Nation's unemployment 6.7%

WASHINGTON — The nation's unemployment was 6.7 percent in January, up 0.3 percent from a month earlier, the government reported today. However, the increase was due mainly to a change in the way the job markets are surveyed.

The Labor Department said the unemployment rate was up from 6.4 percent in December, which was a three-year low. But applying the standards used in the new calculations, the December rate would have been closer to 7 percent, officials said. Using the old method, the January rate would have been 6.3 percent, a decrease from December.

Today's report sent a mixed message on the health of the labor markets, principally because of a recalculation by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the unemployment rate.

Job growth had been relatively strong in recent months as the economy continued its improvement on a number of fronts. Today's report did indicate, however, that the pace of job creation has slowed somewhat.

Government statisticians believed the changing American lifestyle, in which women are a growing part of the nation's workforce, rendered their previous sampling methods obsolete.

They believed the old unemployment survey undercounted women, because of the way questions were structured and because it was not designed to count those who worked from home offices or who held part-time jobs and spent the rest of the day cooking and cleaning for their families.

Rockwell's acceptance grows

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. — Friends, family and admirers of Norman Rockwell marked the centennial of his birth Thursday amid growing respect for the popular illustrator's art.

"If you were to ask an average American to name an artist from mid-20th century, the name that would probably be mentioned is Norman Rockwell," said William Oedel, an art history professor at the University of Massachusetts.

A birthday cake was served at the new Norman Rockwell Museum in this quaint town where he lived the last years of his life.

At the museum ceremony, administrators inaugurated a new reference center for the illustrator's work. Its library contains books and periodicals on Rockwell and illustration. Its archives house more than 100,000 letters, photographs and other material from Rockwell's personal collections.

The new center underscores the increasing interest in Rockwell's role not only in popular culture, but in the world of art history as well.

Report: Seminole County rates high for enforcing tough domestic laws

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County is one of the few counties in Florida receiving stringent domestic violence law enforcement and prosecution, according to a statewide report.

In fact, the Governor's Task Force on Domestic Violence found only five judicial circuits in the state have "reasonably implemented" a 1991 law requiring state attorneys to begin special domestic violence programs and appoint special prosecutors for the program. The Seminole Brevard County circuit of State Attorney Norm Wolfinger is one of the five which complied with the directive, the task force found.

"We have been very cognizant of the problems of domestic violence," said Wolfinger. "We have always had an aggressive stance in that area. Violence in the home can often lead to tragic circumstances."

Indeed, Wolfinger is critical of the state Supreme Court's own response to domestic violence. He said a Brevard County death sentence was overturned because a woman's murder was a domestic violence case. In the case, the woman was killed by her father in retribution against his estranged wife, her mother.

Wolfinger said he began the domestic violence program seven years ago as a promise to voters. Wolfinger's victim and domestic violence program has been recognized nationally.

Working closely with law enforcement, victims who don't want to pursue charges against their attacker are required to meet with a prosecutor before they submit a written drop charges request, said Wolfinger. That's to assure the victim privately that prosecutions may be pursued whether they, under the influence of the attacker, say they want it or not.

At a glance

The Governor's Task Force on Domestic Violence reports there's been patchy implementation of a 1991 state law that directs state attorneys to establish special domestic violence units or assign prosecutors to those cases. The law also requires that training be provided to the prosecutors.

• The law has been "reasonably implemented" in these counties: Brevard, Clay, Dade, DeSoto, Duval, Manatee, Nassau, Orange, Osceola, Manatee, Sarasota, and Seminole counties.

• There's "marginal compliance" in these counties: Broward, Columbia, Dixie, Hamilton, Hardee, Highlands, Hillsborough, Indian River, Lafayette, Madison, Martin, Monroe, Okechobee, Palm Beach, Pasco, Pinellas, Polk, St. Lucie, Suwannee and Taylor.

• The law has not been complied with in these counties:

Alachua, Baker, Bay, Bradford, Calhoun, Charlotte, Citrus, Collier, Escambia, Flagler, Franklin, Gadsden, Gilchrist, Glades, Gulf, Hendry, Hernando, Holmes, Jackson, Jefferson, Lake, Lee, Leon, Levy, Liberty, Marion, Putnam, Oklawaha, St. Johns, Santa Rosa, Sumner, Union, Volusia, Wakulla, Walton and Washington counties.

Murder: Man to spend his life in prison

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A New York man who killed his ex-wife in a Lake Mary shopping center parking lot a year ago was sentenced to life in prison Thursday.

San Francisco Goungo, 43, was sentenced to 25 years for the murder of Matilda Ferrer and 15 years for the attempted murder of Ferrer's cousin, Hector Ruiz. He received a three year minimum mandatory sentence for use of a firearm and was given credit for 358 days time served awaiting trial. The sentences are concurrent.

Goungo was convicted by a jury in December of attempting to shoot Ruiz then shooting Ferrer twice in the head outside a supermarket in the Lake Mary Centre on Feb. 4 last year. Ferrer was airlifted to Orlando Regional Medical Center where she died. Goungo and Ferrer were divorced but continued to live together on and off until Ferrer left Rochester without telling anyone just before Christmas 1992.

The defendant hoped to work out their problems when he met her in Lake Mary to talk on Feb. 3. However, the next day Goungo said he "snapped," after a drinking and drug binge, when he saw her with another man in the parking lot. The prosecution claimed during the trial that jealousy was a motivating factor in the shootings. The defense alleged a romantic relationship between Ferrer and Ruiz, which Ruiz denied under oath. Lake Mary nixes sewer system

By NICK PFEIFAU

LAKE MARY — Installation of a sanitary sewer system to the east of Lake Mary was voted down last night. The decision will remove the project from bids being put out by Seminole County on road widening of Lake Mary Boulevard from the CSX railroad tracks to U.S. Highway 17-92.

The City Commission room was packed as the proposal was brought up for consideration. Mayor Lowry Rockett allowed all interested citizens to have an opportunity to comment on the project.

The report began with City Planner Matt West reviewing the project. It would cover the area only within the city limits, east of the railroad tracks. The area has been divided into three phases, with Phase I, consisting of approximately 24 homes, being the prime consideration for the sewer installation.

Pell hospitalized after suicide attempt

JACKSONVILLE — Former Florida football coach Charley Pell has been admitted to a hospital after a friend found him trying to commit suicide.

Pell, 52, left a package with a suicide note and a map to where his body could be found for state trooper Malcolm Jowers, the head of the Gator football team security and his close friend.

Jowers found Pell unconscious from carbon monoxide poisoning his car in a wooded area. The engine was running, and a hose had been connected from the exhaust pipe into the car.

Pell was taken to Baptist Medical Center and admitted for his own safety Wednesday night, the police report said. Hospital spokeswoman Cindy Hamilton would not release any information.

In the note, Pell said he had lost his "desire to live" and was "not motivated for the future," according to police.

Pell, one of the most successful coaches in Gator history, was forced to resign in 1984 after an NCAA investigation into widespread recruiting violations.

When he left coaching, he started his own insurance company in Tampa. In 1991, he and his wife moved his TeamStaff management firm to Jacksonville.

Playground replaced with shuffleboard

DELRAY BEACH — One home to the golden arches is trying harder to cater to its customers in their golden years by replacing its playground with a shuffleboard court.

The court should be in place as early as March, said Robert Wonyetye, 31, managing partner of a McDonald's restaurant in Delray Beach, where the average age is 65.

Wonyetye's customers suggested the shuffleboard court, and the company approved it in August. It will be the only one in the McDonald's system, said Jane Hulbert from the firm's headquarters in Oakbrook, Ill.

"We want to tie it into the condo circuit and sponsor our own tournaments," said Wonyetye. "It's going to be fantastic."

The influence of the older generation doesn't stop at the door. Eight of the 11 breakfast workers are 60-plus, said Wonyetye, whose 56-year-old father is the breakfast manager.

And at this McDonald's, there's no salt on the fries.

Confusion preceded gas explosion

PENSACOLA — A natural gas explosion that injured 37 people at the Pensacola Naval Air Station in 1991 was the result of confusion and disregard for safety during a hasty construction project, Navy investigators say.

There was confusion about whether base officials had given the Naval Recruiting Orientation Unit permission to begin renovating a building for its use, according to an investigation report obtained by the Pensacola News Journal through a Freedom of Information Act request.

Navy legal investigators also found the sailor in charge of the project did not realize the gas hadn't been shut off before work began, the newspaper reported Thursday.

The explosion caused $3.2 million in damage to the recruiting facility, eight other government buildings and 62 vehicles on Aug. 29, 1991. Most of the injuries were minor, but a civilian Navy firefighter, Capt. Larry Johnson, was seriously burned on his face, neck and hands.

Construction workers vacated the building after they ruptured a gas line. Firefighters were called and the explosion occurred after they arrived nearby. Johnson was closest to the building, about 100 feet. It was four months before he could return to work.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Bill has environmentalists worried

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Rep. Bert Harris says he just wants to prevent people from losing lifetime investments for the sake of protecting a few gopher tortoises or other endangered or threatened creatures.

He can recite horror stories of retirees paying taxes for years on property and then being unable to build on it or sell it. Their property is virtually taken away by environmental, zoning or other governmental restrictions, he contends.

"If you've got scrub jays down here, if you've got certain rats, you can't do anything with it," the Democratic lawmaker said from his Lake Placid office. "Where in the hell are we going to stop? Now, my bill says from here on out, if you take it, pay for it."

The property rights issue is among several that have environmentalists worried about the 1994 legislative session that starts next week.

To them, the bill Harris has introduced would give developers and land speculators the key to the state treasury or free them to plunder Florida's natural resources.

"Large landowners and developers are making a blatant attempt to put their property rights above those of every other Floridian," said Monte Heloit, a spokesman for the Florida Consumer Action Network. "The concept of paying people not to pollute or destroy our neighborhoods and communities is fundamentally flawed."

The Harris bill would require government agencies to purchase property devalued 40

Environmental measures addressed

By Associated Press

Environmental measures the Florida Legislature is expected to consider in 1994:

● Property Rights. Local governments and state agencies could be required to purchase property that has been devalued by zoning, growth management and environmental regulations.

● Fish and Wildlife Merger. Regulation of marine life, including the Florida Marine Patrol, now under the Department of Environmental Regulation, would be merged with the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

● Boaters Bill of Rights. An advisory council would be able to challenge state agency rules on boating, such as speed limits.

● Submerged Lands. Leasing of submerged state lands for marinas and other private uses would be delegated from the governor and Cabinet to the secretary of environmental protection.

● Anti-SLAPP. Developers would be limited in their ability to file Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation by groups and citizens opposed to their projects.

● Preservation 2000. The environmental land-buying program would be continued for another year through additional bonding of documentary stamp taxes on real estate transactions.

● Manatee Tags. The law that created the special license plates to raise money for manatee protection programs, which is scheduled for automatic repeal this year, would be reauthorized.

● Florida Bay. The state would be allowed to use its condemnation powers to purchase two tracts of Everglades property that could then be flooded to improve the flow of fresh water to Florida Bay.

percent or more by regulatory programs. Property owners could file inverse condemnation suits to force such purchases.

Harris introduced the same bill last year, but the Legislature instead passed a measure that would have created an inverse condemnation study commission.

Gov. Lawton Chiles vetoed it, saying the panel would have been weighted against public environmental interests. Instead, he created his own study commission.

The governor's panel has drafted, but not yet given final approval to, a possible compromise. It would allow the chief judge in each Circuit Court to appoint a mediator who would try to settle property rights disputes, said David Maloney, the panel's staff director.

The mediators also could recommend changes in or exceptions to regulations or financial compensation. But unlike the Harris bill, there would be no threshold for requiring such purchases.

The commission may vote out a final recommendation to the Legislature at its next meeting Feb. 10. It has a Feb. 28 deadline.

Another issue vexing environmentalists is a Boaters Bill of Rights. They call it the "Manatee Massacre Bill." It would create a panel of primarily pro-boating interests to challenge speed limits.

Farrakhan gets muted response from Congressional Black Caucus

By SONYA ROSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan disciplined a key aide for making anti-Jewish statements, but it remained unclear whether the action would satisfy black members of Congress who had demanded it.

Farrakhan said Thursday that Khalid Abdul Muhammad had been removed from his job as national assistant because of a Nov. 29 speech in which Muhammad called Jews the "bloodsuckers" of the black community, labeled the pope a "no-good cracker" and urged mob murder of white South Africans.

"I found the speech, after listening to it in context, vile in manner, repugnant, malicious, mean-spirited, and spoken in mockery of individuals and people, which is against the spirit of Islam," Farrakhan said at a news conference.

"While I stand by the truths that he spoke, I must condemn in the strongest terms the manner in which those truths were represented," Farrakhan said. Muhammad could possibly return to his job, if "he demonstrates that he is willing to conform" to Nation of Islam standards, Farrakhan said.

Farrakhan had been under pressure to denounce Muhammad for the sake of gaining mainstream support for the Nation of Islam's work in drug and crime intervention.

But the Congressional Black Caucus, which had hinged Farrakhan's prospect of working with them to his statements Thursday, was terse and vague in its response.

"I welcome the action of Minister Louis Farrakhan to discipline and rebuke Khalid Muhammad and to dismiss him from his position," said the caucus chairman, Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md.

But Mfume, who pledged a "sacred covenant" with the Nation in September, did not say whether Farrakhan's actions satisfied him. The caucus denied the existence of the covenant, saying it never approved the deal with a vote. Farrakhan's statements did not satisfy Rep. Gary Franks of Connecticut, the only Republican in the 40-member caucus.

"I see the Nation of Islam and the Ku Klux Klan being somewhat similar," Franks said. "The Congressional Black Caucus has never rushed to embrace the Ku Klux Klan. They should also not be embracing the Nation of Islam."

Other caucus members on Thursday denounced Muhammad's statements, but dispersed in the hours following Farrakhan's news conference without commenting on it.

Muhammad, speaking Thursday in Sarasota, Fla., at a Black History Month celebration, said he remained loyal to Farrakhan, whom he called "my spiritual father, my leader, my teacher."

Muhammad avoided a repeat of the type of statements that outraged black and Jewish leaders in his November speech at Kean College in Union, N.J. But he had harsh words for whites in general, calling them "the adversary of God," the Sarasota Herald-Tribune reported for today's editions.

Jesse Jackson, whose presidential campaign was troubled by anti-Semitic statements, commended Farrakhan for dismissing Muhammad. "I hope we can overcome this painful period and work together to lift the African-American community to new heights," Jackson said.

The man said he was talking on a pay telephone outside the business at 9 p.m., when he was struck in the head by a bottle. He said the men then hit and kicked him and struck him with bottles.
- A Sanford woman reported her 1989 Nissan was taken from its parking spot in the 1500 block of 13th Street sometime Wednesday between 4 a.m. and 8 a.m.
- Construction tools and equipment valued at nearly $1,450 were reported taken from a truck at a residence in the 2200 block of Washington Street sometime between Monday and 6 a.m. Wednesday.

Suspect hides at jail

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — William Ellis, 26, attempted to hide from police in the lobby of the John E. Polk Correctional Facility yesterday. He is still there, but now in a different part of the building.

According to Police Commander Dennis Whitmire, Juan Carlos Pacheco, 31, of Kissimmee, was in the restroom of the Seminole County Community College, when Ellis reportedly took his wallet which had been lying on a bench, and removed $155 in cash and some credit cards.

Whitmire said Ellis then reportedly threw the wallet into the toilet, ran off, and was driven away by an unidentified person in what was described as a white Mustang.

"The driver of the car took Ellis to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility," Whitmire said, "where he ran into the lobby area apparently trying to avoid detection."

"In the meantime," Whitmire said, "Pacheco retrieved his wallet, and some students at the gym trailed the Mustang to the jail, then summoned police."

Pacheco was taken to the jail lobby where he reportedly identified Ellis, who was apprehended by Sanford police and placed under arrest.

Kudos for recreation program

The City of Sanford Recreation Department will begin a new program near the end of this month. It will only serve a small number of people, but we see it as an excellent project to help a special group.

Called STOP, Saturday Time-Out for Parents, it will offer free programs for physically and/or mentally challenged youngsters between the ages of five and 17.

Toys, games, videos and activities will be provided under constant watchful eyes of recreation officials and volunteers.

Offered each Saturday from 9:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m., it will give the parents some extra time in which to handle personal needs or undertake shopping trips.

There are no requirements for city residency, and the only requirements are advance registration by Feb. 11, and the filling out of a medical data sheet by the parents.

Society today, whether it's governmental or privately backed, provides a large number of opportunities for almost every need. Children with handicaps however, are too often left in the background. Any parent in this situation or those who know of such a parent, are aware of the difficulties which present themselves.

This is only one day a week, and only for three hours, but this will go a long way toward helping both the youngsters and their parents.

Officials say possibly 700 youngsters in this age group are in the Sanford and North Seminole County area.

It is doubtful that half of this number would sign up for this program, but even a few dozen would make a difference in the lives of their parents.

We commend the city recreation organization for undertaking such a project.

We also suggest other cities investigate a similar program, whether on an individual basis, or collectively.

This particular program deserves everyone's appreciation.

The hottest topic

The hottest topic of conversation is the subject that everyone fears — violent crime. It is all around us, there seems to be no let up.

On a recent local TV news broadcast, there were eight stories about crime which dominated the newscast until the weather report.

Crime is out of control. We beat attack it now or crime will consume us.

The thing is that what we have tried hasn't worked. Our society needs to lock up its most violent offenders to remove them as a menace. But that is only part of the solution.

We need a more comprehensive approach to crime. Many good ideas have been proffered. More police officers on the beat, stop the revolving prison door, early childhood medical and educational attention, helping children at risk, neighborhood watches, etc.

We need more of a sense of community, a good neighbor policy which will cause us as a community to start to "own" the problem of crime. When I was growing up, my generation was challenged by our leaders with such idealistic goals as "Ask not what your country can do for you. Ask what you can do for your country."

I think we need to go a step beyond. Let's find where we as a society have been divided, and instead unite.

For example, the institution of the church has fulfilled a role to provide society with a moral compass, a set of values and an ethical code of conduct. Why not emphasize this valuable role of the church to be a major component of a comprehensive attack on crime?

At the same time, let us as a democratic society understand that the free expression of faith should not be excluded from the public debate, rather it should be included in the best tradition of religious freedom and political democracy. If modern plagues such as crime are to be realistically confronted, then religious institutions and the religious had better be a part of the solution.

Finally, as I have stated many times before in these columns, for a democracy to work the citizens must honor the common weal as well as self. We have worshiped at the altar of the "Me Generation" for 25 years and we are sadly reaping the results. Along with individual rights come responsibilities to our community — otherwise the social fabric starts tearing, as it is.

We must awaken to our sense of shared values that sustain us as families and as a community. Only then will we successfully attack violent crime.

Two setbacks for violence and hate

This nation doesn't often rack up a national doubleheader in domestic peacemaking in one week, but recently it crossed a magnificent Rubicon.

The first half of the doubleheader was the Supreme Court's unanimous ruling that abortion clinics can invoke the federal racketeering law to sue violent anti-abortion protest groups.

The second half of the peace-fostering doubleheader was a cross section of black leaders' condemnation of a sickening anti-Semitic speech by a Nation of Islam spokesman.

In the past, black leaders have been hesitant to condemn "a brother" for semantic transgressions, sincerely believing that a confrontation would further divide and weaken an already politically impaired community.

But that same circle-the-wagons mentality is responsible for the silence of many reasonable anti-abortion allies. The silence of these groups, in effect, became a subliminal green light to the more militant anti-abortion groups to continue terrorizing women and doctors in the abortion relationship.

Randall Terry, founder of one of the most belligerent anti-abortion groups, Operation Rescue, denounced the Supreme Court ruling in National Organization for Women vs. Scheidler as "a betrayal of over 200 years of tolerance toward protest and civil disobedience."

In truth, his organization and his tactics are the real betrayers of civil disobedience, whose history encompasses the nonviolent splendor of Socrates, Thoreau, Gandhi and King. Once any activist asserts, as did an Operation Rescue spokeswoman, that her group is "accountable to God, not to the government... and are willing to pay the price," then its members are no different than any common criminal or murderer who claims his god commanded him to slaughter the saboteurs of his way of life.

The true nature of civil disobedience, or what Gandhi called satyagraha (the achievement of good will through nonviolence), is that it does not cause any kind of physical harm or violence to another person or group. Not only does Randall Terry violate the sanctity of life with his fanaticism, but Khalid Abdul Muhammad rapes our reciprocity of civility with his venom.

The following excerpts from a speech by Muhammad at Kean College is only a small part of the barbaric rhetoric that will stun you. His near insanity is truly painful to read.

"Who are the slumlords in the black community? The so-called Jew... Everybody always talks about Hitler exterminating six million Jews... But don't nobody ever ask what they do to Hitler... they went in there, in Germany, the way they do everywhere they go, and they supplanted, they usurped..."

"The Federal Reserve ain't really owned by the Federal Government... It's owned by the Jews..."

"We owe the white man nothin' in South Africa... If he won't get out of town by sundown... we kill the women, we kill the children, we kill the babies... we kill 'em all."

DONNA BRITT

You think my theory is a crock?

WASHINGTON — So you still don't get it. I spent a whole column last week describing Los Angeles' appeal. Letting residents explain why, despite quakes, brush fires and the verified presence of Bruce Willis, people still live there.

But some of you remain puzzled. Frankly, I was too — until I figured it out last week. This was even before I stepped outside Washington's National airport terminal on Monday, fresh off a plane from the quake state.

I was stunned. News reports and whining family members had prepared me for some of the most brutal arctic conditions ever. Ha. The temperature was bracingly cool. No snow. Little ice. Neither a polar bear nor sled dog in sight.

"Obviously," I told my husband, "your weather 'problems' were exaggerated."

I was kidding. But it was impossible for me to truly understand the icy fist that had gripped Washington and much of the nation. In balmy L.A., I'd listened to my family's cold stories — the eternity spent cleaning the car, the misery of pushing it uphill for a block because the street's rink-slick surface prohibited mere driving — and almost shrugged.

Compared with 5.1 aftershocks, it sounded only half bad.

Standing on a snowless airport sidewalk not threatening to crack open beneath me, I just couldn't relate. I guess you had to have been here.

But you don't have to be on opposite sides of a continent not to get it. The other morning, my neighbor came downstairs to discover her son, 11, eating Honey Nut Cheerios and wearing full Buffalo Bills regalia — blue sweat pants, Jim Kelly No. 12 jersey, Buffalo-embellished Starter jacket and cap.

"His socks had little buffaloes on them!" she said. "So what happens if (the Bills) lose again? His heart's on his sleeve — it's like saying, 'Kick me.'"

A non-fan, she admits, "I just can't relate." It's a lifelong challenge, relating to what others — unconnected by age, gender, color, culture, or just not living inside your skin — are experiencing.

Take the Bobbitt mess (please). Upon hearing of Lorena's handiwork, how many women snickered as their male co-workers squirmed and shadow-grabbed their crotches? I cringed — but not like I did reading a story on clitoral circumcision, a still-common, and often unanesthetized, practice.

How many men wondered how rape possibly could be as horrible as women described it? I once heard a man say, well, OK, it's not great, but hey — women have sex all the time. Asked how he'd react if somebody raped him, the smirk faded, "I'd have to kill him," he said.

Even your own feelings may be unreliable. If women's childbirth memories remained fresh unobscured by time and the cute, resulting bundle — would we be as willing to repeat the process? To fully recall childbirth's physical "joys," I'd have to relive them. But I fully remember my reaction, moments after producing my firstborn, when someone joked, "So! Ready to start on the next one?"

If I hadn't been holding a baby, I'd have flattened him.

Somehow, the quake — an event so elemental that it unearthed every imaginable feeling — shook such thoughts loose.

Each night, after seeing the quake's toll, I'd watch the coverage on TV.

And each night, I'd realize how inadequate the world's most powerful medium was to relate its awfulness. Nature is too big to squeeze into a 19-inch box.

The borders get in the way. Where the screen stops, nature keeps spilling. The most evocative photo of devastated Northridge Manor, the most eloquent description, seemed tiny and false next to the reality.

Words stop. Pictures crop. Nature never ends.

But for all their inadequacy, pictures are powerful. Veterans say the most gut-wrenching war photo can't describe the real thing — but it was images that mobilized a nation against the Vietnam War.

Books had for years enumerated slavery's horrors — but "Roots" helped America feel them. In 1987, pictures turned Baby Jessica into Baby Warbucks.

At some point during the six days I spent in L.A., its magic became clear: It's the best place on earth to see the box's happiest pictures come to life.

Where else can you realize that the guy ordering a cone before you in the Haagen-Dazs line is Neil Simon? That the fellow you just passed in a hotel hallway is Ben Vereen? The guy at the seminar you're attending is — wait a sec, you just saw him on cable — yes! the elevator operator in "Pretty Woman!"

You start to relate. You recall living here, seeing Bette Midler at a party in Burbank, Jimmy Smits in Brentwood, Blair Underwood at a play, Daryl Hannah at a flick, Kevin Costner at lunch. You get fuzzy about why,

So you still don't get it.

BIA needs lesson in home improvement

WASHINGTON — If the Bureau of Indian Affairs ran a hospital emergency room, bruises would be treated before bullet wounds.

That is the way BIA runs its housing improvement program, which is supposed to help nearly 100,000 needy American Indian families renovate or rebuild their homes. These desperate families are living on reservations in substandard conditions, without basic amenities such as electricity, heat or indoor plumbing.

While some families suffer, an alarming amount of the program's limited funds are going to applicants with good homes, according to a series of five audits by the Department of Interior's inspector general. The more comfortable applicants are using the money to buy air conditioners, carpets, garage door openers and other "nice-to-have" but unauthorized frill items.

Many reservation residents who live in abject poverty have never seen a dime from the BIA.

In the latest DOI audit, covering the tribes served by BIA's Portland, Ore., area office, the relatively few dollars that trickled down to the needy "provided improvements that were unallowable and unneeded or that did not result in decent, safe and sanitary housing."

"You have to understand that for some of these people it is daily survival," explained Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., the only American Indian member of Congress. "It's hand to mouth, day by day, for some of them."

No fewer than one-third of America's 1.8 million American Indians live below the poverty line, and unemployment levels on most reservations top 50 percent. That means if something goes wrong with the house, (families) haven't got the money to even fix the darn thing," Campbell told our associate Ed Henry. "So their homes get dilapidated very fast... and they can't be fixed up with a nail or two and a coat of paint. It requires major renovation even to bring them up to minimum housing standard criteria."

The audit of BIA's Portland office found that inadequate oversight leaves the program "highly vulnerable to waste, mismanagement and fraud."

Part of the blame can be placed on shoddy contractors. About $200,000 was wasted when BIA fell prey to contractors who either inflated their prices or simply took the money without doing any work. In two cases cited by the audit, contractors inflated prices by as much as 400 percent for storm doors and 800 percent for minor electrical work.

In other cases, the government is the culprit for neglecting to follow eligibility requirements for those receiving funds. BIA officials spent $778,000 on renovations for applicants who had too large an income to be eligible for the program. Investigators also cited $1.2 million that may have been wasted on improvements for applicants whose eligibility had not even been determined.

Forty-nine families, for example, were awarded $247,000 worth of "nice-to-have" but "unallowable and unneeded improvements," according to the report. Still more families received improvements related more to style than substandard conditions.

One family was awarded $36,000 in program funds to help build a 2,300-square-foot log cabin that was valued at $150,000. The family already owned a house in standard condition and planned to use the cabin as a second home.

While taxpayers were funding these frivolous home improvements, many of the neediest families were put on hold.

Many reservation residents who live in abject poverty have never seen a dime from the BIA.

Teens call for life terms for killers

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Seeing her friend gunned down, the victim of 17 shots, 15-year-old Janae Wells was left with bone-deep fear and a rigid sense of justice: Kids who kill should go to prison for life.

"If a kid picks up a gun, pulls the trigger and shoots somebody, then he should be held accountable for going to jail and serving a life sentence," Wells told a congressional hearing Thursday.

Since a killer "took somebody else's life, I feel his life should be taken in jail."

Wells broke down while testifying, saying she wants to escape from her Washington neighborhood, "but right now my mother doesn't have enough money to move. I have realized that something this tragic doesn't only happen to bad people, this can happen to anyone."

Her sense of the proper punishment was shared by children from other cities who have been similarly scarred by the shooting deaths of friends or loved ones or simply by the fear of gun violence that randomly invades their lives.

"If a kid is old enough to be able to shoot somebody, then they're old enough to be put away," said sixth-grader Megan McGullicuddy of the New York City borough of Brooklyn, whose principal was killed in the crossfire of a gang fight outside school.

Eleven youths told the House panel of the ubiquity of guns in inner cities and suburbs.

Supervisor for the program is Trent Schake. Kathy Spencer is the programmer for the project.

"We studied this carefully," said Schake, "then Kathy and I visited Altamonte Springs, which has a similar program, to find out how it has been accepted."

Unofficial estimates from the Seminole County Mental Health Center said there were about 700 children in that age group who could be classified as either physically or mentally challenged.

Schake said the program will begin at 9:30 a.m. every Saturday beginning February 26, and conclude at 12:30 p.m. "We will provide toys, videos and activities to entertain the children,"

Domestic

Next, victims and batterers are often requested to attend a domestic violence course as a condition to the prosecution's willingness to pursue a charge.

Sanford police Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire said the 1991 law works smoothly and he's pleased with Woffinger's program.

"It runs fairly smoothly," said Whitmire.

Whitmire said the 1991 law removes the decision for arrest from the victim and places it with the policeman. If evidence of violence is present, including marks on the victim's body, officers decide whether to arrest the suspect. If not, they must provide written reports explaining why not.

Statewide though, enforcement of the laws are not as stringent as they are here, the task force found. Victims who are attacked by people they live with should not be treated less seriously than those attacked by strangers, Miami Judge Linda Dakis said Thursday.

Dakis chaired the committee that made more than 200 recommendations after concluding the state needs to provide more funding to its programs for battered women and children.

"We're asking for one thing," Dakis said. "We're asking for money."

She said, however, it would be impossible to put a dollar figure on all that needs to be done.

Of the 20 state attorneys, the task force found eight state attorneys have partially implemented the law and seven have not complied.

Prosecutors said lawmakers hadn't provided enough money to implement the law.

"Prevailing attitudes among those within the justice system, as well as outside of the system, is that domestic violence is not a 'real' or serious crime deserving attention and resources," the report said.

However, domestic violence is the single major cause of injury to women, more frequent than auto accidents, rapes and muggings combined, according to the report.

Three of every 10 female homicide victims are killed by husbands or boyfriends.

Although some men are victims of violence in the home, 95 percent of those battered by their spouses or partners are women, according to Robin Hassler, executive director of the task force.

The report also pointed out that 50 percent to 70 percent of the men who batter their wives or girlfriends also abuse their children.

"And child witnesses to domestic violence suffer as much as if they themselves had suffered direct physical violence," the report notes. "Children are also in danger of repeating the cycle of violence as adults if mother and child are not safe."

The task force recommended:

- establishing a statewide toll-free number for victims of domestic abuse,

- transferring oversight of domestic violence within the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services from Aging and Adult services to Children and Family services,

- requiring all 20 state attorneys to establish a special prosecution unit or to assign prosecutors to domestic violence cases and provide appropriate training.

Information from the Associated Press is contained in this report.

Sewer

Most of the property to the south of Lake Mary Boulevard in Phase I abuts Big Lake Mary. Almost all homes have septic tanks.

"The one thing we have to keep in mind," West said, "is the environmental condition of the lake." He explained that the lake presently is in relatively good condition, although not at the top level.

The two options explained by West were that the city could have the construction of the line done while road widening is underway, or it could be rejected, with the possibility that a line installed after construction would be more costly.

Finance Director Randy Knight also explained the project, pointing out that the capital cost for Phase I would be $168,000. The city would recover some of the costs through impact fees on 24 present residences, and in the future for 13 potential residences. Knight astonished the commission and audience when he reported that under the impact fee system, the city would not be able to recoup all the costs for slightly over 704 years.

During public participation, 10 citizens came forward to express their views. The first four, in favor of the sewer lines, were all residents directly on Lake Mary Boulevard where the lines would be installed.

The six who spoke in opposition had no homestead directly on the boulevard, although some, including former Mayor Randy Morris, had land near the site.

Most of the citizens objecting to the sanitary sewer project said they believed it would lead to a zoning change from residential to commercial, which many believed would destroy that section of the city for homeowners.

Persons favoring the sewer lines leaned toward the protection they would give to the lakes, projecting that they were being polluted by the septic tanks and stormwater runoff.

"If you are concerned about environmental issues," said former commissioner Paul Tremel, "then why look at only Phase I? With the widening of the boulevard and putting in retention ponds, it will prevent stormwater runoff into the lake more than ever before."

Morris, who said he had studied the situation closely, told the commission that only about 20 percent of the area in Phase I could possibly be developed as commercial property. "If that happens," he said, "the land value of nearby residential property will drop."

Morris presented the commission with a petition he said was signed by 138 persons.

"What I would urge you to do," he said, "is opt out of the interlocal agreement with Seminole County on this sewer proposal, and transfer the money you would have spent to some other project."

Following public comments, the commissioners gave their opinions. "This is a difficult decision," said Mayor Rockett. "I recognize the arguments on rezoning, but I don't believe there is any immediate danger to the lakes. That brings it down to strictly a cost issue."

He continued, "We have a limited amount of funds, and the way I see it, if we can't recover 40 to 50 percent of our money in the near future, I would be against it, unless there is some environmental emergency, and I don't see any at this time."

Commissioner Gary Brender agreed. "I think we should continue to pursue sewer needs wherever we can, but we have to weigh the costs on this matter, and I can't see taking on that kind of expense without knowing what it would do to our lakes."

Brender commented, "I assure you I have no intention of ever rezoning Lake Mary Boulevard to the east of the city, but I'm certain it will come up again and

I can't guarantee what other commissions would do in the future."

Brender made the motion to eliminate the sewer portion from the interlocal agreement and put the money set aside for the project back into the city's water and sewer fund.

Commissioner George Duryea said he had studied his past voting record on sewer matters during the previous years. "I've voted to deny every time it was brought up," he said. "If there is a danger to the lake from septic tanks, it would have happened by now. I will be consistent in my vote and vote no."

Commissioner David Meador also agreed and seconded Brender's motion.

"We've put a lot of detail into this study and this public hearing," commented Rockett. "I want this to serve as information for any and all future city commissions whenever this matter comes up again, so I'm very pleased that so many people turned out to voice their opinions."

With that, a roll call vote was taken, and by a unanimous decision, Seminole County will be informed to remove the requirement for sanitary sewers in the Phase I section of the boulevard construction project.

meetings?" asked Dr. Joe Wise, director of the transportation services department.

The school bus routes are designed to bring students to and from school during regular school hours. If the bus is a student's only form of transportation, he might as well forget about participation in any extra-curricular activities.

So Wise, who serves as a member of the Lynx (formerly Tri-County Transit) advisory board, has suggested that Seminole schools work with this provider in developing a plan that will bring the students and parents the services they need.

Wise, who previously directed the transportation services department in the Orange County schools, said Lynx has served that school system well.

Yesterday afternoon the Lynx advisory board met with representatives of the school district and with leaders from Seminole County and the seven municipalities included within the county limits.

The group opened discussions about what might be done to improve services for students by looking for ways to "encourage cities to begin to support Lynx" and to get the county to "continue their support," Wise said.

The group believes that Sanford Middle School and Seminole High School in Sanford and Lyman High School and Milwee Middle School in Longwood have the greatest needs for the public transportation for students.

The local support is needed to help finance new routes that would travel closer to school campuses.

"The students only pay 25 cents per ride," Wise said. "That's nothing."

Wise said economically disadvantaged students and exceptional education students who travel off-campus to work training sites are going to be able to take the greatest advantage of the bus service once it is established.

He said no date has yet been set as a target for getting the service on line.

"I think we stirred up suitable enthusiasm for this program," Wise said. "But we'll have to grow it as we go."

Era ends: Vietnam trade embargo lifted

Vets bemoan decision; U.S. business cheers

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Families of missing Vietnam-era servicemen say President Clinton's decision to resume trade with Vietnam breaks a promise he made to keep the pressure on Hanoi to fully account for MIAs. But U.S. businesses are reveling at the prospect of a new multibillion-dollar marketplace.

By dropping the 19-year trade embargo, Clinton has assured U.S. companies a sizeable share of business expected to be generated as Vietnam modernizes its fallen-down infrastructure, updates its telecommunications system and develops new consumer markets.

"The bottom line is it allows us an equal footing to compete for the business in Vietnam," said Robert Driscoll, president of the U.S.-ASEAN Council, an association of about 100 U.S. companies.

Mark Rosenker, vice president of the Electronic Industries Association, said the trade sanctions "outlived their usefulness" and renewing trade would be key to "insuring competitiveness over the long term."

In announcing his long-anticipated and controversial decision, Clinton on Thursday insisted it was based solely on securing further Vietnamese cooperation to account for U.S. servicemen missing in action from the Vietnam War.

"I wanted to make sure that the trade questions did not enter into this decision. So ... we never had a discussion about it," he said.

One administration official said, however, that while the POW-MIA issue was the overriding concern, economic pressures also were noted.

Clinton cited considerable progress in recent months in accounting for 2,238 American MIAs in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

But veterans and MIA family organizations criticized Clinton's decision. They had lobbied heavily in favor of maintaining the embargo as a pressure tactic to get a full accounting of all the missing.

"I think it's a mistake. ... We have 2,000 people over there who are unaccounted for. The Vietnamese will not send us any remains now," said Roy Jesse, who was selling T-shirts and buttons to raise money for veterans' causes at the Vietnam War Memorial.

"The embargo was the only leverage that we had," said John Summer, executive director of the American Legion.

Ann Mills Griffith, head of a Vietnam MIA-POW group, said the president has "clearly broken" his promise from last summer that he would maintain the embargo until Vietnam provided a full accounting of the missing Americans. "I fault the bureaucracy ... for misinforming the president and giving him advice that doesn't hold water."

But Clinton said ending the embargo was "the best way to ensure cooperation from Vietnam."

He said the United States will not fully normalize relations with Vietnam until there is "more progress, more cooperation and more answers."

One wheelchair-bound Vietnam veteran who attended Clinton's White House announcement said the decision "ends the war for us."

"It closes a chapter for those of us who fought there," said John Terzano, president of Vietnam Veterans of America Foundation.

In hopes of spurring further Vietnamese cooperation, one veterans group, the Washington-based Vietnam Veterans of America Inc., launched its own project, asking U.S. servicemen to turn in souvenirs they brought back from the war that might help account for dead or missing Vietnamese soldiers.

Anticipating the resumption of trade, about three dozen American firms already have offices in Vietnam.

Over the next three years, nearly $4 billion worth of deals are expected in aviation, telecommunications, heavy equipment and construction.

A survey of U.S.-ASEAN Council members found that the potential investment marketplace in Vietnam will reach $8 billion in the next five years, including airport construction, power generation, hotel development, medical needs and port construction, Driscoll said.

"It will be good for the U.S. economy, good for the Vietnamese economy, good for relations between the two countries," said Virginia Foote, director of the U.S.-Vietnam Trade Council.

Although the Senate gave Clinton political cover this week when, in a non-binding resolution, it voted 62-38 Senate to drop the embargo, there was considerable negative reaction in Congress on Thursday.

Sen. Bob Smith, R-N.H., said "Vietnam has not yet been fully forthcoming on the POW-MIA issue" and the embargo thus should remain.

Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., said he had "serious reservations" about the decision.

More than 50 House members had sent Clinton a letter urging him to retain the embargo until he could "certify to the Congress and the American people that Hanoi is fully forthcoming with respect to POW-MIA information and remains which our intelligence and investigations indicate that they continue to withhold."

A war Americans just can't forget

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON — Generous in victory, America helped rebuild its World War II enemies. A generation later, the national impulse was to assist Russia when the Soviet empire collapsed. Toward Vietnam there was neither generosity nor forgiveness.

The opening of trade relations President Clinton announced Thursday was framed as narrowly as possible. It was not a gesture of friendship or an effort to heal long-festering wounds. Trade was not the issue.

Clinton said he lifted the trade embargo to help determine once and for all the fate of U.S. servicemen missing in action from the war.

"I am absolutely convinced it offers the best way to resolve the fate of those who remain missing," he said. "These actions do not constitute a normalization of our relationship."

A normal relationship between the United States and Vietnam? The concept remains beyond consideration. After 19 years, the wounds still throb. The images recur. Families grieve and yearn for evidence of the fate of loved ones who vanished in a war America's vast power could not win.

Vietnam forced Americans to confront loss. Not just the tragedy of young people dying in battle, but the loss of innocence and of confidence, a loss of the sense of the nation's place in the world.

Other wars created heroes: Washington, Grant and Lee, Pershing, Eisenhower and MacArthur. The images left from Vietnam were not heroic: My Lai, napalm, Agent Orange and an American helicopter evacuating the last Americans from Saigon on April 30, 1975.

"The divisions of that war are going to last a very long time," said historian Michael Beschloss, who likened it to the Civil War in terms of the emotional anguish it arouses.

Forty-some years ago, U.S. oil companies explored what then was called French Indo-China. But the French hold was weakening and policy makers in Washington were obsessed with the potential of losing the entire region to communism. They spoke of countries toppling like dominoes.

Only U.S. power could turn the tide. When John F. Kennedy took office the concern was Laos. But before long it became Vietnam and the question of how to prop up the regime of Ngo Dinh Diem.

Under President Lyndon B. Johnson, the U.S. military involvement escalated until more than 500,000 troops were in Vietnam battling an enemy that refused to follow conventional rules of warfare, that fought and melted into the countryside.

Strange softball sagas

Chase contests end with protest, in extra innings,

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Sometimes you wonder if it's worth the effort.

In the top of the eighth inning, Beer: 30 plated eight runs before an out was recorded and went on to win its first game of the season, 23-12, over Stiffey Affordables in the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Thursday Night Polar Bear Slowpitch Softball League at Chase Park.

Stiffey Affordables had just forced extra innings by scoring five runs in the bottom of seventh inning to tie the game at 12-12.

In the other game, undefeated A.D. Roster/Florida Sport Wear took a 5-0 lead after the top of the second inning and Sanford First Baptist could get no closer in dropping an 11-6 decision. The outcome is pending, however, as a protest has been filed.

A.D. Roster/Florida Sport Wear is now 3-0 on the season, while the other three teams are all 1-2.

SANFORD — How quickly a game can change.

The M.A. Erectors appeared to be headed their third straight victory of the season in the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Thursday Night Polar Bear Slowpitch Softball League at Pinehurst Park when they entered the top of the seventh inning with a 6-4 lead.

But three singles and three walks later, the previously winless S & S Raiders had scored three runs, the final two on bases-loaded walks, and M.A. Erectors' undefeated season was gone, 7-6.

The other game saw Briar Corporation score four runs in the top of the sixth inning to break open a 4-3 game, going on to beat Exterior Homesavers 10-4 to grab a share of the league lead.

Both M.A. Erectors and Briar Corporation are both 2-1, while Exterior Homesavers and S & S

Pell in hospital following suicide try

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Former Florida football coach Charley Pell has been admitted to a hospital after a friend found him trying to commit suicide.

Pell, 52, left a package with a suicide note and a map to where his body could be found for state trooper Malcolm Jowers, the head of the Gator football team security and his close friend.

Jowers found Pell unconscious from carbon monoxide poisoning his car in a wooded area. The engine was running, and a hose had been connected from the exhaust pipe into the car.

Pell was taken to Baptist Medical Center and admitted for his own safety Wednesday night, the police report said. Hospital spokeswoman Cindy Hamilton would not release any information.

In the note, Pell said he had lost his "desire to live" and was "not motivated for the future," according to police.

Pell, one of the most successful coaches in Gator history, was forced to resign in 1984 after an NCAA investigation into widespread recruiting violations.

When he left coaching, he started his own insurance company in Tampa. In 1991, he and his wife moved his TeamStaff management firm to Jacksonville.

Randy Reese, a former Florida swimming coach during Pell's tenure, said he knew Pell always wanted to return to football.

"The bottom line is the guy wants to do one thing, and that's coach football, and that's been made impossible to be able to do," Reese said.

"I'm in disbelief," said Florida receivers coach Dwayne Dixon, a former Pell player. "He always found a way to get through things. You always felt like he was a strong person and that nothing could shake him up."

In 1979, Pell's first season at Florida, the Gators went 0-10-1. In 1980, he led the Gators to a turnaround 8-4 mark and was named Southeastern Conference

The value of household work

What if homemakers stopped doing free work?

Depending on methodology and on circumstances, a married person's annual housework during the late 1980s was worth as little as $2,422 or as much as $16,997. Homemakers don't get paid, but what's their work worth to our economy?

Most are women and most are paid nothing at all for household work, even if they also hold down a paid job. Yet cooking, cleaning, clothing care, repairs and maintenance, gardening and pet care, marketing and shopping, caregiving and child-raising obviously have economic value, points out Rep. Barbara-Rose Collins, D-Mich.

The economy would shudder if homemakers stopped doing unpaid work. Families would have to choose between recruiting other unpaid volunteers, hiring replacement or settling for a life in which unfed, ignorant children and grouchy, unkempt adults struggled for survival under burned-out light bulbs and would amid mountains of stinky socks.

CONSUMER FOCUS

Official measures of the value of household work could:

- Give policy-makers a better grasp on the size of the economy.
- Help homemakers gain status and respect.

- Help legislators deal better with welfare reforms, day-care needs and Social Security benefits from retired homemakers.

Rep. Collins lined up 66 co-sponsors, including House Education and Labor Committee Chairman Bill Ford, D-Mich., behind her proposed Unremunerated Work Act, which was also endorsed by the National Organization for Women. The act would require the Bureau of Statistics in the Labor Department to conduct time use surveys to measure the unwaged work women and men do inside and outside the home.

The United States is way behind other industrialized countries in quantifying and valuing this work. Countries that have done the most work are Canada, Germany, Australia, and, in an unofficial capacity, the Dutch, the New Zealanders, and the French. But in the United States the concern is quite new. Here's one issue: If a mother is preparing lunch with her eyes on the TV and her ears alert for her baby's cry from the next room while she plans a grocery-shopping trip, should her work be valued as a chef, cook, sandwich-cutter, caregiver, or purchasing agent? Or is that leisure time?

If a father is doing the same thing, is his work more valuable, because men make more money at those outside jobs?

Whatever happens, it gives a person time to stop and reflect on the tremendous amount of time and responsibility a family and home take. It's probably the most important job there is — let's start appreciating the effort more!

Are Indian men better lovers?

DEAR ABBY: I recall reading several letters in your column some time ago (perhaps four or five years) in which you said Native American Indian men were exceptionally good lovers.

This subject is very interesting to me. I would appreciate it if you would kindly print those letters again.

Thanking you in advance, I am signing my name, but if this is printed in your column, please sign it...

DEAR L.R.: The column to which you refer has had two "curtain calls" to date, but here it is again:

DEAR ABBY: When "Ed in East Illinois" asked you if it was true that Indian men were superior to white men in the art of lovemaking, you suggested that he contact either the Bureau of Indian Affairs or the American Indian Movement. Since I am the executive director of the American Indian Movement, I feel it is my duty to respond.

For the Indian man, "love" does not begin when the lights go out or when pot or liquor is consumed, and it is not confined to the bedroom or any other hidden place. The way the Indian man treats his wife throughout their marriage is the key to making him a superior lover. His daily acts of kindness, consideration and respect for her demonstrate his love.

While we recognize that the sex act may send a man's mind afloat for a few fleeting moments it is but a minute part of the overall act of love. The above code of behavior, plus the American Indian's respect for women, have been passed on from father to son.

I personally have 15 children and I am an Objibway Indian.
DENNIS J. BANKS

DEAR ABBY: May I answer "Ed in East Illinois," who asked: "Is it true that closely guarded tribal secrets on how to please a woman are passed from father to son, making Indians better lovers than white men?"

First the white men took all the Indian's land and some of his women. Now they want the Indian's "love secrets," too. I say, "No way!" The Indian needs something to call his own.

HALF-BLOODED INDIAN

DEAR ABBY: Now I know why the Lone Ranger never got the girl. They all ended up with Jay Silverheels, that good-looking Indian who played "Tonto" in the movies.

SEMINOLE IN FLORIDA

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Ed": Yes, there are many closely guarded Indian lovemaking tricks. You will notice that divorce is very rare among Indians. That's because they know how to treat their women.

Secrets like the "Apache Grip" and the "Kickapoo Twist" will never be sold or given away by a true Indian.

MIKE WHITEFEATHER, SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Ed in Illinois": I have lived with a Mandan Indian for five years, and I wouldn't trade him for five white lovers. He is the greatest!

LINDA IN MARYLAND

DEAR ABBY: I am one-half Indian and have had two Indian squaws, who both ran off with white men.

Apparently, the "closely guarded secrets" of lovemaking from the Indian side of my family were not passed on to me.

Alcohol versus women

DEAR MARY: My husband and I like to go to a local pub on Friday night and have a few drinks with some of our friends. My problem is that sometimes after two drinks I'm practically in a coma, but other times I can enjoy several drinks during the evening and not really feel it.

My husband doesn't have this problem and sometimes I get the feeling he doesn't believe me when I say I've got to go home early. How come sometimes I am fine and other times I'm not?

UP AND DOWN DRINKER

DEAR DRINKER: The amount of alcohol and the time it takes to feel it differs from person to person, but because women's bodies contain a higher ratio of fat than men's, a woman weighing and drinking the same amount as a man will always have a higher blood alcohol concentration.

Therefore, the same amount of alcohol will affect a woman sooner and harder than a man of the same size and weight. Of course, the less you weigh, the less time it will take for the alcohol to affect you. Additionally, there are several other factors that will change how much you can tolerate from day to day. These include:

- The amount of food in your stomach. The more you've eaten either while or before drinking, the longer it will take for the alcohol to be absorbed.
- How rapidly you drink. Drinking more than about 1/2 ounce of alcohol per hour (the amount your liver can break down) causes the alcohol to go directly into your bloodstream and brain.
- Your mood. When you are tired, upset, or under stress, the effects from drinking alcohol hit you faster than they do at other times.

A Little Man in a Big World

While driving through the countryside, I saw a sign in a churchyard which read...
"It is easier to build a child than to repair an adult."
Although he may not realize it, this smiling young man has a lot of growing up to do before he can fill this chair. On the road to adulthood, he will experience a variety of situations, conflicting emotions, and the process of maturing physically.
This youngster will need mature leadership and spiritual counseling to assist in his transition from boyhood to manhood. It is our responsibility to see that he receives the guidance he needs to assure that he will continue to be smiling and well adjusted when he is old enough to fit into the role of adulthood.
Proverbs 22:6 tells us to "Train up a child in the way he should go; even when he is old he will not depart from it."
Make worship a family affair. You and your child will reap a lifetime of benefits from God's promise of eternity.

Indigestion indicates irritation in intestine

DEAR DR. GOTT: After eating peppers or certain fruits, such as blueberries, I get the most painful discomfort in my chest that lasts four to six hours. What's my problem?

DEAR READER: Indigestion after eating certain foods, especially those that are strongly flavored or highly spiced, often indicates irritation of the upper intestine, notably in the esophagus, stomach lining or duodenum (first portion of the small intestine).

While such a symptom may simply reflect temporary irritation that can be relieved by avoiding the offending food or by using antacids when necessary, persistent indigestion may indicate the presence of an ulcer, hiatal hernia or other intestinal disorder that requires diagnosis and treatment.

You should be examined by your family doctor, who may choose to order X-ray tests of your intestine or who may refer you to a gastroenterologist for additional testing, such as endoscopy (examination of the stomach and upper intestine with a lighted tube).

Remember, too, that indigestion can occasionally be caused by heart afflictions, such as angina and heart attacks. See your doctor for a diagnosis.

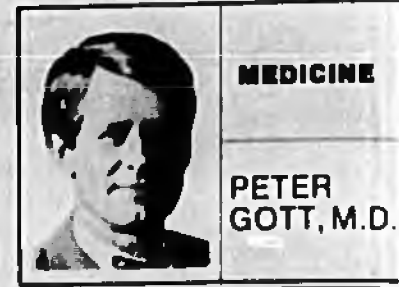

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: After spending $1,200 on a checkup, I am dismayed that there is no explanation for the fact that my stool has a terrible odor. This is most embarrassing. I take high-potency brewer's yeast and wonder if it contributes to the odor.

DEAR READER: I'm sorry to hear that you spent hundreds of dollars to discover why your stools smell bad. This seems to me to be a colossal waste of money.

Fecal matter is odoriferous because of bacterial action within the waste. The odor often depends on diet, especially if a lot of inessential gas is formed, which will exacerbate a smelly situation. I suggest that you discontinue the brewer's yeast. Copyright 1994, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

The professional golfer Dave Stockton observed: "It's always hard to sleep when you've got a big early lead. You just lie there and smile at the ceiling all night."

This can happen in a bridge deal too. Sometimes you receive a friendly lead that gives you a bonus trick. But make sure you benefit from your good fortune, ending with a birdie, not a par. Watch out for the bunkers still on the course.

North plunged straight into three no-trump, as would we all. Luckily, West led a spade, not a heart. How should South have continued from there?

three. East won with the ace and correctly returned a heart. If West had wanted a spade back, he would have led a high heart, not his fourth-highest. The defenders therefore took six tricks.

At trick one, South had visions of overtricks, having mentally placed East with the diamond king. However, he should have been wondering what to do if West had the key king. To try to discourage a heart switch, South should have won the first trick with the spade ace.

Then, after a club to the dummy and a losing diamond finesse, what will West do? Placing his partner with the spade queen, he is bound to continue with a low spade. South wins with the queen he is known not to have and claims 11 tricks. And, if he is feeling fiendish, South will cast a quick eye in West's direction to see the look on his face.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Feb. 5, 1994

Trial and error from your past experiences have taught you valuable shortcuts. Objectives which you previously had difficulty in attaining might be achieved with relative ease in the year ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone you recently met is as eager to know you better as you are to know him/her. However, at this point in time it is up to you to precipitate the relationship. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker Instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In order to be successful today it is important you are assertive without being aggressive. If you focus on the latter, instead of the former, it could be self-defeating.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

You're a quick study today, capable of learning more from exchanges with others than you may from books. Closely observe the habit patterns of people you admire.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today could be one of those days when who you know is of equal importance as what you know. You have some associations who could prove very helpful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your greatest asset today is your cooperative spirit. Persons you go out of your way to assist will feel impelled to respond with some type of equivalent gesture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It will enhance your feelings of self-worth today if you have productive involvements that busy your heart, head and hands. Make today count.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There is an additional facet to your charisma today that could make you even more appealing than usual to members of the opposite gender. You'll sense this strength, so use it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Anything you can personally do today to make things happier in your household should be given top priority. You already know what they are.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today's social activities are likely to be more fun if there aren't too many people involved. Limit the participants to a few choice friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your material aspects continue to look hopeful. Today there is a possibility you might derive some type of profit through an involvement with a relative or friend of the family.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The gift of persuasion is one of your strongest assets today. If you have an idea, issue or product you're trying to promote, this is the day to make your presentation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your greatest benefits today might come through the good auspices of others rather than from things you do on your own. Good people may feel inclined to help other good people.
