Truce Between Pro Leagues And Colleges Is Likely This Week

CHICAGO, Aug. 20, (1)—Re-presentatives of the National Col-legiate Athletic Association this week will meet separately with Commissioners Bert Bell of the National Football League and Jonas Ingram of the All-America Conference to "clear the fog" on collegiate players.

Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson, secretary-treasurer of the NCAA and Big Nine commissioner, said NCAA officials would confer with Bell on Thursday and Ingram on

Last week Bell said he would propose a three-point program to the NCAA to effect "perfect har-mony between colleges and pro football."

Bell's main suggestion will be that no player with college eligibility can be signed in his league without consent of affected col-lege officials.

That will be the crux, undoubtedly, of conversations not only between the NCAA folk and the National League, but also with the All-America awhich caused some eye-brow lifting when the New York Yankees signed Buddy Young, Illinois Negro Halfback, who had collegiate competition remaining with the Rose Bowl Cham-

Wilson said both leagues have constitutional restrictions against signing college players until their classes graduate, but that there seemed to be considerable "clasitcity" in interpretation of 'that

"I suppose there isn't much we can do, except holler, if things don't improve," Wilson said, "but I think the professional group realizes that, as in no other sport, their future stars must come from college ranks and it would do well to keep our good will."

Bell's two other recommends. tions are that colleges paymit their employes and game officials to officiate in the Ntaional League and that colleges remove "restric-tions or discriminations" against a professional football player becoming a college coaching staff puppet state is to be invoked as puppet state is to be invoked as the next major step. It is hard to escape any other conclusion concerning Friday night's announcement by General Markos vinades, leader of the guerrillas defying the Greek government in the north, that he had undertaken to administer a "democratic government" until "provisional government" until "provisional government" could be formed. News of the fighting indicates the Markos forces are consolidating a foothold from which it may be difficult for the present; Greek army to oust them. And behind them are friendly territories into which they may retire when too hard pressed ard from which help will be expected.

The Greek government has been presileting such a development redicting such a development or some weeks: first, formation of a guerrilla government; sec-ond, its recognition as the legiti-mate Greek government by the sintes which are blocking the United Nations action; third, direct; and undisguised aid and support to such a regime by those states. They would argue that such aid was legitimate as any given the Athens government by the United States or any other power, And then the battle lines really would be drawn.

From time immemorial, the gypsy tribes of Europe have lived a life of their own inside the framework of whatever country they happened to rest in. They have paid no attention to the law of the land, and have had their own rules which covered every contingency.

The gypsies of western Hungary, according to Theodore Andrica, now have a king who wishes to come under the aegis of the local government and feels the need of its co-operation in solving some of his problems. His reform program covers several time-honored gypsy customs, and has met with bitter opposition from his subjects. He will not permit new-born babies to be held over fire; he favors legal marriages instead of a bare announcement of intention; he would countenance legal divorce instead of permitting a husband to bite off the nose of his erring wife.
