Utilities Go Up On News Of Policy Change

Instead, Mr. Roosevelt asked that the utilities return to what he termed the old principles of the common law in determining valuations. He did not go into the point, but his words recalled a Government move last week to make so-called "prudent investment" a controlling factor in valuation.

Just what favors the utilities might expect, if they complied, was not made clear. Those familiar with the situation, however, were distinctly of the impression that the concessions might involve Government help in carrying out long-delayed construction programs.

Only a few days ago the committee of utility executives estimated that the industry had fallen $2,600,000,000 below its normal construction schedule, because, it said, "A series of Administration measures have so frightened capital that it has proved impossible to finance most of the needed construction."

It followed a Japanese announcement that Nantao would be bombarded unless the Chinese troops variously estimated to number from several hundred to several thousand withdrew. The Japanese shells and bombs probably took a smaller toll of life than might have been expected because of the wholesale evacuation of civilians from Nantao within the last 24 hours.

Now the reports have it that the Duke and Duchess are planning to return to America sometime after Christmas. Well, after his recent experience we'll bet he'll let Willis study his time tables for him.

Among those who have recently predicted a record breaking tourist season for the coming winter are: George Elliott, president of the ACL; J. J. There has been a lot in the papers about gold recently. More than $10,250,000 in gold was shipped to France just the other day. And another shipment of nearly ten millions arrived at the same time from Japan. The flight of gold from one part of the world to another, it is explained, vitally affects business conditions everywhere, brings on booms in one place, and depressions in another. And yet we thought we had abandoned the gold standard.

Farmers, we find, as a rule, are not taking much interest in the proposed legislation of wages and hours by the government. There is no immediate prospect of any attempt by Congress to control the farmers' labor. But we are wondering how long it will be after the present wage and hour bill has been enacted into law before a similar measure will be prepared for agricultural labor. If the farmer could work his hands no more than 20 or 25 hours a week, and their wages were fixed by law, it would be a different story.

Another Armistice Needed

Nineteen years ago today the first Armistice was celebrated throughout the world. There had been four long years of bloody war. Ten million men had been killed in battle. Billions more had died of disease, hunger and hardships. Billions of dollars had been blasted into bits and priceless cathedrals and art treasures had been destroyed. Taxes and prices, those twin ogres of commercial life, had soared to unprecedented heights. Everyone had suffered. So there was cause for great rejoicing when the Armistice was signed on Nov. 11, 1918.

For the past seven years America has been engaged in another war, an economic war, against the business interests of the country. There is not a single field of industrial, commercial or professional activity which has escaped the devastating blasts of this annihilating attack. The battle has been waged on a hundred different fronts, against the banks, the utilities, the railroads, steel, oil, coal, automobiles, textiles, air lines, merchant marine, chain stores, independents, lawyers, doctors, preachers, even newspapers, all at one time or another have come in for their full share of this bombardment.

At one time it was undoubtedly true that most lines of business deserved some condemnation. In the heyday of the boom, certain abuses had grown up which were bound to encounter public reaction. Prosperous business was not easy to live with, either for the consuming public or the laboring classes, though everyone benefitted in an economic sense from this prosperity. But the Almighty Dollar soon became the only God of nearly every business man and his success was measured only by the extent to which he could accumulate his cash reserves or extend his credit.

That attitude had to go. A sense of square dealing had to take its place. The business man's responsibility to his employees, his customers, and his community had to take precedence over sheer monetary gain. The practice of chiseling on competitors had to be stopped. The ancient custom of watering stock and fleeing stockholders had to be done away with. Child labor and unduly long hours for workmen in sweat shops had to be ended. More idealism, less arrogance, had to be developed.

We believe that the long hard years of the depression have accomplished most of these worthy objectives. We believe they would have come of their own accord, without punitive government regulation, or political brow-beating. Business men learned their lesson in 1929 and they suffered mightily for their mistakes. They have been suffering ever since. The incessant warfare which has been waged against them, the constant shelling from high sources, the blasts which they have received on every hand only added to their troubles. The constantly increasing taxes together with the legislative straight-jacket have made their burden increasingly unbearable.

It is time, it seems to us, for this war on business to stop. What is most necessary today for everyone to understand is that there can be no prosperity for anyone unless business itself is prosperous. There can be no higher standard of living for the workman unless the business for which he works is profitable. There can be no lasting improvement in the lot of under-privileged classes unless the business interests which have to support these improvements are themselves self-supporting. A class struggle which undermines business is class suicide.

It is high time for an Armistice in the war against business.

Keeping Out Of Jail

Ten good ways on how to keep out of jail are given by Cyril Clancy, an official of the Discharged Prisoners' Aid Society, who recently delivered an address at a conference of prison workers in Liverpool, England. While the rules he gives are not necessarily all inclusive, they may be of some help. In order of importance he lists them as follows:

- 1. Don't marry an extravagant wife.
2. If you have done so, tighten things up before something serious happens.
3. Don't marry on the love impulse only.
4. Choose a wife of prudence and virtue rather than one who looks charming in a bathing costume.
5. Don't pretend to be more than you are.
6. Don't run a car unless you are financially secure.
7. Remember, race courses are not maintained for your financial betterment.
8. Beer and wine cheer the heart of men, but it is their misdeed that brings so many within prison gates.
9. If you are out of a job a prison conviction won't help you to find one.
10. Life won't last forever—go straight while there is time.

A SOUND BODY is a first-class thing; a sound mind is an even better thing. But the thing that counts for most in the individual, as in the nation, is character, the sum of those qualities which make a man a good man, and a woman a good woman.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — Accent on directors in the comparatively inexpensive serial field. But what other business will entrust the handling of an investment between $80,000 and $100,000 to a couple of youngsters? They've just finished 13 episodes of action and thrills called "Return of Zorro" and done it—26 reels—in 25 days. That's no longer than the serial-makers give the veterans to grind out one of their products—but then Billy and Jack are veterans.

Started At Bottom.

Both used to be office boys. Both went through the mill. Billy had two years in the exciting career, served as script clerk and then assistant director. Jack has worked in the film laboratory, camera department, film cutting; has been assistant and chief cameraman and assistant director. Both say it makes their present jobs easier.

The serial field is where pictures are made fast and furiously. It may not be art, but it gets done. The day is wasted that doesn't see four reels of film exposed and canned, or at least one reel of edited film ready for release. That's about 10 minutes of screen time—and on a major studio lot a director figures he's lucky if a day's work gives him four minutes.

"We don't have time for much rehearsing," Billy Witney explains. "We have to have people who know what's wanted and can go ahead and do it right the first time."

A serial's time budget is estimated practically to the last minute, which means that every minute of production has to count. On location, where most serials are made, the director has to keep up

Pepper Offers Support For Hospital Here

ever before that a modern hospital will develop from the state of dreams and drawings where it has been for a number of years.
The shortage of available WPA projects in Sanford and Seminole County at the present time, too, may prove favorable toward the prompt passage of the project, it was said, and there are some who feel that the County's offer to pay the expense of the skilled labor for entire project in addition to the regular sponsor's contribution will also be a factor in assuring approval of the project.
No definite location for the proposed hospital has been decided upon as yet although there have been many sites proposed. The City Commissioners, it was learned, have indicated their willingness to donate a site for the location of the hospital in the event that the project gets the approval of WPA authorities.
Before work can actually begin, even though it is approved by the Works Progress Administration, a referendum of Seminole County freeholders will have to be held in order to find out whether they are willing to issue bonds to pay the sponsor's share of the hospital costs.
Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners, O. P. Herndon, stated that it was his belief that the Commissioners will call the referendum election as soon as a definite commitment is obtained from the WPA. If earlier action should be required on the matter, the referendum could be held only through the aid of various civic organizations in Seminole County which would have to pay the cost of the election, since there was no money set aside in the County budget for such expenses. Mr. Herndon indicated that he felt the Commissioners would not be willing to obligate the County to pay the costs of a referendum election unless it appeared, without a doubt, that the necessary funds could be secured from the government in the event the election carried.

Fill these buttered "cups" with a thick creamed mixture of crab, lobster, tuna, salmon or shrimp, then broil or bake until the canape is brown. Cool slightly before serving.

THANKSGIVING SALAD
