The subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in all Christian Science churches next Sunday is "God The Only Cause And Creator." As this Lesson is developed it reveals the goodness and joy ever at hand as God's creation is understood.

A verse from Revelation (15:3) provides the Golden Text: "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of the universe." This statement from Isaiah (45:5) is among the Bible readings: "Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness; let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together; I the Lord have created it."

Included among correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy are the following: "Did God, Truth, create error? No! Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter?" (287:11-13). "All that is made is the work of God, and all is good" (521:6-9).

Sunday may be observed as Family Day. Parents and children are invited to sit together in the church when the family is ruled according to God's Word, angels might be asked to stay a night with us, and they would not find themselves out of place. They would be at home in a Christian family.

"Decisive Babe of the World"
"Dr. Fosdick preached a Christmas sermon a few years ago called 'The Decisive Babes of the World.' Only the wise men see that a baby can be more decisive than a battle. He reminds us that in 1809 most people might have thought the great one was Napoleon who was master of Europe, but only a madonna would have perceived in that unhappy year the greatness latent in the unnoticed births of Darwin, Lincoln, Gladstone, Tennyson, Edgar Allen Poe, Oliver Wendell Holmes, and Cyrus W. McCormick. Today, amid the blare of the trumpets of war and the clash of embattled armies, we may be inclined to think that the conquering power lies with the dictators, with Stalin who boasts the mightiest army of the world. But be not deceived! The power of true greatness may even now be potentially confined in some obscure baby born this year whose tiny hand may in time form the 'par-the-world.' Of some baby it may forever be said: 'Yet in the dark streets shineth the everlasting light; The hopes and fears of all the years Are met in thee tonight.' Charles H. Heimath

Door-To-Door Peddler Dies Out As Modern Society Finds Substitutes

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK—(AP)—America's first department store—the door-to-door peddler—has fallen on rough times.

His occupational hazards used to be flat feet, angry watch dogs, and elderly housewives who would listen to him give a half-hour sales spiel and then say:

"Young man, I can't hear a word you're saying. I'm deaf. But whatever you're selling, we don't want any."

But today his greatest problems are local ordinances adopted by some 400 communities that ban most house-to-house salesmen altogether. The U. S. Supreme Court has just ruled that towns have a right to do this.

Its action shows how far the itinerant peddler has fallen in public favor—and how the pattern of our lives has changed. The Yankee peddler is as old as the nation. In the beginning he was a kind of traveling troubador of commerce, carrying his wares upon his back from one wilderness community to another.

He was a welcome figure indeed to lonely dwellers in the backwoods. The menfolk would halt their work to hear his gossip of political and high life in the towns. The womenfolk loved to see him open his magic pack and bring out his glittering merchandise—spices, thread, gaily fabrics, change toys. And after the ecstasy of bargaining was done, the peddler sat down to a big free home-cooked meal, and then trudged on his way.

Later, as he prospered, he bought a horse and a cart and added a line of patent medicines. But he still was welcome, his visits helped keep people in touch with events beyond their own neighborhoods. And the hospitality of most households was still expressed by a phrase, "welcome, stranger."

The peddler declined in importance as the jumpy grove, as the railroad and the automobile served the town and countryside together. Why buy from the peddler when you had a bigger choice at a nearby general or department store? Why ask him what was going on when you already had a

My New York

Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—It is dusk of a rainy day as I write this, and by looking out my living room window I can see they are still there, standing on the big rocks at the shore of the Hudson in the shadow of the George Washington bridge—the fishermen. They baffle me.

This is a city dedicated to the making of money, the incidental pursuit of culture and the accumulation of all things cosmopolitan. The number of bathrooms in your duplex, the brand of rye you pour on the rocks, the actresses who will nod hello to you when you walk into Sardi's; these are some of the important components of living in New York.

There is a small percentage of frustrated athletes, and these lost souls withdraw to the Central Park tennis courts, the public golf links and the smoky bowling alleys whenever they can get away from seeking the buck. The city tolerates them, bemusedly.

But fishermen! You couldn't get further from the metropolitan motif.

These, I figure, are the real trapped ones. These are the ones who belong hip-deep in a Scottish salmon stream, or standing in the bow of a trawler off the Grand Banks, or sitting in one of those chair contraptions off Key West with a tuna bellying around at the end of the string, hundreds of feet away. How did they ever end up here, in Bottom?

I SEE THEM COMING DOWN THE HILL of 181st street, as early as 7 o'clock, if I'm coming home with the milkman or getting up for some important interview, like breakfast with Ava Gardner. Not just on the weekends. Every day.

The representative one has a pipe stuck into his mouth, a tin can or a boat-up creel under his arm, his fishing rod in the other hand and a morning paper in his pocket. The clothes are old, the face is creased and tanned and non-committal, the stride is determined.

The rest of the city can fool around with childish dildoes, getting into and out of subways, adding up figures, typing out reports, selling vegetables. These are men who know what they are about, and it's important in the scheme of things. There are fish in the Hudson and they must be caught.

The shad are running now; across the river on the New Jersey side you can see the markings of the big shad nets, but the fishermen pay them no never mind. They make their way through the sparse greenery of the park along the West Side highway, clamber onto the rocks and lay their gear slowly, carefully down.

Then they bait their poles—for they have two. They rear back and cast the first line, and when the sinker has plunked into the dirty river water 40 or 50 feet out, they plant that rod between rocks or into soft dirt. Then they cast the other, and seat themselves slowly on the stones. With one hand they hold the second rod; with the other, they spread out the morning paper and see what the city has been about, in the dark night.

WHAT GETS ME IS THAT THIS GOES ON, white, at their backs, eight million persons are going about the frantic business of life in the largest city in the world. A tie salesman in a Herald Square department store is telling a customer he hopes to die if he can find that kind of silk for less than a dollar more anywhere in New York, and a young actress is making cat-eyes at a producer in a 44th street cafe.

Somebody is cutting out a pattern in a Seventh avenue dress factory and a broker in Nassau street is asking somebody over the phone for more margin. Life is real, life is earnest—and here are these weird ones, sitting on the edge of a river with cheese sandwiches in their pockets and not the faintest idea of what a good duodenal ulcer feels like.

When the night comes and I'm drifting back for a clean shirt, or some fresh money for a poker game, or a reason of home life, or wooing the muse over a hot typewriter, I can see their coming back up the little hill from the river.

They still have the morning paper carefully folded in their pockets, the rods, the creels and the non-committal faces. They don't look any different than they did eight hours before. They haven't knifed a friend, cheated a customer, duped a girl or made a buck. All they have to show for the day is a lousy little fish or two.

The dopea—and I wish I was one of them.

WAR'S PERILS are learned the hard way by "Tiger," a two-month-old kitten, holding out a bandaged paw to "Spot," a young dog similarly tamed with gauze. The sets served as models for a civil defense training class held by the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Owners are urged to enroll for training on the theory that hysterical animals could be a real menace in an emergency. (Internationally)

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

JOHN GOULD, author of And One to Grow On, and Farmer Takes a Wife, and publisher and editor of the highly individualistic and colorful Lisbon Falls (Maine) Enterprise, recently set out to list everything in which he trafficked at his newspaper office. He led off, naturally, with all the books authored by himself and family, and then continued as follows:

"We also sell high grade printing both in black and in color, and can usually get your job out for you in a reasonable time. We are ready to print blotters and cards to stick in door for political candidates, and guarantee delivery in time for effective primary campaigning. We can print the pictures so it looks like you, or so you can put 'Ho, Ho, Ho—Fearless' under it and not make people laugh. We have been printing political blotters on the same press since the days of the Greenback movement, and have never yet got stuck for the bill. All political printing is strictly in advance.

"We also sell subscriptions and advertising, both of which are considered good investments from the point of view of the most for your money. We don't know how anybody can get more out of his money than buying an ad in our paper. One man advertised prefabricated banana storage sheds with us once, and we were interested in knowing how he made out. He said he didn't sell any, but it was worth more than he paid just to have his name in the paper with no special connected with it. Another man advertised goose eggs one spring, and he sold so many he wore out 17 geese between April and August, just laying eggs. So, you can't miss."

Inexpensive Editions

The publishers who have made the works of the great thinkers and writers of the world available to the reading public in inexpensive editions have provided a valuable service. For too long a time ownership of good books was an expensive thing and people who had to live on strict budgets depended almost entirely on libraries to supply their reading needs.

Creative Teaching

No job is more important than that of teachers. It calls for people with the imagination to see the wonder and excitement of work that other people may regard as dull and ordinary. Some artists create with music or words, with paint or with marble. They hope at best to capture and reflect the appearance of reality and living experience.

Naturalist Notes by MRS. J. H. BILBREY

The regular meeting of the Seminole Audubon Society was held at the Sanford Garden Center Monday evening, May 21. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Vinup, the meeting was presided over by Mr. George Swartz, vice-president.

After the business meeting Mr. Merritt Farrar, Executive Director of the Florida Audubon Society, gave a very interesting lecture on hawk identification. Mr. Farrar illustrated his talks with a large chart which he had prepared, showing sketches of the four classes of hawks: accipiters, the only true hawks, which includes the Sharp-shinned and Cooper's; the Buteos, including the Red-tailed, the Red-shouldered and Broadwing hawks; falcons, comprised of the Sparrow, Pigeon and Duck hawks, and Harriers. The Marsh hawk belongs to the Harrier classification. Almost all hawks are beneficial, living principally on rodents and grasshoppers.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Myers will leave Monday for Philadelphia, Pa., to attend the graduation of their son Andrew L. Myers, Jr., from Temple Medical School on June 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sheldon and daughter, Deborah, are expected to arrive from Florida State University to spend sometime with Col. and Mrs. W. T. Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Hockenbury left Wednesday for their home in Illinois after spending the winter with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Herron, who accompanied the Hockenburys home.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. McCall, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Carter and Mr. and Mrs. Tom George have returned from Miami Beach where they attended the Florida Seafarers Association which was held at the Monte Carlo Hotel.

Miss Barbara Ann Eidenfield will leave Florida State University Saturday for Jacksonville where she will spend several days visiting relatives before coming to Sanford to spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Eidenfield.

M/Sgt. and Mrs. Henry G. Steele and family, have arrived home from Ft. Riley, Kan., to spend their vacation with Col. and Mrs. W. T. Johnson. M/Sgt. Steele will return in two weeks and Mrs. Steele and family will remain here for the summer.

Miss Mary Louise Meriwether and C. J. Meriwether and Mrs. B. J. Lacour and daughter Lynn of Daytona Beach and Mrs. W. R. May of Bradenton left this morning for Charlottesville, Va., to attend the graduation exercises at the University of Virginia where Dick Meriwether will receive his degree in Doctor of Medicine.

Miss Sophia McDougal, whose engagement and approaching marriage to A. Kyle Shoemaker, Jr., was announced today by her mother, Mrs. George McDougal.

Nolan Home Is Scene Of Church Meeting Sophia McDougal, Shoemaker To Wed

The W.C.S. of the Ebenezer Methodist Church met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Wilbur Nolan. Mrs. Robert Lee led the group in a prayer and reports from the standing committees. The pledge for the new year was given and it was voted to change the meeting from the first Tuesday in the month to the first Wednesday.

Blue Springs a few months ago and some of the members had the thrill of recognizing themselves in the May field trip turned into a boat trip to Lemon Bluff. Mr. E. J. Galt, of Geneva, very kindly took the group in his boat, the "Huckleberry Finn", leaving Blue Springs shortly after seven o'clock A.M. It was a lovely day for a boat trip, and everyone thoroughly enjoyed it. The usual number of summertime, heans, cecets and fish were seen along the way, but when we reached Lemon Bluff, most of the young birds had returned to the outdoors of the farm.

A few songbirds were seen and a hawk and some warblers were identified by their cries and songs respectively. Just as interesting as the bird life were the huge, stately magnolias, the wild orchids and the Indian mound found there. After a long hike, we returned to the boat, pleasantly tired and utterly famished. After lunch and a rest, the return trip got under way, stopping briefly at Mullet Lake Park to look for shore bird nests.

And so home, tired, sunburned and happy.

Garden Gate Garden Club Members To Attend Courses

Home plants can be moved outdoors into the garden this month. Many Ferns, Crotons, Palms, Anulistras, Sansevierias and Begonias can be used to good advantage to make the flower border attractive. Most of these thrive best in a semi-shaded spot. Place each pot on a cushion of peat moss to prevent the roots of the plant from going through the drainage hole and into the ground. Azaleas have their last feeding this month. Use an Azalea and Camellia fertilizer with a 4-8-8 or 5-10-10 formula. When the plants are close together in bed, spread 2 1/2 to 3 pounds over 100 square feet. For single plants, feeding consists of 1/2 to 1 pound, depending upon the size of the plant. Do not scratch the fertilizer into the soil. Apply it to the surface and water it in.

Make cuttings of Azaleas and Camellias now. New wood should be half ripe. Use a sharp knife to take cuttings. Watch for late frost on Azaleas and scale on Camellias. Lintana is useful in combating these pests during the hot months. Cuttings should be made when temperatures are not over 90 degrees. Chrysanthemums are now growing steadily through the summer months. That is the whole secret of good Chrysanthemum culture. Once the plants are started to back of food or moisture, further growth is seriously impaired. Feed monthly and never let them dry out.

Flower seeds can still be sown, for there is time to have plenty of blooms in Zinnias, Petunias and Marigolds. Petunias may also be sown now for next year's bloom. Be sure to start these in a shaded frame or lath-covered area where the seedlings will not be scorched by the hot dry sun.

Librarians Enjoy Cruise Upon River

The Library Staff of the Seminole High School enjoyed a river trip aboard the "Huckleberry Finn" Thursday.

The group cruised to Lemon Bluff where supper was served on the boat. Those invited were Suzy Brown, Nancy Webster, Charlotte Swain, Stella Browning, Jean Wacker and Edwina Spivey. Also Leavelle Odien, Lucille Norman, Marjorie Holton, Marjorie King, Betty Hamp, Miss Edna Chiffenden, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Morris and Mr. and Mrs. Edson Trott.

Use wooden or metal stakes stout enough to support the growth. Infla, wire-embossed paper ties or shoe strings may be used to fasten stems to supports. Tying is a weekly job on Dahlias and Chrysanthemums to prevent the fast-developing stems from breaking.

This is a good time to prune climbing roses, after they have finished blooming. Prune out the oldest canes and dead branches and trim out faded flowers. Starting blooming, climbing bear becomes an weed of the previous season. If pruned later, many of next year's blooms will be lost.

Stake tall plants from now on.

Korean War

area. Allied infantrymen caved up ridges. With grenades and bayonets they dug North Koreans out of fortified dugouts and deep foxholes where they have withstood artillery and bombing for days.

All along the front Reds are digging new hiding places from air attack. They are drafting civilians to speed the job of going underground, said Maj. General Frank F. Everest, commander of the 5th Air Force.

New tunnels are dug wherever there are no available railroad tunnels, mines or caves in which they can hide from fire and fragmentation bombs.

They made no cover for Chinese still in Chorwon. U. N. artillery was looking down their throats from a 2,700 foot high mountain (Kodae). The town itself was already flattened.

Long toms and thundering howitzers centered on the roadway to Kumhwa, and on Chinese in hills before Chorwon.

A driving rainstorm Friday slowed the Allied ground advance. The Reds tried to stem the attack Thursday by opening one of the 14 gates in Chorwon dam. A two foot wall of water swept down the Hantan River but failed to knock out any Allied bridges.

The flood subsided quickly and the river waters were back to normal Friday.

A U. N. briefing officer called the flood attempt "a good sign."

"It showed how desperately they want to hold Chorwon and the important lateral road it commands," he explained.

If the Reds withdraw, officers said, they would be capable of fighting a month-long withdrawal as they pull back to a new line probably anchored on Wonsan.

Red trucks still streamed south with more supplies. And the Chinese still have much heavy equipment in the Chorwon-Kumhwa-Pyongyang triangle.

Allied officers repeated that if Chorwon falls, all of the "Iron Triangle" will fall. The lands are flat, easily covered by tanks. "They can't very well have us in there," one officer said, "if they want to stay south of the Wonsan line."

"If we get Chorwon we will have cut his (the Reds) only good east-west road in the big plain where he builds up for his drives."

The Eighth Army had expected the Chinese to launch a new attack before Chorwon.

"But," a U. N. officer said, "we don't think he has much left that we haven't chewed up lately. I don't think he can stop us this time."

The U. N. made no summary of Communist casualties. But the North Korean Pyongyang radio said 6,100 Allied troops were the eastern front. It also said killed or wounded Thursday on 12 U. N. planes were shot down.

On the eastern front, AP correspondent George McArthur said, Allied troops were harassed through the night by heavy mortar fire.

They jumped off Friday morning in new attacks on North Korean lines and on ridges screening mortars and artillery which have been firing on the Allies for five days.

"One officer on the front said it was the steadiest Red fire of the war."

"The enemy definitely is fighting a defensive action on the eastern front," an Allied officer said. "On the western front, the Reds now appear to have shifted from a defensive type of battle to a delaying action."

Marshall Visit

Marshall had this to say about the 38th Parallel, once the dividing line between Communist north and Republican South Korea.

"The Army will be handled in the most effective manner possible. The 38th is just a figure of speech now."

In Washington ambassadors of 16 nations which have troops fighting with U. N. forces in Korea met Tuesday and discussed prospects of a cease-fire. They meet again today.

Marshall emphatically denied that these and other reports of a possible negotiated peace had any connection with his visit.

In Tokyo, General Matthew B. Ridgway, who accompanied Marshall to Korea, was asked this direct question:

"Have you any new instructions from Washington concerning the war?"

Ridgway's reply was "No comment."

The Defense Secretary flew into Tokyo about midnight last night. Within 20 minutes he had changed planes and was on his way to Korea. Ridgway accompanied him.

Today, just south of 38 on the western front, Marshall conferred with Lt. General James A. Van Fleet, U. S. Eighth Army commander and the top United Nations field commanders.

The thunder of Allied artillery could be heard in the distance. Fighter planes circled overhead and armed military police guarded the tent.

diplomatic were not playing tail on this."

Acheson protested that he had "been up here continuously day after day." He said there was "no reason in the world" why Marshall should have telephoned me at these hearings and told me that he was going to take a trip as Secretary of Defense.

Wiley said there had been a "lot of talk about pending armistice and agreements, and we are seeking to find out just what the situation is on a global picture."

"All at once," he said, "the highest authority in government 'skidoo's off to Japan apparently no statement, just gets there. And Ridgway is called back for consultation."

"Again the question comes: are the diplomats making the policy, or is the civil government of this United States?"

Wiley said that was "one of the criticisms against MacArthur—that he dared to suggest that the military should have some right to say about policy at the top."

"Now we see them running over there, getting together, and you don't know anything about it."

Wiley said he didn't think the government should work that way if there was "cooperation" and "collaboration" at the top.

Acheson told the Senators Marshall's trip did not mean something was developing on peace negotiations.

"Is anything brewing in relation to an armistice, a settlement, in Korea?" Wiley demanded.

"No, sir, there is not as far as I know," Acheson replied.

It was Acheson's seventh day in the witness chair before the senate armed services and foreign relations committees, now in their second month of hearings on the dismissal of General Douglas MacArthur from his Far Eastern commands.

The exchanges ranged over many fields.

First off, a charge was reviewed that U. S. Ambassador John Muccio once said the United Nations are not fighting Communism in Korea. Acheson testified Muccio had said the report was "entirely incorrect."

When Acheson was finally dismissed for the day, he had also testified.

He thinks Russia would respect the world court's decision, if the United States were forced to veto admission of the Chinese Reds to the United Nations Security Council and the case were taken to the court. In fact, Russia would have to, he said, because "the other nations would respect it."

He has no recollection of expressing views that Senator Bridges (R-NH) attributed to him about the United Nations in looking over some old reports "I have gathered that you once testified that you favored a liberal government in Japan—a government in which the Soviet Union would have a part."

"Is that true?" he asked.

"I don't recall any such thing; and I don't understand what you meant by the Soviet Union having a part in the government of Japan," Acheson replied.

He said the Russians have membership on the Far East Commission and on an Allied Council in Japan, adding the latter has never functioned "because of obstructions which the Soviet Union has imported into its procedures."

The State Department is working to get out of China some 20 American civilians who are "being held" there. He said the Department is "getting them out in two's and three's but the situation is very dangerous and very delicate."

He thinks there is "no significance" to the fact that he didn't visit Tokyo while MacArthur was in command there. Senator Morse (R-Ore), who had raised the question, said he agreed, adding that he was not one of those who thought MacArthur "was not aware of our foreign policy problems."
