Soccer Club 'perfect' for World Cup training

By VICKI DeSORMIER Herald Staff Writer

Memorial Day: In memory of those who died in service

Flag seeks respect

Remember Me

Some people call me Old Glory, others call me the Star Spangled Banner, but whatever they call me. I am your flag, the flag of the United States of America. I remember some time ago people lined up on both sides of the street to watch the parade and naturally, I was always there, proudly waving in the When your daddy saw me coming, he immediately removed his hat and placed it over his heart. Remember? And you. I remember you standing there straight as a sailor. You didn't have a hat but you were giving the right salute. Remember your little sister? Not to be outdone, she was saluting the same as you, with her hand over her heart. Remember?

What happened? I'm still the same old flag. Oh, I've added a few more stars since you were a boy, and a lot of blood had been shed since those parades of long ago. But I don't feel as proud as I used to when I came down your street. You just stand there with your hands in your pockets. I may get a small glance, but then you look away. See the children

Uncontrollable weed poses problems

CHATTAHOOCHEE - Lake Seminole, famed for bass fishing, is being choked by a weed that is a blessing to bass anglers and a threat to aquatic life.

Almost 80 percent of the lake is infested with hydrilla, an aquatic plant that can grow an inch a day.

There are no natural controls in this country, so it goes ernzy," said Joe Kight, a wildlife biologist with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers near this northern Florida town not far from the Georgia-Alabama border.

Kight will spend about four weeks this spring using chemicals to attack hydrilla and three other troublesome weeds. The eradication will cost about $680,000.

The corps has used herbicides for eight years in a small section of the lake and plans to try hydrilla-eating Asian carp, possibly as early as next year.

First the corps will have to figure out a way to contain the carp. Otherwise, they might escape and devour marsh grass in Florida's Apalachicola Bay, an important breeding ground for Russ Ober, a fisheries biologist with the Georgia Department of Natural Resources in Albany, said carp would be cheaper than chemicals and possibly safer for the environment.

Experts predict bumper blueberry crop

ALACHUA - Growers down the middle of the state may harvest 1,000 acres of blueberries this year, Florida's biggest blueberry crop ever, experts say

"When I go to sleep at night, that's all I see at night is blueberries," said Lynn Goodwin, who helps manage Caluka

In 1983, Florida had 82 blueberry farms. Five years later, the number had doubled while the acreage tripled. But last year's flerce March winter storm squashed the 1993 crop. A crop valued at $3.7 million in 1992 sank to $1.3 million

The windy and freezing weather came as a blow to the industry, which times its harvest to produce berries before states like North Carolina and Georgia begin their harvests.

Production in Florida winds down in June, which means the state can dominate the April and early May market for blueberries, according to Paul Lyrene, a horticulturalist at the University of Florida.

Timing production to get higher prices, however, means living with a greater risk that freezes after March 1 will ruin the

Couple identified as fraud suspects

FORT LAUDERDALE - Kevin and Clair Sanders were regarded by co-workers at Pompano Beach's Mr. Fish as a competent, pleasant couple.

But the FBI says those identities were phony. They are really Robert Lagare, 39, and Rhoda Bolton, 43, fugitives for a year following a May 1993 63-count federal indictment in Alexandria, Va., alleging they defrauded nine investors out of $420,000, according to the FBI.

On Sunday morning, Pompano Beach police arrested them at work at Mr. Fish and transported them to the Broward County Jail to await extradition to Virginia.

Police got plenty of help making the nab. They received about a dozen tips telling them where Lagare and Bolton worked and lived after "America's Most Wanted" aired a segment about their alleged financial scams on Saturday night. In Virginia, Lagare and Bolton Wihed and dined their victims and took them to beach resorts to persuade them to invest they promised would provide a quick return, said Pompano Beach Police spokeswoman Sandra King.

Six arrested after teen assaulted

FORT LAUDERDALE - A 16-year-old girl was slammed into a railing at a teen dance club and sexually assaulted on the dance floor by six men as a crowd watched the dazed girl struggle, police said.

'We don't have any indication that anyone had tried to stop them," Broward County Sheriff's Sgt. William Robshaw said. The melee at the Heart Of the City club in Fort Lauderdale. which serves no alcoholic beverages, began about 3:20 a.m.

At least two suspects told detectives the girl had been dancing in a provocative manner. "But you have to take their statements with a grain of salt." Robshaw said. "She was dancing with some fellow, he got unhappy with her for some reason, (and) he hit her head up against a railing." Broward County Sheriff's spokesman Ott Cefkin said. "He attacked her along with five other fellows who didn't even know each other."

The girl, whose underwear was torn off, was assaulted by the young men, but was not raped, Cefkin said.

After the girl regained her senses, she rushed out to the club's parking lot and told two sheriff's deputies what had happened.

Lawmakers expenses

Legislators pay for space, travel, and memberships

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE - Florida shelled out nearly $3 million in expense money for legislators last year, according to figures compiled by the Joint Legislative Management Committee.

Except for travel to obviously partisan events which has to be paid for out of legislators' own pockets or re-election campaign funds, lawmakers have wide discretion with their office accounts.

So taxpayers on both sides of the abortion question helped finance the dues of one state lawmaker to the National Abortion League and another to the National Right to Life Committee.

Financial reports show lawmakers used the money to subscribe to magazines, get photographs taken with constituents, buy coffee and cable TV for their offices, buy lunch at political clubs. And, of course, there's always office rent and travel expenses.

The 120 members of Florida's House get $1,500 monthly for expenses. The state's 40 senators get $1,750 a month, plus another $250 if they have to hire temporary help.

Twenty-five members returned $57,000 in unspent allowance.

The joint legislative committee issued new rules effective in January to detail what can be cited as an expense. Coffee and bagels for a staff meeting are not allowed but a coffee pot or ice-water jug for office visitors is allowed.

Cable TV can be connected to a legislator's local office, but only basic Answering machines and beepers can be billed to the state, but only if they're hooked up to the number that rings in a lawmaker's office. Scores of lawmakers, including Senate President Pat Thomas, charge the state for space in their private business offices.

Thomas, D-Quincy, bills the state $700 a month for his district office, a large space at the rear of his insurance agency. Rep. Randy Mackey, D-Lake City, charged $600 a month for a small home he uses as an office, which he said his father owns.

Thomas said the state and IRS agreed $700 a month was appropriate, based on square footage.

Like some other legislators, Thomas said he deliberately forgoes some expense class because it's too much trouble to keep tri

'I don't turn in car expense," Thom said. "I just can't keep up with it."

Rep. Keith Arnold, D.Fort Myers, do turn in his travel expenses, including a tr to the White House for the receptle honoring the Florida State football team I its first national championship. Arnold, wh graduated from Florida State in 1981, the flew to Miamt for a reception with Presiden Clinton and the first lady.

Arnold reported spending $287 for his tri to Washington with the Seminoles an another $400 for airfare and incidents expenses on the Miami trip.

In his expense report, Arnold said h discussed immigration policy and healt care with the Clintons while they were in

Admiral: Haiti blockade working

By JOHN PACENTI

Associated Press Writer

GUANTANAMO NAVAL BASE, Cuba - The U.S.-led blockade of Haiti has cut down on ship traffic to the tiny nation. but smaller boats have been able to sneak past with vital supplies. says the admiral in charge of the blockade

Rear Admiral John J. Mazach said Sunday he didn't have exact figures but "the inbound traffic has gone down an awful

"The larger-type ships ... aren't coming here any more." Mazach said. "What we're seeing is the smaller boats running the coastline.

The Navy's answer is a hightech version of the patrol (PT) boats of World War II now called PCs or Cyclones. The first two of as many as 13 — Cyclone I and Tempest - arrived last week at he naval base on porch, 90 miles from Haiti.

The ships have an eight-foot draft, allowing them to go into shallow waters, and companion high-speed rafts which can follow a suspect vessel even closer to the coast.

Economic sanctions against Haiti to force its military to step down and restore democracy first went into effect last Novem-

The measures have largely been unsuccessful because fuel is funneled in from neighboring Dominican Republic and blockade runners easily slip their boats through the web of Navy and Coast Guard ships,

Last week, the U.S. increased its presence to 12 ships including eight American war ships - to stop such activity and began pressuring the Dominican Republic to close its border.

But an hour before an increased worldwide ban against Halti took effect May 21, a Bahamian tugboat ignored a shot fired over its bow and port of Jacmel with at least 400 50-gallon barrels of fuel.

Another vessel, a Panamantan cargo ship also carrying fuel, did heed a warning shot days later.

Control of the ships in the blockade has been moved to the USS Wasp, an amphiblous assault vessel with a Marine contingent of 650 aboard. Mazach dented the Wasp is gunboat diplomacy despite routine training exercises scheduled off the base this week.

'What we're doing is what the U.S. government has asked us to do and that is enforce the embargo," Mazach said. "What that means to the folks in Hatti and the folks in Washington is beyond our scope.

The Wasp holds 19 helicopters and numerous high-tech transportation vehicles and is de-signed to land armies unit equipment on beachheads quickly, it also contains some of the best medical facilities the Navy has to offer. "We were little surprised by all this." said Marine Lt. Col. Martin Peatross, commander of the helicopter squadron, of the recent deployment. "We were taken aback because once we came down here, everybody thinks there's an invasion of Hattl."

Certainly, the Marines, stationed near Jacksonville, N.C., didn't seem too stressed.

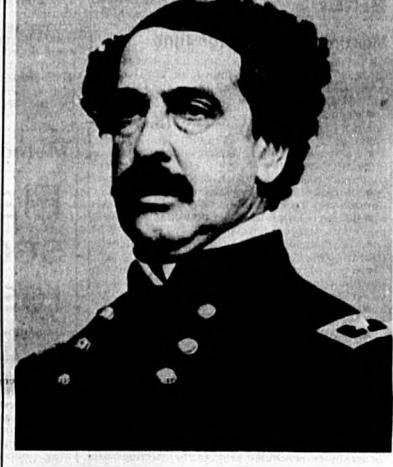

"It's just a Caribbean cruise," said PFC Thomas Varndell of Morgantown, Va.

Others expressed concern for Half ' people, who have been withou elected president Jean Bertrand Aristide since a September 1991 coup. Meanwhile, the military continuously searches out and kills Aristide supporters.

"I don't think it's right that they have no human rights." said Lance Cpl. Eric Barwett of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Way Back When

Did he or didn't he! This is the man some tolks credit for inventing America's national pastime * baseball. He is Abner Doubleday, one of Abraham Lincoln's Union Army generals during the Civil War. Some folks say the game was invented by A.G. Spaulding who later founded one of America's great sporting goods companies. There are also those in England who claim baseball evolved in that country from a children's game called "Rounders." Then again, back as early as 2,000 B.C. There were carvings of Egyptians playing ball in the tomb of Benl Hasan. A book on how to play the game was published around 1700. Oliver Wendell Holmes played baseball at Harvard in 1829. The New York Highlanders baseball club was founded September 23, 1845. The first game in which teams used uniforms was played June 19, 1846 in Hoboken, N.J. The great song "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" was actually written, copyrighted and published by the New York Music Company in 1908. It has always been fairly obvious Doubleday really didn't invent the game but Spaulding credited him for it anyway. The greatest change in the game in its long history came right here in Sanford in 1946 when the unwritten "colorline" barrier was broken by Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Jackie Robinson at this city's old Municipal Park.

Alcohol, drug charges filed

Matthew Michael Stewart, 21, 506 Country Club Road, Lake Mary, was charged with giving alcohol to a minor and possession of drug paraphernalia by Lake Mary Police.

Police reported that they found Stewart and two girls, ages 15 and 16, in his truck in an undeveloped area of Timacuan. There were open bottles of alcohol in the vehicle from which the girls admitted they had been drinking. They told officers in Hewart had purchased the alcohol for them.

Police said they searched the vehicle as a part of the arrest vial showed a slight presence of drugs. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and

Memorial Day, 1994

Today is a day of remembrance. Memorial day, contrary to Armed Forces Day and Veterans Day, is dedicated to the memory of those who gave their lives for our country.

Many have died in actual battle during this nation's many wars and conflicts. Others have died because of war wounds. Still others mhnaged to survive the years, but have now left us after serving in either war or peace.

Sanford observed the event with the traditional parade down E. First Street to Memorial Park on the lakefront. Members of area veterans organizations marched together, or waited around the flagpole for their comrades.

Some were moved by the pagentry of the occasion. Others were inspired by the words of the guest speaker. For a few, there were tears connected with the firing of the 21 gun

Only those who may have lost a father. grandfather, or other relative as a result of military service, may join with the older Americans in this observance.

One of the key points today is the freedom we enjoy. While people seem to relish finding fault with our various government bodies and their policies, there is still no better nation in

We may be concerned about having some of our freedoms taken away, but no other eduntry has more freedom.

It is for this freedom that our men and women gave the ultimate sacrifices. It is because of this that each of us should take a moment, an hour, or longer, to give thanks

Our very lives today are-a direct result-of those who fought to protect their families and loved ones then, as well as our offspring of the

Perils of government-supported art

A recent calendar of coming attractions at the widely respected Walker Art Center in Minneapolis included this caveat concerning performance artist Ron Athey: "Due to the nature of this material, viewer discretion is advised."

A curious reader would also have learned from the calendar that Athey uses "bondage and discipline techniques," along with "crotte torture, religious iconography and medical paraphernalia.

It was later revealed - and may well be mentioned in Congress during the next round of appropriation hearings for the National Endowment for the Arts — that $150 of NEA funds helped pay for this performance.

The unforgettable evening with Ron Athey was more fully described by Mary Abbe, a Minneapolis Star Tribune staff writer. Athey, she wrote, had acupuncture needles woven through the scalp of his shaved head by two female assistants as "he pierced his arm with 30 hypodermic needles and sliced a design into the back of fellow performer Darryl Carlton.

"Bloodstained towels (were passed) over the audience on clotheslines, and Athey drummed while two female assistants danced until bells sewn to their skin broke free and blood oozed out."

forced to attend, and since anyone there who was repelled could leave, free expression and free will would seem to have been served. On the other hand, is there an obligation for an art center to more fully prepare its clientele about an event that, as they used to say in Boston, might frighten the horses? For instance, the body piercing, cutting and bleeding.

Tribune quoted John Killacky, the art center's curator of performing arts, as saying that Athey "is known to be HIV-positive." And Athey has said so himself.

Some members of the audience were then concerned about the bleeding over their heads that night. A sculptor complained to the state health department, which assured him that there had been no danger of exposure to the HIV virus. These apprehensions were condemned as homophobic by some of the supporters of the show, and the Walker's John Killacky ascribed such fears to "AIDS hysteria."

Still, those members of the audience, uninformed about AIDS though they may be, might have wanted to know more about that enchanted evening before they had decided to come.

The National Endowment for the Arts can't be expected to review the advance calendars of the institutions it supports, but comments about the Ron Athey evening by the NEA's new chairman, Jane Alexander, were rather complacent. "Not all art is for everybody," she blithely told Jacqueline Trescott of The Washington Post.

At what point are some works no longer art? There is no authoritative answer, but not to disclose that someone has the HIV virus. Yet, everyone who disdains "erotic forture" is an enemy of the First Amendment or the NEA.

Should government fix health care?

Come on now! Quit mumbling and speak up so we can all hear you. What? You have a what? A what??

You have an inalienable right to first class medical care! Good heavens to mergatroid, sir or madam as the case may be, I didn't know that. Where did you get "that" right from? Hey! You're starting to mumble again. Slow down and speak clearly. You're talking at about 360 w.p.m. (that words per minute) and, unfortunately. I listen, absorb and comprehend at about 180 w.p.m. Easy does it now!

'You heard...Mr. Clinton...say that...on...network TV." Hey! That was great. I understood every word. Now, which Mr. Clinton was that? Oh! Mr. Clinton of the D.C. Clintons. Ok! Now I'm with you. Correct me if I'm wrong. but I thought he said that every American should have the "access" to "affordable" medical care or something like that. Is that somewhere in the ball park? You think so! Good.

Now that we both agree on what we think we heard, please permit me an observation or two. First, let me clarify something. Listen up now. I have a question that needs an answer from you folks and here it comes. "Precisely what do you think medical care is, or should be, here in the good old U.S. of A.?"

Easy now! Not everybody at once, please. Yes. I know I have two cars but I have only one brain anchored between these two ears and it does not compute at that high speed input. Yes...Yup...Uh-huh...Very interesting...Is that a fact?...Wow, no fooling!...Are you serious?...Oh, my, you can't be serious!

Okay folks, you covered the question like a blanket. Thank you most sincerely. And now for the first observation.

"Medical care" is a service/product created by mankind to be sold at a profit. It is not that dissimilar to peas, beans and corn currently stocked in the local supermarkets and available In various amounts and types...and - hold onto your hats - "prices." Medical care is available in doctor's offices, clinics, hospitals and drugstores and is available in various amounts and types and - grab your hats again "prices." In other words, my good friends, just as we have "access" to peas, beans and corn sold at a profit, we do have "access" to medical care - sold at a profit. Both are available in various amounts, types and "prices"...widely

And that leads us to the area of "affordability," a highly controversial - almost totally volatile subject. Before we get any deeper into this, I must ask additional questions. Sorry, but it's really necessary. Ready or not, here we

"How many of you wonderful people out there in never-never land own and drive a Cadillac, a Lincoln or an Imperial?" I see! A few hands here and there. "How about a private airplane?" Fewer hands, by golly. "How about a seagoing yacht?" Hey! Where did all the hands go? "Now - how about a Plymouth, Ford or Chevrolet?" Holy smoke - a bloomin' sea of hands. You'd almost think I asked who wanted an ice cream

Ever ask yourself why? Why so many Plymouths, Fords and Chevrolets and so few Cadillacs, Lincolns and Imperials and even fewer airplanes and seagoing yachts? Could it possibly be "affordability"? Make book on it!

Yes, my friends, I agree wholeheartedly with you. Overall medical care is much too expensive. Remember when the government 'fixed" the Bell System? Costs up and everything else down. How about when they "fixed" the Postal Service? Costs up and service down. And you want the government to "fix" our medical care. You've gotta be "out-of-your-

On Humane Society

I have noticed that you have given the Humane Society of Seminole County some bad press and I think you are being unfair. For some time I have been looking for an orange and white tabby kitten. They had a litter of seven that had just arrived with the mama cat and it had three orange kittens, one of which was orange and white. I went up to see them and they told me they do not allow pre-adoption. I went up to see the kittens once or twice a week and Rachel, Heldl and Lorrie could not have been nicer. I spoke to Barry Black, the director several times in my visits.

I wanted that kitten so much and they knew it. Due to my frequent visits I knew the day the kitten would go up for adoption and they saw to it he was mine. The day I picked him up Heldi gave him a bath and spent time making sure he dld not have any fleas.

The personnel could not have been any nicer to me. The kitten came home well cared for and clean. The following day I took him to my vet. they gave him a clean bill of health. I wanted the kitten so bad but Rachel would not release him until he was eight weeks old. She said he had to be eight weeks or two pounds and eight weeks came first. She stuck to the rules.

As frequently as I visited the Humane Society. I found all personnel to be pleasant and the animals to be well taken care of. This says a lot for the facility they have to work with. I did visit the new Orange County facility and they are most fortunate to have such a nice place. Please give Seminole County Humane Society a good word in your paper for me as they deserve it.

Save Navy base

With the headlines proclaiming "Pentagon gets NTC property while city begs for input" and the city crying "they could sell it out from under us," should not red flags be going off that perhaps we are just another in a long line of communities across the country that are having the best laid re-use plans put aside by Pentagon wishes while the electorate proclaims "why we weren't told."

Instead of the city of Orlando and the city of Winter Park musing over who will recieve the NTC golf course, perhaps they should be joining those of us who continue the fight to save the

This effort is in support of Senator Arlen Specier's challenge in the Supreme Court (supported by Congressman Bill McCollum and others) which maintains the Department of the Navy failed to provide complete, accurate, and in some cases any, information to the base closure committee. This violated the 1990 "Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act" which was enacted to assure fair and nonpolitical closures. Is asking the government to live up to its own laws too great a request?

What we are not being told is that the base re-use commission's offering of customs agencies and VA hospitals amount to nothing more than "memos of understanding" subject to funding and government approval. Leases, if you will, subject to change at any time in the future and entered into without the baseline survey on base contamination due out in June which estimates cleanup at 4 to 7 years. If they would but put their considerable time, money, and talents to the ongoing effort to save the

The city's arguments that spending money to save the third largest employer (NTC) in the community is money wasted, pales when compared to the $1 million plus on World Cup soccer (already predicted to be a loser), almost as much in poor performance payoffs at the uirport, a $25 million computer system failure. $750,000 in Christmas bonuses - need I go on? If saving the base is money wasted than I, as a laxpayer, feel it is money better wasted!

Why are our elected officials not on the steps of the Supreme Court supporting elected officials in other states who apparently feel the livelihood and economic welfare of their communities are more important than sporting events, sports franchises and poor performance payoffs, Go figuref

North Korea crashing the nuclear club

WASHINGTON - Republicans meet for lunch every Tuesday in a small dining room off the Senate floor for an hour of strategizing. story- telling and political gossip, Last Tuesday the talk turned to a madman who may already have his finger on the nuclear

In a chilling message to colleagues on the eve of Memorial Day, Sen. John McCain, R. Ariz., warned that a major war with North Korea is inevitable unless America finds a way to deter Kim II Sung, a dictator bent on crashing the nuclear club and unleashing weapons around the world. From 1985 to 1992. North Korea shipped more than $2.5 billion in arms to some of terrorism's best friends - Iran

and Syria, to name

Last Tuesday the talk turned to a madman who may already have his finger on the nuclear button.

Amid the picnics and parades - when heroes from the battle of Gettysburg to the Gulf War are honored - a psychopath in Pyongyang is talking about turning South Korea into a "sea of fire." And someday it just may be an American fight.

In a compelling 14-page analysis of the brewing crisis, McCain explains the American vital interest: "... The eventual outcome of North Korea's pursuit of nuclear status will be a world where the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction explodes exponentially; where, in a never ending spiral of escalation. all Asian powers capable of producing nuclear weapons do so and the most trresponsible, terrorist regimes in the world have the capacity to intimidate... where the United States itself might be the victim of a terrorist attack - like the bombing of the World Trade Center - only this time the weapon of choice will be a nuclear bomb."

This is a scary scenario for an administration whose forte is not foreign affairs. Sometimes it even seems like the administration suffers from attention deficit disorder in dealing with foreign policy, just as George Bush did on domestic affairs. Where's the focus or follow-through? North Koreans were watching during the back-flips on Bosnia, the hypocrisy on Hatti, and the cut-and-run on

It's hard to scapegoat Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who, at least until recently, was forced to grovel for a weekly White House appointment with Clinton.

Nor can Defense Secretary William Perry be blamed. McCain and Perry are on the same page when it comes to preempting North Koren by acting sooner rather than later. "Whatever risks we are facing by actions we take today," said Perry, "I believe they would be less than the risks we would face if we tried to face their program two years from now, after they had developed a substantial inventory of nuclear bombs and missiles for their delivery vehicles."

McCain could have written Perry's remarks. McCain, for example, responds to the popular suggestion that the United States refrain from any response that might provoke the North to launch a military attack with a rhetorical question: "Would an attack be more or less likely after North Korea acquires a nuclear arsenal and after it has completed its production of bullistic missiles capable of delivering nuclear warheads to Tokyo?"

A Vietnam war hero who has emerged as one of the most influential military authorities in Congress, McCain is nonetheless one of the most doveish members of the Senate. He is sharply critical of U.S. intervention except where American vital interests are in peril.

As for the fears the Americans have expressed in the possibility of hooligantsm maring the games. Delancy again blames an uninformed press

"I watched a show on television the other night that dealt with hooliganism and what I saw had nothing to do with the World Cup." he said. "Those shots they showed had nothing to do with World Cup soccer."

Soccer is an emotional sport, he said, but the World Cup matches have never been marred by fan violence.

In addition, he said, the Irish and the national team of Ireland recently squared off in a match and there was "not one incldent" in the stands. There was some concern in the American press that the meetings of the extremist fans from those countries would spark violence in the stands.

The Irish fans who follow their national team across the Atlantic next month are not coming just for the matches. Delaney said, they will come to Seminole County to watch them train.

WINTER PARK - For one last time, the senior due of Andre Scott and Bernard Spatrow competed together and shined as teammates. At the same time, juniors Belinder Morgan and Katina Perry gave notice of what to expect from them in the future.

The Seminole High School foursome competed against some of the best competition this hemisphere has to Saturday night in the 18th annual Golden South Classic track meet at Showalter Field and showed they belonged there. Not that there should have been any doubt concerning their credentials. Scott, the best high school triple jumper in the nation the last several years, won the event Saturday with a leap of 53 feet, 4 inches. Sparrow, a two-time defending state champion competition Saturday with a throw of 60 feet. 21/2 inches. He also finished third in the javelin (159-11) and sixth in the discus (153-5). In their four years at Seminole High School,

Scott and Sparrow helped the Tribe boys win two team state championships (1992 and 1993).

Two weekends ago, Morgan and Perry led the Seminole girls to the Class 4A state crown. On Saturday, Morgan won the triple jump with aneffort of 36-1034 while Perry took third in the shot put with a heave of 39-314.

Andretti's ride pales in comparison to real road trips

John Andretti achieved true Road Warrior status Sunday.

After beginning the day by making 196 laps around Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Andretti then took two helicoptor rides and a quick trip by jet to go around Charlotte Motor Speedway some 220 times.

And at that, he didn't go as far as he'd planned. After coming in 10th in the Indianapolis 500. Andretti had hoped to finish the Coca-Cola 600 and complete a "never been done" automotive doubleheader.

As it was, a busted camshaft 320 miles into the Coca-Cola NASCAR race ended Andretti's bid, but he still managed to cover 820 miles.

To give you a rough idea, that's the equivalent of making the round trip from the Lake Monroe bridge west along Interstate 4 to downtown Tampa and back four times.

The thought of doing it once today is enough to make me shake my head in dismay. And my family and I will be doing it in the relative air-conditioned comfort of our little sedan, not in the howling monsters Andretti had to wrestle at speeds exceeding 170 miles an hour. When making an motor trip to Massachusetts (approximately a 1,400-mile ride), we'll try to put about 800 miles or so behind us on the first day, which puts us somewhere in mid-North Carolina.

To do that, we need to put in 12 to 13 solid hours of time on the road.

That means on the road by 6 a.m. and (allowing stops for meals, snacks, and other necessities, pulling off about 9 p.m.

Andretti covered roughly the same distance in less than eight hours (and that includes the two hours that it took him to get from Indianapolis to Charlotte).

That's taking the holiday ritual of a day trip by car to an extreme.

As impressive as it may sound, Andretti's Sunday drive takes on mortal proportions when compared to the demands we face when hitting the road for the holiday.

· Even though speedway racing largely consists of going around in circles - granted, circles with circumferences of 11/2 miles (Charlotte) or 21/2 miles (Indianapolis) - it has nothing on the Florida interstate system as far as repetitious roadside scenery is concerned.

According to an Associated Press story, Andretti's nourishment between the Indy 500 and Coca-Cola 600 consisted of fluids administered intravenously, which sounds infinitely more appetizing than the slop du jour available at the only food stops that I can find open on a holiday.

• While being behind the wheel for that length of time without the benefit of a radio for musical companionship is cruel and unusual punishment as far as I'm confused, Andretti didn't have any children asking "Are we there yet?" for the duration of the trip, so I guess it's an even tradeoff.

 Since all he had to do was go down and hang a left. Andretti didn't have someone constantly complaining. "You know we're lost. Would it kill you to stop and ask for directions?

 And at least he had a parking spot waiting for him.

Al Jr. may not have needed the loophole to bring the family total to nine Indys - four for Big Al. three for Uncle Bobby, two for him in the last three years. He also had the misfortune of rival and teammate Emerson Fittipaldi and a fleeting thought back to their last side-by-side dash to Indy's checkered flag.

That was five years ago, and it was Unser going into the wall off Fittipaldi's wheel then. This time, caught in Unser's turbulence as he tried a pass with 15 laps to go, runaway leader Fittipaldi banged the fourth-turn wall and coasted to a stop along the straightaway. There was no one else who could catch Unser. "The lap before, when he actually passed me, the same l thing happened to me that ended up getting him." Unser said. The turbulence got me. It just washes out the front end and the thing just doesn't turn anymore. I had to get on the brakes hard because it was definitely headed right toward the wall. I barely made it." But he did. "And I saw him lift the fence and I felt bad," Unser said. He paused and added; "For a sec-

The win came on the 55th birthday of his father, who retired two weeks ago and took a victory lap with his son. "I was happy that we were able to give him a birthday present that he said was the only thing he wanted." Little Al said. "He said that was the best present he could ever receive. and I thank the good Lord for giving me the chance to give that to my dad." He also had plenty of reason to thank Mercedes-Benz, which sponsored the program after Penske found a loophole that enabled him to build an engine with 20 percent more boost than his competitors. "We took what was available to us, as we do when we look at the size of our wing and we look at the underpod and the weight of the ear. And we try to come up with the most competitive package," Penske said, "And I'll tell you, this was a risk,"

A risk with a million-dollar payoff, though.

The Mercedes, which was allowed a higher turbocharger boost because of its stock block-type, push-rod construction, was able to develop some 150 more horsepower than conventional engines and proved as dominant as everyone expected. Fittipaldi was the fastest driver through three weeks of practice. though Unser started from the pole position when he got better weather in qualifying.

RSVP offers safety program

The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program of Seminole County has joined the Area Agency on Aging and Better Living for Seniors in "Safety 1st."

Under this program, RSVP volunteers will be utilized to conduct in-home surveys of "at-risk seniors" to determine areas in the home that present a safety hazard to that senior. Recent statistics furnished by the Department of Elder Affairs have shown many at-risk seniors are forced to leave their home for hospitals and nursing homes due to in-home injuries that could be prevented with proper safety mechanisms such as bathroom grab-bars, non-slip devices in tubs and showers and Volunteers will be trained to conduct the home safety assessments during the month of June, with actual assessment taking place during the month of July. Volunteers will also be needed to go into the homes to correct the safety deficiencies once the assessments have been completed.

RSVP members, or anyone 55 and over, who would like to participate in this worthwhile "Summer of Safety" project can call either Gloria Black or Nancy Nolt at the RSVP program.

Nature uses different language Most species rely on chemical signals

Master Gardener

Much of what people learn in life is conveyed through the eyes and ears. As a result people have long been blind to the chemical communication that rules the rest of the natural world. Nature has already evolved a complex messenger system. Most species rely on chemical signals to tell them where to go and how to behave. The young field of chemical ecology scientists are now focusing on the extraordinary diversity of chemical languages found in the animal and plant kingdoms. They are studying chemicals that alarm, chemicals that seduce, or repel or persuade. In any single species they are finding that the chemical vocabulary can be extremely rich, telling not only the location of a potential partner but, for example, whether that partner is a virgin or a vamp, an industrious provider or a loser whose cupboards are bare.

In a recent two-day meeting in Ithaca. N.Y., researchers spoke of lobsters that repeltheir rivals by using urinary chemicals which they excrete through glands located beside the shelifish's antennae. They spoke of the chemical constitutents of the toxin in the whip scorpion's tall, a lethal brew of caprylic acid, designed to dissolve the hard cuticle of their prey insects, and acetic acid. to burn the soft tissues within.

Dr. James Tumlinson, a chemist at the Agricultural Research Center in Gainesville, began by studying the sex pheromones with which female moths attracted their mates.

Along the way he and his co-workers discovered bizarre variations. They found that the small California bolas spider (which uses a sticky little lasso to capture and rein in its prey) imitates the female moth's scent as a siren call, attracting males to fly toward it and its waiting noose. Most surprising they found a single species of bolas moth can mimic the pheromones of at least 16 different species of moth, each pheromone a complex and unique blend of chemicals.

Another example of trickery was found when the larval beetworm caterpillars attacked the leaves of, say, a cornstalk. Their saliva activated the plant, which began emitting chemicals like terpenes, the active ingredient in turpentine. Parasitic wasps picked up this signal and found their unwitting hosts. Cutting the leaves with a scissors did not cause the same response: only the caterpillar's mouthparts seem able to set off the alerting terpene mix.

The infested plant did not begin emitting the chemical signals at night when the caterpillars started feeding, but rather delayed the pheromone release till the following morning when the parasitic wasps were more apt to be out hunting. The damaged stalk also released the compound in sharp peaks, corresponding to the prime wasp hunting hours. Dr. Tumlinson thought this was an alarm system with the injured plants calling out for help. It certainly sounds like it.

Even more complex is the communication system of the ants. Within the last several years at least 25 previously unknwn soant species have been discovered. These spongy glands, on the abdomen, feet, and elsewhere, excrete chemically complex pheromones that serve as precise instructions for other ants.

For example, to induce fellow workers to join in foraging a discovered source of food the ant releases a recruitment pheromone from a gland in her abdomen. To direct the aroused workers toward the proper trail, she rubs the ground with a different abdominal gland, depositing a homing pheromone. To provide finer orientation information on the route she pressed down firmly with her feet as she walks, daubing out another flavor of Ants heighten the effectiveness of their chemical signals by simultaneously offering visual and tactile clues to their mates. For example, an ant will gesticulate wildly with the mock movements of a battling ant to increase the recruitee's enthusiasm for a fight - a reminder of the sensory richness of the insects's and animal's world beyond the chemical communications.

The subtext of chemical ecology is chemical preservation, the idea that the biological diversity of the tropics and other ecosystems should be maintained for a very prgamatic reason: because the forests and seas are ripe with new medications and other biological products still to be pro-

"There is no such thing as a trouble-free family,' Clinton told the kids at Kramer, drawing on his own experience. He added a homey observation that may be remembered longer than his best-crafted speech:

I recently quit smoking, and my thumb comes in handy when: I get the urge to smoke.

As a child, I was teased by close family members who knew I sucked my thumb. I was told that if I didn't stop sucking my thumb by the time I got married. I'd look silly walking down the church aisle with my thumb in my mouth.

My older brother used to tell me I'd grow up looking like Bugs Bunny, Well, I'm married now, and I don't resemble Bugs Bunny in the least!

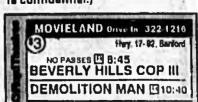

My husband has given me a lot of support in this. He says it doesn't bother him that I suck my thumb.

I don't walk up to somebody I've just met and say, "Guess what? I suck my thumb!" But if the subject comes up, I'll be the first to admit it.

So here's my response to "Embarrassed," who also sucks her thumb: "You are not alone. 1, too, thought I was the only grown person who sucked her thumb until several years ago. when read a letter in the Dear Abby column from a teen-ager who confessed she secretly sucked her thumb at night."

Aspirin therapy for pain of arthritis

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a lady in readers who would like a copy my 70s with arthritis. I know should send $2 plus a long, aspirin is often used for this self-addressed, stamped condition, yet I wonder if there is envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New a medication that would kill the York, NY 10163. Be sure to pain and attack the inflamma- mention the title.

DEAR READER: Aspirin remains the least expensive and most widely used medicine to treat the pain and stiffness of arthritis. Aspirin works, in part, by neutralizing the inflammation that accompanies most forms of arthritis.

Despite its availability and relative safety, however, aspirin can cause stomach upset, heartburn, gastric irritation, and peptic ulcers - sometimes with intestinal bleeding.

Also, it's not as powerful an anti-arthritic as prescription medications, such as Motrin, Voltaren, Feldene, Indocin, and others. Nonetheless, it acts the same way in the body as the prescription drugs.

Therefore, if aspirin (especially the enteric-coated variety that's supposed to be easier on the stomach) is adequate for your needs, use it. If you continue to have symptoms, consider changing to an over-the-counter ibuprofen product, such as Advil or Nuprin.

Should this therapy also be ineffective, you'll have to ask your doctor to prescribe one of the stronger anti-inflammatory drugs that I mentioned. Remember that the stronger the medicine, the more chance of side effects: The prescription compounds are more likely than aspirin to cause intestinal upset and bleeding.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Consumer Tips on Medicine." Other

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

There are certain ploys in bridge that work only against good players. For example, if you double a normal-looking game, what will the declarer assume? Right -- that you have all the missing trumps. If you have the nerve, double when everything is breaking favorably. With luck, declarer will misread the cards and go down in a contract he would have made easily without your double. (But don't tell me when it backfires.)

Today's deal occurred during a match between the Chinese women's team and a British team, played last October in Beijing. It looks impossible for South to go down in four spades doubled, but watch what happened.

The declarer was Robert Sheehan, who has represented Britain many times. He won the opening lead with dummy's club ace and led a low diamond to his 10, which held after East, Sun Ming, didn't split her honors. Declarer ruffed a club in the dummy, played a heart to his king and ruffed his last club with dummy's spade king. East discarded a heart.

If declarer now plays a spade to his ace, he cannot go down. Even if East has all five trumps, South can cash the diamond ace before exiting with a heart. He must score four spades, one heart, two diamonds, one club and two club ruffs.

However, Sheehan was confident of his reading of the situation. He led a spade to his nine. Now came the funny part. West, Wang Hongli, won with the 10 and returned her last heart. East took two heart tricks, West discarding her last diamond on the second. A diamond ruff by West defeated the contract!

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol YOUR BIRTHDAY May 31, 1994

In the year ahead, you might associate with more influential people than you have in the past. Try to cultivate these relationships, because they can provide you with opportunities that have been denied you until GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There are indications you may have neglected responsibilities to which you said you would attend. You had better get on them quickly before the boss gets on you. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone on whom you usually depend might not be around to ball you out today if you get in over your head. It's best that you at least be prepared to handle things on your own.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Usually you have a reasonable amount of self-approval, but this might not be true today. You may see yourself as an underdog in a competitive development where the odds are equal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you operate in an erratic manner in your commercial affairs today, you might make a big mistake that would be difficult to correct. Be patient, practical and explicit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't let an extravagant adviser influence your thinking in money matters today. What appears right for this person could be very wrong for you.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

Carefully weigh and analyze your alternatives in career matters today, but don't do so to the point of indecisiveness. In order to succeed, you must make judgments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There might be something you'll want to do today for a person who needs your help, but your incentive may not be strong enough if any inconvenience comes up.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Normally you're able to tolerate or at least cope with a demanding friend. Today, however, his/her requests might cause you to respond in an inordinately angry fashion. Be careful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

In competitive involvements today, put forth your best efforts at all times. If you are complacent or indifferent, you might finish far back in the pack. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Subdue inclinations today to contradict others merely for the sake of argument. Behavior of this nature could trigger something rather unpleasant. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be both cautious and practical in joint ventures today, or else you might find yourself operating from a weak position you misinterpreted as being strong and dominating.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your judgment might not be as acute as usual today. Steps you've taken may have to be retraced. Be prepared to have in your feet what you don't have in your head.
