CHARADE

Two beautiful roses were given to me.
One came from the distant hills;

Sweet is the FIRST from its petals soft—
The room with its incense fills.

The other one bloomed in hot-house air,
And though perfect its petals ect,

'Tis only a beautiful dream;
An empty casket, COMPLETE and fair—

The soul of the flower was never there!

DECAPITATION

Find the word clued by the first verse, remove the first letter and it will be the word clued by the second verse; decapitate again and you have the other.

A twisting, sliding, turning round,
In strangest places often found;

It sometimes flies a went-long fall,
At last finds itself beneath your

ENIGMA

The unitalicized phrases are the particular clues to the seven letters of the word that is the solution, but every word must be considered.

A wise man on the poet's horse,
His face toward the crupper,
If he but leave, still, in reverse,
He leaves to eat a supper.

RIDDLE

It is sought by many,
But wanted by none;
What men as fleet-footed
As from it to run?
But though all have seen it,
And all talk about it,
The ones who look for it
May find it without it.

Movies Make Flower Arranging Easy

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
Have you ever noticed how characters in movies arrange flowers?

The heroine received a beautiful box of blooms. She lifts them tenderly in a bunch, and casually places them in a magnificent vase, which apparently always is filled with water for just such emergencies. Then she stands off to regard critically, and move toward the vase again. At that point she reaches to the bunch of flowers, gives them a little shake—and there she has it—a perfect flower arrangement.

I don't know how that is accomplished in movie magic. I do know that I've tried the technique myself, and the results are pretty awful. But I was looking at some flower arrangements—in connections—at the International Flower Show in New York the other day. They were lovely, beautiful and even one of them looked as though the arranger had sat up all night before carefully putting every sprig, every leaf and every petal into a specially designated spot.

Maybe formal, highly professional flower arrangements are intricate examples of "sophomore jitters." Personally I like informal bunches of flowers much better. I think it's easier to grow flowers in your garden and to go outdoors with a pair of scissors, cut some, and fill a vase. Simple as that.

But the trend, if the flower show is an indication, is toward very arty flower arrangements. Indeed. Nowadays if you want to put a bunch of roses, for example on the living room table, you've got to dig up a terra cotta bird, or an old rock or something you can place beside the vase to make a still life effect.

An organization of New York City gardeners—The Moon's Garden Club—seems to sense this trend. Some indoor garden was entered a little exhibit consisting of a highly shined spittoon covered with "plant material" which he identified as "flushing swamp grass, dried." He carefully placed a wet smoking pipe and an empty beer bottle in one side to complete the tableau.

Another thing, the ardent flower arrangers are fast getting away from using flowers in their arrangements. This dried plant material is very, very fashionable now. So if you happen to have old palm seed pods, a quantity of dried rushes, lotus pods, flax or other routine material in the attic, wrap around some Egyptian sculpture (reproductions are "cheaper than hand-made" and put it on the mantelpiece and tell it to your friends exclaiming,

"Look, if you don't have such stuff around you can always do something marvelous with an old piece of gnarled, worm-eaten wood. Interesting, that is. Things have gotten so bad that women would no more let a gnarled old tree limb hang there than a whole room filled with bits of warped and weather-worn wood ready to be used as centerpieces. The beauty of hunks of wood and dried seed pods is that you don't have to feel arises water, and they'll last indefinitely."

includes the possibility of seeing the dust on them.

Perhaps the women's movement has had a lot to do with making it's sort of flower arranging very smart. It makes every woman feel as though she were creating a mural painting every time she gets to fill a container with plant material. It's gone even farther, however, so that they are frequently using a few flowers—not the garden familiar—to set off the interesting texture and composition achieved by ringing a bunch of baling wire, or framing the top of a coffee tin.

I think baling wire is fine enough, however, to offer the tone down on too much centering, but I'd rather concentrate on a whole lot of pretty flowers in my living room. After all, in the past most of us thought flowers had some charm of their own.

Probably a couple of years from now some woman will be a nine-day sensation when she puts some water in a vase and puts a whole lot of pretty flowers in it and lets it go at that.

IN AN UNPRECEDENTED mass tribute, 100,000 men and women jammed the streets outside New York's Manhattan Center, where funeral services were held for William Lucy, slain organizer for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. Lucy was stabbed to death in a phone booth by three thugs. Shown at funeral, Mrs. Beatrice Lucy, widow of the slain man, is comforted by two of her sons, Leonard (left), 14, and Bernard, 16, and a friend, Mrs. Charlotte Zimmerman. At bottom is part of the huge crowd that gathered to pay final tribute. (International)

My NEW YORK

By MEL HEIMER

NEWS—NEW YORK—A little less than 175 years ago, George Washington put his cocked hat on his horse and rode downtown from the Jumel mansion in upper Manhattan to a point that historians later fixed at approximately Fifth Avenue and 14th street.

British troops had landed from Long Island and were beating the ears off the Colonists in one of the most celebrated of the Revolutionary war battles.

General Washington, often a hero, also was often discreet, and on arriving at the scene he did nothing more or less than direct the strategic retreat of the 1,000 badly beaten American soldiers. Later on, General Putnam came to the rescue with reinforcements but, they say in the Roy Rogers movies, is another story.

This historical fact is noted for the benefit of those young souls who may have figured that like the Pyramids the Empire State building had been standing at 10th and Fifth since the beginning of time.

The Empire State building was 18 years of age the other morning and in celebration of that coming of maturity anniversary your writer did some research on its history.

He unearthed some pleasant facts with which he presently will mystify and delight you but no found nothing which would give him an indication of the gaudiness and glory feeling that this gauntlet of buildings gives to the New Yorker.

You can be buried deep in the lower East Side gazing thoughtfully on knish and look up in the spring sunlight and see its steeple gleaming and wonderful.

You can be drawing away from Manhattan on the Queen Elizabeth and peering out from the stern see it evenging you misterly and yet benevolently. You are aware, wherever you are in the night in New York, of the majesty and grandeur of the softly-lighted needle with its red bell.

The Empire State building is with you always, it is one of the few tourist attractions in the city that the native New Yorker has taken to heart. As Mary Martin sang it as Dorothy in Kansas in August, "Go to the top of the Empire State building—but we do it and love it."

THE PYRAMIDS MAY HAVE BEEN an architectural wonder but it seems remarkable to say that the Empire State was a some what more efficient job. It was worked on by 3,000 men and was built in less than a year. At one time the steel framework went up at the rate of more than a story a day.

In the 15 years of its existence, nearly 100,000 persons have visited its observatories and a little more than two dozen have jumped to the street from assorted parts of its anatomy, bent on succeeding in shuffling off this mortal coil.

The building has been struck by lightning nine times in a single storm but since its steel spine makes it a real lightning rod, there have been no electrocutions.

It contains 81 passenger elevators which have ferried some 325,000,000 passengers up and down and the maintenance costs during its lifetime have been $74,378,000 or approximately twice the estimated value of the building and property.

After the prevailing fashion, a cornerstone full of puds was laid back in 1930 by the late former Gov. Alfred E. Smith. It appears to have been one of the dullest cornerstone on record.

It contains a copper box which holds a history of the building and of the construction company involved, postage and paper currency of 1930 from one cent to a $10 bill, photographs of the officers of the building company, the architects and contractors and a copy-paper edition of a daily newspaper. There are no pieces of bubble gum and no Vaughan Monroe phonograph records.

THE EMPIRE STATE HAS BEEN CLIMBED a few times, first by Pete McGuire, a guard in the building, then by two small boys whose names never were obtained, and later by a 40-year-old Vermont farmer who was 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighed 120 pounds.

There are 2,340 steps, each one seven inches high. Two hundred and twenty-five cleaners, who use 180 gallons of liquid soap a day, keep the joints looking spotless, and seven window washers work endlessly on the 6,500 windows in the building.

Ninety mechanics are on call, full time to take care of the elevators and there are a couple of lonely souls who do nothing but replace burned-out light bulbs. All in all, the building employs some 650 men and women.

Bomb threats, snubbers and other acts of violence have dotted its history but it is likely the most spectacular piece of news in which it was involved was the crash into it in 1948 of an Army medium bomber.

I remember emerging from Penn station that morning and seeing the plane still half-stuck in the side of the building with flames and smoke pouring out and, inside, although I didn't know it at the time, 11 persons in various stages of death.

SILENT VOICE TODAY

A sincere repentance deserves forgiveness. We readily forgive ourselves and our loved ones, but we are far harder on others. God will forgive us certainly if we are sincere. Neither do I condemn you; go thy way; from henceforth sin no more. John 8:11.

Now we see why Anna Louise Strong was run out of Russia. In this country she is propagandizing for immediate recognition of Communist China. "U.S. recognition of Communist China," she says,
"would benefit American capitalism." Since when has she been interested in benefiting American capitalism?

A new "radical" newspaper has made its appearance in New York City. Its editor, L. O. Thackeray, says in his opening remarks, "I wear no collar but my own. The Compass is an independent newspaper. That is to say, the editor is responsible to the community and his conscience for the content of the newspaper, including the editorials." Radical, indeed.

Another bill has been introduced in the Legislature to increase the rocking chair money of Florida's idle. Rep. George Tappier would like to pay them $30 a week for 30 weeks, or a little more than six months. He would soften the blow by levying some of the tax to pay for it upon the employee as well as the employer. Under the present law the employer pays it all. But in any event, even under Rep. Tapper's bill, the man who gets the jobless benefits again and again and again would not pay any of it.
Such taxes are paid by those who work.

Governor Warren, who has found it necessary to revise his previous position on a number of matters since his election, now modifies his stand on the sales tax.
He would not oppose, he now says,
a sales tax which is not levied on the "necessities of life." The difficulty, of course, comes in deciding what is a necessity and what isn't.
To some, cascara may be one of the most demanding necessities;
to others it is a luxury of the most superfluous and extravagant sort. People suffering from stomach ulcers may find beef the only meat they can eat; but those with high blood pressure find it taboo. An automobile is a luxury to some men, but to those who live in the country and work in town, or spend a good deal of their time gathering news, it is a necessity. So, before we favor Governor Warren's modified sales tax,
we would like to know his definition of "necessities."

Federal objections to furnishing lists of old age benefit recipients to a legislative investigating committee raises the question if this secrecy surrounding the disbursement of millions of dollars in welfare funds is not one of the most dangerous characteristics of Social Security. Many of its evils and much of its waste would be immediately corrected if we have no doubt if the names of all recipients were widely published. As it is, one wonders who received the 42
million dollars of Florida welfare funds paid out last year to so-called unemployed, dependent children, destitute aged, and blind.
Were they all really dependent?
Were they unemployed through no fault of their own? Were they all blind, or did some of them merely need glasses? Do they pay out our hard earned money to Republicans?
Communists? Or do you have to be a Democrat? Could an anti-Pepper-man get on the list? No discrimination in the Welfare Commission?
Or do we have to take it were as it was 42 million dollars in

Guarding Young Minds

An unusual twist has been given by the city of Cleveland to the old problem of dealing with literature regarded as improper. The City Council has adopted an ordinance against selling, giving or displaying obscene literature or literature with undue emphasis on crime to anyone under 18 years old.

This legislation is aimed directly at the immediate cause of most complaints about undesirable literature, the fact that such literature has a way of getting into the hands of children. There is precedent for the idea of defining literature as proper or improper according to the age of the person reading it. Age limits are placed on the sale of tobacco and liquor, on the theory that they will damage young bodies more than mature ones. It perhaps is not as reasonable to say that some kinds of reading matter, about which adults can be allowed to use their own judgment, would promote in younger minds ideas about crime, law enforcement and sex matters.

The real question is whether age differentiation will make it any easier to decide which literature is proper and which is not. That is the stumbling block which upsets most efforts to control the propriety of literature by law. About the only trustworthy standard is ordinary good taste, if that can be satisfactorily defined. If that standard is used, the application of an age limit to the sale of literature might possibly prove effective. It will be interesting to see how the Cleveland law works.

Colleges And Football

"College football has become, for the most part, a gi-gantic entertainment business which is corrupting higher education." So says Dean Wilbur J. Bender of Harvard. He goes on to say that the intercollegiate game has become professionalized and commercialized to the point where it becomes a national scandal. Harvard believes in college football if it is not blown up out of all proportion, and expects to find enough universities sharing its convictions to make out an interesting schedule.

Some educational institutions become famous for their football teams but remain little known for the quality of their schooling. As much interest in their teams is taken by outsiders as by students and graduates.

A few years ago educators hoped that the rise of professional football would cure this. The professionals put up so much better a game, and have attracted such huge crowds, that there seemed to be a good chance that the outsiders would lose interest in the college game. This has happened to intercollegiate baseball, which has far fewer followers now than it did a generation ago. With football, however, the excitement over the college game seems as great as ever. Perhaps the university authorities may have to screw up their courage and take the game in hand.

Stop Saying "I Can't"

Most personal limitations are self-imposed—that's one of the most important discoveries of modern psychology.
Nearly always, when we say we "just can't do" a certain thing, our supposed incompetence is a cover-up for an emotional inhibition. At some previous time in our lives, we associated that particular activity with feelings of fear or unpleasantness, and rather than expose ourselves to further emotional upset, we subconsciously decided to steer clear of it in the future.

This subconscious inhibition persists only as long as we go on believing in our own face-saving excuses. The moment we recognize the underlying emotional problem and make an honest effort to perform the thing we "just can't do" our self-imposed limitations vanish. We then discover to our surprise that the thing we couldn't do is just as much within our powers as the things in which we excel.

Was Blockade of Berlin

Southern Mine Owners

Just a Stupendous Hoax?

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Some diplomatic quarters in Washington are beginning to suspect that the United States, France and Britain have fallen victim to one of the biggest hoaxes perpetrated since the days of Helen of Troy.

They are not looking around for any wooden horses, but they think this hoax lies in Russia's blockade of Berlin and the subsequent efforts by the democracies to fly food and goods into the blockaded city with large numbers of aircraft.

While attention has been focused on the "cold war"—with Berlin as its core—Chinese Reds, reinforced with equipment and manpower from Russia, have swept over China and are entrenched on the Pacific coast.

This means Russia now has bases opposite
Japan and Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces.
If shelling of British gunboats by the Reds is any indication of what lies ahead, there may be trouble brewing for western democracies in the not-too-distant future.

Disturbed as they are by the prospects—and the past—the Washington authorities are undecided on what can be done now that the Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-shek is at an end.

However, their minds in the dark suspicion that the Berlin blockade has served its purpose

Lewis Has the Ball Again—Meanwhile in another field of diplomatic relations, UMW chief John L. Lewis once more has the soft coal operators up in the air. They are divided and uncertain what to do next in the annual battle over a new coal contract.

Southern coal producers suspect that Lewis' courteous invitation to negotiate a new agreement in a conference at Bluefield, W. Va., beginning June 6, is some kind of a trap that the wily union chief will spring at the proper time.

The southerners fear Lewis will get them down there in the mountains, leave them to cool their heels and return to Washington to do his real negotiating with northern and western mine operators. Yet they dare not ignore Lewis' invitation. The UMW president would blast the daylight out of the southern operators for refusing to bargain if they spurned his Bluefield proposal.

The situation is made more complicated by the fact that Lewis had no real communication at all with the northern and western producers. They're worried that he might leave them out on a limb while he bargains separately with the south.

No matter what the operators' desire in the annual coal wage negotiations, it is Lewis who calls the play.

Irony—President Truman may some day thank the Congress he called "one of the worst" in the nation's history for boosting his income.

This strange twist stems from a bill passed by the Republican 80th Congress and signed by Mr. Truman which guarantees the chief executive a lifetime income of $85,000 per month
under present military pay scales.

The measure establishes a system of non-disability retirement for members of the civilian military components who complete 20 years of service.

Mr. Truman is eligible for the benefits because he has completed a total of 20 years' service as a colonel in the United States Cavalry Reserve Corps.

Under present law, the president cannot draw the Army retirement pay until he leaves the White House, but there is nothing to stop him from getting it now.

He can start drawing it as soon as July 18—when he leaves the White House.

Reginald Mitchell Is Sent To Naples

Reginald P. Mitchell, a former resident of Sanford and an officer of the United States Foreign Service, has been transferred to Naples as Consul from Paris where he was second secretary, charged with the direction of United Information Service activities for press, radio and motion pictures in France.

He went to Paris from the State Department where he had been an assistant to the head of press relations for three years. During this time he had also served on various temporary press details overseas, notably as press officer of the American Mission to observe elections in Greece in 1946 and as press officer with the political adviser to the commanding general U.S. Army forces in Korea in January-April 1948.

Earlier he had served in the State Department press relations from April, 1938 to December, 1941. Mr. Mitchell entered the foreign service in 1931 and since that time has been assigned to the following foreign posts: Bordeaux, Hankow, Warsaw, Dublin, Port-au-Prince, Port Said, Algiers and Paris.

A native of Sanford, he graduated from Duvall High School in Jacksonville, received his A. B. from Vanderbilt University in 1925, attended Emory University School of Law in 1927-28 and in 1931-32 attended the University of Bordeaux, before joining the foreign service he had 12 years experience with newspapers, press associations and public relations activities. His address in this country is Jacksonville.

Interest centers in the campaign to elect sheriff and county judge, said Mr. MacNeill. Winning candidates will be guests at the Jaycee meeting next week, and will have the privilege of spending a day with county officials at the Court House.

Committee members expressed interest in the proposal, but said it was finally drawn.

H. E. Westbury of Palatka only wanted to race in counties where legalized racing and betting are permitted.

He proposed brief off-season racing meets. Quarter horses are cow ponies.

Senator Smith of Green Cove Springs said such races would not be held in Duval County.

"We are glad to leave out Miami because it's a poor man's bill," Smith explained.

Q. L. Roberts of Green Cove Springs, former University of Florida baseball star, said passage of the bill would permit quarter horses to race in counties and agricultural areas.

Senator Sheldon's proposed constitutional amendment to abolish all county school trustees' positions won unanimous approval of the Senate Committee on Education today.

It would turn all trustees' duties over to county boards of public instruction.

Rep. Simpson of Jefferson introduced a bill which would prohibit the sale of merchandise below cost.

He also introduced a measure which would turn over to the State Comptroller money deposited in bank or trust company accounts which have been inactive for 20 years or more. Depositors could reclaim their money within two years after it had been turned over to the comptroller. Governor Warren recommended such a bill.

A constitutional amendment proposal by the Duval County House delegation would give counties charters just like cities. It would mean counties could pass ordinances affecting their own governments instead of having to get bills through the legislature when they wanted to make changes in local regulations.

Talk about the uppermost problem of financing the State remained speculative and unofficial. A special committee quietly did its spadework in an effort to develop a revenue program.

The biggest hint on its plan was that it will bring out a bill that combined several pending revenue measures.

Take that clue by Chairman Richard Simpson of the House Finance Committee, add it to other forecasts and you get a little better picture of the new struggle to find revenue.

For instance:

Senator John Mathews of Jacksonville says the tax plan to be offered for helping the State and its hard-pressed cities won't be a sales tax.

Mathews elaborates that the committee in seeking a "permanent tax plan which will solve our tax problems during the lives of most of us."

The House received yesterday a resolution by Rep. Merchant of Madison to investigate the State Industrial Commission. Merchant said the commission was a "revenue of bureaucrats."

He is a member of the House of Representatives from the 10th District of Texas.

Acheson's Report

(Continued From Page One) put forward such suggestions but President Syngman Rhee of the American-sponsored government of Korea has been interested in a defense treaty with the United States and Ambassador Wellington Koo of China said after a meeting with Acheson last week that he had suggested such a proposal.

Acheson said the outcome of Sunday's vote in the Soviet zone of Germany indicates the people overwhelmingly rejected the Russian sponsored unity program.

Acheson made the comment at his news conference. He said Soviet reports indicate that 40 per cent of the voters turned down the Soviet proposal in the terms submitted.

The Germans were given the choice of voting for a hand-picked slate of candidates for election to a "People's Congress for Easter Germany," or of voting against it. Acheson said we have always taken the position that elections should be conducted by submitting a single list and allowing only votes for it do not even remotely approach free elections. He added that it takes extraordinary courage on the part of the population to indicate displeasure under these conditions.

After noting that Soviet reports showing 40 per cent of the votes were negative, he said this indicates to us that the population in the Eastern zone is overwhelmed by the program which was submitted to it.

"While it is true," Acheson said, "that there are serious dangers to world peace existing in the situation in Asia, it is also true as Prime Minister Nehru of India stated to the press the other day, that a Pacific defense pact could not take shape until present internal conflicts in Asia were resolved.

He was quoted as going on to say that this time was not one for a pact corresponding to the North Atlantic Treaty, owing to recent conflicts. Nehru's views appear to be an objective appraisal of the actual, practical possibilities as the present time.

Acheson began his statement by saying that on several occasions he has emphasized that the United States is not "currently ordering" joining any regional defense arrangements other than the North Atlantic Treaty. This obviously includes also speculation on a Mediterranean or Middle Eastern Alliance for which Turkey and Greece have worked in recent months.

In the case of the Pacific, Acheson continued, the people who suggest a pact "may not have given study" to the conditions which made possible a treaty for the present time.

Acheson will appoint an assistant chief of mission with the rank of minister to work under McCoy.

TALLAHASSEE, May 19.—(P)—Off-stage campaigning for votes on the Administration citrus bill reached a high pitch today as re-sumption of House debate was delayed by action on minor measures.

HELMSTEDT, Germany, May 19.—(P)—West German trucks loaded with food for Berlin moved freely through Bustedt today after the Russians closed the Helmstedt entry point to loaded trucks.

The Russians appeared to be just as confused about their new truck regulations as everybody else. Last night they clamped on the restrictions. Today they said trucks already held up would be permitted to proceed but that others in the future would have to have a new type of permit.

So far, apparently, they don't. Thirty-five trucks were rumbling across the Bustedt barrier dividing the British and Russian zone between 6:00 A. M. and 1:00 P. M. German time today, German police and customs officials said. Sixty more trucks were lined up on

Reds Continue Booming Attack Upon Shanghai

Encircling Communists Push Way On Wangpoo River

SHANGHAI, May 19.—(P)—Under drizzling skies with the guns booming in the distance, Shanghai entered another night of siege with ominous indications everywhere.

Encircling Communists were pushing their attack on the Pootung sector along the lower reaches of the Whangpoo River. But it was a movement of government troops into the city from the quiet southwest defense area and a one-hour earlier curfew (9:00 P. M.) that had everybody uneasy.

At the time the Nationalists seemed to be holding their own against the compressing Red arc. But the vacating of defense areas, notably Hung Jan road, was baffling.

It could mean the Nationalists, holding the advantage of interior lines, merely were shifting their strength to more vulnerable spots. But the earlier curfew and many other reports, including one that the road may be closed to traffic, put an aspect to the picture that did not fit with reported Nationalist victories lately.

Lungkow airfield, sure to be captured by the Communists, could hear the noise of battle at one of the first targets of this nation's strength.

He was introduced by J. Edwin Shinholtz, who pointed out that Mr. Bryan had been engaged in public relations work since 1912, and prior to coming to Florida 12 years ago was a public relations agent for Paramount Studios. During the war he served as a public relations agent for National Airlines.

"If the hospital closed and you had tragedy due to lack of hospital facilities it would be on your conscience," Mr. Bryan told the Elvin.

He emphasized this possibility by relating the story of his semi-invalid grandson, age 6, who has required much care and attention and a number of operations, due to the fact that his daughter had been too far away from proper hospital facilities when the baby was born. Today the boy is beginning to walk, he said, but time only can help him, according to medical authorities.

The airplane of Chinese bigwigs were said to be warned up.

It was utterly impossible to confirm this rumor. But if that is true, the jig may be up.

The latest garrison communiqué described Nationalist successes in beating off Red attacks on the Pootung back door front six to eight miles down the river from midtown.

The Reds were reported trying to collect themselves around Luhuan and Yangtung for another job at the Woosung fortress.

Mass Survey For Tuberculosis To Be Made In County By Health Board

A mass survey for tuberculosis will again be made in Seminole County, June 1 through June 8, when mobile x-ray units will be brought here by the State Board of Health. Dr. Frank Quillman, director of the Seminole County Health Unit, pointed out in the current issue of The Seminole Chief, monthly bulletin of the Unit.

"This is the same type of service given to Seminole County in 1947," he stated. The units are the same, which means that no unscrewing is necessary; there is very little waiting, and it is a service given by the Florida State Board of Health and the local Health Unit free of charge.

"One unit will be located at First Street and Magnolia Avenue during the entire period," he stated. Another will be in Jerry's Arende on Sanford Avenue. Other units will be placed in strategic points for shorter periods of time throughout the county, for example, one day in Geneva, one day in Goldsboro, and another in Goldsboro.

Mr. Turner said that telephone users refer to the new directory for the desired numbers. Looking up the number helps avoid the possibility of getting a wrong number, and frequently saves time for the calling party as well as the party who might be called in error.

MANSLAUGHTER

GAINESVILLE, May 19.—(P)—A coroner's jury this morning returned a charge of manslaughter against Woodrow Wilson Odom, policeman, of the May 18 automobile accident death of William Price, negro, on Payne Street.

The coroner's jury of six men and three women found the policeman guilty of manslaughter.
