

SENATE GROUP AGAIN PROBES HEARST NOTES

Witness Causes Sensation In Testifying Avila Tried To Sell Him Papers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—(INS)—The Senate's investigation into the authenticity of the Hearst documents published in the Hearst newspapers was resumed here today with Frank Y. McLaughlin, an American oil man who has spent most of the last seven years in Mexico City, as the witness.

McLaughlin identified himself as a structural engineer who went to Mexico in 1920, later becoming identified with the El Sol Petroleum Company as director and vice president. He said he had many "personal relations" with Mexican officials.

The witness created a mild sensation in the committee room when he testified that Miguel Avila, the American-born Mexican who sold the documents to the Hearst papers, once tried to sell him a confidential file of correspondence between Secretary of State Kellogg and Ambassador James R. Sheffield for $10,000.

McLaughlin said he knew Avila very well, having met him first in 1921 through Joseph DeCoursey, New York City correspondent for the New York Times, who introduced him as a representative of the Harms News Agency. McLaughlin had an article he wished to have published in Europe, and gave it to Avila, he said.

There is a regular "traffic in documents" in Mexico, McLaughlin said. For a price, he declared, "you can get any kind of document you want."

"Avila was notorious in Mexico as a purveyor of these documents," the witness said. "I know that of my own personal knowledge."

"Avila came up to my apartment one night in 1926 on a very important matter. I had two friends there so I told him to come around the next day. He insisted on seeing me at once."

"Avila showed me a typewritten statement saying that all the correspondence between Secretary of State Kellogg and Ambassador Sheffield would be given me for $10,000. The statement said the documents would be given me by Mr. Lane, first secretary of the embassy in Mexico City."

"Was any name signed to that statement?"

"No, but I understood that Mr. Lane was down stairs at that time in an automobile, waiting to carry out the deal."

"He asked me if I wouldn't come down stairs and see Mr. Lane, who said was in the automobile and refused. The thing was so absurd, I told one of my guests, H. D. Sawyer, about it."

"The next day Avila brought two photostatic copies of the same document to me and left them," said McLaughlin. "I communicated with Iby E. Swift, Avila's former chief, next day and told him about it. Avila afterwards called on me, and told me I had gotten him into a terrible lot of trouble by telling Swift about the document."

"On another occasion, McLaughlin said Avila came to him with a copy of a telegram supposed to have been sent by General Pina, under secretary of war, to the commander of a Mexican gunboat, ordering him to come to Mexico City and head up with arms and ammunition for delivery to the rebels in Nicaragua. McLaughlin added that he did not buy the document."

"Why did you bring it?"

"I don't know. Unless he thought I would turn it over to the American embassy."

"Did he ask for money?"

"No, Avila's method was very unique," said McLaughlin. "He simply showed you a single copy of a document. Then he came around with a photostat. He would then bring an original. He was always broke and always asking for a few pesos."

DIVER THINKS S-4 CANT BE RAISED UNTIL NEXT JUNE

Tom Eadie Says Weather Will Be Too Cold And Water Too Rough To Endanger Lives Of Others In Salvage Work

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 27.—(INS)—"It will be impossible to raise the S-4 sooner than next June," said Tom Eadie, hero diver, just before going down today.

"It is very cold down there and it is going to be colder with the next few weeks. It will also be a lot rougher in the next few days and that will stop salvage work momentarily as a good deal of this work must be done in absolutely calm weather."

"Now there is no life aboard the S-4, it is far wiser to risk the lives of more men."

Fair weather and fairly calm water made the descent of divers to the S-4 easy today and much work was expected to be accomplished.

The first divers to go down had instructions to cut away the wreckage from the stern and the conning tower of the submarine and to start it on its way to the surface. It will be the first bit of the craft to be brought above surface since the start of the salvaging.

A second tunnel in the mud under the submarine will then be made with the suction hose. This tunnel will be the same size as the other one, about six feet wide and about as high as the diver. Through it will be placed a hawser and chains and eventually pontoons.

Navy men are taking Secretary Wilson's orders to mean that the navy will stick by its guns and salvage the submarine if it takes the entire winter to do so. Operations will only cease when weather forces a let up and will be resumed immediately afterwards.

Lindbergh Making Plans For Flight To Guatemala City

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 27.—(INS)—Preparations were begun in earnest by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh for his flight to Guatemala, after a study of weather reports, America's flying ambassador decided definitely to take off early tomorrow morning. He will fly in a direct line to Guatemala City, a flight of about 800 miles which he expects to cover in approximately nine hours.

Today he planned to test the motors of the Spirit of St. Louis thoroughly to begin her air journey to the north, back to Detroit.

The last official social function to the famous flyer and his mother was given yesterday. Ambassador and Mrs. Morrow gave a garden party in their honor to which only Americans were invited. There were about 600 guests.

On behalf of the American colony here, Ambassador Morrow presented Mrs. Lindbergh and her son with several plates.

DIRIGIBLE AND DESTROYERS IN PLANE SEARCH

Navy Officials Have Little Hope That Searchers Will Be Able To Find Party Of Four On Grayson Airplane

Lane 32 Miles Wide Covered By Vessels

Canadian Radio Man Reiterates That He Picked Up SOS Message Sunday Night

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—(INS)—Navy officials held little hope this afternoon that searchers would be able to find Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson and her three companions aboard the airplane Dawn.

The dirigible Los Angeles, messaged the department that she was midway between Cape Sable and Sable Island, where it is believed the Dawn went down and that no trace of the missing flyers was found.

ABOARD THE UNITED STATES DESTROYER STURTEVANT AT SEA, Dec. 27.—Systematic and intensive search for the missing amphibian plane, "The Dawn," with four aboard including Mrs. Frances W. Grayson, was started off the coast of New England and Nova Scotia today by the Sturtevant and the destroyer Mahan.

Rushing out of Boston at 29 knots an hour, the Sturtevant came abreast of the Mahan at 8:4 A. M. in 66 west longitude, 42 56 north latitude—approximately 230 miles southeast of Sable Island where "The Dawn's" radio was last heard.

Twenty miles off the New England Coast, the Sturtevant and the Mahan spread out, making it possible to sweep a lane 32 miles wide. The Mahan, 16 miles from the Sturtevant, steamed along a parallel course, making a double visibility.

Up to 11 o'clock this morning no trace of the plane, which was carrying Mrs. Grayson, Oskar Omdal, pilot, Brice Goldsborough, navigator, and Fred Kohler, motor expert, had been found. "The Dawn" left Friday for Newfoundland on the first leg of a trans-Atlantic hop to Copenhagen.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 27.—(INS)—The officer in charge of the Canadian government radio station on the rocky shores of Sable Island, 200 miles off the coast of Nova Scotia, in a wireless message to International News Service today reiterated his belief that the station had been in communication with the missing plane Dawn on Sunday night.

"The first words caught by Sable Island at 9:45 P. M. were 'something gone wrong' by the officers wired. 'They came in on an interrupted continuous wave of 625 meters of a very high pitch and swinging note.'

"After the three words had been caught, a part of the message was missed then came the three last letters of a word, the letters N. C. E. followed by the signature, WMU. Nothing has been heard since that time, though we have tried to establish communication, but have failed."

Rockefeller Gives Annual Christmas Party This Evening

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Dec. 27.—(INS)—John D. Rockefeller, Standard Oil magnate, will hold his annual Christmas party for Ormond village at his winter home, the Casements tonight.

Following a custom he has held for years, the aged philanthropist gives a Christmas party to all those living in the same block as his home and others who are his special friends. Each upon his arrival at the Casements, receives the personal greetings of "neighbor John."

Singing of Christmas carols and the presentation of gifts will feature tonight's party. Rockefeller, who always stands beside the piano in his home, leads the singing. After the carols are finished, he gives presents he has selected for each individual to all. Each guest usually receives from one to three gifts that have been carefully selected to the personal tastes of their receiver by the Standard Oil king.

Troops Guard Tennessee Town After Gun Fight In Which Six Men Are Slain

SOUTH PITTSBURGH, Tenn., Dec. 27.—(INS)—Adjutant General W. C. Boyd of the Tennessee national guard, today assumed command of the state militiamen, who are patrolling the streets here following the shootings Christmas Day which robbed this little town of all its law enforcement officers.

"I do not expect any more trouble," General Boyd told International News Service. "However, I have issued orders that arms and ammunition be seized wherever found, and all suspicious characters jailed."

The shootings Sunday night, following months of bitter feeling between the sheriff's forces and the city marshal's officers over the open shop policy adopted by a local stove factory, resulted in the deaths of Sheriff Coppinger and a deputy, and Chief of Police James Connor and three policemen. Two others were wounded.

According to Deputy Sheriff Thomas Connor, a brother of the slain police chief, the sheriff's forces were seeking to arrest members of the city marshal's office for displaying their weapons in a threatening manner. Thomas Connor was not hurt in the fight. No inquest will be held, as the coroner is said to have declared that none was necessary. No arrests were made and none is likely, according to General Boyd, since all of the participants in the battle are either dead or in the hospital.

HICKMAN GIVES DETAILS OF HIS FIENDISH DEED

Youthful Kidnapper-Slayer Reiterates He Committed Grassesome Crimes To Obtain Money To Spend On Schooling

Dismembered Body Strangled Girl And Former Bank Clerk Went To Show After Slaying Girl But Conscience Hurt Him

ABOARD PRISON CAR ENROUTE TO LOS ANGELES, Dec. 27.—(INS)—"Well, gentlemen, this is the true story of everything that has happened," William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnapper-murderer, then told of events leading up to the kidnapping of Marion Parker, and how he put the 12 year old school girl to death.

"On November 23 I came to Los Angeles after stealing a car in Kansas City. I had wanted for some time to kidnap a girl, so I could get money to go to college."

"On Dec. 12 I decided to locate another man and steal his daughter, but I finally gave her up because I thought she was too young."

"Then I thought of Mr. Parker and his girls because I remembered seeing them come in the bank where he was an officer and where I used to work."

"So I drove out to Parkers home on South Wilton Place on Dec. 14 and saw the little girl Marion riding on a bicycle."

"And on Dec. 15 I parked near Mr. Parker's house again in the morning and I saw Mr. Parker drive away and noticed his car."

"Then I followed the two girls that morning to school at 8 o'clock. 'So when it was about 12:30 o'clock I went right into the school and asked for the younger Parker girl. I didn't know they were twins, but anyway, they sent for Marion and I told them my name was Cooper and I worked in the bank and that her father was hurt in an auto accident and wanted her right away."

"They let her go, and I put her in the car and we drove first to Glendale. There I told her of my deceit, but said I would have to hold her until I got $15,000 from her father."

"She didn't cry or fight or anything, and I don't have to tie her after she'd be quiet."

"I worried her she would be hurt if she didn't do as I said, and I showed her my gun. 'Then we drove to the main post office where I wrote the first letter to Mr. Parker and mailed it. 'And then we went to a Western Union office in Pasadena, where I left her alone in the car, and sent a telegram warning Mr. Parker to do nothing until he got my letter. 'We drove out beyond Azusa after that and came back in through Alhambra where I sent the second telegram. 'Then we went to the Rialto Theatre in Alhambra and saw a picture called 'Figures Don't Lie.' At 10 o'clock we drove back to Los Angeles to the Bellevue Arms and waited outside half an hour until no one was around. 'I told Marion my apartment was on the third floor and she would have to follow up stairs behind me and be quiet. 'She did and no one saw us go in. 'Marion slept on the couch that night with only her shoes off, and I put a heavy blanket over her. I lay awake a long time looking at her. 'She awoke at 7 o'clock and I cooked breakfast, but she wouldn't eat, but was sobbing so I told her she could write a note to her father and that quieted her. 'Then I tied her to a chair and went down town to read the papers, and sent a letter to her father with her note in it. 'I came back to the apartment and showed Marion the papers and she seemed pleased at seeing her name there. This was at noon on Friday and we went out after that and drove through Alhambra and out to Santa Anna and on to San Juan Capistrano. 'Marion seemed happy and said she would ride in automobiles. 'I got the evening papers when we came back and after reading them in the car we drove to the Pacific electric station at Sixth and Main Streets and telephoned Mr. Parker. But the line was busy. 'Then we rode out on Glendale Boulevard and I called her father from a drug store near Angelus Temple and Parker said he'd have the money all right. 'I called him again from Pico and Wilton Streets from another drug store and made a date to meet him on Gramercy Street. 'Marion and I saw Mr. Parker drive past in his car, but I got frightened when I saw two other cars that I thought were filled with detectives and I drove away. 'On Friday night Marion slept on the couch again. She woke up at 7 o'clock and I told her to write a note telling her father not to try me. 'She didn't mind writing it. 'I tied Marion to a chair again (continued on page four)

Mob Threatens To Lynch Hickman On Return For Trial

LAWYER SPEEDS TO AID HICKMAN IN MURDER CASE

Every Legal Means Will Be Adopted To Save William Hickman From The Gallows; Mother Weeps At Confession

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 27.—(INS)—All legal means will be employed by Jerome A. Walsh, youthful Kansas City attorney, to save William Edward Hickman from the gallows. Walsh made this statement to newspaper men here today before he boarded a coast-bound train but declined to discuss defense in detail.

Walsh is the youngest member of the Missouri legislature and a member of the firm of the firm of his father, Frank P. Walsh, well-known labor attorney.

While Walsh was speeding westward, Mrs. Eva M. Hickman, mother of the confessed murderer, was in seclusion at her home. She declined to discuss what part in the defense, if any, she will play.

The 55-year old mother broke down completely and sobbed hysterically when she learned more details of Edward's confession today. Between sobs, however, she maintained her faith in her son, declaring she would never believe he had conceived such a horrible crime.

"I do not believe," said Mrs. Hickman, "that my son committed this murder unaided; I believe he was forced into making the confession from fear of violence and he will repudiate it when he is safe. I can read between the lines that he has been handled in such a manner as to make him say anything he really doesn't mean."

Walsh bears a letter from the mother to her son, Mrs. Hickman also sent As W. Keyes, Los Angeles prosecutor, a telegram asking the district attorney to "see that the district attorney to 'see that all my son's legal rights are preserved.'"

Sanford And Seminole County Have Quiet Christmas Day Celebration

The Christmas holidays were quietly observed by the citizens of Sanford and Seminole County. Christmas Day was marked by special church services in the morning and in the evening when cantatas and pageants formed most of the entertainment. Lighting of the community tree in Central Park Sunday evening at 6 o'clock was another feature of the Yuletide celebration that drew a large crowd.

Numerous celebrations were held Friday and Saturday nights to usher in the Christmas season. In addition to the Christmas trees which the churches sponsored, there were others given for benefit of the poor. Many parties were given in private homes and several organizations, both church welfare distributed baskets among the needy people of the city.

Yesterday was a general holiday, all of Sanford's business houses being closed throughout the day. Private dinner parties were given by the scores while restaurants and cafes reported many luncheon and dinner reservations. The weather was ideal, affording excellent opportunities for motoring, and many took advantage of it.

Local police reported that the holidays were unusually free of disturbances, being one of the quietest on record. Few arrests were made for disorderly conduct and drunkenness, which in the past seemed to have gone hand in hand with the observance of the Yuletide season.

On the county roads, very little trouble was experienced as a result of traffic mishaps.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH PLANS TO PRESENT PAGEANT SUNDAY

Sunday Evening at 7:30 o'clock one of the most beautiful pageants that has ever been written "The Adoration of Kings and Shepherds" will be presented at the Congregational Church. Twenty four characters take part in portraying the coming of the Christ Child to the City of David. The scenery shows the inside of an ancient stable built of rock and supported by great beams and pillars of heavy wood. Through an open doorway one looks out upon a portion of the city built upon a hill with a temple at the top. The sun is just rising behind the hills and the clouds are tinted with the light of an early dawn while the stars are just disappearing. Thru a window can be seen the camels of the Wisemen.

The angels first reverently approach the Holy Family and bow in worship before the manger throne. Then five of their number conduct the amazed Shepherds to the place where the Christ Child lay in swaddling clothes. Then other angels escort the Wise Men from the East with their rich gifts to a manger where they also may worship Him Whom they have traveled long distances to find. As the Sanctus is sung the entire number kneel in reverence.

The doors will be opened at 7 o'clock and no seats will be reserved. On Monday the Church School will have its Annual Christmas tree party with songs and recitations, Christmas Tree and Santa Claus. The program is as follows:

A Newspaper's Responsibility

Newspapers have often been the targets for criticism in their publication of crime news and in their campaigns to expose crookedness in all forms. While much of the criticism has come from well meaning persons, from people who conscientiously championed their objections, it has, in most instances, been unjust and has been made without a complete knowledge of the circumstances of the individual cases.

"Goodbye, I hope you damn newspaper men are satisfied."

These were the words of Thomas Costello, condemned murderer, as he stepped to the electric chair to atone for the slaying of a Tampa merchant. He was speaking to representatives of Tampa newspapers, which has been instrumental in bringing about his conviction and that of another man in connection with one of the most brutal murders in the history of that city.

The words were spoken in full resentment of what the criminal knew was responsible for his downfall. Had it not been for the intense campaign waged by the newspapers for a solution to the murder mystery, Costello and his pal might never have been apprehended. They might have escaped to continue their business of robbing and killing, but thanks to alert Tampa newspapers both of these men have paid the extreme penalty and society has been protected.

We have in mind the instance of where a negro killed a white man, his employer, for a few paltry dollars. So well did the murderer cover up his tracks and throw officers off on false trails that he remained near the scene of the crime and actually kept in close touch with the authorities as they attempted without success to unravel the mystery. Three days elapsed and no definite clues were discovered and the officers were plainly worried.

A newspaper man, bent on apprehending the slayer, that afternoon published a story of how the authorities, in possession of new evidence, expected to make arrests before night. The paper fell into the hands of a frightened negro woman, who went to the police and revealed part of the murder. Within three hours the murderer was under arrest and a confession secured from him.

The remark of Costello, "I hope you damn newspaper men are satisfied," is a decided compliment to the press, as the Tribune has declared. The crooked element's greatest fear is of the newspapers. They can escape from the police but they cannot overcome the newspapers. With the responsibility of protecting society against such a class of people, is it any wonder that newspapers feel very keenly the necessity of throwing the spotlight on all that is detrimental to the public's best interests?

Oklahoma In The Center Of The Stage

Oklahoma has come to the fore again. With history literally repeating itself, that state is attempting to impeach its governor, Henry S. Johnston, much in the same manner as it attempted to rid itself of Jack Walton four years ago. A special session of the legislature convenes and holds several sessions. Troops are called out and the governor defies the power of the legislature and the courts.

While Oklahomans thus go about their ways of having a little fun and incidentally bringing to the state rears of publicity that it ordinarily would not have enjoyed, we wonder if the citizens of that state fully realize the seriousness of the situation. In a civilized country such as America is supposed to be, why should it be necessary to make the show that Oklahoma is offering? Why should troops be called out and why should a governor defy the people's authority by going to the extent of using soldiers to carry out his wishes?

It's all very strange. We do not know who is in the right, nor care less, but we do know that Oklahoma is gaining for itself a reputation that is far from the most enviable in the world. The state which for several years has been looked on as one of the wealthiest in the country, where untold riches lie in its thousands of oil wells, has come to be looked on much in the same light as Herrin, Indiana, and Chicago.

The Baltimore Sun in a recent editorial offers an interesting thought on the situation in Oklahoma when it remarks, "Indeed Oklahoma, along with the rest of the parade from prohibition to Hollywood, can teach us that we are not wholly tamed; for instance that out politics still have a bang as well as a tang; that in these states there are a variety as interesting as Europe's and a confusion that lies as close to the surface of our well ordered life."

FAITHFUL TO A FRIEND

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

There are few instances in this life where faithfulness is so exemplified as in the fair of a dog toward its master.

And there have been men who have risked their lives for their faithful beasts.

But fine as is this loyalty and attachment it cannot compare to the faithfulness of one friend to another. There is no spectacle in human more inspiring, yet, most of us have to live out our entire life before we find a friend as faithful and loyal as a dumb dog!

It does seem as though all the qualities of a hero are called upon to perform this noble task of being faithful to a friend. You have to be patient, forgive, forget, and sometimes walk side by side with your friend through a boiling hell.

But a friend is worth all this.

WHAT TO KILL

ORLANDO SENTINEL

Now that the hunting season is in full swing it is time to mention the fact that anything that flies is not necessarily the lawful prey of the hunter.

There are many birds in Florida that are protected by law, by both federal and state statutes—birds that build and do not destroy—birds that eat their weight in gold in insects and destructive pests.

One of these birds is the meadowlark that songster which so cheers all with its melodious whistles. No one should know that this bird and if hunters do not know the bird they should read up the game laws and familiarize themselves with it.

Then there is the mocking bird and the thousands of other song birds that are an asset. None of these should fall from the hunter's

As Brisbane Sees It

Sky, Preferred. Deadly Stunt Flying. Farewell to Whiskers. Let Battleships Work.

By Arthur Brisbane (Copyright, 1927, by Star, Inc.)

MRS. GRAYSON'S PLANE, the Dawn, carrying four passengers on a proposed flight to Denmark, appears to be hopelessly lost. Mrs. Grace Goldberger's wife of the Dawn pilot, used $500 that her husband gave her she had no more—to hire a searching plane.

WITHOUT DISCOURAGING flying of a useful kind, however dangerous, the law might discourage "stunt" flying and "show-off" flying, by men or women, based on loss of publicity. It is especially desirable that ladies, no matter how brave should not hire and risk the lives of other women's husbands, brave, useful pilots, the ladies traveling as freight, for no reason in particular.

R. B. KELLOOG, superintendent of power in the Indian Electric Corporation, suggests that the biggest floating machinery afloat, the cruises and battleships, be used to chase sunken submarines. The 15,000 horsepower engines of battleships could be used as derricks, by clamping a steel cable of sufficient strength to one of the main propeller shafts aft of the main engine.

MR. KELLOGG HAS worked out his plan with engineering knowledge, and the navy might consider it. Battleships are great floating power houses, and could be made instantly available as floating derricks.

THE "METHODIST YEAR book for 1928" discusses important changes in Methodist ministers; they no longer wear beards or rock coats. You could not imagine Moody or any other anybody without a beard and a top hat on, with a paper lip shaved. But Billy Sunday, who has saved thousands since Moody and Sankey saved tens of thousands, "microbes" are a class who doctors are used to treat them, carrying germs from one patient to another.

THE SMOOTH FACE, originally made popular by Alexander the Great, has come to stay. Alexander shaved and ordered his soldiers to do so. The smooth might be the only way to handle a man with a hand-to-hand struggle with short swords. Napoleon shaved, to the Alexander. How many absurd centuries will it take for a man to disappear naturally? It will happen through disease, while one had it in honor. You are then, very small, in the skeleton.

"THE CARES THAT in'eat the w' will no longer fold their tents like the Arabs, for the night is to be with advertising, instead of with advertising."

Germany leads and Britain follows in plans for night advertising on the sky. Airships 800 feet long, 100 feet high, will be sent up, covered with electric lights, advertising soap, newspapers, automobiles, anything.

The musing highbrow, expecting to see Orion's belt, "sinking slowly to the west," will find Orion blotted out by advertisements of suspenders.

OFFERING REWARDS FOR dead men is dangerous, and tempting. Texas banks offered $5,000 apiece for bank robbers, dead, "not a cent if captured alive." C. C. Baze, deputy sheriff, admits he shot two Mexicans dead in front of a Stanton, Tex., bank. He hoped to convince the bank that he had killed robbers and get $5,000 apiece for his corpses. The men were innocent.

Offering a reward for "corpses only" seems open to criticism.

THE AVERAGE AMERICAN drinks, on festive occasions, anything given him. The cautious man who has his bootleg purchases analyzed, must not do that any more. Prohibition Commissioner Duran says chemists, testing liquor for poison violate the liquor law, and will be locked up.

WHEN OLD JOHN Hennessy, copy reader on the Times for George Jones long ago, raised the pot at poker he would say, "The only way to discourage vice is to make it expensive."

Perhaps the best way to discourage bootlegging is to make it dangerous.

IN OLD DAYS whisky killed the so-called "lower classes," because they drank the worst whisky. Now bootleg whisky kills, quickly or slowly, the so-called "better classes" that can afford $6 a bottle for poison.

THE GREAT PAINTER Romney, a receipt in his brother's handwriting proves it, was glad to paint a portrait for eight guineas, $42. One of his portraits, of Lady Hamilton, Lord Nelson's good friend, bought by Mr. Huntington from Sir Joseph Duveen is sold for 1000 times the price Romney got.

REYNOLDS PORTRAIT of "Richard Barwell and His Young Son" in New York, and might be bought for $200,000. Reynolds' portrait of Samuel Johnson is worth even more. That would surprise old Johnson, who got 250 for his Rasseaus. These are the easy money days.

MIGHT BE THE DIFFERENCE

TAMPA TIMES

History tells us that when the first steel ship was under construction wisecracks observed that only a fool would try to make metal float. But there were no greater fools than those who but a few years ago scoffed at the idea of making ships of metal. Virtually all airplanes are now made of metal.

The gradual change from wood to metal was largely due to the fear of a world shortage of the special types of timber suitable for the exacting demands of aircraft construction. But the advantages of metal over wood soon made themselves evident.

Incidental to this change has been the development, as the result of a great deal of experimental work of metal hulls for flying boats. In this particular direction the most suitable material has been found to be not steel, but one of the aluminum alloys, such as Duralumin. Hulls made of these metals are 500 pounds lighter than those made of wood and do not absorb moisture, which sometimes adds as much as 400 pounds to the wooden hull.

The result of this combined saving, amounting to a total of 900 pounds, is that the service range of the machine, carrying the same crew and armament, is increased by the striking figure of 200 miles. A metal-hulled commercial plane of similar size would be able to carry six passengers more than a wooden-hulled machine of otherwise identical characteristics. This might be the difference between a successful military invasion by air and between a profitable and unprofitable commercial line.

If it's Loneliness that you want May 1928 Bring You Happiness And Prosperity

There are certainly two ways of finding solitude—of being effectually cut off from quick reach of friends and the agencies that mean so much to us. One is to head east or west on a transoceanic flight, while the other is to keep house without a telephone. But it happens that few persons deliberately seek loneliness—that is why almost everybody has a telephone and long distance flying is left to the adventurous minority.

Miss Louise Fields Bride Of C. E. Davis In Home Ceremony

A quiet yet most impressive wedding was that of Sunday morning at 9:15 o'clock when Miss Effie Louise Fields became the bride of Carrie Edmund Davis, the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride, "The Gables" on Magnolia Avenue, with Rev. W. P. Buhman officiating using the ring ceremony. The ceremony was witnessed by the immediate family and a few intimate friends.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with all kinds of greenery, as well as bowls of poinsettias and red roses. The colors of red and green were effectively carried out in every detail.

The bride was attired in a smart model of blue satin back crepe with trimming of crepe, and worn with a chic hat of gold lace. Her flowers were a corsage of pink roses and ferns.

Immediately following the ceremony the young couple left in their car for Orlando where they will make their home.

Mrs. Davis is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Perry Fields, and has made Sanford her home all her life. She attended the public schools of Sanford.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Davis of Orlando. He formerly lived at Statesboro, Ga., but for the past three years has made Orlando his home. He attended the University of Hawaii at Honolulu where he was a member of several fraternities.

Their many friends will join in wishing them every future happiness.
