Jail Guard Foils Murder Suspect's Escape Try

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

A Seminole County jail guard was hit in the head with an aluminum pipe three times Monday before he and a hospital security officer foiled the escape attempt of a North Carolina murder suspect.

After being hit, and as the suspect tried to flee, jail guard Dennis Brown drew his service revolver and the suspect stopped and begged Brown not to shoot him.

The incident occurred at about 3 p.m. in the South Seminole Hospital parking lot in Longwood after suspect Ralph Charles King, 27, was taken there for physical therapy. Brown had been attempting to open the jail's van to let King in when King apparently pulled out the aluminum pipe filled with salt from a cast on one of his legs.

King had been arrested at the hospital Dec. 7 in connection with an October murder and arson in North Carolina.

Jail Administrator Capt. Jay Leman said Brown was hit hard and fell to the ground. But when Brown pulled his gun, Leman said, King stopped and begging him not to shoot.

King, of Roseborow, N.C., was not wearing leg irons at the time of the attempted escape, and Leman said he does not know if he was handcuffed.

A hospital security guard joined Brown in

Courtroom Too Cold, Jury Says

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

The trial of a Winter Springs man charged with grand theft and running an unlicensed business began as the jury complained that its members were uncomfortably cold.

Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. told the jury he had no control over the courtroom's climate and told the five men and two women to dress warmly when the trial continues today. He advised them, however, that the courthouse has unequal heating and while some rooms are chilly, some may be hot. That observation was not unlike some made this summer when some rooms were cool and others appeared to be unairconditioned. In one room air conditioning was accomplished by removal of ceiling tile.

Eaton made his comments before the state's opening statement in the trial of Howard Minner, 55. Minner is accused of blinding three people in mobile home sales in Casselberry. It's a case that almost did not go to trial because the time for prosecution nearly ran out. Minner also unsuccessfully tried to get the trial moved for what he claimed was bad television publicity.

While the jury was told to bundle up, that may be the rule of the day for everyone in the courtroom for the next couple of months until repairs are made.

RoseAnn Hunter, Director of Fleet Management, which oversees the private contractor servicing the building, said the basic problem is about 100 faulty water valves that cost about $90 each.

She said the most of the rooms in the courthouse have individual climate controls for heating and cooling. The valves direct water to the individual rooms where it is either heated or cooled depending upon the thermostat setting.

Although the courthouse was renovated in 1986, the valves were not part of the work. Ms. Hunter said about a dozen valves have been replaced but there are several problems to slow the work.

It takes about four hours to replace a valve, which is costly in terms of labor, she said. Though the heating and cooling needs have been contracted out the valve problem was not known at the time so it is not fair to have that company, York International of Longwood, absorb all of the cost, she said. Further, Fleet Management is responsible for 68 sites or buildings and they require maintenance also.

She said the county wants to strike a deal with York in which the county will supply the valves Lazar was off duty at the time. His 911 emergency call brought Dube to assist in the rescue. Williams was treated for smoke inhalation and recovered. The city gave the rescuers a resolution of appreciation and the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce presented the men with a plaque. Farr is executive director of the chamber.

If you are or have a frail elderly person in your family, finding help may be dumbfounding whether you need help a few hours a week or complete care.

But those services are available in Seminole County, many times at little or no cost, if one knows where to look. To help others find out what is available, the Local Health Council of East Central Florida is putting on a free public forum on "Health Care Options for the Frail Elderly."

The forum is scheduled to be held from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Feb. 19 at the Seminole County Health Department Auditorium, 240 W. Airport Blvd., Sanford.

Wendy Thomas, planning director for the Local Health Council, said the program will be geared for family members and friends of frail aging persons who are searching for locally available ways of caring for their loved ones.

The council works with the Area Agency on Aging, mental health agencies, HRS and the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council to see that health care needs of the frail elderly are met. She explained some of the options available to loved ones of a frail elderly person.

Some of the options include: day care, respite care, home health care, foster care, personal care, meals on wheels, congregate meals, medical transportation, homemaker services, adult congregate living facilities, and of course, nursing homes.

Day care can be accomplished by taking the older person to a center like Alzheimer Day Care Center in Orlando or any of the profit or non-profit day care centers available in the four-county area. Casselberry has a Community Care for the Elderly facility which operates weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Ms. Thomas said.

Respite care consists of giving the primary care-giver "time off." Workers will come into the home and give the spouse or family member who cares for the elderly person several hours to get away from the house; sometimes an overnight trip is allowed.

In homemaker services, an elderly person who lives alone is given help with household chores. And in personal services, the elderly person is given help with bathing, dressing, etc. Home health care is often paid by Medicare and is available through a number of private providers.

According to Judy Thames, director of the Area Agency on Aging (AAA) in Winter Park, it is that agency's responsibility through a needs assessment process to see that care for the frail elderly is available in Seminole, Orange, Brevard and Osceola counties.

The AAA receives federal funds from the Older Americans Act and state funds from the Community Care For the Elderly law. "We have about $5.5 million to allocate to provide services along a continuum of care from just a few hours a week to total care," Ms. Thames said.

Much of the service is on a sliding fee scale, but she said some of the federal projects ask only a donation.

As an intermediary to total nursing home care, Ms. Thames said many families elect to use one of the many Adult Congregate Living Facilities. Participants can apply for a subsidy for this care. Although no medical care is given in these facilities, transportation to medical offices and centers is provided.

Eligibility for AAA programs is sometimes a problem if the patient isn't old enough (60 or 62) or if he doesn't meet income criteria. But Ms. Thames said a

Boil Water Order Lifted

Customers of a private utility west of Sanford no longer have to boil their drinking water, according to the Seminole County Health Department.

Rick Salemi, supervisor of environmental health, said the state Department of Environmental Regulation inspected ordered repairs at the plant and approved them. The DER, he said, told the county it could lift its boil water order at 12:14 p.m. Monday. On Jan. 30 customers of Lake Monroe Utility were ordered to boil their water after a high bacterial count was discovered in the utility's water system.

The high count, officials said, was caused by a break down in a chlorinating machine, which the utility was ordered to fix. DER officials also ordered the utility to clean or repair its aeration filters.

The utility serves commercial customers in the area of Interstate 4 and State Road 46.

McFarlane Overdose Believed Suicide Attempt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Police are treating as a suicide attempt the overdose of 20 to 30 Valium pills taken by Robert McFarlane, the president's former national security adviser who became a key figure in the Iran-Contra arms controversy.

McFarlane, under pressure for his role in the affair, apparently admitted taking the pills Monday, police said, and was rushed to Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland at 8 a.m. EST, where he was listed in good condition.

Police detective Dan Waring in Montgomery County, Md., said a report prepared by the fire department indicated McFarlane took 20 to 30 Valium, a widely used tranquilizer that is often prescribed for treatment of anxiety.

"It's being carried as an attempted suicide based on the amount of pills that were taken," Waring said. The amount was "written on the (fire department) report, evidently at the admission of McFarlane."

A spokesman for the county fire department, which took the former Marine colonel to the hospital by ambulance, refused to comment on the report.

Lt. Russell Sanford, a hospital spokesman, also refused to comment on whether the overdose was a suicide attempt. Peter Morgan, an attorney for McFarlane, said simply, "There was an overdose of Valium."

Waring said police were investigating the overdose to rule out foul play and the matter then was to be turned over to the hospital.

"Basically we're just looking to eliminate any foul play," he said.

"Once we determine it's self-inflicted and once we determine the person is now receiving proper attention, we let medical people take care of the problem."

An overdose of Valium rarely kills a person unless it is combined with other sedatives or alcohol, medical officials said. Hoffman-LaRoche Inc., maker of the drug, has estimated 9 million Americans take Valium.

McFarlane, 49, a father of three, was at home with his wife, Jonda, when the overdose was discovered, said Morgan, who is a co-counsel with McFarlane's chief lawyer, Leonard Garment.

"I think his wife became concerned by his condition and called the hospital," Morgan said.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said President Reagan learned about the overdose Monday morning, McFarlane was scheduled to appear Monday before the special presidential panel reviewing operations of the National Security Council, which McFarlane led during his tenure as national security adviser.

McFarlane resigned from the White House post in December 1985 after having conducted some early negotiations in the secret U.S. arms sales to Iran, but he continued to play a key role in the initiative and its links to the release of American hostages in Lebanon.

"I think the whole thing weighs on him, obviously. I think he feels bad that (the arms deals) turned into a big problem," a source close to

Youths Arrested In Multiple Auto Thefts

Three Sanford youths have been arrested in connection with the Jan. 19 theft of at least 12 vehicles from a fenced compound at the Sanford Auto Auction, State Road 46, Sanford. Seminole County sheriff's investigator Leonard Maciejewski has the names of four other Sanford boys being sought in the case.

The suspects charged with burglary and grand theft of motor vehicles were arrested Jan. 28 at the Sanford Police Station. They have been charged as juveniles and turned over to juvenile authorities.

The suspects, whose ages range from 13 to 18, allegedly cut a fence at the auto auction and drove at least 12 vehicles from that compound. Some of the vehicles were recovered at the scene and others were found abandoned in Sanford.

Maciejewski said the cars were apparently taken for joy rides. The vehicles were at the auction to be auctioned for private owners or used car dealers. Sanford police discovered the thefts when they recovered one of the abandoned cars and reported the find to sheriff's deputies.

Other arrests are pending, Maciejewski said Monday.

Space Program Belongs To All

Challenger's trail of smoke, a hieroglyphic of disaster, is gone from the sky. The astronauts' remains have been recovered from the sea and buried. The congressional investigators have filed reports. The memorial speeches are over.

But NASA has no more direction than a year ago, when Challenger roared off an icy launching pad and exploded, fragmenting the U.S. space program.

The shuttle will fly again. No civilian ride-alongs are going on U.S. space voyages, for the near future. Perhaps forever.

The payloads will be military. Instead of teacher Christa McAuliffe carrying an apple into the heavens, will we have a robot carrying a laser weapon?

Star Wars advocates dream of the militarization of space, a new field of battle for machines. But to many earthlings who dreamed of space as a new frontier, the militarization of NASA is a nightmare.

NASA started coming apart long before President Reagan came into office. But his leadership didn't permeate the agency. Cocky, driven with personality conflicts, underfunded and overbooked for flights, NASA pushed its public relations campaign to the heavens, and missed the warning signs of disaster on earth. Perhaps the shuttle program was doomed from the beginning, an idea ahead of its time. Shortage of time helped kill the Challenger crew. Deadlines. Round the clock work schedules.

Engineers located flaws in the O-rings and wrote reports. But the reports got lost in the shuffle and the shuttle moved forward relentlessly, trying to fulfill its contracts. Perhaps the flaw was trying to make the space program pay for itself. America no longer will rely solely on a shuttle to launch satellites. We're going back to the old rockets that were supposed to be obsolete.

In trying to learn a lesson from the hieroglyphics of disaster, let us not learn the wrong lesson.

Civilians belong in space. Medical experiments belong in space. Exploration is a civilian — not just a military — function.

The Americans who pushed back the frontier faced dangers exceeding those that faced the astronauts. The steamboats plying the Mississippi were dangerous vehicles; the engines often exploding, scalding to death river pilots and passengers. But that didn't stop people from using them.

The Challenger crew didn't die so that space would be turned over to the military. They died yearning to give children a sense of wonder in space. The heavens belong to the courageous. All of us.

Can't Say No

In fiscal 1961 total federal expenditures were below $100 billion. They crossed the mark in 1962, reaching $107 billion.

The budget released Jan. 6 calls for spending a trillion dollars, and judging from the woe-filled comments of the politicians who will be doing the spending, that is not enough.

The Democrats who control Congress have already made it emphatically clear that higher taxes are on their agenda. That should come as no surprise. Higher taxes are always on their agenda.

They are like "Ado Annie" in the musical comedy Oklahoma who described herself as "a girl who can't say no."

They have said yes to tax increases so often that per capita federal taxes soared from $42 in 1940 to $2,217 in 1980. If that rate of increase continues, per capita federal taxes will be $116,835 by 2020.

The tax-and-spend habits of Congress make a strong case for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

Then if Congress can't say no, the Constitution can.

Someone or something should.

Computer Unreliability Disaster For SDI

There are compelling reasons for questioning the wisdom of President Reagan's determination to carry the nuclear-arms race into outer space with his so-called Star Wars system.

Most scientists find it a wasteful and impractical venture that has no chance of success. Arms-control advocates see it as a dangerous escalation of the arms race. Many thoughtful critics view it as a misconceived effort to provide a defense against a nuclear attack when, in fact, there can be no dependable defense in the event of nuclear war. Further, the illusion of defense may undermine the determination of national leaders to prevent the use of nuclear weapons.

A growing technical reason for questioning the practicality of Star Wars is the virtual impossibility of building a reliable computer system for a project so complex.

Computers can perform wondrous feats. But they do malfunction and, at best, are no more dependable than the human beings who create, program and interpret them.

Some months ago I cited in this column a computer expert writing for The Atlantic who estimated it would require 10 million lines of computer programming to put Star Wars in place. The author saw no way of assembling such an array of computer technology without mistakes either in the equipment or its vast programs.

More recently, Bob Davis, writing in The Wall Street Journal, examined the growing concern over computer errors in a wide range of operations, including medicine, banking, billing and military matters.

Some patients have lost their lives because of errors in computerized treatment procedures. Numerous banks and corporations have encountered costly errors in billing or accounting procedures. Test runs on weapons, planes, tanks and ships have repeatedly demonstrated embarrassing and potentially fatal flaws either in computer design or programming.

Computer expert Peter Neumann has asserted that "the vast majority of systems are deeply flawed from the viewpoint of reliability, safety, security and privacy."

Even in comparatively simple computers, it is difficult to avoid the possibility, if not the probability, of error — either in the machinery or the software. But in highly complicated computer systems, the error danger — especially in software — is vastly greater.

"It's as hard to predict software failure as it is to predict what your poker hand will be in the next deal," says NASA software expert John Garman.

British computer experts had equipped the frigate Sheffield with an air-defense system to detect radar signals from missiles used by the Soviet bloc. But during the brief Falkland war, the ship was sunk by a French Exocet missile fired by an Argentine pilot. The computerized defense on the ship was not programmed for French missiles, and the attack went undetected until the ship was fatally hit.

"Strike three" would be the fact that Star Wars would be facing a determined adversary, says John Shore, a former naval software expert.

The problem with all of this for Star Wars advocates is that there can be no tolerance for error in a system in which error could bring on a nuclear war that might end civilization.

Radio Satellite Trouble

By William Harwood
UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — NASA's orbiting $100 million shuttle communications satellite is in serious trouble and the agency is considering launching a replacement atop an unmanned rocket.

The Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, or TDRS, is the first of a planned constellation of such relay stations designed to eliminate costly ground stations around the world and to provide secure communications between ground controllers, the shuttle and other satellites.

The largest, most sophisticated communications satellites ever built, each TDRS, built by TRW Inc., weighs nearly 2 1/2 tons and spans 57 feet with its solar panels deployed. Each satellite is capable of handling communications with more than 20 other spacecraft simultaneously.

The satellite currently in orbit was launched from the shuttle Challenger in April 1983. A second TDRS was destroyed aboard Challenger when the shuttle exploded Jan. 28, 1986, and a third is scheduled for launch aboard Discovery next year when shuttle flights resume.

NASA Administrator James Fletcher told Congress last week the satellite already in orbit is in "severe difficulty" because of major component failures and that the agency is considering launching the next such satellite using an unmanned booster.

"We are looking at an option for doing just that," Fletcher said.

Eugene Ferrick, deputy director of the TDRS program, said in an interview that two key electronic systems used to relay ground commands to the shuttle and other satellites in the KU-band and S-band radio frequency ranges have broken down.

If the what is remaining in the KU-band system went on the blink, ground controllers would not be able to send commands that require high communications capacity to the shuttle when flights resume, and instead would be forced to rely on spotty ground station coverage.

The first post-Challenger shuttle flight currently is scheduled for Feb. 18, 1988 but that date is expected to slip because of the time needed to implement required design changes.

"It is in marginal condition ... We really can't count on it," Fletcher said.

For that reason, NASA is studying the possibility of buying a Titan 34D from the Air Force to launch a new TDRS to be on the safe side.

WASHINGTON — A government investigation of American embassy "gift funds" reveals that questionable use of the privately donated money by Ambassador Faith Ryan Whittlesey in Switzerland was matched by former Ambassador Helene von Damm next door in Austria.

Both women worked in the Reagan White House before appointment to their diplomatic posts.

The State Department has ended the controversial embassy funds, which were an administration idea designed to supplement an ambassador's sometimes skimpy "representational fund" for entertainment and similar goodwill gestures. News stories last fall reported that Whittlesey had dipped into her embassy fund to play hostess to some of the same American big

A Private CIA?

MIAMI (NEA) — One of the most shocking revelations in the Iran-contra affair involves White House links to the activities of a shadowy "private CIA" made up of retired military officers and intelligence operatives.

Now it appears the American public may learn details of this network's operations from an unexpected source: a private lawsuit in Miami.

It is alleged in the suit, for example, that key players in both the Iranian arms deals and the contra supply network had first worked together in Vietnam on Operation Phoenix, a notoriously shady anti-Viet Cong campaign.

But the central thesis of the Miami suit is that profits from illegal drug trafficking were used to finance the contra's war against the Sandinistas.

The lawsuit is based on events in May 1984, when rebel chief Eden Pastora held a news conference near La Penca, Nicaragua, to air his sharp differences with other contra leaders. The session was interrupted when a bomb destroyed the building where the news conference was taking place.

Pastora was slightly injured; five of his supporters were killed. Three journalists were also injured in the blast.

Two of the journalists, ABC-TV cameraman Tony Avirgan and his wife Martha Honey, a free-lance reporter based in Costa Rica, have now filed a civil damage suit. It charges they were injured as a result of the activities of 28 named defendants. It is alleged that the defendants were involved in assassinations, drug smuggling, arms smuggling, kidnapping and other crimes in violation of the federal Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act.

Among those named in the suit are top contra leaders Adolfo Calero and Arturo Cruz. Named also are virtually all the known members of ex-national security aide Oliver North's reported "private CIA" — retired Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, his Iranian-born business partner Albert Hakim, former CIA officials Theodore Shackley and Thomas Cline, Civilian Material Assistance head Thomas Posey; and reputed Colombian drug kingpin Jorge Ochoa Vasquez.

The suit has been brought on behalf of Avirgan and Honey by the Washington-based Christie Institute, a liberal public-interest law firm and policy center. Its general counsel, Daniel Sheehan, is lead counsel in the suit.

Central among Sheehan's accusations is that Calero and 13 other defendants tried to assassinate Pastora in order to take over leadership of the contra's southern front — "in part to assure a base for transshipment of drugs."

One of the most fascinating documents filed in the case thus far is an affidavit tracing the formation of the "private CIA" network to the latter stages of the Vietnam War. It is alleged that Shackley had been sent to Laos in the mid-1960s to forge an alliance with Hmong tribesmen.

Later, allegedly, he was moved to Saigon to head "Operation Phoenix," a major assassination and destabilization effort aimed at destroying the Viet Cong's political infrastructure. Cline was Shackley's deputy.

The allegation is that to hide the project from scrutiny it was financed in great part with profits from opium trafficking headed by Hmong Gen. Vang Pao, who enjoyed a monopoly that Shackley helped him win.

Raiders Firing Blanks

By Steve Gerstel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Remember when Ralph Nader and his Raiders made the targets of their investigations tremble? Remember when these consumer advocates had big, big General Motors quaking over the Corvair?

Those Nader heydays seem over. Indeed, Nader's latest expression of outrage is pretty weak, pretty old stuff. And he's charging.

Nader recently released a report outlining the benefits and privileges that are available to members of Congress. He has titled the opus "Congressional Pay and Perks: The Green Book in Black and White."

Want a copy? One of Nader's outfits, Public Citizen Salary Grab, will sell you one for $4.

The price is not exorbitant, but all Nader has done is put together the House and Senate handbooks. It's true, as the Nader release says, that neither of these handbooks are "generally available to the public."

But nothing distributed to 435 members of the House and 100 members of the Senate can be classified as a secret. In fact, many, many stories have been written about pay and perks that go with election to Congress.

Nader complains that the inability of citizens to get the handbooks is a "sad commentary on the imperial clime of too many members of Congress" and says that the information should be made available by the Government Printing Office.

Perhaps the information should be available through the Government Printing Office. Of course, they charge too.

Among the "perks" highlighted by Nader are honoraria. Under the rules, House members can earn up to 30 percent and senators up to 40 percent of their pay by giving speeches.

Maybe, as Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., has frequently pointed out, there is a danger in honoraria. But the amount, once unlimited, was agonizingly thrashed out in the Senate and House. It is no secret and no perk.

Yes, the congressional pension plan is superb, better than most. But it is contributory, with the employer, a.k.a. the taxpayer, chipping in half as much.

True, free travel is a perk, maybe one of the most abused, but it is hardly a secret. At least in recent years, there have been almost as many stories as there have been trips.

Nader highlights the exercise rooms in two Senate office buildings and a gym in a House office building as perks and they are.

Ex-Ambassador Uses Gift Funds

shots who had donated to the fund. When the stories broke, the House Foreign Operations Subcommittee, headed by Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., ordered a General Accounting Office audit of all such privately financed embassy funds. Our associate Lucette Lagnado has seen the resulting report.

Here are some examples of the Vienna embassy's expenditures from the gift fund during the tenure of von Damm, who resigned as ambassador after marrying the owner of Vienna's famous Sacher Hotel:

— In September 1985, she spent more than $13,000 to take some 400 guests on a "friendship cruise" on the Danube River. The tab included boat rental, restaurant meals, fireworks and a photographer to record the event.

— In August 1985, von Damm dipped into the embassy gift fund to buy a $600 coat as a birthday present for Dagmar Koller, wife of Vienna's mayor. Cable traffic between the embassy and Foggy Bottom revealed an initial reluctance in Washington to approve the expenditure; it was finally OK'd after the fact.

— In December 1985, von Damm played the gracious hostess to Attorney General Edwin Meese, his son and their wives, who stopped off in Vienna while on a European tour. The ambassador, who worked in the White House while Meese was presidential counselor, threw a party for the visitors. She also arranged tickets to the Vienna Opera production of "Fidelio" at a cost of $317.28 for five tickets. The purpose of the expenditure was "to further U.S. interests," according to the embassy voucher.

— Also justified by the need to promote the national interest was the purchase of 10 scallop-shaped perwer bowls from Cartier Inc. in New York at a cost of $1,023.

Not all the embassies with gift funds spent the money on frumpies. The GAO auditors noted that the embassy in Lagos, Nigeria, which had received more than $338,000 in donations, used the money to make badly needed improvements at a consulate, "such as retaining walls, fences and gates." In addition, the embassy donated a large chunk of the gift fund to the American International School in Lagos.

The Paris embassy also used its gift fund for such unglamorous expenses as renovating the ambassador's residence, buying a piano, reupholstering furniture, installing drapes and painting light fixtures.

The Moscow embassy wouldn't let the GAO auditors see its gift fund vouchers on grounds of security.

FLORIDA

IN BRIEF

Finders Case Investigation Expands To Other Florida Cities

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Law enforcement officials have begun looking for a possible Gainesville connection to the Finders cult, two of whose members are in a Tallahassee jail under $100,000 bond for child abuse.

Tallahassee police arrested two men Wednesday after they were spotted watching over six filthy children in a city park. State officials later determined that at least two of the children had been sexually abused.

Tallahassee police spokesman Scott Hunt said Monday "investigative evidence" had turned police attention to Gainesville. He refused to offer any specifics on the investigation.

Hunt said Gainesville police were cooperating with his office in the investigation.

Hunt could not confirm news reports that the group was spotted in Tampa last year. He refused to say if police had reports of the Finders in other Florida cities.

Martinez Offers Prison Solution

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Gov. Bob Martinez's long-term solution to the prison overcrowding crisis will include up to $210 million in new prison construction and increased reliance on alternatives like community control.

Larry Polivka, who advises the governor on public safety issues, said Monday that the new construction should help Florida keep up with expected increases in the numbers of inmates into the next century.

Polivka added that Florida may have imprisoned too many offenders in the past instead of seeking alternatives. He said Martinez will seek up to $7 million to channel an additional 2,000 criminals into community control programs — an increase of about one-third over the number now in such programs.

The plan is due when Martinez submits his budget proposal Feb. 20.

Canada: Training Ground For KGB

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Soviet jogger with the bionic biceps drew stares and shivers as he loped along the frigid, snowslick streets, wearing only a pair of blue silk shorts, ankle socks, black gloves and running shoes.

The sight of bare-chested Boris Balashov, 47, exercising in minus 12 F temperatures merits attention, even from winter-weary Canadians.

"I've never seen anything like it," said a woman who lives in the downtown Montreal apartment building where Balashov resides. "He looks bullet-proof. Every angle on him is square. If you hit him with a tank, the tank would crumble. He has the most incredible body."

Balashov, who works as an economist with the Soviet delegation at the International Civil Aviation Organization, studies karate, lifts weights twice a week and jogs shirtless every day, no matter how cold.

Aside for his penchant for jogging in sub-zero temperatures, what makes Balashov newsworthy is that he is part of the Soviet diplomatic mission in Canada which western security experts say is engaged in highly sophisticated spying aimed at the United States.

Balashov, an open and engaging man, laughed when asked whether he works for the Komitet Gosudarstvennoy Besopasnosti — the Soviet state security police better known by the initials KGB.

"No, I don't work for the KGB," he said. "I have no military background."

When asked whether western security experts are accurate when they say that a high percentage of Soviet diplomats in Canada spy for the KGB, he replied: "Maybe some. I don't know exactly. It's only idle talk."

Western security agents say it is more than idle talk and that Canada, especially Montreal, is rife with KGB agents.

"The Soviets feel more secure in Canada

This is where a lot of KGB agents come to get groomed before moving on to more sophisticated espionage and subversive operations in the United States.'

than in the United States," a contract operator for several Western intelligence services told United Press International. "This is where a lot of KGB agents come to get groomed before moving on to more sophisticated espionage and subversive operations in the United States."

The operator, who said he had done numerous jobs worldwide for the CIA in the last 20 years, spoke on condition he not be identified by name.

He described Montreal as "a major center for clandestine KGB activities involving espionage, subversion, terrorist training and communications with enemy agents."

The KGB's primary target is always the United States, he said. "They like Montreal because they can communicate easily with their U.S.-based agents from here. It's very easy for them to cross the border over I-87 using phony identities."

The Soviet sensitivity about their Canadian operation is never so clear as on a wintry day last month when they let their consulate burn rather than admit Montreal firefighters.

The result was a gutted three-story building and a very public suggestion that there was more going on inside than arranging tourist visas.

When the minor electrical fire erupted Jan. 14 consulate officials barred firemen for 15 minutes while they removed documents. When firemen were finally allowed onto the grounds, they attempted to break out some third-floor windows to make way for their hoses — only to find them bricked up from the inside.

And when the firefighters were admitted to the structure, they were still refused access to certain rooms.

Afterward, Soviet embassy official Igor Lobanov blunted questions about spying: "I won't say anything about that."

And the bricked up windows? "Redecoration."

And the documents that were more precious than the building?

Shrugged Lobanov: "You know, Western embassies in Moscow don't keep copies of Playboy Magazine in their files."

What the West had was a tacit admission of what it has known for years — that the KGB was running a very active operation out of Montreal.

Canadian security sources, for instance, said the third floor of the consulate contained a microwave communications center that maintained contact with agents in the Washington-New York-Boston areas. A rooftop satellite dish concealed in a wooden shed monitored phone calls to and from the U.S. and British consulates and U.S. defense contractors in Montreal.

The bricks in the third-floor windows likely were to block the laser microphones of Canadian agents trying to record Soviets conversations, a Canadian counter-intelligence specialist said.

Jean-Louis Gagnon, a spokesman for the Canadian Security Intelligence Service — Canada's counterintelligence equivalent of the American FBI — acknowledges Montreal is "an important area" for foreign espionage.

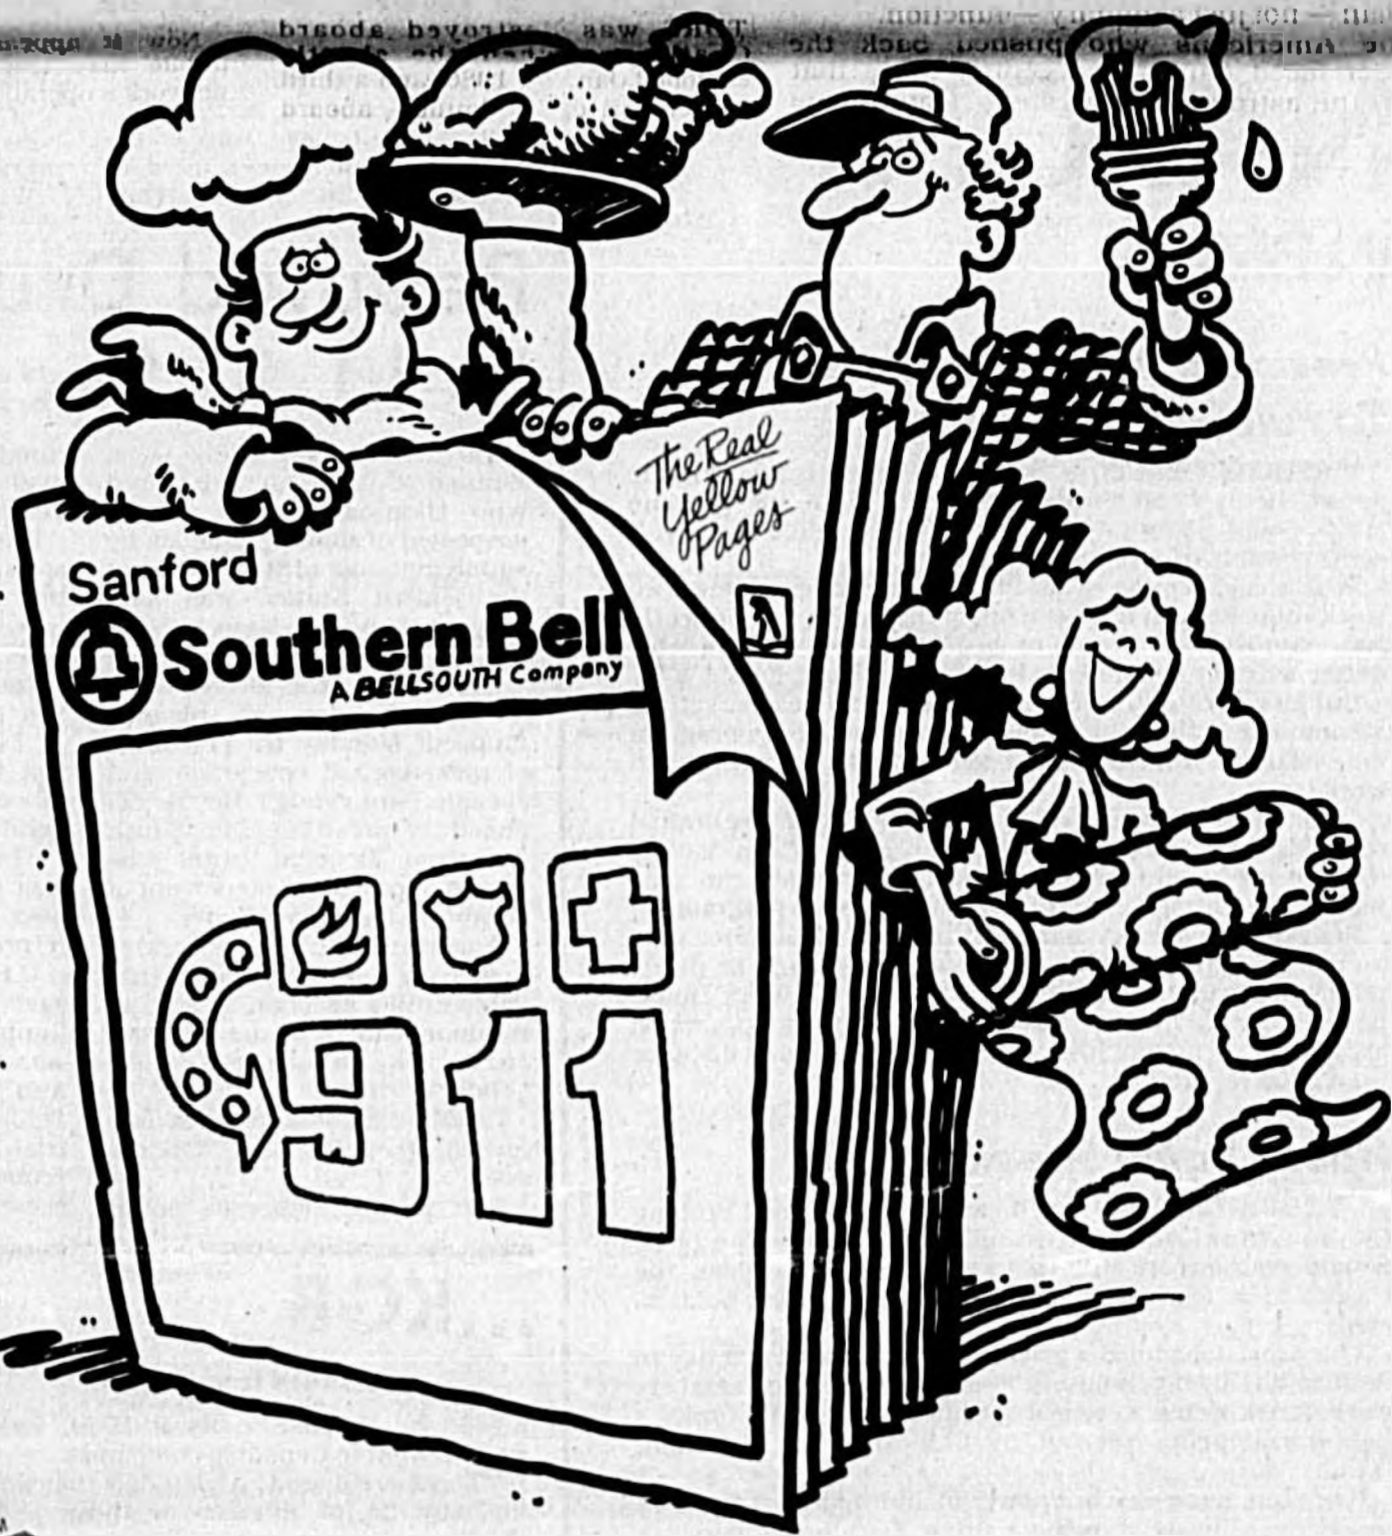

Montreal-area companies do research and build weapons systems for NATO and the U.S. Defense Department.

India Charges Union Carbide Obstruction In Bhopal Probe

BHOPAL, India (UPI) — India today charged that Union Carbide Corp. has tried to obstruct a probe into the Bhopal gas disaster by influencing a key witness into making false allegations of intimidation by investigators.

The Indian government asked in a brief filed with the Bhopal District Court that the court deny the U.S. multinational's request for an order prohibiting further interrogation of witness S. Sunderajan.

Sunderajan was the senior engineer on duty on Dec. 3, 1984, when fumes of methyl isocyanate spewed from an underground tank at Union Carbide's Bhopal pesticide plant, blanketing large areas of the Madhya Pradesh state capital, 375 miles south of New Delhi.

Nearly 3,000 people died and about 200,000 suffered ailments in history's worst industrial disaster.

European, Latin Americans Meet

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — A meeting of European and Latin American diplomats got off to a shaky start as one foreign minister refused to address the forum, despite Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo's call for Central American unity.

Cerezo opened Monday the third Western European-Central American meeting that will try to ease tensions in the war-torn region.

However, Salvadoran Foreign Minister Ricardo Acevedo, scheduled to speak for Central America, refused to address the first session apparently because of Nicaragua, which he called "intransigent."

Regional delegates could not decide which foreign minister would speak for them, diplomats said, and no one spoke for Central America.

The incident highlighted the region's differences. The Guatemalan president spoke of the need for regional understanding in his opening ceremony address.

Aquino, Rebel Officers Meet

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — President Corazon Aquino met today with disgruntled junior military officers and told them there were no communists in her inner circle, while fighting with guerrillas left at least 18 people dead.

Military officials said at least 18 people died in two clashes that erupted following the end of a 60-day cease-fire with the 23,000 guerrillas of the communist New People's Army.

Brig. Gen. Eugenio Ocampo told the official Philippine News Agency an army lieutenant, 11 guerrillas and two civilians were killed Tuesday in a fierce gunbattle in Lupao, in the northern province of Nueva Ecija.

Four other civilians — a village chief, his wife, son and daughter-in-law — were killed by guerrillas Monday in the coastal town of Padada on the strife-torn southern island of Mindanao.

Press Secretary Teodoro Benigno said Aquino held an hour-long meeting with 20 colonels and navy captains at the start of her effort to "reach out" to all segments in the fractured military.

NATION

President Expects To Return To Full Schedule Soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is assuring the nation he is "completely recovered" from his prostate surgery and plans to return to a full schedule soon with some possible trips on the horizon.

With the exception of his State of the Union address two weeks ago, Reagan has been out of the public eye for nearly two months as a result of his Jan. 5 surgery and his decision to stay silent as the Iran-Contra scandal unfolds.

But Monday, the 76-year-old president told conservatives summoned to the White House to hear about his program for welfare reform that he is eager and ready to get back to work.

"I am completely recovered ... (and) I'll be off my limited schedule fairly soon," he said, then joked: "The doctors told me my blood pressure is down so low that I can start reading the newspapers and watching TV news programs."

Reagan's presidency has been rocked by the furor over secret U.S. arms sales to Iran and the scheme to divert profits to Nicaraguan Contra rebels — and the White House has gone out of its way to keep him from being questioned about it by arranging his recent public events at a distance from news reporters.

House Panel Speeds Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The select House panel probing the Iran arms-Contra aid scandal is pushing ahead of its Senate counterpart in a determined drive to glean the lessons to be learned in President Reagan's worst political crisis.

The panel scheduled a private afternoon session today to discuss intelligence matters in the scandal, and members were not expected to reveal specifics to reporters under a tight-lipped policy set out by Chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind.

Hamilton, a low-key but powerful and respected figure in the House, favors immediate firing if staff members are discovered revealing secret information to the news media, said a source who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The select panel, operating with the secrecy rules similar to those governing the permanent House and Senate intelligence committees, is ahead of its Senate counterpart in interviewing potential witnesses and gathering evidence.

Surrogate Mother Admits Errors

HACKENSACK, N.J. (UPI) — The mother of Baby M tearfully pleaded with a judge to discount her checkered past and "stupid" mistakes in deciding whether she can reclaim the infant she agreed to bear for a childless couple.

Mary Beth Whitehead, who was to testify again today in the landmark surrogate motherhood trial, told Bergen County Superior Court Judge Harvey Sorkow Monday that the "best interests" of the 10-month-old girl require they be reunited.

"It wasn't good for the baby for me to give her away," said Whitehead, somber and near tears. "I physically and emotionally cannot give up my child. I know I made a mistake. ... It was wrong, the whole thing."

Whitehead, 29, of Brick Township, N.J., is the first surrogate mother taken to trial for backing out of a contract to give up a baby she carried for a childless couple.

Berri Renews Hostage Help Offer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Shilte Amal militia leader Nabih Berri today welcomed the reprieve in killing four hostages and renewed his offer to help resolve the crisis by swapping an Israeli pilot for 400 Arab prisoners in Israel.

"We are against kidnappings in the first place and I was pleased to hear that the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine has delayed its plans to kill those four innocent people," Berri told United Press International in Damascus.

The group said late Monday it postponed killing the four — three Americans and an Indian — abducted Jan. 24 because of pleas for mercy by the hostages, their families, India and various Lebanese organizations.

The Moslem kidnappers also cited signals that Israel might be willing to release the 400 Palestinians, whose freedom Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine has demanded in exchange for the hostages.

"I do not know who this group is, but if they release their four hostages, then I promise to get their 400 men from Israel in exchange for the Israeli pilot we have," Berri said. "But I cannot do anything if they do not release the four kidnapped professors."

The Amal militia captured an Israeli last October after his plane crashed during an air raid on south Lebanon.

Commenting on Israeli demands that any request for the release of the 400 Arab prisoners should be done in an "orderly manner," Berri said:

"Once the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine releases its four hostages, then I will ask the International Red Cross or a friendly country to start this process.

"This has been done in the past and it can be done again," said Berri in reference to the exchange in June 1985 of 40 Americans held on board a hijacked TWA plane in Beirut for some 700 Arab prisoners in Israel.

The International Red Cross played a key role in the 1985 exchange.

Political sources in Damascus said the reprieve by the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine meant that "not all doors are closed and silent; behind-the-scene bargaining could soon get underway."

"Some feelers have already gone out to the ICRC, and our understanding is that the ICRC has indicated that it is willing to play a role," a Lebanese militia source said.

But the Amal chief said he had not yet approached the Red Cross formally.

"I will do that as soon as they release the four professors; this is the only way. I can do nothing if they do not release them first," Berri said.

The group postponed its threat to kill the four captives, all professors at Beirut University College, in a message delivered to a news agency a few minutes before midnight Monday, when it had said it would begin killing the hostages unless Israel freed the Palestinians.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres Sunday apparently indicated that Israel was willing to negotiate, saying such requests should be made through proper channels rather than in the form of terrorist ultimatums.

"There has been mentioned some positive points in the statement of the Zionist foreign minister about the release of the 400 Palestinians," the group said in its statement. "We want clarification of these points as soon as possible."

Asked Monday if Israel would release the prisoners, Peres said, "No, Israel has not been approached on this issue."

Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin told reporters that "the ultimatum concerns the U.S. hostages and it is an issue for the U.S. government. When and if the United States turns to us, then we will consider what to do."

The kidnappers' message was accompanied by a photograph of hostage Robert Polhill, 52, of Utah, who appeared exhausted. It gave no details on American hostages Alann Steen, 46, of New York, and Jesse Turner, 39, of Iowa, or of Indian U.S. resident Mithleshwar Singh, in his 60s.

In an earlier message Monday, Polhill, Steen and Turner, three of eight Americans held hostage in Lebanon, pleaded for their lives, saying they would be killed unless Israel freed the prisoners.

"This is the last letter to our wives and the American people," the Americans said in a handwritten note to a news agency with a photograph of Steen.

"The Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine will execute us at midnight because Israel is refusing to release the 400 Palestinians from its cells," the letter said.

Steen, a journalism professor, included a note to his wife, Virginia. "Listen, Love. I don't want to see you cry anymore. Tell them to release the 400. I love you, Virginia."

Coroner: AIDS Caused Liberace's Death

INDIO, Calif. (UPI) — Liberace died of AIDS, and there was a deliberate attempt to "pull a fast one" on authorities by covering up the true cause of the flamboyant entertainer's death, a county coroner says.

"In layman's terms, he died of opportunistic diseases caused by AIDS," Riverside County Coroner Ray Carrillo told a crowded news conference Monday.

When Liberace, 67, died Feb. 4 at his home in Palm Springs, his lawyer, his manager and his publicist all denied he had died from acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which afflicts mostly homosexual men.

His doctor listed the cause of death as heart failure brought on by a degenerative brain disease complicated by emphysema. But Carrillo rejected the death certificate and ordered an autopsy.

"Mr. Liberace did not die (of the diseases) certified by the physician on the death certificate," Carrillo said. "Our post mortem has precluded any conjecture. He did die of AIDS."

"I firmly believe that somebody along the line wanted to pull a fast one on us. They probably pulled something they thought they could get away with. Fortunately it was in a case where there was a lot of publicity," Carrillo said. "Somebody was trying to play fast and loose with the Riverside County Coroner's Office."

Liberace's manager, Seymour Heller, and his lawyer, Joel Strote, had denied a Jan. 24 article in the Las Vegas Sun quoting sources as saying the famed pianist known as "Mr. Showmanship" was dying of AIDS.

He had been hospitalized the day before for what was described as evaluation of anemia that a spokesman said was brought on by a watermelon diet.

Four days and his New York-based publicist, Denise Collier, said he was dying of pernicious anemia, heart disease and emphysema.

Less than an hour after the recorded time of his death, Liberace's body was taken to Los Angeles County, where it was embalmed at Forest Lawn Memorial Park.

When Los Angeles County health officials called Carrillo's office to confirm the death certificate so they could issue a burial permit to Forest Lawn, Carrillo ordered the body returned for an autopsy.

Carrillo said Monday the original cause of death "didn't make sense."

The entertainer's body was returned to Forest Lawn after Friday's autopsy, and entombed Saturday beside his mother and brother, George.

Carrillo said he would turn over results of his investigation to state authorities to determine if there is any cause for disciplinary action in connection with the death certificate.

The coroner said he is certain that Liberace's doctors were aware that he had suffered from AIDS "for months or maybe even years."

Dr. Ron Daniels, who signed Liberace's initial death certificate, refused to comment.

Carrillo said the autopsy proved Liberace died from cytomegaloviral pneumonia resulting from AIDS. Physicians say the disease is a common viral pneumonia that is usually overcome easily except by infants and people whose immune systems are weakened. It commonly afflicts AIDS sufferers.

The coroner said he will notify county health officials "... and it will be their responsibility to follow up to determine if he had contact with anyone. I don't know whether he had relations with anyone."

Liberace had long denied he was homosexual. In 1959 he won a libel suit against the London tabloid Daily Mirror, which had implied he was gay.

He repeated the denial in 1982 when his former live-in chauffeur and travel secretary, Scott Thorson, brought a palimony suit, claiming Liberace promised him $70,000 a year for life when Thorson moved in as his lover. The entertainer settled the suit in December for $95,000.

Michael Segell, a writer who worked with Liberace on a biography that was eventually scotched, told People magazine that Liberace "... had this idea that no one in America knew he was a homosexual, which was preposterous."

Reputed Drug Lord Held At Secret Site

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) — A reputed Colombian drug lord who claimed poverty but is suspected of making millions by supplying most of the cocaine in the United States, was held without bond at a secret site tightly guarded against "narco-terrorism" violence.

Carlos Lehder, 37, pleaded innocent Monday on 11 counts of racketeering, conspiracy and cocaine smuggling. He is accused of heading the South American Medellin cartel suspected of providing 80 percent of cocaine in the United States.

Assistant Public Defender Rosemary Cakmis revealed that Pablo Emilio Escobar, another of the four leaders of the Medellin cartel, apparently set up Lehder's arrest.

"A Mr. Pablo Escobar in fact turned Mr. Lehder in," Cakmis said. She did not elaborate, but if true the revelation could mean a major war among Colombian drug runners.

Prosecutors noted Lehder was sporting a $6,000 Rolex watch in the tightly guarded courthouse when he asked for a lawyer at taxpayer expense, saying he has no money because he was on the run from Colombian authorities.

"I have lived in the jungle the last four years and have been disconnected from society," Lehder said.

The reputed billionaire, who was granted a public defender, also requested a Spanish interpreter.

U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle said Lehder has a history of "unprecedented violence" and was likely to flee unless jailed, and U.S. Magistrate Harvey Schlesinger denied bond and set trial for March 23. Lehder is to remain under heavy guard at a secret location.

Williams Ends Fast, Released From Jail

CUMMING, Ga. (UPI) — The Rev. Hosea Williams, a black activist who began a death-or-justice fast in the Forsyth County jail over his arrest outside "The Oprah Winfrey Show," was released from jail early today.

A spokeswoman for the Forsyth County sheriff's office said Williams was released on his own recognizance shortly after midnight. His followers had vowed to march from Atlanta if charges against him were not dropped by Wednesday.

Williams and seven others were arrested on charges of unlawful assembly Monday while picketing Winfrey's syndicated talk show because blacks were excluded from participation. Williams led a group of about two dozen blacks from Atlanta to demonstrate against the telecast.

Winfrey said the show was meant to give residents of the all-white county a chance to counter charges of racism following Ku Klux Klan-inspired violence against black marchers last month.

Winfrey, who is black, said she "was a little shaken by some of the things I heard in there" and left town shortly after the show.

The arrested protesters were permitted to leave police custody on their own recognizance, but Williams and three others chose to remain in jail. Williams, who was also charged with obstruction of a highway, began a hunger strike, demanding that all charges be dropped.

Sheriff Wesley Walraven said Williams wanted to be arrested.

signed by Defense in fiscal 1986, $644.6 million went to Canadian companies.

"Those are classified materials that would logically be of interest to those people (KGB)," Gagnon said. "Montreal is an important area for our counterintelligence operations."

One reason the KGB might feel more secure operating out of Canada is CSIS's modest 1985-86 budget of $82 million and its small number of employees — 1,800. It is not known how many of those are actual counterintelligence agents.

Jeffrey Richelson, an assistant professor of government at the American University in Washington, D.C., who has written two books on U.S. and Soviet intelligence operations, says both nations have large numbers in the field but few are actually involved in day-to-day spying.

Richelson said the U.S. employs more than 150,000 people in intelligence activities, 100,000 of whom work for military intelligence units.

Some 20,000 work for the CIA, most in administrative and technical work in Washington. Another 10,000 are split among the National Reconnaissance Office, which oversees U.S. spy satellites, and various minor civilian intelligence agencies.

is by far the largest, most secret and most costly of the U.S. intelligence agencies. Although little is officially known about the NSA, it may have up to 50,000 employees, including many in the military. It has access to nuclear submarines, spy planes, spy satellites and bags of exotic equipment.

"The number of people in the field actually involved in spying or counterintelligence is small, the low thousands, maybe 2,000," Richelson said.

The Soviets have about 700,000 people employed in intelligence and security work worldwide, Richelson said. Most are part of the internal security police within the Soviet Union.

Up to 400,000 work as border guards within the Soviet Union and 100,000 are involved in internal police operations.

The KGB's foreign intelligence branch employs 15,000 people, he said. Of the 15,000, about 4,000 would be involved in field spy operations abroad.

Between 35 and 40 percent of Soviet foreign diplomats work directly in spying, he said.

A Canadian External Affairs department official said there are 33 Soviet diplomats in Canada (in Montreal and Ottawa) with about another 30 support staff.

Some diplomats believe Canada is a staging area for KGB operations throughout North America.

Four years ago defector Arkady Shevchenko, former Soviet ambassador and undersecretary to the United Nations, said in an interview that "Canada has never been taken as a minor power (by the Soviets). It is seen as one of the most important countries of the West. ... If they can divide Canada and the United States, it would be considered a great achievement."

Before he came to power two years ago, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said Soviet spies were so thick in Canada that "you and I both stumble into KGB agents in Ottawa every day of the week."

Since 1978, 21 Soviet diplomats have been expelled for their involvement in intelligence activities.

When he was Canadian solicitor-general responsible for counterintelligence between 1980 and 1984, Robert Kaplan was aware of "a lot" of Soviet activity in Canada.

"Soviet espionage has moved from the traditional targeting of domestic government policy secrets and plans into the whole military-industrial and high-tech fields," he said. "The targets are very often American products and technology in Canada. Cuba runs almost its whole American operation out of Canada."

He was asked if terrorists were trained in Canada.

"I can remember stories like that. ... The information came in and something was done about it." He would not elaborate.

He also acknowledged that the CIA has traditionally been allowed to spy on the spies in Canada with the permission of the Canadian government.

Steroid Users Not Just In Organized Sports

(Editor's note: This is the final article of a three-part series about Steroid Use.)

Collin Kemp
Special to the Herald

Steroid users are not only athletes in organized sports. Many users do not ever plan to pick up a football or heft a shot put.

Steven (not his real name), a 19-year old Seminole County High School graduate, is one of those athletes. Steven began taking steroids in early January to increase size and strength, but does not compete in any organized sporting activities.

"I really want to gain weight and weightlifting is a sport to me," Steven said. "I don't compete against other people but I compete with myself in a way."

His knowledge about the drugs is based on what he has read and seen and the experiences of his friend. "Most of the side effects that I've read about seem to come from long-term use," Steven said.

Steven said he felt that he was taking steroids the "right way" by monitoring his diet, sticking to only the most nutritious foods and starting with experience in the weightroom.

"You won't have a good basis to start with if you haven't been training. I've been working out for over two years now," he said. "You also need to take in a lot of amino acids, vitamins and minerals, fruits and vegetables. I'm going to avoid alcohol and junk food as much as possible."

Steven said he will eventually go on a one-injection per week dosage of Deca-Durabolin to supplement his daily 30 milligrams oral intake of Dianabol. Both are quite common brand names of anabolic steroids.

Steven used the risk-to-benefit ratio to express his final feelings on steroid use. "If I gain 20 or 30 pounds from this plan, it will be worth it," he said. "Even if it does raise my blood pressure or put stress on my liver. The short-term effects go away after you stop, but I'll be able to take the benefits into the gym and capitalize on them long after I stop."

Regardless of Steven's nutritional monitoring, steroids have been documented to have a detrimental effect on organs such as the liver, brain and heart. A documented case in Hormonal Manipulation (William M. Taylor MD; McFarland, 1985) cites a physician in Newcastle, N.J. who performed a study showing moderate doses of anabolic steroids could lead to significant heart risks.

The study, performed by Dr. O. Lynn Webb, concluded that the "regimen of moderate to high dosages of anabolic steroids could increase the chances of heart disease by fourfold."

Dr. Louis Acerno, professor of cardiopulmonary science at the University of Central Florida, said there are obvious effects to prolonged usages of steroids. "All steroids over a length of time exert a pharmacological effect which could include significant changes in response to infection, blood pressure, blood clotting, skin changes, and so on," Acerno said.

Acerno also felt that some of the positive side effects from the athlete's perspective, are medically dangerous. "Fluid retention is dangerous because of its effects on blood pressure which could lead to other organ damage," he said.

Acerno added that if the athlete were to discontinue use of the drug after a six-week cycle, the short-term effects would regress.

Not all athletes benefit from steroid use, and there are those who have found side effects that not only caused them to discontinue the drug, but started fears of its effects in the future.

The legal aspects of anabolic steroid, meanwhile, have been swept up in the steroid controversy. The illegality of possession or sale of anabolic steroids is legally ambiguous at best and is heavily tied to state regulation.

"Anabolic steroids are considered legend drugs versus controlled drugs," Capt. Roy Hughey of the Seminole County Sheriff's Department, said. "You therefore have to be a licenced pharmacist or doctor to dispense them. They are not inherently illegal to possess."

In the case of the sale of the drugs, Hughey said he interpreted the law as saying that unless a person is a licenced doctor or pharmacist he or she may not by definition "dispense" drugs. The sale of anabolic steroids by non-licenced persons is not specifically covered under the law.

Hughey contacted the State Attorney's office, who referred him to the state Department of Professional Regulation, before the actual letters were spelled out. "We're certainly running into a gray area here," Hughey said. "We would need sufficient probable cause to investigate any matter of steroid sales."

The infrequency of convictions in cases of steroid possession or sale is close to none from Hughey's point of view. "Our agency hasn't arrested anyone for possession or sale of steroids since I've been here," the 18-year Sheriff's Department veteran said.

Safety Hotline, (800) 368-6547, To Aid Boaters

The Boating Safety Hotline will be continued and made a regular part of the U.S. Coast Guard's Consumer Services for Recreational Boaters, according to Rear Admiral Matteson, head of the Coast Guard's Boating Safety Program.

The Hotline is a toll-free telephone service available to boaters in the United States. It was implemented on an experimental basis in the summer of 1985 and handled almost 6,000 calls from boaters in its first year.

The toll-free number is (800) 368-6547.

"With increasing awareness among boaters of the existence of the service, that calling rate could double by the 1987 boating season," Matteson said.

The Hotline is designed to operate as a two way service: both to give out information and to receive it. The most successful use of the Hotline thus far has occurred when it's publicized and used in conjunction with a list of current boating safety recalls being conducted by boat and engine manufacturers (in some recalls manufacturers are able to trace down 20 to 30 percent of current owners).

This list is published in the Coast Guard Boating circular and also in the boating press. When the recall list is published, word gets around that so and so manufacturer is conducting a recall for such and such a boat or engine. When owners hear this, they can call the hotline to verify if their particular boat is involved in the recall.

The Boating Safety Program is located at U.S. Coast Guard Headquarters in Washington D.C. and operates throughout the year from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A set of the fact sheets can be obtained by calling the Boating Safety Hotline. Current Fact Sheets include:

1. Introduction to the Coast Guard Consumer Program.
2. Boating Safety Defect Notification Program.
3. Alcohol and Boating — The Facts.
4. Auxiliary Marine Dealer Visitation Program.
5. Boating Accident Reports.
6. Safety on Small Passenger Vessels.
7. Coast Guard Boating Policy.
8. Documenting Your Vessel — Pros and Cons.
9. Checklist For Safe Boating.
10. Coast Guard Consumer Publications.
11. Sources of Boating Safety Education.
12. Importing a Boat.
13. Marine Sanitation Devices.
14. Consumer's Guide to the Boating Safety Standards.
15. Type V Hybrid PFD's.
16. Safety Precautions for Using Alcohol-Blend Gasolines in Boats.

BOATING TIP — Examine the transom (the end of the boat) for a number imprinted into the fiberglass or other boat material. It is called a hull identification number and is abbreviated as HIN. Check this number against the number shown on your Vessel Certificate of Title. Boat Certificate of Title will list the number as "Boat Serial Number's." Keep this information handy in case of loss. It's also a good idea to make a record of your engine number and if an I/O, to record it's number as well.

Have a happy boating day.

Pittsburgh Extends Orangemen's Slide

United Press International

Although the calendar shows it is February, Syracuse is playing like it is March.

The ninth-ranked Orangeman lost their fourth game in eight outings Monday night, dropping a 63-61 decision to No. 13 Pittsburgh. Syracuse customarily plays its worst basketball in March during the NCAA Tournament, failing to advance past the second round the last four years. The Orangemen also have not won the Big East tournament in that span.

The victory gave Pittsburgh sole possession of the Big East lead. Charles Smith hit a pair of free throws with eight seconds remaining to lift the Panthers, who have never won the league title.

Smith rebounded a missed shot by Rod Brookin and was fouled by Syracuse's Howard Triche. After Smith's foul shot, Pitt called timeout, allowing the Orangemen to set up a play. Greg Monroe missed a 3-point shot at the buzzer.

Jerome Lane scored 17 of his game-high 21 points after halftime for the Panthers. Lane, the nation's top rebounder, also grabbed 14 rebounds, including 5 offensive boards after halftime.

"Jerome had a great game off the boards," Pitt Coach Paul Evans said. "His second effort and rebounding in the second half kept us in the ballgame."

Basketball

Syracuse Coach Jim Boehelm said rebounding decided the outcome.

"It was our defensive rebounding in the last ten minutes of the ballgame that really hurt us," Boehelm said. "If I was to put my finger on it, that was what lost us the ballgame."

Pitt improved to 20-4 overall and 9-2 in the conference. Syracuse dropped to 19-4 and 8-3.

Smith and Mike Goodson finished with 12 points each for Pitt. Rony Selkaly scored 19 points and pulled down 11 rebounds for the Orangemen. Sherman Douglas added 16 points.

In other games, No. 1 Nevada-Las Vegas downed Pacific 73-59. No. 7 Temple edged Penn State 73-70 in overtime. No. 10 Georgetown trounced Boston College 78-56. Auburn stopped No. 19 Florida 84-70 and Ohio State routed Michigan State 90-72.

At Landover, Md., Reggie Williams hit for 11 of his game-high 25 points in the first eight minutes of the game, sparking Georgetown over Boston College. It was the 99th victory for Georgetown's 81-year-old basketball program.

Smith: No Diapers, Rattles For Inexperienced Brantley

By Scott Sander
Herald Sports Writer

To say that the Lake Brantley High School baseball team is young this season is a gross understatement. The Patriots have no returning starters and virtually little experience. One-third of the team is composed of freshmen and sophomores.

Second-year coach Mike Smith, however, is not about to outfit his Patriots in diapers and rattles for tonight's 7 o'clock season opener at home against Orlando Boone. Ed Dickmyer, a senior right-hander, will pitch.

"I can't begin to tell you how excited I am," Smith said. "This is such a young team, but they are all workers. I have never seen kids as dedicated as these guys. In a few years, we are going to be awesome."

Awesome hitting is what Brantley lost last year. Sluggers Mike Beams (Houston) and Mike Davis (Kansas City) are both playing professional baseball. Mark Coffey, who led the county in hitting with a .477 mark, moved on to Brevard Community College. Senior southpaw Zac Maddox, who won three games after becoming eligible, moved into the Lyman district.

Smith, 14-14 last and 151-64 for his career, said he has totally rebuilt the team. "We lost all the starters," Smith said. "These kids have come out here trying to earn spots. It was obvious that they were all open."

Smith said two players — Dickmyer and Greg Markham — who were not able to help the Pats last year should in '87. "Last year Eddie was academically ineligible," Smith said. "This year, he came out with a totally different attitude and its showing up in his pitching.

question mark lies. "We have got a lot of work to do," Smith said. "But the only way to improve is with experience."

Freshman Jerrey Thurston and junior Dave Czachowski will share the duties at third. Junior Ted Schieffelin will play shortstop while sophomore Ricky Shelman will be playing second base. Ebbert and sophomore Jimmy Morse will be sharing the duties at first. Green, who possesses a powerful stick, will be catching. Charles Fiore will backup at shortstop while junior Matt Morgan provides depth at third base and DH.

"Morse can really swing the bat," Smith said about the 6-0, 220-pound right-handed hitter.

Along with Morse, Smith said he expects his team to swing the bat well. "The coaching staff has taught them how to hit," Smith said. "There are some good hitters in the lineup, and there is no question that we'll score some runs. We have to avoid the stupid mistakes like base-running errors."

Smith said a .500 season would be satisfactory. "We are building for the future," Smith said. "I'd be happy to go .500, but I think that we'll be able to give most teams a good game."

"I'm here to build a winning team," Smith continued. "In order to do that, you need to start with young kids. I'm tickled to death to be in the situation that I'm in."

Smith said the attitudes have been excellent. "Half of the kids on the team have fathers that have coached," Smith said. "When these kids cross the white lines, they are strictly businesslike."

Boys' Dog-Eat-Dog District 9 To Begin

TONIGHT'S DISTRICT 9A-9 PAIRINGS

7 p.m. — Seminole at Lake Howell
7 p.m. — DeLand at Lake Mary
7 p.m. — Daytona Beach Mainland at Lyman
7 p.m. — Lake Brantley at Port Orange Spruce Creek

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

The dog-eat-dog District 9A-9 Tournament, in which there have been no guaranteed winners in the past, opens tonight with four first-round games at the sites of the top four seeds.

Top seeded Lake Howell, the seventh-ranked team in the state, hosts Seminole High; number two Lake Mary entertains DeLand; third seeded and defending champion Lyman hosts Daytona Beach Mainland and fourth-seeded Spruce Creek is at home against Lake Brantley.

Lake Howell, the Seminole Athletic Conference champion, goes into tonight's game with an 18-2 overall record and an 11-game unbeaten streak. The Silver Hawks are loaded with talented players on both ends of the field led by strikers Dougie Lee (15 goals) and Todd Smith (11 goals), midfielders Jeff Phillips (10 assists) and Alejandro Ballaudo (8 goals), defenders Erik Bird and Kenny Higgins and goalkeeper Joey Schulman. Lake Howell will be without senior captain Jerry Phillips who suffered a knee injury the final week of the regular season.

The much-improved Seminole team has a 4-11-1 overall record but went 0-10 in the SAC, including a pair of losses to Lake Howell. The Seminoles are led by forward Chris Ray (8 goals), midfielders Mike Altizer (4 assists) and Sean Sundvall and goalkeeper Scott Taylor.

"We've made a lot of progress this season but Lake Howell is still much stronger than we are," Merlino said.

Soccer

Lake Mary takes a 17-3-4 record into the district with its only two district losses coming at the hands of Lake Howell, the first on a penalty kick with 51 seconds left in the game.

Offensively, Lake Mary is led by Ernie Broenne (23 goals), Rick Broenne (10 goals) and Steve Sapp (10 assists). Lake Mary's defense has been superb this season as it has allowed more than one goal in only three games. The Lake Mary defense includes Rick Morales, Chris Riske, Pete Kinsley, Scott Schmitt, Ralph Padilla and goalkeeper Pete McNally who has a county-leading seven shutouts.

Lyman has been on a rollercoaster ride of sorts this season as it has played well at times but also struggled due to a rash of injuries. The Greyhounds, though, concluded the season with three consecutive impressive victories and coach Ray Sandidge's team always seems to peak at district time.

Leading the Greyhounds' attack are Todd Luke (8 goals), Gerard Mitchell (7 goals) and Mark Dubin (5 assists). Defensively, Shailer Bowers and goalkeeper Kelly Walden lead the way.

Lake Brantley hopes to turn a disappointing season around with a strong effort in the district tournament. The Patriots finished the regular season with a 6-12-4 record and a three-game losing streak. Up front, coach Jim Brody's team is led by Paolo Garzon and Greg Marko (6 goals each) while Cory Sheffield and Paul Ahrens anchor the midfield and Mark Weisgerber and Scott Blackadar lead the defense.

Stocks Open Lower

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened lower today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 10.13 Monday, was down 1.40 to 2175.34 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 504-452 among the 1,417 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 11,735,000 shares.

The stock market declined Monday when weak bond prices prompted investors to take profits in the slowest session in two weeks.

Traders said a weak bond market prompted investors to take profits. The Treasury's bellwether 30-year bond fell about three-quarters of a point, or about $7.50 for every $1,000 of face value.

"The stock market took its cue from the bond market," said Hugh Johnson, head of the investment policy committee at First Albany Corp.

Traders linked Monday's bond market weakness to the weak dollar and to Treasury Secretary James Baker's comment that finance officials of the five major industrialized democracies — the group known as G-5, comprised of the United States, Britain, France, Japan and West Germany — have not scheduled a meeting.

Dollar And Gold Both Take Fall

By United Press International

The U.S. dollar opened lower on all major world money markets today. The price of gold also was lower.

In the Far East, the dollar fell sharply against the Japanese yen in active trading, closing at 152.95 yen, down 1.50 from Monday's close of 154.45.

Dealers in Japan said the dollar moved lower on a flurry of sell orders spurred by remarks by U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker that no date had been set for the anticipated meeting of the group of five major industrialized democracies.

Traders noted that reports the Reagan administration had offered to help stabilize exchange rates in cooperation with Japan and West Germany, provided the two nations worked to stimulate their domestic demand to create more demand for American exports, helped prevent a further decline in the dollar.

In European trading, the dollar opened at 1.811 German marks in Frankfurt, down from 1.8235 at the close on Monday.

The dollar opened at 1.5275 Swiss francs in Zurich, down from 1.5407; and at 6.045 French francs in Paris, down from 6.0955.

Greyhound Workers Warned On Jobs

PHOENIX (UPI) — Leaders of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions have warned workers they will lose their jobs unless they ratify a contract with the new owner of Greyhound Lines.

In a letter to about 6,500 union members, the leaders said, "There is a blunt and unpleasant reason why your acceptance of the contract is so overwhelmingly recommended.

If this offer is not accepted, you will be on the street and hunting for another job on March 19."

March 19 is the date for completion of the sale of Greyhound Lines, the nation's largest intercity bus system, to a group headed by Dallas businessman Fred Currey.

The Greyhound Corp. sold the bus company after union workers rejected two proposed contracts.

licated, he said, by the shifting temperature extremes this time of year.

Ms. Hunter also said some of the climate problems in the courthouse are caused by one thermostat servicing two separate rooms.

Climate aside, the trial of Minner began after several potential jurors said they had seen his televised arrest as part of a promotion on WCPX-TV, Channel 6, for its Action Reporter, Ellen McFarlane. Minner has claimed Ms. McFarlane and Assistant State Attorney Ann Elizabeth Richard-Rutberg staged the arrest to get good TV footage. Ms. Richard-Rutberg and Ms. McFarlane have denied the accusation.

The case almost didn't get to trial because in January Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. was told by Minner's attorney, Ed Leinster, of Orlando, that the speedy-trial deadline had passed. Defendants have to be tried within 180 days of their arrest unless a waiver is granted, according to state law.

Eaton had agreed to drop the case, but that was before Ms. Richard-Rutberg or he had computed the time. They discovered that there was about a week left in which to try Minner so Eaton reversed his verbal order and ordered the case to go to trial. Leinster told Eaton he miscalculated the time thinking his client has been arrested in June rather than July.

McFarlane said in the wake of Monday's overdose.

It was unclear if the hospitalization would cause any delays in congressional investigations of the scandal. McFarlane has testified on the matter several times before lawmakers, coming under scrutiny because of various discrepancies in his statements and those of other witnesses.

One key dispute is between his testimony and that of White stockpiles in September, but Regan said the president learned of that shipment after the fact from McFarlane.

McFarlane said he found Regan's version "puzzling" and could not account for it.

bringing King under control. Leman said. Longwood police were called to the hospital and took King to the Longwood police station where he was charged with escape and aggravated battery on a law enforcement officer. Bond was set at $15,000 and King was returned to the Seminole County jail, where he remained today in isolation, Leman said.

King was being held without bond on the North Carolina charges and Leman said he has been fighting extradition to North Carolina.

Brown was treated at the hospital for cuts to his scalp. He was off duty today, Leman said.

The aluminum pipe used in the assault, Leman said, may be from one of two walkers available to King at the jail. Leman said a search is on today for that walker. King is believed to have hoarded salt from the jail supply to fill the pipe. Leman said he does not believe King has had any visitors in jail.

King was initially arrested in South Seminole Community Hospital Dec. 7, after Fayetteville, N.C., police had notified Longwood police on Dec. 5 that they believed King, who was wanted in that city on a charge of murder and arson, was in the Longwood area.

Longwood police traced King to the hospital, where he was being treated for injuries suffered in an Orange County hit-and-run accident.

The Seminole County sheriff's Department was notified by Longwood police Lt. Mark Smock of the allegations against King. At first, local lawmen were requested by North Carolina police to wait and arrest King when he was released from the hospital.

Seminole County Sheriff's Lt. Matt Stewart evaluated King's potential to escape from the hospital and alerted Fayetteville police, who ordered King's arrest, while he was still hospitalized.

After his arrest, King remained hospitalized under guard until he was transferred to the jail about three weeks ago. Since his transfer to the jail, Leman said King had been returned to the hospital by guards several times to receive therapy to aid in the recovery from his accidental injuries. The therapy has now been stopped, Leman said.

According to reporter Pat Reese of the Fayetteville Observer, King is accused of the Oct. 24, reputedly drug-related, stabbing death of Perry Lynn Ary III, 31. King is also accused of setting Ary's Fayetteville apartment afire and leaving his body inside the burning home following the killing.

After the murder King reportedly disappeared until Oct. 25, when he was found wandering in woods about three miles from his rural home near his burned car.

He allegedly claimed he had been attacked by hitchhikers who burned his car.

A chemical used at Kelly Springfield Tire, Co., where both King and Ary worked was used to fuel both the apartment fire and the burning of King's car, Reese reported.

Nov. 3 a North Carolina murder and arson warrant was issued for King. Fayetteville police mounted a search for him. The search ended in the Longwood hospital when Longwood police tracked him down.

the city attorney's attendance at a code enforcement seminar and resulting drafts of enforcement policy amendments to "streamline" sanford's enforcement system, according to City Manager Frank Faison.

After the session McClanahan said he felt "the attorney guidance — 34 hours in two months" was predominantly due to "so many cases" being turned over to the city's code enforcement board. McClanahan said many of these cases are "coming in from the city's 'Alleycats,' whom he said include Mercer, his wife, Juanny, and her Scenic Improvement Board colleague Ruth Lee.

In addition to lot mowing complaints, the Mercers and Mrs. Lee have submitted violation charges involving unlawful refuse accumulations and structural deteriorations at private properties.

McClanahan was sworn in as a city commissioner in January, having previously served from 1972-78. City commissioners last year came out in support of upgraded enforcement actions and hired another staffer to help handle the additional work load.

It is the Community Service System, run by Betty Zuckerman in Orlando, 848-4357. "We will try to coordinate through the case managers a care plan for these people," Ms. Thames said. Their hope is to open outposts at each county next year.

Information on programs to help the aging may be obtained by calling the Area Agency on Aging at 645-3339 in Winter Park, or the Local Health Council of East Central Florida in Orlando at 894-0695.

Some of the support groups for the frail elderly include Alzheimer Resource Center (ARC) with separate groups in Sanford and Oviedo. The main Winter Park phone number is 843-1910; and Parkinson's Club which meets the first Saturday of every month at 230 Perth Lane, Winter Park. Since both the Parkinson's and Alzheimer groups are connected, a call to the ARC number will obtain information on either support group.

Girl Seriously In Love Is Cheating On Her Parents

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 years old and have been having a serious love relationship with a 21-year-old guy who is in the military. We met four months ago and see each other four or five times a week, but I feel very guilty because the time we spent together is kept from my parents. I have to make up lies about where I'm going and who I'm with. All my friends know about him and have helped us to sneak around.

We are very much in love and tell each other so often. This is not a schoolgirl crush, Abby. He's the man I want to spend the rest of my life with. We're having sex but we are careful.

I want to introduce this wonderful guy to my parents, but I'm afraid if they know I'm seeing a 21-year-old guy they will forbid me to see him again, or even make trouble for him at the base.

I've read your column since I was 11 years old and trust your advice. Please publish this for us and other couples who have this problem, and don't say where it's from. I know we're not the only ones.

FORBIDDEN LOVE

DEAR FORBIDDEN: A 21-year-old guy is a man — or should be — and it's very unmanly to sneak around with a girl behind her parents' backs. I think you should introduce this wonderful guy to your parents. If

MASSACHUSETTS MRS.

DEAR MRS.: If a group of friends want to join together to honor someone, then each cheerfully pays his or her own way. But for family members to "honor" one of their own, and ask invited guests to pay for it, is out of line.

DEAR ABBY: I do my grocery shopping at a very large supermarket. There is one checkout woman (I guess you'd call her a cashier) who has been there for many years. She's not young.

Anyway, yesterday when she checked out my groceries, she learned toward me and said, "I lost my beloved Ricardo after 48 years of marriage; he had a massive heart attack with no warning." I didn't know what to say except, "Gee, I'm really sorry."

Abby, I don't even know this lady's name! She certainly did lay a depressing bit of news on me. I left the store feeling down in the dumps. I didn't need to hear that kind of news from a total stranger. Please comment.

IN THE DUMPS

DEAR IN: Perhaps you didn't need to hear that kind of news from a total stranger, but apparently she needed to talk about it. Sometimes the best thing we can do for a person is to listen. A little compassion, please.

Dinner, Detective Work To Benefit Central Florida Zoo

WESH TV 2 is sponsoring a special benefit-banquet to raise money for the Central Florida Zoo. The evening, called "Dinner & Detective Work," will be held at the Omni International Hotel on Saturday, March 7. These fun, and unusual festivities will begin at 6:30 p.m.

"Dinner & Detective Work" will begin at 6:30 p.m. with a cocktail party in the area adjacent to the main ballroom of the Omni. During the cocktail party, several scenes will be acted out revealing some "interesting" relationships between certain guests.

At approximately 7:15 p.m., it is said that some "evil doing" will occur, and a "member of WESH's management staff" could be murdered! The guests will be "sequestered" in the ballroom, and asked to assist Officer Jim Bishop and the Orlando Police Department in solving the crime and uncovering the murderer, while they enjoy a buffet dinner.

The "guest-sleuths" will have the opportunity to question the suspects throughout the evening, as well as have clues divulged through scenes performed on stages placed in the ballroom. After handing in their conclusions, the "guestsleuths" correctly uncovering the identity of the murderer will be rewarded.

Tickets for "Dinner & Detective Work" will be $65 per person, and received by reservation only. Attire will be black and white. Look for your invitation in the mail, or call Andrea Prior at the Central Florida Zoo (306-843-2341) to assure your reservation. Tables will be sold, as well, for $650 for a 10-seater.

The ticket price is a charitable donation and can be paid for by check, money order or credit card. Seating is limited, so get your reservations in as early as possible.

Monroe Harbour Dive & Ski Is A Full-Service Dive Shop

Sanford scuba divers and would-be divers no longer have to go 10 or 20 miles in order to get scuba equipment and training. They can avoid the traffic and inconvenience by coming to Sanford's newly opened full-line Scuba diving shop, Monroe Harbour Dive & Ski, located in One Harbour Place on the lakefront at 941 Palmetto Ave.

For convenience of divers, they will be open seven days a week with extended hours on weekends. Hours are Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Sunday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

In addition to all wetsuits and scuba equipment in fashion colors, the shop will be offering swimwear for men and women, T-shirts and sportswear. They will also have classes and diving trips.

They will carry a complete line from the economical to top of the line diving equipment. They also have an on-site Hydro-Static tester. To acquaint Sanford area residents with their new facilities, co-owners Harry Ellis and Fred Wilson are holding a drawing for prizes. Winners will be drawn during the grand opening of the One Harbour Place building scheduled for March 7 and 8. No purchase is necessary, just come in and register. First prize will be a diving watch, second, an underwater light, and third, a snorkel. They plan to hold future drawings every two months.

Harry and Fred are both divers. Harry was certified 1966 while in Saudi Arabia and became hooked on the sport in the beautiful waters of the Red Sea and Persian Gulf.

They feel there is a need for a dive shop in the Sanford area and they hope to fill the need. "We have had a lot of good response from Sanford divers," Harry said. "They are happy there is a shop in Sanford and are very supportive. We will help sponsor a dive club for area divers who are interested."

Mary Painter, local artist, will be displaying matted prints at Monroe Harbour Dive & Ski, as well as painting the walls with colorful murals. "Our emphasis is on customer service," Harry said. "We offer in-house repairs."

Husband and wife PADI certified diving instructor team, Ralph and Linda Cipro of Largo, who have been teaching diving and conducting diving trips in the Cayman Islands for the past two years, will be teaching diving classes for advanced as well as beginning divers.

Classrooms are upstairs at Monroe Harbour Dive & Ski and pool classes will be held in the nearby Holiday Inn swimming pool through arrangement with motel co-owner Ed Welch.

Advanced Open Diving class will be offered beginning Feb. 20; First Aid and CPR classes, Feb. 23 to March 2; Rescue Dive Class, Feb. 27 and Dive Master, March 6.

Classes in underwater photography are offered and camera equipment to help you capture the beautiful underwater environment on film is available for purchase at the shop. OPEC Oil Production Over Target

NEW YORK (UPI) — OPEC's oil production is about 700,000 barrels a day above its 15.8 million barrel daily ceiling because the United Arab Emirates, Iraq, Kuwait and Ecuador are exceeding their national output quotas. Petroleum Intelligence Weekly reported Monday.

The UAE will continue to pump at least 200,000 barrels a day above its quota of 902,000 barrels daily as long as its maverick state, Dubai, refuses to abide by OPEC pricing and quotas decisions. PIW said.

"Nevertheless, most company forecasters have already assumed this level of January overproduction in their outlook for a relatively balanced first-quarter market," the authoritative oil journal said.

Production from the Neutral Zone, which Saudi Arabia and Kuwait contribute to Iraq for the war effort against Iran, is running at capacity at 500,000 barrels a day.

On Dec. 20 the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to cut production by 7.2 percent to 15.8 million barrels a day for the first half of 1987 and to raise oil prices to an official average of $18 a barrel.

Iraq, which rejected its OPEC-assigned quota of 1.46 million barrels a day, is producing about 1.65 million barrels daily. PIW said. Iraq's output will rise further when it utilizes new capacity in the pipeline across Saudi Arabia to Yanbu on the Red Sea.

PIW said the UAE, Iraq, and the Neutral Zone (between Kuwait and Saudi Arabia) are largely responsible for OPEC's exceeding its self-imposed production limit. But Kuwait and Ecuador each appear to be producing about 50,000 barrels a day more than allowed under their OPEC-assigned output quotas, the journal said.

"In contrast, most other OPEC members are demonstrating remarkable cohesion in abiding by their quotas," the journal said.

Iran's production has climbed above 2 million barrels a day for the first time in six months and exports are at high levels despite attacks by Iraq on its Larak Island terminal, the journal said.
 In 1986, OPEC production surged 14 percent to an average 18.35 million barrels a day as the 13-nation cartel waged a pricing war to recapture lost market share, PIW said. In the final quarter last year OPEC largely observed production curbs that kept output only slightly above its 16.8 million barrel-a-day target.

Young Buyers Expect More Of Dealer services

DETROIT (UPI) — Younger car buyers seem to be more critical than their elders of new car dealership services, said automotive marketing firm J.D. Power & Associates in a study released Monday.

A sampling of more than 29,000 respondents polled last spring about their first year of new car ownership found that buyers aged 35 or less were more sensitive to poor customer car handling at dealerships than those above 35.

"Possibly the older generation of buyers have been battered down by past experiences and expect less, or they have mellowed and grown more tolerant of human weakness with age," noted Power in its 1988 Customer Satisfaction Index study, published in the February issue of the Power Report newsletter.

Power also said that younger buyers shop around and tend to be less brand loyal, challenging manufacturers to meet their higher expectations, but that these buyers have a larger and longer-lasting effect on car sales.

"They will carry their values and expectations with them as they mature and move upmarket," the study noted, so it is important for dealers to be responsive to their needs of they want them as repeat customers.

Honda, Toyota and Lincoln were the three highest scoring nameplates in total satisfaction among buyers aged under 35, the study showed. Honda, Toyota and Mercedes-Benz were the three highest brands in the 35-54 age group, while Saab, Toyota and Honda rated best in the age 55 or older category.

The study noted that the Saab ratings were compiled on a smaller sample size.

Last month a Power Report survey showed Honda's dealers to have one of the poorest attitudes among all nameplates, and the highest rate of customer "walk-aways."

However, this month's report is based on those owners who ultimately did buy a Honda, regardless of which dealer they purchased it from.

U.S. Charges Italy With Trade Violations

By Doug Cooper
THE HAGUE (UPI) — The United States has charged Italy with commercial treaty violations that cost Raytheon Corp. an estimated $6 million, the World Court said Monday.

The case, filed Friday but announced Monday, stems from 1968, when the mayor of Palermo, Sicily, seized facilities and assets of an Italian subsidiary of the U.S.-based electronics manufacturer Raytheon, according to the suit.

The government took over the Elettronica Sicula Co. after Raytheon signaled it would close the unprofitable plant for liquidation and dismiss its estimated 900 employees, according to the suit.

Raytheon owned 99 percent of the company. The U.S. company Machlett Laboratories Inc. owned the remainder.

Elettronica Sicula's plant and assets subsequently were acquired in bankruptcy proceedings by the Italian government-owned Istituto per la Ricostruzione Industriale "at substantially less than fair market value," the suit said.

The order closing the plant "to protect the general economic public interest ... and public order" was followed by its occupation by plant workers, the suit said.

A U.S. State Department estimated Raytheon suffered $6 million plus interest in damages from what it called the "unlawful" takeover. The suit asked the court to establish an award figure.

An Italian court annulled the Palermo mayor's requisition order 16 months after it was issued, but Raytheon never received compensation, the suit said.

Italy has not replied to the allegations, a World Court spokesman said. The State Department estimated oral pleadings in the case will begin early 1988.

The United States withdrew its recognition of the World Court's general jurisdiction in April 1986 in the course of its frustrated defense against Nicaraguan charges of unlawful U.S. support for anti-government Contra rebels.

The court ruled last June in favor of Nicaragua despite the United States' insistence it lacked jurisdiction in the case.

The case against Italy is based on a 1948 treaty between the two countries that specifically grants the World Court jurisdiction in treaty disputes, the State Department said.

"The United States continues its support of the World Court in appropriate cases," it said.

The International Court of Justice, based in The Hague and known as the World Court, is the judicial arm of the United Nations.

Non-Union Boatmen Operate Tugboats For Supertankers

VALDEZ, Alaska (UPI) — A West Coast strike by the Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific has forced a tugboat company to call in non-union workers to man the tugs escorting supertankers in and out of the oil port of Valdez, officials said Monday.

"The plan is to continue this as long as it's needed," Dick Simpson, Crowley Maritime vice president said from the Seattle office of the tug company.

Every day more than 1.9 million barrels of oil flow from Prudhoe Bay down the 800-mile trans-Alaska pipeline to Valdez where it is loaded onto tankers that ship the oil to refineries on the West and Gulf Coasts. Twenty percent of U.S. domestic production flows through the pipeline.

"The pipeline is operating normally," said John Ratterman, spokesman for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. in Anchorage.

Homer Sarber, Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific Alaska region director in Juneau, said 1,000 union members were striking at ports in Alaska, Washington, Oregon, California and Hawaii.

Cervical Rib Causes Pain, Affects Hand

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've been told I have cervical ribs. What does this mean?

DEAR READER — In some people, the first cervical rib, the highest rib in the chest cage, may be too large or in an abnormal position, so that it compresses the nerves to the hand. This can result in pain, weakness and numbness of the hand because of nerve damage. Surgery to remove the rib often cures this. However, an abnormal cervical rib is an uncommon cause of these symptoms, which more usually are produced by a ruptured cervical disc or carpal tunnel syndrome, two conditions that can cause nerve compression.

DEAR DR. GOTT — A few years ago I had an artificial knee put in. A slight accident two years ago required corrective surgery to the knee, during which I developed a severe staph infection. I ended up having to have the knee removed and a bone fusion with a 1/2-inch rod inserted from my hip to my ankle. My doctor claims that eventually I can get the knee back and have the rod removed. Is he just saying this to cheer me up? I still have the staph infection.

DEAR READER — Artificial joints can be a focus of infection that is difficult to clear up. The synthetic material of the new joint is hard to sterilize after it has been implanted; it may act as a foreign body, much as a splinter does. Your doctor is correct in saying that you will improve — but only if the infection can be eradicated, and the supporting rod can be removed.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 21 and used to have severe acne. I treated myself with a high dose of vitamin A (100,000 units daily) and it cleared up. I'm now down to 60,000 units a day, but am a bit concerned about the stories I hear of kidney and liver failure caused by vitamin A overdose. I've had kidney infections for years. Is this amount harmful to me and if I discontinue it, will the acne recur?

DEAR READER — Vitamin A overdose is a real health problem and can cause a wide variety of medical illnesses, including skin disease, weight loss, headaches, bleeding tendencies, joint tenderness and liver failure. No adult should take more than 25,000 units a day. I suggest that you ask your dermatologist whether some other treatment, such as vitamin A cream, would be preferable — and safer — for you.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
North knew he could show a profit by doubling five diamonds. Since he also knew he had plenty of cards to help his partner make a vulnerable five-spade game, he didn't want his opponents to get away with an inexpensive sacrifice. His thinking was OK, but declarer joined 99 percent of all bridge players by going set when there was a fairly obvious way to make the hand.
Declarer read the heart 10 as denying the queen, so he won the ace of hearts, played a spade to dummy, ruffed a diamond and played another spade to dummy. He trumped a second diamond, played to dummy's heart king and led the king of diamonds. When East played low, he threw his heart away. His thinking was that West might have started with only two hearts and would now have to lead clubs. But West won the ace of diamonds and played a heart. South ruffed and was still able to get to dummy with a spade to play a club. Everything would still have been all right if East followed with the club deuce, but East had heard about end plays. He put up the eight of clubs and declarer had to lose two club tricks to go set.

Where did South go wrong? He should not play West for only two hearts. To lock West in with an end play, he should play low on the opening heart lead from both hands. Now he can proceed as above, along the way cashing both high hearts, and West will have no exit card at the crucial moment when he is thrown on lead with the ace of diamonds.
