Chamber mixer set

LAKE MARY — The Greater Lake Mary/Heathrow Chamber of Commerce will hold a Business After Hours gathering this Thursday evening. The event, from 5:30 until 7:30 p.m., will be held at APEX Professional Services at Heathrow, 120 International Parkway, upper level, Market Square.

The cost for the event is $5 for non-members. No charge for members. Chamber officials say it's an opportunity to meet the business leaders of the community at the new executive suites in Heathrow.

For further information, phone the Chamber office at 333-4748.

Mainstreet up for consideration

SANFORD — Whether or not Sanford gains approval to become an official Florida Main Street Community may be decided within the next two days.

Officials will be traveling to Ocoee tomorrow to await the decision.

Neil Fritz, Sanford Main Street's Interim Program Coordinator, has been compiling the application form for a number of months, and the documents are now ready for evaluation.

Only three cities will be accepted to participate in Florida Main Street.

Among those expected to go to Ocoee to await the decision, and be available to answer any questions, are Fritz, Sanford Main Street officials Hal Welch, Chris Crantias, Helen Stairs, Laura Strachla, Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith, Commissioner Lon Howell, and several others.

If approved, the program will provide historic rehabilitation assistance for downtown merchants and property owners. State as well as national experts will be available to assist in compiling plans and leading development.

Three hit Lotto jackpot

TALLAHASSEE — Three lucky tickets matched all six numbers drawn for Florida's latest Lotto game and will get equal shares of an estimated $30 million jackpot. Lottery officials said.

The tickets were bought in Miami, North Miami and Sarasota. The numbers drawn late Saturday were 3-21-28-40-42-45.

Lotto outlets sold 440 tickets with five of the numbers, worth $1,323.50 each; 21,991 four-of-six winners worth $63.50 each and 401,663 three-of-six winners worth $4.50 each.

The grand prize had been fattened by two weeks of rollovers. It started at $7 million, went to $16 million on the first rollover and jumped to an estimated $30 million when the second week went by without a big winner.

Correction

The bus stop for Seminole High School students who live in the Hills of Lake Mary subdivision was incorrectly identified in Sunday's paper.

Students who are taking the 6:45 a.m. bus to Seminole need to meet it at the intersection of County Road 46A and Lake Como Drive.

Students should stand about 75 feet from County Road 46A while waiting for the bus.

Tax increase vote

County to consider tax, fee hikes Tuesday

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners aren't scheduled to begin their final deliberations on the proposed 1993-1994 budget for another four weeks, but tomorrow they'll consider raising garbage fees, the gasoline tax and the unincorporated utility fee for next year's spending.

During the afternoon, commissioners will decide whether to increase the county dump dumping rate by 16 percent to pay for an increase in federal and state environmental protection standards. The increase will affect city and non-city residents alike. Unincorporated customers will see their rates increase by up to $3 per month.

During the evening, commissioners will consider nearly doubling the county utility tax paid by unincorporated residents to pay for a drainage improvement program immediately following, they will consider increasing the gasoline tax by a penny a gallon to pay for mass transit services.

The afternoon hearing begins at 1:30 p.m. The evening hearings begin at 7 o'clock. Both meetings will be held in the commission chambers of the County Services Building, 1101 E. First St. in Sanford.

Commissioners won't begin to take public testimony on the $274.2 million proposed spending plan until Sept. 14 and 28, but County

Some students nervous, it's a party for others

SANFORD — The sun had barely peeked through the clouds and the street lights were still flickering when the first students stumbled off the bus at Seminole High School this morning.

Freshmen, clutching still spiral bound note books and sharp pencils, huddled close to the bus ramp and looked apprehensively toward the mass of buildings around them.

"I'm nervous... real nervous," admitted Addie Steffens, a freshman. "I was here for summer school, but that was different."

Airport seeks financing of hangar

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Central Florida Regional Airport is considering adding one, possibly two large aircraft hangars. The Airport Authority is seeking a firm to jointly participate in financing the project.

The Florida Department of Transportation has authorized a grant of $350,000 to the airport which can be applied to payment of up to 50 percent of the cost of the project.

The search now is for a qualified investor, preferably involved with aviation business to jointly participate in the building of the hangars.

Airport Director Steve Cooke explained, "We already have the design from our engineers, and now we are looking for financial help."

"With the $350,000 from the DOT to start with," he said, "if the hangar, for example, would cost $700,000 to build, the investor would pay half. If the hangar would cost only $550,000, the investor would have to pay only the additional $200,000."

"If construction costs are down," he added, "we would then have the possibility of building"

Sanford to approve joint DARE officer

City to provide a full-time officer; school board to pay

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The City of Sanford is scheduled to approve an agreement establishing a Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) officer. The joint agreement was approved by the Seminole County School Board on July 30.

Action required by the City Commission is approval of the latest term, from Aug. 17, 1993 through June 11, 1994.

According to the wording of the agreement, "The purpose is to foster better relations between students and law enforcement personnel to enforce local, state and federal laws, and to have a DARE Officer available for presentations to the students, faculty and parents concerning drug resistance education and various subjects related to the law."

The officer will be required to teach the 17-week DARE curriculum, counsel students, attend meetings such as PTA and School Board, and become involved in other projects.

The list of duties and responsibilities specifies the DARE officer may not engage in school disciplinary activities, or become involved in detention periods.

The officer would be assigned to service Goldsboro, Hamilton and Pine Crest Elementary Schools.

In signing the joint document, the city agrees to provide the School Board with one full-time DARE officer. The School Board agrees to compensate the city for the services of the DARE officer. The amount specified is $22,766.

The city presently helps contribute to the salary of three officers assigned to the School Resource Program through the Law Enforcement Trust Fund. They serve as School Resource Officers (SRO's) at Lakeview Middle, Sanford Middle,

Inmate shot while trying to escape

STARKE — A Florida State Prison inmate was shot and killed after scaling a 12-foot barbed wire fence in an escape attempt, a state corrections official said.

James Williams, 32, was shot Saturday by a tower officer when he ignored warnings and ran away from the institution after crossing the outer perimeter fence, said Eugene Morris, a spokesman for the Department of Corrections.

Four warning shots were fired, which it appeared Williams ignored. Guards then shot at the fleeing inmate.

"He got about 100 yards before he went down," Morris said.

Williams was transported by helicopter to University Hospital in Jacksonville where he was pronounced dead Saturday afternoon, said spokeswoman Kathy Wasiewicz.

Williams, from the Lee County town of Alva, was serving a 30½ year sentence for a variety of charges including arson, battery of a law enforcement officer and attempted escape. He had been at Florida State Prison since February 19, 1990.

Man kills wife, injures daughter

NICHOLS — Police were searching for a man who allegedly opened fire on his wife and daughter shortly before all three were to leave on a weekend family outing, authorities said.

Albert Dotson fled on foot after he killed his wife Sunday and wounded his daughter in front of the family's mobile home in this town just south of State Road 60, according to the Polk County Sheriff's Department.

Officers found Beverly Dotson, 38, dead between two cars in her back yard and her teen-age daughter was shot in the hand.

"We have to presume he's armed and dangerous," Sheriff's Maj. Grady Judd said. "All of his vehicles were here, so it's possible he's still in the immediate area."

The incident began as the couple and the daughter — 17-year-old Tamaraka "Tammy" Morris — prepared to drive to the home of Beverly's mother in Plant City, Judd said.

Judd said the daughter told authorities the shooting occurred shortly after Beverly Dotson asked her husband, "Do you want to lock the house?" Judd gave no other information about what prompted the outburst.

Willie Simons, Beverly Dotson's father, and an uncle heard the shots and rushed to the scene. They wrestled a handgun and rifle away from Albert Dotson before fleeing themselves, Judd said.

Andrew anniversary

One year later, recovery and despair continue in south Florida

By TRACY FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

GOULDS — It's another 90-degree morning at Mount Pleasant Missionary Baptist Church. The choir sings "Revive Us Again" to the accompaniment of a portable synthesizer organ.

Worshippers wield hand fans, flapping like captive butterflies. Instead of the usual biblical scene or picture of Martin Luther King Jr., the white fans bear the words "Andrew was yesterday. Recovery is today," and a toll-free number for the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Since Hurricane Andrew destroyed its sanctuary, Mount Pleasant literally has been a church without walls, gathering every steamy Sunday under a borrowed, off-white tent with rolled-up sides.

The hours of terror and violence, days of deprivation and misery that Hurricane Andrew brought to south Dade County have ended, but the experience is far from over. It's difficult to say when the distress will end for some, and things will never again be exactly as they were before last Aug. 24.

The storm's damage estimates run higher than $30 billion, making it the nation's most costly disaster. The human cost is much greater; as Andrew's survivors watch the Midwest struggle with flooding, they understand.

"We can really feel sympathy and empathy with those folks," said Mount Pleasant's Rev.

Governor: 'We're starting to get on top of it'

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

KEY BISCAYNE — Scenes of hope and frustration contrasted as Gov. Lawton Chiles revisited areas where he viewed the destruction in the trail of Hurricane Andrew nearly a year ago.

Chiles lined up a bus tour today including Homestead Air Force Base, a south Dade County migrant workers' camp, and Miami's Fairchild Tropical Gardens. A prayer service in heavily damaged Homestead will start events Tuesday, a year after the hurricane slashed through the area.

"Obviously there's a lot to be done," Chiles said Sunday after he arrived for three days of observations of the anniversary.

His helicopter flew from Biscayne Bay, where vacationers strolled on docked cruise ships, over the damaged Air Force Base, acres of migrant workers' mobile homes, and neighborhoods where houses with new roofs, backyard pools and tennis courts overlooked others with roofs in shambles, and lots with bare foundations.

The destruction was still obvious, but most of the rubble piled high during earlier visits had been cleared, Chiles noted.

"Even the houses that are knocked down, a lot of them have lumber out next to them," he said. "We have to keep on keeping on, but I get the feeling now that we're starting to get on top of it."

"I just hope we don't get tested by a storm now," he said.

Dade County took the heaviest hit from Andrew. The progress of recovery differs widely, depending on where you look. Whole neighborhoods and shopping centers remain gutted, as if the storm had just happened. But elsewhere, generally in more affluent areas, the steady ratchet and procession of construction workers have brought renewal.

No event so heartened the people of south Dade County as the surprise announcement in June that flattened Homestead Air Force Base, slated for closure, would be resuscitated.

It was selected as a model base to serve as a national example of how such installations can be returned to their surrounding communities. Col. Rodney Bates will have more resources to work with as he and his staff work on the cleanup.

"All we have to do is get it started and push it in the right direction," he said.

The F-16s of the 31st Fighter Wing are gone. But they'll be replaced by planes belonging to Air Force reserve units, the Florida Air National Guard and U.S. Customs Service as the base becomes a mixed-use, civilian and government facility.

Military retirees were crushed, however, to learn that key facilities such as the hospital and commissary would not return. As many as 6,000 retired officers have left since Hurricane Andrew to seek the benefits of other military bases in the Sun Belt.

The migration also has affected cities like Florida City, which lost half of its 8,000 residents, and Homestead, which lost 12,000 since the storm. The real estate boom that has hit southwest Broward County to the north is testimony to other defections from the storm zone.

But the cities are fighting to rebuild.

Money troubles leave luxury dorm unfinished as students move in

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Students moved into a private luxury dormitory at Florida State this weekend while crews finished their work and investigators probed a financial tangle that has already left one developer in bankruptcy court.

Whether the dorm would open at all was in question after prominent Tallahassee builder Kent Deeb sought protection from creditors in June in U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

"We did have some inquiries from people who weren't sure if it would be ready on time," said Florida State University housing director Rita Moser.

As new residents and their parents steered carts piled with clothing and baggage, SouthGate Campus Centre was like a hotel at check-in time — except for hard-hatted workers striding through with coils of wire and building materials.

The students didn't seem to mind. "It's pretty nice," said Florida State University freshman Linda Scowden of Sarasota, unloading a car trunk Friday outside the pricey private dorm.

"I was hoping it would be finished," said sophomore Claire Lamorena of Lakeland, whose parents helped her pile belongings on a cart on the sidewalk. "She loves it," said her mother, Aida.

But the dorm built to house more than 500 was opening with about 260 residents, said Rick Benton, attorney for the Leon County Educational Facilities Authority.

That's enough occupants to pay for operation and maintenance. But whether their fees and food sales will cover interest on the $28.7 million bond issue the authority is backing remains to be seen, Benton said.

The authority approved a $550,000 bailout March 13 to finish the dorm and will meet again Monday to discuss whether it can financially survive, he said.

The state comptroller's office and the FBI are both investigating SouthGate's financing, and U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Lewis Killian has barred creditors from interfering with Deeb's operation of the dorm in the meantime. Deeb, citing attorneys' advice, has declined to comment.

"If the SouthGate project is not completed in time for students to move in before classes begin in August 1993, the building may be largely unoccupied during the upcoming school year," J. Kinson Cook, construction contractor on the project, said in an affidavit urging Killian not to jeopardize an August finish.

SouthGate officials were optimistic Friday as cars lined the curb, the lobby bustled, and students registered at balloon-decked computer terminals. "We registered about 100 today," director of sales Edward Xanders said.

Occupancy may grow in the first weeks of school as some students change their lodging plans, Xanders and Benton said.

"We expect to have another increase at the beginning of the spring semester" Jan. 1, said Xanders. "Next fall we should be sold out."

Deeb had been allowed $1.6 million for furniture and equipment, but told the authority the last-minute bailout was needed for items such as exercise equipment, bed linens and towels, canopies for the fast-food restaurants, computers and laundry machines.

The authority released the $550,000 from a rainy day fund set aside to help pay interest on the bond debt.

The fund started at $2.4 million, and $300,000 has already been spent on interest. Another $1.1 million is due Sept. 1. That will leave only $450,000 in the fund when the next $1.1 million interest payment is due, March 1.

The authority is counting on SouthGate's profits to cover the interest and rebuild the fund.

Way Back When

Here's a 1914 Dodge touring car seen on Sanford streets. The top would fold forward in case of inclement weather and could be attached to the uprights of the windshield. There also were curtains which could be suspended from the top and attached to the body of the automobile to protect occupants from the rain. Notice the extra gas tank attached to the running board. A second tank was mounted on the running board on the other side of the car. In 1914, gasoline stations were not as prevalent as they are today, especially if one did a lot of traveling. The owner and driver of the car pictured here is Guy O. Stenstrom Sr. He was the youngest of the 10 children parented by dairyman Nels

Julius Stenstrom and his wife, nee Josephine Jacobs, who is believed to be the area's first schoolteacher. Guy Sr. settled in Detroit where he became a linotype operator and served several newspapers and printing companies in that area. He is survived by his son, Guy O. Stenstrom, Jr., an architectural engineer who resides with his wife, Esther, in Apopka. At one time the younger Stenstrom was a member of the Seminole County engineering staff under now retired Bill Bush. Guy Jr. is also the author of an "Engineer's Handbook," which was published in a hardbound cover by the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company of New York City.

Recording taken as evidence in arrest

The conversation between two 19-year olds sitting in a Lake Mary Police car during an investigation of a traffic stop when cannabis was found will be submitted to prosecutors as evidence in the case.

The tape, Lake Mary police allege, shows Robert J. Rogers, Jr., 19, 612 Chatas Circle, Lake Mary, who was driving the car and passenger Kenneth V. Cox, Jr., 19, 9311 Trout Lake Road, Orlando knew the marijuana was in the car.

The pair were stopped on Rhinehart Road for going 56 mph in a 45 mph zone. Rogers said the car was registered in his mother's name. She came to the scene to positively identify her son was driving the car after there was a discrepancy in her son's description.

Cox and Rogers waited in a police car for the woman to arrive and their conversation was taped. She gave permission for the car to be searched and marijuana and cigarette papers were found under the front passenger seat along with two "roaches" in the ashtray.

Lake Mary Police removed the teens from the police car, arrested them for possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana and drug paraphernalia about 11 p.m. Friday night, secured them and took them to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

According to the police report, "An audio tape was made of the conversation between the two men while at the scene, indicating they had knowledge of the cannabis and papers and that it belonged to them. The audio tape was secured as evidence along with the other mentioned items."

Two arrested in cocaine deal

Two men from Georgia were arrested Wednesday by agents of the City County Investigative Bureau after they tried to buy a kilo of cocaine for $21,000.

A CCIB undercover agent made contact with Ben Jack McCranie, 52, RTE 3, Box 83, Eastham, Ga., and James W. McCranie, 41, no address given, at a restaurant near State Road 436 and Interstate 4.

After James W. examined the cocaine in the parking lot, he indicated it was high quality, according to the police report.

Ben McCranie invited the undercover agent to his hotel room, where McCranie produced $21,000. He was arrested but complained of chest pains as he was being escorted from the room. He told the agent he had heart problems. Paramedics were called and McCranie was transported and admitted to South Seminole Community Hospital, Longwood.

In the meantime, agents moved in to arrest James W., who was waiting at the restaurant. Ben Jack McCranie, whose occupation was listed as farmer and religion Baptist, was released from the hospital and booked into jail Friday.

The men registered at different hotels, one under a fictitious name and no luggage was found in the 1987 Cadillac police impounded.

Burglary charged

Telly Savalas Medlock, 19, 1000 Maple Ave., Sanford, was charged with burglary. He was arrested on the burglary charge while in jail on an unrelated charge.

Two victims claim Medlock removed windows from their house and stole food, clothing and soft drinks. When they called the sheriff, Medlock returned after the deputies left and yelled and threatened them, according to the police report.

Difficult arrest

A Lake Mary woman was charged early Saturday morning with driving under the influence and battery on a law enforcement officer.

At about 1:30 p.m., a Lake Mary officer stopped Ann Marie Holloway, 28, 251 Abbott Ave. to investigate a possible impaired driver. The officer called for assistance when Holloway initially agreed to field sobriety tests, then refused.

Taken to jail, she did not cooperate while the officer filed out paperwork. "She became cocky and walked out of the DUI room," according to the report. When she refused to return to the room, officer O'Conner escorted her. Her arm was put in an arm bar and she became hysterical slapping papers all over the desk, almost striking the officer in the groin. He moved quickly and was struck on his right leg near his hip. As the woman screamed and cursed, the report states, she was eventually handcuffed and placed in a cell. She was released on $2,000 bond.

While in jail, she was served with a warrant for violation of probation for DUI.

DUI charged

● Beverly Ann Perkins, 38, 1700 A Ridgewood Lane, Sanford, was charged with DUI shortly after 1 a.m. Saturday morning at Lake Emma Road and Secret Harbor. Police observed the car Perkins was driving weaving across the traffic lanes and onto the shoulder of the road. She performed field sobriety tests and her breath tests measured .233 and .228.

● Catherine Lawrence Jones, 26, 105 Edgewater Drive, Sanford, was charged with DUI at 2:20 a.m. Aug. 20 by Lake Mary Police. Jones was clocked going 56 mph in a 40 mph zone on Rhinehart Road. When she was stopped on Lake Mary Boulevard, the officer noted a strong odor of alcohol. Jones said she had been drinking "a little bit" and made several statements about being a single parent and wanting to go home to her children. She was arrested and taken to jail. Breath tests showed blood alcohol levels of .197 and .187.

● Steven Reginald Evelyn, 33, 1882 Hawkins Ave., Sanford was arrested by Winter Springs Police on SR 434 Saturday and charged with DUI and Careless Driving.

Aggravated Assault

Federico Guerrero Jr., 38, 2800 S. Palmetto Ave., Sanford was charged with aggravated assault after two women in the 2800 block of Magnolia Avenue called police claiming he threatened them with an ax handle.

Disorderly Intoxication

David Denizard, 53, 957 Lorman Circle, Longwood was charged with disorderly intoxication after he refused to leave a Longwood bar. His wife was called to the scene by police after the manager complained the man was disturbing other guests. When he began cursing at his wife and the officer refusing to leave, the policeman arrested the suspect and took him to jail.

Warrant arrests

● Christopher Glenn Enloe, 18, Box 296 Panacea Motel (sic), Panacea, two warrants for failure to appear/grand theft auto and burglary and attempted robbery.

● John Anthony Dakota, 26, 2510 Kaley, Orlando, violation of probation/burglary of a conveyance.

● Daymon R. Richardson, 32, 5874 CR 427, Sanford, failure to appear/obtaining property with worthless check.

Attorneys try again to seat jury

WEST PALM BEACH — With the trial moved to this neutral site, attorneys will try for the second time to pick a jury in the Tampa case of two white men accused of burning a black tourist.

A pool of 120 jurors was to be questioned beginning today in search of a six-member panel to try Mark Kohut and Charles Rourke in the attempted murder, kidnapping and robbery of Christopher Wilson of New York City.

Trial was originally set two months ago in Tampa, but after eight days of trying unsuccessfully to seat a jury under intense news coverage, Circuit Judge Donald C. Evans moved the trial to West Palm Beach.

An appeals court late Friday rejected the judge's money-saving plan to pick jurors in West Palm Beach and fly them to Tampa for trial — what was to have been the first imported jury in Florida legal history.

The panel and two alternates selected in West Palm Beach are to be sequestered for the duration of the trial, expected to last two to three weeks.

Police say Wilson was abducted at gunpoint as he bought a newspaper New Year's Day and forced to drive to a remote field, where he was taunted with racial slurs, doused with gasoline and set afire. The 32-year-old stock brokerage clerk from Brooklyn is recovering from burns over nearly 40 percent of his body.

A note left at the scene read "One less nigger more to go" and was signed "KKK."

As prosecutors go to trial, they have no physical evidence linking Kohut and Rourke to the crime.

Orlando AIDS prison to be first in nation

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Florida's prison system will become the first in the nation to segregate inmates in the final stages of AIDS, a decision civil libertarians say is a throwback to the days of leper colonies, a newspaper reported.

The state is paying $953,000 to convert the old Cape Orlando Community Correction Center for the purpose. The Miami Herald reported today.

"This is an historic decision," Jackie Walker, of the American Civil Liberties Union's National Prison Project, said. "It's a huge step backward."

Plans call for a full-time doctor with 12 assistants and a team of infectious disease experts on contract as consulting physicians. The prison should open next summer with normal prison security and eight isolation units for more severe cases, said Dr. Charles Matthews, the state prison system's top doctor.

"I'm responsible for the treatment of these people, and I need to have them where I can treat them best," he said. "We just can't do it as effectively at prison infirmaries."

Corrections Secretary Harry Singletary said it will also be cost-effective and the renovated prison will be a more comfortable place for the prisoners to spend their last days.

The prison will be only for those who are seriously ill, and not for all the prisoners who have AIDS or the HIV virus that causes it. In June, prison officials said that in a population of 50,000 prisoners, 411 had AIDS and 1,507 were HIV-positive.

AIDS has been the leading cause of death in Florida prisons since 1987, the newspaper reported.

Last year, the prison agency spent more than $3 million on private hospital care of inmates with AIDS. Prison officials hope the new facility could save up to $1 million annually.

"This has nothing to do with segregation," Singletary said. "It's a quality-of-life issue for the patients, and an efficiency issue for us."

ACLU attorneys say that segregating the inmates would confer second-class status on the group, and asks why inmates with other fatal diseases — like cancer — aren't being moved to the prison.

"This is an excuse to separate prisoners with AIDS and remove them from the population — out of sight, out of mind." Walker said. "It's just a bad policy. They'll become a throwaway population."

Walker said she is also concerned that the prison system is considering forcing inmates to submit to tests for the fatal disease and whether to offer experimental and investigatory treatments.

Earlier this month, two inmates filed suit to force the state to segregate prisoners with the AIDS virus. William Gerry Hargrove and H. David Wallick, inmates at Tomoka Correctional Institution in Daytona Beach, claim they are terrified of contracting AIDS in prison through foul play, unsanitary conditions or rape.

The student truancy problem

The Seminole County school district is preparing to launch a program to reduce truancy. It will be inaugurated at Sanford Middle School and Lakeview Middle School.

The project is dependant on approval of a $75,000 Community Juvenile Justice Partnership Grant.

The money would be used to help finance teachers on overtime to deal with children kept after school hours and consult with parents. It would also provide additional supplies which may be needed to assist in the program.

School officials say it could reduce truancy by as much as 33 percent. If successful, it would be expanded to other schools.

The concept is good. Preventing absences in school classes will help reduce suspensions, expulsions, and juvenile crime.

Schools believe the program cannot be successful without cooperation from parents. We see this as a saddening point.

The request for support on the home-front suggests parents do not show enough concern for their children. Parents expect the school to be totally responsible for preventing truancy. Schools insinuate that parents don't care.

This may appear as an insult for some parents who help guide their children's schooling. For others however, it is, unfortunately, true.

Once the child goes out the door in the morning, some parents automatically expect the destination will be school. No follow-up is ever attempted.

Other parents, who are extremely lenient, will allow their youngsters to stay at home on a school day, for a very minor reason. They will accept the child's word for an excuse, rather than try to instill any educational responsibility.

We suggest parents get involved now. Give serious consideration on how to take more steps to reduce truancy.

While we hope the school district will obtain the grant with which to start the program at these two schools, action by parents now could help reduce truancy.

Student speaks

I am a student at a facility called Tiger's Eye Production Wildlife Research Center, located in Oviedo. I took a leave of absence from my job in Phoenix, Ariz. and packed up my home just to attend this facility. There are only two schools in the country that allows you hand-on training with exotic animals. I am due to graduate in October 1993.

On June 22, 1993 the Seminole County commissioners voted to close down my school at the present location and gave us till Oct. 1, 1993 to move. Their reasoning for the closing - students cause too much traffic on the dirt road we need to use to get to the school. We do not want to move. Even if we did we could not reasonably build another facility in 90 days for all the animals housed at my school.

What the commissioners are saying to me is that a dirt road is more important than my education. I cannot sit by and let the commissioners dictate my life and ruin my graduation. We need the public's support. Please write the Seminole County commissioners - maybe we can get them to change their decision. Thank you for your support.

Imagining senator's mind and soul

"Some degree of abuse is inseparable from the proper use of everything," James Madison said as he focused on those who wrote with more sulfurous imagination than facts about political figures. "It is better," he added, "to leave a few of (free expression's) noxious branches to their luxuriant growth than, by pruning them away, to injure the vigor of those yielding the proper fruits."

The First Amendment largely shields Joe McGinniss just as it generally protects the richly imaginative writers for the supermarket tabloids. In one of which an excerpt from his "The Last Brother: The Rise and Fall of Teddy Kennedy" might vividly appear. There may be a copyright infringement suit from William Manchester, who claims McGinniss borrowed extravagantly from his "The Death of a President," but a claim of defamation from Sen. Kennedy is most unlikely for it would bring more publicity to the book.

McGinniss' problems, however, have far less to do with legal costs than the price of greatly diminished credibility. Lawyers talk of making a damaged client whole, but McGinniss is like Humpty Dumpty after the fall.

In his attempt to - in his words - "convey to the reader what it might have been like to Teddy Kennedy," McGinniss, without interviewing Kennedy, has reached the pinnacle of what a veteran writer I knew called the as-if school of non-fiction. "It could have happened that way," the old-timer used to say scornfully, "so why not write as if it indeed happened that way?"

McGinniss himself, in the "author's note" at the end of his book, says coolly that he has "written certain scenes and described certain events from what I have inferred to be (Ted Kennedy's) point of view." And on Charlie Rose's Public Broadcasting System's Interview program, McGinniss added: "This is a work that tries to perhaps break new ground in terms of form." For instance, "I have quite consciously written portions as from inside his mind." But there already is a form in which that is done. It's called fiction.

The book, however, is being marketed as non-fiction: "a detailed, tragic portrait of a man ... trapped in the glorious but hollow Kennedy myth, longing - but unable - to escape." The buyers of this hollow portrait will take it to be history, for the publisher has not warned them otherwise. And if the projected NBC miniseries does appear, millions more - who get their history from steamy docudramas - will delugedly believe that McGinniss did enter into the mind and suffering soul of Ted Kennedy.

So far, the author has not been treated kindly by most reviewers and reporters, and his defense - on various television programs and radio talk shows - is that he is the victim of "The Kennedy machine." The rebukes and scorn visited upon him, he says indignantly, are due to an organized effort by The Family to discredit the book and thereby preserve the Kennedy myth so it can cloak the younger generation of Kennedys going into politics.

Why were there no protests by editors at the Simon-Schuster name had been placed on this consumer fraud?

Congress takes responsibility

In all the millions of words written and spoken about the Great Budget Showdown of 1993, virtually none has addressed its most interesting aspect. A majority, if only the barest kind of majority, was mustered in both houses of Congress to pass something that most Americans instinctively disliked and few special interest groups were actively backing.

More to the point, the final vote and the long debate that preceded it were conducted in the full, merciless light of saturation coverage by the media. This was not a case of slipping bitter medicine to the patient in a sugarcoated pill. Each and every member of Congress had to stand up and take personal responsibility for his role in a well-understood exercise.

It was almost a case of man biting dog. There must be another time in recent history when something similar occurred in Washington, but I cannot remember it. While most of the commentary has pressed the view that the tight votes augur tough times for several other controversial Clinton proposals this fall, it seems to me that the opposite could be argued with equal validity. For the first time in a long time, all but a relative handful of Democrats voted down the line in favor of a hard proposition. Having done so once, they may discover that it doesn't hurt as much as they thought.

Much has been made of another interesting sidelight of the budget fight, which was that not a single Republican representative or senator broke ranks. The GOP's party discipline would have done credit to a parliamentary government.

But the Republicans' negative unity was less of a feat than it might appear. The final form of the Clinton budget was, if nothing else, a direct repudiation of the favor-the-rich approach of the Reagan-Bush years. The tax rate on the nation's wealthiest 5 percent, the chief beneficiaries of Reaganomics, was jumped by up to one-third. To vote yes on such an approach was to vote no on the preceding 12 years of Republican rule.

Even if some GOP moderates had been so inclined, they might have been deterred from breaking ranks by the vociferous public opposition. Besides, the budget was the product of Intra-Democratic Party negotiations from beginning to end. Not having been invited to play a meaningful role in the takeoff, Republicans were uninterested in assisting in the landing. Assuming there was actually a handful who believed the final budget was acceptable, there was nonetheless almost no reason for any of them to rise above partisanship and do the right thing.

But there was plenty of reason for Democrats to break ranks, particularly in the House of Representatives, all of whose members face the voters next year. The final compromise was displeasing to almost every party faction. Its emphasis on deficit reduction took a page from the traditional GOP form book rather than the Democratic. While lower-income voters were targeted for additional assistance and rich Americans were soaked, the mass-voting middle class was given reason to believe it had been betrayed. The gasoline tax increase of 4.3 cents is piddling in reality, but it looms large symbolically when viewed against the background of candidate Clinton's promise of a middle-class tax cut.

And yet, for a variety of reasons ranging from conviction to log-rolling, 50 Democratic senators voted yes for more austerity than the party has ever before endorsed in this century while in power.

So did 218 Democrats in the House of Representatives. It was barely enough in each instance, but it was a solid victory made more impressive by its content. A president elected with only 43 percent of the electoral vote persuaded a working majority of his party to endorse pain, rather than the pleasure of a tax cut or major stimulus package.

Pain for pain's sake is not the point, obviously. The budget vote is the opening act, not the final curtain, in the process of fiscal recovery. More lies ahead, though none of it will be of any use if there is not a full-throated economic recovery abroad as well as at home. In the end, "growing the economy" is essential, just as Bill Clinton has always said. But as the 1980s proved, economic growth without budgetary responsibility equals $220 billion a year in payments on the national debt.

The next demand for political maturity is going to be made very soon. The president's health-care reform program will be expensive and unsettling. It will demand sacrifices by many Americans. While its final shape is up for debate, revision and restructuring, the need for far-reaching change is self-evident. Health-care costs are growing astronomically, while gaps in health-care coverage leave some 35 million Americans without medical insurance.

The problem has been growing for more than 25 years, matched only by the political flight from solutions. But solving it is perhaps equally as important as stemming the hemorrhage of red ink from the federal budget.

It was almost a case of man biting dog.

Turn out the lights

WASHINGTON - When Vice President Al Gore's National Performance Review implements its plan to "reinvent government," it might start by turning off the lights at the Department of Energy.

The Department of Energy expects to spend $789 million next year promoting energy conservation. Taxpayer dollars are spent producing glossy, multicolored pamphlets with tips on conserving energy, which it gladly provides to anyone who asks. Unfortunately, DOE doesn't always practice what it preaches.

Last winter, some DOE employees wore short sleeves to work because the temperature in the warehouse where they worked was kept 10 degrees warmer than the federal government mandates. The loss to taxpayers - $21,000 - was enough to heat 100 low-income homes for the winter.

This was not the only crack in DOE's energy-conservation program. DOE investigators estimate that the department wasted as much as $14 million last year owing to poor energy conservation, or enough money to heat the homes of 65,000 low-income people this winter.

The federal government currently pays an estimated $8.7 billion per year for energy, so every little bit of conservation would reduce costs. As the government's guardian of conservation, it is DOE's job to ensure that agencies make efficient use of their energy dollars.

"Making sure that energy is not wasted starts with thinking creatively about a problem, with discipline, with changes in philosophy and behavior, and with awareness. The payoffs can be significant," reads one pamphlet DOE distributes to the public.

"Thinking creatively" at DOE apparently doesn't include turning the lights off when leaving work at the end of the day. Air conditioners and heaters are run at temperatures exceeding federal limits, and are often kept running even when no one is working. At sites where energy-conservation equipment has been installed, employees are still using more wasteful and expensive systems.

"The DOE is one of its worst offenders at its own facilities," a spokesperson for Public Citizen, a government watchdog group, told us. "You can verify this by driving by its Washington headquarters at night and seeing the lights on. Not only is it ironic, but it's moronic."

In a recent report by the DOE inspector general, reviewed by our associate Andrew Conte, the investigators recite the department's own axioms: "Many (energy conservation) opportunities can be realized at little or no cost by merely turning off or turning down heating, ventilating, air conditioning and lighting systems in unoccupied buildings."

In just one area of one building, inspectors found $5,000 being wasted each year by lights being left on when they were not needed. At another site, the department could save $180,000 per year just by installing energy-efficient fluorescent lighting.

Inspectors discovered that most DOE buildings had heating, ventilating and air-conditioning equipment running 24 hours per day, seven days per week. In some of the older buildings, heating and air-conditioning units were running at the same time for additional comfort. At one site, investigators estimated that the department was losing $2.5 million per year just by leaving heating and cooling systems running at night and on weekends. Employees at this facility argued that the equipment should be left on "just in case" one of them decided to put in a little overtime.

Even in cases where DOE tried to conserve energy, its efforts weren't always successful.

The loss to taxpayers - $21,000 - was enough to heat 100 low-income homes for the winter.

Manager Ron Rabun said it is smart fiscal planning to pin down income before.

"You shouldn't wait until the first or second adoption hearings to make your decisions," said Rabun. "If you don't have your revenues in place when you make your budget decisions, it becomes kind of a sham."

Commissioners have pledged to lower the property tax to help offset the rate and fee increases, but the property tax trim won't fully offset the other increases, especially for renters.

During their afternoon meeting, commissioners will take up the inciting subject of garbage fee hikes. Many unincorporated residents have been unhappy since commissioners first began regulating fees in 1990 to meet state garbage disposal requirements. Rates for some residents nearly doubled and have increased since.

Tomorrow, commissioners will consider hiking the dumping fee paid by garbage haulers by $5 per ton from the current $31. The increase will help pay for the expenses of hauling rainwater that falls on the dump to a sewage treatment facility, operating the new recycling facility for apartment and business customers and other requirements to meet federal and state mandates.

The dumping-fee change would affect customers of county collection franchises from $2.88 to $3 per month. Dumping charges for haul-it-yourselfers would also increase from $4 to $7 for a covered load taken to the dump. Other individual dumping rates would also increase.

To curb the sting of the increase, county solid waste staff have proposed doubling the minimum number of bags or cans a household can deposit by the curb from the current four receptacles. However, the cost of "bag-tags" for excess receptacles would increase from $1 to $1.36 to $1.38, depending on the hauler.

In a separate action, commissioners will consider an annual cost-of-living-type increase of 22 cents monthly for Waste Management Inc. customers in the northwest quarter of the county.

Later, commissioners will consider an increase in the utility tax paid on electricity, heating fuels, and local telephone services from the current 4 percent up to 7 1/2 percent. The increase, which would take effect in October, would raise about $3 million annually for stormwater improvements. It will add about $33 per year to the services' charges.

Commissioners have been reluctant to adopt a separate stormwater fee as many cities have and have opted for the utility fee increase instead.

Commissioners will also consider adding another penny to the county gas tax beginning Jan. 1, 1994 to provide a steady income for mass transit services, primarily, Lynx bus services. The change would add about $8 more per year to individual driving expenses and generate $775,000 next year.

Cost for Lynx services will increase next year due to free service for the elderly and disabled and modifications to routes along State Roads 434 a n d 4 3 6

Hangar

The second hangar. The present hangar, in existence since the airport was used as a Naval Air Station, is in poor condition. "We have been advised that the building is unsafe," Cooke said, "and we have vacated the building, which had occupied the Express Airways which is gone, and Central Florida Maintenance, which has moved to a different location."

Cooke said the cost of demolishing the old hangar may be costly. "It's packed with asbestos," he said, "and to get that out in addition to tearing down the building, it could cost between $200,000 and $250,000."

Plans at present are considering the possibility of requesting authority to place a new taxiway in the location of the present hangar. "If they approve the site development for that," Cooke commented, "they may be able to provide enough money to tear the present structure down as well as build the taxiway."

"What we need now," he continued, "is to obtain someone to finance the building of a new hangar. The person would be allowed to use the property rent-free, for a period of 15 years, and could either use it or sub-lease it to someone else, but it must be aviation related in order to qualify."

The location for the one or two new hangars has not been determined. Cooke said they might be considered at possibly a half dozen different locations around the airport property.

The Airport Authority is now accepting letters from firms interested in financing the hangar construction project. Deadlines for applications is 5 p.m., Sept. 15.

Her friend Rebekah Jones, believed the difference was size.

"There weren't so many people here," she said. "It wasn't so bad."

Jones and Steffens said the hardest part of coming to high school for the first time was that the chances of being in class with one's friends were slim. Steffens said she would have had one class with one of her friends, but the other girl changed her schedule.

"We'll have to make new friends, I guess," Jones said.

Older students rushed toward their friends, shaking hands, hugging and squealing.

"Hey, the first day of school is like a party," said Jeremy Long, a junior. "We come back and see the people we hung with all of last year and maybe meet some new people. It's like a party."

Katie Smith, a sophomore, said she still had some of the jitters that the freshmen were experiencing.

"It's always scary on the first day of school," she said. "From kindergarten on up you're always nervous when you come to school for the first day 'cause you don't know what you're going to find."

Administrators scurried from place to place with schedules, signs, walkie-talkies and notebooks making sure the students were ready for class when the first bell rang at 7:25 a.m.

Karen Roane, an instructional assistant, smiled bravely as she went about the task of greeting a small class of nervous, but well-mannered, four-year olds at the bus and escorting them to their first day in the early intervention class that is part of the child care assisting program.

"They're probably a little nervous, but they aren't saying anything if they are," she said.

The little ones didn't say much about anything, as a matter of fact. Instead, they huddled together, holding hands and giggling, waiting to take their first steps on the long road of education.

A half an hour later, students at Heathrow Elementary trudged wearily toward the pastel-roofed building where they would attend classes.

Many clung a bit too tight to their parent's hand and peered from behind a skirt or pants.

"He's not too sure this is what he wants to do," said one mother, whose five-year-old's face was planted firmly under her suit jacket. "He said this morning that he wanted to stay home 'just one more day.'"

Margie Keller, on-the-other-hand, walked slowly back to her car with empty eyes.

"Gez, she didn't even give me a kiss," she said of her fifth grade daughter. "She was so excited to be here, she nearly forgot about old mom."

Parents were glad, they said, that this was the last time there would be a "first day of school" as year round classes would kick in for all elementary and middle schools in the district this coming July.

"I like the idea of the year round classes," Keller said. "It helps the kids learn better and it's easier on the parents, I think."

Divorce papers filed by Loni and Burt

By Associated Press

STUART — Loni Anderson wants her estranged husband Burt Reynolds to pay her $75,000 a month and grant her primary custody of their 4-year-old adopted son.

Details of the couple's court battle became public Thursday as lawyers for both celebrities began legal proceedings that will ultimately determine whether the case will be resolved in Florida or California.

Neither star showed up for the first divorce court hearing, but their attorneys filed a stack of documents in which each accused the other of trickery and deceit.

One document submitted was a prenuptial agreement that listed Reynolds' net worth at $15.6 million and Anderson's assets at $1.1 million before their 1988 marriage.

The agreement said both would keep assets they acquired before they married and would divide assets obtained during the marriage. But the contract may no longer be in effect because of a clause allowing Anderson to void it if a child were born or adopted during the marriage.

Anderson's attorney also accused Reynolds of tricking her into returning to their Hobe Sound home from California in June in order to serve divorce papers and keep the case in Florida.

On June 9, Anderson said Reynolds told the actress that "he realized he was not a very good husband or father and that perhaps he needed professional assistance. He told me that I was the love of his life."

Witnesses sought in Japanese student's slaying

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONCORD, Calif. — Police officers spent the weekend riding commuter trains and passing out fliers, in an effort to find someone who might help them solve a Japanese exchange student's murder.

Musakazu Kuriyama was shot twice in the back of the head outside a Bay Area Rapid Transit station Thursday night. He died in a hospital Saturday with his parents by his side.

We're following those as well as some old ones," police Officer Joseph Kreins said Sunday.

He declined to elaborate, but said officers spent the past three days riding BART trains, trying to locate witnesses.

Police believe the shooting was a robbery gone wrong, but are not ruling out the possibility of a hate crime, Kreins said. Kuriyama had his Sony Walkman, $140 in cash and his credit cards when officers found him face down in a grassy area next to the railroad tracks.

His death is the latest in a string of attacks against Japanese visitors that have shocked and angered their countrymen at home.

Two Japanese students were beaten and robbed in San Francisco in early August.

Last May a Baton Rouge, La., man was acquitted of manslaughter after he fatally shot a Japanese teen-ager who had gotten lost looking for a Halloween party. The man said he thought he was protecting his family from the 16-year-old stranger, who had come running up to him.

Japanese media, which had reacted with uncharacteristic anger to the Louisiana slaying, made Kuriyama's death their major story Sunday.

Television news stations led with on-the-scene reports from Concord, and although Kuriyama's death came too late to be reported in Sunday's newspapers the shooting was prominently reported in Saturday papers.

"Once Again, A Japanese

Exchange Student Is Shot," read a banner headline in the national Mainichi newspaper.

Kuriyama's parents issued a statement saying they harbor no bitterness against the United States for their son's death.

Kuriyama, who had been in the United States for a year studying English, loved the country and had asked to stay another year, said Steve Durkee of his host family.

Kuriyama had just started work at a Western clothing store in San Francisco, and he left there about 10 p.m. Thursday, police said.

He normally would have gotten off the train at a different station to return to his host family's house in Alamo. But friends told the Contra Costa Times newspaper that he got off in nearby Concord instead to pick up a friend's bicycle because his had recently been stolen.

The grief-stricken friends said Kuriyama promised to call for a ride when he got to the station but either forgot or never got a chance.

Clinton's Vineyard

Vacation has minuses for President as islanders complain

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Stress relief for vacationing presidents often spells high anxiety for the people around them, and Bill Clinton's visit to Martha's Vineyard epitomizes the problem.

Far from the madding crowds of admirers who stand alongside the road waiting for hours to catch a glimpse of Clinton are some who grouse about the disruptive effects of his visit.

"I've had complaints about the speed of the (presidential) motorcade, but that's not my department," said Officer T.D. Carroll of the West Tisbury Police Department, noting Massachusetts State Police responsibility for that.

But the problem isn't confined to unavoidable traffic snarls.

It transcends a trooper's complaint about having to sleep with 30 colleagues on cots shoehorned into a garage.

It goes beyond Edgartown Police Chief George Searle's worry about budget-busting overtime costs.

It's about more than the lost parking fees suffered by the East Tisbury Fire Department when the White House insisted that a 75-space parking lot adjoining a local fair be kept vacant Friday in case of a presidential visit, which didn't occur.

The larger problem centers on the uneasy mix of a visiting presidential party, along with scores of White House reporters, on a hospitable 100-square-mile island crammed with people at the height of the summer tourist season.

It involves high-pitched speculation about a presidential visit to a community fair. Will he come? Or won't he? That atmosphere of excitement and pent-up emotion pervaded the West Tisbury fairgrounds as Clinton and daughter Chelsea arrived as the sun began to fade Saturday.

Little more than the click of camera shutters could be heard as father and daughter, he with his arm around her, paused in an exhibition hall to look at award-winning art and produce.

But when the president emerged to wade through a crowd that numbered in the hundreds, things became chaotic.

The 13-year-old Chelsea, looking scared, was spirited from the grounds by Secret Service agents. Clinton, who enjoys meeting and glad-handing people, was surrounded by admirers. People swarmed toward him, some dragging their kids in tow, others hoisting toddlers on their shoulders for a glimpse of the president.

Secret Service agents struggled to keep control of the situation, and one holed "Get off from there!" to a man standing on a roof. As the agent bolted down a wooden ramp from an exhibit hall, the ramp gave way, partially collapsing.

Agents maneuvered the president along a rope line and toward an exit, and Clinton's visit to the fair was history.

"All is forgotten," gasped Liz Branch, one of the fair organizers. "Everything turned out fine in the end."

For the hundreds of fairgoers, this had been their invitation to hob-nob with the president. This was, seemingly, the event for all the people who wouldn't be invited to the high-toned dinner parties given for Clinton.

Though aides were reluctant to speculate on why Clinton finally decided to go, on the fair's last day, he seemed to have been responding to a need to meet ordinary people.

"What's the first question every person on Martha's Vineyard is going to be asked by a friend?" asked one White House aide. "Did you get to see the president?"

Earlier in the day, Branch and Eleanor Newbert, the fair's manager, had talked of the mixed blessings of a presidential visit to a laid-back island already accustomed to the presence of celebrities.

"I think the attendance (at the fair) was increased because people hoped to catch a glimpse of him. They were quietly and anxiously waiting," Newbert said. "I've seen a lot more cameras than usual."

"We all felt we should have known in advance whether he was coming," she said. "We're not used to dealing with the Secret Service."

Asked Sunday whether he planned to return to the island next year, Clinton replied: "I don't know. Let me enjoy this one first."

Suspect sought in killing of abortion clinic doctor

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE — An abortion clinic doctor was shot to death over the weekend, but police did not know the gunman's motive.

Dr. George Wayne Patterson was shot in the neck and killed Saturday evening when he confronted a man breaking into his 1993 Cadillac. The car was parked in the city's nightclub district — site of several recent robberies, police said.

A witness told the Mobile Register a gunman fired two shots, then opened the door of Patterson's car and took something from inside.

"We're not sure it was a robbery or what it was at this time," Allan Carpenter, a police investigator, said Sunday.

He said the slain doctor had some cash on him when police arrived.

Patterson, 44, had worked at Family Planning of Fort Walton Beach, Fla., and at the Bay City Women's Clinic in Mobile.

The Pensacola (Fla.) News Journal reported that Patterson also owned the Women's Medical Services Clinic in Pensacola, where Dr. David Gunn was killed last March. Anti-abortion activist Michael F. Griffin faces trial Sept. 20 for that shooting.

On Thursday, a doctor who performs abortions was wounded in both arms in Wichita, Kan. Anti-abortion activist Rachelle Renae Shannon of Grants Pass, Ore., was charged with attempted murder.

The Mobile clinic was damaged by arson in 1990 and that case remains unsolved, according to agent Ken Murphy of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which investigated the fire.

Interior secretary helps end oil-tanker blockage

By IAN MADER
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Shipping lanes through the Valdez Narrows were clear today after Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt persuaded fishermen angry about oil-spill recovery efforts to end a weekend blockade.

About 160 fishing boats that kept oil tankers from the trans-Alaska pipeline terminal began dispersing Sunday afternoon.

Babbitt, on a two-week tour of Alaska, met with protesters earlier in the day. He promised he would urge Exxon Corp. to meet with them on their pending civil lawsuits over the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill, the worst in U.S. history.

He also promised to urge federal and state trustees who oversee the $900 million criminal spill settlement fund from Exxon to buy more land to protect salmon-spawning streams in Prince William Sound, and to aid local hatcheries.

Fishermen organized the blockade of the narrows to call attention to weak returns of pink salmon to Prince William Sound, which they blame on the effects of the 11 million gallons of oil spilled into prime fishing waters.

The fishermen also wanted to call attention to their demands that civil lawsuits against Exxon be resolved more quickly and to protest what they said was a lack of support from government officials.

A spokesman for the protesters, Jim Gray, said they were satisfied with Babbitt's promises.

"It's great to have an administration make a commitment like this," said Rick Steiner, a Cordova-based fisherman and college teacher who joined the protest.

NASA tries to regain radio link with Mars Observer

By LEE SIGUEL
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — NASA engineers say the "missing" Mars Observer spacecraft probably was hit by a temporary computer glitch and is not lost in space forever.

They repeatedly radioed commands Sunday in an attempt to get a response from the spacecraft, a high-tech robot designed to give scientists their most detailed global look at Mars.

Even without a reply, Mars Observer has automatic computer programming to make it fire its thrusters and start orbiting the Red Planet on Tuesday. It then would try to contact Earth on Wednesday, said Glenn Cunningham, manager of the $980 million project run by Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"I don't think we're going to lose this mission," he said. "I think we've had one of the typical little hiccups that affect all our missions because these are very complex pieces of hardware with many computer systems."

Engineers lost touch with Mars Observer about 6 p.m. PDT Saturday. Its radio transmitter had been turned off as a precaution when the thruster fuel tanks were pressurized so the spacecraft would be ready to enter orbit around Mars on Tuesday.

If the tanks ruptured or failed to pressurize, the spacecraft would be unable to fire its thrusters and would shoot uselessly past Mars. Cunningham called that an extremely unlikely "worst-case scenario."

Cunningham said he thought the spacecraft's antennas had pointed the wrong way or the transmitter failed to restart.

Controllers have lost touch briefly with the spacecraft several times since its launch Sept. 25. Engineers believed they had fixed the cause of those problems.

The latest malfunction happened as Mars Observer was less than 400,000 miles from the planet after an 11-month, 450-million-mile journey.

"Everybody says, 'Gee, why do these things almost always happen in the home stretch?'" Cunningham said. "This has been a very smooth mission, and to have a hiccup like this within the final 100 yards of the wire is disconcerting."

Mars Observer was to be the first U.S. spacecraft to reach Mars since two Viking orbiters and their landing craft arrived in 1976. It was expected to spend the next few months maneuvering into a near-polar, circular orbit 234 miles high, then spend at least 687 Earth days — one Martian year — photographing and studying the planet's landscape, weather and seasonal climate change.

After Mars Observer was lifted into Earth orbit last year, a new Transfer Orbit Stage rocket failed to signal Earth as it hurtled the spacecraft toward Mars.

Engineers waited an anxiety-wracked hour before hearing Mars Observer was safe.

Malfunctions have plagued the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

●The Magellan spacecraft lost touch with Earth repeatedly after it started orbiting Venus in August 1990, but engineers solved the problem and Magellan successfully mapped the Venusian landscape.

●Shuttle astronauts will fly to the Hubble Space Telescope in several months to fix its fuzzy long-distance vision, its failed gyroscopes and jittery solar panels.

●NASA is using imaginative technological tricks to salvage 70 percent of the Galileo spacecraft's 1995-97 exploration of Jupiter, even though that craft is handicapped by a jammed main antenna.

●An Air Force Titan IV reportedly carrying one or more spy satellites blew up this month after launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base.

Mars Observer is the ninth U.S. spacecraft launched toward Mars. The twin Vikings and four of six Mariners reached the planet.

Before its breakup, the Soviet Union sent at least 15 and possibly 17 spacecraft toward Mars. Half of those missions failed completely. Contact was lost with the most recent spacecraft sent to Mars, twin Soviet Phobos probes launched in 1988.

Judging IQ by appearance

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

TORONTO — Just how intelligent do you look?

You get smart points if you're attractive, wear a friendly, self-assured expression beneath stylish hair and sport a well-proportioned body, a new study suggests.

You get demerits if you look unrefined, dress unfashionably or informally and have a round face or a stout body.

None of that, however, reveals much about how intelligent a person really is, at least as measured by standard tests, the study found.

But even a brief listen to the way you talk — apart from what you say — may give strangers a better indicator of brainpower, reports psychology professor of Peter Borkenau of the University of Bielefeld in Germany.

Borkenau described his research Sunday at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association. Although the work was done in Germany, he said he believed the results would be similar in the United States.

Researchers have largely overlooked the question of how people perceive intelligence in others, said Delroy Paulhus of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver. But now that psychologists are moving away from using IQ as the sole indicator of intelligence, a closer look at what people consider signs of intelligence may give some clues for other measures, he said.

In Borkenau's study, 18 college students were asked to look at videotapes of 100 male and female strangers who, one by one, walked into a room, sat down, read a weather forecast aloud, then got up and left.

After each 90-second scene, the students were asked either to judge how intelligent each stranger was or rate the person on 48 characteristics that might be used to judge intelligence.

The 12 students who judged intelligence were split equally between those who heard the stranger as well as seeing him and those who could not hear the sound. That let Borkenau separate appearance cues from sound cues, and compare them to results of a standard intelligence test administered separately to the strangers.

Students who had watched the silent tape did not do significantly better than random guessing in judging intelligence. Analysis showed that 16 of the 18 physical cues they apparently relied on were not related to actual intelligence, with the exceptions being a self-assured expression and an avoidance of stiff walking.

Students who could hear the strangers, however, assessed intelligence moderately well "and considerably better than chance," Borkenau said in an interview.

They did better at judging verbal intelligence, which deals with language, than nonverbal abilities.

Helpful cues included the stranger's apparent attempt to read the forecast well, the ease with which the stranger was understood and the lack of an unpleasant voice or halting or hectic speech.

In a separate presentation, psychologist Robert Hogan of the University of Tulsa in Oklahoma said he believes intelligence "exists in the eye of the beholder," and that it is perceived differently in different kinds of occupations.

His work found that diesel mechanics consider their colleagues to be intelligent if they can solve technical problems by themselves and serve as a consultant to others on technical problems.

On the other hand, he said, in jobs that involve dealing in abstract concepts, like being a psychologist, "you don't have to do anything, you just have to talk smart."

LOCALLY

Sanford Fall softball

SANFORD — A few openings are still available for the Sanford Recreation Department Fall Slowpitch Softball Leagues that will begin play the week of September 5th.

The most spots still available are for the Monday men's league, where no teams are entered, and the Tuesday women's league. Unlike past years Monday night is not being held for a Super C league. The Tuesday men's league is closed and the Wednesday and Thursday league's are very close to being filled.

The registration fee is $250 per team for Amateur Softball Association registered teams and $265 per team for non-ASA registered clubs. All non-Sanford-resident players will have to pay the $10 individual non-resident fee or $15 family non-resident fee before participating.

Any coach wishing to enter his or her team for the fall can bring the entry fee to the Downtown Recreation Center, lower level of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, or, for more information, call 330-5697.

Xpress outscored Cubs

ORLANDO — Nashville's Scott Stahovlak hit a two-run home run and a three-run shot to lead the Xpress to a 10-9 win over the Orlando Cubs in Southern League action Sunday.

AROUND THE STATE

Munoz forced to retire

TAMPA — Anthony Munoz, forced out of the NFL by nagging injuries last season, retired again Sunday when tests revealed he has a torn rotator cuff in his right shoulder.

Munoz, regarded as perhaps the finest offensive lineman in league history, was injured Saturday night when he tried to make a tackle after a fumble during the first quarter of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' 32-12 exhibition victory over the Buffalo Bills.

X-rays taken at the Florida Citrus Bowl in Orlando were negative, but additional tests performed Sunday confirmed a career-ending tear that will require surgery.

The shoulder Munoz injured was not the same one that forced him into retirement last year. On the play, the 6-foot-6, 285-pound offensive tackle landed hard on his right shoulder and then was brushed by another player.

Jax NFL bid alive

JACKSONVILLE — Eleven hours of closed-door talks between City Hall and Touchdown Jacksonville! Ltd. resulted in an agreement on a $121 million Gator Bowl renovation and a resumption of efforts to seek a National Football League franchise.

A month ago, both ideas had been declared dead. But now, Mayor Ed Austin is calling upon residents and business people alike to support the city's renewed pursuit of a NFL team.

The Florida Times-Union reported Sunday that the major change in the stadium lease-renovation agreement will be TD Jax taking responsibility for the Gator Bowl renovations, but using mostly city money.

Instead of the city renovating the Gator Bowl for about $112 million, the city would give the franchise group $121 million toward the planned construction. TD Jax would become the project manager and would be responsible for renovations, including cost overruns.

Suns edge Braves

JACKSONVILLE — Brian Cornelius' two-out, bases loaded single drove in Darren Bragg in the bottom of the 10th for the winning run as the Jacksonville Suns beat the Greenville Braves 2-1 in a Southern League game Sunday.

AROUND THE NATION

Florida blows one

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco Giants have won 83 games this season — by as many as 15 runs and as few as one.

It is doubtful that any of the previous 82 victories got the Giants as excited as Sunday's 7-6 triumph over the Florida Marlins.

Robby Thompson hit a two-out, two-run homer off relief ace Bryan Harvey to complete a comeback from a 6-2, eighth-inning deficit.

The Giants' lead in the NL West remained at 7½ games after Atlanta defeated Chicago 4-3. The Braves and Giants start a three-game series tonight at Candlestick Park.

The Giants were down to their last out when Lake Howell graduate Dave Martinez drew a walk and stole second off Harvey (1-4), who blew his fourth save in 41 opportunities.

Harvey ran the count to 1-2 on with three forkballs. But a fourth forkball was sent 400 feet into the left-field bleachers by Thompson.

Double duty

Corso to coach Tribe boys, girls

By TONY DeSORMIER
 Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — Be careful what you ask for, because you just may get it.

Two years ago, Seminole High School girls' volleyball coach Beth Corso expressed an interest in coaching the boys' volleyball club team.

This past Thursday, Corso got her wish. For the 1993-94 school year, she will be the head coach of the boys volleyball team. She'll also be the head coach of the girls volleyball team.

It's not as crazy as it sounds.

"Two years ago, I said that I'd be interested in switching over to the boys' program, but it didn't happen," said Corso. "Last year, we had a lot of people switching around. Before school was out, I went in and made a proposal, saying that for one year, I would head up both programs."

According to Corso, what will make the task a little less overwhelming will be the support of her assistant coaches, Cindy Bengé-Evans (boys) and Robin Riggins (girls).

"I assured Mrs. Schapker (Seminole's principal) that I was slightly crazy, but that with these two strong people supporting me, it was possible," Corso said.

Both Bengé-Evans and Riggins are graduates of Seminole High School, where they played for Corso.

Bengé-Evans was one of Seminole's top volleyball and soccer players in the mid 1980s, then went on to play volleyball at Stetson. Riggins, who played basketball and softball for Corso in early 1980s, had a scholarship to play softball and volleyball at Rollins, but had to leave because of eye injury.

Bengé-Evans now teaches at Seminole while Riggins teaches at Greenwood Lakes Middle School.

Once Corso was given the approval to take over both teams, her first task was trying to reorganize the two teams' schedules.

"It took me 36 hours to redo the boys' and girls' schedules," Corso said. "Everyone I talked to in Seminole, Orange, and Volusia counties was so gracious. Teams flip-flopped their schedules around for us, they changed the starting times of their home matches for us. Not one person was unreasonable."

"What's happened is that the boys have 19 matches, the girls have 18, and each team will play in a tournament. There are still eight nights where both teams are playing, but on four of those nights, they're playing at the same site. For the other four, schools pushed back game times to give me travel time."

Corso also will be assisted by coaches of other sports at Seminole High School, who have volunteered to ride the bus with one team while Corso is coaching the other.

Then there's Kaycee, Corso's 3-year-old daughter.

"A lot of parents have offered to help babysit Kaycee," said Corso. "That way, I can bring her to the matches and have a chance to see her once in a while."

"We're going to be very busy from Labor Day until November 1. It's going to be hard, but the kids are all excited."

One immediate benefit of the move will be in the way practices are conducted.

"Basically, we'll run two separate practices," Corso said. "We have three courts available, so three of us will all be working with the teams. The teams will flip-flop, one team coming in late one day and the other coming in late another day. And there will be a little bit of an overlap."

"What I need to do is mix in the technique that the girls have developed to help out the boys. Most of the boys don't know how to play the game. In return, what the guys give to the girls is the challenge of their physical skills, their jumping, quickness, and speed."

Corso has first-hand experience of the benefits to be gained by girls training with the boys.

□ See Volleyball, Page 2B

As if coaching one team weren't enough of a task, Beth Corso will serve as head coach of both Seminole High School's girls and boys varsity volleyball teams this fall.

DOUBLE TAKES

Where did it all go?

A month ago, Hopkins Meat Packing was undefeated and in first place of the Sanford women's softball league. On Tuesday, Vicky Miller and her Hopkins teammates lost to Myers Tree Service, 10-1, in the playoff game Myers forced by beating Hopkins in the last game of the season.

Courier regains No. 1 with Hardcourt victory

By HANK LOWENKRON
 AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Former Sanford resident Jim Courier, once again the top-ranked player in men's tennis, and former No. 1 Boris Becker are taking different routes to the upcoming U.S. Open.

Courier heads to New York to seek the only Grand Slam championship that has eluded him, fresh from his first victory ever over the Becker. Courier made the most of his powerful forehand, court quickness and strong serve to defeat Becker 7-5, 6-3 Sunday for the U.S. Hardcourts title.

Becker also is going to New York. But, Courier will only practice while Becker competes in the Hamlet Cup tournament on Long Island.

Becker, who won the Open in 1989, wasn't sure if he belongs in a tournament or on the practice court this week.

"The idea was that in case I am going to lose early here, I'd have a couple of more matches (before the Open)," said Becker, who had not lost to Courier in six previous meetings. "Since I am in the final here and since I am in good form, I don't need that, to have more matches. But, still I am in the draw and I will see what I can do."

Courier, who officially reclaims the No. 1 ranking in the world today after being No. 2 behind Pete Sampras for 18 weeks, dominated his position at the Indianapolis Tennis Center. In five matches, he never lost a set and dropped only two of his 46 service games.

"It's the best I have felt going in. Who knows what that means?" he said of the Open, where he finished second in 1991 and reached the semis last year. "I felt pretty poor the last two years. ... We will just have to see what happens. But, I feel really good going in."

Courier will practice with coaches Jose Higueras and Brad Stine this week, owning a 51-9 match record for 1993 with five tournament triumphs. The $152,000 he received here raised his earnings for the year to $1,680,338 and boosted his total earnings to a tour-record $6,516,795.

"I am glad that my game is coming together now and that I am fresh going into New York. ... I am going to give myself the best chance to play well there," he said. "My coaches will get out the whip and see how I feel."

Courier's last five losses to Becker, who had a 13-4 set advantage over him until Sunday, had been indoors.

"I think I have good chances against him on any surface and outdoors particularly, a better □ See Courier, Page 2B

Questions abound as gender equity era begins

OK, now what?

Earlier this summer, Governor Lawton Chiles signed into law a gender equity bill, a stroke of the pen that could have extraordinary ramifications.

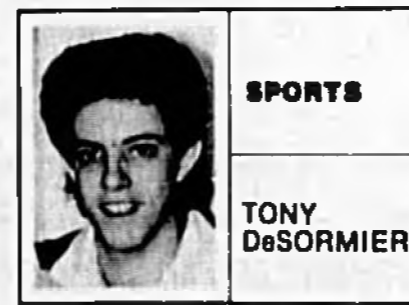

Basically, the legislation is an attempt to put legal teeth into the effort to insure equal opportunities, athletic and academic, for female students. Its most immediate impact will be the forced implementation of fastpitch softball at the high school and junior college levels.

And change may come quicker, much quicker, than anticipated.

In a recent press release discussing activities at recent a Board of Directors meeting, the Florida High School Activities Association gave an indication of just how fast the change may come.

Syd McKenzie, General Counsel for the Florida Department of Education, addressed the FHSAA's Board of Directors and informed them that "high schools which continue to play slow-pitch softball this spring will be in violation" of the law passed this summer.

"The legislature has passed the law and you as school districts of the state are required to abide by the law in the best manner you can," McKenzie is quoted as saying in the press release. "The legislature has mandated that it be done, so it will get done. This portion of the law and the mandate to comply is effective today."

The press release goes on to say that schools that don't comply with the legislation "could be declared ineligible for competitive state grants or lose other general revenue funds."

has a softball coach who conducts fastpitch camps in the summer, nothing really changes.

But in Seminole County, where the high schools play slowpitch, where all the girls' recreation leagues are slowpitch, and the community college's softball coach has said that she does not want to coach the fastpitch game, the law will change drastically the face of female interscholastic athletics.

While no-one has come out and said so, the law probably is a serious setback for those working to have boys' volleyball become a varsity sport sanctioned by the FHSAA. The sport is played in Seminole County and elsewhere around the state on a club level.

According to Section 15-5-1 of the 1993 FHSAA By-Laws, "In order for a sport to be considered for addition to the current state championship program, 30 percent of the member senior high schools must be engaged in the sport and 20 percent must maintain the sport for it to remain in the championship program."

At this time last year, I would have said that reaching the 30 percent participation level wouldn't be a problem. But now, with a law mandating gender equity and promising fiscal repercussions, schools will be stuck between the proverbial rock and a hard place when trying to add sports.

If I'm reading the law correctly (and there's certainly a better than even chance that I'm not), if a school adds a sport for boys, then it will have to offer another sport for girls in order to maintain an "equitable distribution of resources."

This may seem like a knotty problem that the state legislature has created for the state's high schools and community colleges, but in reality, the law is forcing schools to take a harder look at their programs. Are they really providing equal opportunities for all their students?

About the only thing that can be said for sure is that the immediate future promises to be difficult for most and painful for some. But then again, achieving anything worthwhile — and equality of opportunity, regardless of gender, is certainly that — is never easy.

Balancing soil pH for a healthy lawn

Soil pH can be a confusing concept for most home gardeners. Though pH is sometimes over emphasized it is an important part of plant nutrition.

What is soil pH? Soil pH is the measure of how acid or alkaline a soil happens to be. Though derived by a complicated technical formula, a simple numerical scale is used to express pH. The scale goes from 0.0 to 14.0, with 0.0 being most acid and 14.0 being most alkaline. The halfway value on the scale, 7.0, is neutral, i.e., neither acid or alkaline. Soil acidity increases as pH values decrease from 7.0 to 0.0 and soil alkalinity increases as pH values increase from 7.0 to 14.0. Sounds confusing? An example would be that a pH of 4.5 is more acid than a pH of 5.5.

Soil pH is important because it influences several soil factors that affect plant growth: such as (1) soil bacteria, (2) nutrient leaching, (3) toxic elements, (4) nutrient availability, and (5) soil structure. The activity of bacteria that change and release nitrogen from organic matter and certain fertilizer materials are particularly affected by soil pH. These organisms operate best in the optimum pH range of 5.5 to 7.0. Plant nutrients leach or wash out of the soil much more readily at pH values below 5.0 than from soils with values between 5.0 and 7.5. In certain soils, when the pH drops below 5.0, aluminum may become toxic to plant growth. Soil pH also affects the availability of plant nutrients. Plant nutrients are generally most available to plants in the pH range 5.5 to 7.0.

A pH test will determine whether a soil is within range for good plant growth or whether it will need adjusting. For most plants, the optimum pH range is from 5.5 to 7.0, some plants will grow in more acid soil and some at a more alkaline level.

GARDENING

Soil pH is not an indication of soil fertility, but as previously discussed it does affect the availability of nutrients. A soil may contain adequate nutrients yet growth may be limited. Likewise, builder's sand, which is virtually devoid of nutrients, may have an optimum pH for plant growth.

Normally, lime or dolomite is used to increase pH, or "sweeten" the soil. Lime contains mainly calcium carbonate and dolomite contains both calcium carbonate and magnesium carbonate. Ground limestone and dolomite are less likely to "burn" plant roots than hydrated lime and is therefore recommended for home use. The amount of these materials necessary to change the pH will depend on the soil. The greater the amount of organic matter or clay, the more lime required to change the pH.

If a soil is too alkaline, determine if it is due to natural soil conditions or additions of lime. It is virtually impossible to permanently change the pH of naturally alkaline soils by the use of sulfur or similar acid-forming materials. If a high pH is due to applied lime or other alkaline additives, sulfur or similar acid-forming materials can be applied.

To decrease soil pH use super line dusting or wettable sulfur. It takes approximately 1/2 the amount of sulfur to decrease pH one unit as it does for lime to raise soil pH. Repeat applications should not be made more often than once every eight weeks. Sulfur mixed with water forms a strong acid that can burn the roots of plants, so use with caution.

Most plants tolerate a wide pH range. The following is a list of plants with special requirements.

Prefer soil pH below 5.5: Azalea, Bahia-grass, Blueberry, Holly, American Hydrangea, blue Ixora, Partridgeberry.

Prefer soil pH above 6.0: Ash, Butterfly-bush, Elm, Hydrangea, pink Red cedar, Sycamore, St. Augustine

Before planting in a new site, have the soil tested to determine if plant materials have been selected that best suit the conditions of the site. Proper plant selection can help avoid problems in the long run. If you suspect that pH is causing problems in your landscape, bring a sample to the Cooperative Extension Services office at 250 W. County Home Road in Sanford or call 323-2500 ext. 5550 for more information. Soil samples should be taken at a depth of 3-4 inches and include soil from several locations in the area to be tested. Soil testing is done on Mondays and Thursdays of each week. The cost is $1.50 per sample.

Girl learns valuable lesson when she's taken for a ride

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl with a story to tell.

Last night about 9 p.m., I was walking home alone from the public library. (I live eight blocks from there.) The wind was blowing hard, and it was very cold. Besides, I had a load of books under my arm.

A car pulled up alongside the curb, and a nice-looking man opened the door and asked, "Want a ride?" He looked OK and was about my father's age, and my feet were about to drop off with freezing, so I said yes and hopped in.

He asked me where I was going and I told him. He drove me there, but before he let me out, he said, "Young lady, I want you to promise me that you will never again accept a ride with a stranger, no matter how 'nice' he appears to be. I happen to be a decent man, but you took an awful chance. You can't tell anything about a man by the way he looks."

"Two years ago, I had a niece about your age who accepted a ride with a strange man, and three days later, they found her lifeless body in a ditch four miles from your home. She'd been raped and strangled."

Abby, I promised that man I would never again get into a car with a stranger. And I never will.

DEAR LUCKY: Thanks for sharing your experience. It contains valuable advice.

DEAR ABBY: While vacationing recently, my husband and I stayed at a lovely motor inn. When we left, I took some ashtrays and glasses. These things had the name of the inn on them, and I thought they'd make nice souvenirs.

I was under the impression that guests are expected to take such things as souvenirs, and the cost of the items is built into the price of the room. My husband says I am wrong.

Why then would the inn have its name on everything if not to advertise? Are guests expected to take souvenirs?

DEAR THIEF: I would advise against taking anything. Before checking out, ask the manager for a souvenir, and he'll either sell or give you one.

DEAR ABBY: First, let me explain that I have four children (two still in diapers), a nine-room house to take care of, and no one to help me. When my husband comes home from work, he always asks, "What did you do all day?"

Abby, I could sock him! How should I answer him?

DEAR BOILING: Don't answer him. But tomorrow, do absolutely nothing! And when he comes home and finds the beds unmade, breakfast and lunch dishes in the sink, the laundry basket piled high with unlabeled clothes, and not a trace of supper started, if he asks what you did all day, say, "You're always asking me that. Well, today, I didn't do it!"

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible to marry a dead person using a proxy?

ADVICE

In our area, a teen-age boy drowned a few weeks ago, and he had planned to marry soon. They had a license already.

I understand the girl was pregnant and she wanted a name for her child, so they were married at the funeral parlor. Is that possible? Can you find out for me?

CURIOS IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR CURIOS: You don't need a Philadelphia lawyer to hunt up a precedent for this. The answer is no, it's not possible.

DEAR ABBY: As a child advocate for a battered women's and children's shelter, I would like to commend you for sticking to your response to the man who slapped his 14-year-old son across the face for calling him a filthy name. I have read the many letters you received and justified the slap. Thanks for not backing down! I would also like to add something that is posted in our shelter concerning this subject:

"When Parents Hit a Child, They are Teaching the Following:

- "1. Might makes right.
- "2. People who love you hurt you, therefore love hurts.
- "3. Power and control get you what you want in life.
- "4. Violence is an appropriate problem-solving technique.
- "5. Resentment, hatred, denial

Ins and outs of kidney blood tests

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is meant by kidney blood tests and why are they performed?

DEAR READER: The kidneys filter the blood and remove waste products, which they discharge into the urine. Therefore, one way to assess renal function is to measure some of the waste products in the blood: If they are present in normal concentrations, the kidneys are doing their job. If the levels are high, however, one can conclude that the kidneys are working inefficiently.

Two such wastes are blood urea nitrogen (BUN) and creatinine, both by-products of protein metabolism. Thus, the BUN and creatinine are often measured to test renal efficiency. In most instances, doctors order these tests to make sure that the kidneys are functioning optimally. This is an important consideration because many medicines are "cleared" by the kidneys and, if these organs are not "up to snuff," toxic amounts can build up in the body, causing severe reactions.

For example, the dose of digoxin, a heart stimulant, depends on renal efficiency. If the kidneys are not working properly, the tissue levels of digoxin rise. This serious complication leads to nausea, vomiting and heart block, eventually causing death.

Consequently, in patients with inefficient kidneys (as judged by elevated BUN and creatinine concentrations), the dose of digoxin must be substantially reduced, to 50 percent of normal, or even much less.

Doctors also check kidney function when patients are prescribed medications that can cause renal damage. For instance, I have several patients who are taking diuretics for hypertension. Because these drugs often raise the BUN (causing an unacceptable rise in waste products), I periodically obtain blood tests to ensure that the medicines are not causing harm.

Finally, doctors routinely perform kidney blood tests in patients facing surgery. The stress of an operation is significant enough without the added burden of unsuspected kidney malfunction, which adds substantial risk to surgery because of metabolic complications.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
W. Somerset Maugham wrote: "I have not been afraid of excess: Excess on occasion is exhilarating. It prevents moderation from acquiring the deadening effect of a habit."

In bridge, though, if you bid to excess, you must hope that the opposing cards lie in a kindly fashion. Otherwise your partner will find the excess of minus scores hard to take, preferring the enlivening effect of a plus score.

Today's deal is a good example. How would you try to make seven hearts? Yes, sorry, seven hearts. West leads the diamond four: queen, king, ace.

Obviously North's bid of seven hearts was dubious. He knew that the maximum combined count was 34: not enough for seven with two balanced hands. Still, if North had bid only six, there would have been no story.

For South to collect 13 tricks, the spade finesse must be working. Then by means of a dummy reversal these 13 tricks might be available: the A-Q of spades, two spade ruffs in hand, four hearts, the diamond ace and four clubs.

After winning trick one with the diamond ace, draw two rounds of trumps using honors in hand.

Lead a spade to dummy's queen, cash the spade ace and ruff a spade in hand. Play a club to dummy's 10, ruff the last spade in hand and return to dummy with a club to the ace. Draw East's two remaining trumps, discarding your diamond losers, and run the clubs.

The only snag with this result is that North will continue to overbid. Next time, you might not be so lucky.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 24, 1993

Some type of important change where your career is concerned is indicated for the year ahead. The alterations you'll make should prove extremely beneficial.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This might not be the right day to tackle an assignment about which you know little or nothing. Even your logical reasoning powers may not be of much help. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it.

The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) An acquaintance of yours who is a bit of a trouble maker might take something completely out of context that was expressed by an old pal of yours. Don't accept what he/she repeats as factual.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something or someone might stand in your way today and bar your path to an eagerly sought objective. Blowing up might make you feel better, but it won't resolve the matter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be extremely careful as to what you affix your signature today or what you put in writing. You could be held accountable in both cases.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Outside help upon which you are depending might not be forth coming today. If you plan for this contingency, you could ride out the storm.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your interests might have to take a back seat to the interests of your companions today. It looks like everyone might have a better reason for doing things their way than you do.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It might be wise to avoid working with unfamiliar tools or materials today, because there's a chance you could gum up the works.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Innate impulses that urge you to take a chance could be rather strong today. Unfortunately, your judgment might not be that good, nor will the judgment of counselors you'll seek to advise you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Where a critical goal is concerned today, don't bring a late comer into the act. It could lead to your downfall, because he/she won't have a proper grasp of the predicament.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There are certain persons with whom you'll be dealing today about whom you should be a bit skeptical of what they have to say. However, do not think everyone is trying to deceive you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Basically, you are a reasonably good manager of your resources, but today this valuable characteristic might desert you and you could do some deficit spending.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't take things out on your family today if you feel overpowered or outmaneuvered when dealing with persons in the real world. They're on your side and want to help.
