HUBERT HORATIO HUMPHREY May 27, 1911 to Jan. 13, 1978

All Agree On Nation's Loss Friends, Foes Mourning Sen. Hubert Humphrey

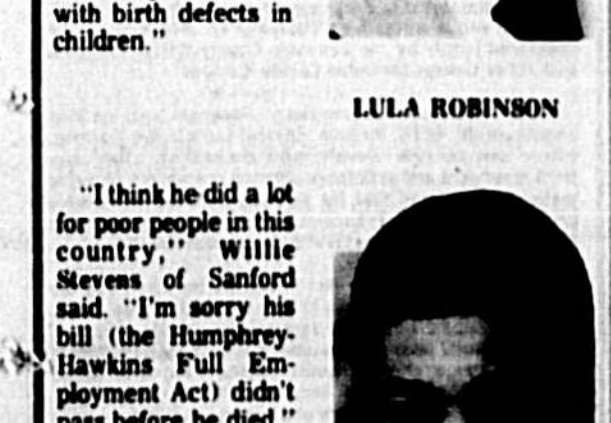

Shoppers surveyed in Sanford expressed admiration and sadness today for Hubert H. Humphrey, who died at his home Friday night at age 66.

None of the mayors, governors, congressmen, senators, cabinet members, and plain people who paid tribute to Humphrey, disagreed.

Former President Richard Nixon, perhaps the chief figure in opposition to what Humphrey stood for politically in 30 years of public service, called him "a great and a good man... He enriched the lives of all who knew him, and he left this nation a better place for his having been here."

From Upstart To Liberal Conscience

HHH: A Caricaturist's Dream

By Howard Bowen

Herbert Humphrey, a faintly comic name. Almost unknown the first time we saw it with the middle name - Herbie - spelled out.

Now he was 65 and dying - and still working 16-hour days. And smiling, looking and acting like a man who had just come to the Senate and as it was now, 30 years later.

"In the end, the country is better. Of course moral values have changed. There's more permissiveness, greater freedom of action."

"We have a great problem of social integration. Fifty percent of the women are in the workforce. The women's liberation movement is fundamental. A tremendous force of power and talent is being tapped."

But is all this good? How is the country better off?

"Oh, there are more opportunities for more people."

"Yes, there is more social concern for the poor, the elderly, the sick, the blind - even the Indians. You didn't hear about the plight of the Indians 30 years ago."

"Third, there is a better educational structure"

By HOWARD BOWEN

Herbert Humphrey burst into the national consciousness for the first time in 1948. That year the young mayor of Minneapolis was a candidate for the U.S. Senate, and led the Minnesota delegation to the Democratic National Convention. There this inflexible upstart—hardly known outside his own state but widely determined to correct social inequities wherever he saw them—forced a strong civil rights plank on the convention and down the throat of President Harry S. Truman.

Forty candidates had argued that only "party unity" could give Truman, the underdog, any chance at all against Republican Thomas E. Dewey.

In the "tie" was in a Southern "states rights" plank would be proposed and defeated. The same fate would befall the strong civil rights plank that Humphrey intended to introduce.

Then the convention would proceed to adopt a "compromise" Truman plank that would please the South and avoid a walkout.

But Humphrey, who had no black voting constituency whatsoever back home—there were hardly any blacks anywhere in Minnesota—refused to go along.

His own father, a delegate from South Dakota, told him that what he was doing "may tear the party apart." Powerful party figures warned him that the career he had chosen for himself would lead him "from mayor to pig-squeak to oblivion."

Although I'm concerned by the fact that there is less voting and less reading, but the position is changing fast.

"What's more important is that now 25 to 30 percent of my people go to college. Why, my mother and father would have given anything to be able to go to college."

"Fourth, there is much better medical care."

"I have to say also that America is restless, anxious for improvement. That makes us unique in self-criticism. It compels us to do something about our faults—not as fast as Robert Kennedy, or Lyndon Johnson, or even, of course, but there's a good generation coming up. It has a sense of stewardship and conservation."

Humphrey was particularly proud of one of his contributions: "I have engaged and inspired a large number of young people to enter public life, especially in Minnesota."

That was true. One of them, Orrville Freeman, became governor of Minnesota and secretary of Agriculture. Another was Eugene McCarthy. A third, Walter F. Mondale, became vice president of the United States. He has been a Humphrey disciple since his own 30 years of age.

As early as 1948, he introduced legislation setting up a Fair Employment Practices Commission.

A decade before the Freedom Riders traveled South, Humphrey introduced federal legislation prohibiting segregation in public transportation.

The Peace Corps, the cornerstone of President Kennedy's foreign policy toward the Third World, was appropriated from Humphrey—who initially pushed to pass the measure during the Truman administration.

The first generation of a series of health-care bills that finally emerged late last year as the Medicare program was introduced by Humphrey during the Truman administration.

His proposed Project Head Start:

The Department of Housing and Urban Development was established after passage of a Humphrey-sponsored bill.

The list of his legislative landmarks is seemingly endless: the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency; the Alliance for Progress; the Federal Scholarship Program; the 1953 Housing and Urban Development Act; the 1954 Civil Rights Act; the Council on Youth Opportunity; the National Youth Foundation; the Job Corps; the National Fair Employment Act; the International Security Administration and Arms Export Control Act; the Supplemental Federal Assistance Program for Women, Infants and Children; the Solar Energy Research Act; the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act; and the Forest and Rangeland Environmental Management Act. And on and on.

As did some of the big-city bosses, whose contribution in power depended in part upon black and liberal support.

And to the maximum degree possible, from that moment he was a major national figure, rivaled in the South (some of whom despised him) by the Federal Reserve Bank, the 1953 Housing and Urban Development Act; the 1954 Civil Rights Act; the Council on Youth Opportunity; the National Youth Foundation; the Job Corps; the National Fair Employment Act; the International Security Administration and Arms Export Control Act; the Supplemental Federal Assistance Program for Women, Infants and Children; the Solar Energy Research Act; the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act; and the Forest and Rangeland Environmental Management Act. And on and on.

In these years he compiled a record as one of the most influential senators in U.S. history:

—In 1949, after many years of fruitless congressional debate, Humphrey was passage of a federal anti-trucking law;

—He wrote the bill that set up the first Federal Commission on Civil Rights;

His 'Politics Of Joy' Recalled And Praised Here

By MYRA BRYCE
Herald Staff Writer

Herbert Humphrey, who practiced "the politics of love and joy," is dead and at least three Sanford families today are looking again at their personal memories of the man who was vice president, senator and their friend.

"My wife, my children and I were looking at pictures taken when he was here in 1971," said Dr. W. Vincent Roberts, mayor of Sanford, at that time. "The children were very upset. He was very nice to them."

Young Harry Ann Roberts had been in the receiving line greeting the Humphreys as they got off their plane at the Sanford airport.

Mrs. Roberts, who was a Humphrey delegate to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1956 remembers Humphrey's arrival at the Sanford Airport, the airport he helped the City of Sanford acquire.

"When Vincent handed him the key to the city, Humphrey reminded me of his having been the mayor of the City of Waverly, Minn., and the joy it had been to serve in that office. He was such a humble man," said Mrs. Roberts.

And Dr. Roberts added: "It was a great honor to have him and to get a glimpse into the life of a man who was one of the great public men this country has ever seen."

"He was a man who could make anyone feel at home and comfortable with him. He talked the politics of love and joy. He was a very warm, outgoing, interested person and delighted me in spite of his prestige and importance," said Dr. Roberts.

"This man loved everybody. My great regret is that he was not completely honored by being given the presidency which he so richly deserved."

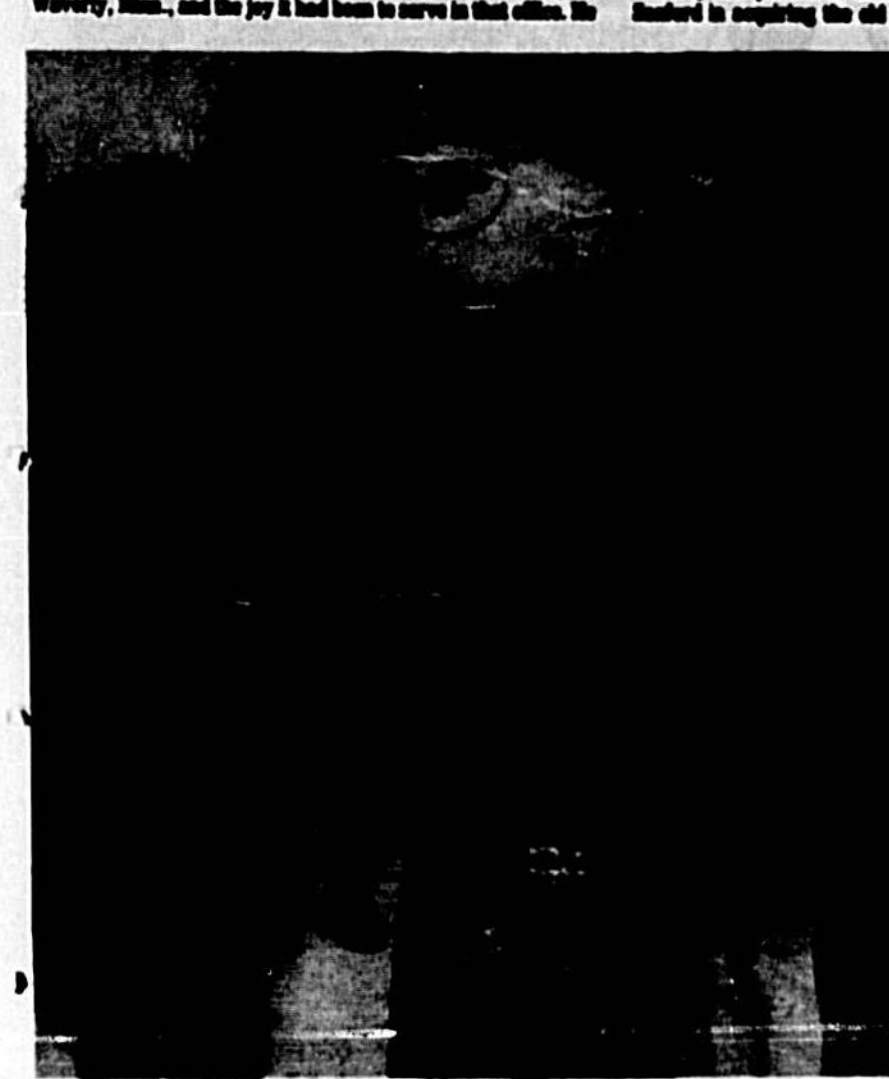

"In 1952 after the ceremony and the receiving line, we all got into a limousine with Humphrey and they all over Sanford County. He saw everything from the past to the proposed and still."

"The warmth and politics of joy were shared with him. They came from the man's heart," said Dr. Roberts.

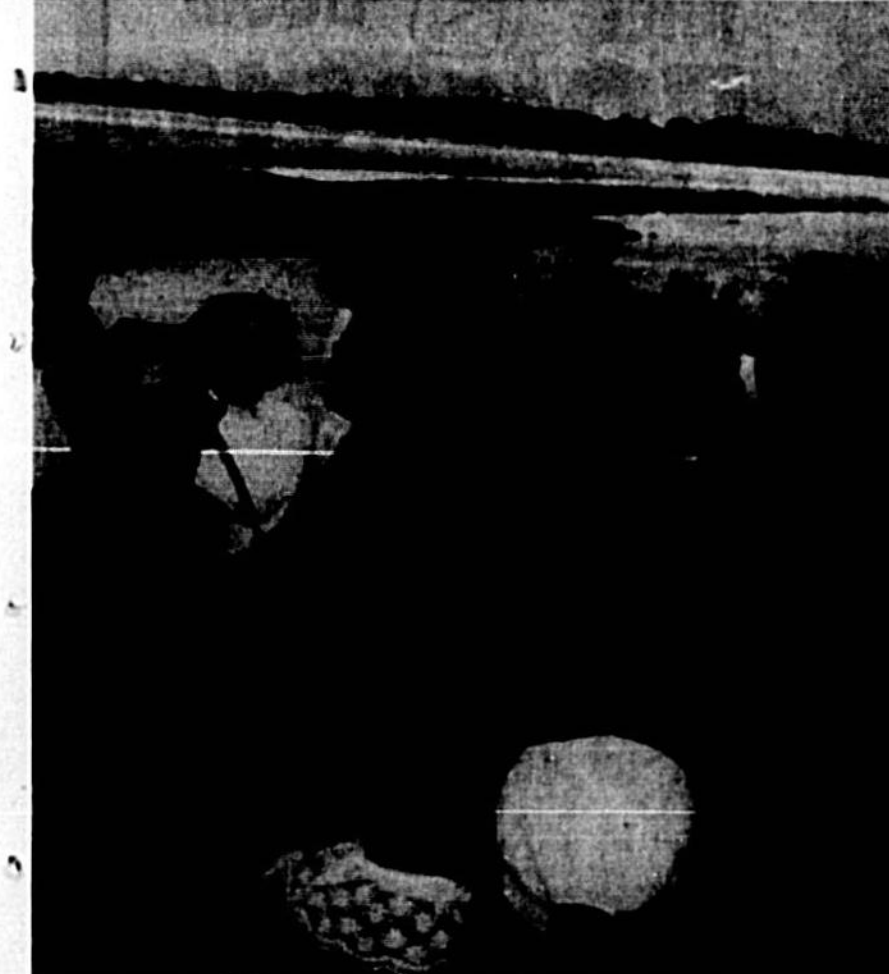

Dr. Roberts, who was an overall Humphrey campaign committee in 1956 and again in 1970, visited with Humphrey in Waverly and when he returned to Sanford he visited with Humphrey in Sanford.

Humphrey's Father Was His Guiding Light For Life

The Herald Services began working by washing glasses in his father's tiny drugstore in rural Deland, Fla., when he was 7. He would have gone to work earlier if he had been tall enough to reach the glasses.

It was a dreary period in the nation, and South Dakota was a dreary place in which to live, but young Humphrey never seemed to notice. Life was a series of hardships—dust storms, crop failures, inclusion, the Great Depression.

His new friends and neighbors go under. The farmers had no money to pay for the Humphrey drugstore, and no money to pay for what they had already bought, as the drugstore failed.

Humphrey was 16 when he saw his father, Herbert Humphrey Sr., weep because he had to sell the family home to pay his debts. The younger Humphrey wept too.

It was a sobering experience, but in his autobiography Humphrey managed to regard the incident as a plus: "It is something I have never forgotten, not because it moved me so deeply, but because what followed was so typical of my father's approach to life."

The family simply moved to a smaller house and began anew. Despite "such total and public humiliation, my father never looked back. He showed not a discernible ounce of bitterness, apology or dejection... he plunged on... he had an undiminished appetite for life, accepting the future, enjoying the view."

The son's later stoicism in the face of political and personal setbacks—at times interpreted as failure to get the pass—was much to his father's character.

From Herbert Humphrey Sr., he first learned about ideas, books, magazines, newspapers, politics, politicians—and social issues.

The older Humphrey was a party in conservative Deland, a Wisconsin Democrat, and he drilled the Fourteen Points and the dream of the League of Nations into his eager, receptive son.

After being named valedictorian of his class at Deland High School, Humphrey spent the next decade dropping in and out of the University of Minnesota in concert with his own and his family's constantly fluctuating financial condition.

At length he earned a degree, magna cum laude, and a Phi Beta Kappa key. He also managed to gain a certificate from the Dowser College of Pharmacy, and got his first personal glimpse of the plight of the Negro when he studied for a master's degree in political science at Louisiana State University.

He married an attractive and Herbert Horatio Humphrey. For years, the name evoked smiles, winks, nods, parody. But also reverence—and respect. This proper, yet unassuming gentleman, who earned the respect of friend and foe alike, rose from the life of a druggist in the cold of South Dakota and Minnesota to the warmth of a national leader who cared.

He first became mayor of Minneapolis, then on to the United States Senate, the Vice Presidency and—almost to the highest office in the world: the Presidency of the United States of America.

History surely will record his contributions and political wisdom alongside Adlai Stevenson as one of the more dedicated, best qualified of their time to lead their country, but both of whom fell short of the pinnacle.

Herbert Humphrey was one of those men whose true, warm personality never quite made it across the television screen. But all who knew and worked with him knew better. I proudly count myself among them.

Herbert Humphrey was a warm individual—jocular at times, yet persuasive in manner and determined and forceful in action and words. He was a optimist.

He was a hard, realistic computer for the things to which he believed most, including himself. Those who had the privilege of campaigning with him can attest to his devotion and energy. From dawn to dusk and beyond, he was talking, beseeching, pleading, inquiring. And nothing. He didn't pretend to know it all and wasn't always asking for advice and input from those around him.

With them and his audience he persistently shared his underlying belief in the dignity of man and the true principles that have made the best nations of the world. He early adopted an optimistic young woman, Muriel Bach, and the two lived in rooming flats, accepting with equanimity the notion that a nickel beer and a sack of popcorn constituted a night on the town.

These were the influences then—near-poverty, failure, defeat, dust storms, depression, liberal education, indomitable father, understanding wife—that forged one of the most innovative legislators of the 20th century.

...And He Always Saw The Positive Side Of Things

vacancy for civil rights proved this. When you talked to Herbert Horatio Humphrey for the first time, it was as if you had known him all your life. Just ask some of the people he met on those long, endless campaign trails.

Like the radio announcer on that cold, mid night in Omaha in 1972. It is a memory I cannot easily erase; one I find myself repeating from time to time.

Wrapped in a bathrobe in the corner of a hotel room was Senator Herbert Horatio Humphrey, candidate for the democratic nomination for president of the United States of America.

He was at the tail end of his campaign to derail the routing McGovern supports, hoping to score a decisive victory in the key North Dakota primary.

On this particular night he was doing what he like to do best: talk to people. This time he was doing it via the telephone.

Arrangements had been made for him to talk to Nebraska voters on a popular radio talk show. As the air time approached, the candidate was becoming more and more restless.

The Senator was informed that the talk-show host who would be coming on the line momentarily had just become a father for the first time. He smiled a smile to Senator Humphrey, himself a grandfather, bearded there in his pajamas and bathrobe.

And, if you have ever met Herbert Humphrey in person and bathrobe, it would not be an easy picture to forget. His shyness just enhanced the picture.

The telephone rang and the show was about to begin. The host had just shared information himself when Herbert Humphrey proposed him: "I heard the good news—congratulations," he said. "The radio man was so pleased. 'Thank you,' he responded, meekly.

Again, Mr. Humphrey had put someone at ease, as if he were talking to an old friend.

Herbert Humphrey never forgot his colleagues and friends. The last time I spoke about that night in Omaha—Jan. 5, 1977 I heard his voice in the Senate Majority Leader post—a Herald reader forwarded the column to the senator. A few days later, I heard from him with a big "Thank you."

That's the kind of man the Senator was.

In spite of his many elective disappointments—and humiliations, Herbert Horatio Humphrey never lost hope, never gave up his belief in his nation and what he could do for it.

He always looked for a way to serve and repay it. He always saw the positive side of the things that were happening to it. And for this he was consistently ridiculed and joked about.

But he went on undeterred. Herbert Humphrey was always willing to serve, however and wherever he might serve best. He never this time after this. He proved it after his vain attempt to prove the Democratic presidential nomination in 1970. He proved it after his narrow defeat by Richard Nixon in 1968. He proved it following his futile attempt at overthrowing George McGovern in 1972.

Each time he came in second. And not from want of trying harder.

After 1972, Herbert Humphrey went back home to teach. But he couldn't stay away from the core of the action. So the next time around he ran once again for the United States Senate.

Never mind that this would make him the junior senator from his home state of Minnesota to one Walter Mondale, his protégé. Not that Herbert Horatio Humphrey didn't have pride. It was this pride that moved him to do the job he had to do. He had too much to offer. He wanted to continue doing all he could to help the United States of America be what it is supposed to be. And he did.

In 1976, he chose to play the role of the elder statesman of the Democratic party, remaining aloof from the day-to-day infighting of the primary campaign to leave no doubt, instead, he wanted for the old party faithful to knock on his door, beckoning him once more into the big race.

But they didn't. And it hurt.

Political pundits for years will be second-guessing his decision. As surely he must have in his final days. And as he probably did in 1968 when he opted for loyalty to Lyndon Johnson rather than denouncing himself from the Vietnam war policies. That cost him the White House.

Should he, in 1976, have matched that little-known former Georgia governor word for word, ideal for ideal, on the political stump? Could he. But we shall never know.

What we do know is that we have had a giant who will his last days, plodded on. He did make that one last attempt at some semblance of leadership when he tried to become Majority Leader of the United States Senate.

Again, he lost. This time his health had much to do with it. Overright, the dynamic, vibrant spokesman had shrunk to a sickly shell of a gentleman.

That divided career had begun to take its toll. But, again, he hung in there. He didn't take his marbles and run. No, he continued to work. He continued to speak out, to do and say what he felt was right.

He continued this up to the time of his death.

Sure, many persons through the years laughed and guffawed at Herbert Horatio Humphrey.

He was the brunt of countless jokes.

His lanky manner, his seemingly unending happiness, was a peculiar trait.

Perhaps his positive philosophy helped to keep some degree of perspective in our cynical society. Perhaps now that he is gone, those people with the gift tongues will appreciate even more the philosophy of Herbert Horatio Humphrey.

He was a ray of sunshine in an otherwise dismal atmosphere. Once more, Herbert Horatio Humphrey has come in second. For the last time.

That cheerful countenance and positive kind of leadership will be missed.

Is there another like him?

Limited Service Pacts

What is a limited service agreement? I have been told it can save a lot of money.

At this time of relationship between owner and broker is not common use in this area. Basically, it involves an owner and a broker agreeing to limited services to be performed by the broker for an appropriate amount of compensation. This would not necessarily involve what are accustomed to be our traditional listing agreement, which provides for payment of a commission should the broker procure a ready, willing, and able buyer.

For instance, the broker may agree to assist with pricing the property by performing a market analysis. He may also advise as to what should be done to put the property in condition so as to sell it more easily.

Another possible area of assistance would be advice as to financing alternatives, what they would cost the owner, and how they would help expand the number of possible purchasers. Helping the owner write accurate eye-catching ads could also be a service the broker might perform.

For doing all the above, the broker would receive a fee agreed upon by him and the owner. The greater the work done by the broker, the more the fee. This notice is for the use of the owner, and the broker's fee should be stated. If the claim is contingent or unliquidated, the return of the security shall be stated. If the claim is secured, the security shall be described. The claimant shall deliver notice of the claim to the clerk of the court in which the claim is being asserted. All persons claiming a right to the property shall be notified of the claim in the newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the claim is being asserted. This notice shall be published in the newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the claim is being asserted. The notice shall be published in the newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the claim is being asserted.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Car Sales Decline, But Officials Optimistic

DETROIT (UPI) — Sluggish sales of General Motors Corp.'s downsized intermediates offset slight gains by the other "Big Three" automakers and the industry posted a 3.9 percent sales decline for the first 10 days of January. It was the sixth consecutive period that domestic car sales fell behind last year's performance, according to figures released Friday, but the margin continued to shrink and company officials were optimistic that the trend will continue.

Eckerd Creates New Post

Leslie D. Reagin III, senior vice president of Jack Eckerd Corp., has been appointed to the newly created position of senior vice president-operations for the firm, responsible for all drug store operations of the 67-unit chain.

Scotty's Sales Jump 63%

The advantage for the owner is that a limited service agreement can be cheaper than a commission payable upon the sale of the property. The broker can be attracted to an arrangement that pays him for services rendered rather than one that pays him a commission only if and when the property sells.

Dow Average Drops

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dow Jones industrial average plunged to a 35-month low this week as the stock market registered deep concern over the dollar's weakness abroad and rising interest rates at home. Trading was active.

The Dow average, which plunged 37.48 points last week, fell another 17.76 points to 775.73, the lowest level since April 9, 1973. The Dow, a laser in eight out of nine 1973 sessions, has plummeted 88.44 points in one of the worst prolonged slides since a 75-point plunge during the 1973 Arab oil embargo. Other averages also declined. The New York Stock Exchange common stock index fell 1.01 to 49.37 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, dropped 1.99 to 89.60, the lowest level since it finished at 89.46 on Dec. 26, 1973.

SCOPA-SCIDA Must Be One

Last Nov. 22, the Seminole County Board of County Commissioners established an ad-hoc committee to study the feasibility of merging the county's two industry-hunters: SCOPA (Seminole County Port Authority) and SCIDA (Seminole County Industrial Development Authority).

The committee made its report this week. Its inescapable conclusion: a single, unified agency is needed if county growth is to be pursued effectively.

In the committee's words: "To combine the efforts of the existing industrial development authorities in order to eliminate duplication of effort and to achieve the necessary expansion of needed industrial development of services..."

We applaud the finding. The county is growing; signs are everywhere. It's just a matter of time — and perhaps a shorter period of time than many realize — before we become the focal point of growth and expansion in central Florida.

So this is the time to take aggressive action in seeking out and enticing new industry to join our community.

It is time, too, to shed that ever-hovering fear of growth harbored by many. Growth is not a dirty word. It means something for everyone. It means more jobs. It means fewer and lower taxes. It means a higher standard of living for all.

This is why we are so pleased with the report of that ad-hoc committee. A single, coordinated agency to find and win industry is a key to the county's growth.

But more is needed. And the committee's report also touched on that.

The commissioners, it said, must also "truly commit themselves to industrial development within Seminole County..."

"Commit." It is another key factor, but one that is often downplayed.

It is one thing to talk about encouraging industry to locate here; it is another thing to translate that talk into specific action when such industry has an open mind to selecting us as their home.

We have long advocated more aggressive and outspoken support and endorsement for industry on the verge of locating here.

Through the years, too, many prospective new industries have been discouraged from committing themselves to Seminole County because of excessive, outmoded or unrealistic land-use regulations.

The merger panel wisely addressed itself to this problem, noting that regulations on land use make it "too difficult and time-consuming to obtain local government approval for development of industry." "The county commission," it was recommended, "should make every effort possible to cut the red tape."

We concur. And we additionally suggest that the municipalities within the county take a long, hard look at any of their policies that might impede growth and new industry.

Objective: to update them, making the area more attractive for new industry.

It is encouraging, too, that in making its recommendation to merge SCOPA and SCIDA, the panel is envisioning no increase in the existing property tax structure to pay for the operation that emerges.

The matter of merger has been kicking around for several years — the idea being last broached in September 1976. Nothing was done.

That is why we are gratified with the latest positive move. It is a positive way to begin a new year.

And we urge the Board of County Commissioners to approve specifically the SCOPA-SCIDA merger proposal at the earliest possible time.

HOROSCOPE

By HERMAN HERSH COLE

For Sunday, Jan. 15, 1978

YOUR BIRTHDAY

Jan. 15, 1978

Such out groups this coming year where you can make connections to benefit your career. The contacts will prove to be of great value.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

A few angry remarks will be all it will take to put your household in a turmoil today. You're not the only one with a chip on his shoulder. Find out more about yourself by reading for your copy of Astro-Graph.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Respect the opinions of others today even as you would have them respect yours. Putting their views down opens your own to criticism.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

There is a possibility you could catch a flame all alone today. It won't be for something you'll do, but for something done by one for whom you're responsible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

This is not one of your better days for decision-making. After weighing all alternatives, you may be more confused than before.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

Not only will you make heavy demands of yourself today, but others are likely to do so as well. Keep your wits in tact, and when to say "no."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Long shots will look more appealing to you than usual today. The probabilities of them becoming winners are extremely slim.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

Jan. 16, 1978

Give the full way to your creative instincts this coming year. Something that has previously been only an avocation could open up exciting new channels to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Be on your guard today. Someone may set up a friendly little get-together as a subterfuge to pressure you for a favor, possibly financial. Like to find out more of what lies ahead for you? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Indecision do your bidding with no questions today, unless you get pushy. If that happens, you'll find them balking and grumbling.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

You've no hesitation to poke a little fun at associates today. When the shoe is on the other foot and they chide you, you'll find it a little less funny.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

Sound advice on business given you by your mate today should be heeded. It's better than you'll get from a wheedler or a pal who thinks he has all the answers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

In this situation a four-notrump bid by North would suggest that South go to six with 17 or 18 high-card points, but North was a stop bid. It was the standard American three-notrump response to show 16-18 point notrump.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

"Thank you" could be the most important words for you today. Someone who does a favor for you won't repeat it unless it's properly acknowledged.

loved ones, you tend to be a little braver. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In a rousing today you may not get everything you seek. You could become a little caustic when you see yourself coming up short.

CANCER (June 21-July 20)

You're very amenable to friends and go along with what they ask. You may find that your promises cost you more than you anticipated.

showed two aces; North's five clubs asked for kings and South's five-spade bid showed two of those fine gentlemen. At this point North gambled on seven notrump. It wasn't much of a gamble. South's two aces and two kings accounted for 14 high-card points. He had shown at least two more points. North could count 12 tricks in aces and kings. A queen would be a 13th trick; two jacks would give South a lot of plays for seven, so North bid.

Needless to say, the moment West followed the first spade South was able to claim the grand slam.

Since it weighs only 40 pounds, two men easily roll the fibreglass plane to the middle of the grass airstrip and turning its nose into the wind they take their place behind two other gliders waiting for the low plane.

It is a busy Saturday at the Seminole Flying Ranch on SR 419 in Oviedo and the two low planes are set on the ground for the next glider to be someone to attack the 300-foot towline to the pilot in the low plane wiggles his rudder back and forth. The pilot in the glider is ready and answers with a few steps steady on the long tapered wing of the glider.

As the towline is released, the noise fades away and the glider is in its element. Riding thermals, warm air rising from uneven heating of the terrain, the sleek bird-like craft glides for an hour or so before heading for the ground for a landing five to eight hours are common on a warm spring day.

"I've always been interested in anything that flies," states Billy Kerns of Altamonte Springs. "and this intrigues me the most."

...making the canopy of the Standard Lark, a high performance plane from Europe in the $15,000 to $20,000 price bracket, Kerns said. "It's a challenge. You have to work to stay up. You have to plan ahead or end up in some cow pasture!"

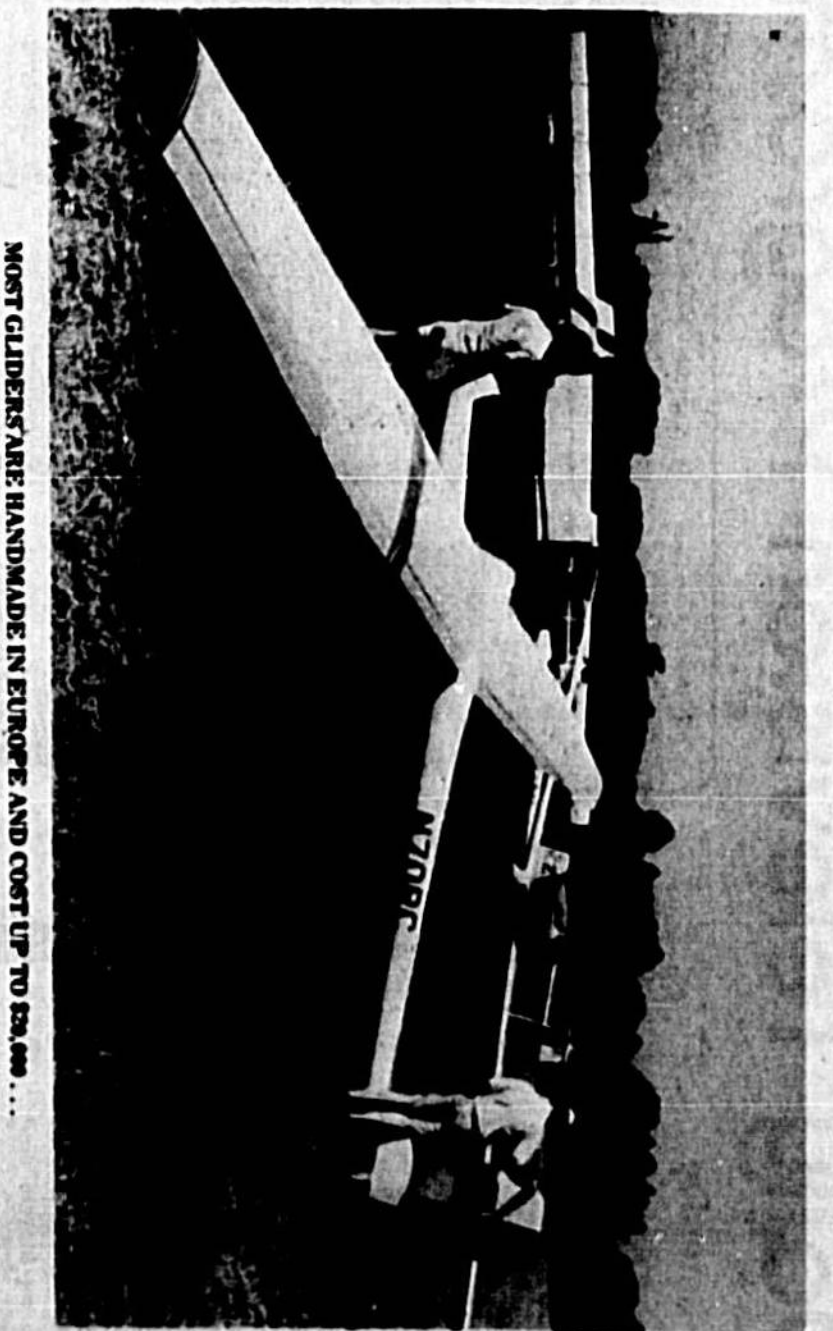

...the thermals that are out there or the pilot's nose that is not in the right place or the glider's fifth few months that have been far from ideal.

"I once had to sit down in a field next to a big farm in Georgia and hold my leg out of the cockpit. It started to rain. My feet were wet and I was stuck in the cockpit. The pilot had to land and the lowest part of getting the plane back to the box."

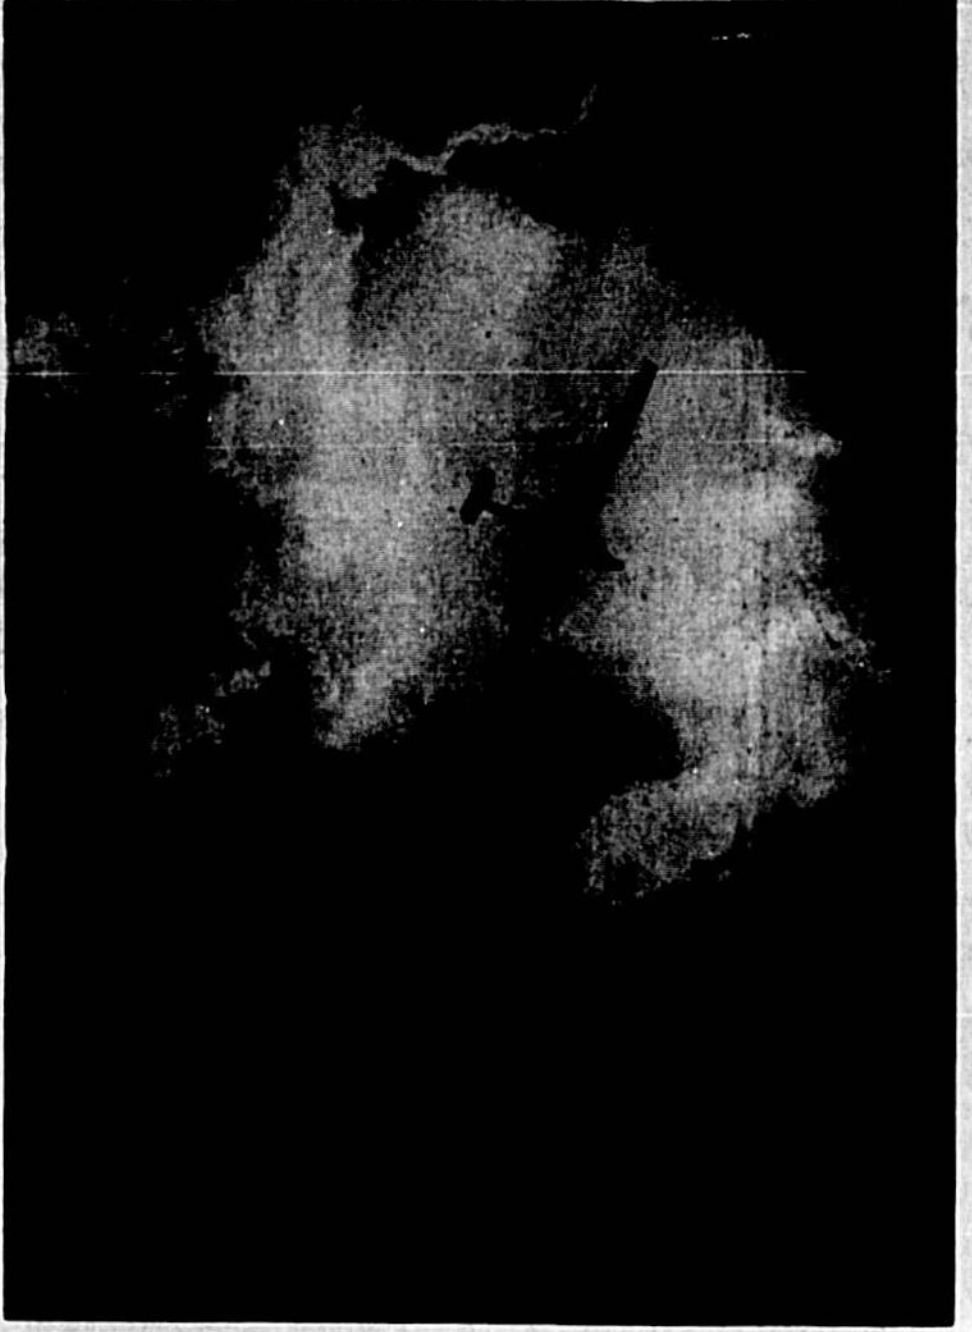

The wings of most gliders are removable and the whole plane fits into a box or trailer which can be towed behind a car. Many pilots have a trailer in the car as well as the plane itself. They can be towed to their rescue from anywhere.

While everyone may not be able to spend $12,000 to $15,000 for a good used airplane, the Seminole Flying Ranch offers demonstration rides for $12. Instructions and rentals are available also and more information can be had by calling 305-558-1111.

Literacy Tests: The Reason For Dropout Rate?

By MARVYN BREEDAN
Herald Staff Writer

Some high school juniors in Seminole County are leaving school to avoid taking the Functional Literacy Test, or as a result of failing the test according to some school officials.

"We lost 50 students just before the test," Seminole High School principal Don Reynolds explained. "We have not been able to contact them all, but have talked to about half of them. The ones we have talked to say the test was their reason for leaving."

Not every principal in the county's five high schools blamed the test for student dropouts, but Marshall Moore, assistant principal at Lyman High School, Longwood, said his dropouts numbered 41 during the testing period, while they numbered only 23 during the attendance period which ended last Friday.

"However, that attendance period during which the tests were given is a time for heavy withdrawal," Moore pointed out.

School Superintendent William P. Leyer agreed that students do often drop out at the end of the first nine weeks of school, which is close to when the tests were given.

"Students come back to school after summer vacation thinking that somehow things will be different," Leyer said. "But if they had problems in school the previous year, then they find the problems don't go away, the school hasn't changed, they still have just as much trouble, and at the end of the first nine weeks, when grades come out, they leave school."

But the trend to leave for these reasons will not account for all the dropouts, according to Mary Joyce Bateman, consultant-coordinator of career education.

She and her staff are responsible for compiling statistics on all school dropouts, their reasons for leaving, and their plans for the future.

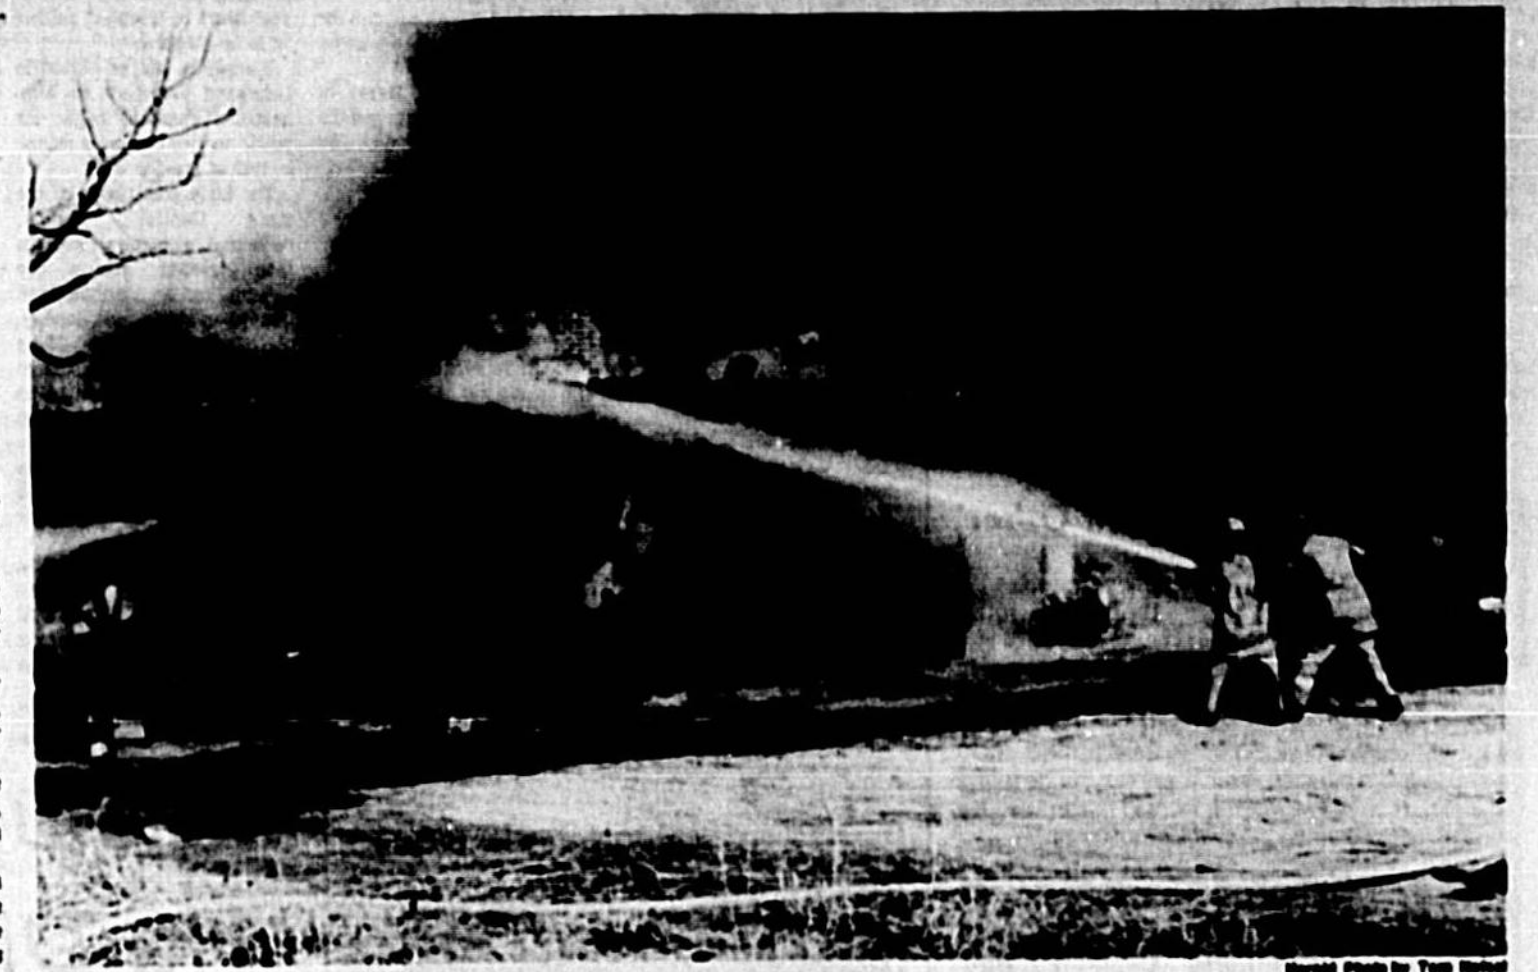

"I've spoken to at least three of the five high school principals, who have warned me, 'look out for the W-7 forms,'" Mrs. Bateman said today.

A "W-7" form, Mrs. Bateman explained, is a form used for interviewing students who are leaving school, to determine why they are going. "There are six other forms before this one, for students who are simply leaving to move out of state, transferring to another school, or whatever," Mrs. Bateman explained.

"But the W-7 form relates directly to students who are 16 and dropping out because they legally can. It is a form we use to help us determine what we might have done to keep that student in school, and we use it in such things as planning curriculum."

"That is the form which would reflect the number of students who use the test as a

FIREMEN BATTLE BLAZE AT 2626 1/2 WEST 11th STREET, SANFORD

Recalls Fire That Killed Man, 41

'I Tried To Save That Boy... I Tried, But I Just Couldn't'

By MAX BRILLIANT
Herald Staff Writer

"I tried to save that boy, I tried to save him, but I just couldn't," Ruby Pendleton, 62, of 382 1/2 West 11th St. rural Sanford, said today, two days after a fire destroyed her home and took the life of Bobby Harrell, 41.

Mrs. Pendleton, her son Ricky, 23, and Harrell all lived in the house. She and her son are staying with Mrs. Pendleton's sister Ruby Griffin at 121 Castle Brewer Court.

Mrs. Pendleton was rescued from the burning home by a neighbor, who she said broke through the back door and dragged her onto the back porch. From there she was carried to a nearby house. Later she was treated for smoke inhalation at Seminole Memorial Hospital.

"Harrell never did leave the house," she said Monday morning at her sister's home.

According to Mrs. Pendleton, Harrell came in the house as she was entering the bedroom.

"I told him he should go out and I went into the bedroom," she said.

Weak, dressed in a bathrobe and sitting on the side of a bed prepared for her in the front room, Mrs. Pendleton returned with her hands.

"I went into the room (bedroom) and I'm pretty sure I had my shoes and scarf in my hands already. Then, all of a sudden I heard that thing fall over. Boom, boom, boom. Then I went back into the living room and the fire was just a blazing. Well, I had no better sense than to throw water on the fire. I thought you were supposed to throw water on fires. Anyway, they say they say the water made the fire spread." What made the noise, Mrs. Pendleton said, was an overturned heater.

"I had the flu and those black-out spells, you know, that's why I was going to the doctor. I saw Bobby laying there on the floor. I stepped over him and grabbed him by the sweater and tried to pull him out of the house. I pulled and pulled and dug him out the living room and I was trying to get him out the back door, out back in the kitchen. But I was weak and I could not handle Bobby, I kept calling for help, I'd say, 'help' and nobody would come. I got him in the kitchen and I couldn't take him no farther. That's where I blacked-out." Mrs. Pendleton said.

Mrs. Pendleton said Lester Williams, 268 West 11th, stumbled over her when he entered the smoke filled house.

"His mother told me he grabbed me out and snatched me to the porch. I don't know what happened. I was out cold," she reflected. "All I know is that I lost everything."

WHY DON'T WE JUST BOARD IT UP AND START HIM ALL OVER AGAIN

JUST THINK IT ALL STARTED WITH HIS LOOPY COMING

DEAR HELOISE:

I have recently shared a problem here at home, and I'd like to share it with all of your readers who are the proud parents of a young child. Consider me anonymous, please.

My husband and I wanted one (or more to arrive gently), the first as always empty!

After three years of trying, we finally had a child. The doctor said it was a girl. I was overjoyed. I had had a couple here and a couple there. I had had a couple here and a couple there. I had had a couple here and a couple there.

DEAR HELOISE:

On the first of the year, I saw the cat or dog part. This is a problem for many people. I have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat.

DEAR HELOISE:

The classic end will stretch out for a long time. I have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat.

DEAR HELOISE:

My dog is very attractive. I have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat.

DEAR HELOISE:

There are many people who have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat.

DEAR HELOISE:

A cat is a very beautiful animal. I have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat. I have a dog and a cat.
