This is NEWSPAPER Week!

We are capitalizing "newspaper" because it needs to be so treated. Especially in the minds of the public, for whom it is the most effective defense against those who would distort and betray the high principle of FREEDOM, which has always been the guiding light of publishers, editors and reporters. We come to this week in 1970 while under attack by political sharpshooters, under pressure from self-seeking groups and while the economics of our trade become harder and harder taskmasters. Yet we giory in the challenges. Especially does The Herald rejoice in its ability to do what has been under attack in many comparable situations. The absentee landlord has become more and cities and towns where those far from the place where the newspaper is published and edited call the

In our own personal experience as reporter and editor, we have watched this sad trend take place over nearly half-a-century in areas where the result has been a famine of information for those who want two-sided, factual reporting and editorial comment spurred by the concern of the resident writer

This is the operation which keeps public officials alert to public needs and sounds the alarm when public officials stumble and In the case of The Herald our reporters not only fulfill this professional obligation, but they are fellow-citizens and when the typewriter is stilled, they are all very active members of the community.

Thus the news columns, sports columns, society columns, church page, editorial page and pictures re-flect this substance of understanding and professional competence which cannot be gained second-hand. ### Worth Noting Well

- A news release from Klamath Falls, Oregon, recounts how the sheriff of Klamath County has proven himself to be a man of conviction. When the state sent him new cars from a state purchasing agent, he refused them on the grounds that local automobile dealers should have the business. In a letter to the County paying merchants could have provided these vehicles!" The Commissioners had bought the cars through a state agency, because they were available at a lower price. Naturally, the price of a cer purchased from a state purchasing dealer. Private car dealers pay taxes. State purchasing agencies do not. The same principle applies in everything from tax-exempt federal electric power to government printed envelopes. In noting the incident, a local Oregon editor asked. "Just how far are the citizens of this state going to go in allowing state agencies to compete with local taxpaying private business-es?" A lot of people in a lot of states could well

ask themselves this same question.

What was this business the other day Wayne County deputies were called to an address where complaints said there was a disturbance Officers arrived to find a crowd of happy cheering, excited young men. They were having a cockroach race. Yeah, a COCKROACH RACE! They'd put the cockroaches in a cup, shake them up and dump them out. The roach making it to a given line first was proclaimed the win-

What do you know about that! It could catch on and become a national thing. Might even end up with a Cockroach Rose Bowl, with a queen and everything. We can see it now: "Here she comes, Miss Cockroach of 1975!" On second thought, maybe we'd might just as well forget it. - Goldsboro (N.C.) News-Argus

The latest in a number of reported attempted child molestations occurred yesterday afternoon when an effort was made to abduct an eightyear-old Bear Lake school girl.

The middle-aged man with gray hair was frightened away when the o 11-year-old sister of the girl appeared on the scene, according to information furnished the sheriff's department by the mother of the two girls.

The girls' mother called county authorities after 4:30 p.m. Monday, when the incident reportedly happened at the intersection of Sunset Avenue and Balmy Beach Drive in Bear Lake. The younger girl had just alighted from the bu near her home, when a man, described as gray-haired and wearing gray pants and a white shirt, appeared pickup truck with a camper attached.

As the child began to cry, her older sister arrived and the man drove quickly away. A possible clue to the owner of the car may be available as investigators believe they have at least a partial license number and a check of registrations

Investigators also are talking with county school bus drivers in efforts to determine if they have observed a gray-haired man parked along bus routes when children are being loaded and unloaded. Since the opening of school this term there have been several reports of attempted child molestations but thus far no child has been reported abducted. Just last week, there were two separate reports a reporter telephoned the "exin Sanford in the area of Summerlin and Gelery Ave- perta" trying to identify the nues of men attempting to get small elementary flower. One said it was a sunschool children into their vehicles.
