Police Chief Calls Charges 'Ludicrous'

Longwood Seeks FDLE Investigation, Again

Chief Greg Manning

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

The city of Longwood expects a decision in the next week or week and a half by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement on whether that agency will investigate allegations against the city's police chief. This is the second time this year that FDLE has been asked by the city to look into complaints against Police Chief Greg Manning.

City Administrator Ron Waller, asked by the city commission to investigate charges made by City Commissioner Dave Gunter at the July 6 commission meeting, wrote FDLE four days later requesting the investigation.

Waller said he sent a copy of Gunter's lengthy statement plus a one-page addendum submitted after the commission meeting, and copies of newspaper articles on the subject along with his July 10 letter to FDLE Chairman Robert Dempsey.

Waller said he referred the matter to FDLE because of the seriousness and scope of the allegations.

"There's no way that I have time to go through all the details of it and no one on my staff does. They (FDLE investigators) have the objective expertise for that sort of thing that we don't have," Waller said.

Waller said when he asked the FDLE in January to investigate charges that Manning improperly reported a 1983 boating accident involving his boat and that of another police officer, it took about 30 days last time for the FDLE to notify the city of their decision and two more months to complete the investigation.

As the result of that investigation FDLE found that although the accident was improperly filed in Longwood for insurance purposes, rather than in Lake County where it occurred, (a misdemeanor) there was no criminal misconduct. The statute of limitations expired in 1984 for any action on the misdemeanor.

Manning told The Herald Thursday, "I would be surprised if FDLE investigates because the complaints deal more with policy and they are probably tired of hearing about this stuff."

Manning said with the exception of compensatory time he received while he was acting city administrator as well as police chief and the trip with Lt. Frank Taylor to Quantico, Va., to attend the graduation of Capt. Terry Baker from the FBI Academy, all of the things Gunter cited occurred prior to 1985 and the policies had been changed.

Manning said, "How long is he going to live in the past? I would like him to make a step forward instead of two steps back. They (Gunter and Commissioner Lynette Dennis, who have both been critical of Manning) are making the city the laughing stock of the tri-county area. It's getting to be ludicrous."

Among the allegations included in Gunter's complaint are use of the city vehicle for personal reasons; conduct "disruptive, insubordinate, antagonistic and injurious to the city;" a 1984 gambling arrest and disappearance of the personnel file concerning the activity; give

Donald Regan: 'What The Heck Happened Here?'

By Dana Walker
And Judi Hassen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Donald Regan, not reflecting his image as a White House chief of staff with an eagle eye, has portrayed himself to Congress as a man who was blinded by a secretive John Poindexter but who demanded to make the Iran-Contra scandal public upon asking, "What the heck happened here?"

Tan and apparently mellowed five months after leaving the White House under fire, Regan came to the congressional Iran-Contra hearings with an account of being misled and generally ignored in the covert operations involving "sleazy type of characters" that collapsed into President Reagan's worst crisis.

He basically acknowledged weapons were sold to Iran as ransom for American hostages — and he revealed he and the president even knew of a cover story for one of the early shipments. But he described himself as out of the picture otherwise, especially on the diversion of money to Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

"The thing was mishandled from start to finish," Regan grumbled in his first round of testimony Thursday. He agreed to come back for more questions today before a scheduled appearance by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Regan, a Wall Street wizard who joined Reagan's administration as treasury secretary in 1981, moved into the White House four years later and soon became legend for his tight control over the president's schedule and personal tiffs with the president's wife. His combative temper alienated many in Congress.

It was a very different picture Thursday, Regan engaged in lively exchanges with lawmakers, cracking jokes and speaking bluntly without a lawyer about the workings of the White House during the frenetic days of late last year.

The ex-Marine referred to his forced resignation Feb. 27 with some degree of rancor, but he staunchly defended his former boss.

Regan "recalled" with "every manifestation of shock and horror" when he was told of the diversion Nov. 24, Regan testified — a clear indication, in the eyes of one so close to the president, that he indeed would not have agreed with Poindexter and Oliver North about the operation being a "neat idea."

Noting Reagan's acting background, the former chief of staff said, "I'd give him an Academy Award if he knew anything about this. I watched his reaction. ... He couldn't have known it."

Regan portrayed Poindexter, the low-key Navy rear admiral who was Reagan's national security adviser at the time, as the one who kept pushing the United States back into the failed Iran policy and who fought to try to contain the political bombshell even as it was exploding.

Poindexter, who testified this month that he alone approved the diversion and hid it from

Area-Wide Signs Cite Sewer Site Danger

Chuluota Fights Plant

By Ted Carter
Herald Staff Writer

Chuluota homeowners say the rural atmosphere they have enjoyed for so long could quickly vanish if Seminole County allows construction of a sub-regional sewer plant and the high density development that would follow.

Homemade signs posted throughout the community of single-family homes, pasture land and orange groves are warning residents that continued apathy could invite cluster developments and environmental threats. The key to stopping the encroachment of suburbia, they say, is persuading Seminole County commissioners to keep the long-standing rule of one home to an acre for land yet to be developed.

Keeping the minimum lot size at one acre, they say, would remove the incentive for Southern States Utilities Inc. to build a sewer plant to serve about 4,000 homes. The plant is planned for 50 acres of agriculture zoned land just south of Brumley Road. Whether or not the lot-size regulation remains depends on an update of the county's comprehensive land-use plan.

County advisory committees studying possible amendments to the master land-use plan are considering a change that would allow homes on lots of one-half acre, a move that would change the land-use designation from its present rural-residential to low intensity-urban. One major fear is that a change to higher density building would clear the way for developing many of the orange groves which were killed during recent freezes, said Nancy Roth, a member of the citizens group Save South Seminole (SSS).

The county's planning and zoning board will consider the land-use change at a 7 p.m.

public hearing Aug. 5. County commissioners will hold a public hearing on the plan update Aug. 18 at 6 p.m.

Another important meeting is the Aug. 17 meeting of the county's board of adjustment, which is scheduled to act on the request of Southern States Utilities for special exceptions to allow the approximate 100,000-gallons-a-day sewage treatment plant off Brumley Road as well as two deep wells at Brumley Road and Avenue H.

Southern States has been providing sewer service to about 125 dwellings in Chuluota since 1980, when it took over a small waste-water treatment plant on 10th Street.

Roth said the the state Department of Environmental Regulation has added to the fears of the Chuluota-Chula Vista residents by issuing a notice that it intends to approve Southern States' request to build two percolation ponds to handle effluent from the small plant on 10th Street.

Save South Seminole, said Roth, has hired a Tallahassee attorney and Gainesville engineer to represent the group at an administrative hearing SSS hopes will come about through an appeal of the DER's intent-to-approve notice on the percolation ponds. Roth said the group also hopes to employ the lawyer and engineer to represent it at board of adjustment hearings and comprehensive plan hearings.

"They feel we have sound grounds for opposing the sewer

City Hall First Wish For Lake Mary

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary City Manager Bob Norris said he will recommend the city's proposed city hall complex be the first item on a "wish list" of projects it wants funded by the penny local option sales tax Seminole County is going to place on the ballot for a Nov. 3, referendum vote.

Norris said he will make his presentation on the list at the city commission meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 6, at the Lake Mary City Hall located at Country Club Road.

Lake Mary residents will be asked to choose if they want the tax on the basis that it will help pay for the cost of the complex. Norris said that road improvement and maintenance will follow the city hall project in priority on the list that the voters will see in the election booth.

Norris said he thought the cities all endorsed putting the question on the ballot and letting the voters decide if they want the tax.

"But beyond that, all they (city governments) can do is provide information on the tax to the voters," he said.

The money coming from the "infrastructure tax," as it is commonly referred to, may be used only for the construction of public facilities in the county. It may also be used to back bonds for those types of projects.

The Seminole County Commission voted on July 28, to notify the supervisor of elections of its intent to put the question of the penny sales tax to a countywide vote.

The seven cities located within the county were requested to turn in the lists of what they wanted to see done with their share of the projected $19 million a year that could come from the tax if it's passed by county residents.

According to state law those projects submitted by the cities must accompany the referendum question on the ballot.

Mexican Plane Crash Kills At Least 42

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A cargo plane carrying at least eight people and a team of polo ponies crashed onto a busy highway, crushed 25 cars, slammed into a house and burst into flames, leaving at least 42 people dead.

Officials said the dead were found in crushed cars and crumbled buildings, while the eight people known to have been aboard the plane — including four Americans — survived the disaster Thursday on the outskirts of Mexico City. There were unconfirmed reports of a ninth person aboard the aircraft.

Television reports placed the death toll at more than 50, with 40 others injured. An official at the Paloalto Mortuary, 3 miles from the crash site, told United Press International that the facility had received 42 bodies.

The plane, a Boeing 377 four-propeller cargo aircraft, crashed minutes after taking off at 5:01 p.m. in a light rain from

POLICE

IN BRIEF

Hatchet-Wielding Man Arrested, Charged With Battery Of Woman

A Sanford man was arrested on an aggravated battery charge after he allegedly struck a woman with a hatchet.

The woman reported that the man came to her residence around 9:30 p.m. Wednesday. They began to argue, whereupon the man reportedly pulled out a hatchet and began to chase the woman and threatened to kill her. She said he hit the wall several times with the hatchet and then struck her on the head. The woman then fled. There was no cut on the woman but there was a lump on her head, the deputy reported.

Arrested at 9:58 p.m. at 200 E. Sipes Ave., was Barry Leonard Montgomery, 20, of 2540 Byrd Ave. Bond was set at $5,000.

Driving Under Influence Arrests

The following persons have been arrested in Seminole County on a charge of driving under the influence:

—Kenneth Christopher McCullough, 23, of 303 S. Edgemon St., Winter Springs, arrested Wednesday at 7:38 p.m. at State Road 434 and Grant Ave., in Longwood after an accident.

—Joseph Patrick Gagnon, 21, of 601 Briarcliff St., Sanford, arrested Thursday at 107 a.m. at State Street and U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford, after a near accident.

Ranting Woman Attracts Police

An Altamonte Springs woman was taken into custody after making a scene at a grocery store.

The 32-year-old woman, shoeless and without a wallet, was at the entrance of a Publix store yelling at customers, according to a deputy's report. The incident occurred at 1:34 p.m. Wednesday.

The woman would apparently say "of god" to some customers and "of the devil" to others. She told the deputy she was pregnant with "baby Jesus" and planned to live on the street for a year, eating nothing and drinking only water.

Attempts to reach a relative or doctor of the woman were unsuccessful so the officer took her into custody in fear that she may harm herself. She was taken to Florida Hospital-Altamonte Springs for a check-up, then to the Sanford Crisis Unit.

Filmflammers In Gas Mart Scam

A gas station store was filmflammed out of cash by two men who confused the clerk by repeated changing of large bills for smaller bills.

The scam was run around 11:25 p.m. Wednesday at the Mobil Mart, 1999 W. State Road 434 at Interstate 4.

The clerk said two men entered the store and each bought small items with $20 bills. Each man then said they had smaller bills with which to pay for the items. Each man then wanted smaller bills for the larger bills and money exchanged hands several times.

After the men left, the clerk did a tally and found the cash register to be $49.35 short.

Maybe Bogus FBI Man Lurking

A sheriff's deputy looked into an incident in which a man told a south Seminole County boy he was working for the FBI and was looking for an escaped prisoner.

The incident occurred around 6 p.m. Wednesday.

According to the report the man asked a 16-year-old boy if he knew a particular man. The boy said he did not and the man asked him to take him to the landlord so he could ask the landlord the same questions.

While driving to the landlord's residence, the man said he was working for the FBI and was looking for the man who he said was an escaped prisoner from the state prison at Starke. The man did not show any identification.

A computer check on the man's name did not show a prisoner of that name. The deputy could not determine if the man worked for the FBI.

Sanford Burglaries, Thefts

Elwyn E. Humphreys, 1107 W. 20th St., reported to police that the covered box of his pickup was broken into between 7 p.m. Monday and 1:30 p.m. Tuesday and a Skill saw, concrete saw and a 100-ft. extension cord, with total value of $1,138, were stolen.

Police are investigating a shooting which occurred about 7:50 p.m. Tuesday at the Jay and Debra Turner residence, Apt. 50, 4220 S. Orlando Drive. Mrs. Turner was shot through the shoulder with a 9 mm hand gun. Police reported that Turner told them the gun discharged accidentally when he tried to snatch it from his wife. Mrs. Turner told police she was cleaning the gun.

Deborah R. Peck, 134 Mayfair Circle, reported her purse was snatched about 9:15 p.m. Tuesday when she was in the parking lot of the Winn-Dixie store at 2485 W. Airport Blvd. She told police some youths drove up behind her and grabbed the purse, containing $27, off her shoulder, then drove off.

Police Probe Rape Spree

Sanford Police are investigating seven rapes and two attempted rapes that occurred earlier this month and in June. The rapes and attempts, on women from age 25 to 79, occurred between the first of June and July 8. There have been no rapes reported since that day. Three investigators have been assigned to the cases, said Capt. Charles Fagan.

Fagan said most of the victims were women who lived alone. The incidents occurred throughout the city with three of them occurring on North Palmetto Avenue.

Another theme that seems to run through the assaults is that the rapists gained access to the women through open windows in their homes, said Fagan.

Police believe three rapes and one attempted rape were committed by the same suspect.

Florida Climbs Tax Ranking Ladder

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida's tax ranking jumped eight spots in 1986, from 44th to 36th place among the states, and the days when Florida was a low-tax state are coming to an end, Florida TaxWatch officials said Thursday.

The non-profit, business supported tax watchdog organization said Florida outpaced national growth as far as the per capita tax burden is concerned for the fourth consecutive year. The tax burden increased by 9.4

percent last year. The national average increase was 5.8 percent.

The figures do not include the sweeping new consumer services tax approved this year. The services tax will raise an estimated $750 million during the fiscal year, to rank Florida in the 20s or low 30s among the states next year, said TaxWatch President Dominic Calabro.

When other new tax hikes are added in, Florida taxpayers face $823 million in new taxes this year. A report released Wednesday by the National Conference of State Legislatures in Indianapolis put the 1987 increase at 8.7 percent, the fifth highest jump among the 48 states surveyed.

"Florida will be a moderate tax state, where in the past it has been a low tax state," Calabro said at a news conference.

"It's always bad news to pay higher taxes," Calabro said. "But if there's reason to believe our citizens will get the roads built, have better educated citizens, reduce illiteracy, improve water quality, build public facilities and infrastructure, it's very good news that our investment is paying off."

The average taxpayer in Florida paid $781.17 last year in state taxes alone, $88 more than in 1985 but still below the national average of nearly $950.

Since 1982, only Arizona has seen faster growth in state tax collections. The growth in Arizona has been 72 percent since 1982, compared to 64.2 percent for Florida.

Calabro said the increase was due mainly to a increased taxes on real estate deals and intangible property like stocks, and higher drivers license fees approved by the 1985 Legislature.

Rapid population growth and taxes paid by tourists also contributed, but the 1986 increases more than doubled the combined growth of population and inflation, which increased by 30 percent since 1982.

The estimated 40 million tourists who came to Florida were not factored into the population side of the tax rate equation, but the taxes they paid were counted.

Father Faces Murder Charges; Baby Dies After 2-Year Coma

The State Attorney's Office in Sanford is considering whether to file murder charges against a convicted child abuser whose victim died Tuesday after a two-year coma.

Christopher Gettys, 26 months old, died Tuesday at the Broward Children's Center in Pompano Beach. The child has been blind, deaf and unresponsive since a beating in August 1985.

His father, James Michael Gettys, 25, of 147 Lakeshore Drive, Longwood, is serving five years on a child abuse conviction arising from that incident.

The child was transferred to the children's hospital in April from Orlando Regional Medical Center. Insurance was no longer paying for the infant's care at the center and the hospital has assumed about $230,000 in costs.

While the child was under the responsibility of the State Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services at the children's hospital the state paid the bill.

Prior to the move, the child's mother visited the infant weekly and asked when the move was approved to do all that could possibly be done to extend the child's life. Doctors testified that the child had no chance of recovery.

After Gettys' conviction, prosecutors said if the child died Gettys could be tried for murder.

Gettys injured the child after Gettys became irritated when the infant would not stop crying. He picked the baby up and threw him in the crib three times, according to the state.

Gettys argued that the child's problems were caused by a breathing disorder. Testimony, however, showed the infant was suffering from what was described as whiplash.

Sanford Church Faces Mortgage Foreclosure

A mortgage foreclosure suit has been filed against a Sanford church reportedly because it is four months behind in payments.

Barbara Goldstein, a trustee of the property, filed suit against The House of Prayer Baptist Church of Living God, 505 E. 3rd St., just west of Pine Avenue.

The suit states the church, represented by its pastor and president Canene C. E. Johnson, entered an agreement in November, 1983, to buy the property for $11,250. It was to pay a $215-a-month mortgage payment.

According to the suit, payments have not been made since March 15 and about $9,000 are due.

Johnson could not be reached for comment.

The case has been assigned to Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr. No hearing date has been set.

Envelope Of Hot Air Traps Much Of East

By United Press International

A stubborn envelope of heat was trapped over much of the nation east of the Rockies for the 12th straight day today and showed no signs of moving to bring relief from temperatures above 90 in the East and near 100 in the Plains.

The heat wave has been blamed for 65 deaths during the last 12 days and health officials cautioned the elderly to take precautions because they are the most susceptible to heat stroke.

"It is basically the same pattern we've had all week," said Harry Gordon, National Weather Service meteorologist. "It's a stagnant pattern and it's decided not to move."

The 93-degree reading Thursday in the nation's capital marked the 23rd day in July the temperature has been 90 degrees or higher, breaking a record for July. The previous record for July was 21 days set in 1980.

Temperatures hit 100 degrees Thursday in 11 states in the South, the Plains and the desert Southwest.

University of Nebraska extension climatologist Ralph Neld said continued hot, dry weather could cut corn yields in Nebraska by 10 percent. Temperatures above 100 degrees in some parts of Nebraska have also begun to weaken cattle, he said.

In Des Moines, where the temperature hit 99 degrees Thursday, state officials said nearly 40 percent of Iowa's nursing homes provide no air conditioning.

Betty Grandquist, director of the Department of Elder Affairs, said she is concerned about the lack of air conditioning in the homes and has asked a network of volunteers to check individual facilities to make sure the elderly are being properly cared for during the heat wave.

ing the heat wave.

Officials in St. Louis opened emergency cooling centers Thursday as temperatures soared toward the upper 90s.

"We are most concerned for the seniors because they are most at risk from the heat," said Sara Henryson-Herm of Operation Weather Survival, an organization that operates cooling centers throughout the St. Louis area.

The heat has been blamed for 50 deaths in Philadelphia and 15 more in Indiana, Illinois, South Carolina, Georgia, Wyoming, Missouri and South Dakota since high temperatures locked in 12 days ago.

It was 100 degrees Thursday in Kansas City where the Salvation Army opened seven shelters to victims of the heat wave.

"We're prepared to open them at night if it gets worse," said spokeswoman Margaret Naylor.

A tornado that tore down the New York State Thruway and jammed rush-hour traffic ripped the roof off a restaurant and forced deaf diners to scurry into the cellar.

Norman Gerlach watched Thursday's twister slam into houses and toss cars about as it struck the suburban Buffalo community around 4:30 p.m. No injuries were reported.

"It shook the hell out of the house," Gerlach said, shaking his head while surveying his broken windows and shingle-stripped roof.

"The wind was so strong. All of a sudden I see parts of siding and trees flying by." Gerlach's car sat in a twisted pile of wood that had been his garage.

The tornado tore through the Holiday Showcase Restaurant, ripping off the roof and partially collapsing the building. Diners who saw the twister coming hustled a group of deaf patrons to the cellar, police said.

Local Report

The high temperature Thursday in Sanford was 95 degrees and the overnight low was 71 degrees as reported by the University of Florida Agricultural Research and Education Center, Celery Avenue. There was .02 inches of rainfall recorded. Mostly sunny today with expected high in the low to middle 90s and a 30 percent chance of afternoon showers.

Area Forecast

Today...partly cloudy with scattered afternoon thunderstorms. Highs in the low 90s. Wind variable 5 to 10 mph. Chance of rain 50 percent.

Winter Springs Rejects Interlocal Agreement, Will Sue County

By Alberta Mason
UCF Intern

"Let the courts decide!"
That was the unanimous decision of the Winter Springs City Commission when the heated topic of signing the Interlocal Agreement with Seminole County once again came before the board for discussion at its regular session Monday evening. With words like "unfair" and "inequitable" ringing clear in the chambers, the crux of the city's objection was not just what they felt was the one-sided nature of the agreement—to the benefit of the county, but the threat to the city's rights to control its own destiny.

The dispute stems from the county wanting to assess and collect road impact fees on new residential and commercial development within the city. Two other cities, Casselberry and Sanford are also named in the declaratory judgment for refusing to allow the collection of the fees.

"I'm annoyed at best with the county," said Commissioner Cindy Kaehler. "to think that they can come in here and do what they please with the protection of the court." Kaehler has been vocal all along about her displeasure with the agreement.

"I have very great concern," Kaehler told the other commission members. "We have been treated unfairly in the past (by the county) and I doubt we will be treated fairly in the future."

Recommending that the city file suit against the county, Kaehler announced, "I for one am not going to roll over and play dead!"

Both Kaehler and Mayor John V. Torcaso told the other members that nothing short of a court ruling would resolve the stalemate in the negotiations between the city and the county concerning the acceptability of the agreement.

Torcaso informed the board that he too was in favor of filing suit based on "what I've heard from the commissioners and my own thoughts."

The commission's decision was a reaction to a recent lawsuit filed against the city by Seminole County Commissioners seeking a "declaratory judgment" from the court. (A declaratory judgment is a determination made by the court in an attempt to resolve a controversy between parties in a legal action.)

"The county is not trying to take control of their city," said Seminole County Administrator Ken Hooper. "We have been over this with them time and time again. These are county roads...given to us by the state and the county was told to maintain them."

By filing suit, the County was apparently reacting to the city's recent adoption of a one-year moratorium on impact fees and is looking to the courts for a ruling on its legality. The fees are used to help pay for growth-related needs such as road improvement and are generally assessed on new commercial and residential development.

The moratorium was enacted July 13 and at that time Mayor John Torcaso stated he was "looking forward to a happy reunion between the city and the county."

Torcaso read a letter submitted to the panel by Jacqueline Koch, the city's director of administrative services and city planner. Koch's letter described the county's "fee structure and plan" for imposing impact fees within the city as "not fair or equitable" and also recommended that the "court decide the issue."

Torcaso expressed concern that the court "might strike down the moratorium" if it found in favor of the county. "If we adopt it (meaning the interlocal agreement)," the Mayor asked City Attorney Frank Kruppenbacher, "then the moratorium goes out the window?"

Kruppenbacher responded affirmatively and added that "the county was not required (by statute) to be equitable with their road improvements."

Kruppenbacher also advised the board that he could not "advocate adopting or not adopting" the interlocal agreement as it would have to be a "policy decision" of the commission.

However, he cautioned the board that if they wished to go forward with a counter-suit to provide him with a "memo outlining every complaint you have" regarding the agreement so he could incorporate them into their suit.

"We can't keep going back to court on this every month with a new issue, said the city attorney. "...Any aspect you don't like must be challenged in its entirety."

The city's response to the county's motion for declaratory judgment must be filed with the court by today.

Each commissioner expressed total dissatisfaction with the agreement before a final vote was taken and expressed a desire to "sue the county."

"I don't think there is any other choice for us at this point in time," Kaehler remarked, "or the rights of the city as a municipality will never be clear."

Commissioner Phil Kulbes agreed and went on to add several more criticisms to what appeared to be a growing litany of complaints.

Kulbes expressed concern that the city's agreement provided "no specific timetable as to when the roads will be built." He questioned Hooper about why the county's agreement with Altamonte Springs set out a schedule for improvements to certain roads.

"Altamonte's agreement is more specific," Hooper explained, "because the county has pledged funds to Altamonte to be used for roads...and they pledged to use it on roads."

Commissioners Art Hoffman and William Jacobs expressed concern that because of the county's seemingly restrictive road classifications some of the city's heavily travelled roads would not get proper attention.

Hooper stated that the county used "DOT (Department of Transportation) guidelines" when designating the roads.

Kulbes said that "the DOT should follow its own rules."

The amount of the impact fee—$529—was questioned by Hoffman. "What if," asked Hoffman of Hooper, "the monies collected from the fees fell short of the $529? Where would the difference come from?"

Hooper assured the panel that it would be "the county's problem to come up with" the additional funds but that it would not raise the impact fee itself to make up the difference.

Although Hooper later stated that the county would have the "final say" concerning any recommendations presented by review boards appointed to look into the fee structure situation.

Commissioner Martin Trencher presented a motion that "the city attorney be instructed to take whatever action was necessary against the county to defend the city's position."

Trencher's motion was unanimously approved.

The city attorney mentioned the possibility of requesting a change of venue from the court to ensure a "fair hearing." The idea received the commission's hearty support.

Said Kaehler, "I doubt we'd get a fair hearing in Seminole County before a judiciary controlled by the Seminole County Commission."

"I'm tired of him (meaning Hooper) pussyfooting around with it," remarked Kaehler.

The county's plan calls for a 20-year projection of traffic growth patterns to be worked out on a computer model and improvements made before roads are functioning over capacity.

Right Approach Near Consensus

During the last two years, an unusual consensus between liberals and conservatives has emerged. It calls for the overhaul of the current welfare system. That agreement began gaining momentum several months ago when the National Governors Association vowed to reform Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the nation's largest welfare program. The possibility of a real breakthrough comes now with the introduction of the Family Security Act by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Moynihan, a leading expert on welfare programs, has proposed a comprehensive reform that would emphasize parental responsibility rather than governmental hand-outs. That in itself is a good place to begin.

Under the present system, 3.8 million poor families with 7.3 million children, receive nearly $18 billion in income-support each year from the federal and state governments. Moynihan's bill would gradually replace the basic cash program with new federal-state assistance to supplement child support. It would authorize the automatic withholding of child support from the wages of the mother and, more important, the father. The Moynihan proposal would place primary responsibility for supporting children where it belongs — with both parents.

It also would deny AFDC to unmarried youths 18 and under, who live separately from their parents. Such a reform could discourage youngsters from having children in order to gain a state-subsidized apartment of their own.

The bill would require many welfare recipients to work or to enroll in education or job-training programs. Another plus is that the proposal gives the states wide latitude in structuring such programs as they see fit. For their part, the states would be required to pay for child care, transportation and other work-related expenses. The bill would require states to include two-parent families in the system. Presently, 26 states provide AFDC payments to such families. And those persons who get off the welfare rolls would retain their Medicaid benefits for up to nine months in order to ease the transition.

To be sure, comprehensive welfare reform cannot be done on the cheap. The Congressional Budget Office estimates the Family Security Act would cost the federal government $2.3 billion during the next five years. Still, that seems a relative bargain, given that Washington currently shells out $10 billion per year on AFDC and the states pick up the tab for the remaining $8 billion. If one assumes that the Moynihan measure can enable millions of people to get off the dole and get a job, then the investment is indeed worthwhile.

This much appears certain: AFDC has outlived its usefulness. Established in 1935 to aid the children of widows, the number of children in this program nearly doubled during the late 1960s. Even though the federal and state governments have poured billions into the program, poverty among children has increased 20 percent during the past decade.

Little wonder. The current system provides few incentives for work and discourages many persons from leaving the welfare rolls. Indeed, government studies have shown that 25 percent of AFDC families receive more benefits for nine years or more. Worse still are the second and third-generation welfare recipients for whom dependence is a way of life.

If the government is to break this crippling cycle of dependency, it must stop treating the poor as helpless wards of the state and promote a sense of responsibility among them. Moynihan's proposal is the most effective means of achieving that elusive goal.

HELEN THOMAS

Shultz Doesn't Want To Believe The Obvious

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz had a familiar complaint on the witness stand at the Iran-Contra scandal hearings. He said guerrilla warfare had been conducted against him by the national security staff.

His predecessor, Gen. Alexander Haig, coined the phrase when he was secretary of state, feeling, with much justification, that he was being undermined by the White House staff and NSC aides. Haig was forced out.

There is no question that in the Carter administration national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski outmaneuvered and undercut Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. Vance resigned when President Carter, advised and abetted by Brzezinski, undertook the ill planned, ill fated rescue mission to retrieve the American hostages from Iran and lost the lives of eight airmen in the process.

Vance just happened not to be at the meeting in which Carter approved the mission, which in hindsight was born of panic rather than good sense.

Even Henry Kissinger, the master of manipulation and intrigue, fought against having a new national security adviser in the White House and kept that hat for a time even after he was appointed secretary of state.

In the realm of it takes one to know one, Kissinger accumulated so much power as national security adviser under President Nixon that he relegated Secretary of State William P. Rogers to the role of mere figurehead.

Rogers was even cut out of the top secret decision by Nixon to send Kissinger to China for negotiations that led to Nixon's breakthrough trip to the mainland in 1972.

Proximity is everything in the White House. And even though the State Department is only a few blocks away, the national security adviser's office is only a few steps away. Besides the NSC adviser has the president's ear every day, briefing him on world developments and intelligence reports.

Shultz sees President Reagan only twice a week, and his message obviously did not go through. Shultz traveled around the world emphatically stating there would be no deals, no negotiations with terrorists for two years while Reagan was dealing with Iran. He just didn't happen to let his top diplomat know about it in detail.

Reagan's succession of national security advisers, Richard Allen, William Clark, Robert McFarlane and Adm. John Poindexter, were in the daily business of advising the president and implementing his wishes. Add to that the late CIA Director William Casey, who had unlimited access to Reagan.

One of the poignant moments in Shultz's testimony was when he said he tried, to no avail, to reach Reagan on a Saturday to angrily protest a nine-point plan to win over Tehran's intervention with the Lebanese kidnapers to win freedom for the hostages.

But he succeeded the next day in calling Reagan and then was invited over to the White House to discuss the matter, which he said came as a complete surprise to the president.

ROBERT WALTERS

Delivering Phony Numbers

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When a senior federal official recently complained that "postal service is bad and customers are unhappy," an indignant Postmaster General Preston R. Tisch cited "service performance percentages" to rebut the criticism.

Although few outsiders have ever heard of those performance standards, they are the Postal Service's single most important indicator of its ability to deliver mail in a timely manner.

Postal Service officials ought to know the dangers of relying upon statistics: More than a century ago, British statesman Benjamin Disraeli noted that "there are three kinds of lies — lies, damned lies and statistics." More recently, author Rex Stout explained, "There are two kinds of statistics — the kind you look up and the kind you make up."

However, more than a decade ago, the Postal Service established elaborate performance standards for delivery of every class of mail it carries, from Express Mail to Parcel Post.

Stamped, first-class letters addressed to destination in the same metropolitan area in which they are mailed are to be delivered the next day. Those mailed to recipients within 500 to 600 miles are to be delivered within two days and all others are to be delivered within three days.

The Postal Service regularly conducts tests to determine its ability to meet those standards, with favorable results ballyhooed by the quasi-government agency. "Stamped, overnight first-class mail was delivered at a record-equaling 95.5 percent on-time pace," Tisch boasts in his 1986 annual report.

Similarly, when Federal Trade Commission Chairman Daniel Oliver recently was openly critical of Tisch's organization, the postmaster general lectured him: "The Postal Service (in 1986) broke past records of mail delivery performance in six out of nine measured categories and tied the record for the seventh."

With those performance standards now firmly entrenched as the universal measure of competence, producing constantly improving numbers for the agency's senior management has become an all-consuming task for local postmasters.

In cities throughout the country, the final weekday pickup of outgoing mail from most downtown office buildings traditionally has been at 5 p.m. or slightly later.

Navy's Good-Cop-Bad-Cop Goon Squad

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — Every TV viewer is familiar with the "good cop, bad cop" technique used by police interrogators to disarm their suspects. Some agents of the Naval Investigative Service have apparently been watching too much television.

As we've reported, the same organization of superleuths that brought you the botched investigation of the Moscow Marine guards also mishandled earlier, less notorious cases by trampling on the rights of suspects. We detailed the harassment-by-investigation of Tim Reid, a civilian Navy engineer who incurred the wrath of the brass by blowing the whistle on a multimillion-dollar waste in a submarine overhaul project.

One NIS investigation involved an alleged "death threat" of comic-book proportions against Reid's Navy superior, complete with mysterious note, a broken Darth Vader cup and an ace of spades. It also involved interrogation of Reid.

BEN WATTENBERG

Letter From Moynihan

I am one of a select number of Americans — there are only 1.2 million of us — who receive, for free, what may well be the most interesting, erudite and informative political publication of the moment. It is called "Letter to New York." It never talks down to its readers, and its author is Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan. Anyone who wants it need only write the senator.

Now, there are lots of congressional newsletters; in fact, too many, coming out too often. The art form might be called Neo-Self-Congratulatory. That is not Moynihan's way, but he's not an ordinary politician. He has served four presidents in domestic and foreign posts. He has a Ph.D. in public international law. He was a professor at Harvard and MIT. Now 60, he knows a great deal about a great deal, and, as a teacher, loves to tell you about it. In person, or in a prose style that is somehow classical, anecdotal and meandering yet ordered, uniquely his own, subject to caricature but never imitation. Most everyone in the policy community has disagreed with him at one point or another, including me, but he is surely one of our most knowledgeable legislators.

All this suffuses his bimonthly pamphleteering, that's his word, which he assures me, has a noble history in American letters.

Professor Moynihan's current newsletter is about arms control. He tells us he is writing it on an Air Force plane coming back from the Geneva arms talks, and that the plane bears the logo "The United States of America," designed by Raymond Loewy at the request of Jacqueline Kennedy. He introduces us to "The Big Russian," a high Soviet official he met with and dined with in Geneva.

Moynihan sketches in the tortured recent history of nuclear arms control: After the signing of SALT I in 1972, the Soviets deployed the new SS-20, an intermediate-range missile threatening our Western European allies. This was "a particularly unnerving exercise of bad faith on the part of the Soviets." After SALT II in 1979, it was apparent to Moynihan that "Somehow, insanely, arms agreements were leading to more arms."

He had an odd admirer. Moynihan recounts a 1979 call from the pre-presidential Ronald Reagan, endorsing a Moynihan article saying that the two superpowers had to negotiate down, not up. Of Reagan's view of what was happening in the 1970s, he says, "Reagan watched this sequence with considerable clarity...."

But now, finally, there is the likelihood of the first cut in missile history, a U.S.-USSR treaty banning intermediate-range missiles on both sides. Is it a good deal for us? "It's a risk worth taking," says Moynihan; it might take us away from "unending escalation." Moynihan has been critical of Ronald Reagan's presidency, but on arms control he gives him high marks. Today, Moynihan notes, the proposed treaty scares some conservatives "who never believed this president really wanted reductions. But he did."

As he listens to the Big Russian (a well-placed source says it's Vorontsev, the deputy foreign minister), Moynihan speculates about what's been going on: Since the advent of glasnost, the Soviets have changed — on the surface. Thus, the Big Russian actually deprecates the Soviet involvement in Afghanistan. Gorbachev looks wisely at a market economy as a way of bailing out Marxist economic stagnation.

What does it all mean? Could it be a third Russian revolution, Moynihan asks. Maybe.

Growth Hormone Abuse

By G.L. Marshall

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Short kids can grow to normal height with regular injections of growth hormone, but a Medical College of Virginia professor says the substance has potential for abuse by athletes seeking greater brawn.

Growth hormone therapy for slow-growing children was born in 1962, but its own growth spurt began with the marketing of a synthetic version in 1985.

While the vastly increased availability was good news for many, "the bad news is the potential for abusing growth hormone is greater than ever," according to Dr. Paul Kaplowitz of the Medical College of Virginia.

Some adult athletes are trying to obtain growth hormones because they can work just like a steroid without being detected in Olympic-style drug tests, he said.

Kaplowitz, an associate professor of pediatrics at the college's Children's Medical Center, said, "There are some people out there who firmly believe growth hormone injections will improve athletic performance. The basis for that is a growth hormone is an anabolic agent. It helps build muscles at the expense of fat."

While he has not seen a study that proves it, the thing that "makes it more appealing to athletes is that anabolic steroids are different enough in structure that you can tell from a urine test if someone is using an anabolic steroid."

"If you were taking growth hormone, you are taking a product that's essentially identical to what the body is normally making and therefore a simple urine test will not detect that you are taking it," he continued. "It probably doesn't work as well as anabolic steroids, but it is theoretically undetectable by usual methods. That's why some athletes are trying to get a hold of it."

When it comes to children, the rule for growth hormone therapy to increase height is the earlier the better because by the time a child finishes puberty "hormone treatments are completely ineffective," Kaplowitz said.

"By the time it is clear someone has real athletic potential, they are usually well into puberty and their final stature is fairly well determined by that time," Kaplowitz said. "Starting a child at 13 or 14, even in massive doses, would probably make little difference."

say they are not entitled to a union representative," Shposki said. "Rules say the lawyer has a right to be part of the questioning."

We've learned of another defendant who says the Naval Investigative Service did a job on him: Ronald Ashley, a former Marine private at New River, N.C. He was convicted of transmitting a bomb threat in 1982.

At the time of the bomb threat, Ashley was waiting for his requested honorable discharge to be processed. Instead, he was interrogated by an NIS agent and signed a confession. He was then court-martialed, convicted and given a dishonorable discharge.

In the agent's eyes "I was guilty before I walked in," Ashley told us, adding: "He said the discharge was sitting on the table for me — if I just admit I did it."

At Ashley's court-martial, his lawyer pointed out that the NIS agent had interrogated only one suspect, had failed to ask Ashley for evidence that would corroborate his confession, and relied solely on his own recollection of the interview instead of using a tape recorder. A Navy spokesman confirmed that this last practice is common.

Louis Font, a military appeals lawyer, told us he has no doubt that one of the Moscow Marines, Cpl. Arnold Bracy, would have been court-martialed if there hadn't been such extensive publicity. "NIS is used to military juries believing them," he said. "The statements of what they say during an interrogation shade the truth" (All charges against Bracy were dropped last month.)

The Navy spokesman, Lt. Ken Ross, acknowledged that the NIS is "taking a beating" on the Moscow embassy case, but said that in some "difficult" situations the investigators must first get a confession and then "work backward" to gather substantiating evidence. "You take what you can get when you can get it," he said.

Attorney Shposki was harder on the Naval Investigative Service. He said it is "management's way of getting rid of undesirables."

Iran Claims 'Kamikaze' Troops; 3 Still Missing From 'Copter

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — An Iranian commander says 365,000 troops are poised for "kamikaze operations" against U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf, where Americans received another blow when a Navy helicopter crashed while trying to land, killing one man and leaving three missing.

U.S. military officials said a SH-3G Sea King with nine people aboard crashed into the gulf at 10:58 a.m. EDT Thursday while attempting to land on the command ship USS LaSalle. One man was killed and three were reported missing.

The crash occurred as Iran stepped up its verbal attack Thursday on the United States. Hojatoleslam Mohammad Ali Rahmani, commander of the "Basej," or mobilization force, told the Tehran newspaper Kayhan his troops were ready for "any kind of kamikaze operations" against the American military.

The Basej's, a paramilitary force that serves as an auxiliary to Iran's fanatical Revolutionary Guards, are sent often without proper training to the front lines of the nearly 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war, where they suffer high casualty rates.

2 Lebanese Killed By Car Bomb

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Switzerland's Embassy, the apparent target of a car bomb that killed two Lebanese and injured a third, already was on alert because of threats by Moslem extremists angered over the imprisonment in Geneva of an accused Shiite hijacker.

The shadowy "Green Cells Organization" had threatened to strike at Swiss interests in retaliation for the arrest on July 24 in Geneva of a Lebanese Shiite, Hussein Ali Mohammed Hariri, in the hijacking of an Air Afrique DC-10 jetliner in which a Frenchman was killed.

Police said the bomb in Thursday's was hidden under a French-made Peugeot car parked a few hundred yards from the Swiss Embassy and near the former U.S. Embassy building in west Beirut.

ANC Blamed In Bombing

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — White dissident Frederik van Zyl Slabbert arrived home amid heavy security today, 24 hours after a car bomb injured 68 people and three weeks after leading white moderates in talks with nationalist rebels.

Defense Minister Gen. Magnus Malan blamed the outlawed African National Congress for Thursday's blast near a downtown Johannesburg army base. Police said the explosion was the biggest, though not the deadliest, in the ANC's 26-year guerrilla war against white rule in South Africa.

Strikes Vowed In Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Mourners chanted anti-military slogans at the burial of a student slain by police, and groups demanding an end to military domination of Panama called for a new general strike to increase pressure on the government.

The National Civic Crusade, a coalition of 107 business groups spearheading opposition to the military backed government of President Eric Arturo Delvalle, said Thursday it would step up its campaign of civil disobedience to put pressure on the regime.

Abortion Restrictions Toughened; Action Applauded, Deplored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has riled some and placated others with a series of "practical steps" to prohibit government-backed family planning programs from mentioning abortion when counseling pregnant women.

"I am delighted with the president's rules," said Jo Ann Gasper, an anti-abortion activist who recently was fired as the administrator of the government's $142.5 million family planning program.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., whose Labor and Human Resources Committee has jurisdiction over the program, said, "The president's recent proposal is based on illusion and not on facts ... and we should ignore these distractions."

Reagan announced Thursday that the Department of Health and Human Services will tighten restrictions on 4,500 federally supported family planning centers while the administration continues to press for a constitutional amendment to prohibit abortion on demand.

Poor Fewer But In Dire Straits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of every five children in America lives below the poverty line. Women run half of all poor households. Two-parent Hispanic families are poorer than black families, but individual Hispanics are richer than individual blacks.

Those statistics were part of a flood of data let loose Thursday by the Census Bureau that showed Americans as a whole have been faring better since 1983, but that certain groups remain in quite dire straits.

Overall, for example, the government said the number of people living below the poverty line fell by 700,000 to 32.4 million in 1986, while the poverty rate dropped 0.4 percent to encompass 13.6 percent of all Americans.

Both the rate and the number continue a general reduction of poverty in America since 1983, just after the last recession ended. In that year 35.3 million people, or 15.2 percent of the population, were considered poor.

The poverty line varies according to the number of people and their status in a family. For a family of four, the threshold in 1986 was $11,203.

3 New Mexican Escapees Caught

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (UPI) — Two multiple killers and a convicted robber, the last of seven convicts who staged a murderous Independence Day breakout from a New Mexico prison, were caught by police who were tipped off by an 11-year-old girl one of the fugitives had kidnapped, authorities said.

Jimmy Neal Kinslow, a three-time killer, was arrested Thursday as he was leaving a motel near where he had released the little girl.

Kinslow, 28, drew a .357 Magnum pistol as black-garbed Garden Grove police and FBI agents approached. Richard Bretzing, head of the FBI's Los Angeles office, told a news conference.

U.S. Magistrate Ronald Rose in Santa Ana ordered them held without bail.

Mutiny, Maybe Murder, Probed

PORT CANAVERAL (UPI) — Two crewmen of the shrimp Leslie Rae face mutiny and perhaps murder charges today for allegedly attacking the boat's skipper and mate, beating them and throwing them overboard.

The first mate lived to tell the tale but the skipper still had not been found.

"At the very least they will be charged with conspiracy but we anticipate the charges that go before the U.S. magistrate will be mutiny," said FBI agent Larry Curtin.

All charges, he said, come under the federal piracy statutes.

Federal agents were en route to the Brevard County jail at Sharpe to take Billy Eugene Gossett Jr., 22, and William Leroy Rector, 21, to Orlando for an appearance before Magistrate Donald Dietrich.

Court and law enforcement officials said precise charges would be determined at a conference with federal prosecutors before the magistrate's hearing, tentatively scheduled for early afternoon.

The ship's cook, Maria Barnes, 18, was released Thursday night when the Leslie Rae was escorted to Port Canaveral by a Coast Guard cutter after an FBI investigation at sea, because investigators determined she was not involved in the alleged mutiny.

The first mate, Willie Charpentier Jr., 21, was in the water for 12 hours before an Air Force helicopter found him Thursday morning. He was hospitalized in stable condition with head wounds and dehydration and told authorities the crew had mutinied Wednesday.

The Coast Guard conducted a massive search for the 65-foot shrimp boat's captain, Phil Roush of Tampa, but called off the effort at nightfall and held little hope he was still alive.

"From what the mate said, we think (the captain) was beaten up pretty bad when he hit the water," Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Bill Simpson said.

Barnes appeared distraught and in tears when the crew was led ashore in handcuffs Thursday night. One of the crewmen snarled an obscenity at reporters and refused to answer questions.

Charpentier told investigators the crew attacked Roush and threw him overboard after a dispute Wednesday. Then, Charpentier said, the two men turned on him, beat him and forced him to jump overboard without a life jacket.

The men then sent a radio distress call to the Coast Guard at 8 a.m. Thursday reporting their captain and first mate were missing.

"They said, 'We woke up and we guess they must have fallen overboard during the night.' But when we found the mate, he had a somewhat different version to tell," Simpson said.

Authorities located the Leslie Rae about 22 miles off Port Canaveral and a Coast Guard helicopter lowered FBI agents and a Brevard County sheriff's investigator onto the white and blue-trimmed vessel to detain the crew.

Steve Cox, a co-owner of the shrimp, which is registered in Tampa, said he still hoped Roush would be rescued.

"It's very shocking to all of us," Cox said. "He's a good captain and a very nice person, so we're all very concerned for his safety."

New Manufacturing Orders Up

Market Moderate, Down

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened lower Friday in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues as investors took profits in a market that has reached unprecedented levels.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which soared 27.90 Thursday to a record 2567.44, was down 1.75 to 2565.69 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 448-368 among the 1,259 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 12,945,000 shares.

Traders said profit-taking was trimming prices.

For the past several days, early profit-taking has prepared the ground for strong gains later in the session.

Stocks surged to record-breaking heights Thursday, sending the Dow Jones industrial average to its third consecutive new high as sellers abandoned the marketplace in the face of seemingly relentless buyers.

Since the start of the week, the Dow has climbed 82.11 points.

The Dow transportation average recorded its fifth consecutive new high Thursday while broad-market indexes demolished day-old records.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Demand for communication equipment led a widespread 1.7 percent rise in the value of new orders for manufactured goods in June, the Commerce Department said today.

In new orders came from rising demand for durable goods — everything from tanks to toasters that are meant to last several years.

Manufacturers' inventories — arguably the single most important part of the economy so far this year — shrank 0.1 percent. Shipments of manufactured goods increased 1.8 percent, while unfilled orders were up 1.1 percent.

Of those durable goods, more than three-quarters of the increase was due to $1.3 billion worth of new orders for electrical machinery, particularly non-defense communications equipment, the government said. There also was more demand for primary materials.

June's 1.7 percent rise in orders to a seasonally adjusted $204.8 billion follows a revised estimate of 0.4 percent more business in May. Orders now have gone up for five straight months, the Commerce Department said.

Demand increased nearly across the board for non-durable goods. The only major exception was in chemicals, where new orders fell 1.1 percent.

The report is the government's most comprehensive monthly look at America's factories. So far this year, the picture appears bright.

Inventories dropped 0.1 percent to total $321.5 billion because durable goods makers kept $900 million less stock on hand than in May. That drop more than made up for the $500 million increase in non-durable goods inventories. New orders, excluding defense orders, rose 1.2 percent in June, the same as in May.

Economists say manufacturers nationwide are busier this year in part because the depreciation of the dollar has made U.S. goods more competitive overseas. That same depreciation also has made foreign goods more expensive, and thus has re-directed some demand for goods by Americans to U.S. products, they said.

Half of the $3.4 billion increase in orders to a seasonally adjusted $204.8 billion follows a revised estimate of 0.4 percent more business in May. Orders now have gone up for five straight months, the Commerce Department said.

Mexico City's airport on a flight to Miami. It was carrying at least 17 polo ponies to a tournament in Florida, along with their owner, two handlers, friends and a three-man American crew.

Two horses survived the crash and were seen limping near the scattered remains of the aircraft. Piles of charred horses littered the highway and wreckage.

Trouble developed before the plane cleared the tall buildings of Mexico City, and the aircraft veered west, trying to climb. One survivor, horse trainer Guadalupe Pina Cardenas, told reporters the craft suffered a short circuit immediately before crashing.

The aircraft had reached the steep hill of the Mexico City-Toluca highway, about 8 miles from the city center, and then apparently tried to make an emergency landing on the highway. The plane sliced through 12-foot trees and chain link fences before hitting the road surface, where it skidded out of control up a steep incline for 300 yards, smashing into rush-hour traffic and sliding under a pedestrian bridge.

Rescue workers said the plane crashed at least 25 cars, many of which burst into flames. The tail of the plane slammed into a three-story concrete residence on the right of the highway, heavily damaging it and causing injuries, authorities said.

The plane's cockpit came to rest against the side of a restaur-

Dollar Opens Lower Gold, Silver Higher

By United Press International

The dollar opened lower in lackluster trading Friday on major world money markets. Gold and silver surged higher.

Dealers in New York said the currency markets were quiet, with most traders squaring their books in advance of the weekend and the start of the new month.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar weakened against the Japanese yen, closing out the week at 149.25 yen, down 1.35 from Thursday's close of 150.60 yen.

Traders in Japan said the dollar came under selling pressure by Japanese insurance companies for position adjustments.

Market players took a wait-and-see attitude because of uncertainty over the situation in the Gulf war, they noted.

In European trading, price movements were much slimmer in the currency markets.

The dollar opened in Frankfurt at 1.8545 German marks, down from Thursday's close of 1.8583.

In Zurich, the dollar opened at 1.5365 Swiss francs, down from 1.542, in Paris at 6.166 French francs, down from Thursday's 6.1775 francs.

In Brussels, the dollar began the day at 38.57 Belgian francs, down from 38.72 francs, in Amsterdam at 2.0865, down from 2.095 Dutch guilders and in Milan at 1.342.75 lire, down from 1.346.75.

In London, the British pound opened at $1.5945, compared with $1.595 on Thursday. In early New York trading, the dollar was slightly lower against key foreign currencies in very light trading.

Japan Markets Supercomputer

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan will open its supercomputer market wider to foreign manufacturers Saturday when new non-discriminatory bidding rules for government purchases of the sophisticated, high-speed machines take effect.

The government announced earlier this month it will implement new procurement procedures to give foreign competitors greater access to the Japanese computer market. The United States has made supercomputers a key trade issue, charging the Japanese domestic market is closed.

Supercomputers are advanced, multi-million dollar machines that can perform vast numbers of calculations at ultra-high speeds. They are used in a variety of high technology businesses, such as automobile and aircraft design, and have critical military applications.

The Foreign Ministry said the new rules are aimed at "giving non-discriminatory competitive opportunities to both domestic and foreign suppliers as early as possible."

Under the new procedures, all government agencies and public corporations, including state-run universities, are required to invite both domestic and foreign manufacturers to take part in bidding when they buy supercomputers.

The new rules were worked out after a series of expert-level negotiations between Japan and the United States.

plant in that location," she said.

Roth cited a number of environmental concerns that have grown out of the sewer plant plans and the proposals to allow higher density development. She said Chuluota-Chulu Vista's close proximity to the St. Johns River has made the groundwater table susceptible to salt-water intrusion and increased chloride levels.

"Mounding" is another concern, said Roth, explaining the natural phenomena could occur if the utility cuts into hilly terrain to build its percolation ponds. "Mounding is what happens when the water table rises to directly beneath the pond," she said.

"All these are characteristic of lands that approach a river. And this area approaches very close to the St. Johns River."

The residents will gather at 8:30 Saturday morning at the Chuluota community center for a final strategy session. SSS, said Roth, has had good success recently getting the community informed and involved. "Retention of our rural character is very much on the minds of the people out here," she said. "A lot of areas here are being looked at by developers who have dollar signs in their eyes."

...Regan

Regan to spare him political risks, didn't reveal it to the chief of staff either because he knew "I'd blow the whistle," Regan maintained.

Regan called Poindexter "a fine man" and said they had a good relationship, but he blamed Poindexter for being so secretive about the various operations that he did more harm than good in trying to brief Reagan before his Nov. 19 news conference. Reagan's performance was judged among his poorest ever.

Moreover, Regan said, Poindexter originally blamed the diversion completely on North, the Marine lieutenant colonel who oversaw the operations as a key Poindexter aide on the National Security Council staff.

After evidence of the diversion had turned up during the initial Justice Department inquiry Nov. 21-23, Regan said he walked into Poindexter's office the morning of Nov. 25 and asked bluntly, "What the heck happened here?"

Even then, Regan said, Poindexter responded, "Well, I guess I should have looked into it more, but I didn't. ... I knew Ollie was up to something."

Regan said he advised his colleague to have his resignation ready within hours, and then he went back to the president to demand full exposure.

Credit for the 1.8 percent rise in shipments, to $200.5 billion, was almost equally shared by durables and non-durables.

The rise in unfilled orders, to $384.6 billion, marks the fourth straight month the category has increased. Analysts said this could signal factories are getting more work than they currently can handle, and thus might have to speed up production or expand capacity.

Goldsboro Redevelopment Plan Aired

Sanford City officials got their first look at a proposed redevelopment plan for the Goldsboro area Thursday night which, if adopted, would be the biggest residential redevelopment project ever undertaken in Sanford.

A team of consultants from Florida universities presented the plan, envisioned to be financed by a joint public-private effort.

Two alternative development plans for the area bounded by French Avenue, W. 13th Street, Olive Avenue and W. Seventh Street, would cost an estimated $13, or $23 million, respectively.

Redevelopment would consist of renovating substandard homes, demolishing homes not worth rehabilitating, and constructing new single family and multifamily homes.

The consultants emphasized that the program is not designed to be a "giveaway" program, but would be financed mainly through very low interest loans, very few outright grants.

The proposals were presented to representatives of area lending institutions Thursday night and this morning, and will be presented to the WINS Project Steering Committee tonight.

The steering committee will discuss the plans and present a recommendation to the City Commission. —Brad Church

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., reflected on Regan's testimony by noting the witness appeared "very cool, calm and collected. Every other witness has used the phrase 'I don't remember' rather frequently," Heflin said. Regan did not.

The vice chairman of the Senate committee probing the case, Warren Rudman, R-N.H., was asked if Poindexter is emerging as the villain after three months of testimony. Rudman, a former prosecutor, replied, "There is no question in my mind that he single-handedly has caused this president enormous damage."

LEWIS "BUGSY" ENGELBERG

Mr. Lewis "Bugsy" Engelberg, 41, of 265 Rollingwood Trail, Altamonte Springs, died Wednesday in Oviedo from carbon monoxide poisoning. Born April 19, 1946 in Waycross, Ga., he moved to Altamonte Springs from Buffalo, N.Y., in 1971. He was owner and president of American Recovery Service Inc., a collection agency, and former general manager of the Orlando Renegades professional football team of the defunct United States Football League. He was a member of Congregation Ohev Shalom, the National Football Coaches Association and Congregation Ohev Shalom Men's Club. He also was a member of the University of Central Florida Knights Boosters. A memorial fund to benefit the Boosters has been set up there in his honor.

Engelberg was an offensive guard at East Tennessee State until he suffered a knee injury which ended his collegiate playing career and turned him toward coaching. He transferred to Florida State University, where he was a student coach and later was on the coaching staffs of the Oakland Raiders, the Buffalo Bills and the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League. In 1973, Engelberg became executive vice president and director of player personnel of the Jacksonville Sharks of the World

Football League. When the WFL folded, Engleberg opened his own business in Orlando. He remained in that business until he joined the Tampa Bay Bandits as director of personnel when the USFL started in 1982. After two successful years, he left to join the Renegades when that club joined the USFL.

Survivors include his wife, Stephanie; sons Michael and Rick, both of Altamonte Springs; mother, Lena Engelberg, Waycross.

Baldwin-Fairchild Funeral Home, Orlando, in charge of arrangements.

The tax could be continued over a period of 15 years with the county and cities dividing the proceeds however they see fit. If an agreement on how to divide the money can't be reached a state formula would be used. Under the formula the county would receive 63.7 percent of the revenue with Lake Mary getting 1.3 percent.

If voters approve the tax, the county commission will decide if the full one cent will be levied. The commission may levy the tax in one-quarter increments if it chooses.

Lake Mary Commissioner Charlie Webster said the proposed tax could be a real opportunity for Lake Mary in the future. "I think that over a period of 15 years the funds Lake Mary would get from the tax could defray most or all of the cost of the municipal complex we're planning to build," he said.

Webster explained he doesn't think the cost of the city hall building should be entirely laid on the residents in ad valorem taxes.

Webster feels the city has the potential of receiving about $300,000 from its percentage of the money the county takes in if the tax is approved. "We might as well use the money since the county is obviously going to pass this tax anyway, regardless of what Lake Mary says," Webster said.

Lake Mary Mayor Dick Fess said he feels the money received by the proposed tax could be used to help build Lake Mary's city hall also. "If that (the tax) passes there's a definite possibility for it," Fess said.

Fess and Webster explained they didn't want to take a stand on whether the tax should be approved or not until they have more information on it. They also both agreed with Norris that the issue should be decided by the voters with a referendum.

"Government entities are always looking for more money to meet the additional demands on services they have to provide for the public," Fess said. Then he claimed that governments can't continue to tax the people.

A reckoning of all taxation is coming up pretty soon, according to Fess. "If people knew how much a commodity was taxed they would actually revolt," Fess said. He also stressed that it's unfair to evaluate government expenditures without evaluating its total revenue sources.

Jacksonville Thumps District 14 Nationals, 8-3

By Scott Bander
Herald Sports Writer

WINTER GARDEN — Sometimes, in baseball, a game can turn into a living nightmare.

And a nightmare is exactly what the District 14 Nationals experience on Thursday night as Jacksonville Arlington thumped the Nationals, 8-3, in the Big League Baseball Section I Tournament before 100 fans at Winter Garden.

The Jacksonville win forces a deciding game that will be played tonight at 5. Nationals coach Gene Letterio said that Lake Mary's Anthony Laszalc will be on the mound for his team.

"Anthony deserves this chance," Letterio said. "We need a big performance from him, and I'm sure that he'll come through."

The game was called after six innings due to a power failure. Interestingly, 20 minutes after the game was called, the lights came back on.

The Nationals, who hammered Jacksonville, 17-7, on Tuesday, seemed to be flat at gametime. Just about everything that could go wrong did. "The game was originally scheduled to be played at 7," Letterio said. "I got a call in the morning saying that it had been moved to 5:30. We had no batting practice, and to put it bluntly, we weren't ready to play."

Baseball

Jacksonville, however, was more than ready as Jacksonville pitcher LaWhit Lizzmore fired a one-hitter against a team that is loaded with explosive hitters. "He (Lizzmore) pitched a fine game," Letterio said. "We just couldn't hit the ball tonight."

Lake Mary's Steve Shakar started and lasted five and one-third innings. Shakar gave up six runs on five hits as he took the loss. Eustis' Dave Westgate pitched the final inning. "We weren't that pumped up today," Shakar said. "But I'll guarantee you that we will be ready tonight."

Letterio said that he was pleased with Shakar's performance. "Steve is not really deserving of the loss," Letterio said. "We didn't support him very well."

If there has been one question mark about the Nationals, it has been their defense. The Nationals had tough time defensively against Jacksonville as four errors led to several runs. The Nationals have a total of eight errors in their first two games. "In the first couple games of a tournament, you have to go with a lineup that you think the team will jell with," Letterio said. "In observing the first two games, I feel that we need to make a few changes."

Letterio said that Lake Mary's Ryan Lisle, who has been playing left-field, will be catching tonight. "Anthony and Ryan have worked together for the past few years," Letterio said. "There comes a time when you have to put a kid back at a position that he is comfortable at."

Mike Schmit, who has been having a tough time at third-base, will be moving to left. Lake Howell's Ernest Martinez, who has been playing second, will be moving back to his natural position at third. Lake Mary's Kelly Hysell will be playing second while Eustis' Russa Adler will be in center. "Hopefully things will work out better today," Letterio said. "We just had a bad day today from start to finish."

Jacksonville got on the board first with a run in the top of the second as Scott LaFavor hit a homer to right. After picking up another run in the third on a wild pitch, Jacksonville added four more runs in the fourth as Tim Slater cracked a three-run double.

The Nationals made the game interesting in the fifth with three runs. After Schmit led off with a walk, Coffey blooped a single to right. Laszalc then walked to fill the bases. Dale Stevens followed with a walk, forcing Schmit in.

Westgate followed with a sacrifice fly to left, scoring Coffey. Laszalc broke for the plate when the ball was overthrown at third. He slid underneath the tag of Lizzmore and was called safe. Lizzmore put his elbow up, catching Laszalc in the face as he slid head-first.

After the play, a brawl almost occurred. Letterio and Jacksonville manager Dan LaFlavor got into a heated argument and were both ejected. Several players also got into small scuffles. The ejection was LaFlavor's second in three nights.

"Their kids started yelling at our kids," Letterio said. "That was probably one of the most embarrassing things that I've ever gone through. But I had to stick up for my team, and I'd do it again."

Jacksonville came back with two more runs in the top of the sixth.

"Coming into the game, we knew that we could beat them," Letterio said. "But we honestly felt that they couldn't beat us."

"You'll see a different team out here today," Letterio said. "Most of these kids have been in this situation before, and I think that we will come out ready to play."

NFL Clubs Offer AIDS Testing

United Press International
The St. Louis Cardinals and Los Angeles Raiders and Rams have joined the Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers in offering players voluntary testing for AIDS, and several other NFL clubs are considering taking similar action.

"This is simply something we wanted to do, something we felt was important," Oilers spokesman Chip Namias said Thursday. "We care about our players and we realize the dangers of AIDS. And, of course, we want to have a 100 percent healthy football team."

Namias said the Oilers began offering the tests when players reported for physical exams two weeks ago in Houston.

"Nobody made a big deal about it," Namias said. "Some seemed to appreciate it. They wanted to make sure they were OK. As far as we know, all who have been tested have come up negative."

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a fatal affliction that destroys the body's ability to fight disease.

The Cowboys said their team doctors and trainers will wear rubber gloves when dealing with blood-related injuries this season. Members of the equipment staff will wear the gloves when handling bloody uniforms or equipment.

A spokesman for the Cardinals said team employees are wearing gloves when handling the soiled jerseys and dirty laundry, but he was unsure if team trainers and doctors would wear gloves when dealing with injured players.

"These guys are concerned first with administering whatever help is necessary to a player in distress," he said. "I don't think they're going to wait until they find a pair of gloves."

The Detroit Lions are planning to offer players and coaches an educational program on AIDS and are re-evaluating some precautionary reasons some procedures used by the training and equipment staff.

Seahawks Revise Bosworth Offer

SEATTLE (UPI) — Veteran linebacker Fred Young Thursday became the second high-profile holdout from Seattle Seahawks training camp, joining former Oklahoma star Brian Bosworth.

Seahawks President Mike McCormack had hoped to reach agreements with Bosworth and Young.

The Seahawks revised their offer to Bosworth after Monday's ownership meeting. A source close to the negotiations told the Seattle Times McCormack and Bosworth's agent, Gary Wichard, have had many conversations during the past several days and an agreement appeared close.

Earnhardt Tops $1 Million Mark

Dale Earnhardt of Kannapolis, N.C. used his third-place finish in the Talladega 500 at Alabama International Motor Speedway Sunday to push his money winnings for the 1987 season to over $1 million, setting a motorsports record.

By going over $1 million in only 17 races, Earnhardt surpassed that mark in the smallest amount of events in motorsports history. The previous record was 20 races, set by Bill Elliott of Dawsonville, Ga., in 1985.

Earnhardt's feat marked the sixth time that a NASCAR driver has topped $1 million for a single season. No driver in any other motorsports series has ever surpassed the $1 million mark in a single season.

Elliott won the Talladega 500 and set himself up for what will be his third $1 million season. The driver of the Coors Ford only has to start the rest of the races on the Winston Cup schedule this season to pass that mark for the third straight year.

Earnhardt now leads the NASCAR Winston Cup standings with 2824 points, while Elliott is second with 2394. Terry Labonte is third with 2323, followed by Neil Bonnett of Hueytown, Ala. with 2312 and Kyle Petty rounds out the top five with 2254 points.

Actor Paul Newman, a regular in SCCA's Bendix Trans-Am series, has decided not to make his NASCAR Winston Cup debut in the Aug. 9 Budweiser at the Glen at Watkins Glen, N.Y., because of a scheduling conflict, announced Hendrick Motorsports.

"As you can imagine, he is a very busy person," said a Hendrick spokesman. "His plans to drive at the Glen grew out of his intense love of the sport and his friendship with Rick Hendrick, but his schedule just won't allow it."

Newman is a four time SCCA national champion, and also, along with Carl Haas, co-owns Newman Haas Racing, which fields cars for Mario Andretti in the CAET-PPG Indy Car World Series.

Tuck Trentham ended an eight week shutdown returning to the winner's circle in NASCAR racing at Volusia County Speedway. The Orange City driver took the lead on lap 15 of the 25 lap event and then held off Greg Ward of Ormond Beach who came from the back of the pack to grab second place.

Former Sanford driver Steve Harris won of Altamonte Springs stayed with the leaders and was able to hold on for third place. There was only one caution period during the feature when a four car pile up in turn one occurred. Fire erupted beneath the rear of Rob Underwood's car, but was quickly put out by the VCS safety crew. Geno Evans car suffered the worst damage while last weeks feature winner was treated for an injured arm.

In the popular Street Stock class David Showers of St. Augustine won his seventh feature of the season and appears unstoppable heading into the second half of the season. Brad Heath of Belleview made a fine run coming from 18th place to finish second.

Underdog Tucker Tangles With Tyson

Boxing

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Tony Tucker seems to have appeared in a cloud of smoke just as the heavyweight unification series was winding down.

Tucker was on the periphery of the heavyweight division before Michael Spinks was stripped of his International Boxing Federation championship. That opened the door for Tucker to stop Buster Douglas and win the IBF crown, leading to Saturday night's fight against Mike Tyson.

But Tucker has had a long and successful career as both a pro and amateur heading into his bout against the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association champ Tyson. Tucker, 28, is 35-0 with 30 knockouts as a pro. Before that he was 115-6 as an amateur with four national AAU titles and in 1979 he won gold medals in the Pan Am Games and World Cup.

Still, he was virtually unknown before the Douglas fight and is a 12-1 underdog against Tyson.

"Here I am a man who don't know nothing about losing, and I'm a 12-1 underdog," he said.

Tucker does know what losing will do to his career.

"The difference between me and Tyson is, Tyson can lose this fight and come back and be accepted," Tucker said. "If I lose this fight, I'm out of boxing. That's my motivation. I have to win."

If Tucker wins, he will pull off the greatest upset in heavyweight boxing history. He says it is his destiny, or else he would have died in a 1979 plane crash in Poland that killed 87, including 14 amateur boxers and eight coaches from the United States.

Tucker was supposed to go to Poland after flying back from West Germany.

Tucker had a sore shoulder and was not anxious to return to Europe. His father, Bob, was to meet him in New York, where they would board the plane with the rest of the boxers heading to Warsaw. When Bob Tucker, who manages his son, did not show up in New York, Tony Tucker decided not to go along.

Bob Tucker has never been able to explain to his son why he didn't show up. He says he still isn't sure why.

"It was meant for me to be champion," Tucker said.

"because if it wasn't meant to be, I'd be on that plane."

Tucker turned pro Nov. 1, 1980 but his career has been bogged down by a constant change in management. Only Bob Tucker has been with him from the start. Tucker has had promotional or managerial ties with Dan Duva, Bob Arum, Emanuel Steward, Dennis Rappaport, Alan Kornberg, Josephine Abercrombie and Jeff Levine.

"We've gone to individuals whenever we needed money," Bob Tucker said. "We did what we had to do."

Bob Tucker and Cedric Kushner now own the bulk of Tony Tucker's contract, but others will divide slices of his $1.9 million contract for the Tyson fight.

Rappaport, who had a piece of Tucker until the Douglas fight, went to court to have $540,000 of Tucker's purse held up for money he says he is owed for Tucker's last four bouts. Kushner gets $350,000 and HBA East is owed $350,000, which Abercrombie and Levine are battling over in court. After training expenses, and Steward's $190,000 cut, Tucker is left with less than $500,000.

Tyson will reportedly earn $2.5 million.

But there are more millions to be made for Tucker if he defeats Tyson, although that is seen as unlikely. Tyson, 30-0 with 27 knockouts, is the most well known and feared heavyweight in the world.

Tucker is not awed. "I get motivated when I hear those odds," Tucker said. "I don't get mad about it, I've got something to prove. Somebody's going to get rich betting on me."

Tucker admits he is coming off a mediocre showing against Douglas May 30. Tucker trailed until Douglas ran out of gas.

"Don't judge me on that fight," he says. "The Tony Tucker who fought Douglas is on vacation."

The bout, scheduled for 15 rounds at the Las Vegas Hilton, will be televised by HBO.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Cochran's 66 Takes Early Lead In St. Jude Classic

CORDOVA, Tenn. (UPI) — Russ Cochran, needing a victory to meet his goal of qualifying for next week's PGA championship, "turned his mind off" to take the first-round lead at the Federal Express St. Jude Classic.

"I wasn't thinking about it (the PGA Championship) at all," said Cochran after firing a 6-under-par 66 Thursday, for a one-stroke lead in the $600,000 event at Colonial Country Club.

"I would love to play, but I know if I don't get in I can use the week off," said Cochran, a 28-year-old left-hander from Paducah, Ky. "That (qualifying) has been my goal for the last eight to 10 weeks, but I've been playing so much, now I can use the rest."

As for being the first-round leader, the four-year tour veteran said he has had so many early tournament leads he has lost count.

"I've been out here long enough to realize this is not the tournament," Cochran said. "I'm not even thinking about it. I have been trying too hard. I turned my mind off a little bit today and I made everything I looked at."

Cochran bogeyed his first hole but recovered, making three birdies on three of his final six holes. He is one stroke ahead of three other golfers who are also looking for their first PGA Tour victory.

Antonio Cerda of Mexico City, Charlie Bolting of Rosemont, Pa., and Andy Dillard of Tyler, Texas all fired 5-under 67s, making the leader board top-heavy with obscure players. Cochran's best finish was second in last year's Tallahassee Open.

Cerda, who has only two top 10 finishes in his 12 years on the tour, has missed the cut in his last four appearances. Bolting's best finish of the year was a tie for 10th in the Bob Hope Classic, and Dillard's 1987 best was a tie for 15th in the Doral Ryder Open.

Biondi Nips Jager, Ties Record

CLOVIS, Calif. (UPI) — The last person Olympic gold medalist Matt Biondi wants to see in a championship race is longtime rival Tom Jager.

"I've got this strategy that I use when I swim against Tom, and that's that I don't even look at him," Biondi said Thursday after beating Jager in the U.S. Swimming Long Course National Championships.

"It throws me off if I look over at him when I'm swimming," he said. "Today I felt him but I didn't see him."

Biondi, 21, tied his own world record in beating Jager. Biondi, Moraga, Calif., who attends California-Berkeley, finished in 22.33 seconds, tying the mark he set last year. Jager, 22, Collinsville, Ill., was second at 22.40 seconds.

"It's a great competition and we learn from every race," Jager said. "I just have to swim faster three weeks from now (at the Pan Pacific games)."

Matt Cetlinski of the University of Florida narrowly missed setting an American record in the 400-meter freestyle.

Cetlinski, 22, Lake Worth, was clocked in three minutes, 49.43 seconds, breaking his own meet record, and finished just off Dan Jorgensen's American mark of 3:49.41 set in 1986. Cetlinski went on to win the final in 3:49.69.

Sean Killion, 19, of Cherry Hill, N.J., was second and Jorgensen, 19, of San Diego, finished third.

Janet Evans, who set a world mark earlier in the week, won her third event capturing the 400 freestyle in 4:08.89. She set a world record in the 800-meter freestyle Monday and won the 400-meter individual medley Wednesday. Tiffany Cohen, 21, of Culver City, Calif., was second.

Australian Tracey Wickham, whose 800-meter record Evans broke and who still holds the 400-meter record, telephoned Evans from Australia Thursday afternoon.

Shaffer Upsets Louganis

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (UPI) — Doug Shaffer upset Olympic champion Greg Louganis a second straight time and said his 1-meter springboard title at the U.S. Diving Championships proved his first victory was not an accident.

In today's events, Louganis and Shaffer will battle once again in the 3-meter springboard. Louganis was the top qualifier in the event, while Shaffer finished second. The finals of the women's 3-meter will follow.

Shaffer scored 76 points on his last dive to defeat Louganis Thursday, and Kim Fugett moved up from seventh to first place on her final five dives to take the lead in the preliminary round of the 3-meter springboard.

Shaffer, 25, of Boca Raton, Fla., had beaten Louganis by 10 points in the 1-meter U.S. indoor final in April.

"I proved it (the indoor championships) wasn't a fluke," Shaffer said. "I knew I could do it. The final goal I set out for myself in diving was to win national championships."

Louganis had grabbed the lead from Shaffer on the seventh dive, and built that into a 20-point bulge through the 10th and next-to-last dive in the competition.

Louganis dived before Shaffer and scored only 55 points on a reverse 2 1/2 pike, a dive which he put in the rule book two years ago, to finish with 585.93 points. Shaffer had an inward 2 1/2 somersault, which received 76 points and gave him 587.40 for the competition.

Johnson On Top At Pro-Am

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (UPI) — Chris Johnson, trying to work through a two-month slump, improved her concentration to take the first round lead in the $275,000 Columbia Savings National Pro-Am.

Johnson fired a 6-under-par 66 at Meridian Golf Club Thursday to hold a two-shot lead over rookie Jill Briles. Johnson will move to Lone Tree Country Club as the pros alternate courses for the event.

The seven-year pro from Tucson, Ariz., fired a steady round that included six birdies and no bogeys.

"I've been in a slump for over two months, so it felt good to play well," Johnson said. "I think the difference was I was more focused. I was able to concentrate and bring it home."

Johnson, who was 1-under after seven holes, strung together birdies at the 8th, 9th and 10th holes to get her round going. She added birdies at 12 and 17 to complete the second-best opening round score in the tournament's 16-year history.

"I like Meridian a lot better," Johnson added. "The greens are holding better there. The greens are a little firmer at Lone Tree. You have to be a little more careful, you can't just fly it at the green."

Floridian Sets Wheelchair Mark

AYLESBURY, England (UPI) — Cindy Gettinger of Bradenton, set a world record in the 50-meter swim Thursday in the Stoke Mandville World Wheelchair Games.

Gettinger, 27, swam the distance in 38.64 seconds. The previous record was 42.93. The U.S. increased its medal total to 70 in the Games, and Italy remained second with 38 total medals.

Storm-Damaged Plants Need Immediate Care

Editor's Note: Celeste White is replacing Alfred Jessesen, retired, as Seminole County Urban Horticulturist at the Seminole County Agricultural Center. She will provide the weekly column on "Gardening" and advise readers on issues pertaining to gardening.

Now that we are in the rainy season, damage to the landscape can occur from the severe thunderstorms that we receive. Storm-damaged plants should be cared for as soon as possible to reduce further injury.

Trees or shrubs that have been uprooted should first be inspected for root damage. Roots that are severely injured should be pruned, but never do extensive root pruning at this time. Next, return the tree to its original position, filling it in with soil as needed and firming it around the root ball for support. Do not add soil past the original soil line, since an excess of soil can damage the tree. Any other washouts that have occurred due to flooding can be filled in at this time as well. The tree should now be staked up. Drive the stakes at least a foot away from the root ball and angle away from the tree for the strongest support. Guide the wire through a small piece of garden hose to prevent girdling the trunk. Arrange 3 wires in a triangle pattern around the tree to ensure stability. Mark them with bright colors so no one trips over them. Water the tree in after staking is completed.

Broken branches should be sawed or pruned away from trees and shrubs. Use a sharp tool to ensure a clean cut. If necessary, prune the branch back to a major limb or the trunk cutting as close as you can to reduce "sore thumbs." Treat branches larger than one inch in diameter with a pruning paint, but let the wound dry first. Split branches should be pruned and painted as well, since a clean wound will heal faster than a jagged one. Periodically, inspect the wound and repaint if it cracks or splits.

Lightning injury can occur as well and can be extremely variable in its degree. The damage is not always seen at first and can continue over a period of time. Watch the tree for several days before trying to repair the damage to see what extend the tree has been injured. Some trees can be so severely damaged internally or below the ground that they will die regardless of any treatment. Where there's injury to the bark, cut away any that is split from the trunk and treat it with pruning paint.

Shattered and broken limbs should be removed as those from storm damage. In some trees, especially evergreens, the top can be hit by lightning, yet the lower portion remains unharmed. It may be wise to remove the entire tree since it will not return to its original shape. Other trees, like oaks, have strong lower limbs remaining and can be worth saving.

Plants that have sustained injuries from storms of lightning should be watched carefully until next spring. Additional pruning may be necessary later for some types of damage will not show up immediately. It is not advisable to fertilize right away, but as soon as the first signs of new growth appear, a readily available fertilizer can be applied.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Keith Jr.

Miss Lubenow, W.H. Keith Jr. Repeat Vows

Pamela M. Lubenow of Longwood, and William H. Keith Jr., Orlando, were married June 27, at 7 p.m., in Knowles Memorial Chapel on the campus of Rollins College, Winter Park. Dean of the chapel Arnold Wetstein performed the candlelight and double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lubenow, 101 Brantley Harbor Drive, Longwood. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Keith, 2914 Academy St., Sanford, N.C.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a crystal organza gown fashioned along the bouffant silhouette. Tiers of embroidered organza lace ruffles formed the off-the-shoulder neckline that extended to short, ruffled sleeves. Tiers of the same ruffles edged the full skirt. A Venetian lace headpiece secured her fingertip veil of imported illusion. She carried a Colonial bouquet of yellow roses and white daisies. The bride also wore a garter, worn by her mother on her wedding day.

Kimberly Lubenow attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a floor-length sapphire blue taffeta gown styled with large puffed sleeves and a pleated bodice. She carried a single long-stemmed yellow rose with baby's breath tied with cascading sapphire blue and yellow ribbons.

Bridesmaids were: Rosemary Keith, sister of the bridegroom, Raleigh, N.C.; Lynn Jensen, Apopka; Kathy Stark, Jacksonville; and Arla Henley, Orlando. Their gowns and flowers were identical to the honor attendant's.

The bridegroom's father served his son as best man. Ushers were: Chuck Guthrie, cousin of the bride, Madrid, Spain; Randy Mann, Sanford, N.C.; Leon Clifton, Ft. Pierce; Bill Blackton, Orlando; and Andy Levison, Niceville.

The reception was held at the Woman's Club of Winter Park. Kathy Garvy, sister of the bridegroom of Fort Wainwright, Alaska, registered the guests in the bride's book.

Following a wedding trip to Los Cabos, Mexico, the newlyweds are making their home in Orlando where they are managers of Orange Cycle Works.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding were from: Alaska, Spain, Wisconsin and Key West.

Registration Opens For SCC Fall Term

Registration for the 1987 fall term at Seminole Community College begins Aug. 10 for new students. Classes at SCC will start on Aug. 24. The college is expecting a better than average fall turnout of students seeking to fulfill a wide range of goals, according to SCC vice president, Dr. James A. Sawyer.

"SCC's varied curriculum is designed to suit many needs," Sawyer said. "We service students seeking A.A. or A.S. degrees, career changes, technical advancement, high school diplomas, or personal fulfillment through our leisure courses."

This fall, many courses will also be available at SCC's new Hunt Club Instructional Center, North State Route 436 and Hunt Club Boulevard. The center ofcially opened in January and offers a comprehensive variety of credit and non-credit courses, including a business management and computer institute.

Students may register for day or evening classes at either SCC location, and registration hours have been extended to accommodate working individuals.

The SCC Admissions Office will be open for registration from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and until 4 p.m. on Friday. Registration continues through Aug. 22; late registration is available through Aug. 28.

For more information, call Seminole Community College at (305) 843-7001 or (305) 323-1450.

SEEDCO Hosts Annual Membership Breakfast

The Annual Membership Breakfast of the Seminole Employment and Economic Development Corporation (SEEDCO) will be held Aug. 8 at the Sanford Civic Center, Seminole Boulevard, Sanford, at 9:30 a.m. Friends and members of SEEDCO are invited.

Keynote speaker is William "Sonny" Walker of Atlanta, a respected convener and network among the chieftains of business and industry in the Southeast. He is the dean of the region's workforce development administrators.

Walker is regional vice president of the National Alliance of Business and its former regional director of the United States Community Service Administration. The National All-

Deane 'Dede' Schaffner

Schaffner Named To SSCH Board

South Seminole Community Hospital announced the appointment of Mrs. Deanne F. "Dede" Schaffner, to the Board of Trustees.

Mrs. Schaffner brings to the hospital's Board extensive professional and community experience. She is a former Seminole County substitute teacher and currently serves as a consultant and coordinator for the D+V+deeds School Volunteer Program.

She has a bachelor of arts degree in elementary education from the University of Central Florida and is working toward her master's degree in administration and supervision at UCF.

Mrs. Schaffner has been involved in a number of community activities including: the Seminole County Child Abuse Prevention Task Force and the Seminole Community College Foundation. She has served on the Board of Directors of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) since 1982 and is state director of the National School Volunteer Program. She received the Central Florida Volunteer Activist Award in 1977, and the Sertoma Club's Service to Mankind Award in 1981.

Mrs. Schaffner lives in Longwood with her husband, Bill, president of Herndon, Iles and Scott, Inc. of Orlando. They have three children: Leslie, Debra and Bill.

Courtesy IS Just A Phone Call Away For Elderly Man's Family

DEAR ABBY: I am a 37-year-old male "helper" presently employed to live with and care for an 89-year-old stroke victim in his home. He is still mentally very sharp. I take him to the senior citizens' center for lunch and company, and sometimes we go to the park to visit his friends.

My problem is with his family — daughters, son, grandchildren, etc. I have asked them to please call and let me know when they are coming. Twice now, they have walked in on me while I was in the midst of taking care of certain intimate problems that occur with elderly people — rather embarrassing for the old gentleman and unpleasant for me.

One of his daughters phoned me late one night to say that she and a family friend will be visiting around noon the following day. Her father and I stayed home all day waiting for them, and they never showed. Not even a phone call to let us know they weren't coming.

I realize that I am paid to take care of this man, but don't you think his family owes me the courtesy of a call to let me know when they are coming, as well as call to say their plans have changed?

CONSCIENTIOUS CARETAKER

DEAR CONSCIENTIOUS: To phone and make specific plans to visit a disabled relative and then not show up is the height of insensitivity. But an occasional unannounced visit is the way concerned family members are assured that Mom, Dad or Grandpa is getting consistently good care.

DEAR ABBY: I am presently employed by a hardware company that brought in some hotshots who have made some recommendations that cost a lot of good, faithful people their jobs.

The last straw was a bulletin that looked like a shopping list: "Company picnic at such and such park on July 4th. Invite your friends and family. Bring your own food and beverage. The park has barbecue facilities, but bring your own charcoal. Those who want to participate in the egg toss, don't forget to bring your eggs. We are having a balloon-breaking game, so if you're bringing the kids, bring your own balloons."

On the lunchroom bulletin board was a sign depicting a tree with the following message:

Dear Abby

"Pruning the tree enhances growth." Penciled in at the bottom was: "Too much pruning can kill the tree!"

I hope management enjoyed their picnic.

REAL PERSON IN LA HABRA HEIGHTS, CALIF.

DEAR REAL PERSON: I think the "company" was barking up the wrong tree when it labeled the "do-it-yourself picnic" a company function.

The sign should have said "Careful pruning can enhance the growth of a tree." Right now, the company tree appears to have gone into shock, and the company spirit is noticeably wilted.

I hope things improve by Christmas. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: We have a wealthy friend who didn't have any luck getting his book published, so he is now in the process of publishing it himself. He announced that he is going to give each of his friends an autographed copy as a gift, and at the same time ask each friend to purchase five copies to give away as gifts!

Some of us think it's tacky of him to impose such a purchase on his friends, and when the time comes, I feel that for his sake, I should tell him so. Some of our mutual friends do not want to embarrass him, and think it's best to go along with the scheme. We are in a dilemma and will abide by your judgment.

PUT UPON IN L.A.

DEAR PUT: I agree. It is indeed tacky, but I think each of you "friends" should act independently. If this self-published author were a close friend of mine, I would tell him candidly what I thought of his "sales promotion."

Closet Transvestism Causes Family Woes

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — My eldest granddaughter is just past 28. About a year ago she met a man whom she loves deeply. We've met him, and he's a kind, thoughtful and courteous gentleman with a keen sense of humor. They are both college graduates, hold responsible positions and are active churchgoers. However, he recently confided to her that he likes to dress up in female clothing in the privacy of his own home. He doesn't think he wants to give this up.

Do you have any suggestions? It would be a shame if this very odd circumstance were to be a stumbling block to an otherwise fine union.

DEAR READER — Although I applaud this man's honesty, I think that your granddaughter is in for a whale of a disappointment and a truckload of problems if she marries him. It sounds to me as though her partner has a lot going for him, but also is uncomfortable as a male. There's more to this than just a few hours of cross-dressing.

There is a chance that his occasional cross-dressing may progress to more public acting out and to behavior that your granddaughter might find unpleasant.

Closet transvestism infrequently leads to overt homosexuality, according to the Kinsey Institute. However, given the current epidemic of sexually transmitted diseases, including AIDS, your granddaughter should take a hard look at the risks of such a union.

No matter how accepting your granddaughter may be now, the post-wedding reality may be far more stressful than she expected. Even if her husband's habit remains low-key, she probably will have a constant fear that others will find out — whether during an unexpected visit, an emergency or a moment of carelessness on her husband's part. The situation will be further complicated if they have children. This constant need to "keep secrets" is simply unhealthy. In short: Cross-dressing may be acceptable, problem-free behavior for your granddaughter's friends! However, it can pose major problems for your granddaughter.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

One reason for making a sacrifice bid over an opposing contract of four of a major suit is that sometimes you get the opponents to bid one more. A contract that is safe for 10 tricks may be in jeopardy when 11 tricks must be taken. Because that is certainly true, most bridge players, including me, abhor bidding freely to the five-level in a major. Still, when you get that high, it helps to play the hand to guarantee your contract.

After North raised to four hearts, South thought a slam possible. So he cue-bid four spades. He hoped this would elicit a five-club bid from North. After the five-diamond bid, he rightly feared the club weakness, so he settled into five hearts. In the play, declarer had no way of knowing whether East might hold K-8 of hearts, but he worked out a way so that his contract was safe in any event.

He took the spade A-K, shedding a diamond from dummy. Then he played dummy's A-K of diamonds and ruffed a diamond, throwing a club from his hand on the second high diamond.

Next came the ruff of his last spade. With diamonds and spades eliminated from both hands, he played the 10 of hearts and let it ride. If the finesse worked, he would have 11 tricks with a play up to the king of clubs for a possible 12th trick. If the finesse lost to the singleton king with West, that hapless fellow would be end-played. And if East showed out on the heart play from dummy, declarer would rise with the ace and put West on lead for the same end-play.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY AUGUST 1, 1987

In the year ahead, a fascinating new friend will become very important to you. This person will introduce you to a happier way of life through involvements in things you've never dared to try before.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You are not gullible, and it is difficult for others to pull the wool over your eyes. But today, you may take what you hear verbatim. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's best not to lean too heavily on others today. Even people who want to do you favors may not be in the position to do so.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your judgment might not be up to its usual high standards today, so take extra pains to size up situations before making commitments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Humility is a noble virtue, but today, don't belittle yourself in an unbecoming manner. It's better to let a portion of your ego shine through.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Occasionally it is necessary to be assertive when dealing with others, but today, you may do so with the wrong people under the wrong conditions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to avoid competitive situations today that require back-up. It may be difficult to marshal the needed forces to follow your banner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You may make a decision today based upon faulty information. Make no judgments until you're certain of your facts.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A loved one with financial problems may look to you to be bailed out today. Unfortunately, you might not have enough buckets in your own boat to do the job.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your involvement with others today, you are likely to be the giver while your companions will be the takers. Try to keep the arrangement fair.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An irresponsible acquaintance may try to dump things on you that she should be taking care of herself. Watch out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This could be one of those unusual days where it seems like everyone is ganging up against you, even your most ardent supporters. Grin and bear it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Give credit where credit is due today, but by the same token, don't let anyone upstage you and reap rewards from your accomplishments.

Reagan To Undergo Skin Cancer Surgery

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A patch of cancer cells on the tip of President Reagan's nose, apparently embedded deeper than in two previous bouts with the disease, may leave a scar after removal.

The president was to undergo minor surgery on the tip of his nose today to remove the cancer. Passing up his usual weekend at Camp David, Reagan was to fly by helicopter to Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland in the afternoon for the operation, which could require stitches and leave a scar on his nose.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he expected Reagan to return to the White House following the surgery.

Fitzwater told reporters a biopsy of the tissue of a "small lesion" taken from the tip of the president's nose Wednesday showed basal cell epithelioma.

He said it was similar to the small skin cancers that Reagan had removed from his face in July and October 1985. Such cancers are considered minor and rarely spread.

"Based on these findings, the president will have a further excision on his nose," Fitzwater said.

The president was taking it all in good humor. Wearing a small flesh-colored bandage the size of a dime on his nose at a White House gathering Thursday, he told inquiring reporters, "My nose gets laughs all the time."

"I went out into the sun too much, and they have to do a little peeling here on the end of my nose," the president said.

Reagan pointed to the bandage and said, "This is a billboard to stay out of the sun."

Fitzwater said Reagan faces "a little different procedure" this time, because the "biopsy showed there were enough cells there that they would have to go deeper."

Reagan, 76, who underwent major surgery for colon cancer in July 1985, said Thursday he was no more concerned about today's procedure "than about any other tomorrow."

Overall, Fitzwater said, the president "feels great" and his health "is excellent."

Fitzwater said Reagan would go to the hospital late in the afternoon following a meeting with President Hadj Omar Bongo of Gabon.

Reagan has decided to skip his usual weekend at Camp David because of the "uncertainty on how long the procedure would take," Fitzwater said, adding that an overnight stay at the hospital was not expected.

He said Reagan would be given a local anesthetic. Dr. John Hutton, the White House physician, who removed the lesion from Reagan's nose in his office Wednesday, was to attend Reagan along with two dermatologists.

Small skin cancers, such as the president has experienced, are not unusual for people who have had prolonged exposure to sunlight.

"This is a very common procedure which is performed on many people who have had extended exposure to sunlight over the years," Hutton said. "The procedure was routine and went very smoothly."

"Once you get it, it keeps recurring," said Fitzwater, who has had numerous skin cancers removed.

He said Wednesday Reagan is "routinely examined" for skin cancer and any suspicious growths are "routinely removed."

Reagan, 76, underwent a similar procedure July 30, 1985, for the removal of a skin cancer known as basal cell carcinoma. A minor operation was conducted less than three months later to remove cells that were missed the first time.

The basal cell is among the most common forms of skin cancer, often caused by overexposure to the sun. After those two bouts, Reagan was told to limit his exposure to sunlight and since has been shielded at outdoor appearances.

Fitzwater said the president's tendency to skin cancer probably dates back 20 years and longer from his days in the sun.

Even if basal cells were detected, physicians said, the president may not need additional treatment. They are not considered serious health problems and, unlike other forms of cancer, rarely spread.

In the past, physicians also have dismissed any link between the skin cancers and the colon cancer for which Reagan underwent major abdominal surgery in July 1985 and now receives twice-a-year follow-up examinations.

Reagan, who loves the outdoors, no longer returns to Washington deeply tanned from vacation stays at his mountaintop ranch in California, and has had no known problems with skin cancer since Oct. 10, 1985.

First lady Nancy Reagan had a similar patch of basal cells removed from her lip several years ago.

Reagan was last treated for medical difficulties in January, when he underwent surgery at Bethesda Naval Hospital for an enlarged prostate.

Since then, the president has been examined again for colon cancer and physicians removed what Hutton characterized as "two small benign-appearing polyps" from his intestine. The White House later reported the growths were not cancerous.

The presence of small polyps in the intestine, which led to the discovery of colon cancer two years ago, is not considered unusual for men Reagan's age.

At the time of his colon cancer surgery in 1985, a cancer specialist on Reagan's medical team said the president had better than a 50 percent chance of living another five years without the cancer reappearing. Other specialists said the prognosis was even better.

Dr. Allan Lorincz, head of dermatology at the University of Chicago Medical Center, said, "I think there's a tendency when people say carcinoma for you to think that it's a tumor that spreads and kills."

"Almost never will a basal cell carcinoma metastasize or spread," he explained.

"For the procedure, he said, "If there's any kind of excision that's any more than the most minor scrape, you're going to want to do it in sterile conditions, where, if you have to, you can take a stitch or two."

Dr. Paul Lazar, professor of clinical dermatology at Northwestern University called it a "local lesion of little consequence."

Delta Loses Crash Suit

FORT LAUDERDALE (UPI) — Gilbert Greene walked away from the wreckage of Delta Flight 191 near Dallas International Airport two years ago, but still will receive $700,000 in damages from the airline.

A jury returned a verdict Tuesday awarding the former Florida State University student more than four times the settlement Delta had offered him.

Greene, 23, sued Delta Air Lines for medical costs associated with the physical and psychological scars he still bears, his attorneys said. They said Delta's attorneys had offered Greene $150,000.

"He was really badly, badly hurt psychologically by the crash, and he was not treated very kindly by Delta and their insurance company," said his attorney, David H. Krathen.

Delta attorneys could not be reached for comment.

In most court cases stemming from the crash, the company has agreed that it can be held liable for the crash. The juries decide the question of how much, if anything, the company should pay in damages.

"To bring everything back and relive everything was difficult for him," his mother, Lise Greene, said Wednesday of her son, who was not available to comment.

News reports right after the accident portrayed Greene as a lucky passenger who emerged virtually unscathed from the Aug. 2, 1985 crash near Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. The accident killed 137 people.

Greene, who suffered a lower back injury, was praised for helping carry other victims from the wreckage. At the time, he was 21 years old.

"It's great to be alive," he told a reporter in Dallas two days after the accident.

Post-traumatic stress set in later, a psychologist testified during the trial. Greene is still receiving treatment, Krathen said.

In court, Delta attorneys argued that Greene was able to finish college studies after the accident and has a career ahead of him.

'Phone Hall Of Fame Taps Former Sanford Executive

Earl Crittenden, Jacksonville, vice president of Southern Bell's Florida Network Department, has been named to the Florida Telephone Association's Hall of Fame. It was announced by Larry Strickler, spokesman.

Crittenden was honored for his outstanding leadership and significant contributions to the telecommunications industry, Strickler said.

He began his 36 year career with Southern Bell in Jacksonville. He worked as plant manager in Sanford from June, 1957 to September, 1959. After various assignments in Florida, North Carolina and Georgia, he was appointed vice president of North Florida operations and accepted his current position in 1983.

The University of Alabama graduate is an active member of Boy Scouts of America, YMCA, Rotary and the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

OPEC Oil Output Surges Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — OPEC oil production surged to as much as 18.7 million barrels a day in July — far above its 16.8 million barrel-a-day ceiling — as the oil industry stockpiled crude against a possible cutoff of Persian Gulf supplies, industry sources said Thursday.

The authoritative sources, who asked not to be identified, estimated OPEC production averaged between 18.4 million barrels and 18.7 million barrels a day in July.

In late June, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to limit its production to 16.6 million barrels a day in order to defend its $18-a-barrel benchmark price.

OPEC pumped about 17.4 million barrels a day in June.

If the 13-nation cartel continues to overproduce, oil prices could weaken and slide back to the mid-teens in early 1988 since demand for OPEC crude is not expected to rise substantially this year, the sources said.

The sources said the international oil industry decided to buy more OPEC crude, particularly from the Persian Gulf, after oil prices began to rise on world markets in response to the cartel's latest accord and the U.S. decision to escort reflagged Kuwaiti tankers through the gulf oil channel.

West Texas intermediate, the key U.S. crude, and Britain's North Sea Brent crude have shot up by several dollars a barrel to the $19-$22 range on the open market since late June and made it economical for the industry to buy cheaper Persian Gulf oil under long-term contract, the sources said.

The industry is using OPEC's excess production to build up inventories as a buffer against a possible curtailment of supplies from the gulf, which is a major source of the West's oil needs, they said.

Saudi Arabia, OPEC's principal producer, has obeyed by its official output quota of 4.35 million barrels a day despite requests from customers for additional purchases, the sources said.

WE WANT YOU
ONOURTEAM
As a manufacturer of boys' activewear, we take great pride in the quality garments we produce. The source of our pride stems from our employees. It is through their effort that we are now entering our 5th year of successful operation. We in turn do our best to provide a work environment that allows our people to not only be productive, but to enjoy their jobs. We provide a modern, clean, air conditioned facility. We offer incentive pay, excellent health care benefits, paid holidays, paid vacations, flexible hours and a friendly working atmosphere.
If you would like to join our team, and are an experienced sewing machine operator, trimmer or presser, or have a honest desire to learn, please contact us. We welcome your interest.

Femme Fatale In The Racy '80s

Beautiful, Feminine... It's Victorian Lace

In the racy '80s there's a return to femininity that's showing up in crafts, which are reflecting the romance of the Victorian era.

Craftsmen are mixing ruffled Victorian lace and satiny fabrics into heartshaped pillows holding a potpourri of scents.

But that isn't the extent of it.

Carol Futrell decided about two years ago to venture full force into such creative efforts. She has come up with her personal best creations that tie together the lace and satin look with Florida sea shells and woven raffia.

Armed with her hot glue gun, sewing machine, scissors and an eye for the fancy, Futrell has a never ending assignment for creating flounces, bows and ribbon flowers that will adorn her fabric covered photo albums and frames.

She also adds silk flowers, bows and lace to the bands and edges of straw hats and frills up costumes for Teddy bears.

In addition, she makes raffia-based wallhangings adorned with lace, fabric and sea shells, which she said attract a lot of attention.

"This is me. I just like to play with this to see what I come up with," Futrell said of her self-taught craft.

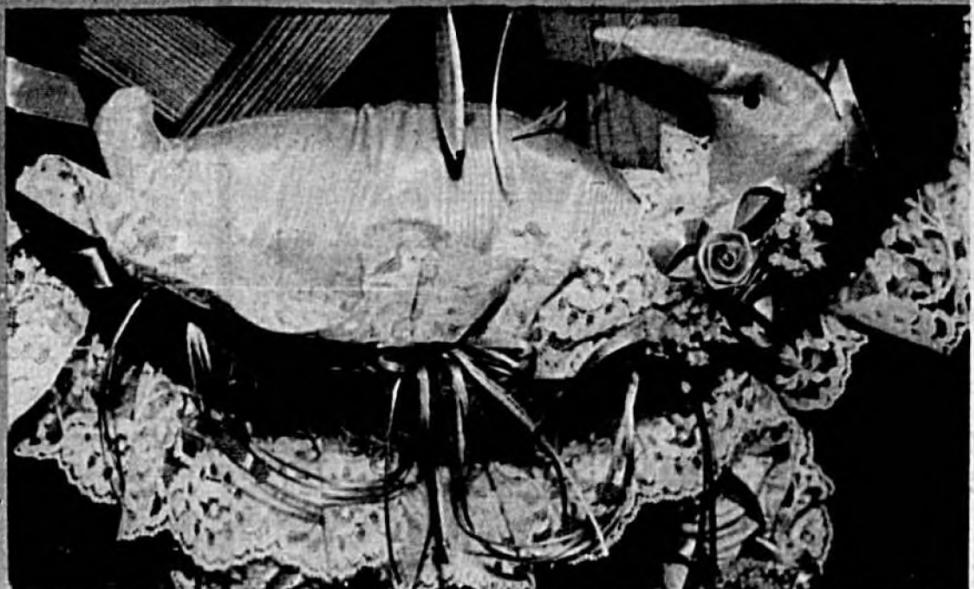

She said some patterns and instructions in the use of Victorian lace and creation of the items are featured in crafts publications, but she's own her own when coming up with ideas for her art.

The craft, she said, is very popular with senior citizens, many of whom work as husband and wife creative teams taking their wares on the road for craft fairs.

Futrell, with her work on display in Altamonte Springs, said her creations too take her out of the state and she often uses her time at crafts shows to create new pieces as admirers take home those on display.

Futrell said she makes all of her creations from the base up, except for those on rattan or woven hats. She used to weave those rattan bases too, but found it was taking her time away from applying her decorative touch, with lace, ribbon and shells. Her mother, she said, is the seamstress behind the Teddy bears that she adorns.

Marth Victovish, is another creator of such "Victorian" items, and she too said she comes up with her own ideas and develops them through experimentation, which can sometimes take months.

Victovish calls most of her creations "soft sculpture." That includes heart-shaped pillows, satiny Teddy bears, mice wearing wedding gowns, birds nesting on twisted vine wreaths, fabric-covered jewelry cases.

She also creates birds nesting on lacey bases and some of her items are also music boxes.

"The Victorian look has become very popular in the last three to four years," Victovish said.

"There's a lot of enthusiasm about the Victorian look. It's back very strongly. Women are going back to being feminine. They're not embarrassed by it any longer," she said.

Victovish said the creation of padded, lacey jewelry boxes on a wicker base was her own idea, but they don't rival the popularity of the heart pillows, which beneath a gauze lace hold a potpourri of dried flower petals mixed with scent.

The pillows, she said have a "plush and rich looking. They're so fanciful and feminine."

Despite their fragile look, Victovish said, there is a practical side to her pillows and other fluffy creations. Most can be professionally dry cleaned. Or if they are on a framework that would make that impractical, they can be brushed or cleaned with a water dampened cloth.

The water she said will not stain the satiny fabric, which is made in a rippled watermark pattern.

Both Futrell and Victovish adorn their creations with lace bought at fabric stores. The other items used in this craft are readily available at fabric and crafts shops. Futrell said she gathers her lace into ruffles herself and saves money that way.

Although for them their craft is self-taught and expanded, they said it's easy to get a start on the Victorian look by checking out crafts magazines and picking up ideas at crafts shows.

The limit is the romantic imagination of the craftsman with this fancy fabric work.

Carol Futrell attaches lace to a rattan base.

Cooking For The Cameras

By Bill Lohmann
UPI Feature Writer

COWPENS, S.C. (UPI) — In the sweltering heat of a sultry summer day in South Carolina, Nathalie Dupree meanders through the high grass of a peach orchard, plucks a ripened peach from a low branch and wipes the sweat from her brow.

Then she bites off a mouthful of peach and smiles for the camera.

It's a long way from the highfalutin instructional kitchens of Cordon Bleu in London to a broiling orchard in Cowpens, S.C., but such is the itinerary of the host of "New Southern Cooking," a show entering its second year that is produced in Atlanta and distributed nationwide on the Public Broadcasting Service.

"People perceive my job as glamorous, yet I don't have a piece of clothing that doesn't have a spot on it," Dupree said good-naturedly. "I'm a cook and I've never quite gotten used to the 'hurry up and wait' aspect of television. But I love what I do."

What Dupree does is spread the word about Southern cooking in a way that remains true to the down-home tradition of the region's food but incorporates a certain flair derived from her European training and her roots in true grits.

She refuses to turn her back on barbecue, pecan pie or red eye gravy, but she's just as likely to come up with an atypical dish such as butterbean and champagne soup.

"There's still a stereotype about Southern food," said Dupree, who was reared in Virginia. She lived for a while in Europe where she learned the finer points of cooking and was chef at a restaurant in Majorca before returning to the United States to open a restaurant in rural Georgia where she also held down a newspaper route to help finance her start-up costs. She later moved to Atlanta where she founded a cooking school.

"Everyone outside the South thinks we sit at home eating cornbread and turnip greens. I like cornbread and turnip greens, but there's so much more to Southern cooking than that," she said. "My mission with the series is to change the perception of the South and its food but at the same time keep the integrity of the ingredients."

During the show's first season, Dupree trotted out such recipes as fried herb chicken, chicken and pepper dumplings and grilled duck with muscadine sauce. It is not quite typical Southern fare but not far from home either.

Each half-hour show generally focuses on the preparation of a complete meal — from an appetizer such as ginger and turnip soup to a desert of peach cobbler with peach custard ice cream.

"We try to use only affordable ingredients that you could buy in a small grocery store in Valdosta," said Dupree, who travels the South searching for new dishes and variations on old ones. "We don't use any exotic stuff."

"But our special niche is that we're a teaching show. I like to show new techniques, and we show every single step. If we're cooking a loaf of bread, we might have to cook five loaves to show all the steps, and on some shows we might have 300 props."

Another aspect that characterizes "New Southern Cooking" is its on-location segments, such as the topic of peaches that drew Dupree to Cowpens. Each week, the show features a Southern crop or product, touches on how it's grown or made and how it's used. In short, an educational interlude.

ALL MY CHILDREN

Noelle's mother, Constance Keaton, showed up at Ruth and Joe's place and told them that Noelle has a history of emotional problems. Phoebe told a shocked Hillary that she has documented proof that Mitch is married to a Louisa Sanchez. Mark was surprised to see Elizabeth, who was once his lover. A recuperating Skye accepted Tom's marriage proposal. Brooke insisted she's happy for Tom and Skye. Matt worried about Nina, who is taking Cliff's death too calmly. Daley insisted to Natalie that she's not romantically interested in Palmer. A nosy Barbara got proof that Erica's pregnant. Nina and the family held a memorial service for Cliff. Noelle locked herself in her bedroom when she saw Constance, and later confided to Jeremy that she's afraid of her mother. Phoebe hired a gumshoe to check out Mitch's past. Hillary was puzzled when Mitch started talking about his best friend, Kenny Brett, then clammed up.

ANOTHER WORLD

Jamie followed Lisa to a remote resort after she began telling him the secrets of her past, but later chickened out and ran off to be alone. Felicia worried about Cam, who broke down during the memorial service for Kathleen. Mary consoled Vince, who is devastated about Kathleen's death. John regaled Vicky with stories of his and Michael's childhood escapades. John agreed to repair Donna's beach house, which was damaged by a storm, but he nixed letting Michael pay him for the job. Reginald was interested to note the tender looks shared by Donna and John in family photos taken by Peter. Vince and Mary got romantic for the first time since their reunion. The McKinnon family received gifts that Kathleen had sent to them during her honeymoon trip. Lisa fretted that if she doesn't level with Jamie about the fact that she was raped, she'll lose his love for sure.

AS THE WORLD TURNS

John's niece, Pam Wagner, arrived for a summer-long visit. James lurked in the shadows while keeping tabs on Lucinda. After finding out that Emily is back in town, Barbara feared that James is nearby. Paul, who secretly met with James, lied to Barbara that James won't be coming to take him away from her. Hal arrested Emily on charges that she was James' accomplice. Holden took an instant dislike to Lance Whitaker, a wealthy rancher who is smitten with Lily. Tonia told Meg that he's planning to start his own business very soon. Margo told Tom that she wants a divorce, but insisted that it be handled quietly. Tom couldn't help but notice a bikini-clad Taylor. Margo and Lyla left town to think over the tragedy of Craig's "death" and Margo's impending divorce. Lyla left Casey a letter stating that he should forget about her and get on with his life. Doris told Shannon that Duncan has a dark past.

THE BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL

At Stephanie's suggestion, Caroline introduced Kristen to Caroline's boss, Chuck. Kristen realized her meeting Chuck was a set-up, but she actually liked Chuck. Dave was disappointed that Brooke is still putting off their plans to get married. Ridge let Brooke know that he's tired of Caroline's insistence that they not sleep together until they're married. Brooke kept mum to Caroline that Ridge made a pass at her. Mark told Donna that he's not ready to get married. Eric praised Kristen's fashion designs.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES

Patch rushed into the hospital room and shoved Alice away from Simon, who was then shot and killed by the police. Alice kept mum to Tom that during her hostage crisis she suffered a slight heart attack. Kimberly was puzzled by Eve, who asked questions about Shane and then split when she learned that Andrew is Kimberly and Shane's son. After a rough beginning, Callope hit it off with Shane's

English school chum, Trevor, Kai, who was a double-agent working for the government and for Phillip, told Diana that Simon had killed her fiancé, James. Kayla was amused when Angelica tried to pair her up with Jack. Justin told Victor that Kai was a double-agent who is working for Phillip. Later, Kai was found lying in an alley mortally wounded. A dying Kai warned that "they" won't stop until they get the computer disk that Shane is trying to decipher. Kimberly told Shane that she's pregnant again.

GENERAL HOSPITAL

Tony finally made peace with Corey and forgave him for causing Tania's death. Lucy moved into Tony's pad again after she was released from the hospital. Everyone returned from the Biscayne Islands no worse for the wear. Anna is worried that the DVX is still trying to murder WSJ agents. Anna didn't jump at the chance when Duke said he wanted to renew their romance. Ikobbi and Jake learned that they can still adopt a baby if they want to. Tom learned that Simone's visiting parents were nice to him because Simone told them that she and Tom decided not to get married. Alan learned that Monica banked the million dollars that she took to the Biscayne Islands to ransom Eric. Realizing that he must put aside his feelings of love for Simone, Tom asked Camellia for a date. Robert and Duke are competing for Anna's affections. The hit man hasn't made any more attempts on Camellia's life.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE

Mari Lynn didn't believe Tom, who told her that her mother had been a hooker. Tina broke down and told Patrick that she's raising Gabrielle's son, Al, as her own. After catching Gabrielle searching Al's nursery, Tina admitted that she gave Dante's old watch to Cord. Cyndy warned Patrick that Kate has admitted that she loves Cord and intends to marry him. Geoffrey didn't listen to Charles, who demanded that Geoffrey break up his law partnership with Judith. Jonathan denied Frank's accusation that he's having an affair with Sandra. Frank later threatened to kill Jonathan if he ever catches him with Sandra. Judith and Geoffrey learned that Charles owns the 21st Century Corporation, which is gobbling up small businesses like Wanda's diner. Max realized that Dante's cohorts (Rolo and Chantal) will kill Max to get Dante's watch, which holds the clue to a missing fortune.

RYAN'S HOPE

Dee woke up in Dakota's bed after the two shared a drunken night of love. Jack was interested to meet Emily's cousin, Chuck. Patch smooched with Concetta, who admitted that she's afraid to embark on a romance with him. John did everything in his power to keep Lizzie from devoting all her time to Ben. Rick confided to Sam that he doesn't think Ryan really wants to have a baby right now. Johnny nearly had a heart attack while fending off Zena's "pal," Lyndon, who escaped after sneaking into Zena's room and later pulled a knife on Johnny.

LOVING

Ava struggled to help Clay, who was injured when their skydiving plane had engine trouble and crashed. At Rick's request, Gwyneth got him a promotion at Alden Enterprises. Rick promised that he'll tell no one that Gwyneth is his mom. Curtis warned Jack that he doesn't think that Lily has changed for the better. Marty told Jim about her disastrous marriage to Robert, a man who eventually dumped her and left her penniless. Alan was surprised to learn that April lives with Marty. Trisha and Steve made wedding plans.

Sister Planet/
 • Venus, a virtual twin to the Earth in size and mass, is often called our sister planet. But, according to the "Omni Space Almanac," the similarity ends there. Instruments show that surface temperatures reach 878 degrees F, breezes of fire crack in the sulphuric sky and atmosphere pressures are 90 times those on Earth.

NBC Signs New Nielsen Contract

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — NBC has signed a new three-year, multimillion-dollar contract with the A. C. Nielsen Co., whose TV ratings have made NBC the nation's No. 1 network, even though NBC has serious problems with the company's new method of counting viewers, officials said.

"I didn't like them when I first heard about them, I didn't like them when we began to study them, and I don't like them today," Bill Rubens, vice president of research at NBC, told television critics gathered to view new fall programming.

But, Rubens said, "There was no choice." NBC, ABC, and CBS had all refused to sign new deals with Nielsen because of uncertainties over the new system, which requires the active participation of the viewing audience through devices called "people meters" to record who watches television in America.

The NBC agreement, which represents tens of millions of dollars over the three years, was worked out over the weekend. ABC and CBS have still refused to purchase the new system.

Are 10 Million People Wrong?

VIDEOT
Guy MacMillin

Do you know what the following 14 TV shows have in common? "Better Days... "Downtown," "Easy Street," "The Ellen Burstyn Show," "Heart of the City," "Jack and Mike," "Kay O'Brien," "Life With Lucy," "1986," "Sidekicks," "Starman," "Together We Stand," "Our World" and "The Wizard."

Yup, TV buffs will recognize them as shows that were introduced, with great fanfare, on commercial networks last September, and that have since been canceled.

What's more, I count 15 now-defunct series that went on the air after September: "The Cavanaugh's," "Dads," "Gung Ho," "Hard Copy," "Harry," "Marlah," "Nothing Is Easy" (which was the aforementioned "Together We Stand" without dad), "Out-laws," "The Popcorn Kid," "Roomies," "Roxie," "Shell Game," "Spies," "Take Five" and "The Tortellis."

By and large, these are programs of yawning mediocrity, but a few stand out as particularly awful. "Life With Lucy" was a real embarrassment. "Jack and Mike" proved that the public's interest in imitations of "Moonlighting" is finite. "Gung Ho" showed that mocking the Japanese isn't funny.

Three of the shows will be missed, at least by me. "Dads" had a nice tone and some gifted performers. "The Popcorn Kid" was witty. And "Our World" was a compelling series that combined history with nostalgia in a way that was informative and entertaining.

What happened to "Our World" explains what has happened to network television.

The show was a flop, no doubt about that. Most weeks, it came in dead last in the Nielsen ratings. And when it lost that distinction, it wasn't by much.

In the week before this was written, for instance, "Our World" was 57th out of 61 prime-time programs. It received a 12 share. That means on that particular Thursday evening, only 12 percent of the TV sets in use were tuned to it. At the same time, 41 percent of the sets were tuned to "The Cosby Show," 16 percent were tuned to "Scarecrow and Mrs. King" and 31 percent were tuned to PBS, cable channels or independent stations.

That night, "Our World" got a 5.8 Nielsen rating. These days, one rating point is thought to represent 874,000 households. A household is thought to contain 1.8 people in front of the set.

I know that's ridiculous, but that's how statistics work.

So, if the ratings are anywhere near correct, about 9 million people were watching "Our World" that Thursday. But that was a summer rerun, when overall viewing is down. During the regular TV season, "Our World" averaged a 6.5 rating, about 10 million people a week.

SANTA BARBARA
After an encounter with Willie, Kelly apologized to Jeffrey for thinking that he was trying to kill her. Eden arrived in Santa Barbara, then was reduced to tears when she saw Cruz and Eleanor (Elena) in what appeared to be a passionate embrace. Cruz mixed Eleanor's flannel offer of a bedroom romp because he won't betray his love for Eden. A gun-toting Cain recaptured Eden and warned Cruz that he'll kill her if Cruz tries to rescue her. After a fight with Jeffrey, Willie pretended to commit suicide by jumping into an old well. Later, Willie climbed to safety. Willie later crawled back out of the well. Laken tried to comfort Ted, who was shocked that Hayley had him served with divorce papers. Jake tried to dissuade Hayley from accepting alimony from Ted. Pearl kept an eye on Carmen, who played detective for a woman who wrongly thought her husband was having an extra-marital affair.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS
Cricket fretted over Philip, who won't admit that he has a drinking problem. Nina was pleased that Jill wants to oust Cricket from her Jabot modeling job because she feels that Cricket is causing the company bad press. Faren insisted to Andy that she wasn't seriously injured in the auto accident, but later Faren experienced dizziness and saw flashes of light. Steven, who returned from a business trip, is confused by his feelings for Ashley. Cricket swore Danny to secrecy after he realized that she took the blame for the auto accident so Philip wouldn't be arrested on drunk driving charges. Philip doesn't remember that he was driving his car at the time of the accident. At Jack's urging, Nikki decided to get all the money that she can from Victor before he finds out that she's not dying. Victor had Douglas tail Nikki after she asked Victor to give her his Mergeron America stock.

GUIDING LIGHT
Fletcher was shocked when he saw his sister, Meredith Reade, who blew into town unannounced. Rick and Meredith, who are attracted to each other, danced the night away at a disco. Josh underwent another blood test which also indicated that he's not Marah's father. Later, a lab technician phoned a mystery person to report the test results. Will made a couple of mysterious phone calls to someone who will soon arrive in Springfield. Alan came out of his coma. While helping Will unpack his belongings, Josh found a photo of Josh, Will and a mystery woman. Ed was disappointed when Rick said that he has to return to Chicago instead of accepting Ed's offer of a job at Cedar's Hospital. Philip was released from the hospital after he was treated for food poisoning. Only the hit man knows that the medication Philip received will slowly kill him. Kaz survived his heart transplant.

NBC Dominates Emmys

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — NBC dominated the nominations for the 39th annual Emmy Awards and its prized "L.A. Law" series led the individual competition with 20 nominations, the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences announced Thursday.

Close behind "L.A. Law" were NBC's "Golden Girls" and ABC's "Moonlighting," followed by two more NBC series, "St. Elsewhere" and "Cheers."

"L.A. Law," the NBC drama that portrays the professional and social travails of a group of Los Angeles lawyers, garnered 20 nominations. "Moonlighting" and "Golden Girls" each got 14 while "St. Elsewhere" received 11 and "Cheers" was named in 10.

NBC led the networks with 140 nominations, followed by ABC with 76, CBS with 74, PBS at 25 and Fox Broadcasting with five.

Nominated for outstanding drama series were "Cagney and Lacey," "L.A. Law," "Moonlighting," "Murder, She Wrote" and "St. Elsewhere."

Who Can Sort Andersons? But None Related

Dear Dick: Do you know if Richard Anderson ("Bionic Woman"), Richard Dean Anderson ("MacGyver") and John Anderson, a fine character actor in many TV shows and movies, are any relation to each other? — E.L., Reading, Pa.

Dear Dick: Is Harry Anderson of "Night Court" and the Anderson (don't remember his first name) who played Dennis' father on the old "Dennis the Menace" series related? They look a lot alike. — M.E.C., Pasadena, Texas.

Dear E.L. and M.E.C.: None of that flock of Andersons is related to any of the others. And the one who was on "Dennis the Menace" was Herbert Anderson.

Dear Dick: My girl friend, Kelly, says "The A-Team" with George Peppard just went off the air temporarily. Is this true? — J.D., Hillsborough, N.B., Canada.

Dear J.D.: No. There may be syndicated re-runs, but there will be no more new productions. "The A-Team" got an F.

Dear Dick: I would like to know if Dennis Dugan and Parker Jameson are one and the same, or are they brothers? — Mrs. E.M., Indiantown, Fla.

Dear Mrs. E.M.: Neither. Dennis Dugan and Jameson Parker (I assume that's the gentleman you mean, the handsome half of "Simon & Simon") are two different guys, and totally unrelated.

Dear Dick: I'm still trying to find out who were Gene Rayburn's parents and where he was raised. Does he have a family? — C.J., Grandy, Mo.

Dear C.J.: Gene is the son of Milan and Mary Rubessa (that's his real surname) and he was raised in Illinois. He is married and the father of a grown daughter.

Ask Dick Kleiner

Dear Dick: I have a bet with my father about Dinah Shore. He says she is in her 70s. I say he's talking nonsense. Please clear this up so I can collect my money. — N.D., Kalamazoo, Mich.

Dear N.D.: He's not too nonsensical. Technically, he wins, because Dinah celebrated (if that's the right word) her 70th birthday on March 1.

Dear Dick: I am 65 years old and I have been trying for years to find the answer to a question that still bothers me. Lee Marvin sang a song called "I Was Born Under a Wandering Star" in one of his movies. Do you know if this song was ever recorded or put on tape, and how could I obtain it? — M.H., Hoopa, Calif.

Dear M.H.: Go to your neighborhood record store and ask for the original cast album of the movie "Paint Your Wagon" — on the Paramount label. Marvin sang it on that. There are many other recordings of the song, which is officially called "Wand'rin' Star." In fact, many voices better than Lee's have recorded it.

Dear Dick: Please settle a dispute between my brother and myself. I say that "Taxi" was on several seasons and on two different networks. He says he remembers Danny DeVito and the others for only two seasons. Who is right? A lobster dinner rides on the answer. — R.D., Marshfield, Wis.

Dear R.D.: You win. claws and all. "Taxi" first ran on ABC from 1978-82. After it was dropped by ABC, NBC picked it up and it ran on that network for the '82-'83 season.

Dear Dick: I saw a movie recently with John McIntire. He used to be on "Wagon Train." Is he still living? Is his wife still living? I can't recall her name. Once, she appeared in a movie with him. — S.H., Marion Center, Pa.

Dear S.H.: Both John McIntire and his wife, Jeanette Nolan, are still with us. They have worked together quite a few times, incidentally.

Dear Dick: Not long ago, you wrote that a star named Mary Brian is still living. Could you tell me more about her? She was my favorite star when I was a teen-ager. Is she married and where does she live now? — M.B., Macy, Ind.

Dear M.B.: She will turn 80 this year. She was married 40 years ago to film editor David Tomasini, who died in 1964. She had earlier been married to the noted illustrator, Jon Whitecomb. She has no children and lives in the Los Angeles area.

Dear Dick: Please answer the following: was the person who played Pearl Bodine, Jed Clampett's cousin on "The Beverly Hillbillies," the same person who played the part of George Burns' neighbor, Blanche, on the old Burns and Allen show? A dinner is riding on your answer. — D.B., Houston.

Dear D.B.: Same person. The late Bea Benaderet played both roles.

Lorenzo Lamas Loves Robin Greer

Lorenzo Lamas and his "Falcon Crest" love interest Robin Greer. Life imitates art. They're engaged.

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Lorenzo Lamas' father, Fernando, was a great Latin screen lover in the 1950s. His mother is actress Arlene Dahl, and his stepmother is Esther Williams.

Robin Greer's mother was an internationally known fashion model, and her father directed TV commercials. Her aunt, Jane Greer, starred as Robert Mitchum's lover in the 1947 film noir classic "Out of the Past."

Since both Lamas and Greer grew up in show biz families, it seemed natural they would find something in common on the set of CBS-TV's "Falcon Crest."

And since Lamas' and Greer's "FC" characters were indulging in a passionate romance, it wasn't too far-fetched a possibility that the young couple might actually fall in love between takes.

"Falcon Crest" executive producer Jeff Freilich remembers that Lamas fell for his beautiful new co-star almost immediately:

"Lorenzo asked me who Robin Greer was, so I introduced them. Then I didn't see either of them for the next two days."

"In the first scene we did together (last season), we were 15 feet apart, and the chemistry clicked immediately," Lamas exults. "I was leaning over the balcony with Jane (Wyman). Robin was there leading an aerobics class. I asked her right away if she would be my girlfriend."

Confirms Greer: "Yeah, he asked me the first day. I wondered how many girls he'd already asked that afternoon."

Despite Lamas' idea of chemistry (and the couple's supposed "disappearance"), Greer confides that she was not immediately smitten by Lamas. At the time, she was divorcing her husband, an

Says Lamas: "She kept pulling out these passport photos of her sister to show me."

Aside from her divorce, other considerations prompted Greer to keep Lamas at a distance emotionally. She admits to initially believing what she read in the tabloids about Lamas' bad-boy behavior.

Greer explains: "Once in a while you're in the grocery store looking for gum and he's on the cover of almost every tab. I was very wary of Lorenzo. I expected not to like him at all."

"I expected him to be a real kind of 'player' — egotistical. I couldn't imagine there would be a really sweet person behind that kind of image he had. He really proved me wrong. He's a great, loving, giving person."
