BRIEFS

Police promotions

SANFORD — Three members of the Sanford police force were to be promoted during ceremonies at 1 p.m. this afternoon at police headquarters. Chief Ralph Russell announced that Sgt. Ray Bronson will be promoted to commander, to fill a position caused by the retirement of former Commander Mike Rotundo.

Cpl. Willie Harden will move up to the rank of Sgt. Investigator Pat Smith will move into the corporal slot.

Public invited to 'Look the Part'

SANFORD — The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce will hold a demonstration and seminar on the use of clothing called "Look the Part." The event will be conducted Tuesday, Feb. 15, beginning at noon.

Chamber Executive Director Dave Farr says reservations must be made by the end of business this Friday.

Led by Kathy Skiles, of Rutlands, the program is designed to help meet everyone's needs in looking and dressing their best to improve sales, customer response and the effectiveness of their business.

The seminar will feature a chicken croissant and fruit lunch by Cafe Jake, one of downtown Sanford's newest restaurants. Cost is $6 per person.

For reservations, phone the Sanford chamber at 322-2212.

Commission talks trash

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners will return to the bargaining table with garbage haulers in a last-ditch effort to reduce prices and eliminate added yard waste collection fees before contracts expire next year. Most commissioners liked Daryl McLain's "take it or leave it" plan ranging from $12.90 per month for full service to $10.65 monthly for minimum service. Commissioners McLain, Carlton Henley and Dick Van Der Weide said they'd be willing to consider a four-year contract extension to 1999 — sought by haulers — if they agreed to the rate. Commissioner Pat Warren said she'd agree to a two-year extension with open-ended continuance options if they agreed to it. Commissioner Larry Furlong retained his position the county should remove franchise districts and service bids and return to a competitive, but regulated, program.

County budget director Jean Kassab said she must send service option notices to nearly 50,000 households by late March for the program to take effect Oct. 1. Because the printer needs three weeks to prepare the order, Kassab said she should have notified them yesterday. County Manager Ron Rabun said he would report the hauler's response by early March.

Humane Society burglarized

SANFORD — Investigators are looking into a pair of burglaries reported at the Humane Society of Seminole County earlier this week.

Barry Black, executive director of the Humane Society, reported on Wednesday that someone had broken into the facility on Monday and Tuesday nights.

Nothing was taken in either incident, but Black told police that two dogs were let out of their cages and a file cabinet had been tampered with.

County health officials say story wild but common

By SANDRA ELLIOTT and KELLEY MITCHELL Herald Staff Writers

LAKE MARY — The rumor spread through the Lake Mary High School halls like wildfire. From student to student like the old game of "Gossip" or "Telephone," the school was abuzz earlier this week that 17 out of 100 pints of blood donated by students in a recent blood drive tested HIV positive.

The rumor, which recently circulated in Brevard County schools and is making its way around Orlando schools as well, is not true. None of the recently donated blood at Lake Mary High School tested positive for the virus that causes AIDS, school and blood bank officials said.

Lake Mary High School Principal Dr. Raymond Gaines said he learned of the rumor late Wednesday and checked with a number of sources. "It's totally unfounded," Gaines remarked.

"It's a wild rumor," Dr. Tom Marcy, director of high schools for the Seminole County School Board said of the story.

No blood donations from the school tested HIV positive, Marcy said after consulting with officials at the Central Florida Blood Bank.

Suspects in cop shooting questioned

By VICKI DeBORNIER Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Two suspects in the shooting of an Eatonville police officer were released after the officers involved in the shooting could not positively identify them.

According to Ed McDonough, public information officer for the Seminole County sheriff's department, the officers were unable to give a positive identification to deputies who were investigating the situation.

"They said they were pretty sure the men were two of the men involved, but that was not enough to make a strong case on," McDonough said.

Commission mulls two hot political topics

By J. MARK BARFIELD Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Term limits were favored by most speakers at last night's Charter Review Commission hearing, but not single member district voting for county commissioners although a carrot was offered to drop a voter's rights lawsuit if the issue was placed on the November ballot.

The two hot topics attracted less than three dozen people to Lake Mary City Hall to voice their views on proposed changes to the Seminole County Charter. About 10 people spoke on each topic. The final hearing will be held March 16 at Altamonte Springs City Hall to consider new citizen proposals.

CRC members refused to advertise several proposals brought forward last night, including a county Bill of Rights, but the topics can be brought up again by new speakers.

Of the 10 speakers on term limits for commissioners and other county officers, six favored two-term limits for county commissioners, with fewer expressing an opinion on limits for other officers, such as the tax collector. Four speakers opposed the limits, including Clerk of Courts Maryanne Morse. Most said the limit to the number of four-year terms which a commissioner could serve would encourage "fresh blood" to enter the political arena with new ideas.

"More candidates would increase competition and help reduce the influence of special interest groups and bureaucrats," said Grant Malloy, president of the Central Florida Tax Action Network.

Tuskawilla homeowner's president Mott Khemlani said term limits were strongly supported in Winter Springs and he believed most residents there would support limits for county commissioners. Khemlani said the turnover of candidates would encourage more people to Chlorine use in bleaching by pulp and paper mills is blamed by scientists for producing dioxin, a deadly, toxic chemical that is thought to disrupt the reproduction processes of certain wildlife species.

Statewide definition for wetlands decided

Politics

Barbara Terhune, of the Seminole County chapter of United We Stand America, said the political education group supports eight-year lifetime limits for commissioners and 12-year lifetime limits for other county officers.

Charles Champion, representing county Libertarians, said though he originally opposed limits, he now agrees with the "Eight is Enough" proposition which only limits the number of times an officer's name can appear on the ballot, not the number of terms they can serve.

Champion said the country's founding fathers intended elections to be by write-in and said the ballot-name limit would be a step in that preferred direction.

James Purdy, county Democratic party chairman, agreed with Republican Saporito. Purdy said voters have the power of impeachment, recall and indictment to remove undesirable office-holders. The public benefits from the skills and experience of long-term commissioners, he said.

Maryanne Morse agreed with both.

"The best term limit is that of our voters," said the court clerk. "I do not believe there is a power of incumbency in a county that is growing as fast as Seminole County is."

On the issue of single-member districts, four of the nine speakers said they preferred to vote for all five commissioners as they do now, not just one as might occur under some forms of single-member districts.

Purdy said a 1992 voter's rights lawsuit brought by county blacks and Hispanics might be dropped if the CRC simply place the question on the ballot for voters to decide. Purdy said single-member districts would reduce special-interest influence on commissioners.

Khemiani opposed the districts, saying they created division among commissioners. Malloy said single-member districts would not promote effective accountability and gives voters greater choice.

Sharon Carveth, county planning commissioner and political activist, said she believes the district voting would increase accountability to constituents. Eva Pringle and Willie King of Sanford supported the district voting, saying it would offer minorities greater access to the commission even if the districts were not drawn for minority-targeted reasons.

"It's an ugly rumor that seems to raise its head every year," Mike Pratt, director of technical services for the blood bank said. "We send out some letters of notification to watch out for this kind of thing to the school administration but none the less, you know how kids are. They get to talking after a blood drive and everybody now is so fearful of AIDS and blood, that the two get together and there goes a rumor," he explained.

"There were absolutely no, zero, no HIV positives among the people who donated in that blood drive at Lake Mary," Pratt emphasized. "In fact, I can absolutely swear to you that in all of the years we have been drawing blood, and we cover 12 counties as far north as Ocala and as far south as Stuart, we have only once found one high school student in all of those years, in all of those people, who was HIV infected."

blood products used by her brother.

Under the current law, only full blown cases of AIDS are reportable to the health department as an infectious disease. However, Pratt said the blood bank notifies donors that their blood is tested for HIV, hepatitis or other viruses. Donors are also told if there is a positive result for syphilis, HIV or AIDS, the health department in their county will be notified.

"Even though the county health department has no authority to do anything with that information," Pratt said, "we always felt compelled to provide them that information just as an additional security measure within our community that the health department is being notified."

Bill Damiano, Human Services Program Specialist for the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, district 7 AIDS program said "It is an urban rumor. The last time we talked to the blood bank here, they hadn't had any (HIV positive blood) from high school students). The thing (rumor) is real common all over the state and all over the country. I've heard this so many times from different schools and it has never been backed up."

Officials do say the number of teens testing positive for the HIV virus has been consistently rising in recent years.

"We get from three to five new HIV cases each week here at the health department," said Gail Lewis, Social Service case worker of the Community Health AIDS Program at the Seminole County Health Department on Airport Boulevard. "What disturbs me the most is I am seeing an increase of 15, 16, and 17-year-olds."

"When it is explained to the teens that they need to practice safe sex, their response is that 'I only have one partner,'" said Lewis. "But what they fail to realize is that they don't know how many partners that partner has, which puts them at risk."

Since 1981, there have been 174 AIDS cases in the 13-19 age category in Florida, according to HRS statistics. Florida law does not require that HIV positive cases be reported to health authorities. Damiano noted that an individual can carry the HIV virus for 10 or 11 years before he or she develops full blown AIDS.

"About 20 percent of the AIDS cases in Florida are diagnosed between 20 and 29 years old," Damiano said, "which means they were probably infected while they were teenagers because they weren't diagnosed until their 20s."

"These numbers can be used by people to say they're not at risk," he added, "and one of the fastest growing groups is later teens and 20s and women."

There are 310 cases of AIDS in Seminole County, according to HRS statistics. In the tri-county area of Orange, Seminole and Osceola, there are 2,300 adult AIDS cases and 35 pediatric cases. In Florida, there are 34,141 adult cases and 796 pediatric AIDS patients.

Defiant Harding strikes back at USOC with $20 million suit

By LARRY SIDONS
AP Sports Writer

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — A defiant Tonya Harding struck back at the U.S. Olympic Committee with a $20 million lawsuit and vowed to come to Norway, win a gold medal and "hang it on my wall forever."

The skater asked an Oregon court Wednesday to block the USOC from holding a hearing that could lead to her expulsion from the Winter Games for her actions surrounding the clubbing attack on Nancy Kerrigan.

Harding's attorney, Robert Weaver, expected a court hearing on the request today.

USOC executive director Harvey Schiller said the committee had expected some action by Harding's lawyers. "We are prepared to defend ourselves," he said, but declined further comment until USOC officials in Lillehammer reviewed the suit.

Kerrigan, meanwhile, was en route to Oslo, where she was due to arrive after noon today. "I just can't wait to get there so I can get going," she said before leaving Massachusetts.

Harding has denied advance knowledge of the plot to hobble her rival but admits she didn't immediately come forward when she learned about it afterwards.

She said Wednesday she would like to tell Kerrigan she's sorry and give her a hug — "if she'll let me."

The USOC wants Harding to appear before its 11-member

Games Administrative Board in Oslo on Tuesday to answer charges that she violated Olympic rules of ethics and sportsmanship.

One of the witnesses before that hearing could be Jeff Gillooly, Harding's ex-husband and chief accuser who has said Harding gave the OK for the attack.

Gillooly's lawyers asked a judge in Multnomah County, Ore., to let him go to Oslo and testify before panel. He awaits sentencing after pleading guilty to racketeering in the Kerrigan assault.

District Attorney Michael Schruck said he "can't imagine" opposing the request, which Gillooly made after the USOC sent him a letter asking him to be available. A court hearing on Gillooly's request was set for today.

Gillooly also asked that the results of a lie detector test he took as part of a plea bargain be made public and available to the USOC.

Allocating funds for special tags

Florida motorists take great pride in their state and its place in the world. This is evident through the variety of vehicle license plates they buy.

Depending on what they support, a college, the space program, or a certain endangered animal, special license plates can be purchased.

For plates with a specific college logo or the Florida panther, the charge is $37 in addition to the normal license costs for the first year, and $27 additional per year for renewals.

For those with the manatee or space shuttle, the cost is $27 for the first year, and $17 additional for an annual renewal.

It is a good idea. The money would go to various organizations such as the actual colleges, the space museum, or groups dedicated to the protection of environmentally endangered wild life.

What is not a good idea however, is when the money is not used for its intended purpose.

It has been discovered that some of the $14.3 million raised through the sale of specialty license tags for the endangered animals, is sitting in a bank. Hardly any of it has gone for its intended purpose.

Senator Rick Dantzler, D-Winter Haven, serves as chairman of the Senate's Natural Resources Committee. He said people in Florida would stop buying the plates if they felt they had been tricked.

He is absolutely right. People should not be told their money will be used for this purpose unless it is. To make any other claim is nothing more than an outright lie.

Let's face facts. People of Florida are kind and caring. They are willing to donate money for a worthwhile cause.

The Florida Advisory Council manages money from the sale of manatee and panther tags. Some of it has been given out during past years.

Currently however, the Associated Press reports the council has not given any money for environmental grants in recent times, despite having up to $4.1 million in the bank.

In response, some officials say they are just being cautious about a possible future decline in revenue.

This money must start going out to qualified organizations. The people must be informed of how it is being used. They must also be convinced that the extra cost they pay for these special license plates isn't being wasted.

The council must wake up and start allocating these funds for the purpose which they were intended. If not, they will indeed have a serious future decline in special tag sales.

On gun control

I am writing in regards to the issue on gun control. First of all, gun control is not crime control. The law books are full of meaningless laws now. I firmly believe we need much tougher laws to put criminals behind bars and to serve at least 80 percent of their sentences. It is the decent, law abiding, hard working U.S. citizens that need to be helped to keep and even get back some of our individual rights and freedom.

I believe parents should be fully responsible for their children until they are 18 years of age. For now, in order to stop the runaway crime problem, we need to impose a curfew for 17-year-olds and younger similar to Miami or Tampa. Florida's new curfew, but please sir, let's not go after the guns, let's just go after the criminals. Government control of everything is not the answer.

Making the grade for Presidents' Day

Presidents' Day is coming up in a week or two, and Ronald Reagan has coincidentally just reappeared on TV at a Republican bash in Washington in honor of his 83rd birthday. Considering the unremitting barrage of mud the Democrats have thrown at this man, it was downright exhilarating to see the old magician back on the tube again, as vigorous and twinkle-eyed as ever.

Predictably, what the crowd loved best were the barbs he threw at the Democrats. Listening to Bill Clinton's calls, in his State of the Union address, for welfare reform and a serious battle against crime, Mr. Reagan said they reminded him of the old adage that "imitation is the sincerest form of flattery." Then he added, "But in this case it isn't flattery — it's grand larceny."

With the history departments of our universities firmly in the grip of professors who spent the 1960s on LSD longing for the downfall of "Amerika," Mr. Reagan will clearly have to wait for time's corrective processes to kick in before he can expect the final judgment of posterity on his presidency. What that may be, however, can already be glimpsed — of which, more later.

Meanwhile, conservatives were amused recently when Arthur Schlesinger Jr., the chief house minstrel of the Roosevelt and Kennedy presidencies, was caught trying to steal a base. On The New York Times Op-Ed page, Professor Schlesinger delivered himself of the following pronouncement: "By common consent, our three greatest Presidents were George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Nice try, professor, but you get an F. No doubt you really believe FDR is right up there with Washington and Lincoln, but when you claim that this is the general opinion you are purveying your usual brand of liberal eyewash.

At that, I'll admit that it once seemed possible that FDR was on his way to such an apotheosis. Jaunty and unbeatable, the old rascal first presided over the reconstruction of the federal government as the all-devouring monster that it has been ever since, then led the American nation into and victoriously through World War II. For good or ill, he seemed destined to tower over the competition.

That is why I have been so surprised, in recent decades, to see the air slowly seeping out of the Roosevelt bandwagon's tires. The further his presidency recedes into the past, the less impressive he — and it — seem.

We now know, as a result of the inside histories of that day, what a shallow improviser he was. To the extent that the New Deal was planned at all, it was planned by others; to Roosevelt, as Aldous Huxley said of history, it was "just one damned thing after another." No wonder that John Maynard Keynes, after a chat with him, told a friend that Roosevelt was "an economic illiterate" — or that Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., seeking gallantly to find something nice to say about him, opined that he had "a second-rate mind but a first-rate character."

As for World War II, a president is inevitably measured by the size of the crisis of his time.

Bobby Ray took his toys and went home

I apologize in advance for revisiting yesterday's news, but something about the bizarre way Bobby Ray Inman bowed out of the national spotlight a few weeks ago is still gnawing at me.

Truth is, it's more than that. Inman really aggravated me with some of the things he said, and I want to talk about them.

Bobby Ray Inman, the former admiral who backed out of the defense secretary's job on the grounds that columnists were picking on him. That Bobby Ray.

He was especially upset, he said, by a frenzy of "new McCarthyism" that was sweeping the op-ed pages, and he pointed to Ellen Goodman of the Boston Globe and Tony Lewis and William Safire of The New York Times. Of the three, only Safire had really zinged him. Goodman took him to task for his Nannygate problem — he had not paid $6,000 in Social Security taxes for a household worker — and I'm still not certain what infamies Lewis heaped upon the defenseless Inman.

But that evil pup Safire had described Inman as a tax cheat, a business flop and a nail.

But that evil pup Safire had described Inman as a tax cheat (because of the Nannygate thing), a business flop and a nail. More than that, Safire was conspiring with Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., to defeat Inman's nomination. He was, he said, "distressed and distracted" by such "rush-to-judgment distortions of my record, my character and my reputation." There was no reason to "put up with that garbage" and he was going to take his proud persona back to Texas and to hell with us all.

There was more: "My problem is with the columnist who is afforded the pages of the newspaper and the syndication and the talk shows to carry on attacks with no one responding." In other words, when one of us powerful, agenda-setting, character-destroying scribes has a negative opinion about someone, we ought to hold off until the object of our disaffection can pen a response and then publish it cheek-by-jowl to our own jeremiads.

Inman's attack against the press was a disgusting act of demagoguery for which he ought to be formally reprimanded by some pundits' association. Because there is a kernel of truth to his general argument that the press is too quick to condemn public figures, many people no doubt bought his specific argument that he was personally a victim of ceaseless criticism — which is patently false. Most journalists treated Inman with great deference, even fawned over him.

Press criticism of public officials in this country is a sacred ritual. If what was said of Inman had been said of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln in their day, they would have taken it as flattery, so dismal were their reviews. The first president was said to be a latent monarch; the third was accused of being an atheist, of keeping a mulatto mistress, of selling his own children born of slaves; the 16th was called an "orangutan," an "awful, woeful ass" and a "half-witted usurper."

Press criticism is a constitutionally protected right. "Debate on public issues should be uninhibited, robust and wide-open, and... may well include vehement, caustic and sometimes unpleasantly sharp attacks on government and public officials," wrote Supreme Court Justice William Brennan in a famous 1964 decision.

The press is the accountability branch of our system. It is its function to probe, reproach, hold feet to fire. So Bobby Ray Inman couldn't stand the heat of a little journalistic scrutiny. So the comments of three columnists drove him to such depths of revulsion that he packed his bags and went home. From my perspective, it was a damn good day's work.

Panel 1: A woman asks, "BILL CLINTON HAS HIS WORK CUT OUT FOR HIM... THE ECONOMY'S OUR BIGGEST CONCERN..." The man replies, "...ACTUALLY, HEALTH CARE REFORM IS OUR NO. 1 PRIORITY... THAT, AND WELFARE REFORM..."

Panel 2: The woman asks, "VIOLENT CRIME! NOW THERE'S THE TOP ISSUE ON EVERYBODY'S MIND, YES, SIR..." The man replies, "...VIOLENT CRIME - THAT'S NO. 1... ALONG WITH HEALTH CARE REFORM... AND JOBS WE NEED MORE SOLID, HIGH WAGE JOBS... RIGHT NOW!"

The New American Community

Label-crafters, your job may be done. Just as FDR gave us "The New Deal" presidency and JFK "The New Frontier," we now have a label that fits perfectly the sweeping yet seemingly unconnected reforms that will be the hallmark of the Clinton years.

Hail to the chief, William Jefferson Clinton, and his presidency of "The New American Community."

It is a label that embodies the ideas and ideals of the progressive (but not liberal) New Democrats, who are Clinton's political roots. These ideals are the core of his presidential reforms: individual opportunity; reciprocal responsibility — a compact between citizens and government; a renewed reliance upon community to strengthen institutions and especially, the family. It is a label that provides the one thing Clinton has lacked — a single conceptual framework for his package of ambitious reforms: health care and welfare systems, crime and reinventing government itself. And importantly, it is a label that carries an implicit rejection of the old liberal creed that federal programs can and must be the core of all cures.

"The New American Community." The label is not a creation of this column. It was uttered by Clinton himself — a grand phrase that was all but lost in the most godawful sentence of his State of the Union address.

It came in the final moments of his strong (but long) address, the part that presidential advisers say contained more of Clinton's personal handiwork than any other. After summing up his reforms, Clinton got to the part of the speech that Richard Nixon used to call "the lift of a driving dream."

Clinton said: "Let us weave these sturdy threads into a new American community that once more stands strong against the forces of despair and evil because everybody has a chance to walk into a better tomorrow."

It is imperative that parsers of presidents focus on the president's vision and overlook the fact that this sentence contains (as Clinton himself might phrase it) tired, huddled masses of clichés.

Clinton's New American Community presidency has come at just the right time. For Clinton's advisers have concluded from sifting various polls that the president's positive and negative ratings correlate directly to public perceptions of whether he is a liberal or an action-oriented centrist "new Democrat."

The president's pollster, Stanley Greenberg, was quoted in The Washington Post recently as saying that Clinton received his highest negative rating late last spring and early summer — when he was making news by raising taxes and ending the ban on gays in the military; voters perceived him as a "liberal." His highest ratings have come when he made news with his plans to reform health care, end welfare-as-we-know-it, reinvent government, and put more cops on the streets.

Indeed, a joint survey taken last December by a Democratic-connected firm and a Republican-connected firm provided a significant snapshot of the body politic: When people were asked which party could be counted upon to best reduce the deficit, cut government waste, and fight crime and drugs — three longtime GOP strong suits — voters gave narrow margins of confidence to the Democratic Party.

Once again, the American public seems to have moved well ahead of the polls, press and pundits — the Washington insiders who still measure each other with scales that read "left-right" or "liberal-conservative." The Washington Post article that cited the aforementioned survey data went on to quote one political analyst opining that the middle classes will again yearn for a "center-left" coalition. It quoted another expert's effort to analyze what House members will do on health care based upon how they voted on NAFTA.

They just don't get it: Voters are seeking problem-solvers. Give people new commonsense solutions and they'll disregard old labels.

Enter Bill Clinton and his New American Community. It's a new way of defining a Democratic presidency that is activist and progressive, but not liberal.

Label crafters, your job may be done.

operated by him and his wife Greta. Hummerstone's credits are numerous as well as impressive. He has over 40 years of martial arts study and research in Europe, Japan, Korea and the United States. His many belts include a 7th degree black belt in Hwarangdo, an 8th degree black belt in Aikido, a 2nd degree black belt in Judo and also holds black belts in Kobudo, Hapkido and Jujitsu. Hummerstone was named to Who's Who in American Martial Arts in 1987, Who's Who Martial Arts Elite Black Belts in 1992 and will be inducted into the World Martial Arts Hall of Fame on May 7 of this year. He has been featured in Black Belt, Karate/Kung Fu and Florida Martial Arts magazines. A certified instructor in police defensive tactics, special forces in hand-to-hand combat and teaching rape defense and rape prevention are another of his specialties.

Although this talented man has taught worldwide he admitted that his real love is working with children. In fact Hummerstone specializes in teaching handicapped children. "In all the things I've done in my life," he said, "it's the most gratifying to teach the handicapped. We teach them exactly as if they're not handicapped. We mainstream them. Some instructors don't." Simple moves that they can do with their wheelchairs are demonstrated. At times they are removed from their wheelchairs and taught self defense techniques from a reclining position. "The students have learned how to parry and use body weaknesses on attackers," he said. "There are certain points that you can't strengthen." Hummerstone pointed out areas on the face, such as the eyes, and underneath the nose that a simple poke or squeeze may send an attacker to his knees. "Karate doesn't require a lot of physical strength," he said. "Strength is a plus, but not required to protect yourself." A reminder is frequently given to his students that they are never to hurt another person unless their life is being threatened. Students are encouraged to walk away from a fight if possible but always facing the possible attacker in case of a potential problem. Tips are also regularly mentioned about never speaking to a stranger, taking candy from them or riding with someone they do not know. "What makes a child a great martial artist is because they're such great mimics," he said. "Students, whether in wheelchairs or standing, learn how to react in life-threatening situations. They gain self control which carries over to other aspects of their lives." Hummerstone commented, "We use the body to train the mind, instead of the mind to train the body although they both work in concert. We train the body and the spirit."

Many of Hummerstone's classes are filled with children, even though his skills have been taught to toddlers and up to senior citizens. He prides himself on encouraging students to realize their personal goals rather than defeating opponents. Some Karate instructors sponsor competitions and trophies. Hummerstone stated, "Competition is extra pressure on kids. They need self confidence, concentration skills and a positive peer group they can identify with." He felt that many times competitive meets can defeat the confidence that they are trying to build. "The main thing is our kids," he said. "They're our future. Whether you teach them good, bad or indifferent, that's the way they'll be."

Hummerstone will be participating in the Mardi Gras Festival at All Souls Catholic School on February 12. He and many of his students will be demonstrating self defense techniques.

lardo, Cor Catena, CEO; Osceola Regional Hospital, Kissimmee, Mark Aanonson, CEO; and at month's end, Winter Park Memorial Hospital, Joseph R. Swedish, president/CEO, will join the ranks.

The combined company is the largest health care services provider in the United States, employing more than 130,000 people in 192 hospitals in 26 states, England and Switzerland. The U.S. hospitals are spread mostly across the southern half of the United States, with the greatest market in Texas, Florida and Georgia.

Health care reform didn't start in Washington according to officials at Columbia Healthcare Corporation. While health care reform proposals are still being debated in Washington, D.C., the organization is integrating providers into a true system of health care.

"With the socialization of medical needs in the United States the president is planning for the future. I see four or five major healthcare providers supplying high quality, low cost services to communities nationwide," said Vinson. "Columbia/HCA will be one of those suppliers."

The strategy of building networks of providers is to combine hospitals, physicians, outpatient centers, home health agencies and psychiatric hospitals and linking them to a local healthcare system. Local networks simplify the healthcare system for consumers, make it easier for large businesses and insurance companies to purchase all healthcare services at once, and make the system more efficient.

"Columbia/HCA's strategy of developing local networks of comprehensive healthcare services is designed to provide quality care, cost effectively," said Richard L. Scott, president and chief executive officer of Columbia/HCA. "Our commitment to the communities we serve is evidenced by the independence of local management to work with physicians to maximize quality and service."

"We are excited to be a part of Columbia/HCA," said Vinson. "Our network of facilities makes us a leading provider of healthcare services in this community and we offer a comprehensive array of accessible, high quality healthcare services. In addition, this system makes each of our facilities well positioned for any healthcare reform measure passed both statewide and nationally."

managed at the local level. All decisions about operation of services, staffing, marketing and community relations and other management issues are made in view of local needs and market conditions.

A portion of HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital's expansion plans have been placed on hold. The radiology department expansion and the parking deck for visitors, patients and employees has been postponed. The second cardiac catheterization laboratory is expected to open in December of 1994 or January of 1995.

"Because of this transition, some of the remaining expansion has been put on hold," said Vinson. "But the equipment for the second open heart surgical suite was delivered last week and lobby renovations will begin this month."

The finalization of the merger with Winter Park Memorial Hospital is tentatively set for Feb. 28 to complete the Columbia Park Healthcare System.

"After today, 95 percent of the population in Florida will be within 20 minutes of a Columbia/HCA facility," said Vinson. "That's overwhelming."

If more than one person qualifies, and no one receives a majority vote, a run off election has been tentatively scheduled for April 19.

This will be Sawyer's second bid for a position on the commission. In November, 1992, she ran against David J. Meador for seat 3 on the commission. Meador had served on seat 1, but changed the seat for the '92 election.

Sawyer has attended almost every meeting of the commission during the past several years. She served as a member of the Charter Revision Committee. The candidate winning this

Clinton: US ground forces won't be fighting in Bosnia

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Wary of a Vietnam-like quagmire, President Clinton is steering the United States away from a major combat role in Bosnia even though American warplanes may be called upon to help silence the guns of Sarajevo.

Clinton said Wednesday that U.S. ground forces would not take part in NATO's newly authorized mission to get rid of the more than 500 heavy guns pointed down on Sarajevo by Bosnian Serbs. However, he acknowledged there would be risks from Serb air defenses for U.S. pilots on attack missions.

"There is no such thing as a risk-free air operation," the president said. "I don't want to mislead the American people on that." However, he said Serb air defenses "are sufficiently rudimentary that the risks are minimal."

Revolted by the slaughter last week of 68 people in a mortar attack in Sarajevo's central marketplace, NATO allies overcame months of doubts and hesitation and approved a U.S.-French ultimatum giving Bosnian Serbs 10 days to withdraw their guns 13 miles from Sarajevo or face air strikes.

"We hope that the Bosnian Serb actions will make air strikes unnecessary," a grim-faced Clinton said at a White House news conference. "But no one should doubt NATO's resolve. NATO is now set to act."

The Bosnian showdown is a gamble for Clinton, testing Western resolve on an issue that he's called the most vexing foreign policy problem in the world. The administration has been groping for a coherent policy ever since Clinton's recommendations for air strikes and rearming the outgunned Bosnian Muslims were roundly rejected early last year.

Even when the allies appeared to agree on air attacks in August, the threats proved hollow as the United Nations and Western allies refused to use force.

Clinton briefed congressional leaders on NATO's decision.

"I am hopeful that this action will encourage all parties to renew their efforts for a negotiated settlement to this tragic conflict," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

But Sen. Dan Coats, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, asked what would happen if the Bosnian Serbs move their artillery and then "after a lull, renew their aggression."

"The prestige of the United States is on the line. We must ask if the president and the country have the willingness to see this policy through," said Coats, R-Ind.

Under the new threat of allied attacks, the Serbs arranged a quick cease-fire and promised to withdraw their artillery and mortars. Mindful of numerous other cease-fires that have collapsed in 22 months of fighting around Sarajevo, American officials reserved judgment on whether the Serb's promises were real or just a ruse.

Only a day earlier, Radovan Karadzic, the Bosnian Serb leader, had warned, "We will shoot down every plane we can" if they attack Serb positions.

Many of the allies had to be persuaded to drop their opposition to an ultimatum. Clinton expressed sympathy for the French, British, Canadian, Dutch and Spanish governments, which have large peacekeeping forces in the Balkans that could be subject to retaliatory strikes.

In addition to the new military threat, Clinton said the United States would try to reinvigorate peace talks among Serbs, Muslims and Croats due to resume today in Geneva.

International mediators are promoting a partition plan that would leave the Muslim-led Bosnian government with control of only a fraction of the former Yugoslav republic.

From caramels to hugs, Hershey marks 100 years of sweet success

By MELISSA H. ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

HERSHEY, Pa. — With a sweet dream of selling candy to tourists, a budding confectioner named Milton S. Hershey moved to Philadelphia in 1876.

Failure, disappointment and illness were his first products.

After six profit-scarce years of making candies day in and day out, the overworked Hershey collapsed — and so did his business.

He would try and fail for four more years before a formula for extra-goosy caramels became the catalyst for what is now one of the best-known and most successful food companies in U.S. history.

"Most people remember Hershey because most of us were brought up on Hershey bars when we were kids," said Ray Broekel, a historian from Ipswich, Mass., who has written two books on chocolate. "It's become more or less a symbol of the United States."

On Wednesday, Hershey Food Corp. celebrated the 100th birthday of the Hershey Chocolate Co. with 10 chocolate cakes arranged on a 350-pound chocolate-covered pedestal. Chocolate bars with old-fashioned labels are also being sold nationwide for a limited time.

Today, Hershey Foods Corp. employs 14,000 people worldwide. Last year's sales totaled nearly $3.5 billion, and the company's net income was $193 million. Hershey claims 42 percent of the domestic chocolate candy market, although it lags behind M&M-Mars and Nestle Food Co. overseas.

The founder gave his name to a town, and created what is arguably the simplest, yet most famous confection in the country: the Kiss.

In the beginning, though, it was just Mr. Hershey cranking out the candies.

After losing his Philadelphia business, Hershey went to Denver on the advice of his father, who wanted him to cash in on the silver boom. But by the time Hershey got there, most of the silver was gone.

In dealing with America's health care crisis, let's not overlook the obvious.

The meat industry is fattening America's health costs. Meat-eaters are so unhealthy that they cost the nation more than $60 billion in health costs every single year, compared to costs if they were vegetarians. And that's just counting the increases in heart disease, cancer, hypertension, diabetes, and gallstones that meat-based diets cause.

Meat-Eaters' Extra Health Costs

Heart Disease	$24 billion
Hypertension	$8.7 billion
Cancer	$18.8 billion
Diabetes	$4.6 billion
Gallstones	$4.8 billion
Total	$60.9 billion

The reasons are simple. All animal products contain cholesterol (chicken has as much cholesterol as beef) and fat (chicken has nearly as much as beef). And animal products don't have what your body needs most: complex carbohydrates and fiber, not to mention vitamin C.

If Americans based their diets on the New Four Food Groups -- grains, vegetables, fruits and legumes (beans, peas, and lentils), they would eliminate all the cholesterol and most of the fat in their diets. And they would stop taking such a big bite out of our nation's financial resources.

Chief Osceola's life studied

Historical Society elects Whiting president

Dr. James M. Denham, assistant professor of history at Florida Southern College, addressed the annual meeting of the Seminole County Historical Society on Thursday evening, Feb. 3, at the County Agriculture Center auditorium.

Dr. Denham discussed the research he has done at the Florida State Archives, the South Carolina Archives, the National Archives and at West Point.

Osceola was referred to in all reports to military leaders in Washington, D.C. as Billy Powell, the name he received from his Scots father. The maps Dr. Denham exhibited showed the forced removal of the Red Stick Creeks, Osceola's tribe, from the Montgomery, Ala. area to Florida and the rapid assimilation of the Creeks by the Seminoles.

His death due to malaria while in captivity in Fort Moultrie at Sullivan's Island, S.C., was discussed.

After the historical meeting, the Historical Society members elected officers for 1994. Elected were Lorraine Whiting, president; Paul Mikler, vice-president; Kay Bartholomew, secretary and John Bistline, treasurer.

Whistles play happy tune for couple

DEAR ABBY: I can imagine the husband's despair (described in a recent letter in your column)—when his wife dashed off in a crowd, leaving him nervous and anxious.

I had a wife who did that. Complaining was useless. I finally devised a solution. I purchased two whistles, which we both hung around our necks when we traveled abroad.

One day we became separated between flights in a crowded airport. Frantic, I blew my whistle! Then I heard a responding whistle in the distance. We joined each other and made our connection.

Those whistles were the best investment I ever made.

JOHN GIBA, TEQUESTA, FLA.

DEAR JOHN GIBA: What a coincidence! On my keychain is a whistle — the kind police use when they're directing traffic. It was given to me about 30 years ago by my husband. With it was a line he borrowed from a Humphrey Bogart/Lauren Bacall movie: "If you want anything — just whistle."

DEAR ABBY: Your letters about bringing one's own food to a restaurant brought back memories.

In the early 1950s, when I was a lad of 4 or 5 living in New Orleans, my mother and grandmother took me to a very fancy restaurant in the French Quarter for lunch. I ordered my favorite meal — fried chicken and creamed corn.

The waiter returned to tell us that they were out of creamed corn. I'm told that I raised such a fuss that my mother left the restaurant, found a grocery store nearby, purchased a small can of creamed corn, and asked the chef to please warm it for me. (He did.)

ADVICE

I only vaguely recall the incident, but my grandmother who has been dead for many years, used to tell that story every time she saw me.

Fortunately, I've outgrown my insistence to have everything my way, but that incident will forever haunt me. Was I a spoiled child, or what?

(REV.) CARLO J. ZABBIA, ROMAN CATHOLIC DIOCESE OF DALLAS

DEAR FATHER ZABBIA: If you weren't a spoiled child, you certainly behaved like one, but obviously you turned out all right. Most children, on demanding creamed corn, would have gotten creamed.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Old-Fashioned," who wanted to know if anyone else found the in-your-face immorality offensive.

I am a 23-year-old female who is a senior in college. I have been in a serious relationship with a loving man for 3½ years. We have agreed that whenever we live together, it will be after we have married. Most of my friends have similar beliefs.

I guess my main point is this: Don't give up on the present generation. There are still some of us who don't feel that living together is morally right; in our "politically correct" society, it's difficult to speak up against a growing majority.

Hysterectomy calls for second opinion

DEAR DR. GOTT: Are hysterectomies absolutely necessary? My menstrual periods stopped almost a year ago. I have no problems with bleeding or cramping. I do have small fibroids that don't give me any trouble, though. So why, then, does my general practitioner feel I should undergo surgery?

DEAR READER: Hysterectomy (removal of the uterus) used to be a commonly performed operation. Women underwent the procedure for a variety of reasons, some valid (such as cancer) and some trivial (such as contraception). Today, the rate for hysterectomy is far lower than previously, because alternative therapies are available and women are much less likely to undergo unnecessary surgery, urged solely at the discretion of their doctors.

I do not know why your doctor has advised surgery. You do not seem to have a compelling reason to do so. Based on the limited information you supply, I'd have to conclude that, in your case, hysterectomy may not be necessary.

Nonetheless, your doctor may have a specific reason, which he is not sharing with you, for encouraging the operation. In all fairness, before criticizing your family physician for being too aggressive, discuss the situation with him. Even if he remains adamant, you should still obtain a second opinion from a gynecologist, the specialist who would operate on you. In my view, hysterectomy is far from necessary unless cancer is present or a woman experiences repeated episodes of uncontrollable bleeding. Fibroids, benign uterine growths, are exceedingly common and, as a general rule, do not constitute an indication for hysterectomy.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope in P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

How do you feel when your partner makes a mistake that costs your side points? Do you accept that he is trying his best and that no one is perfect? Or do you feel that he is playing badly on purpose to annoy you? If so, you have something in common with Rita Rudner, who said: "I love being married. It's so great to find that one special person you want to annoy for the rest of your life."

In today's deal, South made a misplay that would even strain the patience of some saints. But many would make the same mistake. (And, it is true, in real life the cards would often forgive the error — but never in a newspaper column.) An initial spade lead would have defeated the contract, but West understandably selected a diamond.

Thinking that it made no difference, and just in case West had underled the ace, declarer called for dummy's king. East won with the ace and returned a low diamond. After winning with the eight, it was easy for West to switch to a spade. This set up four defensive tricks: one spade, two diamonds and one club. That scenario was the only danger to the contract. However, if declarer plays the diamond two from the dummy at trick one, he can keep West off the lead until after 10 winners have been established.

East wins with the diamond jack and cashes the ace. But what can he do now? Suppose he switches to a heart. Declarer draws trumps and leads the club king. When West wins with the ace (on this trick or the next), declarer claims the remainder.
