.

Thursday morning, however, it was discovered that burglars had been busy during the night.

Between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 9 a.m. Thursday, when two air conditioner installers arrived to find the deli's door open, a pry tool was used to open money boxes of the pool table and video game machines.

The unknown subjects drank a quantity of beer — two Michelob bottles and one can of Budweiser were found empty.

Owner/manager of the deli, Chuck Brucato, said he had apparently neglected to secure the door, but it had appeared locked when he left.

Tuesday Brucato said a couple, believed to have keys to fit video machine money boxes, had emptied his machines Monday afternoon.

OFFICE RANSACKED

Metal cutters were used to gain access to the Florida Power and Light office, 1817 West 1st Street, Sanford, sometime between 11 p.m. Wednesday and 4 a.m. Thursday and the office was ransacked. Police report two electric adding machines of unknown brand and value were taken. Three locks were also cut off lockers in a locker room. It is unknown if anything was taken from the lockers.

DEADLY MISSILE

Clyde Brantford Turner, 22, of 715 West Court Street, Longwood, was being held at the Seminole County Jail today in lieu of $8,000 bond on a charge of throwing a deadly missile.

Police said Turner threw a beer bottle at the windshield of a car traveling behind the truck in which he was riding at 7:10 p.m. Thursday. The incident occurred while the vehicles were southbound on State Road 15 near Seminole Plaza.

ARREST

Arthur Lee Robinson, 22, of 1009 W. 3rd St., Sanford, was being held at the Seminole County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bond on charges of attempted burglary and possession of burglary tools. Police said Robinson was arrested at 10:12 p.m. Thursday for attempting to burglarize apartment 412A at 1505 W. 25th St., Sanford.

BURGLARY ARREST

Ronnie Melvin Johnston, 34, of 1120 Reams St., Longwood, was arrested Wednesday on charges of burglary to an occupied dwelling.

Police said Johnston, using a hammer, broke out a screen from a residence at 578 Land Avenue, Longwood, and tried to strike occupant James Reader.

Witnesses told police that at approximately 1:25 a.m. Johnston repeatedly kicked the front door of the

12 Abandoned Children May Get Their Own Hotel

HALLANDALE (UPI) — Twelve brothers and sisters who were left with nothing but a rat-infested shack when their parents went to jail may soon be living in their own hotel — thanks to the efforts of a local pastor.

The Holmes children, who range from 2 to 17 years old, had been living on their own for four months when social workers visited their Fort Lauderdale home in May.

Their parents, Danny and Thelma Holmes, had been jailed on charges of aggravated assault with a firearm and several other crimes.

Officials with the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services separated the children and placed them in shelters and foster homes scattered across Broward County — with the hopes they could be reunited in the future.

Thanks to the help of Bishop J.L. Outler, pastor of The Church of the Living God By Faith in Hallandale, the 12 children may soon be back together.

Mom Thanks Reagan

MIAMI (UPI) — A young mother is thanking President Reagan "from the bottom of my heart" for helping her win a battle against red tape so she could take her 6-month-old son home from the hospital for the first time.

Anthony Plater-Zyberk spent the first six months of his life in the hospital suffering from Undine's Curse, a rare breathing disorder, while his family, doctors and hospital staff pleaded with insurance officials and federal agencies to help Anthony go home.

Anthony was born with the disease, which requires him to use a respirator while he sleeps. The baby has been in Miami Children's Hospital since Dec. 9, the day after his birth at another hospital.

Dr. Ian Jeffries said Anthony was well enough to go home in January, provided a respirator and a nurse to monitor it were in the family's home.

Sinkhole Work Under Way

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — Authorities kept a 15-mile stretch of the southbound lanes of Interstate 75 — traveled by an estimated 14,000 motorists — closed today so workers could pump water into a 100-foot-wide sinkhole to determine where to plug it.

A steam-shovel "peeled back" portions of the highway surface but Wynn Broadhurst, district engineer for the Florida Department of Transportation, said Thursday engineers had been unable to find the source of the sinkhole.

Broadhurst said the depression, which measured about 100 feet in diameter and 3 to 5 feet in depth, appeared to have stabilized Thursday.

IN BRIEF

Victim Identified As Pro-Libyan Group Official

United Press International
A pro-Libyan Palestinian official was killed today in an explosion that wrecked his home and wounded his wife, three children and three other people in Lebanon's eastern Bekaa Valley, official sources said.

The Christian Phalange Voice of Lebanon Radio, said the home in Baalbeck was a headquarters for Khalil (Abu Jihad) Wazir, the commander of the Palestine Liberation Organization's armed forces. The report could not be immediately confirmed.

"The explosion occurring shortly after midnight killed instantly Abu Ziad, and destroyed completely his home," a civil defense spokesman said. "His wife three children and three other house guests were taken to hospital, some in a critical condition."

A police source could not confirm the rank of Abu Ziad but said he was a "top-level Palestinian official, member of the Popular Struggle Front," a pro-Libyan group.

The ancient city of Baalbeck is about 50 miles east of Beirut in the Bekaa Valley.

NATO Arms Talks Start

PARIS (UPI) — NATO foreign ministers, determined to proceed with plans to deploy new U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe, said they still hoped to keep "an open dialogue" with Moscow on arms reductions.

A senior U.S. official, commenting Thursday on the first session of a two-day NATO meeting, said the alliance reaffirmed support for the planned deployment, which is being used as leverage in the Geneva arms control talks between the Americans and Soviets.

"The ministers also stressed their desire to maintain an open dialogue with the Soviet Union to make deployment of the missiles unnecessary," he said.

Senate Offers Hazardous Wastes Compromise

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Offering an "olive leaf," Senate negotiators made a peace proposal to the House Thursday on the question of funding for hazardous wastes cleanups and water quality programs.

House negotiators said they would study the offer.

Although reaching tentative agreement on many secondary issues, the conference committee on water quality legislation has been deadlocked on the issue of money for hazardous wastes cleanups.

"I'm trying to throw you an olive leaf, fig leaf or whatever," said Senate Natural Resources Chairman Pat Neal, D-Bradenton.

"Olive branch, I believe it is," said his House counterpart, Jon Mills, D-Gainesville.

The House has been seeking a tax on dangerous chemicals while the Senate has preferred waiting until next year for any massive funding of the program.

The new Senate proposal is anchored on an expanded use of funds from an existing tax on oil arriving in Florida ports.

"You can call it a new tax. We can say it's an existing tax. And we've both won," Neal declared.

"We need to discuss this with the House since it's the first time we've seen it," Mills said. "I can't predict the reaction but it seems to be a good faith offer."

The plan calls for using $5 million in principal and another $6 million in interest from an existing coastal oil spill trust fund for the cleanup of hazardous waste sites. The trust fund is financed by a 2-cent per barrel tax on oil that kicks in whenever the fund falls below a certain level.

In addition, senators agreed with a House proposal to obtain $166 million by a speed up in the collection of sales taxes from merchants and use it for sewage treatment facility grants to cities and counties.

A minimum of $22 million earned in interest from that $166 million before its disbursement would also go to hazardous sites cleanups under the Senate proposal.

Conference subcommittees, meanwhile, reported tentative accord on several issues, including pesticide review, groundwater monitoring, water quality data collection and underground oil storage tanks.

Another meeting of the full panel was scheduled for today.

'Great Maggie Massacre' Reaffirms Conservatives

By Cathy Booth

LONDON (UPI) — Margaret Thatcher was re-elected Britain's Conservative prime minister with the largest parliamentary majority since World War II in a smashing repudiation of the Labor Party's left wing socialism.

Mrs. Thatcher's victory Thursday quadrupled her party's majority in Parliament, dealing a severe blow to the main opposition Labor, which suffered its worst showing since 1918.

"The Great Maggie Massacre," headlined the tabloid Sun today.

"I approach this second term in office with a great sense of responsibility — and humility," said Mrs. Thatcher, standing proudly beneath a picture of Queen Elizabeth II in a town hall in her north London constituency of Finchley at 3 a.m.

Mrs. Thatcher, a diamond brooch vying with her usual pearls, thanked the voters for a "rather exciting evening" and five more years in office.

When the hand count for Parliament's 650 seats resumed at dawn, the Conservative Party captured 352 districts, the Labor Party won 198 and the Social Democrat-Liberal Alliance, 17. Minor parties captured four seats.

In the popular vote, the Conservatives won 11.5 million votes, Labor 7.8 million, and the Alliance 6.9 million. Britain's electoral system favors parties with strong regional support and punishes those like the Alliance with a nationwide following.

Margaret Thatcher

The Conservative Party held its heartland districts in southern and central England and captured seats in the traditional Labor strongholds in the north and west.

Counting for Northern Ireland's 17 seats did not begin until Friday morning.

The victory gave the Conservative Party the largest majority in Parliament since Labor scored a landslide win in 1945, with a 186 parliamentary majority. It was Labor's worst showing since 1918, sparking immediate speculation of a resignation by Labor leader Michael Foot.

Foot conceded the Labor defeat only 4½ hours after the polls closed.

Casino Gambling Backers Up Odds For OK

MIAMI (UPI) — Promoters of casino gambling in Florida believe they have a better chance of winning voter approval in 1984 by combining their proposal with one for the more popular statewide lottery.

"Casinos are for tourists. The lottery is a lottery for everyone," John F. Brown, director of Florida Casino Associates Inc., said.

The lottery was proposed early this year by legislators and Hispanic community leaders who believe it would increase state revenue without increasing taxes.

Brown was a New Jersey legislator in the early 1970s and is now the executive director of the Sunny Isle Resort Assn.

He estimated legalized gambling would raise $3 billion for the state by doubling tourism, providing 75,000 jobs and increasing revenue from cigarette, gasoline, liquor and sales tax.

Florida Casino Associates Inc. has asked the Securities and Exchange Commission for permission to sell $5 million worth of stock to the public to finance a campaign aimed at convincing voters to back both issues.

"They are one and the same," said Charles Rosen, president of the company and vice president of project development of the Castaways Beach Club on Miami Beach.

The stock plan is described in a preliminary prospectus filed with the SEC. If the SEC approves, Florida Casino Associates will use the money to fund a political action organization called "Citizens for Less Taxes."

According to the prospectus, the committee wants gambling approved at two hotels, the Marco Polo in Sunny Isles and the Beach Club Hotel in Fort Lauderdale.

The hotels would be obliged to pay 1 percent of their receipts to Florida Casino Associates, giving the company's stockholders a dividend.

Hersh Book Calls Kissinger Diplomacy Just 'Con Jobs'

By Peter Costa
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger manipulated world events and people merely to gain power and often at the expense of true statesmanship, author Seymour Hersh charges.

Hersh also said Kissinger was a fawn and sycophant to Nixon. Kissinger was the "ultimate courtesan with Nixon," Hersh said. "He was absolutely nonpareil at bootlicking Nixon. He was a complete toady."

Hersh, 46, who was in New York Thursday promoting his book, "The Price of Power: Kissinger in the Nixon White House," said many of the foreign policy breakthroughs that occurred when Kissinger was secretary of state were "con jobs."

"Take the Vietnam Peace agreement. All it did was change the color of the corpses. It got the white and black bodies out of there and changed them to yellow — that's all," Hersh said.

"It really gave the Viet Cong, for the first time, a legal foothold in the south," he said.

Hersh also questioned other so-called foreign policy successes during Kissinger's reign.

"What great successes? In the Mideast — did we ever get a settlement? We're still looking for some way to factor in the PLO in the equation. Salt 1? Where's SALT 2? SALT 1 just made the Russians so completely suspicious that SALT 2 has never really arrived."

"China? China was Nixon all the way. It was Nixon's genius. He had an incredible ability to read the Chinese. But later, it was Mao who charged the U.S. with using China and said, 'You used us as a footstool to climb up to see the bear. (Russia).

Smoking Declines As Cigarette Prices Climb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government says higher cigarette prices have prompted Americans to cut down on smoking.

An Agriculture Department report estimated that cigarette consumption would drop to 615 billion cigarettes in the year ending June 30, down 3 percent from last year.

The decline would be largely a result of a "big jump in retail prices," said Verner Grise, an economist with the department's Economic Research Service.

A big portion of that price jump was caused by higher federal cigarette taxes, he said.

The agency's analysis is based only on economic and production factors — not health concerns.

Cigarette sales could rise again in the second half of the calendar year, the agency's report said, attributing the likely increase to the anticipated improvement in the economy and smaller increases in cigarette prices.

But over the next 12 months, the document added, further retail price increases could lead to another decline in use.

The agency's projections indicate total U.S. cigarette output in the 1982-83 season will drop below the 722 billion cigarettes produced last year, partly because of lower domestic use and partly because of falling exports.

The research service also reported a drop in production of cigars and plug chewing tobacco. But output of snuff and loose leaf chewing tobacco increased slightly, the agency said.

The agency forecast overall tobacco use this season about 4 percent below last year's levels, with decreased use of flue-cured tobacco accounting for most of the decline.

"Use is expected to be 15 percent below production, so despite a smaller 1982 crop, stocks carried over to the new marketing year (beginning July 1 for flue-cured tobacco and Oct. 1 for burley and other kinds) will likely climb from last year's 3.55 billion pounds," the report said.

The forecast also called for an increase in supplies again in the next marketing season because the increase in stocks at the start of the year will probably offset the expected drop in the 1983 harvest.

Department statistics indicated that marketings this year will be about 11 percent below the 1.93 billion pounds recorded in 1982, and auction prices may be slightly higher.

Close Call In Air Near Reagan's Motorcade

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A state patrol helicopter monitoring President Reagan's motorcade and a jetliner with 144 people aboard came within 100 yards of each other, but averted at the last minute to avoid a collision.

Authorities said Reagan's quarter-mile-long motorcade was just leaving Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport for suburban Hopkins about 2 p.m. CDT Thursday when the near miss occurred.

The air traffic controller involved in the incident was removed from active duty pending an investigation, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said.

The helicopter was on a security detail, swooping in front of the motorcade to check rooftops and was within site of reporters covering the president. Western flight 530 from Salt Lake City was making its final approach for landing at the Minneapolis airport.

The Boeing 727 jet was about 1.5 miles from the runway at an altitude of 300 to 400 feet when the pilot spotted the helicopter through the right-hand cockpit windows at about "2 o'clock position," Western spokeswoman Linda Dozier said early today from the company's Los Angeles headquarters.

Pilot reports said the Western Boeing 727 veered to the north while the helicopter made a climbing turn to the south. The Western flight then turned back toward the runway and landed safely.

Mr. Dozier said the aircraft came within 300 feet of each other before evasive action was taken.

"Our pilot averted slightly and the helicopter took evasive action," apparently without direction from the Minneapolis control tower, she said.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Robert Botcher said the controller handling the plane was removed from control duties pending an investigation. He said such removal was routine, and refused to identify the controller, who he said has six years of experience.

He said both aircraft were in contact with the control tower.

Botcher said an investigation of the incident "will be carried out at the local level. The findings will be forwarded through regional up to national."

Col. David Allen, pilot of the state patrol helicopter, a Bell Longranger, said the near miss occurred above the intersection of Interstate 494 and Cedar Avenue, just southwest of the airport. He said the motorcade was southbound on Cedar and had not reached the intersection at that time.

"We don't fly directly over the motorcade," Allen told the Minneapolis Star and Tribune. "We fly ahead and watch the buildings."

Giving Up All The Marbles

Greece wants to pick up its marbles and take them home, but it isn't that easy. The objects in question are the famed Elgin Marbles, so named for the 19th century British lord who took them from the Parthenon in Athens — for safekeeping at a time when Napoleon was plundering the eastern Mediterranean — and ultimately sold them to the British Museum in London, where they have been on display since 1816. Now, in an age when many people are claiming what they regard as their lost birthright, the Greeks want back what Minister of Culture Melina Mercouri calls "our roots, our continuity, our soul."

Guardians of the British Museum, and the British government, are understandably reluctant, to put it mildly, to part with the marbles, which constituted about half of the Parthenon's 524-foot frieze, and a number of statues that, before their removal, had stood on the Acropolis (the hill on which the Parthenon sits) since the 5th century B.C. Other museum directors and art lovers around the world rightly fear, moreover, that should Britain acquiesce to the Greek request — not yet formally made — it would set a precedent that, in the words of the British Museum's director, would "open the floodgate to demands from every country in the world that believes it has a case." Among those countries deeply affected would be the United States, whose museums, according to one expert, "would wind up with a few Indian totem poles and some 17th and 18th century landscapes and portraits. And Indian tribal museums might demand the totem poles back."

And yet the precedent, feared by so many, already has been set, and repeated, albeit not with respect to anything so renowned as the Elgin Marbles. Urged on by recent national laws, resolutions adopted by UNESCO and no doubt by a sense of justice, some small museums in this country have returned cultural artifacts to Peru and Panama; Papua New Guinea has regained items from Australia and New Zealand, and France has returned some Babylonian relics to a museum in Baghdad.

Such voluntary redress should be applauded, and no one can fault the Greeks for seeking the return of a vital symbol of their history. The problem comes in knowing where to draw the line between competing interests. At some point — and no one can say precisely at what point — the relics of history acquire a universal value that transcends national boundaries. It would be a gesture of magnanimity for the British to return the Elgin Marbles to their place of origin. Yet even beyond the enlargement and dramatization of a precedent that is unnerving to many, it is also a fact that the Marbles — and countless other symbols of an imperial era that dot the London landscape — are part of British history as well.

The same principle applies elsewhere, and it creates potential conflicts that defy easy solution. If Britain, and other custodians of other peoples' cultural heirlooms, decline to return them to their original owners, it will be understandable, even if not admirable.

Playing Hard Ball

During World War II, our Navy had a toast: "Here's to the Japanese navy. Bottoms up!"

Well, the bottles of that bubbly drink called Seven-Up have a similar toast going these days, too — for Coca-Cola, Pepsi and other competitors. It is the equivalent of "Here's mud in your eye!"

Seven-Up, No. 3 in soft-drink sales, has escalated its war on Nos. 1 and 2 in a new advertising campaign. It flat-out knocks the competitors' products, a kind of advertising that used to be taboo but now is apparently proving effective.

Seven-Up tells how pure its product is, minus any artificial coloring and flavor and, heaven forbid, caffeine — like you know who.

In a new commercial, the actor Geoffrey Holder, a big man with a Caribbean accent, tells of the purity of Seven-Up, of the absence of caffeine. "Never had it. Never will." A gaggle of children gather around, eager to quench their thirst with the bubbly product. "Ah, marvelous!"

Coca-Cola, on the other hand, is livid. It has mailed letters to its 2,000 bottlers across the nation alerting them to what it considers to be Seven-Up's dirty tricks. It sees Seven-Up's campaign as detrimental to the industry. Surely, it has its top brains working on a counterattack.

How will it all end, this trench warfare for millions of consumer dollars? Watch for battle reports.

BERRY'S WORLD

"NOW, THIS — THIS is what I mean when I talk about 'suffocating dependence'!"

By Diane Petryk

In its regular "Staying Well" publication, the Florida Chiropractic Association presents results of research relating to preventive medicine. This month's issue includes these noteworthy tidbits:

Eat breakfast or else. A 10-year study of 7,000 persons by the University of California showed that skipping breakfast is one of seven major health risks — with death risks running 40 percent higher for men and 28 percent higher for women who "rarely" or "sometimes" ate breakfast.

Soup fights fat. A University of Nebraska researcher, analyzing a USDA study, discovered that people consume 5 percent fewer calories on days they eat soup compared to soupless days. Those who sipped soup once daily averaged 1,716 calories per 24 hours, compared with 1,836 for non-soup sippers. And those who ate soup twice a day averaged 1,635 calories. Possible reasons: Soup takes longer to eat, giving time for satiety signals to reach the brain; or, simply, soup, high in volume and low in calories, fills the stomach.

You can run from depression. Two Purdue University researchers found that a group of men who jogged several miles at least three times a week showed little evidence of depression compared with a group of sedentary men. The active men "seemed to be considerably less socially introverted." (But perhaps it's happy men who decide to run in the first place...)

Early retirement, earlier death. Social Security records on 64,382 non-disabled workers who retired between 1962 and 1972 show that 81 percent of the men who retired at age 62 were alive six years later while 86 percent of their peers who did not retire early were alive after the same time span. The spread became larger in later years. In 1977, 42 percent of the early retirees (now age 78) were alive, compared with 51 percent of the men who did not retire early. (In other words, boredom can kill you. Keep busy.)

Frozen foods fit. A food chemistry professor at the University of Wisconsin contends that frozen foods are usually nutritionally equal — and sometimes superior — to "fresh" foods bought at a store. Freezing does not affect very much the value of minerals, fats, carbohydrates and proteins and actually stops the loss of vitamins, particularly C, B, B-2 and niacin, that occurs when fresh foods are stored and transported (Adelle Davis where are you...?) However, the researcher conceded even flash-frozen foods can't compare with vegetables right out of the garden or field.

Another rap for obesity. Even more than cigarette smoking, overweight is a major independent risk factor in heart disease according to 26-year data on 5,000 people analyzed by Framingham, Massachusetts, Heart Study researchers. Obesity ranks right behind cholesterol and age as an indicator of coronary disease and "any increase in weight in adulthood" heightens this risk, they said.

Speak low, lower tension. Tension and stress have been shown to be linked with numerous ailments. Well, now New York voice consultant Sandy Linver has concluded that speaking in lower tones can reduce tension. Speaking at a high pitch tightens throat muscles, she says. This creates tension and those muscles tighten further, resulting in further tension and tiredness. To lower your range — and your tension — she advises we "think" our voices lower and take breaths between sentences. To relax throat muscles, try yawning with your mouth closed. (Besides lowering your tension you'll sound more authoritative and maybe get a pay raise.)

"Staying Well" took a slap at the wait-till-you're-sick-oriented medical practitioners with the following quote from Voltaire:

"The art of medicine consists of amusing the patient while nature cures the disease."

And offered this reminder from Bill Dana: "Pushing fifty is not exercise enough."

ROBERT WAGMAN

Straw Poll May Hurt Candidates

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Appearances are deceiving: An upcoming straw poll that looks like a mere blip on the political landscape might prove to be a watershed event for some Democratic presidential hopefuls.

The straw poll will be conducted among Wisconsin Democrats during their state convention Saturday. The Wisconsin party opted to include the poll after it took note of the media attention drawn by similar polls that were held during the California and Massachusetts party conventions.

It can be argued that these straw polls are meaningless, since they are non-binding and choose no convention delegates — but as past experience has shown: Woe be it to the candidate who underestimates them.

The prime example is John Glenn's experience in Massachusetts. Glenn showed up and spoke at the convention in Springfield, but did little more. In contrast, Walter Mondale had a full-time staff in place, working the delegates for weeks before the convention.

The results were predictable: Mondale won the straw poll and his campaign got a boost. Glenn did badly — and while the loss didn't cost him a single delegate to the 1984 Democratic convention, it damaged his campaign's momentum — and especially hurt his ability to raise funds. From these standpoints, the straw polls have real importance.

Most observers believe that the Wisconsin poll will be especially critical for Sens. Alan Cranston and Gary Hart. Conventional wisdom says that there is room for only one ultra-liberal among the serious Democratic contenders — and, at present, Cranston and Hart are competing for the role of liberal standard-bearer. The Wisconsin poll probably will greatly boost the chances of whichever of the two does better.

So far, Cranston has the upper hand against Hart: He seems to have the superior campaign organization, has raised more money and is running ahead in most public opinion polls. Many experts believe that a weak showing by Hart in this liberal state will all but end his presidential ambitions this time around. Therefore, both Hart and Cranston have been criss-crossing the state in an effort to outdo each other in the poll.

Hart is already crying foul. A Hart campaign official said that while Cranston is campaigning in only a few states, "we are trying to run a national campaign. Gary Hart is a national candidate. Alan Cranston isn't."

But Cranston does seem to be doing well in Wisconsin, especially among liberals.

How White House Managed Summit

WASHINGTON — Quietly but remorselessly, President Reagan has tightened his control over government news channels. He has gone to the extreme of ordering lie detector tests to discourage government employees from leaking "unauthorized" news.

The White House, meanwhile, controls the flood gates, skillfully directing a steady flow of favorable information to media outlets. The economic summit conference at Williamsburg, for example, was a carefully stage-managed media event. Reporters were given comfortable accommodations, fed the daily White House line and occupied with diversions. But they were effectively shut off from unauthorized versions of the Williamsburg talks.

I have been a copy of the White House's confidential strategy paper for handling the press at Williamsburg. It provides everything but a shooting script and camera-angle directions. It even contains a list of one dozen "Desired Headlines."

"President's domestic policies

WILLIAM RUSHER

Herald Tribune Shoehorn

BURGENSTOCK, Switzerland (NEA)

A few days among the lakes and chalets of the Swiss Alps are remarkably good for the soul, but even here the political controversies of the United States are hard to escape altogether. As a matter of fact, coincidentally enough, it was in the International Herald Tribune (the daily paper published in Paris for the convenience of news-starved Americans abroad) that I came across the other day one of the gaudiest birds in all political journalism.

I say "coincidentally enough," because the species was first identified in 1964 by Karl Hess and dubbed by him "the Herald Tribune shoehorn." In honor of the New York newspaper, now defunct, in which he spotted it. The New York Herald Tribune fathered the Paris paper, which today consists mostly of stuff reprinted from The New York Times and Washington Post (they now own it jointly); but it is a chip off the old block, and is never so happy as when it is pounding some liberal drum — a vice that, in the view of many, ultimately killed its original parent publication.

Hess was a speech writer for Barry Goldwater in the presidential election campaign of 1964, and accordingly was understandably more sensitive than most people to the jobbing Goldwater got from the press in the course of that memorable year. In a book written afterward, Hess discussed the subject, and singled out for particular condemnation a journalistic technique he had observed in The New York Herald Tribune. It was to report, forthrightly enough, something that Goldwater had said — and then shoehorned in, as gratuitously as a commercial for the Democratic National Committee, a sentence beginning "He didn't explain how ..." or something of the sort. Hess called this "the Herald Tribune shoehorn," and rightly suggested that it had no place in honest journalism.

The objection to the technique, of course, is that it gets a politically biased reporter directly involved in arguing, with the politician whose speech he is covering, whether some point in the speech is valid or tendentious. If it is, in fact, tendentious, the newspaper reader doesn't need, and probably doesn't want, some reporter who is heavily slanted the other way pointing it out to him. He may be able to see the flaw himself (if there really is one), and if he believes it you can be sure that the other candidate or his spokesmen will pounce on it and call it to the readers' attention the very next day.

The Herald Tribune shoehorn, in other words, is simply a gratuitous intrusion in a purported news story, by a reporter so biased against the man he is covering that he can't wait for the opposition to cut him up.

With that definition in mind, consider the plumage of this specimen, which was reprinted in the International Herald Tribune the other day as reported from the Williamsburg summit by "Lou Cannon and Hobart Rowen of The Washington Post," and see if you can identify the species:

"Mr. Reagan said Saturday in his weekly radio broadcast that the United States is leading the allies toward economic recovery, but he did not mention the opinion of many economists that high U.S. interest rates had helped lead those same nations into recession and could diminish the recovery."

No, and he also didn't mention the charge of Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt that U.S. recovery is itself being achieved at the expense of high unemployment. Maybe he didn't mention these things because he happens to believe they aren't true. For that matter, Messrs. Cannon and Rowen didn't mention that France's current economic difficulties were, in the opinion of many observers, caused far more by President Francois Mitterrand's cockamamie socialist policies than by the world recession, whatever may have caused the latter.

Williamsburg would strike many Americans as merely a good cure for insomnia, the White House media manipulators tried a bit desperately to strike some spark of interest in the public. The first of 10 "major public affairs themes" was this: "Williamsburg is a people-oriented Summit."

To buttress this dubious proposition, the president's people pushed three sub-themes: "Popularly elected leaders are determining the agenda, not bureaucrats (top down); emphasis on jobs, on bread-and-butter issues that matter to everybody; (and) informality of atmosphere and no-frills environment will promote freer discussions."

If these themes sound familiar, it's because the diligent White House press agents succeeded in selling them to the bored reporters, who were kept in splendid isolation at Williamsburg and had trouble digging up any real news stories.

Generally speaking, the White House flacks were pleased with what they read in the papers. For example, the Los

ROBERT WALTERS

Global Trickle Down...

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (NEA) — It was a striking display of the audacity which in the past has caused other nations of the world to alternately (and sometimes simultaneously) admire and revile the United States.

On the concluding day of the Summit of Industrialized Nations held here recently, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan boldly proclaimed that the final communiqué agreed upon by the seven participating countries embodied "an economic policy designed to complete the recovery for the rest of the world."

Perhaps only this country could display such certitude about the applicability and efficacy of its preferred solutions to the deep and disparate economic problems faced by rich and poor nations all across the globe.

Regan's show of confidence was especially notable because it came from a senior official of a government which expended an inordinate amount of energy in resisting the entreaties of its summit partners to enhance its commitment to aiding the less developed countries of the world.

During a tense negotiating session which lasted almost all night, this country's delegation reportedly was virtually isolated from representatives of the other six nations on the matter of how to handle the LDC issue in the draft communiqué to be presented to the heads of state for their approval the following morning.

An early draft stressed the need for full funding of the International Development Association, the World Bank's "soft loan window" which provides high-risk, low-interest loans to many of the world's most impoverished nations.

Less than a month before the summit, Canadian Deputy Prime Minister Allan J. MacEachen cited, in a Paris speech, "the continuing financial crisis besetting the... IDA due to arrears in payments by the largest donor."

That delinquent donor, the United States, campaigned successfully here to strip the communiqué of any reference to the importance of IDA funding and to weaken the remaining language in the section of the communiqué devoted to LDCs.

Those poorer nations remain far behind their industrialized counterparts in terms of fulfilling virtually all basic human needs, but assisting the LDCs has become far more than a philanthropic exercise.

The aggregate external debt of the LDCs is estimated to be $500 billion to $700 billion, with about half of those funds owed to commercial banks. At least $100 billion of that debt is held by banks in this country.

Angeles Times headline on May 31, the morning after the summit ended, declared: "Summit promises economic unity."

Another Times headline also came close to one the White House had written in advance: "Leaders end Williamsburg meetings seeing clear signs of world recovery."

But the news manipulators must have been disappointed at the media's failure to pick up on one of their suggested themes: "Superb logistical and administrative organization of Williamsburg Summit itself reflects dynamic U.S. leadership."

They even wrote a hopeful headline for this self-congratulatory story: "Summit partners praise Williamsburg organization." But alas, there were no takers.

Footnote: A White House spokesman told my reporters Lucette Laguarda and Leslie Adler the public relations strategy, drawn up on orders of National Security Adviser William P. Clark, was a complete success.

Gardening

Rose A Magnificent Shrub That Requires Special Care

The rose, the "Queen of Flowers," is grown in all 50 of the United States, but this magnificent shrub requires special care in Florida. An evergreen shrub in this state, the rose grows and blooms all year in Central Florida. It planting to encourage growth and help to establish a new plant. The first flowers allowed to develop should be cut with short stems to leave as much foliage as possible on the plant.

Remove dead wood and canes showing disease symptoms. Cut the affected part back to healthy wood and remove it from the garden. Additional pruning should be done each year during December or January. In south Florida, pruning may need to be done twice a year for size control, once in March and again in August. To avoid dieback and encourage rapid healing, pruning cuts should be made just above a dormant bud.

A schedule of rose maintenance includes spraying and irrigation each week, grooming and fertilization after each flush or growth, pruning and mulching during each winter season. This caring for the health of the rose plant can provide an abundance of bloom that extends through the growing seasons of many years.

All Seminole County Agricultural Extension Services programs are open to all regardless of race, color, sex or national origin.

is a high maintenance plant, requiring year long grooming for maximum flower production.

When selecting rose plants, consider your intended use of the blossoms. Preference for roses with a special trait may guide your selection. Choose plants grafted on to Rosa fortuniana rootstock. They are longer lived, grow larger, are more vigorous, and produce more flowers, than plants grown on their roots and those grafted on 'Dr. Huey' and multiflora rootstocks.

Plant roses where they will get direct sunlight for at least six hours during the day. Where some shading is unavoidable, locations which supply morning sunlight are preferred.

The best soil for roses is one that has good drainage yet holds an adequate supply of moisture and nutrients. Nutrients are most readily available to roses in a moderately to slightly acid soil, pH 5.5 - 6.5. Roses should not be planted in poorly drained soils. Minor drainage problems of low areas can be overcome by raising the bed level several inches.

Materials that will increase the water holding capacity, improve the nutrient balance and change the pH can be added to the soil before planting. Preplanting soil amendments not only improve plant growth and beauty but also reduce the effort needed to keep plants growing well.

Organic materials to amend poor soils include compost, leaf-mold, peat, muck, and well rotted manures. As much as a four inch layer of any of these or a combination of two or more will improve most soils. Mix amendments thoroughly and evenly to a depth of twelve inches.

Dormant bare-rooted plants, which are available October through March, will be in bloom about ten weeks after planting. Leafy container grown roses can be transplanted anytime. Remove dead, broken and diseased wood before planting.

Florida's high light intensity, warm temperatures and mild winters cause roses to make some growth all year and more growth during warm months than in northern states. Roses grow larger and require more space in the Florida landscape so allow for size increase when planting.

In most locations, roses should receive one inch of water once a week. Water should be applied to the soil surface to prevent the build up of high levels of soluble salts in the root zone and prevent water on the foliage which increases disease potential.

A complete fertilizer should be applied five to seven times a year, on application each time plants produce a flush of growth. Alternate applications of a 1-1-1 analysis ratio fertilizer such as 8-8-8 with 1-0-1 analysis ratio fertilizer such as 10-10-10. This fertilization program will prevent the buildup of high levels of phosphorus.

Growing is a regular feature of rose culture. Removing faded flowers after each flush of bloom improves plant appearance and prevents fruit development. Flower buds should be removed for the first two months after

Lori Kooy Bride Of C.H. Hunt

Lori Ann Kooy and Christopher Hoyle Hunt are announcing their marriage today. They exchanged vows on May 1, at 3 p.m., at the First Baptist Church, Sanford. The Rev. Joe Chambers performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kooy, 117 W. Jinkins Circle, Sanford. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Hunt, 520 Valencia St., Sanford.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a formal gown fashioned along the Spanish silhouette with a Queen Anne neckline and sheer bishop sleeves enhanced with lace motifs. The skirt extended into a chapel-length train. Her chapel-length veil was secured to a lace headpiece and she carried a cascade of white carnations and baby's breath.

Mrs. Edda Brandie attended the bride as matron of honor. She wore a lilac-colored gown styled with a bustle and carried a nosegay of pink carnations and lavender daisies.

Bridesmaids were Karen Kooy, sister of the bride; and Kelly Hunt and Susan Hunt, sisters of the bridegroom. Their gowns and flowers were identical to the honor attendant's.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Groomsmen were Peter Kooy, Paul Smith and Rodney Hart.

Following the reception at the Woman's Club of Sanford, the newlyweds departed on a wedding trip to St. Augustine.

They are making their home at 122-D Hummingbird St., Deltona. The bride is employed by Publix Supermarkets and the bridegroom is employed by Central Aluminum, Sanford.

Deputies Honored At Cattlemen's Social

The Geneva Community Hall was the site for this year's annual family steak dinner of the Seminole County Cattlemen's Association.

Over 50 members and guests gathered Saturday, June 4, to enjoy steaks grilled outdoors under stormy skies by cooks Herald and Janet Burkette. The remainder of the menu included fresh corn on the cob, potato salad and iced tea.

Following a short business meeting, president Edward Yarborough gave a brief history of the Range and Water Unit of the Seminole County Sheriff's Department. The unit was organized in 1975 to stop the theft of livestock. In the past year a total of seven cases were reported and six were cleared by the arrests of 14 persons. All but nine have been convicted and they are awaiting trial.

Four Sheriff's deputies received plaques from the county and letters of appreciation from the State Cattlemen's Association for their outstanding work. Polly Golden, executive director of the Florida Beef Council awarded the letters of appreciation while Edward Yarborough gave the plaques to

Lou Childers

Deputies Leonard Conley, Jim Engebretsen, Donald Dreggors and Sgt. Glen Trombly.

On the lighter side of the day, Reba Yarborough and Kevin Todd, members of a clogging team, "The SunSations," provided entertainment for the cattlemen's group as they donned special costumes made for the occasion by Mrs. Edward Yarborough. The couple dressed in jumpsuits "topped with cow heads" and presented a well-received clogging exhibition.

Mr. Charley Beck was made an honorary member of the Seminole County Cattlemen's Association as a result of serving many years as a range rider checking for cows that had not been dipped for tick fever. He also served as a deputy under Sheriff Hand and Sheriff Merro of Seminole County, and was himself a candidate for sheriff. Mr. Beck has cattle in Volusia County and members of the Seminole group say, "at 74 he sits a horse very well when the need arises."

Sunday evening, June 5, an open house and dedication was held at L&L Upholstery Shop at the corner of Geneva Drive and Division Street in Oviedo, hosted by the owner, Mrs. Lillie Simpkins of Chuluota.

Following the dedication service, led by the Rev. Frank Adams, refreshments were served which included cake, tea, coffee and soft drinks.

Those celebrating the opening of the relocated business with Mrs. Simpkins and her children Leale and Louanne were: Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sobie, Mrs. May Love, Mr. and Mrs. Art Porter, Rev. and Mrs. Frank Adams and daughter, Miranda, Mrs. Treva Crites, Mrs. Eric Patrick, Miss Kim Nunnery, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Starke and daughter Chrissy, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Childers and children, David, Jim, and Susi.

Wife Hesitates To Jump From Sinking Marriage

DEAR ABBY: I recently discovered that my husband of 38 years has been having an affair with a young woman of questionable character. She made sure that everyone in town knew about their relationship, adding to my hurt and humiliation.

Friends have rallied to my support. My minister, family physician and married children are all urging me to divorce my husband, but I am not sure I want a divorce. Like most women of my generation, I consider marriage a lifetime commitment.

I am by nature a very tolerant and forgiving person, and frankly, the thought of living the rest of my life alone frightens me. Also, I am home-oriented, with no skills.

With our present moral climate, I'm sure there are thousands of older women who find themselves in a similar position.

Is it better to keep my marriage vows and forgive a husband who has broken his, or face the future alone? What do you advise?

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE

DEAR FOR: Never mind what your friends, minister, family physician and married children say. As long as a shadow of doubt exists in your mind, stay married. (I would give a man the same advice.) Never cut what you can unravel.

DEAR ABBY: I am

dating a girl who has a very irritating habit. She interrupts me in the presence of others to correct my pronunciation of words.

I wouldn't mind so much, but later when I check my dictionary, I learn that I was right and she was wrong.

How should I deal with this? No names or initials, please, as this is a very small town.

DEAR IRRITATED: If there are two girls in your town, date the other one.

DEAR ABBY: You asked how one may be certain his burial wishes will be carried out when the law provides that the next of kin has the final say.

A few years ago, an Arkansas man wanted his body cremated and his ashes scattered on the White River, where he had spent many happy hours fishing with his friend, the local undertaker. He had a lawyer draw up his will, leaving all his property to his next of kin, provided they followed his wishes. The will stated that if they failed to do so, everything would go to the undertaker. He gave an executed copy to the undertaker and then committed suicide.

The next of kin insisted on burial instead of cremation. The undertaker said, "If you want to make me his heir, I'll bury him, but if you want his property, you'd better let me cremate him and scatter his ashes on the White River."

No argument. He was cremated.

COUNTRY LAWYER

DEAR LAWYER: It should be stressed that the next of kin, the funeral director and all others concerned should be notified prior to death, since most wills are not read until after the funeral takes place.

Buddy Lake — An Amazing Man With Amazing Memories

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Buddy Lake, a 1930 graduate of Sanford High School, was a standout pitcher and hitter in the Florida State League for 15 years. Tuesday, Lake and some of his old cronies will get together for an oldtimers game at Sanford Memorial Stadium at 6 p.m. prior to a FSL game between the Daytona Beach Astros and the Tampa Tarpons.)

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

Buddy Lake sits in the first-base dugout at Sanford Memorial Stadium and looks out over the field. It's been a long time since Lake, 69, could hit and throw like these youngsters — but it's a pretty safe bet none of them could hit and throw like Bernard "Buddy" Lake in his prime.

It's coach Lake now. The energetic veteran is handling the third base coaching box for the B & R Family in the Summer League at the Stadium. Although it's been over 30 years since Lake used to strut his stuff for the hometown fans, the mind hasn't withered one bit. He still recalls with the perfection the events of yesteryear, right down to the correct spelling of the names.

Lake was Sanford's most famous baseball player until Tim Raines burst into the spotlight several years ago. The 1930 Sanford High School graduate made a habit of nosediving opponent's batting averages as a right-handed pitcher during his early pro career, and then, when the arm lost some of its zing, he taught himself to hit and came away with a batting title and a runs batted in crown.

"I guess they call it rotator cuff now," Buddy, who will turn 70 on July 30, says about his shoulder problems. "Back then, we just called it bursitis."

Lake's minor league baseball career spanned almost 20 years, 1932-1951. He played semi-pro baseball after graduation in 1931. He got his big break in 1932 when he went to spring training with the Boston Braves.

He showed enough to earn an "A contract" which sent him to the Harrisonburg, Penn. club in the New York Penn League. Lake played there for three years, then was sold to Albany, a AA club in the old International League. The shoulder started to grind around then and Lake was sold to the Sanford Giants.

With the wing in trouble, some players may have considered hanging it up, but not Lake. On his way home to Sanford, he stopped off at an aunt's house near Louisville, Ky. It wasn't long before the local town team stopped by and inquired about his availability for an Sunday afternoon encounter with the arch rival down the road.

Figuring that his best fastball may still be in Pennsylvania, Lake decided this time was as good as ever to become a hitter, and a switch-hitter at that. "If I was going to become a switch-hitter, there wasn't any better place to start," says Lake. "None of these guys knew me. I was just a fair hitter right-handed.

Couldn't hit the curve. Had my left foot balling out.

"It was a lot better on the left side with it breaking into me. I was just a fair hitter...but I developed," he added.

Boy, did he develop. Just a few years later while playing for St. Augustine in the Florida State League, Lake led the league in hitting. A league which included future major league slugger Chuck Klein and a young, left-handed pitcher named Stan Musial. Musial wouldn't pitch much longer as the International League would later find out.

"Everything just went right that year," Lake recalls modestly. "Oh, it was quite a race. We had three of us, Klein, an outfielder from Sanford named Ralph Hyder, and myself sitting around .350 going into the last game."

And when that last game was over, Lake had himself a 3 for 4 day and the FSL batting championship with a .352 average. He finished strong with 10 hits in his last 16 at bats. Klein finished at .351-plus and Hyder was right at .350.

One wonders where Buddy Lake may have played had the "bursitis" come a little sooner in his career.

Lake admits he didn't have much power. "Four or five homers a year," he says. "I used to spray the ball a lot."

In 1946, he sprayed it enough to drive in 140 runs, a Florida State League record.

A year later, however, Lake came up with his most remarkable accomplishment. And it came with an arm which had seen its best days.

On July 19, 1947 at DeLand's Conrad Park, while pitching for the Sanford Giants, Buddy Lake turned in one of the most amazing feats in minor league history. Lake hurled 18 scoreless innings, came up in the top of the 19th and clubbed a homer, then set the DeLand Redcaps down in the bottom of the inning for a 19-inning, complete-game shutout. He allowed just one walk. It was the longest complete-game shutout in the history of the league. And it came, incidentally, during the second game of a double-header after Buddy had played seven innings of third base in the first game.

"It was a twillight night game," he remembers like it was yesterday. "The second game started about 8 p.m. and finished at 12:10 a.m. It was moving pretty fast. You have to go pretty good to get in 19 innings in a little over four hours."

More remarkably, the Redcap pitcher, Yogi Alonzo, went the entire 19 innings, too. "I think we both had just about had it," Lake says. "I wasn't trying to hit a home run. I hit it just right and it sailed over the right-field fence. It was 350 down the line, so it was a pretty good poke."

Just one year later on July 24, 1948, Lake joined a very select group — whether it be minor or major — when he tossed a perfect game against DeLand. Until 1953, it was the only perfect game in Florida State League history.

While the 19-inning masterpiece and the perfect game will long be remembered by FSL fans and Lake, Buddy says it was a run and not a pitch that he remembers and cherishes most.

His most memorable feat came in the Shaughnessy Playoff Series which matched the top four teams in the FSL in a post-season playoff. On Sept. 10, 1946, Lake's Sanford club was deadlocked at two games each with St. Augustine in a semi-final series.

With the score tied at 1-1 in the bottom of the ninth, Lake led off with a single to left field. Two ground outs later, he was perched on third, just 90 feet away with the winning run.

"Ossie Glorig was at the plate and he couldn't hit his way out of a paper bag," laughs Buddy. "Their pitcher Gene Allen was taking a long windup and I said to myself, 'If he takes that long one again, I'm gone.'"

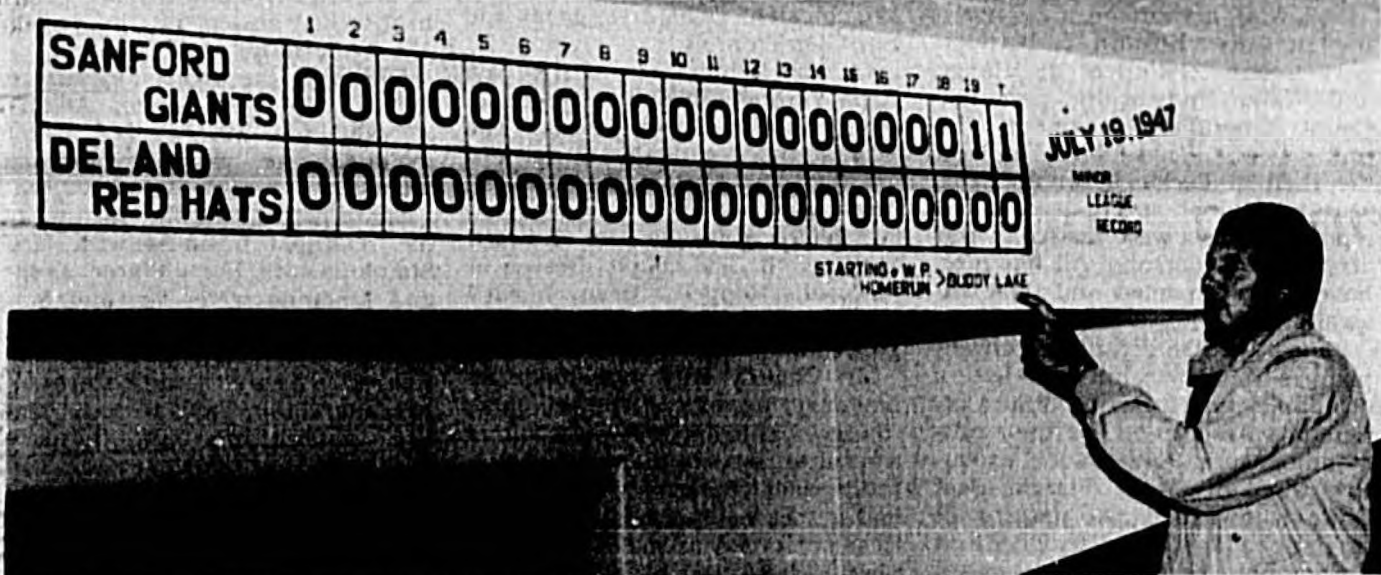

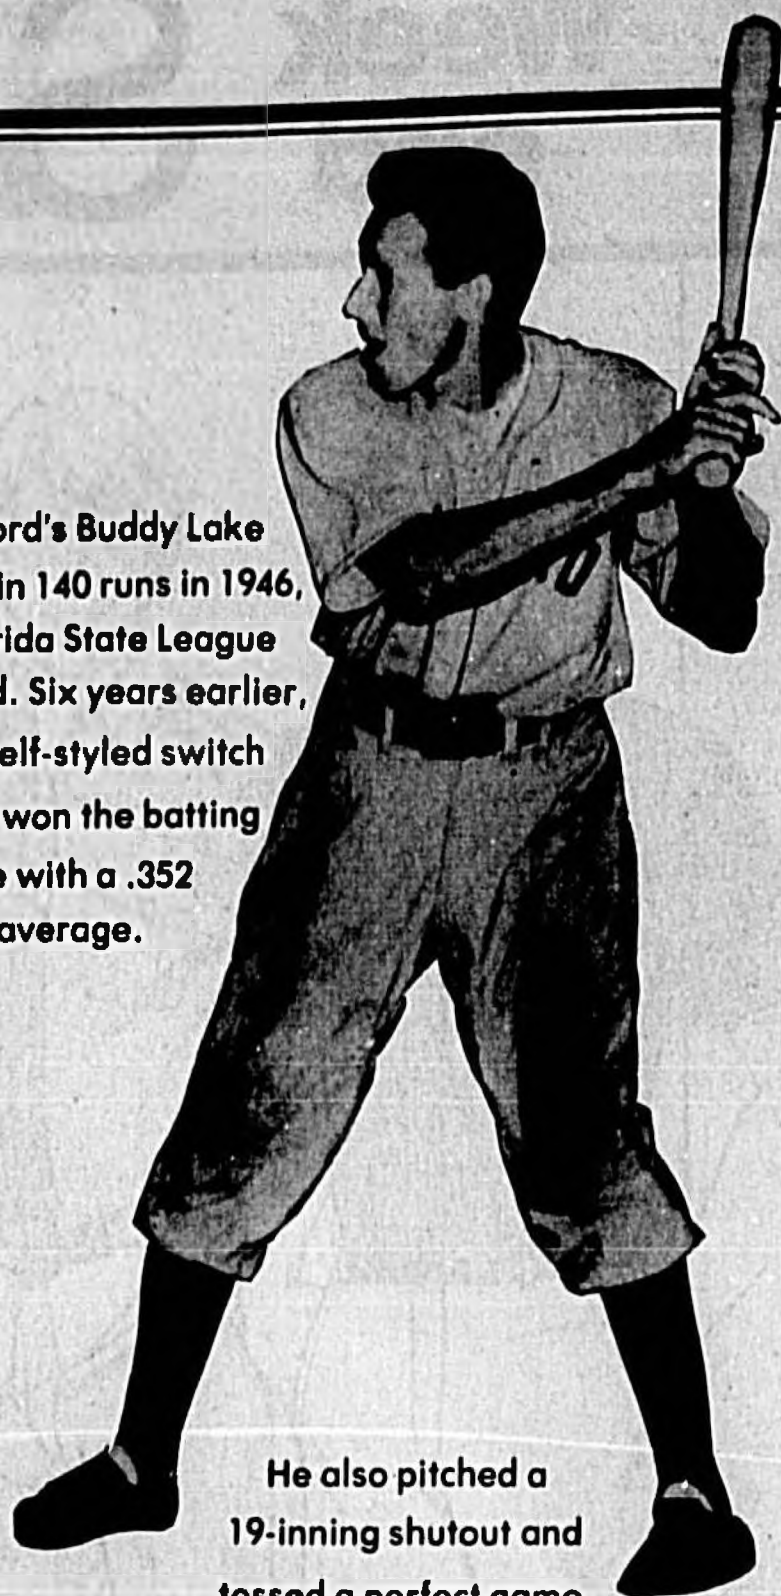

With the count at 2-1, Smith went into his long one, and Lake made his dash for the plate. "It was bang-bang," Buddy says clapping his hands twice. "But I got in under the tag and the umpire called me safe."

"The crowd went wild. I'll never forget (winning pitcher) Jim Schaniel straddling my shoulders. It was an amazing ending," Lake concluded.

Which, of course, was pulled off by a pretty amazing man — Bernard "Buddy" Lake.

Sanford's Buddy Lake drove in 140 runs in 1946, a Florida State League record. Six years earlier, the self-styled switch hitter won the batting title with a .352 average.

He also pitched a 19-inning shutout and tossed a perfect game during his FSL days.

Wes Rinker points to one of Buddy Lake's most remarkable accomplishments — a 19-inning shutout he pitched and won with a home run. The game is still a Florida State League record for the longest shutout.

Lake, 69, still keeps active in base by coaching a team in the National Baseball Congress Summer League at Memorial Stadium. Here, he congratulates Seminole Community College's Bobby Thigpen for winning the most valuable player trophy in the Fall League.

Prep Year — Notable, Disappointing And Unusual

As the school year comes to an end, the Evening Herald takes a look back at some of the most notable, disappointing and unusual events that made up the 1982-83 athletic year in Seminole County.

The top highlights of the year included Ken Cheeseman's stunning victory in the mile run at the 4A State Track Championships at Winter Park's Showalter Field. Cheeseman had taken the perennial back seat to Winter Park's Brian Jaeger over the past few years as the Lake Howell junior had never beaten the Winter Park senior. Cheeseman's victory came in the last time the state's top two millers would ever meet in a high school track meet.

Lake Mary's Jack Likens turned in another of the year's great performances as he claimed the 3A State Wrestling crown at 107 pounds. Likens' triumph gave the Rams' junior a perfect 32-0 record in his weight class for the season and made Likens Lake Mary High School's first state champion.

Other highlights included Lyman's Lori Carroll (high jump) and Schowonda Williams (hurdles) winning state track titles. Charita Medlock's leap of 19-6 in the long jump, a 4th place finish in the state for Lake Brantley's girls cross country team, the incredible comeback of the district champion Lake Howell girls' basketball team and a stunning upset of highly favored Jones High by Lake Mary's Lady Rams in the 3A district title game. Lake Mary's track teams pulled off a surprise by sweeping twin district titles and Seminole High's girls track team brought the region title home after a dreary athletic year at Seminole.

Some of the more versatile athletes who play three sports and do them all well include Christy Scott of Lake Howell who excels in volleyball, basketball and track; Kim Averill of Lake Mary, the only four-sport athlete in the county, cross country, basketball, track, softball; Laura and Peggy Glass of Lake Mary, volleyball, basketball and track; and Arlene Jones of Seminole, volleyball basketball and track.

Lyman High again proved to have the best all-around athletic program as the Greyhounds had outstanding teams in nearly every sport.

Among the disappointments of the 1982-83 school year were Seminole High's 0-10 "lost season" in football and the ineligibility of Lake Howell's outstanding girls basketball player Chiquita Miller that forced the Lady Hawks to forfeit 15 victories.

Here is a look at the athletic year that was 1982-83.

Yeager's Gummy Effort Lifts L.A. Past Braves

ATLANTA (UPI) — It took a little pep talk by Tommy Lasorda to get an ailing Steve Yeager in the lineup and the Atlanta Braves wish the Los Angeles skipper hadn't been so persuasive.

Yeager, bothered by a chronic bad knee, was not penciled in the original lineup Thursday night but Lasorda persuaded his catcher to ignore the pain. He responded with three hits, including a three-run double in the eighth inning, and drove in all four runs in a 4-2 Los Angeles victory.

"I wasn't going to play but Tommy gave me a $150 pep talk and I went out there and put out a $200 effort," joked Yeager, who has had to do almost all the catching with Mike Scioscia on the disabled list.

His big hit was a soft bouncer down the first base line that just eluded Atlanta's Chris Chambliss, who was playing in for a play at the plate and also off the line for the righthanded-hitting Yeager.

"I don't think I could have placed it better," said Yeager, who also drove in the other Dodger run with a groundout in the second inning.

"It was a cheap hit but I will take it. It makes up for a line drive every now and then."

"It was just a slow-hit ball that I didn't catch," said Chambliss, who said the ball went under his glove.

Reds Will Lose Bench

On a night when the starting lineup was impressive, the Cincinnati Reds learned they would lose their bench.

Johnny Bench, the Reds' all-star catcher turned third baseman and a virtual certainty for the Hall of Fame, called a Friday news conference to announce his retirement from baseball at the end of the 1983 season.

The news came after Bruce Berenyi pitched a seven-hitter and doubled in two runs Thursday night to help the Reds snap a four-game losing streak with an 8-1 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Mets 6, Cubs 4

At Chicago, Bob Bailor doubled in Mike Jorgensen and Danny Heep with two out in the 11th to help snap the Cubs' seven-game winning streak, their longest since May, 1978. Jesse Orosco, 4-2.

Baseball

earned the victory. Jay Johnstone homered for Chicago, the 100th homer of his career.

Pirates 6, Expos 3

At Montreal, Tony Pena drove in three runs and pitcher Larry McWilliams, 7-3, knocked in a pair for Pittsburgh. Steve Rogers fell to 7-3. Gary Carter was ejected from the game in the bottom of the seventh for arguing a called third strike with plate umpire Jerry Davis.

Dodgers 4, Braves 2

At Atlanta, Steve Yeager bounced a bases-loaded double over first baseman Chris Chambliss' glove with one out in the eighth to drive in three runs and lift Los Angeles. Dave Stewart, 5-1, pitched the final three innings to earn the victory.

Terry Forster, 1-1, took the loss.

Phillies 6, Cardinals 5

At Philadelphia, Bob Dernier singled in Pete Rose from second with two out in the 11th for the Phillies. Shortstop Ozzie Smith's error dropped Dave Von Ohlen, 1-1, and lifted Ron Reed, 3-1. Joe Morgan homered twice for Philadelphia. St. Louis' Willie McGee hit in his 18th straight game, an NL high this season.

Astros 3, Giants 0

At Houston, Bob Knepper, 2-8, fired a two-hitter and drove home a run with his first career triple to lead the Astros to their fifth straight victory. The decision completed a three-game sweep of San Francisco, which lost its fourth straight. Mike Krukow, 3-4, took the loss.

Tigers 6, Red Sox 2

The Detroit Tigers held their own party at Boston Thursday night and ended 10 years of frustration at Fenway Park.

Detroit unloaded four triples as part of a six extra base hit barrage and downed the Red Sox 8-2 to complete a sweep of their four-game series.

Orioles 10, Brewers 7

At Baltimore, rookie Leo Hernandez drove in four runs with a home run and a single and Ken Singleton added a two-run homer, enabling the Orioles to survive a club record six errors and complete a three-game sweep of the Brewers.

Ailing Steve Yeager, coaxed into playing by manager Tom Lasorda, delivered a three-run double to lift the Dodgers past Atlanta Thursday.

Jim Gantner hit a three-run homer for Milwaukee.

Royals 6, Twins 5

At Kansas City, Mo., Pat Sheridan's suicide squeeze bunt in the eighth inning lifted Kansas City to victory and helped the Royals complete a three-game sweep of the Twins. Bill Castro hurled five innings of middle relief to boost his record to 1-0 with Dan Quisenberry hurling the ninth for his 15th save. Randy Bush and Gary Ward homered for Minnesota.

A's 3, Blue Jays 1

At Oakland, Calif., Wayne Gross homered to support the combined six-hit pitching of Tom Underwood and Steve Baker and lead the A's to victory. Underwood, 4-2, limited the Blue Jays to one run and four hits in his 7 1/3 innings. Baker earned his fourth save by pitching the final 1 2/3 innings.

Angels 3, White Sox 2

At Anaheim, Calif., Bobby Clark delivered a sacrifice fly with the bases loaded and one out in the seventh inning to cap a two-run uprising and rally the Angels to victory. Tommy John notched his sixth complete game of the year, despite allowing 11 hits, to improve his record to 8-2.

Mariners 3, Rangers 2

At Seattle, Todd Cruz, who earlier homered, greeted reliever Dave Tobik with an RBI single in the 11th inning to lift the Mariners. Bill Caudill, 1-3, picked up the victory in relief while Charlie Hough, 3-6, suffered the loss.

Crew Praised In Emergency Landing

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — A National Transportation Safety Board official praised a flight crew for "a fantastic job" in making a successful emergency landing after a propeller flew off its plane.

The NTSB set up a command post for its investigation of Wednesday night's accident, which occurred as the four-engine Reeve Aleutian Airlines Lockheed Electra plane, carrying 15 people, was en route from Cold Bay, Alaska, to Seattle.

The company called a news conference today to discuss the incident.

The plane lost the prop from its No. 4 engine shortly after taking off from Cold Bay. It damaged the fuselage and engine controls.

Circling west of Anchorage for nearly two hours, crew members rigged "a combination of backup systems" to lower the crippled landing gear and land the plane with its 10 passengers and five crew members.

"The crew did a fantastic job," James Michelangelo, chief of the National Transportation Safety Board office in Alaska, said Thursday. "Our report will definitely bring that out."

No one was hurt but flames shot out from the wheels and a tire blew as the pilot slammed on the brakes when he touched down with the throttle stuck open. The nose gear collapsed as the plane came to rest and it sank to the runway, said. "I've never had an airplane come unglued like that before."

Michelangelo said the crew avoided a belly-landing on foam or ditching in a nearby inlet by getting the gear down "using a combination of backup systems."

The safety board's investigators will question about 40 people to determine the cause of the mishap. The agency has taken the plane's log and flight and voice recorders, he said.

Passenger Richard Krueger, 37, a commercial fisherman from Seattle, said of the experience that there was a loud crash as the propeller went into the fuselage and he could feel the plane vibrating. "We knew the prop came off," he said. "We looked out the window and it was gone."

Oxygen masks dropped and pilot began lowering his altitude as he diverted the plane to Anchorage. Passengers kept on the masks until the plane leveled off at a lower altitude and the crew began instructing them on emergency landings — both on land and in the sea.

Krueger said the worst part was flying over the ocean and worrying the plane would be forced to ditch.

"That was the worst part," Krueger, who works on a 130-foot crab fishing vessel, said. "I could handle it crashing and landing but out there it's something else."

Fire and rescue equipment, along with ground technicians and other emergency officials, waited as the plane circled the airport.

"Flames were coming from the brakes under both wings," a witness said. "But they didn't spread. The emergency people on the runway had foam on that thing within 10 seconds after it stopped. It was that fast — that crash truck was right there."

Reagan To Fight To Death For Tax Cut

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — President Reagan says every taxpayer, rich or poor, should get the same tax cut and he vows to fight Democratic attempts to limit or repeal his 10 percent tax rate reduction scheduled July 1.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Thursday Democrats in the House overwhelmingly support his proposal to limit the tax cut to $700, and predicted the idea will pass.

The July tax cut is the final stage of Reagan's three-year, 25-percent across-the-board personal tax rate cut Congress approved in 1981. Under O'Neill's plan, the 10 percent cut in tax rates would take effect, but no taxpayer would enjoy more than a $700 reduction in his tax bill. Reagan, interviewed Thursday by television station KSTP, was asked whether he might be willing to accept any changes in the tax cut.

"No," Reagan said. "I'll fight to the death against that tax cut."

Reagan clearly erred in describing the Democrats' efforts as a tax cut. He went on to stress his unwavering support for his reduction, arguing that 72 percent of its benefits will go to taxpayers who make less than $50,000 a year.

"I think it's only fair that a tax cut goes across the board — even Steven the same percentage cut for everyone."

The reiteration of his opposition to any changes in the tax cut came while Reagan was in Minnesota to talk education policy and help enrich the campaign coffers of Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.

O'Neill said of 180 House Democrats responding to his poll so far, 23 said the 10 percent tax cut should remain intact and the remainder expressed support for some limit on the tax reduction, with his proposal to limit tax reductions to $700 "running away with it."

"Apparently the $700 cap will get a sufficient number of Democrats to carry in the House," O'Neill told reporters at his regular pre-session briefing.

Later in the day, an O'Neill aide said 210 of the 266 House Democrats had responded to the questionnaire with the majority showing "a strong preference" for the $700 cap. Official results of the poll would be released next week, the aide said.

The idea also picked up support on the other side of Capitol Hill, when Sens. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., announced Wednesday they would lead a Senate fight to limit the tax cut to $700.

But a staff memo to Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee says the $700 cap would affect taxpayers who do not itemize their deductions at much lower income levels — $31,150 for single taxpayers and $39,250 for a family of four with one wage-earner.

The memo also said the cap would not significantly affect taxpayers in the top tax bracket with incomes over $100,000 a year.

It Is If You're A Scale RR Hobbyist

Is This Any Way To Run A Railroad?

By Katherine Burkett
Herald Correspondent

The scene is an average American living room; the time, a child's birthday. An expansive miniature train track twists and turns through building block houses and paper-mache mountains. A model train rounds the bend and whistles shrilly.

At the controls is a man in his early 30s, oblivious to the youngster tugging at his sleeve pleading, "Dad, when is it going to be my turn?"

The Central Florida members of the Florida Live Steamers and Railroaders have developed this adult fascination for shiny engines, endless track and steam whistles to a larger degree as well as a bigger scale.

These railroaders' most popular model size is one-eighth the size of the real thing. For comparison's sake, the average table top model train is one eighty-fourth the size of a regular railroad.

For these model railroaders, the main focus of their efforts involves the construction of an engine. Although there are some ready-made kits on the market, most hobbyists like doing it themselves, depending on their own creativity.

The cost of the kits is one factor for their unpopularity, another is the fact that they save only a limited amount of time — the hobbyist must still do a great deal of the rudimentary work.

Most hobbyists buy the basic casts from a catalogue. There are enough different body shapes and possible variations in construction to make the finished product unique. Also expensive; a typical engine can cost the hobbyist $5,000-$8,000 to build.

How much the hobbyist relies on pre-made parts depends on the skills and resources of the individual, as well as the rarity of the engine he wants to build. One club member made two trips to Colorado and spent four years researching so that he could make a model of the steam engine his grandfather had designed.

He took measurements of the engine and drew up his own blueprints, then constructed his own mold and poured his own castings.

According to Tom Hill, a Sanford member who hosts one of the club's semi-annual meets, the engine design chosen often resembles a prototype that caught the hobbyist's fancy as a child.

The hobbyist must decide which kind of engine he is going to construct — steam or diesel. Until recently, there was a preference for steam engines in the hobby. Diesel engines were considered less worthy because they are easier to build and run.

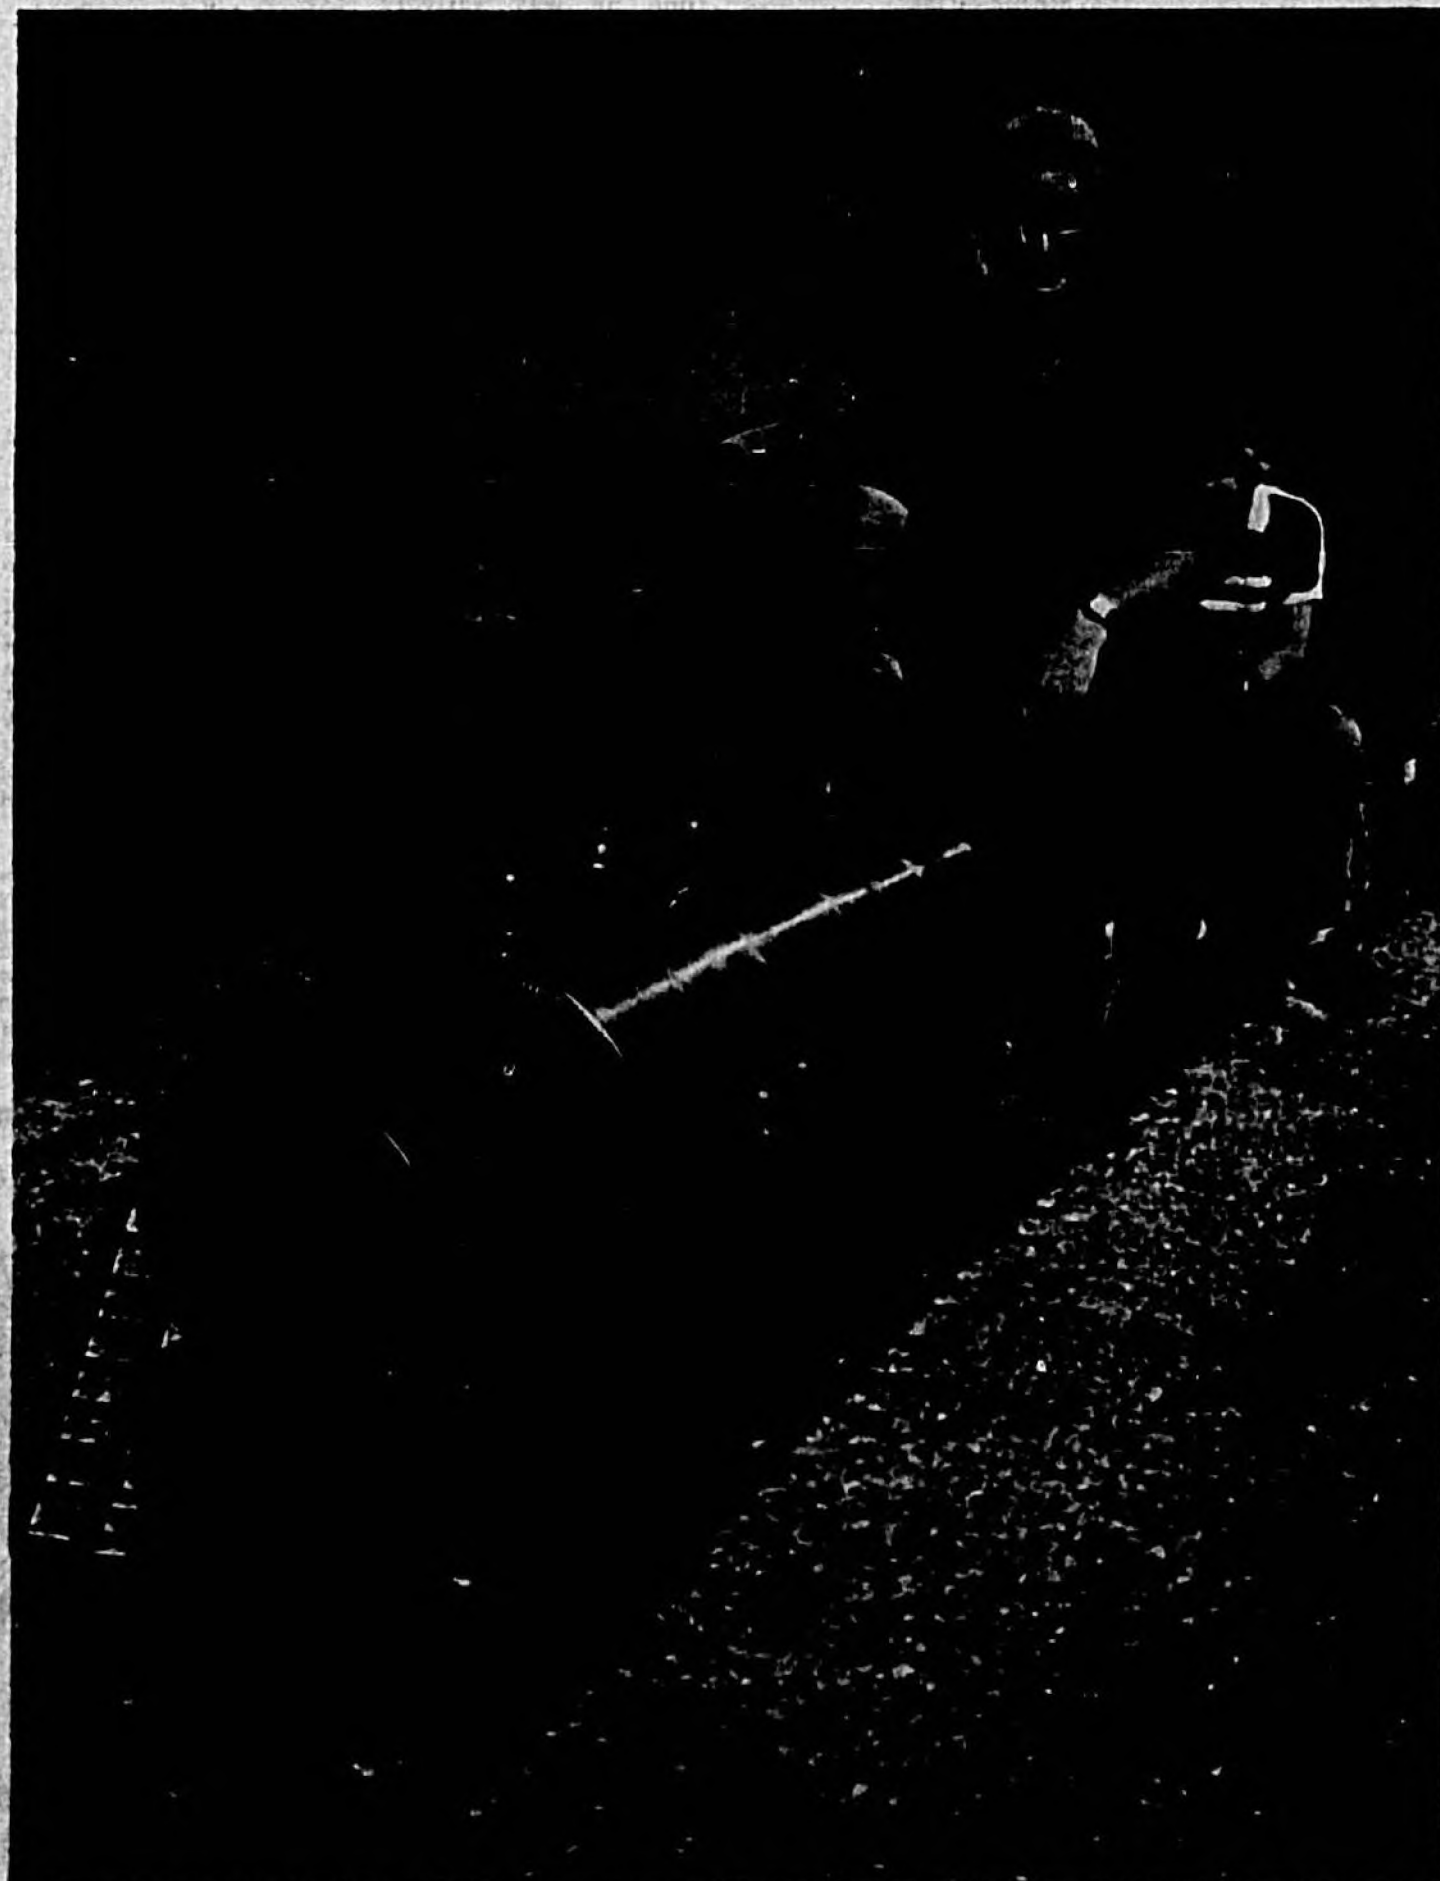

By way of explanation, Hill points out that there are fewer and fewer people left who remember the heyday of steam engines. The real trains that captivated the hobbyist in his youth are more likely to have been the stream-lined diesels.

Hill also says that there has been an increase in people who would rather spend more time running the engines than building them.

"This has been basically a hobby of builders. People built the trains, then run them to show them off.

"The hobby is changing in nature, however, and we're getting more and more 'runners' who don't want to spend as much time building."

Hill estimates that if a person were retired and worked on a steam engine full-time, it would take

Women's Groups Find Film 'Entity' Horror-ble

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — There's a lot of discussion about the new horror film "The Entity." The film deals with a woman who claims she has been assaulted and raped by something that isn't there — an entity, a spirit, something.

Women's groups don't like the theme. They object to the fact that a woman is assaulted — or perhaps only thinks she has been assaulted — and feel it is degrading to women.

Barbara Hershey plays the woman in the film. Everybody, even the film's critics, agree her performance is brilliant.

Miss Hershey says she is surprised by the fuss the picture has kicked up. As far as she is concerned, the biggest problem with the film was it was a tough acting assignment.

"Have you ever had to make believe you were being attacked by something that wasn't there?" she asks, presumably rhetorically. "Those scenes where I had to pretend that something was attacking me were tremendously difficult, physically."

"The Entity" is based on a true case, a Calver City, Calif., woman who claimed she had been attacked by something that wasn't there. There was physical evidence of the attack — bruises and the like — but some psychiatrists still felt it was all mental. Some parapsychologists insisted she was visited by an entity beyond our ken.

Barbara isn't sure. She never met the woman in the case and deliberately avoided meeting her, to maintain the purity of her portrayal. But she is a believer in psychic phenomenon, so she considers that possibility not impossible. All she knows for certain was that it was the toughest acting job of her life. So far.

Another film being talked about around town is the Disney experiment in spookiness. It's called "Something Wicked This Way Comes," based on a Ray Bradbury novel, and Bradbury also wrote the screenplay.

It was finished more than a year ago, and released briefly. Bradbury says the first audiences reacted to it in a mixed way, but both he and the studio felt it had "certain missing elements."

"Those elements had been in the script," Bradbury says, "but had not been filmed. You couldn't blame anybody, you had to blame everybody. In a film, 70 people make the decision."

So Disney pulled the film back, and Bradbury thinks the studio deserves a lot of credit for that bit of corporate bravery. They spent $3 million and a year to revamp it.

Bradbury says they added major and minor things. They filmed, for example, an entire scene that shows a merry-go-round going backwards "enabling the passengers to grow younger."

"I had felt there was a lot of autumn missing in an autumn scene," he says. "So they sent a crew to Vermont and shot 30 seconds more of autumn leaves blowing."

Bradbury has written many screenplays before, but this marked the first time he was actively involved in the filming process. And he says he liked it.

"Now that my feet are wet," he says, "I'll probably be involved in future films of my works. It is a fascinating experience. You are suicidal one day and murderous the next. Film making is terrible — it grinds the soul. But it is also very creative. I can't think of any other artistic activity that is this draining."

Bradbury's screenwriting is one of seven other careers he would like to try. He says he would like to do something in religion — "I'd like to be either a rabbi, a priest or the Pope" — and he would like to be a detective-story writer, a full-time screenwriter and he would like to go back and write for radio.

That's only four. He won't say what the other three careers are. But he probably will do them.

Texas Grit On Showtime

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Can a paraplegic country-and-western singer still make it with his lustful wife?

Will a gaggle of housewives cheat on their hardworkin' hubbies and still get home to fix dinner?

Do you care?

You won't — and you shouldn't. The above are some of the plot lines in "The Lone Star Bar and Grill," a new one-hour dramatic series, airing Wednesday, June 15 on Showtime.

The drama is set at a Houston "dayclub," a tavern, which closes at 4:45 p.m. It's a place where wives go to "dance" — snicker snicker — while their hubbies are out punching time clocks. The club is owned by Buddy, a C&W singer, crippled by a car wreck, and his wife, Mary Beth, and populated by witless characters who make you cringe every time they open their mouths.

This is one turgid production, partner. Its plot lines move like Houstonians caught without air conditioning on a mid-August day. The show was co-written by Pat Falken Smith, who has a good rep for scripting excellent daytime drama on broadcast TV.

...Railroading

from five to eight years to complete. Hill's steam engine has been 20 years in the making, but he said "there's really no excuse for it taking that long."

Anyone interested in getting into the hobby should contact the Florida Live Steamers by writing the club's membership committee in care of Bruce or Cheryl Elder, 5219 Ranches Road, Lake Worth, Fla. 33463.

The club can give the would-be railroader information that can help him decide where to start. Also helpful is the national publication "Live Steam", which appears monthly.

An adult night course in machinery periodically offered at Orange County's Mid-Florida Tech can teach a model railroader some of the skills necessary in the hobby, and help one to decide how involved he wants to get with the building process.

Hill suggests that putting together a train car or a smaller scaled engine may serve to give one a taste of the hobby before too much time or money is invested.

After a hobbyist finishes constructing his engine, the fun has just begun — now he must learn to run it. Because it is an original creation, it will have quirks the hobbyist must figure out for himself.

The next project may be a car for riders, flat cars and gondolas will work best for that purpose. It is important to keep the rider's center of gravity low — remember, compared to the railroad, the rider is 48 feet tall.

Show cars will give the train a more authentic look. Fancy passenger cars, cattle cars or a caboose will work, according to the era of the engine. A refrigerated car can carry the railroader's favorite beverage.

A backyard track is a necessity for proper engineering without leaving home. Tracks can be built on any relatively flat area of proper size. Bridges and signals are authenticating extras.

Large scale model railroading dates back prior to World War II, Hill says. Hobbyists were most concentrated in the northeastern and western United States.

The Florida Live Steamers was created in 1972, after several years of informal meetings of its core members. It currently has over 200 members, junior members, and out-of-state associate members. It has been chartered by the state as an educational group.

The club holds four meets per year at private tracks belonging to members. The meets are multiple day affairs and draw as many people as the track can accommodate.

The spring meet is held on Hill's backyard track and plays host to about 100 people.

At these events, members show off their handiwork, trade tips with other railroaders, help trouble-shoot on first runs, and see what their engines will do "on the open track."

24 Hours A Day - Every Day The Golden Lamb Offers The Finest

The Golden Lamb is two years old.

The Sanford restaurant at 2101 S. French Ave., now owned lock, stock and larder by Steve and Marilyn Margeolas, has undergone a face-lift with a newly stuccoed exterior. Other remodeling plans are underway.

By and large, patrons of the Golden Lamb are local.

"Many people come here every day to eat," says Marilyn, "and the girls can put in their order when they see them walk in the door. Some bring their visitors from other places."

A working person can get in and out at lunchtime in a half hour. Marilyn explains, although the restaurant is regularly filled to capacity at that time.

The secret is three cooks in the kitchen during the busy hours, ample waitresses, resulting in quick service.

During their busiest hours, between 6 and 11 in the morning, a family of five can breakfast at the Golden Lamb for $7. Each breakfast would consist of three eggs, home fries, toast and coffee.

Next busiest hours are between 2 and 4 in the morning after the pubs close. It is a different kind of business, of course, during these hours, but Marilyn and Steve are accustomed to it having been in restaurants and night clubs most of their lives.

Dinner hours are more leisurely, a time when patrons can enjoy Steve's special dishes, corned beef and cabbage, tenderloin tips, Salisbury steak or spaghetti in a sauce. "I don't think anyone can touch," according to Marilyn.

A complete dinner is served for $3.95 to include: potato, vegetable, soup or salad and dessert.

All sauces, soups and gravies are made from scratch at Golden Lamb.

This 24-hour restaurant also features Saturday and Sunday dinner specials, such as roast beef, roast pork, roast turkey and, often, roast leg of lamb.

Senior citizens are offered a 10 percent discount.

Soviet 'Tom Sawyer' Headed to U.S. GO GUIDE

By Vernon Scott

UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, Mark Twain's barefoot boys of antebellum Mississippi River adventures, are a sight to see spouting Russian and rafting down the Dnieper.

The lads, along with Injun Joe, Becky Thatcher, Jim the slave and Aunt Polly can all be seen in "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," a three-hour Soviet TV miniseries.

Happily, the American classic has been produced with greater affection and attention to detail than any Hollywood version of the novel — the language notwithstanding.

The novelty of hearing the dialogue in Russian quickly palls, but the visual treatment is as good or better than what Hollywood has attempted in the previous four or five "Tom Sawyer" movies.

Americans will see the film in theaters, television and cable later this year, perhaps by Thanksgiving, but only after it has been dubbed in English.

Costumes, sets, the riverboat, courtroom and street scenes look authentically 19th century American. But every foot was shot in the U.S.S.R. by director Stanislav Govorukhin, a Twain buff, who took meticulous care in recreating the book, page by page, on film.

Govorukhin left nothing out. Not a single frame reflects a political message.

Blacks in the film, including Ethiopian Behailu Mengesha, who plays Jim, were cast from students at Moscow's Patrice Lumumba University.

Tom is played by 10-year-old Fedya Stukov, a professional actor who looks as American as Ricky Schroder. Indeed, the large cast could have been selected from Central Casting.

The Russian version of "Tom Sawyer" will be sold in this country by a pair of unlikely entrepreneurs, Marvin Hime, a Beverly Hills jeweler, and producer-studio executive Henry Ehrlich, and their Cinema Development Corporation.

Said CDC's Ehrlich, "The movie is being dubbed in London, in authentic Missouri accents of the 19th century, to save money."

An English outfit is dubbing the film in exchange for releasing rights in the United Kingdom. It would have cost $250,000 in Hollywood.

Ehrlich and Hime made the deal with the Russians without putting up a dime.

Mosfilm Export wanted $1 million up front and a percentage deal for distribution in the United States. CDC offered them some American films they own in a barter deal. No front money.

"We haven't made any theatrical deals for 'Tom Sawyer' here yet," said Hime. "MGM will distribute the film to TV. But before the picture goes to TV, we're going to take it to Disney for theatrical release."

"We are anxious to make this a family picture," Ehrlich said.
