Oklahoma bombing one year later

By KELLY KURT Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — They last met in the twisted steel and shattered concrete of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. One year later, the hundreds of rescue workers are back, this time to honor those they could not save.

Rescuers from around the nation were reunited Thursday on the eve of the one-year anniversary of the explosion that killed 168 people and injured more than 500.

As mourners prepared to pause today for 168 seconds of silence at the empty site of the bombing, many rescuers were thinking about

Lake Mary electronics maker wants to acquire Jensen

By The Associated Press

LAKE MARY — Recoton Corp., a major manufacturer of consumer electronics accessories, will pursue its quest to acquire International Jensen Corp. despite a hefty counteroffer from a competitor.

Emerson Radio Corp. has offered Jensen $100 million in cash, or $9.90 a share, to take over the stereo speaker company based in Lincolnshire, Ill. Emerson's offer tops Recoton's combination cash-and-stock bid by as much as $9 million, Emerson officials said Wednesday.

Recoton, headquartered in Lake Mary, has already paid Jensen almost $10 million for the rights to market Jensen's Acoustic Research car-stereo speakers worldwide.

"No matter what happens, we can't lose because we come out of this with the Acoustic Research products," said Recoton spokesman Peter Ildau.

"In the same vein, however, we want to close this deal. We have invested the time and effort. And we believe Jensen gets good value in what

Senate rejects plan to restore river

TALLAHASSEE — Lawmakers have rejected efforts to spend $2 million to begin work to restore the flow of the Oklawaha River south of Palatka.

The House voted 59-57 Thursday against an amendment that would have taken $2 million in unspent money from a trust fund dedicated to local recycling programs and spent it on river restoration.

The Senate defeated the same measure on a voice vote despite pleas from Sens. Donald Sullivan, R-St. Petersburg, and Jack Latvala, R-Palm Harbor, to fix an environmental blunder.

"The issue is whether we're going to correct a mistake," Latvala said.

A dark, crooked river in its natural state, the Oklawaha changed three decades ago when the federal government dammed it, creating the Rodman dam and reservoir.

But in 1971, the idea of building a waterway across Florida was abandoned. The Cross Florida Barge Canal was officially deauthorized in 1991, and state officials have been fighting over the dam, reservoir and river since then.

Making it easier to curb regulations

TALLAHASSEE — The House voted 118-0 for a bill that would curb the power of state agencies and make it easier for citizens to challenge government regulations.

The bill went to the Senate since the House made minor changes to the legislation, which the upper chamber passed earlier.

"This is a major step today," said Rep. Kenneth Prutt, a Port St. Lucie Republican who has worked on rule reform for the last couple of years.

Gov. Lawton Chiles vetoed a similar bill last year, saying it didn't go far enough, but his office has worked with lawmakers this year and he is expected to sign the 1998 measure.

The bill (CS-SB 2290) approved Thursday would authorize agencies to grant variances or waivers to rules if a person can achieve the purpose by other means and if applying the rule would create a hardship or be unfair.

The measure also increases legislative oversight of agency rule-making, opens up access to agency decision-making, requires agencies to calculate the estimated cost of regulations and awards attorney fees to citizens who successfully challenge agency actions as unjustified.

Bill passes to speed executions

TALLAHASSEE — A bill to help speed up executions passed the House 114-3, while a proposal to cut money allocated to attorneys for death row inmates was defeated.

About 360 condemned killers are on Florida's death row. Of the 36 executions since the state's capital punishment law won federal approval in 1976, an average of a decade has passed between sentence and punishment.

Several inmates have spent more than 20 years on death row.

Meanwhile, death-row inmates would face strict time limits for filing federal appeals under new restrictions Congress is imposing. The provisions, included in an anti-terrorism bill, were sent Thursday to President Clinton.

The bill (CS-HB 385) passed Thursday by the state House declares that legislative intent is for the state Supreme Court to issue rulings on inmates' first appeals within two years.

But a legislative analysis concedes there is some question about the power of the Legislature to interfere to that extent in the procedures of the court, a separate branch of government.

A companion Senate bill (SB 452) is awaiting action on the floor.

HCC president resigns

TAMPA — Hillsborough Community College President Andreas Paloumpis is resigning after 13 years on the job, some of it marked with controversy, including an attempt to fire him.

Paloumpis, 70, steps down when his contract expires June 30, 1997, or sooner if the board of trustees finds a successor.

He is the fifth, and longest serving president, of the 28-year-old junior college.

Paloumpis told trustees of his decision Wednesday.

The last few years have been controversial for the HCC leader. He was accused of racial and sexual discrimination and nearly fired following a critical management study in 1994.

The report said he ruled by intimidation, resulting in a lack of communication, inherent distrust among employees and a feeling among staff that hard work is not rewarded.

In April 1994, trustees voted 3-2 to fire him but backed off when their lawyer said they didn't have sufficient grounds.

"I don't think this is a time we can sit back, relax and talk about how successful we have been," Paloumpis said. "I think the time for vindictiveness... and ego trips is behind us."

College trustees plan to launch a national search for a replacement.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

A mom frustrated by attempt to get help for oversexed 6-year-old

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — Like most 6-year-old boys, Ronnie enjoys fishing, Nintendo and listening to his mom read bedtime stories.

But he also goes into a rage at slight provocation, has a short attention span and has been caught more than once sexually molesting young boys at school.

His 28-year-old mother says he was sexually abused by a baby sitter's boyfriend at age 2 when she was still living in New England. Two years later, he began imitating that abuse at his preschool.

Now she's desperately trying to intervene, and even discussed asking police to charge the boy with a sex crime so he can get expensive — and rare — residential treatment for young sex offenders.

"I'm trying to do the right thing and get him help so he has a chance later on," she said in an interview this week. "I see this as very serious, but the agency that distributes the money doesn't see it as serious as I do."

She's had plenty of warning signs.

"He was caught on his knees giving another child oral sex with a third child watching," she said, noting an incident when he was 5. "I was mostly stunned. I wasn't sure what to do. You never picture a kid that young doing something like that."

Several months ago at a different school, teachers found him in a giant playground tube, performing oral sex on another child and attempting anal sex.

Oakland Park police Detective Richard LaCerra, who investigated the complaint, decided something dramatic needed to happen soon. He filed papers recommending the boy's arrest, even though he knew prosecutors probably wouldn't agree.

"We can't let this kid slip through the cracks," LaCerra said Thursday.

Ronnie, who takes anti-psychotic medication as well as pills for depression and hyperactivity, has also been caught trying to mount his 19-month-old sister, his mother said. He once tried to attack his mother and sister with scissors.

Ronnie's mother says she feels trapped in her two-bedroom condo in the Fort Lauderdale

House passes bill to lower size of classes

By JACKIE HALLWAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The House passed a bill aimed at reducing the number of children in elementary school classrooms, one of the top education priorities of the Democratic leaders.

Thursday's 87-28 vote sent the bill (HB 529) to the Senate, where a similar bill (SB 1802) is pending in the Ways and Means Committee.

The House included in its budget $204 million to pay for teachers and teachers aides in hopes of lowering the teacher-pupil ratio — but no money to expand schools. The Senate budget doesn't include that money.

The bill sets a goal of reducing pupils in kindergarten and grades one through three to 20 pupils. Schools could meet the goal if they have more than 20 students by putting a full-time teacher's aide in the classroom. However, the class size could not exceed 28.

"You just imagine trying to teach 29 children in a class by yourself and trying to maintain that class," said Rep. Cynthia Chestnut, chair of the House Education Committee.

Chestnut, D-Gainesville, said long-term research has shown that children who are taught in less crowded classes in elementary grades do better later on.

Last year, the state dedicated $40 million toward reaching the goal in first grade. Some districts, however, spent the money in other ways. This year's appropriation is more tightly drawn, said Rep. John

Third graders get lesson in the law

By The Associated Press

LARGO — Third graders got a firsthand lesson on the legal system but some parents weren't too pleased they had to be subpoenaed for it.

Fifteen youngsters from Lynch Elementary School were forced to miss a day of class Wednesday to testify about a confrontation they witnessed between a parent and a teacher.

With parents at their sides, they were ushered into a conference room at the school district office. They sat at a long wooden conference table as lawyers, secretaries and a court reporter waited to hear what they had to say.

"Why in the world should all these kids be here today?" asked Roger Null, who missed work to get his son Ryan to the hearing. "These kids belong in school. They missed out on a day of learning today."

Nicole Macfarland's son Josh finished his brief testimony near what ordinarily would be dismissal time. She asked him how it went. Josh shrugged and said: "Got it over with."

The children were there because a mother, who was an employee at another school, was accused of pushing her son's teacher while the third-graders watched. Her job is on the line.

Her lawyer subpoenaed 24 children to determine if what they saw agrees with what the school district says happened.

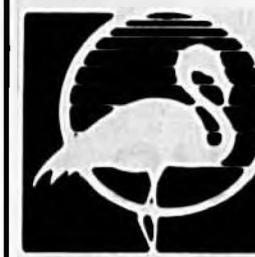

On Nov. 10 Susan E. Brown went to Lynch Elementary to talk to her son's teacher about a discipline matter. Her son had been accused of cursing at a classmate.

Brown, a middle school plant operator, allegedly cursed at office staff, then stormed down to her son's class to confront the teacher.

Help plan Labor Day festival

By MARVA HAWKINS
Herald Columnist

SANFORD — Come be a part of the cultural experience by working together to produce a Goombay and Junkanoo Festival in Sanford, to be held Labor Day weekend, Aug. 1-Sept. 2 in downtown Sanford.

Bahamas American Junkanoo and Goombay Festival Association of Central Florida, Inc. is a non-profit community organization open to all.

The Sanford community, schools, churches, businesses, clubs, teams, sports, and religious groups are invited to attend a summit, tonight at 7 p.m. at the Marina Hotel to help plan this event. This festival will be implemented as a heritage and cultural event in this Central Florida area during the Labor Day weekend.

The BAJG Association is committed to maintain a positive image of the cultural arts; and to put on a cost-effective, quality, fun-filled festival, that will also foster and support art education through various program activities and events. The BAJG Association provides a new art form to the community to promote various cultural organizations. This festival will create financial earnings to the community, and businesses, and share our cultural traditions.

The Board of Directors in their mission and role as ambassadors are in support of the arts year-round. The association intends to award arts education scholarships annually to school students pursuing a degree in arts. More than 40 artists will teach art classes and workshops in the Central Florida School system as part of their Visiting Artists Program. Students will experience hands-on art activities during the festival.

Local non-profit groups will raise funds through participation in this annual festival. Organizations benefiting from the 3-day festival will represent 67 different ethnic and cultural groups, schools and churches.

Volunteers are needed. Join the team to introduce other cultural aspects that reflect the multi-culturalism of this area. This festival, says Chairman Aranha "Chris" Smith and President Bill Sands, will be a festival celebrating an individual and community sense of freedom, thanksgiving and friendship. What makes for a special celebration is the collaborative spirit of neighbors, relatives, family, and friends to develop business and cultural ties between the Bahamas and American countries. Sanford can create a national and international plan for the development of tourism through the festival. For information, contact the association at (407) 260-1751.

Clinton, Yeltsin: Where friendship, politics collide

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Russian President Boris Yeltsin was the first foreign leader President Clinton traveled to see after taking office in 1993, and their relationship has grown into a close and extraordinary one.

But seldom has a visit between the two been so fraught with political overtones as their 10th get-together this weekend.

Yeltsin clearly hopes the meetings with Clinton and six other Western leaders at a Moscow summit on nuclear safety will burnish his image for Russia's June 18th presidential elections.

And Clinton, who has staked much U.S. prestige on Yeltsin, is now facing questions at home on the wisdom of putting so many diplomatic eggs in one basket.

Yeltsin is not the same popular figure of five years ago who, as the world watched with admiration, climbed atop a tank outside the Russian parliament building and brazenly defied a coup attempt.

Plagued by health problems and worn down by the war in Chechnya, rampant crime and government corruption, Yeltsin is fighting an uphill battle for re-election. He trails Communist candidate Gennady Zyuganov in the polls.

If Yeltsin loses the election and Russia reverts to communist rule, it could only be seen as a setback for the Clinton administration and to East-West relations in general.

The White House says it sees nothing wrong with Clinton's friendship with Yeltsin. "It is not unusual, if you will, to have this kind of an intense relationship because it is in the interest of both," said Coit Blacker, a White House national security adviser on Russia.

But Fred Greenstein, a Princeton University professor who specializes in presidential leadership and foreign policy, said a Yeltsin loss would open Clinton to campaign attacks on "the who lost Russia issue" from his Republican rival, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole.

"Dole will be going for whatever he can," Greenstein said.

The two loquacious and zealous leaders hit it off at their first meeting in Vancouver, Canada, in March 1993, and still seem to genuinely enjoy each other's company.

At that meeting, Clinton went out on a limb for Yeltsin, who was in a tense showdown with a hard-line parliament. He rallied Western financial support for Yeltsin's government.

More recently, the administration eased the way for a $10.2 billion International Monetary Fund loan to Russia earlier this year. And Clinton informally promised to back Yeltsin's re-election when the two men met in Egypt last month.

U.S. officials say the administration is not trying to influence the Russian election. Clinton also plans to meet with some of Yeltsin's rivals, including Zyuganov. But there remains little doubt about whom Clinton favors.

Speaking aboard Air Force One on Thursday, Clinton said Yeltsin has been "very forthcoming" about Russia's nuclear problems and "very forward leaning" in seeking solutions.

The Moscow summit "comes at a very critical time politically" for Yeltsin. White House press secretary Mike McCurry acknowledged.

Despite his personal rapport with Clinton, the Russian leader's performance at international meetings has sometimes been erratic and unpredictable. On several occasions, he has made Clinton appear ill at ease.

In a 10-minute outburst alongside Clinton at a news conference last June in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Yeltsin angrily denounced those who criticized his policies in Chechnya and proclaimed, "I am in full control of the situation."

That prompted Dole to assert, "I thought I was watching 'Saturday Night Live,' but it turned out to be Boris Yeltsin."

Some analysts suggest Clinton's steadfast support for Yeltsin makes it harder to build relations with other democratic reformers in Russia. For instance, Grigory Yavlinsky, another reform champion who is on the June 18 ballot, has gotten little attention from the administration.

John Steinbruner, director of foreign policy studies at the Brookings Institution, a Washington think tank, said Clinton could be faulted for "very heavily identifying with Yeltsin, the person."

"The more appropriate commitment is to the democratic process," he said, while conceding "this is not an easy line to draw" since Yeltsin remains the central figure in Russia.

AIDS rate is down nationwide

By KAREN HILL
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — The AIDS rate declined nationwide in 1995, especially among children, but more blacks and women were diagnosed with the disease, federal researchers said.

Overall, the number of people diagnosed with the disease last year fell 7 percent compared with 1994, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Thursday.

There were 74,180 AIDS cases, or 27.8 per 100,000 residents, in 1995, compared with 79,897 cases and a rate of 30.2 in 1994. In 1993, the year federal researchers expanded their definition of AIDS, there were 105,828 cases.

Washington, D.C., had the grim distinction of having the highest AIDS rate among U.S. states and territories, while Jersey City, N.J., topped the list for cities.

The figures showed that the number of AIDS cases among blacks is rapidly approaching that among whites, especially troubling since blacks are a much smaller percentage of the U.S. population than whites.

The AIDS rate for blacks was 92.6 cases per 100,000 people. Blacks were six times more likely to have AIDS than whites, whose rate was 15.4, and twice as likely to have AIDS as Hispanics, whose rate was 46.2. Asians and Pacific Islanders reported the lowest rate, 6.2.

"Not only is the rate higher among blacks, the actual number among blacks is about to surpass whites," said Dr. John Ward, director of the CDC's AIDS-HIV surveillance branch.

Black adults and teens accounted for 29,350 AIDS cases diagnosed in 1995, compared with 29,732 cases among whites and 11,169 cases among Hispanics. The remainder were American Indians and Asian-Pacific Islanders.

Researchers had predicted that the AIDS rate would decline nationwide, anticipating that prevention methods and death would slow the rates among gay white men but that the disease would spread among women and minorities.

Women accounted for 19 percent of all AIDS cases among adults and adolescents, their highest proportion yet.

But in a surprise, AIDS cases among children fell to 800 in 1995, from 1,034 in 1994, even though more women developed the disease. Nearly all children with AIDS get HIV, the virus that causes the disease, in their mothers' wombs.

"It suggests that there are fewer children being born infected with HIV, perhaps as a result of increasing use of AZT by pregnant women to reduce risk of transmission," Ward said. AZT is one of several drugs that slow reproduction of HIV.

After Washington, D.C., Puerto Rico was a distant second among U.S. states and territories, followed by New York, Florida and New Jersey.

The nation's capital had 185.7 AIDS cases per 100,000 residents, down from 246.9 in 1994, when it also led the nation. North Dakota had the lowest AIDS rate, at 0.8.

Among cities, Jersey City, N.J., was followed by San Francisco at 129.7 AIDS cases per 100,000 residents, New York City at 122.5, Miami at 117.2 and Newark, N.J., at 86.8. Newark's entry into the top five bumped Fort Lauderdale, Fla., out.

The city with the lowest rate was Dayton, Ohio, with 5.0.

The same states and territories were in the top five for 1994 and 1995, but only Puerto Rico reported an increased AIDS rate from one year to the next. Its 1995 rate of 70.3 compared with 62.5 in 1994, bumping it from No. 5 in 1994 to No. 2 in 1995.

New York's 1995 rate of 68.4 was down from 81.1 in 1994. Florida's 58.9 rate was down from 61.1 in 1994, and New Jersey's 55.5 rate was down from 61.7 in 1994.

Better students, better adults

Somebody up there is listening, Tallahassee, that is. Our lawmakers appear to finally be listening to parents, teachers, employers, and members of the general public regarding the lack of education by some (or is it many) of our high school graduates.

It may take better grades to get that high school diploma in the future.

We suspect there may be a few who object to this. Their children will not be able to get the diploma, which may result in difficulty in finding a job.

There was extensive educational discussion in the legislature yesterday, dealing with increasing graduation standards, allowing certain types of prayer in schools, and other school-related matters.

Final approval is still to come, but as expected, at least on increasing the graduation standards.

The amendment submitted by Rep. Joseph Mackey Jr. passed in the Florida House 87-29, what we believe is an excellent percentage favoring the measure.

The graduation standards bill (HB 1401) would increase the grade point average needed to graduate and to participate in extracurricular activities from 1.5 to 2.0.

The bill also would require students to take algebra or a comparable class to earn their diplomas and increase the grade needed to pass a class from 65 percent to 70 percent.

The legislation went to the Senate, which has approved a similar bill with the higher standards.

What will it mean? It will mean students will have to work harder in their various classes as well as on their homework assignments. It will mean parents will have to take a more active role in providing time for home work, and urging their youngsters to complete assignments on time.

It will mean the children receiving those diplomas and tossing their caps in the air at graduation will be better prepared to join the adult world, whether they plan to continue their education or attack the work-a-day world.

Certainly, our families, neighborhoods, cities and the entire population will benefit from youngsters who have received a better education.

We expect the measure will pass through both houses and be signed by Governor Lawton Chiles.

If nothing else, we can thank our legislators for getting this bill approved. Too many children apparently haven't been placing enough importance on the value of education. This is unfortunate. It is also unfortunate that our lawmakers must take measures into their own hands.

But however it came about, we look forward to seeing the results.

Life and death issues

Recently, the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in a 8-3 decision, struck down a state law banning doctor-assisted suicide. The court, in effect, created a new "right" to assisted suicide and based its decision on the abortion "right" established in Roe v. Wade. This decision will ultimately be as important as Roe.

Experts believe that the right to assisted suicide is inevitably headed to the Supreme Court, along with special rights for homosexuals, gay marriage and a host of similar issues. And, guess what? The odds are overwhelming that those opposed to these ideas will lose these cases 5 to 4. We will lose because of justices like Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Steven Breyer and David Souter, who were appointed virtually without opposition from conservatives by two separate administrations. Not once did social conservatives put up the kind of fight that liberals always wage. Thus, the law will change, not because these ideas are right, but because the decision will be handed to us by a liberal judiciary.

Nowhere in our country is the Ninth Circuit decision more relevant than here in Florida. Within the last month, a suit funded by the ACLU and the Hemlock Society was filed in Palm Beach County challenging a 128-year-old Florida law making it a felony to help another commit suicide. The suit is based on Florida's privacy amendment.

There is a core question here that pro-family and economic conservatives have to answer. What will we gain if we lower taxes and reduce the size of government but still live in a country where one out of three babies is aborted, the elderly are being killed in the name of mercy, and homosexual unions are accepted as normal and equivalent to the marriage of a man and a woman?

If we tolerate this without objection, we will have tolerated the loss of what has made America a unique experiment in human history.

As individuals, we need to get serious about these issues immediately. We need to understand them and to encourage our leaders to do so, as well. We need to be able to articulate what we believe and why we believe it, rather than succumbing to intellectual laziness in the name of toleration. These are divisive issues now, but eventually our society will either reject them as wrong or accept them as the norm. Through the process of vigorous and open public debate by informed individuals, we have the ability to overcome our mistakes. But these are life or death issues for our nation.

Committed to 'hastening death'

Yale Kamisar, a professor of constitutional law at the University of Michigan, is best known as an authority on the Fourth Amendment. Whenever the Supreme Court comes down with a police search-and-seizure decision that needs clarification -- which is usually the case -- reporters often call Kamisar.

He is also an expert on another, more deadly area of privacy -- the increasing interest of the populace in assisted suicide and euthanasia. Kamisar has been at odds with too easy death since his 1958 article -- "Some Non-Religious Views Against Proposed 'Mercy Killing' Legislation" -- in the Minnesota Law Review.

Focusing on the seductive attractions of death as a form of medical treatment, Kamisar wrote, "It is not too much to expect that something approaching the protection thrown around one who appears to have perpetrated a serious crime be extended to one who appears to have an incurable disease."

Kamisar is still warning that legalizing assisted suicide inexorably leads to euthanasia (mercy killing to bring "death with dignity").

His most recent analysis is "Against Assisted Suicide -- Even in a Very Limited Form" in the University of Detroit Mercy Law Review. It was written before the ominous landmark decisions by the Ninth and Second Circuit Courts of Appeals declaring that terminally ill, mentally competent people have a right to get a doctor to help them kill themselves.

Kamisar, however, knew what was coming and those astonishingly reckless court decisions confirm, in many ways, his worst fears that suicidal people will indeed have fewer due process protections than a defendant charged with serious crimes.

The Ninth Circuit refused to mandate specific safeguards to prevent abuses. The states can set some up, if they choose, but they don't have to. So, the clinically depressed -- a condition of bottomless suffering and hopelessness that many doctors fail to diagnose -- will have no safety net in states that leave them to their despair. Most of the clinically depressed, if treated, no longer want to kill themselves.

The Ninth Circuit went beyond assisted suicide. The court said there is not a clear line between physician-assisted suicide (with the physician absent when the drugs are actually taken) and a doctor's direct administration of drugs (as in a lethal injection). The latter, direct killing, is euthanasia.

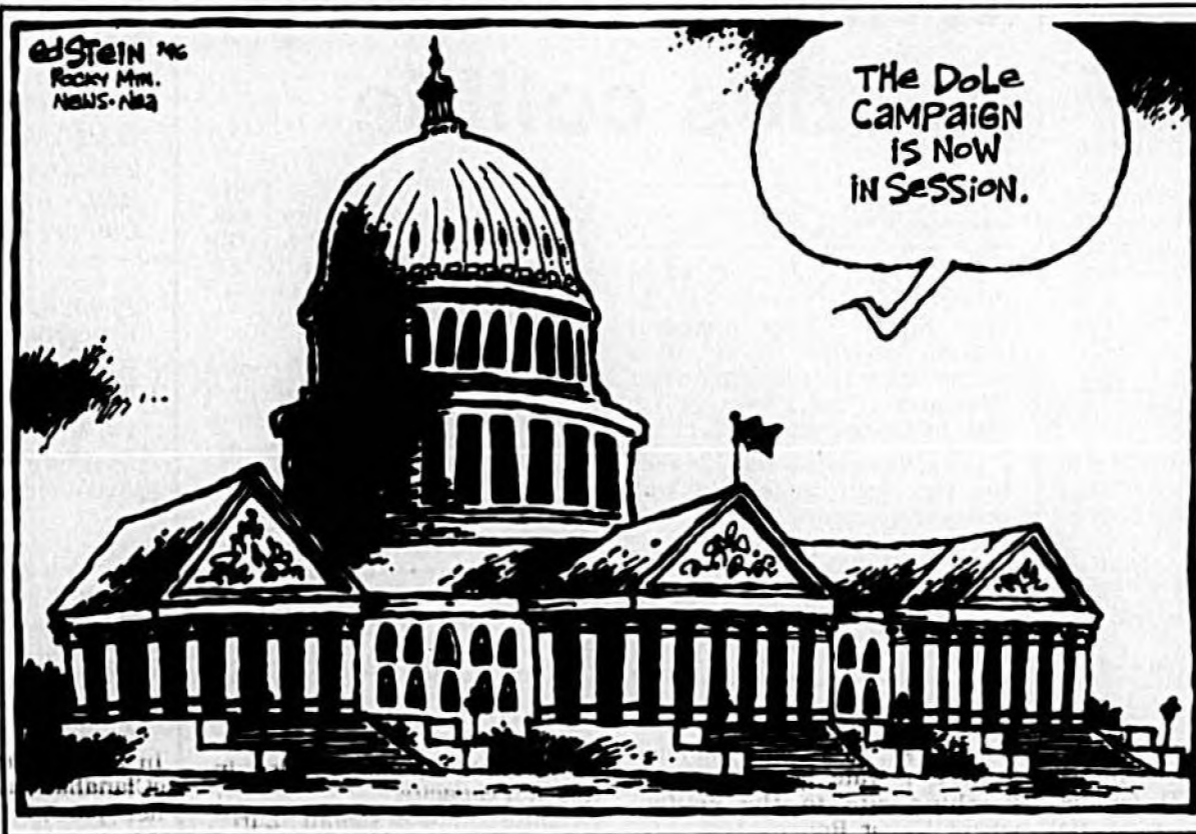

"We consider it less important who delivers the medication," said the Ninth Circuit, "than who determines whether the terminally ill person's life should end." The doctor will determine whether he or she will care for -- or kill -- a patient. Hippocrates has been deposed.

The Second Circuit Court of Appeals has now also decided that doctors have a right to help their patients kill themselves. It too sees no danger for the poor and, moreover, also says there is no difference between a doctor giving lethal drugs to a patient indirectly or administering them directly.

Only the Supreme Court can now curb these judges who are obsessed with, as they put it, "hastening death."

Kamisar is still warning that legalizing assisted suicide inexorably leads to euthanasia.

Abortion: Is 24-hour wait wise?

Initially, the Woman's Right to Know Act looks like just another in a long line of state bills catering to right-to-life groups. The crux of the Wisconsin bill, which was recently passed by that state's legislature, mandates that a woman seeking an abortion must observe a 24-hour waiting period after an initial consultation, at which she is to receive materials, created by the state, that "describe the unborn child and list agencies that offer alternatives to abortion."

But some reproductive-rights advocates believe that Assembly Bill 441 will limit not only a woman's access to abortion but also the availability of emergency birth control.

Emergency contraception is a little-known treatment that takes place after sexual intercourse. Women use it when they believe their birth control has failed them -- the condom breaks, the diaphragm slips -- or if they have had unprotected sex. After such an occurrence a woman has a 72-hour period in which she can medically prevent a pregnancy by taking a high dose of certain oral contraceptives that are prescribed by a doctor.

Some right-to-life groups believe emergency contraception to be abortion, which is one reason why knowledge of it is so scarce. Fearing retribution from anti-choicers, doctors and manufacturers of oral contraceptives choose not to advertise this treatment.

The root of the controversy lies at the definition of pregnancy. Those who believe that pregnancy occurs at the moment the sperm fertilizes the egg -- the Pro-Life Action League -- say this is abortion. Those who consider pregnancy the moment the fertilized egg is implanted in the uterine lining -- the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists -- say it is not.

In their abortion legislation, most state legislatures have taken care to define pregnancy by the medical definition of implantation. The Wisconsin bill does not define pregnancy at all, and other definitions in the bill suggest that it favors the anti-choice interpretation. For example, the "probable gestation age" is defined as the time that has "elapsed from the probable time of fertilization." Abortion is defined as "the use of an instrument, medicine, drug or other substance or device with the intent to terminate the pregnancy of a woman known to be pregnant or for whom there is reason to believe that she may be pregnant with intent other than to increase the probability of a live birth."

So here's the problem: The bill suggests that pregnancy begins at fertilization. If pregnancy begins at fertilization, then emergency contraception, at least in some cases, is abortion. If emergency contraception is abortion, then it is subject to the 24-hour-waiting-period law. If a woman seeking emergency contraception is to follow this law -- if she is to make two separate doctor's appointments to get the medication -- then the treatment is essentially useless, since it's unlikely that she'll be able to manage this within the 72-hour window.

A spokesman for Wisconsin State Rep. Gary Drzewiecki, a sponsor of AB 441, denies that the bill is meant to limit access to emergency contraception. So does Susan Armacoast of Wisconsin Right to Life.

"This doesn't make anything illegal," she says. Armacoast insists that the bill "has nothing to do with" postcoital contraception. When asked if she thought emergency birth control was abortion she replied that "we still don't know."

Simon Heller, a lawyer for the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy, says that in the past such ambiguities were mostly a result of carelessness on the legislators' part. However, as emergency contraception increasingly comes out of the closet, he thinks states could see pointed attacks. "Emergency contraception is becoming more well known, and this increases the chances that anti-choice people will go after it," says Heller.

If the intent of this bill is unclear, its potential impact is not. For the past 20 years, doctors and pharmaceutical companies have been too intimidated to give women basic information about this procedure. The Women's Right to Know Act will give them one more reason to stay silent.

For more information about emergency contraception, call the Reproductive Health Technologies Project at (800) 584-9911.

NRA's leadership and its members

WASHINGTON -- The first anniversary of the bombing in Oklahoma City is an appropriate time to probe one of the groups whose incendiary rhetoric has fostered division in America: the National Rifle Association.

The NRA did not inspire Timothy McVeigh to commit the horrible crime he has been charged with. But can the NRA evade all responsibility if its invective influences susceptible personalities to act out their violent fantasies?

McVeigh was a member of the NRA for at least four years. He received NRA mailings like the one that the group's executive vice president, Wayne LaPierre, distributed last year. It called government agents "jack-booted thugs."

That letter also lashed out at President Clinton by claiming that in his administration, "if you have a badge, you have the government's go-ahead to harass, intimidate, even murder law-abiding citizens."

The letter continued: "Most Americans ... don't understand that politicians and bureaucrats are chipping away at the American way of life. ... Unless we take action today, the long slide down the slippery slope will only continue until there's no freedom left in America at all."

In 1992, McVeigh wrote a letter to his congressman decrying laws that prohibit possession of stun guns and noxious substances like mace. On the back of the envelope was a stamp with a bald eagle and the words "I'M THE NRA."

This begs the question: Who is the NRA? On the surface, it's comprised of 3.5 million members -- most of whom care sincerely about their constitutional right to bear arms and are willing to accept reasonable restraints in the interest of public safety.

But the NRA is run by a tight cabal of leaders who use propaganda and the power of the purse to suit their private agenda. The leaders have turned a legitimate fellowship of sportsmen into a right-wing political organization that is not representative of the moderate bulk of its membership.

The gun group is the subject of a new book by Jack Anderson, "Inside the NRA: Armed and Dangerous" (Dove). The book charts the NRA's rise from obscurity to one of the most powerful lobbying organizations on Capitol Hill. The group began humbly enough in 1871 as a club established to "promote rifle practice."

Today, however, its extremist agenda has ranked prominent gun supporters -- like former President George Bush, who resigned his NRA membership after reading the LaPierre letter, Retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf also resigned, saying the group appeals "to a fringe element of gun owners."

The NRA still gets its way in Congress, however, mostly because it rewards candidates who carry their water. The NRA's clout was demonstrated recently when the House repealed the ban on assault weapons. The Republican leadership made no bones about the fact that the repeal was a political payoff to a group whose campaign contributions helped elect them in 1994.

One of the ringleaders was Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., who has received $29,700 from the NRA since 1990. Solomon shamelessly shouted down Rep. Patrick Kennedy, D-R.I., who had just movingly addressed the fact that two of his uncles were killed by gunfire.

McVeigh was a member of the NRA for at least four years.

 area and has had to take special precautions.
 "I use a baby monitor with the listening part in his room and the hearing part in my room, and lock my bedroom door," she said. "He's tried to get at his sister."
 Howard Finkelstein, a public defender, negotiated Thursday with prosecutors for an alternative to criminal charges to get help for Ronnie, not identified publicly because he is a sex-crime victim.
 "It is unusual that as a public defender I get drawn into a case at such an early stage," Finkelstein said. "I usually get drawn in 15 years from now when a child is charged with being a rapist, serial rapist or a murderer. I'm asking them to step in and avoid that result."
 Finkelstein and Ronnie's mother, a part-time county worker, went before a social service board but were turned down Wednesday in their request for help getting him into residential treatment. A facility in the Fort Lauderdale area specializes in treating young children with sexual disorders, but costs $42,000 a year.
 Ronnie's mother barely can support herself and two children on her pay as a temporary part-time worker. She's lost two jobs because of the disruptions caused by Ronnie and has appealed publicly for help for months, even appearing on "Donahue" this week.

 Lynette Beal, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, said Thursday she can't discuss the case.
 The agency has offered five hours a week of in-home counseling, but Ronnie's mother said it's not enough. Agency officials have said they don't have the money and the child doesn't qualify for government-supported residential treatment.
 If he had been abandoned or abused by his mother, he might qualify for more help.
 Experts say sexually abused children need intensive therapy quickly.
 "What you're seeing is probably someone who did not get intensive treatment right away," said Joy Byers, spokeswoman for the National Committee to Prevent Child Abuse. "Maybe the mother was not aware of how critically important such intervention is."
 When she first learned about his abuse "he was too young to talk about it. I figured it might have passed," Ronnie's mother said.

 Caution is best when dealing with such a crisis in early childhood, said Dr. Fred Berlin, a specialist in sexual trauma at Johns Hopkins University Medical School in Baltimore.
 "Unfortunately it's more common than people have realized," he said. "Don't dismiss it as a stage that's going to pass, nor assume that we have a budding sex offender."
 Ronnie's recent history would call for dramatic steps, said Elaine Savage, a Berkeley, Calif. psychotherapist who specializes in sex abuse.
 "It's really important that somebody intervene now," she said. "The more he repeats a behavior he will continue to do it."
 Ronnie's mother worries that children molested by Ronnie will in turn do the same to other children.
 "Someone has to intervene someplace," LaCerra said. "We have to break the cycle now. Ronnie is just one little pawn. How many other kids like him are going to fall through the cracks?"

Syria, Lebanon agree to seek cease-fire

By BARRY SCHWED
 AP Diplomatic Writer

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Syria and Lebanon today notified Secretary of State Warren Christopher they will help seek a cease-fire to end spiraling violence in the Middle East.
 Christopher received the assurances in telephone conversations with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharrah and Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri, said State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns.
 The two Arab officials pledged their help in seeking a cease-fire between Israel and the Shiite militant Hezbollah group. But it was not immediately clear if they will be able to persuade Hezbollah to halt its rocket and mortar attacks on northern Israel.
 Christopher spoke to the two Arab officials before a meeting here with Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen. He is due to go to the Middle East Saturday, but may depart late Friday night, a senior U.S. official said.

 Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres already has declared publicly he would order a stop to rocket attacks on Hezbollah positions in Lebanon if Hezbollah stopped its shelling.
 Christopher plans to make his first stop in Damascus to see Syrian President Hafez Assad. State Department analysts are convinced Assad can influence Hezbollah to abandon violence over efforts to force Israel to surrender a security belt inside the Lebanese border.
 While the Clinton administration has blamed Hezbollah for the spiraling violence across the Lebanese border, the rising civilian toll led Christopher to undertake his latest Mideast mission.
 Burns said Christopher hoped to strengthen a 1993 agreement between Israel and Hezbollah not to target civilians and to build from it "a long-term solution" to their dispute. He said Christopher's stay in the area would be "open-ended."

 Earlier, President Clinton said in Russia "we have a chance" to stop the shelling.
 "The parties have got to agree to a cease-fire," Clinton said in St. Petersburg at the start of a trip to Russia that Christopher skipped for Mideast diplomacy. "As we have seen in the terrible events of the last few days, once someone starts the spiral of violence it's hard to stop."
 And, the president said, "It's almost impossible for innocent civilians not to be hurt and killed."
 If the new round of U.S. Middle East diplomacy works, the Iran-backed guerrillas may be induced to quiet their rockets in exchange for negotiations to get Israeli soldiers out of their buffer zone inside Lebanon.

House, Senate prepare for redistricting battle

By ADAM YBOMANS
 Associated Press Writer
 TALLAHASSEE — House and Senate leaders are bracing for a lively debate over redrawing Florida's congressional districts.
 They already have one major disagreement.
 Gov. Lawton Chiles said he's supposed to have a final say-so over congressional redistricting plans passed by the Legislature. House Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace said that's the way he understood it worked.
 However, Senate President

Jim Scott said Thursday he believes the governor isn't involved in the Legislature's response to a federal court's decision this week that threw out Florida's 3rd Congressional District.
 The district meanders like a ragged horseshoe from Jacksonville to Orlando and partway back because it was created to elect a black representative. It is now represented by Rep. Corrine Brown, D-Fla.
 A three-judge panel Wednesday ordered the Legislature to come up with a new congressional plan by May 22.

 Chiles said Thursday he hadn't read the decision, but he didn't know how the court could take away his role in redistricting.
 "I don't see how the court can change Florida's constitution," he said. "I have read the constitution, and the constitution says I have a role to play."
 But Scott, R-Fort Lauderdale, said his staff lawyers have advised that the court ordered lawmakers to adopt a plan, not pass a law to redraw the districts.

LAKE MARY — The City of Lake Mary has announced plans for the 1998 summer recreation program. Sign-ups for Lake Mary citizens will begin on May 1.
 According to officials, if not enough city youngsters are signed up, the registration will be open to non-city residents beginning May 13.
 Recreation and Parks Director John Holland said he hopes to be able to handle possibly 100 youngsters this year, although many will increase the number higher. Last year, 112 youths were involved.

 last year's search in the rubble.
 "The whole thing is not over with yet," said Skip Fernandez of the Metro Dade, Fla., rescue team. "We didn't accomplish our mission 100 percent. We wanted to bring back someone alive."

 Fernandez and more than 500 other rescuers and their families will attend a public memorial service today at the Myriad Convention Center, five blocks from the bombing site.

Bagpipers will lead a procession of survivors and families from a private service at the bombing site to the center, where Mayor Ron Norick, Gov. Frank Keating and Vice President Al Gore will give speeches, and a videotaped statement from President Clinton will be played.
 Some survivors planned to stay away from the services because of painful memories.
 "I was there last year at 9:02, and I don't want to be there this year," said Diana McDonnell, who was standing next to a friend's desk in the building when the bomb ripped through her eighth-floor office. "I'm staying home tomorrow. I could not go to work yesterday. And I could not go today. I've kind of reached the point where I could not go any further."

 retire from politics, but said the public has made it clear they want him to continue his public service in this new capacity.
 Sanford businessman Larry Blair was the first to make his intentions to seek the mayor's job, having announced his candidacy early in the year.
 Blair has not served on the commission, but has been active in a number of boards and organizations. Presently, he is chairman of the Board of Adjustment, and has been on that board for 12 years.
 Former City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan said he intends to open his campaign fund during this coming week. McClanahan has had 15 years on the commission, having served from 1972 until 1978, and again from 1987 to 1994.
 He is presently on the city's Planning and Zoning Commission.
 Sanford resident Larry Dale is also planning to seek the position. "I've opened my campaign account already," he said, "and while I've said publicly that I'm going to run for mayor, I haven't issued any statements or press releases yet, but plan to in the near future."
 Dale hasn't served on any City of Sanford boards, but has seen service with boards and committees in both Seminole County and the City of Lake Mary.

 In addition to Thomas, Blair, McClanahan and Dale, several other persons have reportedly been considering running for Mayor, but have neither publicly announced their candidacy nor were willing to state their intentions at this time.
 The Sanford City election will be held on December 3. In order to win, a candidate must receive a majority of votes. In the case of the mayor's race where many candidates may be placed on the ballot, and the possibility of one candidate receiving a majority is slim, a run-off election will be held between the two who receive the most votes, on December 17.

 In addition to the position of mayor, two other city positions will be on the ballot: They are District 1, presently held by Commissioner Lon Howell, and District 2, presently held by Commissioner Thomas.
 The Sanford mayor salary is $3,800 per year plus $2,100 in expenses. For city commissioners, the salary is $3,000 per year with $1,800 in expenses.

Lightning get first playoff win

PHILADELPHIA — Brian Bellows' goal at 9:05 of overtime gave the Tampa Bay Lightning a 2-1 win over the Philadelphia Flyers and evened the best-of-7 playoff series at 1-1. Bellows broke into the zone down the slot, shifted slightly to his right then beat Flyers goalie Ron Hextall with a 18-foot slapshot from just inside the right faceoff circle. Tampa Bay's Rob Zamuner fell as he tried to clear the puck out of the zone from his own corner. The feeble clear went to Dale Hawerchuk at the point, who one-timed a 35-footer past Puppa for the power play goal at 1:48. Zamuner made up for his miscue in the third period by assisting on Alexander Selivanov's goal with 4:02 gone in the period.

Senior Cori Hillinski had triples in consecutive innings to support a 12 strike out, no-hit pitching performance by Hallie Sowards as Lake Mary closed the regular season with a 10-0 victory over Spruce Creek.

 Herald Staff Writer

LONWOOD — Hallie Sowards pitched a no-hitter Thursday as Lake Mary closed out the regular season with a 10-0 rout of Spruce Creek at Lake Mary High School.

Sowards, now 11-6 on the season, struck out 12 of the 19 batters she faced and allowed no walks.

"Hallie pitched a really good game," said Lake Mary coach Jeannie Fisher. "Hallie was very consistent with her pitches, and she has been that way all season."

When she wasn't on the mound throwing the ball past the Hawks batters, Sowards was leading the Rams' offense with a 3-for-4 performance at the plate that included three RBI. Sarah McWeeney reached first base on an error in the third inning, took second on a sacrifice bunt by Maggie Reedy, and scored on a single by Sowards to give Lake Mary a 1-0 lead.

Sarah Smith and Jen Deans opened the Rams' fourth inning with singles, and McWeeney drew a walk to load the bases. Smith scored on a ground out by Reedy, and Jackie Crispell followed with a single that plated Deans. Sowards then singled in McWeeney and Crispell, and scored herself on an double by Jeannie Manz to give Lake Mary a 6-0 cushion.

"I was pleased with the way we hit the ball, and we have been trying to get our hitting back on track," Fisher said. "We hit the entire game, and not just for one or two innings like we have been lately."

The Rams' barrage continued in the fifth inning when Cori Hillinski led off with a triple, but was thrown out trying to stretch it into an inside-the-park home run. Deans had a single one out later, and took third when McWeeney followed with a double. Deans and McWeeney scored on a single by Reedy to make the score 8-0.

Sowards had her third hit of the game to begin the Lake Mary sixth inning and reached second when Eric Van Swearingen walked one out later. Hillinski then brought the slaughter rule into effect as she pitched for the second time in as many innings to drive in Sowards and Van Swearingen.

Every Lake Mary hitter contributed to the Rams 13 hit attack. Reedy was 1-for-2 with three RBI, while Hillinski was 2-for-4 with two RBI and Deans was 2-for-3 with two runs scored. Crispell, Manz, Van Swearingen, Smith and McWeeney each collected one hit.

Next up for the Rams (18-8) will be the Class 6A, District 4 softball tournament which they will host.

No. 4 seeded Lyman hosts No. 5 Lake Brantley at 4 p.m. Monday to open the 6A-4 tournament.

The winner moves to Lake Mary on Wednesday to play No. 1 Oviedo in the semifinals at 5 p.m., followed by Lake Mary, the No. 3 seed, against No. 2 Lake Howell at 7:30.

The winners will play for the 6A-4 championship Friday at 7 p.m.

How to control household odors

Preventive maintenance is the first step in controlling odors in the home. It is very important to keep surfaces clean and dry and control conditions that create moisture and mildew problems.

Household products that are effective in absorbing odors are baking soda, talcum powder, silica gel, and charcoal. A vinegar and water solution is also effective in cleaning or washing articles to control odors. Other useful products are disinfectants, bleaching powders, washing soda, rubbing or denatured alcohol, and moth crystals.

Household ammonia can also be used; however, caution should be used to keep it out of the reach of children or pets. Boiling vinegar and water or certain fruit peelings, then permitting the fumes to spread throughout the house, will help camouflage odors.

Special products are marketed to veterinarians, morticians, and pest control operators to neutralize and mask odors. Contact these businesses for very persistent odors.

● To Clean up Pet Accidents: Pet accident odors are difficult to eradicate — especially if the accidents have happened more than once in the same place. Scrape up solids and blot liquids quickly. Quickly sponge with a lukewarm detergent solution of one teaspoon hand dishwashing detergent to one cup of lukewarm water. To prevent the staining of carpets, apply a solution of 1/3 cup white vinegar and 1/3 cup lukewarm water. Blot up excess moisture, rinse with clear water and let the area dry. If the stain remains, apply a detergent solution. Then reapply the vinegar solution and allow it to remain on the stain 15 minutes. Blot, rinse and dry carpet. This method works well, especially on fresh stains. If the yellow stain remains, further treatment will not restore the color. A professional carpet cleaner may be able to re-dye the carpet or remove the section of carpet and replace it with a piece of the carpet from a closet or other inconspicuous area.

If the odor remains, sprinkle dry baking soda or a commercial carpet odor powder on the area and leave on for several hours, then vacuum up. Products that are commercially available at pet stores are effective in removing pet odors.

To remove urine stains from wood floors, blot up excess liquid with an absorbent cloth. Then sponge the stained area with vinegar at full strength. Be careful not to saturate the wood or to allow the liquids to stand on the surface. Rinse well and dry thoroughly.

To add a finishing touch, buff the area with 000 steel wool that's been cushioned with floor wax. Rub with the grain of the wood until the stained area looks the same as the surrounding area.

● To Keep Pets Out of Your Garbage Cans: Sprinkle the garbage and the can with full-strength ammonia or a commercial spray designed to repel animals. To keep cans from being overturned, place them inside old tires or on a platform with 2 by 4's nailed around it.

● To Discourage Pets from Sitting on or Scratching Furniture: Place wrapped packages of camphor (available from a pharmacy) under cushions. Most animals are repelled by the smell.

● Ashtrays: Wipe with a paper towel dampened with alcohol to clean and remove stale tobacco odor.

● Bathrooms: If the room is musty, wipe with a mild chlorine bleach solution. To scrub the walls, use 2 pints chlorine bleach, one tablespoon liquid detergent, 3 tablespoons of trisodium phosphate, and 4 1/2 quarts of water. Scrub the walls. Rinse with plenty of water.

● Cigarette and Cigar Smoke: Open bowls of baking soda and lighted candles will absorb cigarette smoke during a party.

● Furniture: If your furniture smells musty, treat first for mildew by vacuuming or dusting. If mildew remains, sponge with a cloth moistened with one cup denatured or rubbing alcohol mixed with one cup water. Dry thoroughly. Mattresses, upholstery and rugs can be aired outdoors on sunny days providing there are no foam components which can be damaged by exposure to the sun. Brush a scented lacquer or cedar oil on the underside of tables and chairs to make them smell fresh. Upholstered furniture that continues to smell musty or bad should be cleaned professionally.

Man undecided about marrying his lady friend

DEAR MARY: I've been seeing a woman for five years — not exclusively, but steadily. There are times when we get along so well I think she drives me nuts. We've both been single for about 10 years, so there's no rebound problems. We both enjoy children, have similar religious beliefs and like to do a lot of the same kinds of things.

But, when it comes to spending money, we see things real differently. Also, sometimes I like to go out and just play around — nothing serious, just a few drinks, some flirting, some laughs — that kind of thing. I wouldn't feel right about it if I was married.

I've tried breaking off with her a few times, but when I do, I feel like part of me is missing. Then I'll call, we'll start talking, and pretty soon we're back to seeing each other almost every night. It seems crazy that by this time in my life (50s), I can't make up my mind whether this is the right person for me, but that's how it is. I think I got married the first time primarily from lust and now that that's not a big factor, I don't know how else to decide. Any ideas?

FAMILY COUNSELOR

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Decide not to decide anything until you've come to some conclusions on the following questions: Can you still feel comfortable when it's necessary for the two of you to be apart? Have you maintained the interests you had before the two of you started dating? How would you feel if your lady friend decided to end the relationship? Can you imagine still being friends with her? And very importantly, are you and your lady friend better people because of your relationship? These are some of the differences between love and relationship addiction.

I also really hope you explore your motivation for needing to participate in occasional flirtatious outings. At the very least, that seems like immature behavior and it's sure to harm any long term commitment. Until you're ready to put that kind of activity behind you, you're probably not ready for marriage to anyone.

Husband's best friend not on best behavior with wife

DEAR ABBY: If my husband knew I was writing to you, he'd swear I was nuts. But I have a problem I have never seen addressed. I read your column every day, and most of the time I agree with you and respect your opinion.

My husband's best friend, "Earl" (not married), has been cornering me alone and keeps saying he has always loved me! I have tried avoiding him, and he tries to avoid me when he's sober. However, we are social drinkers, and since they are such good friends, there are times we can't avoid each other. I have never encouraged Earl and have let him know that I'm very much in love with my husband — but that doesn't stop him.

Should I tell my husband? I'm afraid if I don't, he'll hear Earl one day and think there's something going on. They have been friends for years, and I'm afraid if I tell, their friendship will be hurt, and I'd never do anything to hurt either one of them.

Your thoughts on this, please.
 IN A BIND IN BATON ROUGE

DEAR IN A BIND: You are much too kindhearted. If the shoe were on the other foot, and your best friend began hitting on your husband every time she got a snoot full, wouldn't you want to know?

Corner Earl in the cold, sober light of day and tell him that his unwelcome advances have made you uncomfortable for the last time and if it happens again, you will tell your husband. And if you're put on the spot again — do it.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of ours has a 7-year-old son who molested our 7-year-old child. We alerted our friend to the situation, and she confronted her son, who admitted the act.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

From what our child told us, this was not just "curiosity." Our friend took her son to a child psychiatrist and informed us that they discovered the boy had been molested for over a year by an older boy. Then we were told that he would have to be in therapy anywhere from six months to a year.

After two or three visits to the doctor, the mother stopped taking him because it was too upsetting for the child, and he would cry and get sick before the appointment, so no more therapy.

Do you think this is wise? Since he was molested and has acted out on other children (ours was not the only one — there were several), should he or should he not be in therapy? I believe he should.

CONCERNED FRIEND
DEAR CONCERNED FRIEND: I, too, believe the boy should be in therapy. Is the boy rebelling because he dislikes the therapy — or the therapist? Perhaps another therapist could be a solution.

DEAR ABBY: Bravo to you for your recent response to the letter from the Canadian woman whose husband was in prison.

My father went to prison just before I was born. My mother always told me he was "in the Army," since, like your reader, she didn't think I was old enough to understand. Unfortunately, the neighborhood children didn't take my young age into consideration when they informed me that my father was a "jailbird."

Later, my mother apologized for her mistake in not being the one to tell me the truth, even though it wasn't pretty. She never lied to me again about anything, as she expected me to always be truthful with her.

How much better it will be for your Canadian reader's children to hear the truth from someone who can convey it to them in a loving, sensitive manner. They have the added bonus of their father not being guilty of the crime. Unfortunately, I can't say the same about my father.

EVERGREEN, COLO.

DEAR ABBY: My mother always used to say, "The shoemaker's family goes barefoot." Well, she was right. I married a plumber, and every faucet in our house drips.

I have begged my husband to fix them, but he keeps putting me off. I tried to repair them myself and almost lost my thumb. What should I do?

PLUMBER'S WIFE
DEAR WIFE: The biggest "drip" in your house is your husband. The plumbing in a plumber's house should be perfect, so tell your husband you'll give him one more chance before calling his competitor with instructions to put your plumbing in first-class condition, and send the bill to your husband.

LONGWOOD — (From information given in a recent press release) Wekiva Assembly, 1675 Dixon Rd., will feature recording artist, Karen Wheaton, in concert Sunday, April 28 at its 8 and 10:30 a.m. Sunday Celebration Services. At the heart of this young woman is a purpose and vision that has taken her far beyond her childhood dreams into a developing work which is changing the lives of those who come into contact with her.

As a very young child, Wheaton purposed in her heart to sing for the Lord. Through a unique blend of singing, speaking and dramatic presentation, Wheaton tells the story of Jesus Christ.

Wheaton has released nine albums. Included on these albums are songs such as Fire Shut Up in My Bones, Worship Medley, Hotel Hallelujah, Promise, Look What the Lord Has Done and He'll Do it Again. She has also recorded two videos, Life in The Spirit and Miracle in Motion.

Her schedule includes personal appearances in churches, auditoriums, conventions and campmeetings throughout the United States. Benny Hinn, Marilyn Hickey, Charles and Frances Hunter and R.W. Schambach are just a few of the ministers Wheaton has appeared with in her 14 years of ministry. She is also a regular television guest on the Trinity Broadcasting Network.

Preacher shares insight about life

SANFORD — Recently I read a short story about a little boy who was playing by the seashore. The afternoon sun was high, as his enterprise began. The youth was busy building a little city in the sand.

Carving out the houses, positioning the roads, so many, many details to etch out in the sand. With his hands so busy, he hardly stopped to notice that the sun was setting, the clouds were gathering and the wind was growing cold.

His intensity toward the project kept his eyes from the encroaching sea. The tide's approach was sure and steady but unnoticed by the youth.

Then suddenly, a wave, larger than the rest, came sweeping in around him and washed his city away. In terror the child ran back, alone and afraid.

For a moment in time, this young man forgot where he was. Where was his head? He should have known the tide was approaching but his mind was upon other things.

Adults, like children, forget where they are. Engrossed with the problems of life and synchronized to the here and now, their focus on temporal things provides a great distraction from surrounding scenes.

The clouds gather, the wind grows chilly and the tide of death approaches, but man is oblivious as he builds houses in the sand. Where is his head?

Unfortunately, after the waves of reality wash over the works of man, he is left terrified, alone and dismayed.

Where is your head? Jesus told us to seek first the Kingdom of God. He also promised that if we hear his words and do them, we will not be washed away by the storms of life (Matthew 7:24-27).

Let's make Christ the focus and stay alert to life's spiritual realities.

Tony Black is the minister for the Sanford Church of Christ. He will answer any Bible related questions by writing to him at 300 N. French Ave., Sanford, FL 32778.

Minister Tony Black

God's blessings bestowed on us

Ever began a morning with a "bad hair day," full of appointments, schedules, momentary service, errands and millions of calls? I recently had a day that was way beyond a "bad hair day." It was more like a bad body and mind day. Every member of the family was running late. Then an urgent call from my mother saying she was having chest pain and needed to go to the ER. Only a few highlights of the day.

Although the ER ordeal was a terror, the doctor was kind and I learned a little more about the medical field.

RELIGION

Yet, one of the highlights of the night held a blessing from the Lord as soon as my family left to tuck themselves in and I waited for answers. I met the most gentle, spiritual lady there patiently waiting for entrance in the an exam rooms with her husband who was very ill.

As we talked and shared our experience of the evening and day we discussed various physicians and their bedside manner, or in some cases the lack of it. As the conversation progressed we became connected in a special way.

The transaction lead to both of us being able to share our faith. What a blessing the night turned out to be.

Through all the turmoil of the day, evening closed with thoughts of Jesus and encouragement from a stranger. We are told in the Bible that "some have entertained angels unaware."

If any one was to tell me anything other than the fact that this precious woman was sent from God I wouldn't believe them. Her caring prayer, gentle touch and tender empathy made me glad circumstances lead me to that ER at that particular sunset, time and day.

God really does bestow on us his blessings, even during the storms of life. May times we have to "be still and know that he is God" before we can rest in his arms for peace and a peaceful sleep.

Presbyterian youth skate and meet for fellowship, fun

Youth from the First Presbyterian Church, 301 Oak Ave., in Sanford recently enjoyed a night of skating at the Orlando Ice Skating Palace with leaders Patty Hughes, Kathy Hunter and Carl Lee. Weekly meetings are held starting at 5 p.m. each Wednesday at the church building. Dinner is included.

Share your concerns with gynecologist

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband and I have been together for 11 years, and during that time I've suffered recurring yeast infections and vaginitis, despite fastidious personal hygiene practices. I never had these problems prior to relations with him, and he's been my only partner. He likes to engage in oral stimulation before intercourse, and I can trace the infections to these occasions. When I attempt to discuss this problem, he becomes incensed and will not talk about it, indicating the problem is mine. Can engaging in this practice cause the afflictions mentioned? I have found this an impossible topic to discuss with my gynecologist, especially when perched at the end of an examining table wearing a sheet of tissue paper.

DEAR READER: Although I have never heard of yeast infection being transmitted in the manner you describe, I suppose that it's theoretically possible.

It's more likely that the acidity of your vaginal secretions is being altered by your sexual arousal and love-making techniques, thereby providing for uncontrolled growth of yeasts that are already present in your reproductive tract.

In any case, I really encourage you to discuss this with your gynecologist, preferably before your examination, when he sits down to talk with you (as he should) about any problems you might be having.

This is information he needs to have. For example, vaginal yeast infections are more common in diabetic women, so he will probably want to obtain a blood sugar test. Don't be intimidated by your doctor.

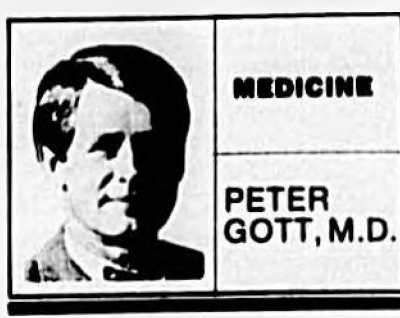

As another possibility, you might consider using a course of anti-yeast vaginal cream. Most of these products are now available without a prescription.

Finally, your husband's reaction to your concerns is certainly not that of a sensitive and caring partner. He should be ashamed of himself. And, in fact, your yeast problem may be his, too. If he is uncircumcised, he could unknowingly be harboring yeasts that he transmits to you, not through oral sex but by standard intercourse.

Show him my answer to your question. I believe that you both need to address the issue, together as a team.

To give you general information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Vaginal Infections and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been troubled with eczema since childhood. Skin specialists and topical ointments are ineffective. Can you give any advice?

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR READER: Eczema is often difficult to treat. Marked by recurring cycles of localized blisters that itch and break, leading to crusting and scaling, eczema may be caused by reactions to chemical irritants or by allergies. The cause of many cases remains a mystery.

I'm sure that your cadre of dermatologists have investigated the various allergic possibilities, to no avail. Perhaps you could be helped by seeking the advice of super-specialists in a university-hospital skin clinic.

The bottom line here is treatment. I can well understand your feelings of frustration at not having discovered a successful form of therapy. Although most instances of eczema respond to the intermittent use of over-the-counter cortisone creams, resistant cases may need occlusive therapy: high-potency prescription steroid creams used at night and covered with plastic film.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Of fortunes sharp adversities

By Phillip Alder

Perhaps you think that Geoffrey Chaucer had the right idea about bridge when he wrote, "The lyl so short, the craft so long to lerne." However, it is the variety in bridge that has kept it alive. Today's deal is a good example. How would you plan the play in three no-trump after West has led a heart into your ace-queen?

Even if South were showing only 15-17 points with his opening bid, North was right to jump to game. His good five-card suit and two aces make the hand well worth it.

South won the first trick with the heart queen, cashed the club king and ran the club nine. East happily won with the queen and returned a heart. Now South, with only eight tricks, had to try the diamond finesse, but that lost too and the defenders ran the heart suit to defeat the contract.

"Boy, look at that," grumbled South. "Both finesses wrong and the hearts 5-3. Of course, I could have got the clubs right, but it would have been awkward to play that way."

"All that is true," said North. "Yet you should have made the contract. It is one of those rare deals in which you should attack your shorter suit first. Suppose you start by playing a diamond to dummy's ace and a diamond back."

"Let me think about that. Here, if East goes up with the diamond king, I have nine tricks by way of one spade, two hearts, four diamonds and two clubs. And if he ducks his king, then I can switch to clubs. Yes, of course. But hold on a moment. What if my diamond queen loses to West's king?"

"Then you need diamonds to break

HOROSCOPE

Impressive gains are possible in the year ahead in conjunction with individuals with whom you share strong emotional ties. Work on projects you can share with family members or loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your chart indicates that you might become involved in some type of profitable arrangement today. Try not to include unproductive spectators. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might have a change of heart today in regard to a development in which you initially fell imposed upon. You will learn a valuable lesson.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The influence you exert today will have an uplifting influence on others. If someone you like needs encouragement, a pat on the back from you will mean a lot.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, do not deprive yourself of a group activity you find enjoyable just because you happen to dislike one of the participants.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The people you expect to help you with something you hope to achieve might make themselves unavailable. However, a more constant substitute may fill in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Today, abrasive tactics will not help you to accomplish your goals, but charm will. The good guys will be lucky today, and the bad guys will finish last.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) There could be some unexpected developments in your household today, but you will not mind them a bit. They will stem from a benign situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A hastily formed partnership arrangement may not have been constructed fairly. However, this problem can be corrected today if you speak your mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) By performing services for others today, you can receive larger-than-usual returns. These benefits may last for only a few days, so get moving.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you gamble on anything today, make sure it's on one of your own ideas. You will have good luck, but others might not be as fortunate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You can find strength in numbers today. Something substantially beneficial for you and your family can be realized if everyone's intentions are in harmony.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone who can help you to satisfy an immediate need can be approached more easily if a friend intervenes. Let your pal try to speed up the process.
