Meeting rescheduled

LAKE MARY — A special meeting originally scheduled for 6 p.m. Thursday at Lake Mary City Hall has been rescheduled. The meeting was for further discussion of the city's proposed fiscal year 1994-95 budget.

Items which had been originally listed for consideration were the General Fund special projects, vehicle maintenance and Enterprise Fund operating capital projects.

City Clerk Carol Edwards said the matters will be carried forward to a special called city commission budget meeting already scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday Aug. 26.

The regular City Commission meeting will begin this Thursday at 7 p.m. at Lake Mary City Hall, 100 W. Lake Mary Blvd.

Walk Against Crime

The fourth annual Walk Against Crime is scheduled for Sept. 15 at Lake Eola Park. The one-hour fun walk is a charitable event to benefit CRIMELINE, 423 TIPS.

CRIMELINE is expecting 2,000 walkers this year. Last year, 1,275 walkers collected $28,000 in pledges. Area corporations, businesses and civic groups recruited walk teams.

Walkers who collect $25 or more receive an Official Walk T-Shirt.

The event benefits Central Florida's anonymous TIPS Hotline. Hotline citizens report crimes, remain anonymous and become eligible for cash rewards.

The Greater Orlando Association of Realtors and The Central Florida Phone Book are sponsors of this year's event.

For additional information on Crimeline, 423 TIPS and the event, call Jim Bishop at 423-8477.

Voters to consider referendum

Longwood voters will consider a referendum establishing the city police department in the city charter following approval of the staffing provisions by a 1 to 2 vote of the city commission Monday night.

Mayor Paul Lovstrand and commissioner Steve Miller voted against the staffing amendment while commissioners Harvey Smerison, Fred Pearl and Rex Anderson voted to approve the 22 officers for each 1,000 population minimum.

The mayor issued a proclamation declaring the candidate qualifying period and setting precinct voting places.

In other business, the commission overruled a ruling by the board of adjustment concerning the height of a sign. Strict guidelines were made in allowing Mount Investments on State Road 434 to keep a 35-foot sign okayed in error by city officials about four and a half years ago. At the time, the city required signs to be a maximum 25 feet. City officials denied a permit to change the sign, adding the new Hot 'N Now fast food outlet until the sign was brought into compliance to the city code.

Holy mackerel! What a catfish!

Catfish catch may be record

By NICK PFEIFAUER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — J.D. Jones of Sanford went fishing for catfish Monday, never dreaming he'd come closer to catching one by the tail.

To be certain, he would catch some fish, he used chicken liver as bait and fished from a small boat on the St. Johns River at Catfish Cove, on E. S.R. 46.

Jones caught more than he had bargained for. His catfish catch of the day, one fish, weighed in at 45 pounds. At once, a Catfish Cove fish measured 52 inches in length.

The fisher told me I probably had at least a 50-pounder, Jones said, but I have to check it out with many people before I can verify that.

Jones said he caught the large catfish using just a spinner and a relatively little rod.

It took about 25 minutes to bring him in, he said. By the time I had him, people had gathered all around me. It was like a carnival.

Many people told me I had hooked a gator, he added. And I told them a catfish can be that big, that I know what I had hooked.

Jones said he would give the fish to a game official for a donation. I certainly couldn't eat him, he commented. This catfish is so big, it would probably be like trying to chew on an old tire.

Buyer for scouts' camp?

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County might buy the Boy Scouts' camp David W. Hedrick in Geneva with Natural Lands Program bonds.

I think it would be great if Seminole County bought it, said Wayne Brock, scouting executive for the central Florida scouting council.

County planner Colleen Logan said the county Natural Lands Advisory Committee has toured the property and will recommend next month county commissioners purchase the 182-acre property. Logan said the committee has recommended a ranking in the top five target areas of the county because of its location adjacent to the Eronloch-Katchee River preservation area and blend of scrub and wetlands.

Tom Tulp of Coldwell Banker, agent for the property, said it is listed at $995,000.

Wetlands cleanup

State tests water, directs tree service

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Water sampling at the AAA Tree Service along with a plan to clean up wetlands at the site are being completed by Florida Department of Environmental Protection officials this week.

The tree service, owned by Henry Hardy Jr. and Mary D. Hardy, is under a civil court injunction to prevent the spreading of mulch and other debris into wetlands on the property located on CR 427 near Dog Track Road. Authorities claim that from April 1991 until July 1992, there was illegal dumping on the property affecting the wetland. A criminal case of illegal dumping against Hardy is pending in county court. A written plea in the case is expected by the next hearing date in September, according to assistant state attorney Beth Richard Rutberg.

The FDEP, formerly known as the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation, claims Hardy did not obtain a permit or authorization to dredge or fill in or over the surface water on the property.

Engineers unveil plan to widen County Road 46-A

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — This week, Seminole County engineers will present their plans to widen County Road 46-A between Interstate 4 and U.S. 416-60.

They will hold a public information meeting Wednesday at Idlewild Elementary School, 430 Alden Road. The presentation begins at 7 p.m.

County production engineer Frank VanPelt said construction to add two lanes to the road won't begin before 1996 and is expected to take 18 to 24 months to complete.

VanPelt said the project design has not been done. But the construction will require several homes along the roadway segment to be razed. The number and identity of those homes won't be known until designs are complete, he said.

VanPelt said the construction may also require razing a funeral home located along the roadway, Baldwin Lutz Child Oakland Funeral Home.

VanPelt said the county could straighten CR 46-A, which would move the roadway north of and preserve the funeral home. But VanPelt said that option would require filling a dry lakebed for the road, creating a potentially costly environmental permitting process.

1993 to 1997 could be good years to avoid the area. Not only will construction be underway on CR 46-A east of I-4, construction will also begin in 1996 to widen CR 46-A to four lanes west of I-4 to Orange Boulevard, a $10 million project. No homes are expected to be cleared for the project, VanPelt said.

Also, Lake Mary expects to be under construction with its own widening project. Rinehart Road from Lake Mary Boulevard to CR 46-A, about a $4 million project, City Engineer Bill Temby said construction on that project will be underway in 1996 or later. Rinehart Road will be widened to See Widen, Page 5A

Astrolabe from 1618 found

VERO BEACH — It's called an astrolabe, and was used for ocean navigation a few centuries back. One of those instruments has been buried in the waters north of Vero Beach for 375 years and divers found it this weekend embedded in a Spanish colonial wreck. The instrument was used by mariners aboard the galleon San Martin when it sunk in a 1618 storm, said P.T. Rampy, spokesman for Treasure Salvors Inc., of Sebastian, which unearthed the instrument from the Atlantic Ocean. "This is the only astrolabe that has ever been recovered in 30 years of salvage work on the Treasure Coast," Rampy said Monday. Though he could not place a value on the item immediately, Rampy said four astrolabes recovered from the galleon Atocha off Key West each sold for $380,000. The instrument is either brass or bronze and is well preserved, Rampy said. Old records identify the wreck as the Saint Martin. The 110-foot ship was built in Vizcaya, Spain.

Priest labels slaying as 'justifiable'

MOBILE, Ala. — A Roman Catholic priest wants to place an ad that labels the slaying of abortion doctors "justifiable homicide," a newspaper reported. The Rev. David Troesch, who heads St. John the Baptist Catholic Church in Magnolia Springs, designed the advertisement that shows a doctor about to perform an abortion, and another man with a gun pointed at the doctor. Two words accompany the drawing: "Justifiable Homicide." Troesch, 57, attempted to run the advertisement in the Mobile Press-Register last week, but the newspaper refused. "If 100 doctors need to die to save over 1 million babies a year, I see it as a fair trade," Troesch told the paper in an interview published Sunday in the Mobile Register. Earlier this year Dr. David Gunn, 47, was killed when he was shot three times as he entered a Pensacola, Fla., abortion clinic. Michael F. Griffin, an abortion protester, has been charged with first-degree murder for the March 10th shooting.

Publix penalized under child labor laws

LAKELAND — Publix Super Markets Inc. agreed to pay $500,000 in penalties to settle a federal investigation into violations of the child labor laws. The civil penalty is the latest the U.S. Labor Department has collected from supermarket chains over child labor infractions. It recently announced penalties of $1 million against Food Lion and $490,000 against the A&P chain. In the Publix case, the Lakeland-based chain admits it allowed minors to work more hours than permitted and to operate, load, unload or clean hazardous equipment such as paper balers and dough mixers, the labor department said.

Chiles takes violence, safety to classes

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles will appear in Florida classrooms this fall via a closed-circuit broadcast to talk about violence and safety, a spokesman said. Education Commissioner Betty Castor also plans to take part in the broadcast. School administrators and teachers are working on the project with Chiles' and Castor's offices. The broadcast will probably air sometime in the next couple of months.

Consumers overcharged

State investigators says some tire retailers inflating tax

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Some tire retailers in the state are charging customers a dollar more than what they are supposed to, than pocketing the rest, state investigators charged. Attorney General Bob Butterworth's office has been buying tires around the state and checking the bills to see if the $1-per-tire tax is being charged correctly. "We have found instances of people collecting more than what's authorized and the money disappearing," Deputy Attorney General Pete Antonacci told The Miami Herald for a story in today's editions. "Some of them say it costs additional money to dispose of tires," Antonacci said. "Our position is that's fine, but you can't call that a tax. You can't mislead people that Some of them say it costs additional money to dispose of tires. Our position is that's fine, but you can't call that a tax. You can't mislead people that way."

-Pete Antonacci

Except for one retailer, Butterworth's staff declined to reveal the names of other tire companies accused of overcharging customers for the state tax, but said there have been thousands of overcharges. The investigation started two months ago when Jack Norris, the attorney general's chief of consumer litigation, said he bought two tires at a Tire Kingdom store in North Miami Beach and questioned his bill when it included a $2 per tire "tax" and charges for a warranty he did not request. "I said these are add-ons I didn't ask for, and they said 'That's OK, just sign here ... this is standard,'" Norris said. "I had them take it off, but it was very uncomfortable." Eric Margolin, vice president and general counsel of Tire Kingdom, said bills clearly reflect the state's $1-per-tire tax and the company's separate $1 charge for legally disposing of old tires. State law says any tax overcharges are the property of the state. Tire companies that charged too much could be forced to pay the state the additional money, plus interests and fines.

Mobile homes: Hurricane fodder or Andrew's scapegoat?

By JOHN PACENTTI
Associated Press Writer

FLORIDA CITY — The mobile homes stretch as far as the eye can see. From the air, it's an eerie sight, as if this city south of Miami has peeled back time to where it was right before Hurricane Andrew leveled it last August. Activists, officials — and now a grand jury — say those living in these gargantuan trailer parks in South Florida are under an invisible, but real, specter of becoming a bull's eye for the next big hurricane. Those who are rebuilding the trailer parks in Dade County say the new "manufactured housing" being installed is safe and that the parks are under attack by local government as Andrew's scapegoat. "Almost a year after the storm, we're still being blasted," said Mark Riff, who owns and manages with his father, Mel Riff, the Goldcoaster mobile home park on the outskirts of Florida City. On Aug. 4, a Dade County grand jury called it "inexcusable" that county officials have ignored the threats posed by mobile homes. "The massive destruction of mobile homes by Hurricane Andrew appears to have been completely forgotten," the grand jury stated. "Those living in mobile homes remain in danger. Those now living near mobile homes remain at risk." County commissioners were on recess, and several who were in their offices didn't return phone calls. The 11-person panel in its 14-page report urged the county to ban mobile homes that don't meet a tougher federal standard set by the Department of Housing and Urban Development to begin later this year.

Government wants to deport man who it says lied about being Nazi guard

By Associated Press

NAPLES — A man now living near Naples faces deportation because the U.S. Justice Department said he was a Nazi guard whose orders included to shoot concentrate camp prisoners attempting to escape. Documents obtained Monday indicate Mathias Denuel told U.S. immigration officials in 1955 that he had served in the army and was a prisoner of war during World War II. But records show the 73-year-old Golden Gate Estates man was part of a Nazi guard unit whose job was to prevent escapes at a concentration camp in Gusen, Austria. Now the U.S. Justice Department wants to deport Denuel because it says he lied about Nazi activities when he applied for a U.S. visa. "During your service at Gusen, thousands of prisoners died as a result of shootings, hangings, starvation, torture, lethal injections, forced labor under inhumane conditions, exposure, disease as a result of unsanitary conditions, and other methods of killing," according to federal documents delivered last week to Denuel. Denuel stated on a Nov. 7, 1955, Immigrant Visa and Alien Registration application that from 1942 to 1947 his place of residence was "army service and POW, Romania, U.S.S.R., Austria and Germany," according to immigration documents. In truth, the Justice Department says, Denuel served in a SS-Totenkopfsturmbann (Death's Head Battalion) at Gusen from about August 1943 through April 1945. When questioned by federal investigators in April 1992, Denuel told federal investigators of his Nazi past, that he had served as an SS guard at the Gusen concentration camp and guarded prisoners moved from Poland to the Mauthausen concentration camp, which is infamous for the number of deaths that occurred there. Now, whether or not Denuel will be able to remain in the United States rests in the hands of a federal immigration judge in Miami.

Eight carjackings reported in Jacksonville over the weekend

By Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Eight carjackings occurred over the weekend in Jacksonville, raising the total in Florida's carjacking capital to 127 for the year, police said. Among those who lost cars by force were a 17-year-old girl who stopped at a gas station to make a telephone call and a U-Haul manager locked in the back of a truck. Howard J. Curry Jr., a spokesman for the Jacksonville Sheriff's Office, said Monday the cases were still being investigated. There was no indication that all eight were connected, but Curry said it is possible one or more may have been done by the same carjackers. In 1992, Jacksonville led the Sunshine State with 211 carjackings, said John Joyce, a Florida Department of Law Enforcement spokesman. Jacksonville's numbers compare with 76 in Miami, 40 in Orlando and 146 in Tampa in 1992. In both Jacksonville and Tampa, carjacking has been going up dramatically. Joyce said

Monday. A 17-year-old Raines High School student said she pulled into a brightly lit service station about 12:23 a.m. Sunday to use the telephone. "I thought it was the safest place to stop," she said. The names of the 17-year-old girl and the other victims were being withheld because their assailants were at large. The teen-ager said her father's car, a gray 1986 Ford Thunderbird, was taken by a man who appeared to be waiting to use the telephone. "Then he turned around real fast and he had a gun and said, 'Give me the keys.'" Three other carjackings occurred Sunday. In one, a woman was grabbed by the neck through the open window of her car. Two carjackings were reported Saturday, and in one of two Friday carjackings, a U-Haul manager was leaving his office at about 9:20 p.m. when a gun-toting man approached. The man demanded the money bag containing receipts from the U-Haul business.

'Dumbest, laziest judge' he says

By JOHN CURRAN
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Richard Neely calls himself "America's laziest and dumbest judge." And sometimes, it's hard to dispute him.

He suggests attacking drug dealers with baseball bats. He believes sex offenders are the modern-day equivalent of Salem's witches. He gives this unsolicited advice to a conference of 350 teen-age boys: "Tape a rubber to your American Express card and don't leave home without it."

A member of the West Virginia Supreme Court, Neely is an author, an academic, a public speaker — and always, an outrageous figure.

"I don't really care, you see. I'm 51 years old. I've got nowhere else to go. You think they're going to name me for the Supreme Court instead of (nominee Ruth Bader) Ginsburg?" he said. "Being a judge is like having cancer. You don't go anywhere from there."

Justices serve 12-year terms in West Virginia. But Neely, who is up for re-election again in 1996, said he considers himself a judge "forever."

This jurist's prudence is sometimes left on the bench:

●In 1986, he sued TWA for $38,000 after his baggage arrived 70 minutes late at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport. He sought $3,000 from the airline as a speaker's fee because he informed fellow passengers about the delay. He said he settled out of court for $12,500.

—Judge Richard Neely

●In 1989, he told the same American Legion youth leadership conference police can't prevent crime. He said, "It's time for citizens like you and me to go home and get our baseball bats" to attack drug dealers.

●In 1990, Neely told the boys that society would be better off if women stayed home with their children. He said drinking, womanizing and fighting in wars are all right until men have a family.

●In 1990, he said he "wouldn't work within 500 yards of a person with the AIDS virus."

●Neely, seeking a clerk, once placed this ad in the Virginia Law Weekly: "West Virginia's infamous once and future Chief Justice Richard Neely, America's laziest and dumbest judge, seeks a bright person to keep him from looking stupid. Preference will be given to U.Va. law students who studied interesting but useless subjects at snobby schools. If you are dead drunk and miss the interviews, send letters."

Neely, grandson of a West Virginia governor, grew up in coal country, studied economics at Dartmouth University and earned his law degree at Yale University.

Kidnapped exec survives 12 days buried alive

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Tuxedo manufacturer Harvey Weinstein's kidnappers kept him buried alive in a railyard for 12 days, lowering a tape recorder and a cellular phone to him so he could plead with his family to pay the $3 million ransom.

He was rescued on Monday, grimy but exuberant.

"Thank God you're here, and I'd like to have a cigarette," the 68-year-old millionaire said after emerging from the 14-foot pit, looking exhausted but smiling broadly. Police said he had survived on bananas, plums and water.

Two brothers, one of whom worked at Weinstein's company, were arrested on kidnapping charges. Early today, police arrested the wife of one of the suspects as well.

"It is a story that makes the movies sound tame," Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly said at a news conference where he displayed two duffel bags stuffed with $100 and $50 bills — the ransom money.

Weinstein returned to his Upper East Side apartment Monday night after being checked out at a hospital. His family had no comment.

According to police, Weinstein was kidnapped Aug. 4 somewhere between the Queens diner where he always ate breakfast and his office a mile away at Lord West Formalwear, one of the nation's biggest manufacturers of tuxedos.

The former Marine was taken to a wooded ravine in upper Manhattan, where he was lowered into the pear-shaped pit. The pit was covered with a door, then sheets of wood and cinder blocks. His abductors had poked holes so he could breathe.

"He was literally buried alive," said John Hill, acting chief of detectives.

The pit was so well-camouflaged that when police went to the Amtrak yard where Weinstein was entombed, "they were standing right over him and didn't know he was there," Hill said. Police called out his name, Kelly said, and Weinstein responded, "I'm here."

One day after the kidnapping, a call was made to the president of Lord West demanding $3 million. It was the first of 50 calls from the captors, who also supplied four photos of Weinstein and a tape-recorded message from him.

Meanwhile, Weinstein sat in a 4-foot-by-5-foot area. The kidnappers dangled a tape recorder for him to record the plea to his family.

Reducing the number of animal attacks

Seminole County's Animal Control officers reported 103 animal attacks during the month of June. There have been 265 attacks from May through July.

The reports included not only dog bites, but cat scratches and bites from other animals, all of which could produce rabies.

Animal Control people see this as a serious problem. They are suggesting all pet owners consider spaying or neutering their animals. While it will not eliminate the possibility of contracting rabies, it will go a long way toward reducing the pet population.

While some counties have spaying and neutering clinics which keep prices down, the best place to have the job done properly is at a veterinarian. Prices vary according to the clinic, but generally dog neutering can cost $50 to $70, cat neutering from $25 to $35.

For spaying, it often depends on the weight of the animal. For dogs prices could run approximately $60 to $150, and for cats, $45 to $60.

Shopping around could result in lower prices.

The object is to prevent accidental pregnancies by animals. Keeping them penned up is often not sufficient to prevent an escape.

If a person's pet dog has puppies, the number could range from only one to eight or nine. For mixed-breed dogs, getting rid of a half dozen puppies is time consuming and at times costly. And, it could occur more than one time.

Having the animal neutered is permanent. While spaying or fencing in the city is still recommended, an accidental escape would not result in the production of offspring.

Depending on circumstances, animals may move from docile to violent with no warning. Most of the time, this cannot be prevented. Spaying or neutering should not be considered as a preventative measure against attacks.

It will however, cut down on the number of animals running loose on our streets and causing increased concern over disease.

Even a neutered animal can attack or be infected with rabies, but by reducing their ever-growing number, we can reduce the number of bite cases.

Support for Tiger's Eye

On August 5th Channel 2 had a piece about Tiger's Eye Productions' school. I can no longer just sit and say how awful, but it does concern me. It concerns every human being on this planet. Do you know or care that when the animals are gone from the earth we humans will be next. We are the top of the food chain.

I have seen the programs at Winter Park Mall and Flea World in Sanford. I have heard children and adults call a tiger a lion and leopards tigers and one time I heard a young boy call a tiger an elephant. To me this is very sad that people are so ignorant of their wildlife.

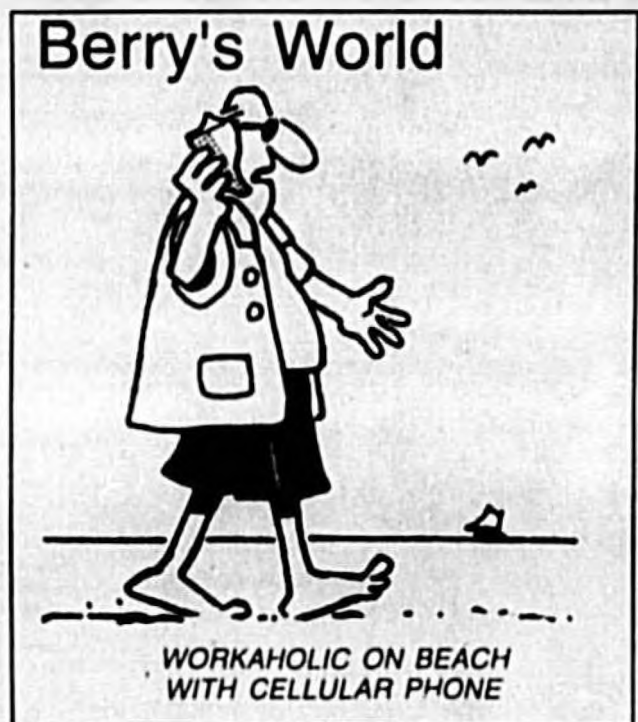

What are you doing to my wildlife? This issue concerns us all. We have taken over their habitat and now some people want to take them from captivity. Where do you want them to go? Where will they be safe from greed and insensitivity?

Do you know that Florida has more endangered wildlife than any state? I don't find this something to be proud of.

I very much want to know why the Seminole County commissioners voted against Tiger's Eye and what was their reasoning for a "no vote."

I am waiting for a response from each commissioner.

Character is key to black progress

"I have a dream that my four little children one day will live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character."

It was 30 years ago this month that Martin Luther King Jr. uttered these famous words from the shadow of the Lincoln Memorial. The progress that much of the black population has made since that late summer day in 1963, when a quarter-million strong gathered for the now-fabled March on Washington, truly is an American success story.

Surely, the multitude that descended upon the nation's capital to hear King and other civil rights leaders could not have imagined that, in the ensuing three decades, the black middle class would nearly quadruple in size.

But it has. In 1993, nearly half of all black families will bring home more than $25,000. Of these upwardly mobile black families, one in three will earn more than $50,000.

The exponential growth of the black middle class over the last 30 years coincides with black gains in higher education. At the time of the March on Washington, roughly a quarter-million black youngsters were enrolled in the nation's colleges and universities. In 1993, there are more than four times as many black collegians.

One of the more memorable passages in King's "I Have a Dream" speech concerned black political power. "We cannot be satisfied," the Baptist preacher intoned, "as long as the Negro in Mississippi cannot vote and the Negro in New York believes he has nothing for which to vote."

At the time when King spoke those words, there were fewer than 300 black elected officials throughout the country. In 1993, there are more than 7,000 black office holders, including four U.S. congressmen from New York and even one from Mississippi.

Yet, despite black gains in family income, education, political clout and other important measures of progress, many if not most blacks somehow believe that, 30 years after the March on Washington, most of us have yet to overcome.

The black leadership is most responsible for promulgating this myth. For rather than celebrating the great strides of the black population since 1963, they prefer to emphasize the negative.

It really is no mystery why some blacks have overcome and others have not. Those who have overcome have discovered that upward mobility in America has less to do with their skin color than the content of their character -- their behavior. They have moved on up because they have adopted an ethic of success. They've gotten a good education. They've worked hard. They've gotten married before having children. This simple ethic almost always produces progress. The success of the black middle class over the past three decades is a testament to this.

The challenge for the black leadership is to instill in poor and struggling blacks the ethic of success that has enabled the thriving black middle class to prosper. Only then will disadvantaged blacks realize the dream that Martin Luther King Jr. spoke of 30 years ago.

In 1993, nearly half of all black families will bring home more than $25,000.

Environmental toxins: the risk

Medical advances are at the edge of new and more accurate ways to assess the risks environmental toxins pose to human health. These methods may prove invaluable in determining that some chemicals are even more damaging than previously thought, while regulations governing others may be more stringent than necessary.

The Environmental Protection Agency has selected dioxin as a prototype to see if these new methods can prove their potential.

It's a good choice. Dioxin, or TCDD, is a chlorine-based chemical widespread in the environment. Bleaching paper can produce dioxin as a byproduct. While most pulp mills have switched to non-dioxin processes, the water downstream from these mills commonly still contains the chemical. Dioxin is produced in the formulation of some herbicides and gets into the air as part of incinerated fly ash.

Dioxin is also a bioaccumulator. Once in the body, it stays there. We get it from fish caught in dioxin-tainted water and from beef fed dioxin-linked weed killers. All Americans are believed to carry traces of dioxin in their fatty tissue.

Finally, dioxin is linked to a range of human illnesses. Cancer, the threat nearly all government chemical regulation is based upon, is one of them. But other health effects almost entirely ignored by regulation are also involved. These effects center on dioxin's apparent ability to disrupt the human hormone system leading to, among other things, damage to the nervous system. Already linked to the desexualization of some wildlife species, dioxin now has also been associated with damage to human immune and reproductive systems.

That's where the new methods come in. It's the difference between observing something with your eyes and looking at it through a microscope.

Most health regulations governing chemicals are based on animal studies. Typically, various doses of a compound are given to animals, usually rats, and then researchers wait and see. This work can tell us what happens, but not why.

Now, advances in biochemistry are allowing us to glimpse what happens inside human cell tissue exposed to environmental toxins. We are learning how molecules of these compounds are absorbed into individual cells and the kinds of chemical messages they transmit that alter the cells or make them multiply. We are in the infancy of understanding why these chemicals do what they do.

At this molecular level, some of these chemicals display a pernicious effect. Through disruptions or mimicking of the hormone system, they subtly alter the development of growing embryos. "Because functional deficits are not visible at birth and may not be fully manifested until adulthood, they are often missed by physicians, parents, and the regulatory community, and the causal agent is never identified," according to a statement by 21 leading researchers.

Dioxin is the perfect candidate for dual scrutiny.

Reports prepared for an ongoing EPA examination of dioxin in state that the "emerging realization" from existing research that includes studies of humans exposed to large doses in the workplace, is that TCDD can induce several kinds of cancer, including "malignant lymphomas, soft tissue sarcomas, thyroid tumors and lung tumors."

Beyond that, these reports cite "ample evidence" that humans "are extremely sensitive to the (non-cancer) toxic effects of TCDD."

Some of these effects, "including changes in endocrine function associated with reproductive function in animals and humans, behavioral effects in offspring of exposed animals, and changes in immune function in animals, have been demonstrated," according to an October memorandum by Erich W. Bretthauer, assistant EPA administrator for research and development.

Bretthauer's memorandum continues, "Some data suggest that these effects may be occurring in people at body burden levels that can result from exposure at, or near, current background."

That's official meaning that existing dioxin levels may already be damaging today's newborn.

The insights medical advances now afford into the workings of environmental toxins should be pursued urgently. We should also insist that these substances be screened for their non-cancer as well as their cancer health risks. The stakes are too high to do otherwise.

Dioxin has been selected as a prototype to see if these new methods can prove their potential.

Don't ask why men like to barbecue

I'm always saddened at the end of summer approaches. When I was a kid, it meant school was just around the corner. But as an adult, it means the end of barbecue season, which is the best time of year, to my way of thinking. The season when men, God bless 'em, cook.

I have often heard women discuss the question, "Why do men barbecue?" or more precisely, "Why is it a guy who would rather eat cold cereal with water than so much as turn on the oven to heat a TV dinner will suddenly become the Galloping Gourmet at the mention of a barbecue?"

One of the most popular theories, in an age when we seek an evolutionary answer to almost every question of human behavior, is that men are re-enacting the ancestral rite of dragging back a dead mastodon, hacking away at two rocks until fire ensues, then hunkering down until the mastodon's entrails are toast.

A cynical humorist like Pulitzer Prize-winner Dave Barry, who cuts his fellow men no slack, might hypothesize that men barbecue because it is the nastiest, dirtiest, trashiest form of cooking one can engage in outside of being lost on a camping trip, clobbering a wild bunny with a rock and trying to cook it with a Bic lighter.

First, there's the actual barbecuing instrument, sometimes called the "pit" or "grill," which in most families is left outside to rust and collect bird droppings. (I have often thought, while enjoying a great steak, "Yes, this is good, but it lacks a certain spice ... I know, it could use a dash of bird dropping! Some rust!")

Barry might next offer as evidence of the Dirt Theory the building of the fire itself, a ritual that can stretch into an hour-long affair with much squirting of flammable liquids upon the patio or deck, tossing of briquets and spent matches about the scene and a trip to the outdoor shop for more flammable liquid and a package of "Magic Fire-Starters." Only the site of an arson fire makes one question the sanity of mankind more than the aftermath of a barbecue-fire-starting.

Then as the actual beast-parts cook, there's all that smoke and ash that blow up in a man's rugged face and all over the patio, the next best thing to the wood shavings and sawdust ensuing from a power-tool project. Add all that grease dripping onto the fire and splattering up onto a guy's chest, and you have the closest pleasure you can get to going face down into a flank of steaming mastodon.

A female pragmatist such as Erma Bombeck might speculate that men barbecue precisely because most of them do not participate in the cleanup. In other words, they can make as big a mess as they want and Mom will wipe everything up, no questions asked. But I cannot truthfully say I've never seen a man clean up after a barbecue. I have seen men hose down the entire area with a high-pressure hose, leftover sack of briquets and all. (See: back to the outdoor shop for more flammable liquid and a package of "Magic Fire-Starters," above.)

However, most of the men I've observed believe a barbecue grill is like a self-cleaning oven. They believe you don't have to clean it because (and this is an approximation of an exact quote), "The fire burns off everything that could actually hurt a person." Thus, a guy with a master's degree in microbiology will tell you he doesn't need to clean off seven layers of animal grease mixed with soot because, "The fire burns off everything that could actually hurt a person."

However, if you are blessed with a man who loves to barbecue, I suggest just going along with it.

It means the end of barbecue season, which is the best time of year, to my way of thinking.

Survivors recall night bombing that killed four, 49 years ago

By Associated Press

DEFUNIAK SPRINGS — Residents of Alauqua, a hamlet about five miles southwest of this Florida Panhandle city, were used to hearing bombs dropping at a nearby military proving ground.

But one night 49 years ago something went terribly wrong.

Wallace Cosson, then 15, was at his grandmother's house when bombs fell only 100 yards away at a home where two of his uncles and their families were visiting on Aug. 11, 1944.

"They were small shrapnel bombs," he recalled Monday. "It was over in no time."

He ran to his Uncle Jim's home. A contemporary newspaper report indicated three fragmentation bombs had fallen near the house, one within 10 feet. Four Cosson family members were killed and five others wounded.

"It looked like machine guns had riddled it," Cosson said. "It just cut the house all up."

Thick smoke made it difficult to see or breathe, but he could hear the injured screaming.

James Cosson, two of his children, James Jr., 12, and Winnie Lee, 13, and his brother, Alfred, were dead.

James' wife, Annie, and two more of their children, Frank, 10, and Tom, 4, were wounded. Also injured was Alfred's wife, Pearl, and their son, David, 12.

David was the most seriously injured, paralyzed from the waist down. The memory of that night still haunts him. David told the Northwest Florida Daily News of Fort Walton Beach for a story Monday.

"If I go up there and hear an airplane go over, I can't take it," said David, who now lives in Central Florida city of Clermont. "You never get over something like that."

The Army Air Corps at what is now Eglin Air Force Base issued a statement that a release device jammed, causing the bombs to hang up on their racks.

Freighter driver denies he caused Tampa Bay collision

By Associated Press

TAMPA — Several pilots involved in last week's collision in Tampa Bay say the man responsible for the accident was Thomas Baggett, pilot of one of the vessels.

But Baggett denied the accusation Monday.

A freighter, piloted by Baggett, first collided with a jet-fuel barge, which burned for 15 hours. The freighter then hit a petroleum barge, which subsequently spilled about 250,000 gallons of thick, black industrial oil into Tampa Bay.

The accident occurred in a narrow channel between an outgoing freighter and two incoming fuel barges. Several pilots blamed the crash on a communications mix-up as the two barges were passing each other. They say Baggett gave the crucial command that led to the crash.

Baggett told a federal panel investigating the accident he looked up from his post and saw the fuel barges crossing his path.

"I said, 'What the hell are you doing?'" he testified.

He also swore he didn't know the two fuel barges were passing each other in the channel.

"If I had ... I would have been out of the channel," Baggett said. "You've got two large petroleum barges coming in ... in a bend."

Baggett, 63, made headlines soon after the collision — first came news his driver's license was suspended after a 1991 drunken driving arrest, then it was revealed he was involved in several ship collisions and groundings.

His testimony was set to resume today. Meanwhile, about 500 workers went to work Monday to clean about 10 miles of Tampa Bay beaches. The heavy industrial oil floated for days in the Gulf of Mexico before coming ashore Tampa Bay beaches over the weekend.

About 600 more workers and Coast Guard personnel are expected to join the effort today.

Wetlands

DEP biologist Brian Carr said he plans to do water sampling at the site and of the water in nearby Lake Griffin. Casselberry residents have claimed runoff from the tree service is killing the lake.

In addition to the water sampling, Carr said a DEP plan for restoring the wetlands is being completed this week and will be sent to Hardy's representatives.

Hardy's most recent restoration plan, with no supporting documentation, was submitted to the DEP by Hardy's consulting engineer, Hugh Harling. However, Carr said, that plan was not acceptable because it appeared to alter the site further by creating a retention/detention pond which would drain undisturbed wetlands on the northside of the property. Any alteration of the site would have to be submitted and approved through a permit process, not as a part of the restoration proposal.

"Rather than continue to review proposal after proposal," Carr explained, "the department chose to propose how to correct problems at the site." He added he plans to use a 1991 survey of the site to outline how it must be restored.

Carr said the DEP is proceeding with water sampling because he has not received a response from Aquatics Symbiotics, an Orlando company Hardy wanted to check the water quality.

"Samplings are usually done together," Carr explained, "so there are no questions about the place, or time or way the samples are gathered. But the sampling has been delayed so the DEP is conducting its own sampling."

Harling, a consulting engineer hired by Hardy, contends the source of the problems for Lake Griffin are not the consequence of activities of AAA Tree Service. He's arguing it is coming from a variety of areas including the road water runoff from CR 427 and Dog Track Road into wetland on the north end of the property.

Water samples will be taken at a number of sites, entering the property, in ditches on the property, as it leaves the property and where it enters Lake Griffin, Carr said. The sampling must be scheduled in conjunction with the work load of the test laboratory in Tallahassee. The chilled water samples are express shipped and tested quickly to insure accurate results, he said.

"If we identify that the water coming onto the Hardy property is low in nutrient but the water exiting the property is high in nutrient, that gives a very strong quantitative argument that this is the source of the problem," Carr explained.

Periodic sampling of the lake water by Lake Watch, an independent testing group, indicates an increase of nitrogen, phosphorous and chlorophyll levels after the tree service began processing yard waste which is ground into mulch.

"Mr. Hardy claims they grind this all up and he recycles this material," Carr said. "It appears his input was more than his output." When plants die, they begin to breakdown, he added.

The state attorney is awaiting the findings of the DEP in order to determine what Hardy must do to clean up the site.

"When you get these environmental types of cases that involve the requirement for cleanup and restoration and all those kinds of things," Richard-Rutberg explained, "involving water sampling and soil sampling, obviously through the criminal justice system we don't have that degree of expertise available to us to determine as part of a sentencing order what they are and aren't to do. Therefore, I have to rely on the experts to come up with that part of it, and then I can make that a part of the probationary conditions that they must comply with as part of the consent order."

If the consent order is ready at the time of sentencing, the court would have 12 months during the probation period to ensure the terms are carried out.

tary of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, will be located in Volusia, Martin and Escambia counties. Operated by the local communities through the sheriff's departments or state attorney's offices, the 24-bed boot camps will copy the discipline used to train military recruits.

One boot camp is currently operating in Manatee County and graduated its first platoon recently. Juveniles will attend the four-month camps and then are monitored in an eight month follow-up program to make sure they are attending school or working. If they are not, they are returned to boot camp.

Only the most serious juvenile offenders will be eligible for the boot camp program, according to George Hinchcliff of the HRS. There are currently 78 juveniles statewide awaiting placement in the high risk category.

Placement recommendations are based on risk factors ranging from the most serious (high risk) to the least serious offenders in the low risk category. In total there are 617 juveniles statewide awaiting some type of placement in all categories. Of that number, 199 fall into the lowest risk category and are living at home and going to day treatment programs, Hinchcliff said.

At the time of sentencing, the HRS makes placement recommendations but it is up to the juvenile judges to make the final decision.

Although the new boot camps were funded to be 24-bed facilities, Hinchcliff said it is hoped the legislature can come up with the money needed to make them each 30-bed facilities.

Construction of the camps will cost $4.3 million to build and maintain and another $1.5 million annually to operate.

"It is going to be a substantially local usage facility," Hinchcliff said, although judges from a nearby county might get permission to place a juvenile in a camp.

Several other juvenile programs, such as a serious offender program are scheduled to be announced in the coming weeks, he said. Hinchcliff said he does not force boot camps in every county because it would be too expensive. However, counties could go together in partnerships sharing boot camp space in one county and other juvenile programs in another.

Seminole County Circuit Judge Leonard Wood, who presides in juvenile cases, was doing arraignments this morning and was unavailable for comment on the new camps.

In addition to the three boot camps, the state will open an environmental camp in Hillsboro County which will also have a high degree of physical challenge but not the total regimen of boot camp.

The programs are being funded from a $44 million package approved by the legislature for juvenile programs.

Camp

Boy Scouts of America once considered allowing expressway builder Hubbard Construction Co. to dig a 75-acre borrow pit in the 182-acre campground. Scout leaders hoped they would generate revenue from the enterprise and have a resulting lake to enhance the campground.

The proposal caused an uproar among Geneva residents and local scouting leaders alike. Residents abhorred the potential of another borrow pit in their community with its fragile "Geneva Bubble" water supply. Scout leaders abhorred the potential loss of a local campground.

The scouts and residents staged protests at the campground last year to bring public attention to the council's sale plans.

Hubbard never pursued the project and the council voted last year to put the campground up for sale to raise revenues for new council offices and improvements to other camps. Hubbard considered purchasing the property and conducted field tests, destroying a path through the environmentally-sensitive scrub land in the process.

The county cited the property owners, the scouting council, and Hubbard later replaced the vegetation.

Both scout and Geneva leaders met the news of the potential county purchase with pleasure.

"I'd certainly support that and I think the whole community would support it," said Lee Voorhees, president of the Geneva Citizens Association. "That would be extremely acceptable," said Dave Young, assistant scoutmaster of the Geneva Troop 837. "I have no problem with that at all."

Young, who helped stage the protests, now serves on the council. He said he recognizes the need for the council to raise money for needs, but said he still opposes the sale of the camp for a non-camping use.

Logan said should the county pursue the purchase, camping would be a viable use for the property.

four lanes using the county transportation sales tax.

Whether the improved roadways will be able to link to I-4 at CR 46-A still remains a question. Negotiations are still underway with landowners to urge them to donate the land needed for the interchange. Most, but not all, have agreed, said VanPelt.

Congress agreed in 1987 to pay the $11.1 million construction cost of the project, a demonstration of how quickly roads could be built, on the premise landowners would donate portions of their property for it. The property owners were not forthcoming and county engineers fear the federal funding is at risk.

Clinton relaxes among old friends in Arkansas

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGDALE, Ark. — Bill Clinton, the 42nd president of the United States, relaxed in the town of Clarksville, Ark., on Monday, surrounded by old friends and family. Clinton, 45, was in town for a day of rest after a busy week of campaigning in Missouri and Arkansas.

Clinton, who was born in Hope, Ark., spent his childhood in the town of Hope, where he attended Central High School. He graduated from Central in 1964 and attended Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., where he earned a law degree in 1968.

Clinton's political career began in 1974 when he was elected attorney general of Arkansas. He served in that office until 1978, when he was elected governor. He served two terms as governor, from 1979 to 1987.

Clinton's political career took a turn in 1992 when he was elected president of the United States. He served as president from 1993 to 2001.

Clinton, who is giving a pitch for his health care reform package, was in town for the nation's largest chicken processor, the based here, Wal-Mart Inc., the nation's largest retailer, is in nearby Bentonville, and the country's largest trucking company, J.B. Hunt Inc., is not far away in Towell. The Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce says 30 millionaires live in the area.

Clinton, born and raised in tiny southwestern Arkansas, moved to Fayetteville after law school and taught constitutional law at the University of Arkansas from 1971 to '76. A Yale Law School classmate named Hillary Rodham joined him locally in 1974.

The young couple bought their first house in Fayetteville and this modest home at 940 California Boulevard was the site of their small wedding in October 1975.

Clinton's political roots go deep in Northwest Arkansas, the most Republican section of a state otherwise dominated by Democrats. As a 28-year-old law professor, he mounted a surprisingly competitive race against popular Democratic Rep. John Paul Hammond in 1978. Two years later he became attorney general and went on to be elected governor five times.

The Clintons' oldest friendships as a couple began here. While in town they are staying at the lake-front home of two of their oldest pals, Jim and Diane Blair. Jim is chief counsel for Tyson Foods, a political science professor at the university.

The Clintons frequently ducked out of the spotlight in Little Rock to spend a day or two at the Blair's lake house, chatting about politics and society in the kitchen over leftovers.

The home, located just east of Springdale on Beaver Lake, is near the lake mansion owned by chicken magnate Don Tyson, an old friend and political ally of Clinton.

The president plans to retrace Washington's Wednesday and then head out the next day for a 11-day stay in Manchester, N.H., to visit in Massachusetts.

Lawyer: Kevorkian charged today

By AMY YUHN
Associated Press Writer

DR. JAMES H. KEVORKIAN, the Michigan physician who helped a terminally ill cancer patient die, was charged today with helping someone commit suicide.

The Michigan state prosecutor, Dr. Robert M. McDermott, charged Kevorkian with helping someone commit suicide in the death of a 67-year-old woman, Mrs. Helen M. Schaefer, who died on Monday.

Kevorkian, 57, is charged with helping Schaefer die by injecting her with a lethal dose of potassium chloride. Schaefer had a terminal brain tumor and had been suffering from the disease for several years.

Kevorkian, who is a physician at the University of Michigan Medical Center, is charged with helping Schaefer die by injecting her with a lethal dose of potassium chloride. Schaefer had a terminal brain tumor and had been suffering from the disease for several years.

Kevorkian's death was the first instance since the law was passed in which Kevorkian admitted actually helping someone commit suicide.

Under the law, which took into effect in February, helping someone commit suicide is punishable by up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

A judge overturned the law on technical grounds May 20, but a state appeals court put it back into effect in June with a few modifications.

Looking At Clinton, GOP governors ponder job change

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

FUSA Okla. — Ask Tommy Thompson of the next Republican presidential nominee should be a GOP governor and he doesn't hesitate to say "YES!" But ask him who he has in mind and he quickly walks away.

It's a touchy subject for Thompson, who is governor of Wisconsin, and a handful of his Republican colleagues. In watching President Clinton visit with them Monday they had to be wondering whether they too could make the jump from the statehouse to the White House.

"I don't think so," GOP Gov. William Weld of Massachusetts said with a smile when asked if he would discuss his presidential potential. Still, after extolling the virtues of a free trade agreement with Canada and Mexico at an afternoon news conference, Weld joked to an aide that he was working on his Latin and Central American policy.

While they are reluctant to talk about the possibility, Republican governors' week's National Governors' Association meeting featured a Clinton challenge in 1996.

In addition to Thompson and Weld, South Carolina's Carroll Campbell makes most lists and has had some preliminary discussions with other candidates.

California's Pete Wilson also most lists because of his state's electoral college but for now he is more worried that his own approval ratings will cost him the current job than any presidential are more often mentioned as vice presidential prospects. Michigan's John Engler, Ohio's George Voinovich and Illinois' Jim Edgar.

More distant prospects, Wilson

But don't expect them — or party leaders — to say much about the subject, at least not for the record.

When I peered through these glasses, I can't see past 1994, GOP Chairman Haley Barbour joked Monday, adjusting his sunglasses while crossing a street in downtown Tulsa.

Getting a bit more serious, Barbour said, "There certainly are a lot of bright lights among our governors."

But they aren't like I am not thinking post 1994.

It is as if Barbour had read the governors' minds. "I think that to feel of what is going on in the country," Thompson said in explaining why he believes a GOP governor would make a superior nominee than a Republican congressman.

"Ask me after the 1994 elections — I'll tell you then," he said with a laugh.

Campbell takes the same approach.

"I see '96 as a long way off," he said.

Still, Campbell is taking over as chairman of the governors' association, giving a national platform to a Republican governor who has been critical of Clinton's economic policies and skeptical about the president's health care reform.

Some of his GOP colleagues, while saying it is foolish to worry so soon about 1996, also are re-stant about criticizing Clinton or trying to carve themselves a niche or two in national policy debates, as Clinton often did when he was governor and active in the NGA.

Engler, for example, often leads the governors' discussions about welfare reform.

After Congress passed Clinton's budget package, Weld said he would propose a state tax cut to offset some of Clinton's tax increases, a move Republican strategists could help but attribute to national ambitions.

And Wilson is taking a higher profile on local care and immigration issues and poking at Clinton's oft-stated intention of paying special attention to California.

With its 54 electoral votes, it is a strategy that makes political sense.

But Wilson said Clinton so far has demonstrated "a reverse Midas touch" — everything that he has done has resulted in economic pain.

Of course, with 1996 so far off, the GOP governors have plenty of time to ponder presidential aspirations. And some advice of sorts from Clinton to consider.

As the president wrapped up his speech to the governors Monday, he got nostalgic about his days as Arkansas' chief executive and NGA chairman, suggesting the rough and tumble world of Washington had him wishing at times he hadn't been so ambitious.

"I miss you," Clinton said. "I miss this. I miss the way we make decisions."

'Fugitive' is first at the box office

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — Harrison Ford's "The Fugitive" leads.

The thriller based on the 1960s TV series was No. 1 at the box office, nets a second weekend of release, taking in $22.4 million, or almost as much money as it made in its premiere weekend. Exhibitor Relations Co. reported Monday.

A strong second week showing often indicates that a movie is getting strong word of mouth and Hollywood parlance has legs. Industry analysts have said they expect "The Fugitive" to gross as much as $150 million.

The new horror movie, "Jason Goes to Hell: The Final Friday," was second with $7.6 million.

Among other new movies, "The Secret Garden," a magical children's film starring Maggie Smith, was fourth with $4.6 million, and "Heart and Souls," a romantic fantasy with Robert Downey Jr., was sixth with $4.42 million.

AT&T-McCaw merger spurs debate

By EVAN RAMSTAD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The $12.6 billion merger of AT&T and McCaw Cellular Communications could dramatically change the way people communicate, hastening the day of go-anywhere phones. But not without a fight.

The regional phone companies that were once part of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. complained that the merger would allow AT&T back into the local market, from which it was barred under the 1984 breakup of AT&T.

The deal would be the biggest merger ever in telecommunications and the fifth-largest in U.S. corporate history. It is subject to federal approval.

The merger announced Monday is AT&T's attempt to capitalize on the quickly expanding wireless communications field, which includes cellular phones, two-way pagers and practically pocket-sized computers and fax machines.

The companies are likely to push the development of go-anywhere products like personalized telephone numbers, which people could keep wherever they go. The long-distance network could also one day take calls to a person's home or office and send them to a pager or pocket phone anywhere in the country.

Many experts believe wireless systems will increasingly take the place of the wall-patch telephone.

Analysis said the companies would also probably develop new kinds of customized calling plans and rates for mobile customers and further blur the line between local and long-distance service.

After the deal was announced, the regional Bell companies declared it was more evidence of the need to change the rules that govern their business, especially restrictions established after the breakup of AT&T that gave AT&T the long-distance market and the Baby Bells the local arena.

Ed Whitacre, chief executive of Southwestern Bell, said the merger returns AT&T to its pre-breakup strength.

Our customers are disadvantaged because we are not allowed to compete on an equal footing in cellular or other telecommunications services, he said.

Dick Odgers, executive vice president of external affairs for Pacific Telesis Group, said the merger demonstrates the immediate need to eliminate all anti-competitive restrictions against the former Bell operating companies."

AT&T and McCaw disputed the Baby Bell claims.

"The facts are that 99 percent of the cellular business that (McCaw chairman) Craig McCaw and his team handle today is handled on local telephone company wired facilities," AT&T chairman Robert Allen said.

This is not competition with the local exchange."

Allen said the decision to acquire McCaw came after the two companies realized they might someday compete with each other in areas they can't now foresee. McCaw is the nation's biggest cellular phone company.

In Washington, Federal Communications Commission Chairman James Quello said the merger holds great potential for growth in the industry, but he added that the government should keep an open mind to opposition.

The deal is also subject to antitrust approval from the Justice Department, but not from the federal judge who oversaw the AT&T breakup.

USDA gets tough with school milk bid-riggers

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — Dozens of dairies that have cheated school districts by overcharging for milk face possible suspensions from school food programs.

The Agriculture Department said Monday it was banning two companies from the federally subsidized school milk program for three years. Federal officials say similar action will be taken against other dairies if they don't guarantee against future abuses.

Dairy Fresh Inc. of Greensboro, Ala., and Coble Dairy Products Cooperative Inc. of Lexington, N.C., said they would contest the USDA department action.

The two companies were among 45 dairies convicted so far of bid-rigging as a result of an ongoing Justice Department investigation into the activities of dairies that supply school lunch programs. The federal program spends $5 billion a year to feed about 24 million students.

"It's really important to be as aggressive as possible in dealing with problems of bid-rigging, and this is just the beginning," said Ellen Haas, the assistant secretary of agriculture for food and consumer services.

She said more companies will be subject to debarment actions if they don't agree to take steps to prevent future abuses.

Major companies, including Borden Inc., Pet Dairies and Flav-O-Rich, are among those already convicted of bid-rigging charges.

Until this year, the USDA declined to suspend convicted companies as long as they reimbursed losses caused by bid-rigging. The department may suspend companies up to three years from supplying dairy products to schools.

Betty Gist, an assistant to the president of Dairy Fresh, said the company just received the notice. She could not comment except to say the company would contest the action, which it has 30 days to do.

Dairy Fresh was assessed $1.4 million in federal penalties in April after pleading guilty to rigging school milk bids in Mississippi, south Alabama and the Florida panhandle. It also was hit with $800,000 in state penalties.

On July 21, the department took steps to bar Coble, which pleaded guilty in October 1991 in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. Coble paid $1.15 million to the three states and $450,000 to the federal government.

Galen Dean, who just took over as chief executive officer, said the company will contest debarment.

"Our farmer owners have suffered severely and they didn't really have anything to do with it," he said.

The department said it continues to do business with two other convicted companies, Borden Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, and Kinnitt Dairies Inc. of Columbus, Ga., because they have signed agreements with the Defense Department's Defense Logistics Agency to prevent future violations.

Humphrey talks to Shula

LAKELAND — Assigned Miami Dolphins running back Bobby Humphrey telephoned coach Don Shula and then held a news conference Monday to say he still wants to play football. But Humphrey gave no indication that he is ready to accept a contract offer of $6.2 million. The Dolphins have already ordered their offer made, but they may do so again Tuesday, insists Humphrey's agent, Bob Ross.

Bush out, Smith back at FSU

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State freshman kicker Sean Bentley will be held out seven to 10 days with a pulled hip flexor. On another injury note, it was learned that freshman linebacker Daryl Bush from Lake County will miss three to four weeks with a medial collateral sprain in his right knee. Bush suffered the injury in the Seminoles' first scrimmage on Saturday. There was some good news, however, as safesbacks Marquice Smith from Lake Howell and Sean Jackson returned to practice. Both were nursing sprained ankles suffered last week.

Tempers flare in Gatorland

GAINESVILLE — The Florida Gator football team began contact drills on Monday and already tempers were flaring. Several minor scuffles broke out during the morning workout, the most notable being the one involving first string linebacker James Bates and Shawn Nunn, who is battling for playing time at right end. Missing from Monday's practice with injuries were starting safety Michael Gallimore (knee) and starting cornerback Larry Kennedy. Assistant coach Monday says he kept quarterback Danny Wuerffel (shoulder) and reserve wide receiver Aubrey Hill (anterior) out.

Hurricane super-Frosh injured

CORAL GABLES — Miami Hurricanes freshman receiver Jaunni Freeman's adjustment to college football will be slowed by a hamstring injury, coach Dennis Erickson says. Freeman, a heavily recruited receiver from Fort Myers, had been expected to contribute immediately. But he'll be sidelined with a pulled right hamstring suffered in practice Saturday.

Lake Mary set to host cross country jamboree

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — What has become a monthly inter-county sporting event will kick off its 25th anniversary Saturday, August 28th. The 25th Annual Lake Mary Summer 1000, a cross-country jamboree, is set to begin at 7:30 a.m. at the campuses of Lake Mary High School and Lake Mary Middle School. Michael Gibson, the head girls cross-country and track coach, is optimistic that this will be the best yet for the event. "We expect this will be the best meet in the seven years we've hosted it," said Gibson. "The meet has been going on for a long time and we want to see Dave Higgins from Lyman and the San Francisco Community College as the winners in the Class C.

There will be 1000 runners in 1000 races. The meet will be open to anyone in any age group with the emphasis placed on the 14-18 boys and girls club team races. While teams can run under their high school team name, they can compete under a different nickname. Among the teams from outside the county that have shown interest in coming already are Rockledge, Miami Beach, Lampa Lake, Lake Highland and Colonial," said Gibson. "But any group of five runners can come and run together as long as they are within the age group. We want anybody who wants to run to show up."

Miami Beach did not come last year after coming the previous two years because of the damage caused by Hurricane Andrew. Lake Mary finished sixth in the state championship last year, giving the meet three girls teams that finished in the top 10 at the state meet last year, joining Lake Brantley (state runners up) and Lake Mary (9th).

Last year's individual winners was Tracy Krasovskas from the Oviedo Hornets and Dwayne Lipscomb from the Bay Runners Palm Bay. The club winners were the Altamonte Springs Bold People Lake Brantley in the boys division and the Lake Mary Track Club, now running as the SMACS in the girls division.

The meet will be sanctioned by USA Track and Field formerly the Track Athletic Congress and will be sponsored by the Lake Mary Track Club, the Lake Mary High School Booster Club and the Lake Mary Kiwanis Club. The schedule for the day is as follows: Registration at 7:30 a.m.; 15 over Men's and Women's Division Race (three miles) at 8 a.m.; 14-18 Girls Club Team Race (two miles) at 8:30 a.m.; 14-18 Boys Club Team Race (three miles) at 9 a.m.; 12 and Under Girls and Boys Race (one mile) at 9:30 a.m.; and the awards ceremony at 10 a.m. Cost is $4 per athlete if registered before Wednesday, August 25th and $6 per athlete after the 25th up until start of race.

In the Club Division, trophies will be given to the boys and girls championship and runner-up teams as well as medals to the top 10 finishers and ribbons to the 16-50 place finishers. Both the male and female age group winners will receive a medal with the second through 10th place finishers getting ribbons.

Age groups will consist of 16th grade and female 8 and under, 9-10, 11-12, 13-14, 15-16, 17-19 and over 40.

Interested runners may pre-register by sending name, address, whether male or female, age, sex, day of meet, phone number, club name and a $3.48 fee to the Lake Mary Track Club, P.O. Box 1047, West Lake Mary, FL 32746 or call 1-407-334-2470.

After celebrating the wedding, Krusei and Regester sat over the track's public address system to his new bride and said, 'I love you, baby. I would like to ask you to marry me some day and to become engaged to me on 8/18.'

Other divisional winners for the night were Gary Flynn taking his second straight Pro Late Model Victory, Chris Vogel winning for the first time in the Mini Stocks and Bobby Layman in the Pro Stocks.

Flynn, running out of Holly Hill, claimed his first ever win at the track a week ago by staying on the bottom of the track. This time he just gave his number 14 his head and ran away from the rest of the pack.

"I stayed in shape at the first," Flynn said in victory lane, talking about a first lap shuttle that pushed some of the cars back, then I just held on. First the track was wet, then it got real hard. Personally, I like a wet track but the car tires are good on the hard track.

Flynn got early pressure from pole sitter Jim Grubb, who ended up second, but he stayed steady. Jimmy Stewart finished fourth.

INDIANAPOLIS — Andrei Cherkasov upset 14th seed Mike Pernfors 6-4, 7-6 (7-5) Monday in the opening round of the $1.04 million U.S. Men's Hardcourt Championships.

After losing the first set, Pernfors, a two-time All American at Seminole Community College, squandered two set points in the second before falling in the tiebreaker. Pernfors, the 1984 and 1985 NCAA champion from the University of Georgia, suffered his second straight early loss. The 30-year-old Swede was beaten in the first round of last week's ATP Championship Cincinnati.

"I think I have a little problem with the faster courts. In fact, I don't get my timing and I don't hit the ball as well as I did up there."

The featured evening match at the Indianapolis Tennis Center, pitting No. 11 Brad Gilbert against Anton Krickstein, was delayed because of rain.

The other three seeds to play were No. 10 Andrei Cherkasov, and Thomas Enqvist 6-2, 6-4; No. 12 David Wheaton downed Francisco Claver 6-4, 6-2; and No. 16 Fabrice Santoro defeated Kenneth Carlson 6-2, 6-3.

Wheaton blasted nine aces and won 80 percent of his service points in downing Claver, a Hardcourt quarterfinalist last year.

"I am serving well then I can beat most guys," Wheaton said. "I know I can do that, but I have to be more consistent week to week."

The top eight seeds had first round byes, including top seed and two-time defending champion Pete Sampras. The world's top ranked player would play until Wednesday, when he faces the winner of Tuesday's

Parents try to make visits to grandma a family affair

DEAR ABBY: I have a dear mother who lives about an hour's drive away. She's blind, but very cheerful and mentally alert. I phone her every day. She lives with a housekeeper and loves to have company.

When she had her sight, she couldn't do enough for my children. She sewed for them, bought them gifts and always made sure there were goodies in her house. Now the children are teen-agers, and I have to beg them to visit their grandmother because it is so "boring" there; there's nothing to do there, etc.

My husband and I visit as often as possible. We realize that our kids are involved with their friends and activities, so we don't expect them to accompany us on every visit, but it is too much to expect them to visit her once a month?

They read your column daily, Abby. I can bet my bottom dollar that you'll agree with me, but if the kids hear it from Dear Abby, maybe they'll realize that Mom and Dad are right.

ADVICE

be rewarding to both you and the old folks.

DEAR ABBY: We are just ordinary people. My husband has a 9-to-5 job and I am a homemaker. We have been married for 10 years, and in all that time we have never gone anywhere without taking our children. (We have three.) I have never had one night away from them except those few when I went to the hospital to have another baby.

We have never hired a sitter. (Never needed one.) My husband said the children grow up so fast we should enjoy every moment we can with them. I love my children, Abby, but don't you think I deserve a night out without the children just once a year?

STALE MATE

DEAR MATE: Your husband forgets that you "enjoy" your children all day, every day, when he is at work. Remind him. You not only "deserve" an occasional night out, you need one.

DEAR ABBY: I am 12. I told my father to go jump in the lake. We live by a lake, but it is frozen over now, so he should have known I didn't really mean it.

He grounded me indefinitely. How long is "indefinitely"?

GROUNDING IN MINNESOTA

DEAR GROUNDING: It's for as long as it takes your father to cool off. (Apologize and promise to be more respectful, and it may break the ice.)

Softer silhouettes and touches of color characterize clothes offered for women this fall.

"It's an evolution," says Lucille Klein, J.C. Penney's fashion director. "We've had structured looks with their squared shoulders and sharp lines for several years. But women have become more comfortable in the work force. They're at ease expressing themselves with more feminine, classic styles."

A case in point might be a rich red suit by Jacqueline Ferrar, available at Penney's. It's softened by a classic dress-up detail: Black velvet trim on a notched collar and buttons. The store also offers a soft ruffled blouse by Rafferty, which it shows paired with pants and a long vest in glen plaid from Worthington.

A jaunty variation on the theme is a red riding jacket with black velveteen trim for Chau, which can be worn with velveteen jodphurs.

A soft and bright ensemble from Theomiles includes a cable-knit sweater with matching wrap skirt and leggings, either in pastels or red. This new label from Leslie Fay also offers a range of classic jackets, trousers, dresses sportswear and evening clothes.

Soft but tailored fare from Jones New York include wide-leg trousers and long belted vest in neutral tones, set off by a golfing jacket in bronze suede.

The soft look done up with European sophistication is offered in Ungaro's Emanuel line, featuring a series of easy fitting but tailored jackets, pants, wrap skirts and vests. One ensemble includes a stone crepon jacket with matching waistcoat with echoing collar notches and matching trousers.

Layered knits figure prominently in the collections at Express, with long cow-neck tunics with matching wide-leg pants or ribbed wrap skirts. There's also a soft column dress or a wide-ribbed V-neck sweater dress.

Fashion: Menswear

By The Associated Press

No doubt some men still swear by their pinstripe uniforms for business, but menswear designers have come up with softer, easygoing cuts and looks for both on- and off-hours.

Conservative dressers don't have to forgo tradition — there are plenty of updated plaids and stripes, many to be worn with loose sweaters and in casual layers as vests, jackets, and other separates. For those closer to the fringe, there are funky "work clothes" in oversize denim and cords. Clothes representing both trends have outdoor, cowboy-Indian details.

Avoiding the strait-jacket approach is paramount. "Because comfort is key, most silhouettes continue to be oversized, whether it's a loose-fit jean, plaid shirt, hooded sweater or canvas barn coat," says Joe Sapientza of J.C. Penney. "Men want clothes that move when they do."

The vest is in the spotlight this season — and as an independent entity, not just the third of a three-piece. The Rustler-Indian Jacquard vest from Pendleton Woolens is one eye-stopping example; this Indian-style pattern is part of the company's High Grade Western Wear collection created in honor of the Oregon Trail anniversary this year. J.C. Penney has a down vest. meant to be outfitted with jeans and flannel shirt by St. John's Bay. A textured knit cotton vest is offered by Barnes Storm.

At the other end of the style scale there are traditional tailored vests like that in the jacket-vest match in glen plaid by Cesarini Design Studio or even a yellow crossover vest — the kind you'd expect to see worn with monocle and spats — from Garrick Anderson.

Plaids are almost ubiquitous in this season's menswear lines. They can be done up in well-tailored versions, such as mustard-olive plaid from the Grays by Gary Wasserman, or in bold, oversized lumberjack flannel shirts, like the ones from Structure (The Limited's new European-style menswear line). Plaids also are found in bomber jackets from Structure, zippered country coats from Woodman at J.C. Penney or from Barnes Storm.

Are alcoholism, diabetes inherited?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there any agreement within the scientific community as to whether a disease such as diabetes or alcoholism is inherited?

DEAR READER: There certainly is agreement about diabetes, which is clearly inherited - or at least is the consequence of an abnormal genetic pattern. The relation between alcoholism and the genes is speculative, however.

Although many experts are convinced that problem drinking is an inherited disorder, the consensus is far from unanimous. Studies to confirm this are being performed in medical centers around the world.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please discuss pancreatitis.

DEAR READER: The pancreas is a gland, lying beneath the stomach, that produces insulin and digestive enzymes. When it becomes inflamed (pancreatitis), these enzymes are inappropriately released and actually begin to digest the gland itself. This leads to abdominal pain, nausea, vomiting, rapid pulse, shallow breathing and fever, which can progress to jaundice, diabetes, semi-coma and a variety of serious metabolic abnormalities.

In the United States, more than 80 percent of pancreatitis is caused by blockage of the pancreatic duct (from gallstones or tumor) or by alcoholism (alcohol is toxic to the pancreas, as well as to the liver, heart and brain). Trauma can cause pancreatitis.

The diagnosis is established by a series of X-ray and blood tests, including the serum amylase, which is a pancreatic enzyme released into the bloodstream in the presence of acute or recurring pancreatic inflammation.

Treatment includes fasting (to rest the pancreas), intravenous fluids (to provide nutrition and combat dehydration), pain medication and other drugs to counteract the metabolic abnormalities. Surgery may be necessary to remove gallstones or correct obstruction of the pancreatic duct. Alcohol, for obvious reasons, is permanently prohibited.

Acute pancreatitis is a dangerous disorder, requiring hospitalization and intensive therapy. The consequences of chronic pancreatitis, such as diabetes and malnutrition, are treated with appropriate methods, including insulin and dietary alterations.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
 I have just returned from nearly four weeks in Mauritius in the middle of the Indian Ocean. I spent a couple of weeks working with the local bridge teams. Then, I produced the daily bulletins at the Bridge Federation of Asia and Middle East (and now Africa) Championships.

My favorite deal from the tournament was this one. With only the opponents vulnerable, what opening bid would you make as South?

Most Souths opened five diamonds. But one, K.V. Bhatt from Kenya, passed!

North opened with one no-trump, showing 12-14 points. East bid two clubs. The Landy convention indicating length in both majors. This was a poor choice with 6-4 shape. Now Bhatt kept up his smokescreen.

jumping to three no-trump (which would have made). West, not knowing whose deal it was, bid four spades.

Finally Bhatt mentioned his suit. West was delighted: he had the A-K of clubs and surely his partner had a trick or two. He doubled. Bhatt redoubled.

With certain players, this redouble would cause the aroma of rat to waft strongly across the table. But it didn't happen here.

West led the club ace. Now only a spade switch stops the overtrick. However, West continued with the heart four. Declarer should have won with the ace and led the heart queen to take a ruffing finesse and guarantee an overtrick. However, Bhatt was happy. He drew trumps immediately and claimed his contract.

Nicely bid, Mr. Bhatt.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
 Aug. 18, 1993

In the year ahead you will have new opportunities to build valuable relationships. Some might be constructed with persons with whom you felt you had nothing in common.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll function best in situations or endeavors where you can use your initiative and leadership qualities. If relegated to the rear ranks, today could be a downer. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In order to function effectively today, you need a quiet atmosphere so that you can hear yourself think. Disturbing, outside influences could get you off track.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The friends with whom you'll feel most at ease today will be those who share your same ideals, interests and standards. Other types will have little to offer you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually you'll pursue objectives with a come-what-may attitude, but today you might be reluctant to take chances and this could lessen your possibilities for success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't forget to be philosophical, as well as practical in your involvements with friends and associates today. This combination will help you sail smoothly over the shoals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to spend some time today evaluating your present asset in detail. Much to your surprise, you might discover you have more going for you than you thought.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You could be a big plus today for any development that calls for a team effort. You'll be able to pull your own weight without hindering or disturbing the progress of teammates.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You are not always endowed with great patience to fuss over small details, but today could be an exception. Take advantage of this and get those tedious, neglected little chores out of the way.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Essentially you'll be in a friendly mood today, yet you'll be devious of spending your time productively even when socializing. Idle discourse could drive you off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Homebody activities usually provide you with a comfort zone, and today is no exception. Focus your involvements around your family and garden.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Mental assignments should be rather easy for you to handle today. Try to catch up on your paperwork and correspondence or organize and clear away the clutter on your desk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The good things that appease your emotions and appetites will appeal to you today, yet you'll let your practicality and common sense discipline poor behavioral characteristics. (C)1993, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
