Spider With 6 Eyes Sees Victims In Bed

In Sunday's Herald, Dr. H. Garrett Dotson of Sanford explained what to do in the event of snake bite. Today are his comments on scorpions, poisonous spiders, bees, wasps and hornets.

By DIANE PETRYK
Herald Staff Writer

Six eyes, a violin or an orange hourglass. If you see a spider with these traits, keep away.

There are two species of poisonous spiders found in Florida, according to Dr. H. Garrett Dotson, Sanford surgeon. The brown recluse spider can be recognized by the darker brown violin-shaped mark on its back — just behind its three pairs of eyes.

The species is found in sheds, closets, desks and among stored clothes, and for this reason 75 percent of those bitten by the brown recluse spider are in bed or dressing when bitten.

With the brown recluse bite, Dotson said, usually there is no pain for two to eight hours.

Then painful swelling and redness occurs and the site of the bite breaks down into a localized ulcer.

Brown recluse spider bites rarely cause death, Dotson said, but a few have been known to die. All such bites should be seen by a physician, he said.

The Black Widow spider's bite is typically less painful than that of the Brown Recluse, but may cause more severe reactions due to a toxin injected with the bite.

The toxin causes nausea, vomiting, dizziness, headaches, difficulty breathing and rash.

But Dotson said doctors do have an antidote to the toxin available.

Black widows can be recognized by their shiny black body with a red, orange or yellow abdominal hourglass mark. The species is usually found in outdoor toilets, garbage collection areas and any other place where there are many flies. Most black widows bite when they feel threatened.

"It's a defensive mechanism," he said. "They don't go out looking for a fight. One good thing about poisonous spiders is that they are uncommon."

"There's very little chance that you'll see one of these spiders around your home," Dotson said. "They're around, but there are hundreds of varieties of spiders and only two poisonous species."

Scorpions are another poisonous creature found in Florida. But scorpions don't bite, they sting with the tip of their venom-filled tail.

There are about 30 species of scorpions in the U.S., and luckily the species capable of causing death are found only in the southwest.

Florida scorpions usually cause just a painful sting.

The sting is manifest by local pain, redness and swelling. It should be treated by putting the bitten area at rest and covering it with an ice pack, Dotson said.

Bees, wasps, hornets and yellow jackets are insects that sting. Of these, bees and yellow jackets are the most dangerous because they swarm, Dotson said. Swarming bees can result in multiple stings.

Other bees and wasps do not swarm. A honey bee can sting only once. Its stinger, or lancet, has barbs and stays embedded in the skin of its victim. The pulling off of the lancet results in the death of the bee.

It is important not to try to pull out an insect's lancet, because squeezing the poison sac will just inject more venom into the wound. Instead, use a horizontal scraping motion with the fingernail or other semi-sharp object to dislodge the lancet.

The yellow jacket will often bite before stinging.

Wasps do not have barbs on their stingers so they can pull the stinger out and sting several times. During these stings a small amount of venom is injected through the hollow lancet or stinger.

The typical reaction to wasp stings is pain, redness and swelling.

Most people do not experience serious complications, but allergic reactions to the venom in varying degrees are possible.

Some allergic reactions include multiple welts, difficulty breathing and shock.

These reactions should be treated by a physician, Dotson said.

The most severe reactions can sometimes result in death if not properly treated, but there are antidotes available, he said.

As with any kind of venomous bite, wasp stings are more dangerous for little children because they have less body fluid to disperse the venom and dilute its effects. For this reason, Dotson recommends that youngsters be protected from snake bite, and insect bites and stings as much as possible.

Mosquito bites should also be avoided, although they are not painful, he said. This is because some mosquitoes carry and transmit encephalitis and perhaps other illnesses.

A STAR IS BORN

Birth Announcement: It's a girl, they say. A bouncing baby llama was born this week at the Central Florida Zoo. The proud parents are Liz and Dick, named for the children of Stella and Joe Orritt of Sanford who gave the llamas to the zoo. The baby llama will be named Star — if it turns out she is a girl, that is. Little Star is joined by a brother, Joe Boy, whose name resulted from a contest after his birth at the zoo.

Tired Hurricane Still Dangerous

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (UPI) — Hurricane Allen, reduced to a tropical storm, spawned tornadoes deep inside Texas that ripped into an airport, nursing home and camp ground of coastal residents who had fled inland from the storm's fury.

Early today, the storm — its once-mighty 178-mph winds down to 45 mph — was located between Laredo and Del Rio near the Texas-Mexican border, moving west-northwest into Mexico. Tornadoes and flash flood warnings were posted throughout south Texas and into the central Texas hill country.

Electrical power remained off in much of the Rio Grande Valley and water supplies were contaminated by salt water in many towns, including Corpus Christi.

Authorities credited the early evacuation of about 200,000 people along the 450-mile Texas coastline with keeping the death toll down. One storm-related death was reported in Corpus Christi. A 72-year-old man suffered a heart attack while trimming trees that had fallen on his house during the high winds.

37 Ride Out Storm On Grounded Tanker

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (UPI) — Thirty-seven men rode out Hurricane Allen aboard a grounded oil tanker listing in 40-foot waves and gale-force winds that forced rescue helicopters and tags to turn back.

The Coast Guard said it hoped the weather today would clear enough to allow one of its helicopters — all of which had been moved to Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin, Texas, to escape the storm — to rescue the crewmen aboard the Liberian tanker Mary Ellen.

There was no report of any injured on board.

Once the men are safe and the weather clears, Texas Gov. Bill Clements said the Coast Guard would pump the 20 million gallons of crude oil from the Mary Ellen into three barges and possibly refloat the ship.

'Favorite Sons' Take On Carter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rep. Ronald Dellums of California announced for the Democratic presidential nomination today — the first of several issue-oriented favorite sons mounting challenges to President Carter's first-ballot renomination.

Others expected to use this strategy for throwing open the party convention were New Mexico Lt. Gov. Robert Mondragon, a Hispanic, New York City Council President Carol Bellamy, and a representative of the farm bloc.

Dellums, a black from Oakland, said he is running to protest Carter's refusal to debate and discuss issues of concern to blacks during the primaries.

He said he hopes the 491 black delegates — two-thirds of them pledged to Carter — will "take off their Kennedy buttons, look around and realize they are all blacks."

"Tonight at 10 o'clock the convention, for all practical purposes, will be locked and wired and people will go to sleep," Dellums told a news conference.

"So yes, my candidacy is a last-ditch effort. It is a desperate attempt to say there needs to be some integrity to the process, that the issues of this country need to be discussed and need to be debated."

Earlier in the day, Edward Bennett Williams, head of the Committee to Continue the Open Convention, expressed optimism that a rule binding delegates to their pledges would be overturned tonight.

While the Dellums candidacy was not specifically connected with the "open convention" movement, it was welcomed by its organizers.

The favorite son movement surfaced Sunday following meetings that two young strategists for Sen. Edward Kennedy, Paul Kirk and Carl Wagner, held with two young congressmen on the open convention committee, Toby Moffett of Connecticut and George Miller of California.

But, the attempt to inject new candidates as a means of putting Carter on hold was apparently dependent on Kennedy going farther than he has before in encouraging third, fourth or fifth candidates.

"Open convention" operatives complain that as long as Kennedy was perceived as the chief beneficiary of abandoning the rule there was no hope of gaining support from Carter delegates.

One former Kennedy campaign aide said nothing from Kennedy short of a withdrawal could deny Carter the nomination. "There are people in the Kennedy camp who feel he should (withdraw) but nobody wants to suggest it."

If the senator withdrew, the source predicted, about 300 or more Carter delegates — possibly enough to deny him the nomination — would surface for alternative candidates Secretary of State Edmund Muskie or Sen. Henry Jackson.

Kennedy Remains Silent About Supporting Carter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Divided Democrats, trailing Ronald Reagan in every national poll, met today to begin their own presidential convention and Sen. Edward Kennedy refused again to say whether he will support President Carter if Carter wins the nomination Wednesday.

Carter is the heavy favorite to win tonight's key rules vote, a victory that would assure his expected renomination over Kennedy. But key Democrats and delegates to the 38th national convention in Madison Square Garden say the big question is unity in the general election.

"We're going to have a long week here. We're going to have a number of battles. We'll continue to press the economic issues and the candidacy," Kennedy said as he avoided answering questions today in an NBC interview on whether he would support Carter against Republican nominee Reagan.

"I think what really counts is if we come out of this convention united," said Kennedy.

"I have known Senator Kennedy for years. He's a good Democrat. He knows that Reagan's policies would repeal everything that we've stood for all of these years and I believe the senator is going to be supporting us."

All gaudipotes indicate Carter is on the verge of victory, but Democrats are worried about how divided his renegades might vote to kill the rule on tonight's roll call if it could be convinced it would not mean Kennedy's nomination instead.

The UPI delegate survey Sunday showed Carter with 1,985 to Kennedy's 1,343, with 103 uncommitted.

Meteor Storms In The Forecast

Late night skywatchers may be treated to a meteor shower for the next couple of evenings if the weatherman cooperates with clear skies.

Each August in its orbit around the sun, the earth passes through the tail of a comet. The debris in the comet's tail enters the earth's atmosphere and produces the heavenly fireworks.

According to a spokesman from the John Young Planetarium, best viewing times will be between 2 and 3 a.m. in the Northern sky near the constellation Casopia.

Warren, Williams Endorsed

The Seminole Education Association Political Action Committee (SEA-PAC) today announced its endorsement of School Board candidates Nancy Warren and Roland Williams.

Bill Dailey, chairman of SEA-PAC, said Mrs. Warren is endorsed because of her commitment to the improvement of education through increased involvement of the parents. Williams, incumbent, is endorsed, he said, because of his past record on the school board which shows him to be "honest, sincere and devoted to the improvement of education in Seminole County."

Mrs. Warren is running against former School Board member, Davie Sims, while Williams is being challenged by Bill Speagle of Casselberry.

Dailey said today SEA-PAC will later announce its endorsement of State Rep. Robert Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs. Hattaway is running unopposed for a fourth term in the Legislature. Dailey said the endorsement will be a "vote of confidence" for Hattaway.

The Seminole Education Association (SEA) has a membership of about 1,200 teachers.

The SEA Political Action Committee, according to Dailey, is composed of SEA members who wish to be involved in political action. He said since SEA-PAC is currently involved in a membership drive, the number of members at this moment cannot be readily determined.

Last week the group endorsed Robert Hughes, principal of Sabal Point Elementary School, for the school superintendent's office, and made recommendations in three county commission races.

For the district 3 seat on the county commission, SEA-PAC endorsed Tom Kanelis in the Republican primary over Robert G. Feather and Gerald Korman in the Democratic primary over Norman Floyd. The primaries will be Sept. 9.

SEA-PAC also endorsed Sanford City Commissioner John Morris for the district 5 seat on the commission.

No endorsement was given in the District 1 county commission contest between incumbent Bob French, D-Casselberry, and Casselberry Councilman Barbara Christensen, Republican. But Dailey said SEA-PAC may also again consider an endorsement in the county commission District 1 race between French and Mrs. Christensen.

Hughes is running against incumbent Superintendent William P. Layer.

Morris is running against incumbent Republican County Commissioner Bill Kirehoff.

Blood Can't Help Determine Father DEAR DR. LAMB — A woman has moved into our area and she claims my husband is the father of her 4-year-old son. She is going to sue him for support and hospital fees. He says he did have relations with her but so did a lot of other men. Now what I'd like to know is if there is any way she can prove this. She says she can through a blood test.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What risk am I taking of conceiving at the age of 31 if I eliminate all birth control measures? I have been married 26 years and have never had a pregnancy and have always used birth control pills. I did not desire a family, I still menstruate regularly and show no indication of the menopause. Recently I consulted a gynecologist regarding a tubal ligation and he did not advise it saying my chances of conceiving at my age were very remote.

DEAR READER — In the past blood tests were frequently used to determine paternity. They never were that helpful and their use is limited value in establishing paternity. For the most part, the blood test can only be used to prove that a man is not the father of the child.

DEAR READER — It's not unusual to get two different opinions from two different doctors. I do not know what kind of birth control measures you have been using but you had been using the pill and stopping it at regular intervals, the induced menstrual period may be from stopping the pills rather than a true menstruation.

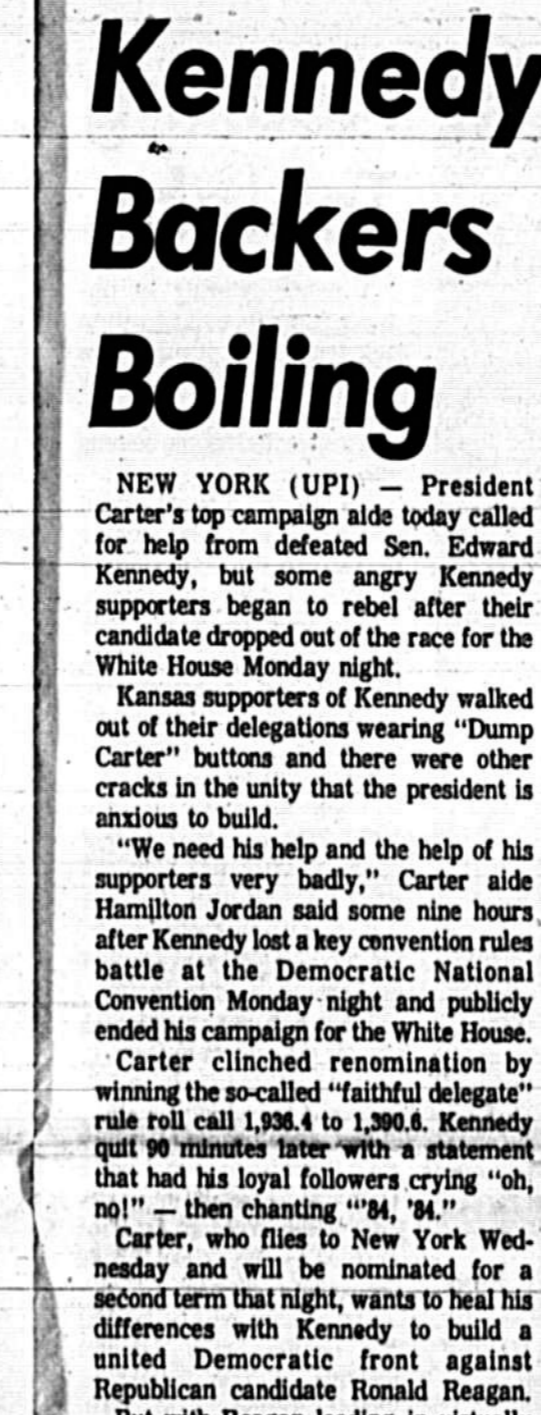

DEAR READER — You need his help and the help of his supporters very badly. Carter aide Hamilton Jordan said some nine hours after Kennedy lost a key convention rule battle at the Democratic National Convention Monday night and publicly ended his campaign for the White House.

DEAR READER — "East's king forces South's ace. South enters dummy with a diamond, leads a spade to his ten and west is in with the queen. At this time West can lead the correct lead by simple application of the H in the acronym ARCH.

DEAR READER — At a news conference today, Carter aide Stuart Eizenstat, Treasury Secretary William Miller and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall indicated there were no meetings scheduled with Kennedy people to try to compromise further on the economic plans of the platform.

DEAR READER — The site plan had been previously approved by the city planning and zoning board and the city engineer. Tiplon and Associates Traffic Engineers did a study that determined the Handy Way would not be detrimental to traffic on E.E. Williamson Road.

Rift Widens Between Judge Williams, Commission

The rift between Circuit Judge Volie Williams and the Seminole County Commission, over whether the county should permit him to retain his hospitalization insurance after his retirement, widened today.

Judge Williams asked the county commission to seek an attorney general's opinion on whether the county's required under state law to provide a retiring judge, who was insured by the county while on the bench in 1967, with hospitalization insurance. The commissioners voted today not to seek the opinion, Assistant County Attorney Robert McMillan said.

The county's director of administrative services, David Hotary, said today that he discussed costs of the insurance Williams desires with the county's insurer, Metropolitan, last week.

Williams said today that he, in letters to the county commission on May 29 and again on June 4, asked that he be permitted to retain his county hospitalization insurance after retirement. He said he would be willing to pay the full costs of the insurance.

Williams said that a second state law exists which permits counties to provide hospitalization coverage to its retired employees. He said surrounding counties, including both Orange and Brevard, have this policy.

Williams said today that the county has not had the "courtesy" to respond to either of his letters. "All I have heard from them is what I read in the newspaper," he said.

Hotary will make his report to the county commission at a future work session, McMillan said today.

Hotary said, however, that the county commission can change its policy, if it wishes to.

Sanford Man Lost His Life Pursuing A Dream At Sea

Bill Van Pelt died while pursuing his dream of sailing around the world, but on Aug. 2 his dream and his life were washed away in a storm at sea.

Memorial services for the 35-year-old Sanford man will be held at 2 p.m. Friday at the Holy Cross Episcopal Church, Sanford, with the Rev. Leroy D. Soper officiating.

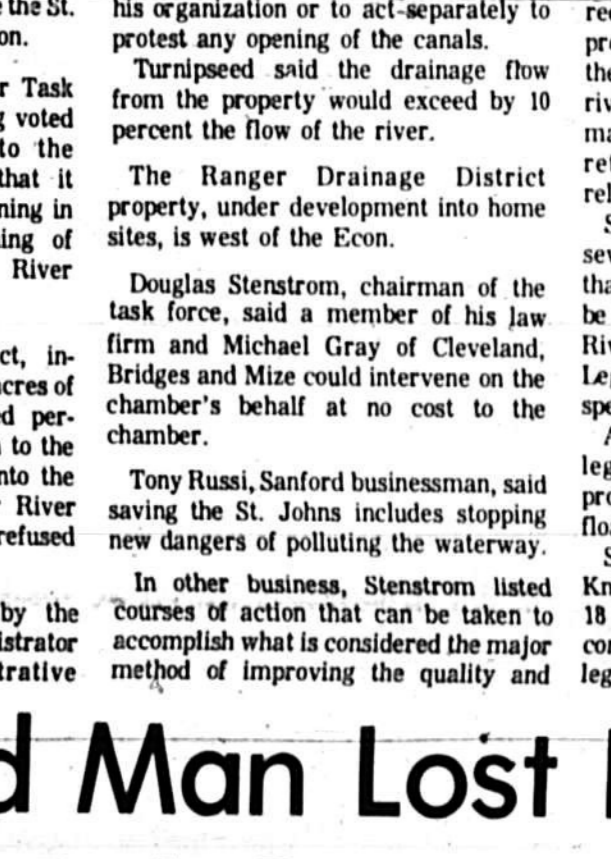

Longwood Sued Over Permit For Store

A suit has been filed against the City of Longwood by Samuel Bowman IV, Alan Keen and Miller Enterprises, Inc. seeking a court order to force the city to issue a building permit for a proposed Handy Way store on E.E. Williamson Road.

The plaintiffs allege they were denied a permit by the city commission even though they had met all the requirements of the city's site plan ordinance.

The site plan had been previously approved by the city planning and zoning board and the city engineer.
