Asbestos, AIDS Were Two Issues In 1987

As Students Increased, So Did School System's Problems

Brian Hedberg
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County schools saw a "productive year" in 1987 as the county population increased and school board members had to deal with everything from inspecting for asbestos to setting an AIDS policy.

The Seminole County School Board approved the hiring of assistant principals at Geneva Elementary and Wilson Elementary in Sanford and more personnel at other elementary schools, necessitated by an ever-expanding student population. As schools grew more and more crowded, the school board was authorizing school additions in an effort to keep up with growth.

The county's school population was growing at a 4.4 percent rate in 1987, up from a 3.5 percent growth rate in 1986. The county's student population, at 42,000 in 1987, is projected to hit 73,000 in 10 years, which would require 20 new elementary schools, five new middle schools and a new high school.

In October, the Environmental Protection Agency cited Seminole County Schools with 15 violations of the federal prohibition of asbestos in school buildings. The cancer-causing insulating material was found around boilers and heat pipes in Sanford Middle, and Longwood, Milwee and Casselberry elementary schools, but was said to be of no threat to students. The school board authorized private firms to inspect all district school buildings for asbestos and submit a plan for removing the substance if it was determined to be a health hazard.

An AIDS policy for students and school employees was set in place by the school in December, giving the district firm direction on dealing with an individual with the AIDS virus. No reports of student or school employee with AIDS have been made in Seminole County.

The policy allows individuals with the AIDS virus to remain in the school system unless tests and evaluations show their presence would be a health hazard to others.

As school began in the fall, school officials were petitioning the state legislature not to repeal the sales tax on services, a repeal that would have eliminated hundreds of millions of dollars in school funds unless alternative funding was found. The bill repealing the services tax in mid-December also increased the sales tax on goods by one penny to 6 cents on the dollar, giving schools another potential funding pool.

A 17-year-old Seminole High School senior suffered serious injuries in November when a homemade bomb exploded and nearly detached his left arm. Michael David Garner constructed the bomb in the school's auto repair shop by welding one end of a pipe shut and filling the pipe with explosive materials.

Garner, who underwent eight hours of surgery to repair the damage to his arm and left side, may need additional surgery. A teacher aide may be

Sanford Second Hearing Tonight

Plan Prepares City For Future

By Nancy Simmons
Herald Staff Writer

The population of Sanford will increase approximately 68 percent by 2005 and the revised comprehensive plan, on the agenda at the city commission meeting tonight, will provide the guidelines needed to accommodate the new residents while providing for proper land development and conservation care, according to the plan's supporters.

The plan will be given a second reading at the commission meeting tonight.

The comprehensive plan that was put into effect in 1979 has been reviewed from time to time, according to City Planner Jay Marder, but it hasn't really been revised much until this year. "Since that time certain conditions have changed, planning laws have changed, and it's time to revamp and restructure the comprehensive plan program," Marder said. Bill Simmons, director of engineering and planning also stated that this "is the first real update since 1979."

A study conducted in the early stages of formulating the update to the present plan, showed that Sanford's population may increase to about 49,000 by 2005, Marder said. The present population is estimated at 30,000. Obviously, a plan for growth and development is needed, Marder states. "To my way of thinking this goes along with the overall modernization of the city's programs and facilities that has been taking place over the past two or three years," he said.

The new plan also provides the basis for the city's new land development regulations, which Marder said his department will be working on, once the city commission has adopted the plan. Those regulations will help the city to deal better with developers coming into the area, he explained.

The new plan is similar to the old plan, Marder said. Many policies have been revised over the years, but only in minor ways. He also noted that some elements are more detailed in the new proposed plan, than in the old. For example, he says that the existing plan, deals very lightly with the subject of conservation, particularly wetland areas. The new plan gives more specific goals and intentions in dealing with that issue over the next few years, he explained.

Much time and effort has gone into compiling the new plan, Marder said that he began work on it right after he came to Sanford as city planner in January 1986. At that time he was doing just "basic ground work," he said. Then in early fall of that year a planning consultant team, Ivey, Bennett, Harniss and Walls, from Orlando, began working on the project. "They spent the better part of one year working on the plan," Marder explained. "They did an extensive amount of work. In fact, we think they went way beyond what they needed to do. They did a great job."

The same consultant group is contracted by the city to assist in formulating the land development regulations, Marder added.

The Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission determined the main thrust of the study.

Gene Pharis Is A Police Officer Who's Trained To Talk

By Nancy Simmons
Herald Staff Writer

Although Sgt. Gene Pharis says that he has never been involved in a critical hostage situation, he says that every hour of every day, police officers are involved in potentially critical situations. That's true not just for Sanford, but for cities all across the nation.

Pharis is with the Sanford Police Department and has been trained in hostage negotiation. He has taken two five-day courses on the subject at Valencia College, in Orlando, and he has also taken a five-day course through the Institute of Police Technology and Management, in Jacksonville. He noted that the latter course was taught by former FBI agents, one with a psychology degree, and the other, who was a former SWAT team member.

In describing what a police officer should discuss with someone who is holding hostages, he said, "It's sort of like you're profiling someone. You'll discuss anything with them. You'll try to calm them down." He did add that in trying to calm them down, the officer is not supposed to give them false hope. You have to find out what the person is interested in, he continued. "So, maybe you'll talk about the weather. If you find out the person is a fisherman, then you'll talk about that."

He said that during negotiations the officer does have to stay away from anything that upsets the person, since the goal is to calm the individual. "But this is not always possible," he added. "Sometimes a person can be in such an emotional state that he keeps dwelling on whatever's bothering them and it takes them a while to calm down." During the time they are extremely upset, the officer just has to keep trying to calm them down, he added.

He also explained that the negotiating officer can try to insert other ideas during that time—to try to get the person to talk about other things. "If you can get them to talk about something else, if it's something pleasant, they'll calm down and maybe you can start negotiating with them," he said.

In a situation where a person has barricaded himself in a building, and has no hostages, such as in the recent incident with John Dahl, who barricaded himself in Adams Transfer and Storage, Inc., in Sanford, Dec. 3, Pharis said there is no danger to anyone, except that individual himself. "The object there is to calm them down until they will come out," he continued. "You have all the time in the world. You don't have to worry about storming the building."

Pharis said that there have been other instances in the Sanford area where a person has barricaded himself inside a building. He recalled

35 Fatalities Reported

Florida had the highest holiday traffic death tolls in the nation last weekend, but no traffic deaths were reported in Seminole County.

The state death toll stood at 35 people this morning. Of those, 14 were pedestrians, 22 were alcohol-related, one was drug-related and two are still under investigation.

The Florida Highway Patrol predicted 46 traffic deaths over the four-day holiday which began at 8 p.m. Wednesday and ended at 12:01 a.m. today.

Three fatal accidents occurred in central Florida; two in Orange County and one in Brevard County.

By late Sunday, 300 people had died on the nation's highways. Other states with high death tolls were Texas with at least 31 and North Carolina with at least 24.

Porter Family Moves Into New Home After Holiday Fire

By Brian Hedberg
Herald Staff Writer

A Sanford couple left homeless Christmas by a house fire are moving into a new home today, the deadline for their moving.

"There's not a whole lot to pack," said Steven Porter, 34, formerly of 216 Melissa Court. "It makes moving a whole lot easier."

Porter, his wife, Robin, and their 9-year-old son, Jason, had been staying in a room at Cavalier Motor Inn after a fire heavily damaged their home Christmas Eve. The Seminole County Red Cross paid for a room for the Porters, giving them the deadline of Monday to find a new home.

The Porters will be moving into a for-rent home on Third Street and Country Club Road. "We called and asked if we could move in without a deposit," Porter said. "The guy talked to the owners and explained the situation. They said, 'Sure, no problem.'"

"We're just going to stay there. It's not exactly what we're accustomed to, but I'm grateful to get it," Porter said. "It'd be hard to live in the same area again, I think."

Since the fire, which caused about $30,000 of structural

POLICE

Suspect In Family Fight Charged With Fighting With Police

A man who allegedly fought with his stepson was arrested at about 8:40 p.m. Thursday at his home by Altamonte Springs police who reported he allegedly fought them when they were investigating the earlier fight.

Girlfriend's Arm Slashed

Roy Lee Morris, Sr., 47, of 105 Academy Ave., Sanford, was arrested at the home of his girlfriend, Rosalyn M. Wilson, of 104 Academy Ave., after he allegedly slashed her on the left arm with a knife at about 7:30 p.m. Thursday. Sanford police reported.

Morris also allegedly held the knife to Wilson's throat and threatened to kill her. The knife was recovered at Morris' home and he was charged with battery. Bond was set at $5,000 and he has been released.

Daughter Bashed With Bottle

Jo Anne Lamb of 2853 Sanford Ave., Sanford, reported to Sanford police that as she slept in her bed at about 3:15 a.m. Thursday her father hit her on the left side of her face with an empty beer bottle.

Police reported responding to a call at that home earlier when the suspect was reportedly in a dispute with his son. John E. Lamb, 53, of the above address was arrested at his home at 3:47 a.m. Thursday on a charge of aggravated assault. Bond was set at $1,000 bond and he was released.

Wife: Hit With Table, Chair

William Theodore Adams Jr., 48, of 712 Laurel Way, Casselberry, has been charged with two counts of aggravated battery.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies reported arresting Adams at his home at 12:08 a.m. Saturday after he allegedly hit his wife in the body with a wooden table and a rocking chair.

Deputies reported that Sara J. Adams suffered facial injuries. She also said Adams had threatened to kill her with a kitchen knife he allegedly brandished.

Jailed On Police Fighting Charge

A man who allegedly hit a 17-year-old girl as Oviedo police entered the girl's home to stop the attack at about 2 a.m. Saturday turned on police and struggled as they tried to arrest him, a police report said.

Ralph Eric Browdy, 24, of 193 Ave. B, Oviedo, was arrested at 147 Stephens St., Oviedo. He has been charged with battery, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. He was being held in lieu of $500 bond.

Pot In Pocket

Sanford police, who made a traffic stop of the car driven by Ernest Sonny Shuler, 29, of Lake Monroe Terrace, Sanford, on 13th Street at Southwest Road at about 6:50 p.m. Friday, reported searching him and finding a bag of marijuana in his pocket.

Shuler has been charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana and drug paraphernalia. Bond was set at $500 and he has been released.

Looked 'Suspicious' To Police

Lake Mary police reported they were "suspicious" of a pickup truck traveling on Rinehart Road at about 3:35 a.m. Saturday. They stopped the vehicle and asked if they could "look" in the truck, a police report said.

Police reported finding a bag of marijuana in the glovebox of the truck and various items of drug paraphernalia in the vehicle. They also reported finding a vial of clear liquid in the driver's pocket.

Dana Kalaukoa, 23, of Orlando, was arrested on charges of possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana and drug paraphernalia and possession of imitation controlled substances. Bond was set at $500 and he was released.

Roommate Charged With Theft

Jimmie Blake, of 1706, 200 Fern Park Blvd., Fern Park, reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies that at about 11:30 p.m. Friday his roommate took his 1984 Mercury valued at $5,000, after Blake had told the man he could not drive his car.

Sheriff's deputies reported spotting the suspect in the car outside his home at about 2:56 a.m. Saturday. Raymond Lee Horsley, 24, has been arrested on an auto theft charge. He was being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Driving Under Influence Arrest

The following person has been arrested in Seminole County on a charge of driving under the influence: —Russell Edwin Scott, 47, no address listed, at 6:21 p.m. Thursday after his car failed to maintain a single lane on U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford.

Drive Defensively On New Year's Eve

The CareCab program co-sponsored by CareUnit of Orlando and the Central Florida Safety Council will provide free taxi rides home New Year's Eve to people too drunk to drive, but it can't prevent everyone who has had too much to drink from getting behind the wheel.

"That's why all motorists should drive defensively and be aware of the signs of the drunk driver," explains Henry Harlow, CareUnit of Orlando Director of Community Relations.

While some people can drive without exhibiting outward signs of having too much to drink, Harlow says most intoxicated motorists are fairly easy to spot.

"They may be driving too slow or too fast. Their reactions may be slower than other drivers on the road or they're driving where they shouldn't," he explains.

Harlow adds that the following clues provided by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration are also signs of an intoxicated motorist:

- Swings widely while making turns. Turns abruptly or illegally.
- Appears drunk. For example, the motorist may be drinking in the car, driving with a fixed gaze, tightly gripping the steering wheel, gesturing erratically or obscenely at other drivers, driving with his face close to the windshield or slouching in his seat.
- Comes close to striking a stationary object or another moving vehicle.
- Drifts, swerves or weaves from one side of the road to the other.
- Drives on the edge of the roadway, on the shoulder, off the roadway entirely or straight through turn-only lanes.
- Stops in traffic for no reason.
- Follows too closely behind other vehicles.
- Brakes erratically.
- Drives into opposing or crossing traffic.
- Responds slowly to traffic signals.
- Drives without headlights.

Norris Jennings of the Central Florida Safety Council's D.U.I. Counter-attack warns against trying to apprehend a driver who appears drunk.

"If he feels you're observing him, that may mean trouble for you," he says.

"Simply let the driver go by while noting as much as possible about the car and driver, including the license plate number, the model, the make and color of the car, the number of occupants and the direction the car is headed," he says.

"Then pull off the road as soon as possible, find a pay phone and relay the information as completely and succinctly as possible to the local police or highway patrol," Jennings explains.

He adds that the best way to deal with the drunk driver is to prevent him from getting on the road in the first place.

"If you or anyone you know has had too much to drink, call CareCab from any public place and we'll pick you up and take you home," he explains.

Harlow says CareCab will continue from 7:00 p.m. to 3:00 a.m. through January 2, 1988. The CareCab number is 1-800-433-3691.

Cigarette Grab Leads To Jail

A robber who grabbed cigarettes from the 7-Eleven on O'Brien Road, Fern Park, at about 9:15 a.m. Friday punched a confronting clerk in the face before running to a waiting car and fleeing.

Another clerk took the license number of the car, which was reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies. A sheriff's deputy spotted the car on 23rd Street at Airport Boulevard, Sanford, at about 10 a.m. Friday and stopped the vehicle. Cans of cigarettes were seen in the car. Cans were brought to the scene and the suspects were reportedly identified, and 944 worth of cigarettes in the car were said to bear that store's identification number.

Garfield Reginald Lampin, 37, of Orlando, and Kevin Leonard Jones, 27, of 7000 Magnolia Ave., Sanford, have been charged with robbery and were being held in lieu of $5,000 bond each.

Bloody Man In Underwear Arrested On Drug Charges

The man was outside dressed only in underwear and had blood on him. Speaking in broken English, he was saying to Seminole County firefighters only "my wife," while pointing to the Days Inn, State Road 46 west of Sanford, at about 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies went to the man's motel room and when they didn't get a response to knocks after about five minutes, they used a pass key to enter the room.

There they reported finding the man's wife in bed and described her as "incoherent"

Smeared blood was found in the room, but the woman did not appear to be injured. Bags of cocaine were found at the foot of the bed and on a nightstand. The man was returned to the room and there both he and his wife were arrested.

Jose Alvarez, 41, and Susana Herrera-Alvarez, 28, of Miami, have been charged with possession of cocaine. Herrera-Alvarez was also charged with possession of marijuana found in her suitcase. Bond was set at $2,000 each and they have been released.

Notice all the cars with tags signalling "You've got a friend in Pennsylvania?" If that's our friend in that car, then our friend is in Florida. And, probably here for the game Friday. Same thing with folks from South Carolina. Why are they smiling? Back home at Clemson and Penn State the temperatures are below freezing! Down here they pick citrus, go to the beach, go to theme parks and attractions, see games, bask in balmy weather; all that. No wonder they're smiling as they drive along our roadways.

We broke the record on Christmas Day, then turned around and tied it on Saturday (82 degrees). Sunday we slipped. Record was 82 and we only got to 80 in some portions of the county, and 78 in others - notably Sanford.

That's the good news. Are you ready for some bad tidings of not so great joy? Well, it's gonna get cold. Now, it's not going to get that bone-deep type frigidness that our cousins up north are experiencing but the cold that folks in the Panhandle have known the past couple of days. Look for a high tomorrow close to 70 but the lows will plummet down into the 40s. Not too deep however. We just might get some rain Tuesday nite - about a 40 percent chance, with the odds increasing Wednesday. The next few days will be like that. Highs in the 60s and maybe 70, and the lows in the 40s - maybe 50.

So it goes. Better than most place though. We're getting ready for the Citrus Parade, and folks out in California are getting ready for the Rose Parade. Oh, but what a difference. A Pacific storm front pushed

2 Receive DUI Sentences

The following persons have pleaded or been found guilty of driving under the influence or having an unlawful blood alcohol level.

The first-time offenders have had their driver license suspended for 6 months, been ordered to pay a fine and court costs usually totalling $367.50 and complete 50 hours of community service. When a guilty or no contest plea is entered or if the defendant is found guilty of an alcohol-related charge, other charges are usually either not prosecuted or dismissed. Most of the first-time offenders are allowed to apply for business-only driving permits. In cases where the sentences differ, the actual sentence is reported: —James Lee Nolin, 37, of 863 Ballard Street, of Altamonte Springs, was arrested on July 18, after a car he was driving struck a Seminole County Sheriff's Car that was parked while its driver was working an accident at State Road 600 and Lake of the Woods Boulevard. —Patricia Eads Williams, 22, of P.O. Box 617, Lake Road, Geneva, was arrested on Sept. 19, after she was observed driving off the pavement of State Road 46 at least five times. Williams received a fine of $500.

- Reboas Club AA, noon and 5:30 p.m., closed to the public, 8 p.m., step, 130 Normandy Road, Casselberry, Clean Air Reboas Club, noon, closed to the public.
- Alston, 7:30 p.m., Casselberry Senior Center, 200 N. Lake Triplet Drive, Casselberry.
- Sanford AA, noon, 5:30 p.m., 8 p.m. (women only), open discussion; 8 p.m., Living Sober (closed to the public), 1201 W. First St., Sanford.
- 24-Hour AA group beginners open discussion, 8 p.m., 317 B. Oak Ave., Sanford.
- 17-92 Group AA, 8 p.m., (closed to the public), Messiah Lutheran Church, 17-92 and Dingtrack Road.
- Alcoholics Anonymous, 8 p.m. (closed to the public), West Lake Hospital, State Road 434, Longwood.

Nar-Anon Meets

Nar-Anon, a self-help group for relatives and friends of addicts, will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Orlando General Hospital. For more information call 989-8364.

SOS Votes On By-Laws

The regular SOS (Support Obesity Surgery) meeting will be held at 7 p.m. on Jan. 12 at South Seminole Medical Plaza, 521 W. State Road 434, Longwood, in Classroom 103. This will be a business meeting where we will be voting on new by-laws and setting up committees. There will be a sharing time after the business is finished.

SOS is a support group for anyone who has had any type of bariatric (obesity) surgery performed and for those others who may be interested in more information in regard to the surgery. There is no charge to the public. Call 332-6500 for more information.

Bridge Club To Play

Sanford Duplicate Bridge Club meets at 12:30 p.m. each Tuesday at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce building, 400 E. First St., Sanford.

Volunteers Coordinators Meet

The Council of Volunteers Coordinators for Seminole County will meet Tuesday at 9 a.m. at the American Red Cross office, State Road 434 Longwood. Membership is open to directors and coordinators of agencies using volunteers. Annual dues are $5. For more information call Cheryl Werley, 323-2036.

Take Off Pounds Meets

TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) Chapter FL-491 meets every Tuesday from 8:30 to 9 p.m., at Boulevard Hairdesigners 294 W. Lake Mary Boulevard, Lake Mary. Call Lorrie at 321-4247.

Sanford Lions Meet

Sanford Lions Club meets at noon each Tuesday at Western Sizzlin Steakhouse, 2900 Orlando Drive, Sanford.

Clogging Class Offered

Sunshine Cloggers are offering a free clogging class at 7 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 6, at Matland Civic Center. It is open to all ages and families and singles are welcome. Country line dancing and partner dances are being added to clogging classes. For information call 834-8255 or 885-8437.

Computer Makers Generate Optimism For The New Year

By Beatrice Mutameddi
UPI Business Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — U.S. computer makers are optimistic about the prospects for 1988, spurred by a new generation of sophisticated personal computers that are changing the way people approach technology.

The industry last year emerged from the doldrums of 1986, launching a spate of chips, computers and software. Several companies, including International Business Machines Corp., in 1987 saw their first increase in profits after months of lower earnings.

"I think companies began coming back in the summer of '86, and '87 built on those gains," says Richard A. Shaffer, editor of the Technologic Computer Letter, in New York.

"'87 was, for most companies, a year of the comeback."

Many computer makers, including Apple Computer Inc. of Cupertino, Calif., and Compaq Computer Corp. of Houston, said they expect industry sales to grow between 20 percent and 30 percent next year. Others are more modest.

However, most agree that much of next year's growth will be in personal computers — a new, stronger and more flexible generation of machines with widespread applications in business and education.

Experts said 1987's most important development was IBM's introduction in April of a new family of personal computers, the PS-2 line, along with the announcement of a new operating system called OS-2 that allows the machines to simultaneously run several programs.

A close second was Apple, which in March launched its Macintosh SE and Macintosh II, whose user-friendly software, color and graphics capabilities are aimed at prying apart Big Blue's hold on business buyers.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Unilays Corp. and Hewlett-Packard Co. also launched aggressively priced personal computers in 1987.

The wave of new machines, along with advances in semiconductor technology and software, have made personal computers an increasingly attractive alternative to bulky mainframes. "The PC has become the focus of the computer business now," said John McCarthy, of Forrester Research Inc. in Cambridge, Mass., "and that spells bad times for all the minicomputer and mainframe guys."

Among software advances for personal computers last year were improved versions of spreadsheet, graphics and word processing programs. Microsoft Corp. of Redmond, Wash., introduced a new, IBM-compatible version of its best-selling Excel program, and Lotus Development Corp. of Cambridge, Mass., said it would update its widely used spreadsheet, called 1-2-3. Microsoft also created the OS-2 program for IBM, which is adding its own enhancements to the operating system.

A new generation of computer chips also greatly expanded the reach of personal computers by packing mainframe power into desktop units.

Intel Corp. of Santa Clara, Calif., stole the spotlight last year with its high-powered 80286 and 80386 microprocessors, which became the brains of computers produced by IBM, Compaq Computer Corp. and others.

Not to be outdone, Schaumburg, Ill.-based Motorola Inc. recently introduced the 68020, an improved version of its best-selling "oh-twenty" chip that the company says provides more power at lower cost.

Sun Microsystems Inc. of Mountain View, Calif., a maker of advanced computer systems called workstations, is also seeking to license other companies to produce its new Sparc chip, which employs a revolutionary technology that simplifies complex computer architecture.

Given these advances, analysts are looking forward to space-age improvements in personal computing, including technology that could allow humans to talk to their terminals.

"1988 might be the year of the voice," says Bruce Lupton, senior technology analyst for Hambrecht & Quist in San Francisco. "Every major company is taking a look at it."

Congress, Tisch Both Goofed

Postmaster General Preston R. Tisch: Is he the Grinch who stole Christmas or a victim of Congress' inept handling of the federal budget? As we see it, he's both.

Tisch touched off a political firestorm the other day by threatening to halt construction of 500 new post offices and to reduce post office hours if the Postal Service must absorb $1.7 billion in pension costs during the next two years as part of a federal deficit-cutting package.

Tisch has reason to be unhappy about the Senate version of the deficit-reduction plan: it unduly restricts Postal Service options in finding ways to offset the new $1.7 billion liability. But he had no reason to react like a spoiled child when he realized what the budget-cutters had proposed.

Instead of trying to find a solution, Tisch exacerbated his agency's problem, first by promising the cutbacks, then by engaging in a heated exchange with James C. Miller, federal budget director. Neither action helped the postmaster general, the Postal Service or those in Congress who want to cut the deficit without hurting mail service.

From 1974 until the passage of the Gramm-Rudman budget-cutting measure in 1985, the Postal Service budget was not considered part of the federal budget. It had become an independent agency in 1971, although it still receives some federal subsidy. Returning the Postal Service to its "off-budget" status would reduce federal expenditures by about $4 billion—but would have virtually no effect on the deficit, because it would reduce federal revenues as well.

The $1.7 billion shift in pension payments to the Postal Service covers pensions paid to postal employees who retired between 1971 and 1986. It makes sense for the Postal Service to assume that liability. But it doesn't make sense for Congress to mandate that expenditure and then limit the Postal Service's ability to react to it, which is what the Senate measure would do.

House and Senate negotiators should reconcile their differing versions of the deficit-cutting package by shifting the $1.7 billion pension liability to the Postal Service. To make that shift meaningful, Congress must grant the Postal Service authority to raise postal rates—preferably not on first-class mail—or to make its own cuts in areas other than capital expenditures.

Cable TV Rights

Cable television won a First Amendment victory in federal court the other day.

For the second time in two years, a federal appeals court in Washington has invalidated a Federal Communications Commission rule that required cable companies to carry all local television stations. The court said the "must-carry" rule is "incompatible with the First Amendment."

The cable industry is protected by the same First Amendment rights as other communications media. Government officials cannot tell newspapers what they must print, nor can the FCC order broadcasters to air specific programs. So why should the FCC have the right to tell cable companies what stations they must carry? It shouldn't.

Cable companies usually carry most, if not all, local stations. But in some markets, where there are too many local stations and not enough channels available, it should be the cable company and its customers, not the FCC, that determines which stations or cable services are provided. It is in the best interest of a cable company to please the majority of its customers. If most customers want local stations, you can bet the cable company will provide them—without FCC coercion.

Hart, Jackson Could Lead In Delegates

How bad is the Gary Hart re-entry orbit for the Democrats?

Very bad. There is a tendency in politics to consider any hot election news as monumental. But Hart is likely to be big-time stuff. His revival show can not only torment the Democrats, it can humiliate them and — slim possibility — even steal the Senate from them.

To begin, in the public eye, it trivializes the party's attempt to choose a nominee. Many years of serious work by many candidates are, for the moment, transcended by the raunchiest, crudest jokes heard in Washington since — since maybe forever. "Win One for the Zipper" is not the clarion call of a serious party. A candidate, or a party, can survive a great deal, but being laughed at is the most difficult. Right now, it is Johnny Carson and David Letterman who haunt the Democrats.

And consider possible results. Hart, despite massive disapproval numbers, is for the moment in first place in the Democratic polls. Given the fact that he is running in a seven-man field, he may stay there for quite a time. In second place is Jesse Jackson, the candidate who still hasn't apologized for hailing Fidel Castro. The two frontrunners are regarded as "unelectable" — Hart mostly because of the character issue, Jackson mostly because of his political radicalism.

But are they "un-nominatable"? Individually, it seems impossible for either one to get nominated. But suppose Hart gets 26 percent of the delegates and Jackson gets 24 percent of the delegates. That's plausible: the delegate selection rules provide delegate bonuses to candidates who get more than 15 percent of the vote. Suppose Hart then says, "Jesse, I want you to be my running mate — just deliver your delegates to me for the first ballot." A Hart-Jackson ticket could get the smallest percentage of the two-party vote in American history.

If it isn't that bad, it could be bad. Even with fewer votes, Hart and Jackson could still be the two biggest delegate-winners — say, 40 percent between them. Neither of them would get on the ticket. The other candidates and delegates would gang up against them. But then we will have a screeching chorus of "we wuz robbed."

leaving the impression of a chaotic back-room deal, with a candidate selected who didn't get many votes in the people's primaries.

There is something else about Hart. He's very liberal. In his last Senate session, 1985 and 1986, Hart's ranking by the liberal Americans for Democratic Action was 95 percent and 100 percent! Will large Hart-Jackson delegate totals push the Democratic platform to the left?

(Platform delegates are apportioned on the basis of delegate strength.) Will Hart's liberal ideas tilt the positions in the primaries still farther to the left, and even farther from the American mainstream?

Now, I have preached in this space that the primaries are unpredictable. And we will surely still be surprised in the months to come. But Hart's resurrection surfaces one new possibility — a Republican blowout, a landslide. That could yield a small coalition vote bonus to some Republican Senate candidates. Conceivably — barely — that might mean a Republican Senate.

WASHINGTON WORLD

Scrutiny Will Not Be Halted

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential candidates like former Sen. Gary Hart are learning to say to reporters "it's none of your business" when asked personal questions.

Because a man has decided that he has the right stuff to rule the country does not mean that he should not be subjected to scrutiny and that his own self esteem should be enough to satisfy the voters.

Let's face it, questions are going to be asked.

Like it or not, a candidate will be tested for character and personal honor. The criteria still prevails no matter whether he answers a question or not and the public will have a right to inquire into the manner of the man who is seeking to run the government for four years, with such enormous power.

Presidential candidates cannot do without publicity. They issue their biographies, they need to create an interest in themselves, in their ideas and who they are and why they are running for the White House.

They need identity. They need the cameras. They need the media dogging their heels. They need to be heard. They cannot separate themselves into two entities — the politician and the private person.

They should be and will be checked out on all scores, including their finances and their health.

What are they afraid of? If they want a private life why do they aspire to a public life where they will hold immense power over others? Why be afraid to answer questions that they themselves evoke? They want it both ways. So far, most of the complaining has been done by Gary Hart. Others undoubtedly would like to have a private and a public life.

But they seem to have resigned themselves to life under a microscope. Their families, too. No one said it would be easy. For some the relentless probing is a deterrent and not worth the gamble.

If a candidate decides to fuzzy up his dates of birth, his name, voters should know that, too, and they can decide for themselves whether it's important or not.

When they become public figures, as surely they will be as they aspire to the highest office in the land, presidential candidates have to figure they are going to be in the limelight and live in a goldfish bowl.

They will be judged on their honesty and their integrity, perhaps as much as on their grand design for the world.

CIA Says All AIDS Carriers May Die

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta
WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency has secretly reported what American experts have been privately saying at medical conferences for the last year — that all Americans infected with AIDS may die as a result of the disease.

The emphasis is on the word "all" — not just those now suffering the full effects of the disease, but those who have tested positive as carriers of the AIDS virus and are walking around, apparently well.

Physicians have always made distinctions between those who test positive for the virus, HIV (human immunodeficiency virus), and those who have "full-blown" AIDS, for which there is no cure. Sometimes they use the euphemisms — "AIDS victims" for the fatal parties and "AIDS carriers" for those who show no signs of the disease. But now it appears that none will survive.

SCIENCE WORLD

Tracking Leukemia

By Dethlefs Ricks
UPI Science Writer
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Scientists have moved a significant step closer to confirming a link between a deadly form of leukemia and two specific genes, a finding that may enhance understanding of the critical role genes play in cancer development.

In a series of studies by an international team of researchers, investigations conclude that two insidious oncogenes — cancer-causing genes — are associated with acute lymphoblastic leukemia, ALL, a form of the disease that primarily strikes children and young adults.

Scientists from Childrens Hospital in Los Angeles, Erasmus University in The Netherlands and the Institute of Cancer Research in London reported their findings in a recent issue of the scientific journal Cell.

The oncogenes apparently underlie formation of an unusual chromosomal abnormality that occurs when fragments of two chromosomes break and change places in a process called translocation.

The scientists report that exactly what causes translocation is still being explored.

This study and earlier investigations have shown that the oncogenes become activated when they fuse onto one of the newly transformed chromosomes and produce an abnormal protein.

The chromosome where this deadly chemical event occurs is known as the Philadelphia chromosome, found in the white blood cells of those affected by the disease. The Philadelphia chromosome for years has been associated with chronic myelogenous leukemia. CML, one of the more severe forms of the cancer that most frequently occurs in adults between the ages of 30 and 50.

The chromosome, so named because of its discovery at the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia in the 1960s, is one of the key markers for which doctors look to confirm a diagnosis of CML.

Now, the international team suggests that the chromosome may also be prominent in some patients suffering ALL.

"The Philadelphia chromosome is the best known chromosomal abnormality related to cancer in human beings," said John Groffen, chief of molecular genetics at Childrens Hospital and an associate professor of pediatrics and microbiology at the University of Southern California School of Medicine.

"In CML, this chromosome will be found all of the time," said Groffen. "But in ALL, it appears as if it is present in at least 30 percent of the cases."

Groffen said the presence of abnormal fusion proteins in both ALL and CML Philadelphia chromosomes suggest the two leukemias may have a common molecular basis.

CML primarily affects a type of white blood cell known as granulocytes, and in ALL, the affected cells are the carriers of immunity known as lymphocytes which also comprise a portion of the white cells found in blood.

The molecular thread that links the two cancers appears to be the process of translocation and the potential for a killer chemical machinery that can ensue when the two oncogenes fuse, Groffen said.

DICK WEST

Some Original Dwarfs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" I have heard of before. But "Snow White and the 39 Dwarfs"?

That may be going as bit far, even for New Hampshire.

Yet we are told that no fewer than 27 Democrats and 12 Republicans forked over a thousand bucks apiece to get on the ballot in that state's presidential primary Feb. 16, 1988.

"Snow White," a feature-length cartoon produced by the Disney studios in California, is 50 years old. I don't know how old the New Hampshire primary is but both probably have been around longer than some of the candidates.

Originally, the seven dwarfs referred to the members of Congress, ex-senators, governors, former occupants of state houses, ministers, former occupants of pulpits, et al., who were seeking next year's Democratic nomination.

But that was before the New Hampshire primary swelled the roster.

A voter perusing the list probably will run across some familiar candidates, including such original dwarfs as Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, ex-Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, the Rev. Jesse Jackson of Chicago and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri. To name a few.

Not to mention such well-known Republicans as Vice President George Bush of Texas, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

Even Harold Stassen of Minnesota, a perennial GOP candidate for president, paid his $1,000, which, to spare you some arithmetic, adds up to $39,000.

Mostly, however, one will encounter such names as Cyril Sagan, A.A. Van Petten, Florenzo DiDonato and Robert Drucker. I rather doubt they are household names, even in their own households.

Only one woman was among the 39 contenders — a Republican, Mary Jane Rachner of Minnesota.

And only three candidates filed for vice president, the office being given up by Bush. But one of them, David Duke of Louisiana, a former head of the Ku Klux Klan, also is running for president, and may not count.

Duke, incidentally, paid $2,000 to enter both races as a Democrat.

The other two, who are running for vice president as Republicans, presumably paid a mere $1,000 to be included on the ballot.

That, according to the CIA, leaves three groups of healthy-looking people, carrying the AIDS virus for as long as five to seven years without showing any symptoms.

It is when the outward symptoms appear that a person is officially diagnosed as "having AIDS" — the fourth stage of the disease. But according to the CIA report of the latest medical thinking, everyone with the early stages will eventually develop full-blown AIDS, and everyone with full-blown AIDS dies.

In stage four, it is "co-infections" that bring the body down — pneumonia, Hodgkins Disease, cancer, tuberculosis, salmonella, shingles, mononucleosis, hookworm, etc.

In the stage-three people, the ones with no symptoms, 20 percent to 38 percent will get AIDS within five years after their initial infection. Currently, 50 percent of the people who have AIDS are predicted to die within two years after they are diagnosed, the CIA reports.

NATION IN BRIEF

Sailor Dies Of Wounds Suffered In Grenade Attack

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Spanish authorities have questioned claims that Catalan separatists carried out a grenade attack on a waterfront USO club that killed one American sailor and wounded nine others.

A government spokesman said Sunday the grenades used were either Italian- or U.S.-made, leading police to believe the Saturday evening attack was linked to what he called "international terrorism."

The statement cast doubt on a claim by the Catalanian Red Army of Liberation that it was responsible for the attack, which witnesses said was carried out by a dark-haired young man with a heavy, non-Spanish accent.

Navy Seaman Ronald Strong, 20, of Needers, Pa., died about 4 a.m. Sunday of internal injuries suffered in the blast, U.S. Embassy spokesman Robert Meade said.

Nine other sailors were slightly wounded in the attack that ripped through the USO club, shattering windows, ripping out a water pipe and damaging a car parked nearby. The last of the wounded sailors was released from the hospital Sunday and returned to his ship, authorities said.

Fromme May Face Charges

ALDERSON, W. Va. (UPI) — Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme is in solitary confinement under 24-hour guard and facing additional charges for her aborted escape last week from a federal women's prison in West Virginia's rugged mountains.

U.S. Marshal James Hickman said an announcement was expected today on filing escape charges against Fromme, a 39-year-old former lieutenant of California cult killer Charles Manson.

Warden Ron Burkhardt said Fromme will probably be transferred to another higher security facility.

Hickman also said federal authorities are checking records of Fromme's phone calls to see whether she had talked to other followers of Manson before escaping last Wednesday from the minimum-security prison.

Pentagon Mismanaged Exercise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon for the fourth consecutive year has mismanaged the staging of its massive Central America training exercises — long assailed as a back-door operation to aid the Nicaraguan rebels, an internal inquiry has found.

The Pentagon inspector general's office reported Dec. 16 that the Army again failed to provide worthwhile training or adequately account for weapons and equipment used in its recent exercises.

Similar deficiencies were found in earlier audits of annual exercises conducted in Honduras and Panama from 1984 to 1986, according to a letter written by Derek Vander Schaaf, the inspector general's No. 2 official.

Army auditors found that lax administration of this year's exercises stemmed from "core problems that continue to plague" the controversial program, according to the letter obtained by United Press International.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Owners Denied Doomed Vessel Was Overcrowded When It Sank

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — The owners of the passenger ship Dona Paz denied at the opening of a formal inquiry today they had allowed overcrowding of the ill-fated vessel, which burned and sank five days before Christmas in the world's worst peacetime shipping disaster.

Vice President Vicente Gombito of Sulpicio Lines conceded before a five-member Board of Marine Inquiry that the passenger manifest may have a number of incorrect or misspelled names, helping account for complaints by relatives that many victims are missing from the list.

The small hearing room was jammed with reporters and some 75 relatives of the more than 1,600 people who are dead or missing in the Dec. 20 sinking, which occurred after the Dona Paz was rammed and sank on a Christmas week voyage to Manila.

Testimony on the tragedy is being heard by a panel chaired by Philippine Navy Capt. Dario Fajardo, two other naval captains, a chief engineer and a lawyer. Lawyers for the families and the two shipping firms involved were also in attendance.

Afghan Rebels Attack Convoy

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (UPI) — Afghan guerrillas attacked a convoy trying to reach a besieged Soviet garrison and cut power lines in the capital as world leaders condemned the eighth anniversary of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Moscow remained silent Sunday on the anniversary, but lodged an official protest with Tehran over an assault by Afghans on a Soviet diplomatic mission in Iran.

Several Afghans were injured and arrested when they stormed the Soviet Consulate in the central Iranian city of Isfahan, Soviet and Iranian news reports said. Iranian security personnel also were injured and the diplomatic building was damaged, the reports said.

Agency Afghan Press said Afghan rebels launched raids throughout Afghanistan and triggered a blackout in the Afghan capital of Kabul. The rebel news service also reported fierce fighting on a supply road to an encircled Soviet garrison at Khost, 20 miles from the Pakistan border.

Iran Seeks Volunteers For War

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — Iran says its forces inflicted heavy losses on Iraqi troops during artillery duels along the southern and western war fronts, but Tehran's long-threatened winter offensive has yet to materialize.

Iranian parliamentary speaker Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani appealed Sunday for more volunteers, saying "anyone wishing to back the Islamic Revolution should be prepared to leave for the fronts," according to the official Islamic Republic News Agency.

Iran has some 250,000 soldiers and volunteers poised near the southern Iraqi port city of Basra for a massive winter offensive, but military analysts say there are so far no signs the operation has begun. Iranian forces have attempted a few limited probing operations that the better-equipped Iraqi forces repulsed.

From The Depths To The Summit

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The most dramatic year of Ronald Reagan's presidency began in the depths of the Iran-Contra scandal and culminated at the heights of a summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

—Ronald Reagan
Luck had not run out

Just at a time when his credibility and leadership were the lowest in his seven years in the White House, the 76-year-old president found that his luck had not run out.

The summit spectacular in Washington, the eloquent rhetoric on curtailing the threat of a superpower nuclear showdown, and the signing of a treaty with the Soviets to destroy an entire class of medium and short range missiles in Europe and Asia all gave the president a big lift in the popularity polls and in global stature.

Reagan may have found out belatedly that the image of peacemaker is even more appealing to a weary world than that of a rampaging Rambo. Clearly he has toned down his high noon profile to reach an accommodation with Moscow.

Domestic problems, particularly a shaky economy, may have been one of the catalysts to bring about the new INF treaty and a general backing off from a confrontational climate.

When the afterglow wears off, both leaders may find themselves at odds on some of the real issues separating capitalism from communism. And Reagan has lost no opportunity to stress that he has not changed his view that the Soviet Union is still an "evil empire."

But the president, who has proclaimed so often, "I am a conservative," ran into a fiasco from his favorite constituents, those on his party's right, who accused him of appeasement and being a pawn of Gorbachev.

Their ire was prompted by Reagan's remark that they believe that a nuclear war is inevitable.

Before the summit, the political roof had fallen on Reagan. Black Monday on Wall Street with the stock market crash, conflict in the Persian Gulf along with controversy over his policy, a mounting deficit, the decline of the dollar and a Democrat-controlled Congress added to his woes.

But Reagan's reputation suffered most when his secret dealings, involving the sale of arms to Iran in a trade-off for the American hostages in Lebanon, were revealed.

Also exposed was the funneling of profits from the weapons transactions to the Nicaraguan rebels, or Contras, by White House staffers who apparently were heading Reagan's order to aid the Contras despite a congressional ban on assistance.

In the initial anguished days, he called Lt. Col. Oliver North a "national hero" even after he fired him for his clandestine operations. He also permitted Vice Adm. John Poindexter, his national security adviser, to resign.

The Tower Commission was formed and later reported that Reagan's hands off management style had contributed to the scandal. A congressional committee, after hearing North and Poindexter admit that they had lied, deceived Congress, altered reports and shredded and burned official documents, said that Reagan had failed to "faithfully execute the laws of the land" and if he didn't know what was going on, he should have.

Reagan's reaction, according to White House chief of staff Howard Baker, was that he "really, really, felt put upon."

The president's loose style, and uncertain trumpet, detachment from responsibility has become more and more apparent in his waning days.

Another case in point was when he permitted Education Secretary William Bennett to deliver the coup de grace against Judge Douglas Ginsburg, his second nominee for the Supreme Court, after it was revealed that Ginsburg had smoked marijuana as a law professor at Harvard.

In that instance, Reagan told Bennett: "You do what you think is right."

When arms negotiators presented the president with a compromise on the "Star Wars" space defense so that it would not block the rosy glow of the summit, Reagan read it, still did not understand it and then was assured by his advisers that his policy was "fully protected."

The summit pulled Reagan back up in the polls and he regained some of his confidence. But in the waning days of his presidency, Reagan has had to compromise more often, something he hates to do.

His first team of "troika" advisers, who were on the campaign trail in 1980 with him and had a moderating effect, disappeared from the White House. They were replaced by a one-man band — Donald Regan — who ruled the roost as chief of staff and catered to Reagan's hardline impulses.

Now in that job is now Howard Baker, the great compromiser, who tries to let "Reagan be Reagan" and at the same time to move him into the middle.

In his years in office, Reagan has managed to implement much of the "Reagan Revolution," moving the country to the right, starting a one-trillion-dollar plus military buildup of new weapons programs and slashing social programs.

Reagan still ignores details, runs his office like the chairman of the board, and relies heavily on aides. The favorite part of his job is speechmaking, still considered his forte.

In his speeches on the stump, he usually knocks government workers and his predecessor, Jimmy Carter.

He usually takes a defensive stance when confronted with the fact that more than 100 of his top federal appointees have been fired or had to resign under allegations of wrongdoing. He also has seen some of his closest advisers on trial, accused of conflicts of interest.

U.S. Said To Reject Immunity In Spy Case

By Richard Sale
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israeli government officials involved in the Pollard spy case have been refused immunity by U.S. prosecutors, who have expanded their inquiry to other American suspects, administration sources say.

The hard-line stance by the Justice Department toward Israel stems from Jerusalem's failure to cooperate fully with the ongoing investigation into one of the most damaging espionage scandals in years, said these officials, who requested anonymity.

Jonathan Jay Pollard, a U.S. Navy analyst, was arrested in November 1985 on charges he passed the Israeli sensitive data on U.S. weapons systems, laser technology and photos from American spy satellites. He later was found guilty and sentenced to life in prison.

United Press International reported recently that administration officials grew even more concerned because some of the data later was leaked to the Soviet KGB by moles in the Israeli intelligence agency, Mossad.

State Department sources said Meir Roenne, a former Israeli ambassador acting as an envoy, met in September with U.S. officials and requested immunity from prosecution for three Israelis who directed Pollard's activities.

But Joseph DiGenova, the U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, and State Department officials rejected the request, the sources said.

The sources said administration officials are adamant in their efforts to prosecute the entire spy network to the fullest extent possible.

Justice Department officials were particularly angered last year when Israel, a key U.S. ally, backed down on a promise to cooperate with U.S. investigators who flew to Tel Aviv, they said.

An administration official also said, "We expect that we'll see additional suspects, and by that I mean U.S. nationals."

Asked about the reported developments, spokesmen for the State Department and the Justice Department declined to comment.

A spokesman for the Israeli government could not immediately be reached for comment.

The Israeli government initially claimed it was not involved, but a federal grand jury last year indicted an Israeli officer, Col. Aviem Sella, on conspiracy charges stemming from his alleged recruitment of Pollard in 1984.

After his indictment, Sella was promoted to a brigadier general of Israel's Air Force but he later resigned because of the angry reaction in the United States.

In addition to Sella, Pollard also reported to Yousef Yagur,

'The attaches were invariably used as spies and recruited and ran spies.'
'Intelligence source'

former science officer at the Israeli consulate in New York, and Han Ravid, scientific attache at the Israeli embassy in Washington, these sources said.

A U.S. intelligence source said Pollard's handlers were part of a longstanding Israeli espionage group called "Lekem." The source said that U.S. counterintelligence agents have been told the group had a "mandate" to penetrate classified U.S. defense programs and obtain classified technology, especially data relating to nuclear weapons.

The spy ring consists of scientific attaches or officials who report directly to the Israeli Defense Ministry, the analyst said.

"The attaches were invariably used as spies and recruited and ran spies," he said.

Some administration officials and members of Congress have questioned whether the Justice Department has been aggressive enough in its handling of the matter and other recent spy cases.

An aide to Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., said his House Judiciary subcommittee on criminal justice is considering holding "extensive oversight hearings" on how effectively U.S. espionage laws are enforced and "whether there has been the exercise of political favoritism."

The staffer said revelations of Soviet penetration of Israel's Mossad and of reported Israeli attempts to use stolen U.S. documents to knock out Pakistan's nuclear reactor have been major factors in keeping the Pollard case alive.

A State Department source said the Soviet espionage ring that penetrated Mossad included Israeli defense officials close to then Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

These officials, according to the source, traded stolen U.S. intelligence documents to Soviet military intelligence agents in return for assurances of greater emigration of Soviet Jews.

"It began as a straight data-for-people deal," the source said, but the result was that "the Soviets penetrated the Israeli defense establishment at a high level."

The staffer for Conyers said the congressman had heard independent government reports that Israel "was trading information" to the Soviets and "we're interested since very important national security questions are involved."

Other U.S. intelligence analysts who have reviewed the data that Pollard stole said it included satellite photos of sensitive installations of U.S. allies such as Pakistan, Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

These intelligence analysts said Israel, seeking to prevent any Moslem nation from developing or obtaining nuclear weapons, approached India in June 1985 with satellite photos, obtained by Pollard, of Pakistan's secret nuclear weapons facility at Kahuta. They said the Israelis suggested mounting a joint air strike against the plant.

According to administration officials, India replied "by getting very haughty and saying that it ranked third after the two superpowers (in air power) and didn't need Israel's help."

Sella, who recruited Pollard, is a computer expert who planned and led the 1981 air raid that destroyed an Iraqi nuclear reactor, the officials said.

A State Department official indicated that if Israel attempted such an attack, the United States would warn Pakistan of the threat. The official added that Kahuta "is a well-defended site."

Other data that Pollard stole included a "large Defense Intelligence Agency handbook" nicknamed "the Bible," which contained strategies the U.S. Navy would use if it found itself under attack by Israel or other foreign countries, sources said.

One Justice Department

source cited a report that described Pollard's former supervisor at the Office of Naval Intelligence as "visibly shaken and upset" when discussing loss of the document.

All told, the satellite photos, classified assessments and other data stolen by Pollard comprise a mass that is "six feet long, four feet wide and three feet deep," one analyst said.

An administration official complained in an interview that U.S. officials are certain the Israeli espionage is continuing.

"Mossad is the most active foreign intelligence service on U.S. soil," even more active and successful than the KGB, this source said.

The Justice Department source said there were 43 cases of Israeli espionage in a 15-year period ending in 1980.

Past Israeli collection efforts in the United States are described in a secret CIA summary, on file at the Brookings Institute, a Washington think-tank, entitled "Israel: Foreign Intelligence and Security Services."

The 47-page study says that Israel attempted to bribe U.S. Embassy personnel such as Marine guards and once planted a bug in the U.S. ambassador's office in Tel Aviv.

It says other recruitment methods include blackmail, payoffs and business opportunities.

Is Nepotism Flourishing In Congress?

Congressional Relatives Hold Six Dozen Capitol Hill Posts

By Debra Blum
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Since the passage of a law 20 years ago banning House and Senate members from hiring their relatives, a new kind of "loophole nepotism" appears to have arrived on Capitol Hill.

United Press International has learned that relatives of at least 73 lawmakers have worked on the congressional payroll in the past year and a half alone, apparently because many members of Congress have learned how to skirt the 1967 anti-nepotism statute.

To bypass the restriction, members or their relatives have gone to other lawmakers, the House doorkeeper or the postmaster to secure coveted jobs.

Lawmakers sometimes use their influence — perhaps through deals with colleagues — to assist these job searches. But in many cases, an applicant has to only mention his or her widely recognized surname to get a job.

House and Senate members defend the qualifications of many congressionally employed family members, while often denying taking a hands-on role in the hirings.

Questions about a substantial number of those hired — 23 in the UPI survey — may be diminished because they have held insignificant, low-paying summer internships.

But critics have charged privately that favoritism to relatives has resulted in the hiring of poorly suited workers or at least deprived taxpayers of the best available talent.

For example, critics cite Joan Teague Rose, wife of Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., a $41,572 staff assistant on the Agriculture subcommittee chaired by her husband. Congressional sources alleged that Mrs. Rose often is absent from the offices of the tobacco and peanut panel and not earning her pay.

One source said she is known to stop by the committee office in jogging clothes — and hardly shows up enough "to get her telephone messages."

Another source said, "She's making a lot of money per hour."

Heidi Pender, counsel for the subcommittee, called the allegations unfounded "gossip and innuendo" and stressed that Mrs. Rose had been a congressional aide for seven years before marrying the congressman in 1982.

She said the accusers may be jealous or irritated at having to work with a member's wife. Except when on official travel, she said, Mrs. Rose works her full shift in the office every day "and whatever other hours are required as well," handling such matters as animal welfare and pesticide restrictions on imported tobacco.

Pender stressed that Mrs. Rose's employment did not violate the anti-nepotism statute because she joined Rose's subcommittee a few months before their marriage.

"No one can assert that anyone is exerting any influence in this case," Pender said.

Mrs. Rose was unavailable for comment.

The anti-nepotism law, which bars members from directly hiring 27 categories of relatives from immediate family members to in-laws, is relatively toothless. Violators are simply banned from collecting further paychecks. Congressional ethics panels never have alleged a violation.

The statute exempts those employed prior to its passage and those who held their positions before becoming related to a lawmaker through marriage.

But many other relatives appear to have benefited from old-fashioned political swaps or personal favors.

For example:

- The son and a nephew of Rep. Joseph Early, D-Mass., have served as staff assistants to Rep. Robert Traxler, D-Mich., a colleague of Early's on the House Appropriations Committee.
- The step-son of Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., works on the House Public Works Committee chaired by Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., while Howard's daughter is an aide to the Interior Committee chaired by Udall.
- Rep. Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., whose niece worked as a secretary for Early, urged a second delegation from the Massachusetts Democratic delegation, Rep. Barney Frank, to offer her a new job.
- Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Texas, said he con-

Exclusive UPI Investigative Report

sulted with his group of "good ole boys" in Congress last summer and found his son, Thomas, a paid internship in the office of his southern congressional buddy, Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark.

These lawmakers or their aides stressed such cases are fully legal.

Congress has for decades been infamous for cronyism, including hiring practices often amounting to political or personal paybacks.

In 1967, with disclosures that lawmakers also were padding their staffs with wives and other family members, Congress passed a sweeping, government-wide amendment aimed at curbing nepotism. It barred public officials from employing relatives.

"About 50 members had their wives on the payroll," said veteran Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, who proposed the floor amendment. "Some were doing a good job, but ... two-thirds of them didn't do any work at all."

"We can't prohibit someone from getting a job just because they have a certain relative, but you need to make sure it's not going too far," he said.

Since June 1986, relatives of at least 51 House members and nine senators have worked on Capitol Hill.

Besides Mrs. Rose, at least seven other members' spouses hold paying congressional jobs, but five of them worked on Capitol Hill before marrying.

A number of other members have been assisted by their spouses free of charge.

While House employees' relationships to members must be listed in monthly payroll reports, sources say the hiring of some family members is kept secret — particularly relatives with different surnames than the office holder.

UPI found at least five family members whose relationships did not appear in records filed with the Clerk of the House, The Secretary of the Senate requires no such reporting.

The UPI survey revealed that certain congressmen have been particularly willing to find a spot for a colleague's kin on their payroll.

For instance, when Early's nephew, Dennis Early, left his staff job in Traxler's office in 1986, Early's son, Mark, took over in his cousin's place at $28,000 a year.

A spokesman for Traxler maintained that there have been no special arrangements between Traxler and Early and that both employees had appropriate qualifications.

During the summer of 1986, Traxler also paid Stacey AuCoin, the daughter of Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Oreg., a $14,000 salary as a temporary office aide.

Rep. AuCoin's brother, Leland, has worked for the past four years as a library assistant at the House Clerk's Office.

"This is a town that operates on Democratic and Republican resumes," AuCoin said. "I told him (Leland) that and he took it from there."

AuCoin's office also has been gracious to the families of fellow lawmakers, providing paid internships for daughters of Rep. Carroll Hubbard, D-Ky., and Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., for the past two summers. An AuCoin aide called it a "common practice" for members to employ "the kids of other congressmen."

More serious questions have been raised about the hirings of Vincent Fabrizio, Udall's step-son, a $34,332 aide to Howard's Public Works Committee, and Howard's daughter, Marie, who holds a $35,000-a-year post on the Udall-chaired Interior Committee.

"Because a young person is a son or daughter of a member of Congress, it should not preclude him or her from working in government," Howard said in a statement. "There is a natural tendency for children to follow the career paths and interests of their parents."

An aide said Udall would not discuss his step-son's affairs.

Then there is the daughter of Rep. Austin Murphy, D-Pa., Maureen Dinneen, who works as a legislative assistant in the office of Murphy's close friend, Rep. Nick Joe Rahall, D-W.Va.

Tanya Rahall, sister of the congressman, worked for five years until 1984 as a staff assistant to the House Education and Labor Committee on which Murphy sits.

Murphy, who was reprimanded by the House this month for asking colleagues to "ghost vote" on his behalf and for hiring a "no-show" employee, also sits with Rahall on two of the same Interior subcommittees.

Asked whether Rahall enlisted Murphy to find a job on the education panel for his sister, an aide to Rahall said he did nothing to "directly help" her.

Dinneen's husband, Robert, who also works on the education committee, stressed his independence from his father-in-law.

"My reputation is not dependent on his, nor is my position," Robert Dinneen said.

When they are not taking jobs in their colleagues' offices, relatives of members of Congress have the connections to find other, administrative jobs in the capitol.

Through the House Democratic Personnel Committee, members may recommend candidates for about 400 patronage jobs in the House doorkeeper's office, the postmaster's office, the clerk's office and the sergeant-at-arms office, which helps select the Capitol Police.

The committee, consisting solely of Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, receives a "constant flow of requests" that are weighed by the member's seniority in the House, committee director Burnham Muller said.

Last June, according to reports to the clerk's office, the number of relatives employed in the postmaster's office tripled from two to six and nearly tripled in the doorkeeper's office, from four to 11.

Brooks, a seventh-term congressman, recommended his daughter for a position as a page in the doorkeeper's office last summer. Her application for employment was approved.

Members of the closely knit delegation from Massachusetts, home of former House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr., are particularly famous for ensuring their relatives get a regular paycheck.

Christopher Moakley, a nephew of Rep. Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., who chaired the personnel panel from 1979 until O'Neill retired last January, held four different temporary patronage positions from 1984 to 1986.

"I didn't even know he was here until he told me," Moakley said.

Moakley's niece, Patricia Hamel, was hired as a secretary for Early in 1980. Since 1981, she has worked for Frank, who acknowledged hiring her after her uncle said "she was a great typist."

Moakley said that he had no role in his niece's employment, asserting, "I don't have conversations about who (Frank's) employees are, just as he doesn't about who mine are."

Nepotism - A Summary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A UPI inquiry turned up 73 relatives of House and Senate members who have worked in paid jobs on Capitol Hill offices during the past 18 months. Here is a state-by-state summary:

ALABAMA: William Dickinson, son of Rep. William Dickinson, R-Ala., worked as a $23,797-a-year Capitol policeman for five years until the summer of 1986 for the House sergeant-at-arms office, which supervises the House police force.

ARIZONA: Vincent Fabrizio, step-son of Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., serves as a $24,328-a-year staff member for the House Public Works and Transportation Committee chaired by Rep. James Howard, D-N.J. Howard's daughter works on the Interior Committee headed by Udall.

"Coming to work here was more my initiative than (Udall's)," said Fabrizio, whose relationship to Udall was not noted on the monthly payroll record as required.

CALIFORNIA: Ariane Willis, wife of Rep. Jerry Lewis, D-Calif., works for Lewis as a $44,000-a-year administrative assistant. She has been working for Lewis in some capacity since 1967, and they were married in 1968. Willis said she and her husband have maintained their professional relationship while in the office. Their relationship is not noted as required on the monthly payroll record.

Phyllis Coelho, wife of Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., serves as a $29,265-a-year secretary for Rep. Andrew Jacobs, D-Ind., where she worked before her marriage. A note on Jacobs' monthly payroll report says of Mrs. Coelho: "Married to Congressman."

Edith Willis, wife of Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., serves as executive director for the bipartisan Arms Control and Foreign Policy Caucus, a group of House and Senate members who research and inform Congress on arms control and foreign policy related topics. "She kept her own name, lives her work, is very individual and works harder than I do," Edwards said of his wife, who worked on the Hill before his election.

Douglas Boser, son of Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., worked as an $11,440-a-year staff assistant last summer for the House Ways and Means Committee. Boser's daughter, Nicole Boser, worked the previous summer as a paid intern in the office of Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore.

Steven Torres, the son of Rep. Esteban Torres, D-Calif., worked last summer as a $14,278-a-year clerk for the House speaker's office.

CONNECTICUT: John Kennedy, son of Rep. Barbara Kennedy, D-Conn., worked as a $14,500-a-year summer clerk for the House postmaster's office. His mother said she helped arrange the job through the House Democratic Personnel Committee. "I said if there was a job, we would be interested. I didn't particularly care what the job was or where," Rep.

Kennedy said.

COLORADO: Jenna Haffey, daughter of Rep. Joel Haffey, R-Colo., worked as a $12,800-a-year summer intern for Rep. Jim Simpson, D-Ry. "She was Congressman Simpson during (her father's) freshman campaign and Rep. Simpson is her uncle," a Haffey aide said. A Summer aide said Haffey's daughter was invited to apply.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA: John Bell, brother-in-law of Democratic delegate Walter Fauntroy, works as a $16,000-a-year clerk in the House Democratic caucus office, responsible for the House gallery and a variety of services for House members.

FLORIDA: Ronald Sutton, cousin of Rep. William LeFlore, D-Fla., worked last summer as a page for the House doorkeeper's office. An aide to LeFlore said, "Ronnie is from Nashville, Tennessee, and was recommended (Rep. LeFlore), the congressman said that he couldn't help him and referred his cousin to his own representative." Rep. Bill Bener, D-Fla., then congressman, later is expected to announce a page, the aide said.

Mary Mulvihill, sister of Rep. Constance Stoltz, R-Fla., worked until last year as a $61,800-a-year legislative assistant in the office of Rep. Barbara Vucarovich, R-Iowa.

HAWAII: Andrew Malmgren, brother of Sen. Dan Akaka, D-Hi., works as a $37,750-a-year director of the mayor's Honolulu office. He has worked for his brother since 1982. Six years before the anti-nepotism law was passed and is protected by his grandfather clause.

George Hardman, Malmgren's son-in-law, is a Capitol Hill police officer.

IOWA: Diane Craskey, daughter of Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa., worked as a 14,000-a-year staff assistant for former Republican congressman Cooper Evans of Iowa, who left office in 1986.

ILLINOIS: Rose Marie Lepinski, wife of Rep. William Lepinski, D-Ill., works as a legislative staff assistant for the House Administration Committee. When Lepinski was first elected to Congress five years ago, his wife worked as an unpaid assistant in his congressional office.

Doris Evans, brother of Rep. Lane Evans, D-Ill., works as a $18,000-a-year secretary for the House doorkeeper's office.

Herman Morris, nephew of Rep. Carlisle Collins, D-Ill., worked as a $18,700-a-year summer clerk for the doorkeeper's office. He must help him get the job through the Democratic Personnel Committee. "I did the same thing I do for any of the bills who come to my office. I write a letter to our personnel office," Rep. Collins said.

Heather Davis, daughter of Sen. Jack Davis, R-Ill., worked as a $22,000-a-year summer intern for Rep. Jim Simpson, R-Ky. A Summer aide said the congressman knew that Davis' daughter would be in town for the summer and offered her a job.

Phyllis Miller, step-son of Rep. Charles McNair, D-Ky., works as a $18,000-a-year clerk in the House postmaster's office. "The congressman said, 'I don't play any role in anything,'" the congressman said. "I just told him that they had an opening," Bernard Jenkins, McNair's nephew, worked in the postmaster's office last summer.

INDIAN: Elizabeth Hattings, daughter of Rep. Clarence Hattings, D-Ind., worked as a $18,000-a-year summer clerk for the House postmaster's office. "The congressman had spoken to the postmaster to see if there were any possibilities for employment for his daughter," a Hattings aide said.

KANSAS: Rhoda Glickman, wife of Rep. Don Glickman, D-Kan., works as the $28,000-a-year executive director of the Congressional Arts Caucus, which provides House members with information about arts-related issues. "Rhoda (former Rep. Frederick Richmond, D-N.Y.) formed the arts caucus," Rep. Glickman said. "(My wife) mentioned to me that she wanted to go talk to him and she went with it from there."

KENTUCKY: Kelly Hubbard, daughter of Rep. Carroll Hubbard, D-Ky., worked as a paid intern last summer in the office of Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Oreg. "(Her) resume came over with the others and we are always delighted to have people who know their way around," an AuCoin aide said. "The one thing about the offspring of members is that they have an idea of what is going on here."

MARYLAND: Robert Douglas Mathias, third cousin of former Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., works as a $28,000-a-year district coordinator for Rep. Beverly Byron, D-Md. Paula Mathias, Robert's wife, also works for Rep. Byron as a $28,000-a-year district staff assistant.

Doug (Robert) has known Rep. Byron for many years, because his family and the Byrons have been involved in the same (political) activities," Paula Mathias said. "Sen. Mathias was very close with the Byrons, too."

Samuel Lee Dyeon, brother of Rep. Ray Dyeon, D-Md., works as a $29,720-a-year Capitol policeman. He was hired before his brother's election.

MICHIGAN: Barbara Broomfield Shaffer, daughter of Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., works as a $28,000-a-year legislative clerk in the House clerk's office, which handles House business and a myriad of other administrative functions. Last year she worked as a $21,700-a-year clerk for the nearby staff of the Post Office and Civil Service Commission.

David Kildus, son of Rep. Dale Kildus, D-Mich., worked as a $14,500-a-year clerk in the House doorkeeper's office last summer.

Worst To First, Colts Claim AFC East Title

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Jumping from worst to first in one season, the Indianapolis Colts won the AFC East title and made the playoffs for the first time in 10 years, completing the greatest NFL turnaround since 1975.

The Colts, 24-6 winners Sunday over Tampa Bay, finished 9-6 this season after posting a 3-13 record last year. Not since the 1975 Colts has a team finished so badly, then won a division title and playoff berth the following year. The Colts, then based in Baltimore, were 2-12 in 1974 and 10-4 the next season.

"It's almost too much to believe the way things have changed," said Indianapolis quarterback Jack Trudeau, who lost all 11 of his starts last season. "Last year was so frustrating because we were losing all the time. It's hard to believe this. This is the way it should be."

Eric Dickerson ran 33 times for 188 yards, the second-best rushing day in Colts' history, and scored touchdowns on runs of 34 and 6 yards. Sunday's effort moved Dickerson into 10th on the NFL all-time rushing list with 8,256 yards. Dickerson, acquired from the Los Angeles Rams in a mid-season trade, set a team record with his sixth 100-yard rushing game of the season and was 2 yards shy of Norm Bulaich's 16-year team rushing record for a single game.

"It's great to win the division in my first year here. I didn't even do that with the Rams," said

Football

Dickerson, who said the team was tense before the game. "A lot of guys were playing not to make the big mistake that could cost us the game — the missed catch, the bad snap, the fumble. You can't do that. You've got to take it at them."

Cornerback Willie Tullis, who deflected five passes, said the players believed in themselves when no one else did.

"This is unbelievable. It's a dream come true," Tullis said. "No one expected us to do anything. Anyone who says they believed in us is a liar. We had confidence in ourselves. We never stopped. We knew what we could do."

While players celebrated with dancing, screaming and singing in the locker room, safety Neby Glasgow calmly reflected on his nine straight years of losing seasons with the Colts.

"I won't say this makes the whole experience even. There's no truth to the lie that losing builds character," Glasgow said. "I'm glad we've gained the heights after so long on the down side."

Tampa Bay Coach Ray Perkins said Dickerson was the major difference in the game.

"The big key player for them was Dickerson," Perkins said. "He would make any team in football a contender with just his presence and the things he can do. He can cut on a dime and be full speed. He's just a great football player."

Dickerson was concerned with chronic offensive problems that have increased the pressure on the Colts' defense.

"We have some problems we have to correct for the playoffs. We made some mistakes," Dickerson said. "The defense played well. They've pulled us out of a lot of jams. They carried us most of the game."

The Colts' defense pressured Buccaneers rookie quarterback Vinny Testaverde, who completed only 8 of 31 attempts for 163 yards. The 1986 Heisman Trophy winner, winless in four NFL starts, was sacked three times by the Colts' defense, which has allowed a league-low 238 points this season.

"It was a great victory for this franchise," said Colts Coach Ron Meyer. "The defense played marvelous, limiting a very talented quarterback to a low percentage."

The Indianapolis defense was hurt by an injury to linebacker Duane Bickett, who was sidelined late in second quarter with a sprained left knee. Team officials were not certain of his status for the playoffs.

Indianapolis also scored on Albert Bentley's 2-yard run and a 30-yard field goal by Dean Blazucchi. Tampa Bay's only points came on field goals of 37 and 38 yards by Donald Igwebuike as the Buccaneers fell to 4-11, losing their eighth straight game. The crowd of 60,468 was a Colts' record, nine greater than the Hoosier Dome attendance mark set last month.

Indianapolis does not know its playoff opponent. If Houston wins next week's wildcard playoff game, the Colts will play at Cleveland in two weeks. If Seattle beats Houston, the Colts would play at Denver.

FAN HURT AFTER FALL

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A suburban Indianapolis man was hospitalized Sunday after falling 13 feet from an outdoor mezzanine during a football game at the Hoosier Dome, police said.

Witnesses told police Martin Vondasnar, 31, of Beech Grove fell to a grassy area during a scuffle outside the dome about 3:30 p.m., before the end of Sunday's Indianapolis Colts game, said homicide detective Tom Minor.

The injured man listed in serious but stable condition at Methodist Hospital.

Dale Ferguson, 30, of Beech Grove was arrested on battery charges and will appear Monday in Indianapolis Municipal Court.

Vondasnar and Ferguson were "observed shoving each other in an argument and Vondasnar fell over the railing," Minor said. "It's under investigation whether he was pushed or fell."

Red Lobster Classic: Bama, Pitt Favored

ORLANDO—The University of Alabama, basketball's 1986 Southeastern Conference champion, and the University of Pittsburgh, rated first in pre-season rankings, will go up against Florida State and the University of Central Florida at the 18th annual Red Lobster Classic on Dec. 28-29 at the Orange County Civic Center.

Florida State, an NIT contender last season, defeated the University of Tennessee in overtime, 91-90, to claim the event's championship title last year.

The Red Lobster Classic will begin on Dec. 28 with UCF tipping off against Alabama at 7 p.m.; FSC will play Pittsburgh at 9 p.m. The game for third place is scheduled for Dec. 29 at 7 p.m., with the championship game to follow at 9 p.m. The tournament is one of several official Florida Citrus Bowl events.

Basketball Digest's current issue lists Pittsburgh the number one team in the country. Two of the team's players, Jerome Lane and Charles Smith, have been selected pre-season All-Americans. Last year, Pittsburgh tied for first with Georgetown and Syracuse in the Big East Conference.

Approximately 6,000 fans are expected to attend the games each night of the tournament. Tickets may be purchased at the Citrus Bowl office, the Orange County Civic Center, and at all Select-a-Seat outlets.

DAREDEVILS ON HAND

ORLANDO—The Bud Light Daredevils, one of the most unique slam-dunk acts in the country, will perform during halftime at the Red Lobster Classic on Dec. 29 at the Orange County Civic Center.

Basketball

The Red Lobster Classic is a two-day tournament which will feature the University of Alabama, basketball's 1986-87 Southeastern Conference champion, the University of Pittsburgh, rated first in pre-season rankings, Florida State University and the University of Central Florida.

The tournament begins Dec. 28 with Central Florida tipping off against Alabama at 7 p.m.; Florida State will play Pittsburgh at 9 p.m. The game for third place is scheduled Dec. 29 at 7 p.m., with the championship game to follow at 9 p.m. The tournament is one of several official Florida Citrus Bowl events.

The Bud Light Daredevils' popularity has taken them to more than 150 colleges and universities, and into every National Basketball Association arena. The team includes brothers Ty and Guy Cobb, Tim Lancaster and Keith Eldred.

Their act consists of an eight-minute slam dunk and acrobatic halftime show highlighted by the "Flip Dunk" and "Kongo Dunk." The "Flip Dunk" features one of the team members springing off a mini-trampoline with a basketball in his hands, executing a forward somersault high into the air and slamming the ball through the hoop on his way down.

The "Kongo Dunk" utilizes three members performing consecutive flips in front of the rim, passing the ball from one to the other off the backboard culminating with a massive slam dunk by the fourth member.

The Bud Light Daredevils will perform their eight-minute slam dunk and acrobatic halftime show Tuesday night at the Red Lobster Classic in Orlando.

Orange Park: Panhandle Powerhouse

By Chris Pieter
Sanford Sports Writer

Even as recent as last season, Panhandle soccer was thought to be light years behind the rest of the state. The North region, though, did make an impact as Orange Park and Tallahassee Leon made to the state tournament and turned in good showings.

Still, Central Florida, South Florida and the Tampa area are considered ahead of the Panhandle. Orange Park coach Bob Corzart and his team hope to change all that this week as the Warriors participate in their first Pizza Hut Invitational.

"The quality of soccer in our region has improved significantly in the last few years," Corzart said. "I believe we can compete with the other areas."

Orange Park goes into the Hut ranked third in the Class 4A poll with an 8-1 record. Orange Park opens the tourney today at 2 against Orlando Boone and Evans High.

The Warriors played Tampa Leto in the state semifinals a year ago and dropped a 1-0 decision with Leto getting the game-winning goal in the last 15 minutes of play.

Orange Park has 11 seniors in its starting lineup this season and Corzart hopes the Warriors' experience will guide them to the finals of the Pizza Hut tourney.

"I like our bracket and feel we have a good shot at the finals," Corzart said. "But any team can be a threat in this tournament so we're not overlooking Boone."

"It looks like Winter Park may be the team to beat in our bracket," added Corzart. "We also have Tallahassee Leon and Jacksonville Fletcher but we're

Ford To Stick With Game Plan

ORLANDO (UPI) — Not seeing is believing for Clemson Coach Danny Ford.

When Ford does not spot Penn State tailback Blair Thomas on the field during Friday's Florida Citrus Bowl, he'll believe Thomas is not going to play.

Thomas, a junior who ran for 1,414 yards for the 18th-ranked Nittany Lions this season, sprained his right knee earlier this month and Coach Joe Paterno said it is doubtful he will be able to play against the 12th-ranked Tigers.

Ford, however, is approaching the game as if Thomas will play.

"We won't make a game plan for him and a game plan for another kid," he said. "We've been in these situations before where they say a person won't play and he ends up playing so our game plan is the same whether Blair plays or not. He's an excellent back."

Thomas was the main offensive weapon for the Nittany Lions this season, leading Penn State with 23 catches for 300 yards, scoring 13 touchdowns and amassing a school-record 1,772 all-purpose yards.

Clemson linebacker Vince Taylor said Thomas' presence would not affect the Tigers' preparations but admitted his absence would not hurt.

"You expect everybody to play and you expect the worst to happen," he said. "But if he doesn't play, it's a plus for us."

If Paterno can be believed, the chances of Thomas playing are slim.

"In my mind, we've made the decision that we're going to have to play without Blair," he said. "If all of a sudden Blair comes up to me on Tuesday and says his knee feels good and he wants to try some things and the doctor says he can try some things, we may let him. But it's a longshot."

Thomas injured the knee in an informal workout on Dec. 9. The injury involved damage to the ligament and Paterno said Thomas will probably need surgery in the off-season.

If Thomas does not play, freshmen Gary Brown, who gained 273 yards, and Leroy Thompson, who ran for 57 yards, will take over.

"I've been impressed with their freshmen," Ford said. "Our defense has faced fine backs before. They all run the same way, toward the goal line, so we're concerned about any back."

And Taylor said the freshmen might be even more dangerous than Thomas because they have something to prove.

"Usually, whenever a freshman is behind a veteran and gets an opportunity to get in a game, he gives his all," he said. "So I think they'll get in and play the best they can."

Thompson, who missed several games this season because of injury, hurt his hand two weeks ago when it got caught in an elevator door.

"But he got the stitches out a few days ago and he'll be ready to go," Paterno said.

MIRA WON'T PRACTICE

MIAMI (UPI) — Citing the possible loss of more than $2 million in bowl revenues, the University of Miami Saturday refused to allow suspended linebacker George Mira Jr. to practice with the team.

Mira, the team's leading tackler, and starting offensive tackle John O'Neill were suspended Thursday after failing an NCAA-administered drug test. Mira was granted a temporary court order Saturday, allowing him to practice with the team.

However, Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson told the senior he would have to work out on his own until a final ruling is made on the case.

"George and I talked this morning and we mutually agreed that it would be in everybody's best interest that he worked out on his own," Johnson said. "He will not be a part of the official team."

Mira said he failed the test because he took a pill that contained a diuretic, a banned substance. Diuretics are used to rid the body of excess fluids and are prescribed to treat high blood pressure, but they also mask the presence of anabolic steroids, which are prohibited by the NCAA.

At the Saturday hearing the school argued against the injunction, saying reinstating Mira would be a distraction to the team and could cost Miami most of the money it will earn by playing in the Orange Bowl.

Second-ranked Miami plays No. 1 Oklahoma Friday night in the Orange Bowl for the national championship.

"If we were to violate NCAA rules, as we would if we were to allow him to play at this particular time because of the ruling, the University of Miami would have to forfeit up to 90 percent of the proceeds, which at this time would be a minimum of $2.6 million," said Athletic Director Sam Jankovich.

Mira's attorney, Sam Holland, argued that diuretics do not enhance athletic performance nor do they mask the presence of steroids, and therefore should not be banned by the NCAA. Mira said he took the MIAMI (UPI) — Put away the calculators, send home the statisticians.

The New England Patriots and Miami Dolphins have no need to delve deep into the NFL's complicated tiebreakers. A playoff spot will not be available tonight when the two teams close out the strike-marred NFL regular season in Joe Robbie Stadium.

The final post-season hope for both teams expired Sunday when Indianapolis beat Tampa Bay to win the AFC East, and Houston beat Cincinnati to clinch the final wild card berth.

So the Dolphins, 8-6, and Patriots, 7-7, are reduced to playing for that old NFL standby: Pride.

"It's still the Patriots-Miami battle," New England quarterback Steve Grogan said. "Neither team wants to end the season on a losing note. Whether the game counts for anything or not, it's still for bragging rights in the division and I know our team will come out and play hard."

But hiding the disappointment of missing the NFL's post-season party for the second straight year will be hard for the Dolphins.

"Disappointment is going to show," coach Don Shula said. "It's going to be hard to mask."

Both teams have been playing well at the end of the year, with Miami winning its last three contests while the Patriots have won two straight games. Miami has a 17-3 December record over the past six years, the NFL's best, and a 23-5 home record in prime-time games.

But the Dolphins and the Patriots waited too long to start playing well.

"We made our own bed," said Miami cornerback William Judson.

Added Miami guard Roy Foster: "Somebody should give us all a swift kick for being in this position. We could be in the driver's seat if we had won one of those games earlier in the year."

One of the games the Dolphins should have won was the season opener at New England, where Miami took a 21-7 lead only to lose 28-21. The Patriots' recent resurgence is the product of Grogan and Reggie Dupard's offensive contributions and overall good play by the defense.

The New England defense has long baffled Miami quarterback Dan Marino, who has won only three times in nine tries against the Patriots. Marino has thrown for 3,002 yards and 25 touchdowns in 1987, including a 363-yard, three-touchdown performance last week against Washington.

New England coach Raymond Berry tried to downplay the Pats' success against Marino, saying there is no magic formula to stopping the Miami passing game. But the Patriots have done a good job covering the Miami wide receivers and putting pressure on Marino.

"Our defense has, I think, played consistent football and I think been complemented by the offense," Berry said. "I think we've got some breaks, too."

Bears, Butler Kick Limping Raiders, 6-3

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Chicago Bears will be home for their first playoff game and that is more important to Coach Mike Ditka than the identity of the opponent at Soldier Field.

"Somebody has to come to Chicago, I know that," Ditka said Sunday after Walter Payton gained 82 yards and Kevin Butler snapped a tie with a 30-yard field goal with 4:56 remaining, helping the Bears defeat the Los Angeles Raiders 6-3.

"We'll be ready for them when they come. It doesn't matter whether they are wearing red and gold, maroon and gold, black and gold or purple and white. It doesn't matter who they are."

The Bears, who had lost two straight, improved to 11-4 and will be home Jan. 9 or 10.

Payton, the league's all-time leading rusher, finished with 16,726 yards. He carried 20 times.

"It's been a wonderful 13 years, but it's not over yet," Payton said. "We've still got three more games and we have to try to win all three of them to put us in the Super Bowl. After that, it will be all over."

Butler, who earlier kicked a

Football

38-yard field goal, capped a 60-yard Chicago drive with his game-winning boot. Payton, whose workload was increased due to the injury to Neal Anderson, had the key gain — a 2-yard run on fourth-and-1 at the Raiders' 40.

Payton fumbled at midfield with 1:31 to go but the Raiders could get no closer than the Chicago 32. Los Angeles gave up the ball on downs.

Los Angeles finished 5-10, its worst record since the 5-7-2 mark in 1964. The Raiders, who yielded nine sacks, played without rookie sensation Bo Jackson, out for the second full game with a sprained ankle.

"It's been a long and frustrating year for all of us," said Raiders Coach Tom Flores. "Coming up short the way we have all year and trying to find the answers and a way to win. Today, we kept the game close as we have in many games, but three points isn't going to win any games for you."

Chicago blocked two Chris Bahr field goal tries in the second half and the Bears were

"We should've won the game," said Raiders linebacker Rod Martin. "The two blocked field goals hurt."

Butler sympathized with his counterpart on the opposing team.

"After a while, blocks get on a kicker's mind," Butler said.

The Raiders, who got a 48-yard field goal by Bahr in the first quarter, had the first chance to snap a 3-3 halftime tie but their 44-yard drive stalled at the Chicago 22. A Richard Dent sacked pushed Los Angeles back and Dan Hampton and Al Harris teamed to block Bahr's 44-yard try with 9:48 to go in the third quarter.

Battle Of Jersey: Giants Upend Jets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — New York area NFL fans will watch their teams closely during the offseason to see what changes will be made after the Giants and Jets finished 8-9 in 1987.

Sunday, they learned Giants tackle Brad Benson is going and Jets Coach Joe Walton is staying.

That much was established before the Giants' 20-7 season-ending victory over the Jets. Other than that, it's anybody's guess as to what the two teams will look like in 1988.

Benson, a 10-year veteran, announced his retirement Sunday during pre-game introductions. His best season was 1986 when he played in the Pro Bowl and the Giants won the Super Bowl. In his final game, Benson played against his brother, Jets linebacker Troy Benson.

"I've enjoyed every minute I've been out on the field," Benson said. "I thought a lot about my situation; it was a very hard decision and physically I came to the conclusion it was time to retire. I've had a lot on my mind about making the decision."

Benson, whose play slipped this season, said he told Giants

Football

Coach Bill Parcells of his decision late this week.

"I'm so proud of him," Troy Benson said. "He's 32; that's not old but it's old for a football player. I know he has pride and he didn't want to hang around if he couldn't do as well as he did before."

Parcells has talked 13-year veteran defensive end George Martin into returning for another year but other veterans will be leaving — some because of injury, some because of the coaches' decisions. The Jets are in the same situation, and Sunday Walton said he will be around to make those decisions.

His job was thought to be in jeopardy but Thursday he told his players he will be back.

"Mr. Hess (team owner Leon Hess) told me I'll be back," Walton said. "We must start making evaluations that we can't make in a few seconds now. We have won before and we can do it again. We can turn it around and make it good again."

Houston Tops Cincinnati, Secures Playoff Berth

HOUSTON (UPI) — Warren Moon, whose NFL career has included a series of failures, finally accomplished what he set out to do when he signed a $5.5 million deal with Houston in 1984 — take the Oilers to the playoffs.

Moon threw for 280 yards and rushed for a touchdown, rookie Alonzo Highsmith scored his first two NFL touchdowns and Mike Rozier ran for 103 yards Sunday to lead Houston to a 21-17 victory over Cincinnati.

With the victory, Houston secured an AFC wild card berth against Seattle next Sunday in the Astrodome. Houston and Seattle are each 9-6.

"This is the most important game I ever played in the NFL," said Moon, who threw for 21,228 yards while leading Edmonton to five consecutive Grey Cup championships in the Canadian Football League.

"A winning season would have meant nothing without the playoffs," he said. "I wanted this game more than any game I ever played."

"It's been a long haul. I thought we could be in the playoffs in three years, but I didn't envision a coaching change. I've taken a lot of criticism from media and fans. Maybe this can get some of the people off our backs and we can earn a little respect."

Moon, with the help of a 2-1 record by the Oilers' strike replacement team, helped Houston to its first winning season and first playoff berth since 1980. From 1981 to 1986, the Oilers were 23-66.

"I believe we had a better team last year, but things didn't come together," said Coach Jerry Glanville. "This year we had some players who took charge and made things happen. In the past, we were a team that self-destructed, and this year we had the confidence to overcome some bad breaks."

"After all the suffering, this sure does feel sweet. Nobody believed in us except us."

Houston scored all its points in the first half while building a 21-7 halftime lead, then had to hold on with a strong defensive showing.

Cincinnati, 4-11, took an early 7-0 lead on a 1-yard run by Stanford Jennings. Moon countered by throwing to Highsmith near the sideline at the Cincinnati 27, and the rookie broke four tackles and raced in for his first NFL score.

"I'm sure there's been people in the stands who have been saying, 'Let's see what this Highsmith can do,'" said Highsmith. Houston's No. 1 draft pick from Miami who held out until late October.

Football

"It was a little 5-yard pattern. I was not the primary receiver on the play. In fact, I was the last resort. I just kept my legs going. I've been waiting to make something happen for so long."

Houston took the lead early in the second quarter. Moon threw a 53-yard pass to Ernest Givins, who stumbled across the goal line for an apparent touchdown. However, he was ruled down on the 1 after a review by replay officials.

Two plays later, Moon scored on a keeper to give the Oilers a 14-7 lead with 13:38 remaining.

Highsmith increased the lead to 21-7 with just over two minutes left in the half when he powered across the line from a yard out on fourth-and-goal.

After Tony Zendejas missed a 42-yard field goal early in the third, Mike Martin caught a 25-yard pass from Boomer Easonon on a drive that included two successful fourth-down conversions to cut Houston's lead to 21-14.

Jim Breach added a 43-yard field goal early in the final period to pull the Bengals to within 21-17.

"When we went in at the half down by 14 and came back and fought hard in a hostile environment, that's a sign of playing hard," said Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche.

Houston had a chance to put the game out of Cincinnati's reach with 7:28 left when Moon threw what appeared to be a 5-yard scoring strike to Drew Hill, but Hill bobbled the ball and Solomon Wilcott intercepted in the end zone.

The Bengals drove to the Houston 42 before Easonon was sacked by Ray Childress to force a punt, and the Bengals never got the ball back.

"I remember in '81 and '82, they weren't very good," Cincinnati wide receiver Cria Collinsworth said of the Oilers. "They drafted offensive linemen, and did it show today. That's one of the most impressive running games I've seen in a while."

So, for the first time in seven seasons, the Oilers are going to the playoffs.

"It's great for the fans," Moon said. "They've waited so long. It's great to have the home-field advantage. We play a lot better at home."

Eagles 17, Bills 7

At Philadelphia, Anthony Toney scored twice and Keith Byars ran for 102 yards to power the Eagles past Buffalo. The Eagles and Bills finished at 7-8. Philadelphia defensive end Reggie White sacked Bills quarterback Jim Kelly twice, giving him 21 sacks on the season, one short of the NFL record.

Lions 30, Falcons 13

At Atlanta, reserve fullback Gary Ellerson ran for two touchdowns and Eddie Murray kicked three field goals to lead Detroit. The Falcons, 3-12, finished with the league's worst record and gained the No. 1 pick in next year's draft. The Lions closed at 4-11.

Cowboys 21, Cardinals 16

At Irving, Texas, Herschel Walker scored twice and Dallas' defense thwarted a St. Louis comeback bid as the Cowboys knocked the Cardinals from the playoff race. The St. Louis loss allowed Minnesota to qualify as an NFC's second wild card.

Chiefs 41, Seahawks 20

At Kansas City, Mo., Bill Kenney threw three touchdown passes to lead Kansas City and deny Seattle the home-field advantage in the playoffs. Seattle ended the season 9-6, behind Denver in the AFC West. Kansas City, 4-11, avoided a franchise-record tying 12 losses. Seattle's Steve Largent became the NFL's all-time leading receiver surpassing the mark of 750 career receptions set by San Diego's Charlie Joiner.

Broncos 24, Chargers 0

At Denver, K.C. Clark returned a punt 71 yards for a touchdown and Ricky Hunley scored on a 52-yard interception return in a blizzard to give the Broncos the home-field advantage during the playoffs. The Broncos, 10-4-1, won the AFC West. San Diego, 8-7, lost its sixth straight.

49ers 46, Rams 0

At San Francisco, Steve Young passed for three touchdowns, two to Jerry Rice, to lead the 49ers to a 48-0 romp over the Rams, clinching the NFC West title for the 49ers.

ROBINSON: NINERS NFL FAVORITES

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Los Angeles Rams Coach John Robinson had no choice but to label the team that shut out his squad 48-0 as favorites in the upcoming NFC playoffs.

"It's pretty hard not to make them the favorites," Robinson said of the San Francisco 49ers after the rout Sunday night. "It certainly appears to me that the 49ers are playing at the same level the Bears played at the end of the season two years ago and that the Giants played at last season."

San Francisco clinched its fifth NFC West title in seven years with the victory and finished the season with an NFL-best mark of 13-2. The 49ers, who are 5-0 at home in playoff contests under Bill Walsh, will have the home-field advantage throughout the postseason.

San Francisco entered the contest with all the momentum. The Rams, who finished the season 6-9, had been knocked out of a playoff contention the week before by Dallas. In that loss, quarterback Jim Everett and fullback Mike Guman went down with season-ending injuries.

The 49ers, meanwhile, had grown tired of all the attention paid the upstart New Orleans Saints, who finished the year 12-3. They also knew that a victory would bring a $10,000 bonus from owner Edward DeBartolo Jr., who promised the players the controversial bonuses after the strike.

Plus, a pep talk was given before the game by veterans Keith Fahnhorst and Keena Turner, who both are struggling to come back from serious injury.

"There weren't many dry eyes in the place when they spoke," said guard Randy Cross. "It just added to our intensity."

The Rams also were aware of the 49ers' incentives.

"We heard about their bonuses," said Rams cornerback LeRoy Irvin. "Money's a great motivator."

The 49ers battered the Rams in the first half, rolling to a 20-0 lead.

"We knew it was going to be a physical game," said San Francisco wide receiver Jerry Rice. "We knew we had to come out and take control. We put some scores on the board early but knew we couldn't let up in the second half. We came out like it was 0-0."

Said Robinson: "The 49ers scored and scored and there was nothing we could do, though in the second half we got to see our young guys play, which is important."

Robinson also watched his star running back, Charles White. The veteran took over the Rams' tailback slot after Eric Dickerson was traded and, with Sunday's 95-yard performance, finished the season as the NFL's leading rusher with 1,374 rushing yards.

"Charles White had a great season," Robinson said. "I think he really gave a good account of himself."

Playoffs: Vikings Use Back Door Entrance

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Minnesota Vikings Coach Jerry Burns says his club need not apologize for making the playoffs through the back door.

"If we had stunk the joint out yesterday ... but we played well and it came down to one or two plays," he said. "In overtime, they got the ball and we didn't. I think the team was deserving of another chance."

The Vikings could have won a playoff spot by beating Washington Saturday but gave up a 10-point lead in the fourth quarter and lost 27-24 in overtime on Ali Hajj-Sheikh's 28-yard field goal.

They had another chance Sunday if Dallas beat St. Louis. The Cowboys obliged with a 21-16 victory. Burns watched the Cowboys-Cardinals game on television at home.

"They played hard all year," he said of his team. "We were put in a hell of a hole by the strike. (The non-union Vikings lost all three games). Every game has been a pressure game (for the returning regulars), and they rose to the occasion almost every time."

Burns said his players probably will have time off Monday and Tuesday and begin work Wednesday for Sunday's game. The coach said he's not sure whether his quarterback will be Tommy Kramer or Wade Wilson.

"We'll have to look at that," he said.

Wilson said it was a "helpless feeling, losing control of our fate" and turning it over to Dallas and St. Louis. Viking defensive tackle Keith Millard was disgusted after the loss to Washington.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened sharply lower today in light trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 24.37 last week, was down 49.24 to 1980.43 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 1088-137 among the 1,505 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 19,700,000 shares.

The dollar's fall came less than a week after finance ministers and central bankers of the Group of Seven industrialized nations issued a joint statement reaffirming their support for stabilizing foreign exchange rates.

Ralph Acampora, director of technical research at Kidder, Peabody & Co., said sporadic pullbacks in the near term would be healthy in order for the market not to "blow itself apart."

Most responses to the proposed plan have been favorable, Marder said. He has held workshops with the Planning and Zoning Commission and the

Dollar Hits Record Lows; Gold, Silver Push Higher

By United Press International

The dollar fell to records lows in Zurich, Frankfurt, Amsterdam and Japan in trading money analysts said demonstrated little faith in efforts by industrialized countries to stabilize currency markets. Gold pushed higher.

The European debacle came only hours after the dollar closed in Tokyo at yet another new post-World War II low, of 123.55 yen, despite intervention by the Bank of Japan. The dollar had closed on Friday at 125.20.

In Zurich, the dollar opened at 1.2995 Swiss francs, falling through the previous record low of 1.3188 set at the opening Dec. 17. It had closed Thursday at 1.3265.

In Amsterdam, the dollar started at 1.8025 Dutch guilders, well below the previous record low of 1.823 at the opening Dec. 18. It had closed Thursday at 1.839.

London markets remained closed for an extended Christmas holiday.

In early New York trading, the dollar was mixed against key foreign currencies in thin trading.

The dollar's nosedive came less than a week after finance ministers and central bankers of the Group of Seven industrialized nations issued a joint statement reaffirming their support for stabilizing foreign exchange rates.

But dealers in Milan said foreign currency traders had little faith in the measure, and the statement had already drawn a cool reaction in Japan, where traders noted it did not specify desired target zones for exchange rates.

The dollar hit a new low in Frankfurt, opening at 1.8025 German marks. The previous record low was 1.823, set at the opening Dec. 17. The dollar had finished at 1.839 on last Wednesday before the Frankfurt market closed for the Christmas holidays.

The dollar opened in Milan at 1.1775 lire, its lowest since Nov. 9, 1981, when it closed at 1.1755. It had closed Thursday at 1.199.

The dollar opened in Brussels at 33.65 Belgian francs, the first time it had fallen through the 34-franc barrier since December 1980, after closing Thursday at 34.18.

In Paris, the dollar opened at 5.4325 French francs, down from Thursday's close of 5.5085.

city commission, as well as holding discussions with several other governmental agencies, civic group and citizen groups. The only negative responses to the proposed plan among local government officials was at the last Planning and Zoning Commission meeting when Commissioner Jay Malone seemed disgruntled over possible financing for some of the proposed projects and Commissioner Tom Spear said that he felt the plan does not address the downtown parking situation. At that time Marder explained that financing is explained in many support documents for the plan.

He also stated that downtown traffic studies are being done.

The Seminole County Commission has made some comments and offered some suggestions for revisions, and the East Central Florida Regional Planning council has also made some suggestions. However, Marder says the regional planning council is generally favorable toward the document. And while he has not received a written response from the State, concerning its opinion, he says he has been given indication that they view the plan favorably.

City Manager Frank Faison said that he thinks the proposed plan is way ahead of comprehensive plans in some other jurisdictions. He says that it is a very good plan "that eliminates gaps and inconsistencies in the present plan."

one instance in which a man held a knife to himself.

When it is a highly critical situation, where other lives are at stake, and the building does have to be stormed, the sergeant said the negotiator does not make the decision when to storm the building. "He talks to the man with the attitude that he (the man) is going to come out of there," he said. "The negotiator never knows when or if they're going to storm the building. By the book, the hostage negotiator should never be involved in that situation."

Pharis said that two reasons people take hostages are fear and low esteem.

"You're robbing a store," he said. "A cop shows up outside, so you use the people in the store."

Or a person may feel like nobody loves them, nobody will talk to them. They want to be known, recognized for something. So they take a hostage, he added. "It doesn't have to be a terrorist," he continued. "It can just be someone who wants people to hear what he has to say. And if somebody does that, whether we agree with them or not, it's probably the most important thing in their life at that time."

Pharis contrasted a hostage situation with street action, noting that in a street situation, a potential shootout, for example, an officer's instincts take over. "There's no time to think," he said. However, in a hostage situation "it's being able to relate to people, common sense" that counts, he said. And while instincts take over in a shootout, a hostage negotiator, on the other hand, feels a tremendous amount of stress.

Neither does it matter who the negotiator is, the sergeant explained. For example, he said that if one person has a rapport with the suspect, and someone else comes along and tries to help because they are a "hostage negotiator," the second person could blow the whole situation. "If that other person is communicating better than you do, fine," Pharis said. The goal is to keep the suspect comfortable.

In terrorist situations, the police are dealing with people who want their ideas and their beliefs to be heard, Pharis stated. He said they are usually highly intelligent people. Perhaps their goal is to get someone released from jail, or to get their views into the newspapers.

That is the extreme situation, Pharis explained. "But, every day there are a lot of incidents that happen that are never reported," he said. "The police officer on the road confronts potentially critical situations every day, but they can handle it so that it doesn't develop." How? Again, just by communicating, talking, and using common sense, he concluded.

Study: Most Murders Occur Between Friends, Acquaintances

MIAMI (UPI) — A published study of the 438 homicides last year in Dade County found that most murder suspects were accused of killing people they knew and that nearly four out of five suspects were charged with killing someone of their own race.

"People assume they have reason to be fearful of their lives because of dangerous black youths," said Marvin Dunn, a professor of psychology at Florida International University and an observer of Dade County's criminal justice system.

"But that is a public misconception."

"Most homicides are the results of disputes between people who know each other," he said. "With the limited amount of inter-racial social intercourse in Miami, it's very unlikely you'll be killed except by someone of your own ethnic group."

Although half the suspects in last year's murders were black, the vast majority of their victims — 86 percent — were also black. The Miami Herald study showed, nine were acquitted.

In the remaining 15 percent of the cases, defendants were yet to be tried or sentenced.

"To kill someone and not to have to account for it for a year gives the impression that people just get swallowed up by the system and that nothing happens," Dunn said.

State Attorney Janet Reno agreed that prosecuting the cases takes too long. Prosecutors took nearly nine months to get each case through the county's crowded court system.

"It's taking too long to get major cases to trial," she said, blaming a variety of factors: too many defendants found temporarily incompetent to stand trial and too many defense attorneys getting continuances.

"Nine months does not mean the system bogged down at all," he said. "These are serious cases. Let's make sure what we're doing in these cases is correct, legally and otherwise. We must not make hasty decisions."

Less Is More For Widow Who Wants To Give Thanks Quietly

DEAR ABBY: You did it again. You said, "Loneliness is the ultimate poverty, so invite someone who is alone to join you and your family for Thanksgiving dinner."

Abby, not everyone who is alone is lonely. I am alone (widowed), but I am not lonely, and I don't particularly enjoy having Thanksgiving with a bunch of strangers.

Last year, I let a generous neighbor talk me into having Thanksgiving with her and her family. She had 36 for dinner. There were children of all ages running around, and two TVs going full blast—each on a different channel. On one was a noisy football game, on the other a rerun of a 40-year-old musical. There was so much noise and tumult my head ached for two days!

This year I invited another widow to my place for Thanksgiving. We both hate turkey, but we love barbecued spare ribs, so we picked up some ribs, popped popcorn and put away a quart of ice cream. Then we watched an old Laurel and Hardy movie on a rented cassette and had a wonderful Thanksgiving!

SHIRLEY IN ALLENTOWN

DEAR SHIRLEY: I'm glad you and your friend had a wonderful Thanksgiving. But bless your generous neighbor—and people like her—who assume that those who are alone at holiday time are lonely and depressed. They usually are.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter signed "Must Know," who asked if his wife could get crab lice from a toilet seat as she claimed, or had she been fooling around.

I am so glad you told him he could believe his wife, because I know for a fact that's where I got them.

I was about six months pregnant when I had to find a bathroom quickly due to an upset stomach. I was at the beach where no facilities were available, so I went to a bar across the road to use theirs. Abby, it was one of the filthiest rest rooms I had ever seen. On leaving, I told the woman bartender that someone should clean up the bathroom because it was disgusting!

Well, shortly after that, I discovered that I had crab lice. There was absolutely no other way or place I could have gotten them. My doctor prescribed a lotion that took care of the problem, but since that time, I am very, very careful where I sit.

NAMELESS FOR OBVIOUS REASONS

DEAR NAMELESS: I apologize if this subject offends anyone, but it may be helpful to know that many wrote to say they had picked up these tenacious, parasitic little pests from a borrowed bathing suit, sleeping bag, blanket, towel, at a spa, public beach and a public toilet.

DEAR ABBY: After reading your column for more than 30 years, I figure it's time I wrote to you.

You had a letter in your column from someone who sent business cards from a store along with their wedding invitations. Big deal. In our niece's wedding invitation, we received a note which read: "We are registered at the Bank of (), Savings Accounts No. ()."

Big argument here. I say we should not deposit a nickel. My wife says we have to. We will do whatever you decide is right.

UNCLE AND AUNT

DEAR UNCLE AND AUNT: You are under no obligation to deposit money into a savings account. A wedding gift should be given with love and best wishes—or not at all.

If You Own A Fur, Wear It. To Death

By Mary Martin Niepold

"Today, furs have become the most-needed extra," says Arnold L. Goodman, director of wholesale for Revillon Furs, a Paris company that has been crafting furs since 1723.

"They are the most desirable luxury," Goodman says. "Every woman knows that once she puts her gloves on, you can't see her rings anymore—but you can destroy a room within a 20-foot diameter if you walk in dripping in a fabulous fur."

Today's furs are a far cry from those demure little mink jackets your favorite auntie used to wear. The overall trend for furs—mink, fox, Bukhara lamb, Russian sable, beaver and chinchilla—follows the short lengths that have taken the fashion industry by storm.

"The trend, fashion-wise, is the seven-eighth coat, right to the knee, just a full and very easy, flared-typed coat," notes Lawrence Schulman, a third-generation principal of Alexandre Furs, whose collections include Perry Ellis, Yves Saint Laurent and Valentino.

What's also new about furs this year is that more and more women are buying them, using their salaries to snuggle into some luxury.

Goodman remarks: "We have known for several years that more women are buying furs for themselves. Off the top of my head, I'd say not less than 25 percent of all furs today are bought by women for themselves."

Granted, a fur purchase can range from a $295 fox jacket of questionable quality to an indisputably fine $195,000 Russian lynx coat. But experts say that the most popular fur is still mink, and they also agree that mink should be a woman's first purchase.

"The most serviceable coat for the average fur buyer is a mink," observes Alexandre's Schulman. "I think the biggest mistake when purchasing a fur is to want something that's overdone, overstated, thereby limiting its wear and how long you're going to love it."

"The most important thing about fashion is its longevity. One, a fur should suit your lifestyle and, two, be something that you can wear forever."

"An impulse should never be something to base a first-fur purchase on," cautions Goodman. "A white mink jacket is glorious-looking, but can you wear that to the supermarket?"

Mink is durable, lightweight, warm—and classic. With those qualities, mink becomes the kind of "lifestyle" purchase that furriers recommend.

Daniel Antonovich is chairman of the board of Antonovich Furs, a New York-area discount furrier that expects more than $40 million in sales from its nine locations this year in 1987. Antonovich's advertising campaign is directed to the contemporary female fur buyer: "It's like school. Do your homework first. Then go out and play."

"Purchasing a fur coat is a very emotional experience," says Antonovich. "Mediocre-quality furs are still very beautiful, and unless the consumer has a good insight into the product, she can't make an ultimate judgment on the high quality she seeks."

He offers these guidelines for fur purchases:

(BU) Go to the best furrier in your community and touch and study what good fur looks like. "Once you've seen good fur and had a tactile experience of it, you don't forget it."

(BU) Look for silkiness, which indicates that the pelt was prime.

(BU) A good, dense, round "fiber" is desirable. "Fiber" refers to the fur's short hairs; the second hair is a "guard hair," which is longer. Mink should be short and napped.

Though female mink is considered finer than male mink because it is more supple and lightweight, male mink can also be of fine quality if the "fibers" are short like the female's.

(BU) Mink shouldn't look shiny, but have a "velvety luster." The ultimate is when the guard hairs are just slightly higher than the short "fibers."

(BU) The finer the coat, the closer the pelt. You should not see the leather between the pelts when the coat is worn upright.

(BU) A coat should be cleaned and glazed once a year. "Look for a reputable furrier who will provide customer service for storage and maintaining the fur," Antonovich advises.

(BU) Consider discount furriers. Because their volume is greater, they don't have premium prices and can offer many ranges.

Two last caveats: Once you own that fur, let it dry in a cool place; if it gets very wet, shake and comb, don't brush it, to remove excess moisture. Always buy the best quality within your budget.

For the woman who already owns a fur (or two) and wants to get in on this year's fashion wave, consider having an old fur cut to the new, stylish seven-eighth length. With the cutaway portions, Antonovich advises to use those to update the coat by extending shoulders and deepening armholes.

And whether new, old or reworked, if you own a fur, for heaven's sake, wear it to death.

Free Diabetes Classes Aid In Planning Meals

"Diabetes Series: Update," a special program for diabetics and their families, will be offered on Thursdays starting Jan. 14 and continuing through Feb. 18 at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

Free, the classes will be held from 2:30-4 p.m. in the hospital's classroom.

"One of the major topics emphasized during the course is nutrition," said Betsy Fitts, instructor. Contrary to ancestors who never thought about a balanced diet yet his nutritional intake was probably sound, today's diabetic has a full range of food choices.

Fitts cites advice given by the American Diabetes Association Task Force. The guidelines indicate that diabetics should work together with health care team members to create a meal plan to meet their needs; count calories, reduce protein, cut back on fat, eat more carbohydrates, increase fiber and eat less salt.

In addition, sessions include discussions on the meaning of blood sugar and diabetes, food exchanges and menu planning, medication and lifestyles for diabetics.

Pre-registration is required. Call Nursing Education at Central Florida Regional at 321-4500 or 688-4441, extension 607.

Get Second Opinion From A Urologist

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a large diverticulum of the bladder. My urologist thinks that it should be removed. Another doctor, a pathologist, believes that surgery would just create a weak spot and potential problems later. What is your opinion? I'm 73.

DEAR READER — A diverticulum is a weakened, bulging portion of the bladder. It does not contract — or contracts weakly — during urination. Hence, bladder diverticula can contribute to urinary residual, the presence of remaining urine in the bladder after voiding. This residual can trap bacteria and provide a source for chronic urinary infection. If your diverticulum is associated with symptoms, such as those of infection, it should be removed. In my experience, the operation rarely results in problems.

The decision regarding surgery is one best left to you and your urologist. Rather than obtaining a second opinion from a pathologist, who is not a specialist in bladder ailments, you would be better served by getting a second urologist's opinion.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Since the death of my wife, I've turned to prostitutes for my necessities. I worry about AIDS. Can a man contract it from oral sex without a condom?

DEAR READER — In theory, yes. The AIDS virus is spread by direct contact of body fluids. In most cases, blood or semen are acknowledged to be the primary sources of infection. However, as you know, the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) has been isolated from other body fluids, including saliva and tears.

To my knowledge, there have been no studies that specifically address the spread of AIDS through oral sex. However, an infected woman could infect a partner in this way if she had a small abrasion or cut on the penis. Because prostitutes have been reported to have a high incidence of HIV infection, you should insist on using a condom — or alter your method of gratification.

Sex-for-pay and casual, promiscuous sex are dangerous for anybody. I advise you to stop using prostitutes and either find a regular (and "safe") monogamous partner or resort to self-gratification. Because of your experiences with prostitutes, you may also wish to be tested for the presence of HIV antibodies in your bloodstream.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Since opener's jump to four hearts showed 19 or 20 points in support of South's one-heart response, South quickly asked for aces and bid a small slam. North and South had plenty of high cards between them, but their major-suit holdings looked a bit like Swiss cheese. South won the opening diamond lead and played king and ace of hearts. Since West was left with a trump trick, declarer had to find a way to avoid a spade loser. He stripped out his minor-suit winners and gave West his trump trick. Back came the queen of spades, and South could not avoid the loss of a spade trick. Declarer's play was not best. Although there are spade combinations West could have that might allow the slam to make with the throw-in, West can prevail with many of those combinations. For example, if West is thrown in and his spade holding is Q-9-x or J-9-x, he can exit with his spade honor, and declarer cannot avoid losing another trick. And if West holds Q-J-x of spades, he can lead a low card away from the Q-J, and declarer will be unlikely to do anything other than put in dummy's eight-spot. Declarer is better off playing for a distribution that will make the slam for him without any guesswork. All he needs is for West to hold only two spades. So South cashes out the A-K of spades and the minor-suit winners, and then puts West on lead with a trump. With nothing left but diamonds, West must give declarer a sluff and a ruff and his contract.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

By Bernice Bede Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
DECEMBER 29, 1987

You will be able to operate in a more independent manner in the year ahead than you have in the past. Restrictive forces that previously tied you down will be eliminated, and you'll be able to be your own person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Regardless of how hard you try today, you will not be able to please everyone. Fortunately, however, you will charm more people than you disenchant. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail 82 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Details are extremely important today, so be as cognizant of them as you are of the larger factors. If you dot all the i's and cross all the t's, you'll have no problems.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Weigh your alternatives carefully today before making important decisions. You have many more options at your disposal than you may realize.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Lots of activities are in the offing for you today, especially where your career and finances are concerned. Fortunately, you should do well in both areas.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) What you are hoping to achieve is not out of reach today, provided you bank on your own ingenuity and resourcefulness rather than someone else's.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Usually it's not wise to let hunches govern one's behavior in business matters, but today could be an exception. Be logical, but also follow your instincts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) When dealing with people you like today, keep friendship uppermost in your mind, especially if you have to make a decision regarding something that's to be shared.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you should be able to succeed in realms where you previously experienced setbacks. Several unfulfilled ambitions may now be gratified.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Strive to be philosophical regarding all of your involvements today. Your attitude will enhance your chances for success and enable you to laugh off situations that misfire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep your material needs uppermost in your mind today. They'll inspire you to put forth the appropriate efforts required to get that which you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's a possibility you'll meet someone socially today for whom you will feel an instant affinity. An old friend may be instrumental in arranging the introduction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is a good time to launch a creative venture, especially if it's something you've been wanting to do for a long time. Stop waiting and start acting.
