Shooting victim dies

MIDWAY — A 25-year-old Midway man has died from a gunshot wound to his head, inflicted Saturday as he tried to enter the house of a Midway woman, Seminole County Sheriff's Lt. Al Sanchez reported Monday.

Dead is Charles Taylor, of Crawford Street. The woman who allegedly fired the fatal shot has not been arrested. Sanchez said the investigation continues and it may be found that the woman believed she was defending her home on Center Street, when the shot was fired at about 4 a.m. Saturday.

"We think he was trying to break in," Sanchez said. He asked that the woman's name not be published, pending the outcome of the investigation.

Taylor was hospitalized at Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford, where Sanchez said he was pronounced dead at about 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

First space tomatoes reported

ELMHURST, Ill. — All that talk about cosmic rays doesn't frighten Elmhurst College professor and space tomato cultivator Frank Mittermeyer.

Mittermeyer said Monday the tomato seeds he received from NASA — seeds that spent six years in space on the Long Duration Exposure Facility satellite — are bearing fruit.

And when he's done studying the plants, he plans to make a salad. Mittermeyer discounted early speculation the seeds could produce poison fruit.

At the Adler Planetarium in Chicago, Associate Astronomer April Whitt said her space seeds have just begun to sprout.

"Ours are just babies," Whitt said. "They're growing in artificial conditions."

Hallelujah! Back taxes paid, Good Samaritan Home saved

By NICK PFEIFER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Just two short months ago, the Good Samaritan Home at 1704 West 9th Street, was so short of money it couldn't pay its taxes and was facing the prospect of closing. This Thursday night, $92,000 in back taxes will be paid, and it now appears as though the home will continue to be a haven for the three dozen people who live there.

Alex Serraes, Vice President of the Good Samaritan Home's Board of Directors addressed the Sanford City Commission Monday night: "Two months ago, there was nothing but gloom and no hope. But now, because of tighter controls, a reduced coal per resident, a successful search for additional funding, help from the Edyth Bush Foundation, the United Way and IRS cooperation, we will meet with the IRS people this Thursday and pay the taxes."

"The additional funding started with a $50,000 matching grant from Edyth Bush," said Serraes. "then the United Way of Central Florida came through with $30,000, $24,000 of which could be used to pay off the taxes. Lottery winner Shella Ryan also gave us a generous donation, and the rest came from people from all over Sanford and Central Florida. It's absolutely amazing that we did all of this within just a ten day period," he added.

Store operator beaten, shoots alleged suspect

By SUSAN LODEN

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The owner of the Disco Food Store, the rural Altamonte Springs site of open crack cocaine sales in the parking lot, said today he doesn't plan to return to his business because of a confrontation there last night with about five youths.

Franklin K. Yi, 47, of Winter Park, shot one of the youths in the right thigh, when he opened fire on the gang outside his store at about 10 p.m. Monday.

Yi said windows of his car and store were broken by the rock throwing gang before he armed himself and went outside. Yi was hit with rocks and one youth hit him in the face with a beer bottle.

Four of Yi's teeth were broken by the bottle. "I'm in real bad condition. I don't know how many teeth I'm going to lose," he said. One of the suspects had grabbed Yi from behind and was holding him when

Violent couples have more active sex lives

United Press International

GAINESVILLE — Couples in violent relationships have sex more often than other couples, according to a study that also said spouses with common interests and several children are the most sexually active.

Next to youth, shared interests were the greatest indicator of sexual frequency in a marriage, according to a University of Florida study released Monday.

Whether it's something as simple as taking walks together or enjoying the same hobbies, sharing activities outside the bedroom is a big predictor of how often married couples have sex," said Denise Donnelly, a sociologist who analyzed data from a nationwide survey of 5,292 married couples.

Unlike other studies, Donnelly's research found that partners in violent marriages had sexual relations more often than other couples. "People in these marriages may have intercourse more because of a honeymoon period that follows each outbreak of violence," she said. "These couples may not only fight with a passion but make up with a passion as well."

Another explanation might be that people who are physically expressive in showing their anger might be physically expressive in other areas of their lives, including their sexual relationships, she said.

Income, education, race and place of residence had no bearing on how often a couple had sex, Donnelly found.

But contrary to other studies, she found that couples with more children led the most active love lives.

"Other researchers have thought that the more children present, the fewer the uninterrupted opportunities for intercourse," she said. "In reality, the more one has intercourse, the greater the odds of conceiving a child, and the more children one ultimately has."

Not surprisingly, husbands and wives with school-aged children said they had sex more often than did those with younger children, Donnelly said.

"That is because preschoolers need more care and tend to intrude more," she said. "Your 13-year-old probably wouldn't pop his head in the bedroom door and say, 'What are you guys doing?,' but your

Martinez favors public school debt financing

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Despite the failure of the $520 million Seminole County school bond question in February, Gov. Bob Martinez said Monday voter-approved debt is still the best way to build schools in Florida.

"The state historically has not funded K through 12 construction," Martinez said during a campaign swing through here yesterday. "If the schools are overcrowded, then school officials will have a good case for winning public support."

Many observers believe voters turned down the bond proposal Feb. 27 by a 70-30 margin because $520 million represented a "blank check" for the school construction program. School officials said the state needs to increase appropriations for school construction.

Martinez, seeking re-election to a second term made a campaign swing through central Florida Monday. After a breakfast with about 250 Seminole County Republicans, Martinez and his wife Mary Jane stopped by Touchton's Drug Store on First Street for a cup of coffee and then toured the County Services Building.

No contributions were raised during the breakfast at the Park Suites Hotel in Altamonte Springs, said breakfast organizer Jim Stelling.

"We just wanted to give the people an opportunity to meet him," Stelling said.

Martinez seemed to enjoy the tour through county offices, dashing into offices of county workers to shake hands and say "Hi, I'm Bob Martinez." He was hosted by Seminole County Commissioner Fred Streetman. While touring the tag and title office Martinez approached Kelly Denton, county hunting and fishing license clerk.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

House passes sanctuary bill

WASHINGTON — The House acted Monday to preserve the most extensive living coral reef in North America, passing a bill to create an enlarged national marine sanctuary off the Florida Keys.

The legislation, adopted by voice vote, was prompted by three ship groundings on coral reefs near Key Largo and Dry Tortugas during a three-week period last fall. The groundings left 5,000 square meters of the reef permanently scarred.

The measure would restrict tanker and freighter traffic off the Keys, require development of a water quality protection program and prohibit mineral development, such as offshore oil drilling, within the sanctuary.

Water pollution is considered the greatest threat to the reef, home to a spectacular array of sea life that draws 1.6 million visitors to the Florida Keys each year for scuba diving, snorkeling and fishing.

Couple claims share of Florida jackpot

TALLAHASSEE — A Moultrie, Ga., man and his wife Monday claimed their half of the latest Florida Lotto jackpot, which was valued at about $7 million, Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said.

Handy and Jeanette Fleming had one of two winning tickets that were bought at the same liquor store in Lamonia, a tiny hamlet on Highway 61 about a mile south of the Georgia border. They will receive nearly $3.7 million in twenty annual installments of $184,000.

NASA moves to speed up Hubble repair

WASHINGTON — NASA officials trying to speed the repair of the Hubble Space Telescope said Monday they should be able to figure out in about two weeks the prescription of the nickel-stained mirrors needed to correct its blurry vision.

Hubble project scientists planned to travel to the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., Tuesday to discuss strategies that may push ahead the shuttle mission to repair the $1.5 billion orbiting telescope by as much as six months. The original date set for the first trip to service the telescope was June 1993.

"We are hoping for something like three to six months acceleration," said Hubble project scientist Edward Weiler, adding that speeding the repair effort would probably cost about an additional $10 million.

Feds say union endangered pensions

FORT LAUDERDALE — The Labor Department filed a lawsuit charging that trustees for a construction workers' union made risky investments that drove the union pension and health plans to the brink of insolvency.

The civil suit was filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Fort Lauderdale against the International Union of Operating Engineers. It charges seven current and former trustees of Union Local 675 with endangering the solvency of the two funds by investing in risky and unprofitable real estate ventures.

Woman charged with killing father

FORT LAUDERDALE — A 19-year-old woman and two friends were charged with killing the woman's doting father as he lay in bed, then ransacking the house to make it look like a burglary.

Two men arrested Monday with Katherine Telemachos told police she arranged the killing so she "could obtain all assets from the victim's will," the arrest warrant said.

She was jailed without bond on a charge of first-degree murder. Erik Delvalle, 21, who shared a home with her, and Vincent Magona, 18, also were charged with first-degree murder and jailed without bail.

Police found George Telemachos, 60, dead of a single bullet wound to the forehead Sunday. Concerned neighbors and friends had gone to the home to check on him when he did not open his tobacco store and called police after finding the house in shambles.

Police did not say who pulled the trigger. Only Delvalle had an arrest record, for minor crimes, police said.

Feds may take Bakker's meager earnings

CHARLOTTE — Former millionaire preacher Jim Bakker hasn't paid a dime of the $500,000 in fines assessed last year and officials said Monday they may attach the 11 cents an hour he now earns cleaning prison toilets.

U.S. Attorney Tom Ashcraft, releasing a list of the Top 10 criminal debtors in the western district of North Carolina, said the government will pursue every means possible to make Bakker pay up.

"We pursue every legal way to collect these debts," Ashcraft said. "But some people refuse to make any effort to pay what they owe. Garnishment of wages for federal debts will be possible in all states if Congress passes legislation now pending."

Experts say electric chair works

By MICHAEL MORSE
United Press International

STARKE — Florida's electric chair works well enough to carry out a humane execution, a team of experts said Monday after using a tub of salt water, a kitchen colander and a length of metal tubing to test the chair.

Department of Corrections Secretary Richard Dugger said he would immediately reverse results of the test to Gov. Bob Martinez, who ordered the test in hopes of satisfying the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta.

The court has suspended the executions of three Florida inmates because their lawyers have maintained that the chair malfunctions and kills inhumanely.

"I'd say it's safe to conclude that the electric chair works as it's supposed to."

It works real good on a colander. I certainly don't want to use it on my clients right now.

— Jerome Nickerson

said Michael Morse, assistant professor of electrical engineering at Auburn University in Auburn, Ala.

"It works real good on a colander. ... I certainly don't want to use it on my clients right now," Jerome Nickerson, a lawyer said.

On Monday, the Florida Supreme Court granted a stay of execution for a fourth inmate — condemned killer Anthony Bertolotti — who was scheduled to die

Tuesday. The stay extends until Thursday morning.

Bertolotti, who was sentenced to die for the 1983 murder of a woman in the Orlando area, is on his third death warrant.

The inmates granted stays by the federal appeals court are Judi Buenoano, the so-called black widow killer sentenced to die for poisoning her husband 19 years ago; James William Hamblen, who was co-defendant for the 1984 murder of a Jacksonville lingerie boutique owner, and Jerry White, who killed a grocery store customer during a 1981 holdup near Orlando.

State officials present at the test in the death chamber at Florida State Prison said they also were convinced that the chair is in good working order, said state Rep. Ron Silver, chairman of the House Criminal Justice Committee.

Jurors see photographs, X-rays of injuries that killed toddler

By VICTOR GALVAN
United Press International

FORT MYERS — Jurors in the Thomas Coe murder trial saw enlarged X-rays and autopsy photos of the injuries that killed Coe's 2-year-old stepson and listened stoically Monday as doctors described the wounds in dry, medical terms.

Coe, 23, allegedly killed Bradley McGee in July 1989 by dunking him headfirst into a toilet because he soiled his pants. The death led to the unprecedented conviction of a child welfare worker of child abuse for mishandling the case and prompted the state Legislature to approve more money for the state's child protection system.

Neither Coe, who faces a possible death sentence, nor the six-man, six-woman jury showed any emotion as doctors went through the list of bruises and scrapes that covered the child's head, chest, arms, legs and back.

"Altogether on the head (Bradley) had 17 bruises and 15 abrasions," said Polk County Associate Medical Examiner Alexander Melamud. "He had nine fresh bruises and eight old. And 14 fresh abrasions and one old." On his arms, legs, chest and genitals, the toddler had 21 additional bruises and 39 abrasions, Melamud said. Fourteen of the bruises and 37 of the scrapes marks were old, he said.

Using enlarged diagrams he made of the body a day after Bradley's death, Melamud explained how the color of the bruises enabled him to determine the age of the injuries.

Assistant State Attorney John Agüero told Polk County Circuit Judge Randall McDonald that prosecution witnesses would complete their testimony Tuesday.

Raccoons may be poisoning state panthers

United Press International

TAMPA — State officials and scientists now say raccoons may be responsible for the mercury contamination in Florida panthers.

No one has confirmed a direct link between raccoons and panther poisoning, but researchers have turned up strong evidence, causing them to give serious consideration to the possibility.

The evidence will be the central topic of discussion Tuesday at a meeting in Gainesville of a scientific advisory committee studying the panthers.

Researchers discovered mercury in raccoons caught at nine sites within the panthers' territory. Raccoons eat mercury-contaminated fish and crustaceans and are in turn eaten by panthers.

No one yet knows where the mercury is coming from.

Melody Roelke, a veterinarian for the Florida Recovery Project, said she plans to start testing bobcats and otters this fall to see whether other carnivores in the Everglades are contaminated.

Pentagon asked to re-evaluate security clearance screening

By DAVID TORTORANO
United Press International

PENSACOLA — The Pentagon was asked Monday to re-evaluate the way personnel is screened for security clearance because of the soldiers who allegedly deserted a unit in West Germany to go on a quest involving UFOs and the anti-Christ.

In a letter to Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, Rep. Earl Fatta, D-Fla., said he was concerned over "possible deficiencies in the Pentagon's review process of candidates for security clearance." The letter noted the bizarre incident that began in West Germany.

One female and five male soldiers, members of the 701st Military Intelligence Brigade in Augsburg, West Germany, were arrested in Gulf Breeze, a suburb of Pensacola, July 14 and 15 after being reported absent without authorization.

All were transferred to Fort Bragg, Ga., for questioning. The Army launched a routine counter-intelligence investigation, and very quickly said there did not appear to be any espionage involved in the desertions.

The soldiers were transferred last Friday to Fort Knox, Ky., after being charged with desertion.

Rocket launch delayed again

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — Launch of an Atlas 1 rocket carrying a $189 million science satellite was postponed at least 24 hours Monday because of an electrical problem, the third delay in four days for the commercially built rocket's debut.

A few minutes before the scheduled mid-afternoon launch, engineers were unable to switch on the rocket's internal power, NASA said. The launch was put off at first for about an hour and then scrubbed for the day when engineers from the rocket's builder, General Dynamics Corp., were unable to quickly pinpoint the source of the problem.

"It would appear there will not be enough time to troubleshoot the problem with the Atlas vehicle power changeover switch" before the closing of Monday's launch window, said NASA launch commentator George Diller from the mission control center.

Engineers hoped to find and repair the problem in time to launch the rocket at the next opportunity, at 3:23 p.m. EDT Tuesday. Favorable weather conditions were forecast.

Before Monday's problems, the 143-foot booster sitting on launch pad 36-B at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station had already been delayed twice before, Friday because of a helium leak and Sunday by stormy weather.

Mounted inside its protective 14-foot-wide nose cone is the Combined Release and Radiation Effects Satellite, or CRRES, a joint NASA-Defense Department satellite built to study the interaction between the supersonic solar wind, Earth's upper atmosphere and the planet's magnetic field.

CRRES, a solar-powered, 3,732-pound satellite built by Ball Corp. of Denver, is equipped with 24 canisters of barium and lithium that will be released into space and detonated over the next year, "painting" the otherwise invisible magnetic field with vast clouds of glowing chemicals.

Miller said the man took a pistol from his pocket and fired a shot at Miller's feet, before fleeing on foot. Miller said he drove from the scene at least one more shot was fired at his car.

United Way 'benefits' from crime

By SUSAN LEBEN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Silver that had been confiscated as evidence of a crime has become a unique donation to the Heart of Florida United Way in Sanford.

The Seminole State Attorney's office donated three silver coins and small bars to the charity, after the statute of limitation for owners to claim the spoils of a 1983 crime ran out. William Anliker, executive director of the state attorney's office said.

"It's the most unusual donation I've received," Jeanne Daly, area director of the United Way said. "It's not the norm. I'll probably assign it to one of my agencies like the Salvation Army or The Grove (drug counseling center) for them to sell or auction."

Anliker said the bulk of silver confiscated in 1983 in a grand jury investigation of Connie Mack Berry, was claimed by owners. The silver donated to the United Way, he said, lay unclaimed in the prosecutor's safe for more than six years.

The state, Anliker said, dictates that such evidence be either disposed of through public auction, advertised for public sale, or donated to a non-profit charity. Anliker said this is the first time in his six years on the state attorney's staff that such a donation has been made to a charity.

Anliker said since the value of the silver is less than the cost to advertise it for public sale, it was given to the charity.

The United Way was chosen, he said, because it represents a large number of charities. "We would hate to pick out one small charity," for the donation, he said.

Berry, Anliker said, operated the Kennesaw Mint in Atlanta, Ga., and a retail outlet in Altamonte Springs. Berry's operation reportedly solicited sales of commemorative silver coins and bars of a certain metal content, and then delivered an inferior product or no product at all, Anliker said. The case was closed many years ago and most of the silver claimed by owners.

Jeanne Daly displays donated silver items.

SANFORD — Agenda items pertaining to money matters zipped through the Sanford City Commission meeting last night with hardly any hesitation or comment including the $6.2 million proposed budget for the Sanford Airport Authority which was passed pursuant to a further hearing.

Also approved with no discussion was an amendment to the City Code regarding Sewage Rates. Mayor Bettye Smith said there would be "no changes in the rates, what we are doing here is strictly an administrative change."

Mayor Smith also announced the city's millage rate, to be forwarded to the Seminole County Property Appraiser. "The current year rolled-back rate will be 6.8004," said the Mayor, "with the proposed millage rate of 6.8759." The millage rate is tentative and may be changed at a public hearing to be held on September 10. The proposed city budget was also passed, but again, subject to change at the upcoming public hearing.

The so-called "Copper Penny" capital expenditure plan was held up pending further action by Seminole County. The County has proposed placing a referendum on this fall's ballot that would request a one cent sales tax increase.

The City had hoped to be able to use its share of the money for a renovation and modernization project at the Sanford Law Enforcement Complex.

The exact wording of the proposal has not been finalized however, so the matter will be brought up for discussion at a future City Commission meeting.

Recount miscout

The U.S. Census Bureau has been ordered by the courts to conduct a post-census survey, a recount of a statistically valid sample of households nationwide that can be used to correct for an expected undercount of minorities. But because the bureau's sample size — 150,000 households nationwide — is so small, statisticians with the bureau have decided to count only blacks and Hispanics separately in the recount survey, while Asians and Pacific Islanders will be lumped in an "all others" category that includes whites.

Asian activists are justifiably angered by that decision. Nearly a third of the Asians in the United States are newly arrived immigrants, unable to speak English, often unaware of the importance or purpose of the census and therefore more likely to be missed in the count. Even pre-census tests conducted by the government resulted in undercounts of Asians of between 5 percent and 7 percent, while white undercounts averaged only 1 percent. It makes no sense to combine Asians and whites in a survey meant to detect minority undercounts.

Asian activists are demanding either that the recount sample size be increased to 350,000 households, big enough to generate statistically valid information about Asians, or that more intensive sampling be conducted in neighborhoods where limited-English-speaking Asians and Pacific Islanders are concentrated.

That makes sense. Asians are among the fastest-growing segment of the U.S. population. The majority of new Asian immigrants have settled in California. If there is a significant undercount of Asians, California, more than any other state, stands to lose representation in Congress and its fair share of federal funds.

Census Bureau critics suspect the Bush administration has, for political purposes, designed a statistically invalid recount survey in order to avoid having to adjust the final census totals. Since the post-census survey is meant to correct for undercounts of low-income minorities and those minorities tend to live in Democratic districts, a corrected census would tend to hurt Republicans. Given that, the Census Bureau's decision to ignore Asians in the recount looks less like racism, as some have charged, and more like politics.

Bush and a line-item veto

The controversy touched off when President Bush announced he would consider a tax increase to help cut the budget deficit has obscured the fact that Mr. Bush is becoming one of the most active chief executives in history in the use of the veto.

Already Mr. Bush has vetoed 13 bills that were sent to him by the Democrat-controlled Congress.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt and President Grover Cleveland each used the veto more than 500 times, according to a report by Congressional Quarterly. But more recent presidents, with the exception of Gerald Ford, have not used the veto at anything near the pace at which Mr. Bush is using it.

A former member of Congress who was considered more of an insider by the lawmakers than were presidents such as Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, Mr. Bush has not attempted to go over the heads of the legislators as some chief executives have done in courting public opinion.

But that does not mean that Mr. Bush is an easy mark for Congress — something he has underscored with his frequent use of the veto.

If however, the president had a line-item veto, as do many governors, the chief executive could fine-tune the surgery carried out on a bill.

It is extremely doubtful that the current Congress would consider passing legislation that would give such a powerful tool to Mr. Bush. However, there are some constitutional scholars who believe that a president already has authority to veto parts of a bill.

Certainly it would make an interesting legal test were Mr. Bush to take such a step. But if the president already has the line-item veto power, Mr. Bush would seem to be the right candidate to test it.

CHUCK STONE

I miss homemade lemonade stands

I can't speak for the rest of the country, but, in Irving Berlin's words, we've been having "a heat wave, a tropical heat wave."

My local temperature hasn't soared yet to the scorching 100 degrees that has been frying folks in Phoenix, Las Vegas, El Paso and Albuquerque. But 94 degrees with 60 percent humidity comes sweeterly close to Mephistopheles' residence. When you're drenched with sweat, "it ain't the heat, but the humidity."

Merely walking from the parking lot to my office building can wilt you. Don't misunderstand me. I love hot weather (especially in December, January and February). But not this hot! Even God turns on her air-conditioning unit.

My Louisiana-born mother loved hot weather so much that she sometimes walked the mile to her office at the board of education, neatly avoiding the heat-prostrate bodies along the way. When she got home, my sisters and I would surprise her with our lemonade stand.

We always managed to scrounge up enough pennies to buy some lemons. Typical selfish kids, we made this wonderful lady pay for her glass of lemonade. But she humored us, because when it came to lemonade, we took no prisoners.

Our lemonade was North Pole cold, cotton candy sweet and so tart your cheeks would suck in after you drank it!

Our lemonade stands were also part of a great fun-filled

American tradition — like hot dogs and beer at a baseball game or fried chicken and potato salad at a church picnic.

But, with apologies to Duke Ellington, "things ain't what they used to be." Today's kids aren't having fun unless they're spending $20 to go to a rap concert costumed in Air Jordan sneakers and designer sunglasses. This change in values may be a big reason why I don't see lemonade stands on neighborhood streets any more. Or maybe I'm frequenting the wrong neighborhoods.

Hoosier philosopher Thomas Riley Marshall once quipped that, "What this country needs is a good 5-cent cigar." What this country really needs are good neighborhood homemade lemonade stands. Imagine your relief after getting off the bus in 95-degree heat and down the block "on the street where you live," like an oasis in the Sahara, you see a homemade lemonade stand!

Ah, but the rapture of thirst-quenching is only half of the stand's contribution to America's global pre-eminence. Homemade lemonade stands symbolize the real spirit of American democracy — self-initiative, youthful entrepreneurship, free-market capitalism.

That ain't too cool with today's inflated prices. When we were kids, we could buy three lemons for a dime. Today, lemons are four for a dollar — or 10 for a dollar at a farmers' market. But lemonade stands are like anything else — a high volume plus a low overhead equals a nice profit. And hot weather means a high volume of cold lemonade.

A brief rainstorm may cool us off, but more heat waves are on the way. When they return, you can try quenching your thirst — as I did the other day — with some store-bought lemonade. It won't work. I couldn't even get through half of the carton.

Read my lips: No store-bought lemonade compares to the best homemade lemonade. That's why I miss street lemonade stands.

If you know of anyplace where kids have set up good neighborhood lemonade stands, let me know. I'd like to find out where the best homemade lemonade in the country is — but only if it's sold from a homemade at-stand.

Our lemonade was North Pole cold, cotton candy sweet and so tart your cheeks would suck in after you drank it!

GEORGE F. WILL

Jackson's status deteriorates

WASHINGTON — Jesse Jackson finally has found an office other than the presidency worthy of him. He is negotiating with Sen. George Mitchell, the Majority Leader, to acquire the key to unlock the gates of social justice.

And what is this glittering prize? Floor privileges in the U.S. Senate for Jackson, soon to be "Shadow Senator" from the District of Columbia.

Undaunted by the fact that the office does not yet exist and will have no power when it does, Jackson has announced his candidacy and taken his election as a formality not to be waited on. He has set out to settle something far more important to him than power: perquisites.

(He is punctilious about tokens of respect. Two years ago he made his party hostage to his epic bout about not having received a timely telephone call from Michael Dukakis concerning his, Jackson's, non-selection as vice-presidential nominee.)

If (Jackson says demurely — if) elected, he will seek privileges enjoyed by real senators, including the right to roam the floor — and a desk there at which to sit when roaming stales — and space in a Senate office building. Speaking of access to his soon-to-be semi-colleagues, the real senators, Jackson says, "We certainly want to have access to them. We deserve it."

"We"? Is that the regal (papal) plural? Who is two? "Me and my shadow"? Perhaps it is a state of mind.

His Shadowship will be a lobbyist for statehood for the District. He will be a play-acting senator for a make-believe state.

The District is only a city, and only of moderate size. It is the nation's 18th largest and, because of restrictions on its growth, it will continue to descend the list of largest cities as others grow. The Constitution provides for three kinds of entities: states, territories and the District. States are the fundamental entities of this federal system. Senators represent geographical areas containing diverse interests.

The District as a state would be different. It would be the only state with no rural interests whatever: no mining or other extraction industries; no fishing; almost no manufacturing. But lots of government.

The decay of Jackson's career into burlesque is part of a pattern of dereliction of leadership among prominent blacks. Benjamin Hooks, head of the NAACP, recently suggested to 3,000 convention delegates that the prosecution of Washington Mayor Marion Barry — star of videotape and Louis Farrakhan rallies — is part of the government's "incessant harassment of black elected officials." It was not the first time Hooks had cast that aspersion or the first time he had no evidence to support it.

During an NAACP convention panel discussion of blacks in the entertainment industry, one panelist delivered an anti-Semitic diatribe which, the Los Angeles Times says, "drew enthusiastic applause from many in the audience." Not surprising, that. When many prominent blacks like Jackson cannot bring themselves to denounce Farrakhan, anything can be said, so long as it is said against someone who can be blamed for blacks' problems.

Nowadays when many black leaders speak they do note the pathologies of the black community and exhort it to cure itself. But those admonitions seem perfunctory and secondary to the cultivation of the aura of victimhood and the denunciation of victimizers (Jews, the Justice Department, whites generally). Such black leaders are becoming more boring as their charges become more lurid.

The posturings of an ersatz "senator" or a conspiracy-monger like Hooks are multiplying as the need for unpleasantly truthful talk is becoming more pressing. Three truths are:

Many blacks and others suffer from what sociologists call insufficient "social capital," a deficit of the skills requisite for both economic competence and successful living.

Second, we know little about how to use social policy to generate the social capital that cures the behavior of poverty, when such capital has not been produced by the nurturing of an intact family.

Third, we know what does not help — demagoguery such as Hooks', or grandstanding such as His Shadowship's.

In 1796, when Tennessee was on the verge of statehood (which the District of Columbia hardly is), two Tennessee senators arrived prematurely. A contemporary letter says:

"One of their spurious senators has arrived, and a few days since went into the Senate and claimed his seat, by virtue of the credentials from our new sister Tennessee, as she is called, and the rights of man. As the former was a new kind of coin, and the latter has often been declared, and even counterfeited by rogues and rascals, a majority of the up-stair folks determined to take time to inspect both, and with some difficulty persuaded the bearer to leave them."

George Mitchell, please note.

He will be a play-acting senator for a make-believe state.

JACK ANDERSON

Annunzio should be careful

WASHINGTON — The member of Congress who is boasting about exposing the shortcomings of first son Neil Bush lives in one of the biggest glass houses on Capitol Hill.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., is chairman of the House Subcommittee on Financial Institutions Supervision, Regulations and Insurance. He sports a lapel button demanding jail time for the "S&L crooks."

That is the new Frank Annunzio — born again in an election year when it is fashionable to whip the savings and loans. The old Frank Annunzio was not nearly so harsh.

That is because he takes his cues on the S&L issue from his chief banking assistant, Curtis A. Prins. And not long ago, Prins was eating dinner in the home of Charles H. Keating Jr.

Keating is the former owner of Lincoln Savings and Loan. The taxpayers own it now, and its collapse will cost them about $2 billion. It has been fashionable to blame the Keating five — five senators who took big campaign contributions from Keating and then went to bat for him against S&L regulators who knew better. But from the look of things, the "Keating five" had better make room for more.

Our associates Michael Binstein and Tim Warner have learned about two trips Prins took at the invitation of the generous Keating. On March 2, 1987, Prins flew to Southern California and Arizona to, in his words, acquaint himself with the operation of Lincoln Savings and Loan.

He also acquainted himself with the swank Crescent Hotel, then owned by Keating, where Prins stayed, for free. And he was a dinner guest at Keating's home.

Traveling with Prins was Dave Evans, a Washington lobbyist for Keating's holding company, American Continental Corp. Evans, a former Democratic congressman from Indiana, has been one of the most visible and aggressive advocates for Keating on Capitol Hill.

Last year, for example, he sought to short circuit a House Banking Committee investigation into Keating and Lincoln. Annunzio and Prins have been among the most outspoken critics of a regulation that Keating also sought to kill. It would have reined in the investment powers of industry high flyers.

After Prins enjoyed Keating's hospitality in Arizona — including a round of golf that Prins doesn't remember who paid for — he and Evans took a side trip to Las Vegas on Keating's jet. They stayed at Bally's Casino and Resort, and Evans picked up the bill.

Within a month, Prins was the dinner guest of Evans and another Keating lobbyist, James Grogan, at the pricey Washington, D.C., restaurant, Lion D'Or.

In line with the ethics rules of the House of Representatives, Prins reported the trip to California and Arizona on his financial disclosure form. He listed the reason, "to visit savings and loans to discuss ... recapitalization legislation."

The form says Evans paid the bill. Prins failed to mention the side trip to Las Vegas on his financial disclosure form. He now claims that he repaid Evans "in cash."

When asked about the favors from Keating, Prins told us, "Keating snookered me. I wasn't the only one." After the fact, Prins is trying to make himself and his boss Annunzio look like tough guys in the fight to bring the S&L owners to justice. But the record says otherwise.

Annunzio has taken $3,000 in campaign contributions from Keating.

He lives in one of the biggest glass houses on Capitol Hill.

and with a handshake quipped "How's the manana?"

Denon sells Seminole County-created manatees decals to boaters and other license purchasers to raise contributions for manatee research and protection. She said she was excited to meet the governor.

Martinez was scheduled to meet with Orange County Republicans at noon Monday, then tour the Orange County county commission offices before going to Kissimmee for another campaign function.

In another local issue, Martinez said the new $3.9 million state transportation package meets the needs caused by growth. Although a private road watchdog group Floridaans for Better Transportation states a 10-cent increase in gasoline taxes to begin to end highway congestion, Martinez said the four-cent increase addressed the needs of crowded roads.

County officials say the state requires counties and cities to improve roads to keep up with population growth, but does not require the same policy of itself. "As you know, I vetoed the first (transportation) proposal because it didn't deal with growth management," Martinez said. "The new bill requires the support of cities and counties. But growth should not be geared to state roads, which is linear development which we try to discourage."

The package approved by Martinez includes $182.4 million for the Seminole County Expressway and $113.8 million for other major roads in the county.

On other issues, Martinez said tests of Florida's electric chair would show that it is a humane method of execution. Doubts were raised about the use of the chair after flames and smoke rose from the head of an executed prisoner in May. Federal judges have suspended executions until tests show the chair does not torture executionees.

"Experts and public witnesses clearly show Florida's electric chair works just fine," Martinez said. "I don't want another excuse. I've signed over 120 death warrants during the last 2 1/2 years and some seven of them have been carried out. Defense attorneys are not in favor of justice."

very well might."

Donnelly found that marital ardor declines as couples age, both for biological reasons and because society doesn't expect senior citizens to have active sex lives.

"One reason for the decline may be that society frowns on grandpa and grandma having sex," she said. "While young people are encouraged to have active sex lives, we tend to think of older people as being asexual."

Married couples in their 60s and 70s have sexual relations on the average of three times a month, compared to the national average of 8 1/2 times a month, she said.

Donnelly also found that people who lived together before marriage had more active sex lives than couples who did not.

"Since these people are more individualistic and less prone to follow society's expectations, they may also be less likely to have 'normal' levels of coital frequency," she said.

The frequency of intercourse declines the longer a couple is married, probably because the partners become increasingly familiar, and in some cases bored, with each other, Donnelly said.

Other studies have shown that men tend to underreport sex in their marriages, while women tend to overreport it, she said.

"This pattern reflects the influence of traditional roles," she said. "Since men often are the ones to seek sex and women are the ones to shy away from it, men tend to think they get sex a lot less — while women think they get it a lot more — than they actually do."

It became a choice between buying food for the residents, or paying the taxes. The decision went to the food, and the taxes went unpaid. Then, two months ago, the home was put on the auction block. he was hit in the mouth by a second attacker, deputies said.

The gang ran when Yi opened fire. But sheriff's deputies report that at about 12:05 a.m. today, someone fired several shots into the closed store. Glass cooler doors were broken by the gunshots and deputies reported finding empty bullet casings in the parking lot and two slugs in the coolers.

The man Yi allegedly shot during the attack, a 20-year-old Altamonte Springs man, was treated and released from Florida Hospital-Altamonte Springs. Seminole County sheriff's investigator Dan Praat said today. The bullet passed through Presley's leg, deputy said.

Praat said his investigation of the incident continues and charges are possibly pending against the youths, all of which are juveniles except for the wounded man.

Yi said similar incident have happened before, but last night confrontation has caused him to decide not to return to work and to sell the business, located on the corner of Magnolia Street at County Road 427, back to the former owner.

Both Yi and Praat said they knew of no reason for this attack on Yi.

"They are drinking and using drugs. So many times they have broken windows. They throw rocks and hit my body many times," Yi said, of the accused troublemakers. "I'm not going back to work. I don't want to go to my store."

Besides being a site for crack cocaine sales, Yi's parking lot often becomes the site of police stings, where City County Investigative Bureau agents operate as street drug dealers to sell cocaine and arrest the buyers.

Praat said Yi and his sister have operated the store for about two years. "They didn't know what they were getting into," Praat said. "They've wanted out for several months."

Prisoners ring up $20,000 for porn, other services

LEESBURG — Prisoners at a Lake County jail rang up an estimated $20,000 worth of calls to phone sex and other dial-a-service numbers, a phone company executive said Tuesday.

The six phones involved were equipped to make only collect calls, but inmates at the Lake County Jail Annex behind the Leesburg Police Department figured out a way to dial the 900 numbers, said Jim Beary, vice president of Communications Central Inc. of Lake Mary, the company that owns the phones.

The company discovered the problem when it got its bill this month. On Friday it yanked out phone service but resumed it Monday after equipment was changed to block the calls, Beary said.

Beary said employees were still reviewing the one-month phone bill and said the $20,000 in 900 calls was an estimate.

"It could be that high. It could be less. It could be a little bit more," he said.

Beary said taxpayers would not be required to pay for the calls but said it was not clear who would.

The phones are owned by CCI, but Beary said his company was not liable. He suggested the company that provided the blocking device was.

"We're trying to determine where the liability rests at this point. The liability will certainly not be with the county or the prison," he said.

He also said inmates who placed the calls could face criminal charges.

Minister sentenced to 180 years in child abuse case

United Press International

TITUSVILLE — A 54-year-old, self-styled minister convicted of 42 counts of physical and sexual abuse against five of his children has been sentenced to 180 years in prison.

Richard Larrinaga was found guilty last month of the attacks, which occurred for two months in 1987 while his family was living in Palm Bay.

Defense lawyers Tom Yardley and Brian Onck argued in court Friday that Larrinaga should be sentenced to house arrest, probation and counseling.

But prosecutors pressed for the maximum penalty.

After the sentencing, prosecutors said Larrinaga could be expected to serve as many as 72 years of the sentence, if he lives that long. Defense attorneys said he probably would serve about 21 years of the sentence.

Because of prison crowding, inmates on good behavior may, find their sentences reduced by as much as 12 percent, the attorneys said.

Dairy princess sued by victim's family

WAUSAU, Wis. — A former Marathon County dairy princess convicted of murdering a former homecoming queen over the farmer both loved has been sued by the victim's family. Richard Weber, an attorney representing Lisa Cibaaki's parents, said Monday the Cibaakis have filed a civil suit against 20-year-old Lori Esker to recover funeral costs, economic loss and to compensate for loss of companionship. Weber said the suit also would prevent Esker, from collecting any future book or movie royalties from the case. Esker, of Hatley, was found guilty in June of strangling Cibaaki, 21, of Birnamwood, in a fight over 26-year-old Eland dairy farmer Bill Buss, in the fall of 1989.

Comic actor Eddie Quillan dies

BURBANK, Calif. — Actor Eddie Quillan, whose six-decade career included roles as idealistic young heroes and boys next door in some of Hollywood's most notable early pictures, has died. He was 83. The longtime North Hollywood resident died Thursday of cancer, his sister, Roseanne Quillan, said. Quillan was the lovesick mute in "Mutiny on the Bounty" (1935), a boy accused of murder in "Young Mr. Lincoln" (1939), the young radio mechanic in "The Grapes of Wrath" (1940), and the candyman in "Brigadoon" (1954). He appeared in two silent two-reel Mack Sennett slapstick comedies as well as more than 150 films and dozens of television shows in 60 years of acting. He was known for his saucy light air and flair for the double-take.

Bush's court nominee a surprise

By NORMAN D. SANDLER
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Judge David Souter is regarded by some as an intellect, solid conservative and a fair jurist, but he is an enigma on the topical constitutional issues that could dominate his Senate confirmation hearings. "I think most of us will want to evaluate him. We'll want to get acquainted and reserve judgment until we have that opportunity," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which likely will begin hearings on Souter's nomination in September. Souter, 50, a former New Hampshire attorney general and member of that state's Supreme Court for seven years, was described by one legal expert as a "very orthodox conservative."

President Bush, in one of the most important decisions of his administration, nominated Souter on Monday to fill the high court vacancy created by Friday's retirement of Justice William Brennan, 84, after 34 years on the bench.

Souter sailed through Senate confirmation of his nomination to the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston two months ago and many of the committee members could recall little more about him than his name.

One senator called the Souter review "pretty much of a blank slate" and another said he could not think of "anything negative about him."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., one lawmaker who knows Souter, said the virtual absence of scholarly or legal writings

Bush uses Souter to avoid big fight

By JOSEPH MARAWASY
United Press International

WASHINGTON — In nominating little-known U.S. Appeals Court Judge David Souter for the Supreme Court, President Bush — a man of caution and compromise — moved to avoid a bitter Senate bloodbath like the one that buried Robert Bork in 1987.

In the three days since Justice William Brennan's surprise retirement last Friday, pressure groups from both ends of the political spectrum had aggressively begun campaigns they hoped would shape the critical choice.

Recognizing that Brennan's departure gave Bush a golden opportunity to solidly strengthen the razor-thin 5-4 majority conservatives enjoy on the court, both sides quickly geared for battle, painting the fight as perhaps the defining clash over abortion and other social issues.

by the nominee could help him during confirmation proceedings. Reagan nominee Robert Bork was ejected, in part, because he had authored numerous articles that gave critics ample ammunition.

"We're not bracing for some horrendous fight with the United States Senate," said Bush, who called Souter a man of "keen intellect and highest ability." In fact, the president said, "I would expect that the chances of that are minimal."

Bush praised Souter's judicial opinions, but could cite no single quality beyond judicial conservatism — the principle that judges should not expand laws enacted by Congress — in explaining his decision.

Bush said it "would have been inappropriate" to have brought political views into play, even though Souter could have a pivotal role in deciding cases on abortion, affirmative action and other emotional issues.

The court is sharply divided on abortion and abortion rights activists believe that one more conservative on the bench could lead to the overturning of Roe vs. Wade, the landmark ruling that legalized abortion in 1973.

Bush said he had made clear in talks with Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and other top advisers that he did not want the search for a nominee to be "dominated by politics or special interests" or follow a "litmus test."

"I believe that we've set a good example of selecting a fair arbiter of the law," said Bush of Souter, who was appointed to the New Hampshire Supreme Court in 1983 by Gov. John Sununu, now White House chief of staff.

Judiciary members pledged a careful examination and most said they would not let Souter's position on any single issue be the sole factor in determining his confirmation.

Americans may have poor political memory

United Press International

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — How well-informed Americans are depends more on their general political knowledge than on how much news they get on particular political events, researchers at the University of Michigan and the University of California at Los Angeles said Monday.

"To a large degree, people who are well-informed to begin with tend to stay that way, while those low in information are less likely to catch the news in the first place and less likely to retain what they do hear or read," said Vincent E. Price, U-M assistant professor of communication.

Based on two rounds of interviews in July and September 1989, Price and UCLA political scientist John Zaller examined how Americans learned and then forgot two prominent national news stories — the sentencing of Oliver North for his role in the Iran-Contra affair and the Supreme Court's decision on abortion rights in the Webster case.

When asked questions such as "Do you remember what the Supreme Court decided on abortion this summer?" or "Do you recall anything about the sentence Oliver North received?" only 55 percent and 69 percent of the 614 respondents, respectively, gave minimally correct responses in July. That fell to 42 percent and 53 percent in September.

Of those who correctly recalled both items in July, 69 percent were able to recall the same information in September.

In the Webster decision, the Supreme Court upheld a ban on public funding for abortion and upheld states' rights to restrict abortion. For his role in the Iran-Contra affair, Oliver North was fined $150,000 and sentenced to two years probation.

It's your birthday! Congratulations! You have your driver's license. You have your first car. What you don't have is insurance you can afford. Why not give Easy Rider Insurance Agency a call? Easy Rider has just celebrated a birthday, too. The Easy Rider Insurance Agency has just celebrated their first year in Casselberry. The thirteen year old Florida business opened their local office on July 5, 1989.

The Easy Rider Insurance Agency operates on the concept of low cost insurance with high volume efficiency, according to Tom Riggins, Jr., manager of the Casselberry branch.

With a business operating on the philosophy like this, word tends to get around quickly. This office has only been open one year, but as Mr. Riggins explains, "We already had customers drive down from DeLand and up from Kissimmee because they decided we had what they needed: low cost, honest auto insurance. Low cost auto liability insurance is their specialty. Riggins says they can insure any driver, any driving record or any age. "We cover people who have had speeding tickets, accidents, DUI's or who need SR 22's." There are special rates for younger drivers.

The Easy Rider Insurance Agency is offering property damage liability with PIP for as low as $98 for six months, or $164 for one year, if you qualify.

Tom Riggins stresses friendly, courteous, person service with all of his clients. Riggins is married, a father of two daughters, 7 years and 5 months, he enjoys bowling and golf. Riggins states, "We are definitely serving a need in this area and our location on 17-92 just 3/4 of a mile north of SR 436 seems to be convenient to most people."

The Easy Rider Insurance Agency is open 9:00 A.M. - 5:30 P.M. Monday through Friday. Give them a call today at 831-7776 for more information on how you can benefit from this business philosophy.

SHREVEPORT, La. — Tracy Coalter netted 16 points as the Blue Streak of the Sunshine Basketball Association defeated Four Corners, N.M., 66-60 in their final game of pool play at the AAU 15-and-Under Girls' National Basketball Championship.

The Blue Streak, who ended pool play 1-2, did not qualify for the championship round. Instead, they will play in the double-elimination Friendship Games for the 28 teams that did not advance.

Also contributing to the Blue Streak's win on Monday were Karen Morris (14 points), Carla DeLoach (13), Nikki Washington and Amy Dorsett (six each), Kristen Forst (four), Shonda Sparrow (three), Della Garcia (two) and LaShawn Merrick and Leigh Ann Penney (one point each).

The Blue Streak opened pool play on Saturday, when they were hammered 92-35 by host Shreveport, the tournament's No. 2 seed and eventual pool champion. Morris (from Lake Mary High School) had 11 points while Coalter (Lake Brantley) added 10.

On Sunday, the Blue Streak lost 55-44 to Iowa despite 14 points from Coalter and six each from Washington, Morris and Dorsett (Bishop Moore).

The SBA Blue Streak, who have won the last four state championships for their respective age group, are actually a 14-and-under team. They earned the right to play in the national tournament by winning the Florida 15-and-Under championship earlier this summer.

Campbell took long way to Lyman

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD — After the Bullets dropped their 3-2 decision to Winter Park in the finals of the National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament Monday night at Lyman High School, Bullet assistant coach Dave Campbell grabbed a rake and tended to the pitcher's mound.

You wouldn't know this was the same Dave Campbell that led the Atlanta Braves in saves with 13 in 1977. He also led the Braves in appearances in 77 (65) and 78 (53).

"The Braves signed me out of East Tennessee State University in 1974," said Campbell, who is also an assistant basketball coach at Lyman. "I spent three years in the minors. I pitched two weeks in AAA, a total of six innings, before I was called up in 1977. I was called up when (Andy) Messersmith got hurt."

But the ride down was almost as quick as the ride up. In June of 78, the Braves acquired Gene Garber, who would be their bullpen mainstay for several years.

Winter Park takes advantage of Bullet errors

LONGWOOD — Two errors undid all the good work done by Jason Goodpastor.

Pitching against Winter Park in the finals of the National Amateur Baseball Federation championship tournament at Lyman High School, Goodpastor was near-perfect for the Bullets (Lyman's summer team). But a two-out error in the second and another in the seventh lifted Winter Park to a 3-2 win.

Winter Park, now 18-7, advances to a regional playoff game at Apopka this weekend. Win or lose, Winter Park will also play in the World Series at Apopka next weekend.

Going into Monday night's contest, the Bullets knew they had a steep hill to climb against the tournament's No. 2 seed.

On Saturday, Winter Park shut out the Bullets 3-0, sending them into the losers' bracket. But the Bullets bounced back, winning twice Sunday to earn another shot at Winter Park. Only now, the Bullets would have to beat Winter Park twice to win the double-elimination tournament.

And they were that close to forcing a second and deciding game Monday night.

"It's a shame to lose a game on an error, but that's baseball," said Bullet coach Bob McCullough. "The kids played well. They had their backs to the wall and they came through."

"I think we're a better-hitting team, but we didn't hit the ball well all weekend. Neither did Winter Park. During the regular season, we'd have time to take some batting practice and work out of it. But it's tough to do that during the summer."

The Bullets dug themselves a 2-0 hole in the bottom of the second inning. With two out, Darrell Marshall singled. An error later, he scored on Chris Rowley's single, who then scored on Sheldon Gill's hit.

Andy Spolski got a run back for the Bullets in the top of the fourth, drawing a one-out walk and eventually scoring when Donny Hazler hit a line-drive single off the Winter Park third baseman, Shawn Stuckey tied the score in the sixth when he singled and came across on Kenny Hayes' two-out safety.

When Goodpastor retired two of the first three Winter Park batters in the bottom of the seventh, the game appeared headed to extra innings. But Jason Clagget, who reached first on a fielder's choice, stole second. A few pitches later, he took off for third and came around to score the winning run when the throw went into left field.

Rich Childs was the winning pitcher for Winter Park, working the last two innings of relief of starter Brad Cook.

In the loss, McCullough saw some positives to go with the negatives.

"I'm pleased with where we are right now," he said. "We need to be more disciplined. We have to have more intensity, more competitiveness. We have to have that inner drive, to turn things around after a bad break. That's what the young kids have to learn. We have to turn that corner."

and added two more in the bottom of the sixth to close within one. Auto Body Centers got the tying run as far as third in the sixth inning but could not push it across.

Leading the Boomtown Boys was Dave Bixby, who contributed three singles and three runs scored. Kelly Hysell added two singles and two runs scored while Bill Jenkins singled three times and scored once. Mike Greenwood and Barry Hysell each tripled and singled. Greenwood also scored a run.

Also clipping in were Steve Arthur (two singles, one run scored) and Richie Pillhorn, Rick Morales and Scott Martin (one single each).

For Auto Body Centers, David Blackwell and Joe Ervin each singled twice and scored twice. Chris Nickle and Paul Payne both doubles, singled and scored a run. Terrell Ervin singled twice and scored once, and Ken Oswald and Rick Perkins each singled once.

Foreign doctors can heal diction

DEAR ABBY: Re the letter about foreign doctors who speak with heavy accents and are difficult to understand: You made a plea for patience because of the "rough road" they must have traveled to get from there to here.

Abby, all doctors travel a rough road to become physicians, but if foreigners want to practice here, they should learn the language well enough to be understood.

Several years ago, I was rushed to the emergency room with a miscarriage. The foreign-born physician asked, "Are you still breathing?" I wondered why he would ask when it was obvious that I was wide awake and talking to him! Then I realized that what he actually asked was, "Are you still bleeding?"

Doctors must be able to communicate clearly with their patients; therefore, I agree with "Bewildered Patient" — it wouldn't hurt those foreign doctors to take a few diction classes.

ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Many have written since I published the letter about doctors with heavy accents, and most of them stress this point: For fear of appearing ignorant, patients may not ask for clarification or written instructions. So the patients of physicians who have heavy foreign accents are sometimes at a disadvantage. Until a doctor can be certain he is plainly understood, perhaps it should be standard practice to have a nurse present who can, if necessary, elaborate on or clarify diagnoses and instructions. An ounce of prevention...Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter concerning foreign-born physicians who are practicing here. We can certainly be compassionate and generous, but there is no reason why they cannot improve their diction so they can communicate with their patients. There are speech and language pathologists who offer private and group classes to help foreign-born speakers reduce their accents, thereby improving their communication skills. Many foreign-born professionals are concerned because they have excellent command of the English language as well as the technical and academic skills of their professions, but their accents make it difficult to be understood.

Abby, please advise your readers concerning the availability of such services. I am enclosing some information you may find helpful.

Proud veteran's poem sent to President Bush

SANFORD — Irving Leary, a member of Disabled American Veterans, Seminole Chapter 30, was honored recently for a poem he wrote entitled "I Am Your Flag."

Leary, a Sanford resident, said the United States flag and all the country's veterans organizations inspired him to write the poem.

"Some parts of the poem are original and other parts, with the help of all veterans' organizations, are borrowed," he said.

Leary was honored while attending an Appreciation Day held for DAV Richard Parrish at the chapter home.

"During the ceremonies I was called front and center and presented a beautiful plaque inscribed with the poem," he said. "It was a great honor."

Leary was also informed that an identical plaque would be presented to President Bush and one would remain in the chapter home.

Hormones prevent signs of menopause

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 49-year-old female with rheumatoid arthritis. I take Darvocet and two Extra-Strength Tylenol a day. My problem is that I am unable to maintain a comfortable temperature. I wake up as often as 10 times a night because I am too hot. Once the covers are off, I am too cold. Could this be a normal symptom of menopause, the arthritis, or something else?

DEAR READER: Your difficulty with temperature control is more likely due to menopause than to rheumatoid arthritis or the medicine you are taking.

During the change of life, as the estrogen level falls in a woman's body, she may show periodic signs of vascular instability: flushing, sweating, rapid pulse, hot flashes and moodiness. These symptoms are often prevented by using hormone supplements in pills or patches.

On the other hand, rheumatoid arthritis, a common inflammatory joint affliction, is not associated with vascular symptoms. It causes stiff, swollen, painful joints -- sometimes with fever -- but not problems with temperature control.

Also, Darvocet (a prescription analgesic) and Tylenol do not cause temperature fluctuation. In addition, other diseases -- such as hidden infections -- usually cause consistent fever, rather than the pattern you describe.

DEAR DR. GOTT: After taking Questran for six months, my recent dental checkup revealed seven cavities. This was quite a shock to me. I then changed to Questran Light.

DEAR READER: Questran, a powdered drug used to lower blood cholesterol, contains sucrose. This sugar adds flavor -- and calories -- to the medicine when it is mixed with water (or juice). The sucrose can also cause dental cavities. Questran Light has reduced sucrose; therefore, it is an appropriate substitute for people who should avoid extra calories. Although I would hesitate to blame standard Questran for your dental problems (because other substances in your diet contribute to cavities, as well), I agree that a change to Questran Light is appropriate under the circumstances. Also, you should check with your dentist for advice about your diet and tooth care.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
In May the South African Bridge Federation (SABF) held its national congress in Maseru, Lesotho. This was the equivalent of our American Contract Bridge League's North American Championship. In an SABF pairs championship, there are three qualifying sessions, after which the field is divided into four separate quarters, based on order of finish. Three final sessions are then held, with each quarter of the field having its own separate competition and awards. Obviously victory in the lower quarters has less prestige than victory in the higher ranks. I played in the event with American bridge professional Gaylor Kasie, and in a qualifying round we discovered that there's no way to run over the South Africans. South's two-heart opening was strong and natural:

Gaylor came in with two spades, trading on favorable vulnerability, and I bid three diamonds as a possible lead-direct against whatever our vulnerable opponents might venture. You can see from the bidding diagram how slight the intimidating effect of my bid was. Eschewing any pedestrian method of inquiring about aces, South jumped right to six hearts. I can't blame Kasie for saving at seven diamonds, but North quickly bid the grand slam. There was of course no way to go set in seven hearts, but declarer held out for excitement by drawing trumps without even ruffing a diamond. Although playing out all the trumps and the ace of diamonds would squeeze West between the club queen and the spades, South simply discarded a diamond on dummy's second high spade and took the diamond finesse to chalk up the grand slam.

HOROSCOPE

YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 25, 1990

In the year ahead you should begin to experience basic improvements in your financial affairs. These changes are likely to come about in a gradual manner, but they will be positive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Financial trends are likely to be more stable for you today than they will be tomorrow. Don't leave anything hanging that is important to you moneywise. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Focus your energies and efforts today on what you consider to be your most significant endeavor. You'll be adept at accomplishing your aim, even the most difficult one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Two enterprises on which you worked very hard in the past have some life left in them. Don't write them off, even if they haven't yet yielded what you've expected.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A special friendship is intertwined with your hopes today. A pal who supported you previously is prepared to go to bat for you once again.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If there is a deal you've been anxious to close, this is a good day to try to finalize it. Don't hold back any trump cards you've been thinking about using at a later date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In situations that are meaningful to you personally, make an effort to manage events today instead of letting them manage you. Success is possible under your guidance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A joint venture looks promising for you today, even though you may be relegated to the minor role in the arrangement. No matter, the victory will be equally gratifying to both parties.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Matters of a legal nature should work out rather well for you today. If there is an agreement you'd like to make or documents to be signed, attend to these needs now.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something for which you're presently struggling is worth the efforts, so keep your shoulder to the wheel today. It's yield might exceed your expectations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Lady Luck tends to favor you today, but she is likely to put limits on her dispensations. If you operate within reasonable bounds, it could be a better than average day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Do not be resistant where changes are concerned today, especially those that affect your family and household. You might have had a different way of doing things, but they should turn out OK.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are ambitious and persistent today, goals of a material nature can be achieved. The only person upon whom you can depend to make your lot in life easier is you.
