Ben Lindsey Barred From Law Practice

DENVER, Dec. 9.—(INS)—Ben B. Lindsey, internationally known as a lawyer, today was barred from the practice of law by the court judge here, an advocate of "common sense" marriage, who was disbarred from practicing law in Colorado by the state supreme court today. The disbarment proceedings against Lindsey were an outgrowth of his acceptance of money from Mrs. Helen Hanson Stokes and Samuel Entenman, New York attorneys, in connection with the settlement of a large fortune among the two children of Mrs. Hanson from the estate of her father, the late W. E. D. Stokes, New York millionaire hotel owner. Lindsey's attorney, Joseph J. Starnes, today announced that Lindsey had declined the money and that the case in court would not be legal because Lindsey had not been a lawyer in the state of Colorado.

The Curtain Drops

Last Saturday, as the sun was being obscured on the western horizon, the word final was being written across the gridiron map of the United States, and the only thing left of the 1929 football season was the memory of sweet victories and bitter defeats and the cold statistics written into the records. A few past season games are yet to be played in a futile effort to clear up the question as to where the best football is played and by whom, a question which is becoming yearly more difficult to answer.

The All-American savants have had their innings and anyone who didn't make one of the mythical teams shouldn't feel bad about it because there are plenty of others who didn't. One should always remember that an All-American isn't picked because he is good but because a preponderance of persons says he's good. This isn't unfair; it is only regrettable that recognition of merit necessarily is based upon publicity and publicity and not upon actual ability alone, a condition which tends to dim the lesser college athlete and to overrate the big college stars.

In the South, the season was featured by the capitulation of Georgia Tech from the pinnacle of gridiron prowess to the trough of ignominy; the ascendancy of Tulane from the ranks of the mediocre into the realm of the undefeated and the dramatic game between Tennessee and Kentucky in which the Vols for the third time in succession were deprived of a championship by the stubbornness of their less worthy opponents, the Wildcats. Florida's showing was disappointing to many expecting greater things from the Gators, who, for some reason or other appeared to play football when they wanted to and not to play football when they didn't want to. However, any team that goes through a season in these days with only two defeats should be commended. If you don't think so, ask any Georgia Tech man.

For sheer drama, Notre Dame and Yale were in the vanguard. Handicapped by their coach's sickness, confronted with the hardest schedule ever attempted by a football team, and subjected to long trips from one end of the country to the other, the Irish trampled the best in the North, South and West and finished a season without defeat to win the national title. This was not done without several close calls, as witness the one-point margin victory over Southern California, the 7 to 0 defeat of Carnegie Tech and the 7 to 0 victory over Army, made possible by a hundred yard dash by the fastest man on any gridiron, Jack Elder.

Because it had one, Almie Booth, in a low field Yale was able to pull out of several holes to beat Brown, Army and Dartmouth on successive Saturdays, in what has been described as the most remarkable performance of individual and team since the days of Red Grange. The tiny atom from New Haven outplayed Red Grange and Al Mustafa, two of the game's greatest stars, and furnished for the spectator an amazing collection of long distance hops, roadward. Great things are expected from the lad, who, as a sophomore, received almost as much publicity as Lindbergh.

All in all the 1929 football season was characterized by extraordinary feats of individual ability and long-run thrills, despite the new fumble rule, by record-breaking attendances, by an unusual number of so-called breaks in the big games and by the development of a great many high class teams. The only blot on the year was the Carnegie report which found that a great many colleges were allowing commercialism to exert too great an influence upon athletics, a condition which, if regrettable, does not seem to affect the popularity of the greatest college sport.

The Rising Cost Of Newsprint

The modern tendency in the field of journalism is to reduce the size of newspapers in order to keep at a minimum the quantity of newsprint consumed. Some publishers accomplish this purpose by continuing their papers in two columns per page; others by cutting to six columns and shortening the length of the paper; still others by materially reducing the number of pages printed each day. And a few, perhaps going to the extreme, have turned their newspapers into tabloids, printing in four or five columns of twelve to fifteen inches in length, what formerly required eight columns of twenty to twenty-two inches.

There are perhaps two reasons for this change in newspaper size, although the theory may be advanced by some that the first reason is rather far fetched. It is frequently pointed out that the average newspaper reader seldom goes further in a story than the second or third paragraph; many read only the heads. If this is so, why print four or five additional paragraphs? The tendency in this line of headline and headline is brevity and conciseness. "The fact," says a famous editor, "and you will succeed". Another points out that brevity is the secret of clarity.

But what is perhaps most important of all is the fact that brevity saves considerable white paper, and in these days of mounting cost of publication, that is no inconsiderable item. Newsprint is made from trees, and only when you begin to consider the thousands of newspapers throughout America, some of them printing five or six editions daily, can one realize the rapid depletion of forests which is taking place in this country. Only recently another increase in the price of newsprint has been announced. Arthur Brisbane quotes Paul Block, publisher of several large newspapers, as follows:

"The price of print paper is to be increased, public has rather than raise advertising rates, should meet that situation by reducing the size of their papers, and their consumption of newsprint, by ten percent. Doing that," he intelligently, they will improve their newspapers, and make them offset the increased cost of white paper. On one of my papers, the proposed increase in paper price will cost $100,000 a year, cutting the cost of the paper ten percent will save me $135,000 a year. Public has a real sense of the postscript to Madame De Sevigne's letter to her daughter 'If I had more time I should have written you a shorter letter.'"

A FEW WEEKS ago the whole land was more than excited about the antics of the stock market. There was much money lost, which somebody else necessarily found. But through it all the great mass of the people were and are at work. They save some money, and they use it for the purpose of buying homes, for buying bonds, for buying stocks. There are many, many millions to whom the mad scramble of stock market with its paper profits and paper losses means little. — Palm Beach Times

THE FARMER'S ADVICE BY ALFALFA SMITH

I have told you time and again that good ideas do not smother you in the face—they do not knock you down—they fit into the mind much as a leaf falls from a bough in the autumn. Listen to the words of James Watt, inventor of the modern condensing steam engine: "Early in 1766, while walking on a Sunday afternoon in Glasgow Green, the idea flashed through my mind, etc." After this idea FLASHED UP ON HIM he did something, and that something has been of incalculable value to the world up to this day. WATCH YOUR IDEAS AND ACT ON THE GOOD ONES.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY By Robert Barry

Gen. Daves did the best he could to amend the Senate rules. He did not make a dent in them. Paul Mallon, a young reporter, did more. Now, there is one man in Washington who wishes there might have been a greater victory than Daves' proposal or Mallon's achieved.

The man is Senator Reed Smoot. Of all the unhappy men in Washington, the Senator from Utah is the unhappiest.

There is no Senate rule whereby he could retain his chairmanship of the Committee on Finance; and at the same time reach out and take over the Chairmanship of the Committee on Appropriations.

Neither was it to be between two loves.

The Chairmanship of the Finance Committee is supposed to be the laurel wreath to a Senator. It has passed a crown of thorns to the Rev. Smoot.

The tariff debate has demonstrated beyond any reasonable doubt that Smoot's party is no state majority but a mere coalition of a half-dozen senators of various factions.

A Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, however, could get his hands on all of the federal expenditures of $400,000,000 a year. He could control the purse strings of the government.

A good portion of this money is used for the army and navy. He could control the military and naval budgets.

That is a position why he got President Hoover to appoint him to the post of Chairman of the Finance Committee.

But the President's appointment was a mistake. The Finance Committee is a dead weight.

The Finance Committee is a dead weight because it is a collection of men who are not interested in finance.

It is a collection of men who are interested in politics and in their own pockets.

It is a collection of men who are interested in their own careers and in their own power.

It is a collection of men who are interested in their own interests and in their own ambitions.

Mrs. Speer Hostess At Party On Friday

Following Mrs. Nettie Ingram, who celebrated her birthday last Friday, and the members of the T. E. L. Class, Mrs. C. W. Speer entertained with a candlelight party on Thursday evening at her home on Laurel Avenue. The rooms where the guests were assembled were decorated with poinsettias and other flowers in shades of red and green, while red, green and white candles were placed in the windows and about the rooms.

The program for the evening included "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing" rendered by Mrs. Robert Cole, accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Hickey, after which Miss Hartley sang a Christmas carol. Later Nancy Bonetter and Frances Johnson gave vocal readings and Mrs. J. C. Calhoun conducted a series of games in which candles were used.

The Rev. W. P. Hooker, Jr. then gave a talk on a chapter from the Bible after which Mrs. E. W. Stanley led a short devotional. By way of conclusion the evening's entertainment the Muses Christmas and Pauline Steudennire played several piano and vocal selections. Miss Frances Johnson gave a character sketch and the hostess presented several commentaries.

Reverend comments from the night and vocal songs were rendered by Mrs. Speer, assisted by Mrs. Nettie Ingram, Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, Mrs. J. C. Lykes, Mrs. H. E. Beck and Mrs. W. Smith.

Those present were: Mrs. Jane Smith, Mrs. J. E. Laine, Mrs. A. K. Rosetter, Mrs. A. H. Lovojay, Mrs. Lonetta Brotherson, Mrs. E. W. Stanley, Mrs. J. M. Wilson, Mrs. A. E. Westlund, Mrs. J. R. Laine, Mrs. H. Cummings, Mrs. E. W. Smith, Mrs. E. R. Sawyer, Mrs. H. E. Beck, Mrs. H. L. Miller, Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, Mrs. W. A. Hayes, Mrs. L. E. Tow, Mrs. Walter Peck, Mrs. W. L. Steudennire, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Emmet Gormley, the Rev. and Mrs. W. P. Hooker, Jr., Mrs. J. M. Vickery, Mrs. W. Smith, Mrs. Nettie Ingram, Mrs. C. W. Speer, the Muses Augustus Fletcher, Mary Goodale, Pauline Steudennire, Christine Steudennire, Frances Johnson, Nancy Bonetter and Letitia Gormley.

Christian Scientists Have Same Sermons
 "God the Only Cause and Creator" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, December 8.

The Golden Text was from Psalm 115:1, "I will extol thee, my God, O Lord; and I will bless thy name for ever and ever. One generation shall praise thy works to another, and shall declare thy mighty acts."

Among the readings which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "I am the Lord, and there is none else; there is no God beside me: I tried them, though thou hadst not known me; I have made the earth, and created man upon it; even my hand, have stretched out over the heavens, and all their hosts have I commanded" (Isa. 45:12).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Duty was fulfilled with His work. How could He be otherwise, into the spiritual creation was the subgrowth, the emanation of His infinite self-continuation and immortal wisdom" (p. 519).

Mrs. Potter Hostess To Her Bridge Club
 Mrs. W. W. Potter was hostess to the members of the Young Matron's Duplicate Club with a bridge party and luncheon on Wednesday afternoon at her home on Melbourne Avenue. Lunch was served in courses by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. R. J. Holly Jr. and Mrs. J. P. Ridge, from luncheon tables which were centered with bud vases filled with yellow chrysanthemums.

During the course of the afternoon several boards of duplicates were participated in and high score prizes, linen handkerchiefs, went to Mrs. J. D. Woodruff and Mrs. Ralph Wright.

Those present were: Mrs. R. J. Holly Jr., Mrs. W. C. Hill, Mrs. J. P. Ridge, Mrs. B. D. Caswell, Mrs. Ralph Wright, Mrs. Dentzel Stafford and Mrs. J. C. Woodruff.

Garden Club Circle Has Meeting Friday
 Answering the roll call with appropriate names of trees to be Christmas lighting and Christmas decorations the members of the Garden Club of the Sanford Garden Club held their regular meeting Friday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of Mrs. A. W. Epps on Palmietto Avenue. The roll call brought out a discussion of many wild flowers and berries which are seen in this time of the year.

Mrs. Elnor Curlett presided over the business session and reported a good attendance. At this time the circle recommended to the Garden Club that recognition be made on the lists to the horticultural world by the death of Dr. Henry Melching, after which articles were read by several members on gardens and holidays.

The landscape tray for the afternoon, prepared by Mrs. J. H. Colquhoun and Mrs. Epps, was typical of the holiday season and included a living decorated Christmas tree. Plans for Arbor Day were then taken up and followed by a paper read by Mrs. Henry Wright, president of the Garden Club. It was as follows:

"Ever since your chairman asked me months ago to talk to you at this meeting about a substitute for Christmas gifts, I have felt troubled in my mind over what I was to say to you—a very different feeling from my joyous approach to the consideration of any topic that has to do with gardens and growing things.

"One morning a few weeks ago I was awakened in the early dawn by the delicious tinkle of a morning bird in the orange tree just outside my bedroom. My first impulse was to get up and look for a home where birds would never be disturbed. I realized in that instant that I had the answer to my question as to what I was to say to you about Christmas presents.

"I do not mean, my friends, that we have Christmas presents all through our coldest weather.

"There are a great many things in our gardens and in our woods that never show the touch of frost and why then should we feel that we must break and bring them to our homes, when all we have to do is to look out of our windows? Since 1917, it has been against Florida law to pick from our woods, holly, dewwood, honey suckle, jasmine, wild cranapple, red and white mountain laurel. Do you not see that this law nearly touches us in this section since the prohibited material we have in our woods, only the holly and the jasmine?

"Now, it is sadly true that the holly is about all gone in our immediate vicinity, and that there is nothing that quite takes its place at Christmas, but there is one thing we can do, of a remedial nature. We can obtain from reputable nurserymen young grafted holly trees for our private gardens, that are grafted, and will insure heavy bearing trees. I can think of no one time we can set for our big arbor day celebration, that will more immediately fit into a need, and mean more happiness and joy for us in the future.

"Please consider this, and if you think well of it, send word to the

GERMANS LOSING THEIR INTEREST IN CLASSIC MUSIC

Number Of Subscribers To Concerts Is Less, Report Shows

By Walter Dietzel
International News Service
Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—Classical home music and interest in classical concerts are dying in Germany, the country of Beethoven, Mozart, and Haydn.

A circular questionnaire of the newspaper "Leipziger Neueste Nachrichten" addressed to the concert agencies of several big cities and to the managers of big municipal orchestras revealed that the number of subscribers to concerts has largely fallen off.

Most of the agencies and orchestra managers attribute the decrease to the general financial plight of the middle classes, an abundance of radio music and the general enthusiasm of the young generation for outdoor sports, which has seized girls and boys alike.

"Radio started a music inflation which automatically decreased the value of good classical music as offered in concerts," reads the answer of the Kiel Philharmonic Society. "Music is no longer an exceptional sort of festive entertainment. It has been degraded to a common, everyday, matter-of-fact pleasure of life. Many of our most faithful subscribers cancelled their subscriptions, saying that with a radio at home they could dispense with the concerts. Naturally, they are mostly not aware of the vast difference between music produced in a concert hall and music relayed over the radio."

"The cheap, lower, kind of entertainment like dancing, cinema shows, and football games are responsible for the decline of interest in our concerts," complains the concert agency of the city of Bremen. "We are facing very gloomy prospects, and we fear the time when good home and concert music will be dead."

Home music dying

Home music, formerly practiced in almost every odd-time German middle class family, is dying out slowly according to statistics issued by the Musical Teachers' Union of Germany. For instance out of 10,000 reference music teachers in Berlin only one-fifth earn a living by home lessons. The rest had to accept jobs as musicians in cafes, or as not to die from starvation.

In the piano industry only fifty per cent of the workers are employed by the present, compared to figures in 1925, and both the domestic sale and export have decreased by over thirty per cent against the preceding year.

The total export of pianos has likewise decreased by almost fifty per cent against 1926. While in 1926, 37,554 pianos were exported to foreign countries, only 16,649 pianos were sent abroad between January and September, 1929. This is due primarily to the exceedingly high tariff barrier Great Britain and Australia have erected against foreign imports. The tariff duty on Great Britain amounts to 34.12 per cent, for Australia even to 45 per cent, or twenty-five pounds sterling per piano as a minimum.

As a result of this, a large number of piano firms have closed down their production to a minimum and six big concerns have formed a merger in order to meet the crisis, which is expected to winter. In spite of the merger several enterprises are still in the piano industry.

Language Group Will Hold Annual Meeting

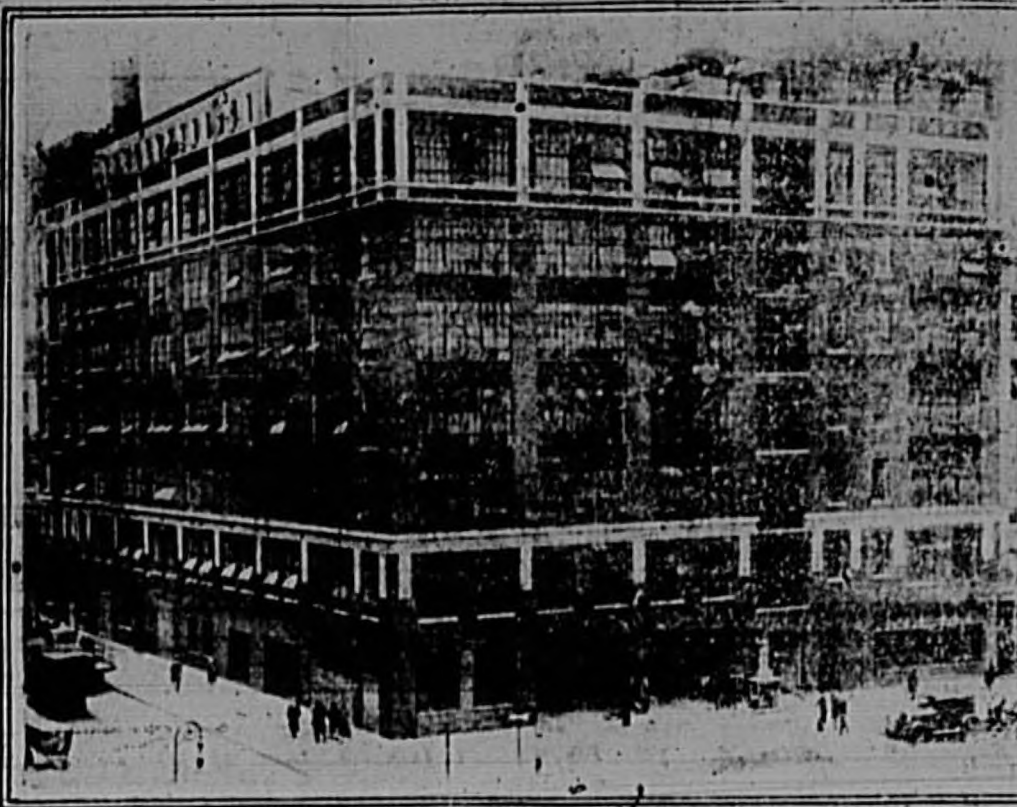

CLEVELAND, Dec. 9.—(U.S.P.)—The Modern Language Association of America will hold its forty-fifth annual meeting in Cleveland as the guest of Western Reserve University, beginning Dec. 30 and ending Jan. 1, 1930. More than 1,000 people are expected to attend.

William N. Suttie, professor of romance languages at the University of Chicago, and head of the Modern Language Association will deliver the opening address at the meeting at the Cleveland Museum of Art.

Other societies which will join the association in the conference are: The Linguistic Society of America, headed by Professor Charles A. Grandjean of Harvard University; The American Association of Teachers of French headed by Charles A. Downey of New York University; and the American Association of Teachers of Spanish.

Florida and Washington and Lee concluded a six year football contract this year with the latter rewarded with a single victory. Florida during the series piled on 145 points against Washington and Lee's 47.

NEW YORK'S NEW POLICE COLLEGE

The official opening of the new Police College in New York City is to take place in the near future. Commissioner Whalen's secretaries are sending out invitations to leading citizens for the event, which will be held in the building.

The building is the model factory used by the Lott Cady Company, near Police II headquarters. Its seven-story walls consist almost wholly of windows. The Police Department has leased it for five years at an annual rental of $30,000, plus the $15,000 taxes. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment authorized the expenditure of $50,000 to make alterations.

The alterations affecting about 120,000 square feet of floor space have been going on for two months. Before the Police College, now Training School, which already is holding classes in the building, a new set of boiler rooms, constructed out of the present Headquarters Building, will be built. The new boiler rooms are being moved into it.

A restaurant with kitchen equipment and seats for 200 persons has been erected on the roof, which will be placed over the present Police Headquarters. The experiment of a restaurant at Police Headquarters was tried by Commissioner Laight, but did not prove practical.

FRITZI RITZ

There also is a hand-in-glove and a guarantee on the roof to give office workers a chance to see in excellent police physical condition.

The formal opening will be particularly an exhibition to the public of the Police College. The building was rented at first because of the necessity of finding a home for the chief near Headquarters.

The college is under the charge of Deputy Inspector John O'Connell, chief instructor. His preparatory school is the School of Jurisprudence, which gives a three-month course to probationary officers under Inspector John J. Noonan. The school was moved from Grand Central Palace, where it had been for several years.

The gymnastic and physical training school giving instruction in Fencing, boxing and drill is to remain for the present at the armory of the 16th Infantry (the old 6th).

In connection with both the Police College and the armory, there also are classes in prison quarters, under an arrangement with the Department of Correction, in which instruction given in the handling of prisoners and the law governing imprisonment as well as physical instruction.

The college itself has a large faculty of specialists in ordinary police and detective duty, members of the staff of the District Attorney, the Building Bureau and the Corporation Council's office.

There are instructors from faculties of the colleges and universities of the city in psychology, psychiatry, covering a five-month course. There is a school of preparation for municipal police work, its work is supplemented by practical experience in the police riding school at Sheepshead Bay.

All candidates for promotion and all detectives of the third grade must attend the sessions of these classes in conjunction with their routine duties. Particular importance is to be placed on these classes in order to be able to handle the emergency of a riot and first grade detectives.

There also is a special training school for officers, which includes the grade of captain, with a course of lectures from staff executives and specialists in criminal prevention from other cities and countries.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified croscote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs croscote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to croscote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the croscote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

DAVIS ASKS FOR PLANES TO FIGHT LIQUOR RUNNING

Declares Modern System Must Be Used To Obtain Success

By Harry Ward
International News Service
Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Secretary of Labor James J. Davis recommended in his annual report today that provision be made for creating an air patrol to be devoted solely to the enforcement of the anti-liquor laws along the Canadian and Mexican borders.

Davis pointed out that experience had shown that the enforcement of the anti-liquor law can be accomplished only through the use of the same or better weapons than are used by smugglers to violate the immigration and other laws, chiefly on land boundaries.

Referring to liquor, labor secretary Davis said that "the real root of America's economic ills is more than evidenced by the remarkable improvement in labor conditions which have taken place in the last two or three decades."

"The continuing increase in wages, which has gradually spread all over the country, has been accompanied by shorter hours of labor, better working conditions, better homes and schools, more parks and playgrounds, improved roads, and, in fact, everything that goes to make life better and happier for the masses generally," he reported.

"These changes and improvements have kept fully abreast with the improved methods of producing and distributing goods, and, particularly, the labor-saving device and machine in all sections of industrial life," Davis said.

"Questions of unemployment will eventually be solved as this country develops, and it will be provided with an opportunity to do so," he said. "Largely because of the productive facilities created by immigration the American wage standard of today enjoys the highest standard of living in the world."

"Directly or indirectly labor has been the cause of the industrial revolution and the distribution of goods in high turnover and constant increasing cost. Employers in the past have been inclined to look upon high living standards as an evil to be borne, and which there was little, if any, effective remedy. Today, however, a careful study of labor turnover

MEN WHO MAKE SCRIBBLES HAVE KEENEST MINDS

Pasttime Of Drawing Queer Figures Indicates Intelligence

ATLANTA, Dec. 9.—(INS)—Men who draw queer figures on a sheet of paper while talking, he it either over an executive's desk or from the most obscure telephone pay station in town, should read this.

Men who are not possessed of an inclination to scribble in queer forms have, some said, been coming to them, should they read further.

For, straight from the knowledge of outstanding physicians, comes the message that a man who draws the queer designs while in conversation is more intelligent than his brother who needs conversation only.

Dr. Newdigate M. Owensby, prominent Atlanta psychiatrist, contends that a keen mind is in evidence when a man starts drawing queer shapes and figures.

Dr. Owensby said, "is usually keen and alert. It shows that he is capable of thinking along more paths than one. He has the power to carry on an intelligent conversation, and to think of other things at the same time."

HOLT PAYS HOUSE FINE TRIBUTE IN MAGAZINE STORY

Says Wilson's Confidant Was One Of 4 Biggest War Figures

WINTER PARK, Fla., Dec. 9.—A high tribute from one internationally known worker for the cause of peace to another is paid by Dr. Hamilton Holt, President of Rollins College and founder of the League to Enforce Peace, to the late Col. Edwin M. House, in the November issue of the Book League Monthly, in a review of the Intimate Papers of Col. House, the two concluding volumes of which have just been published.

Dr. Holt names Col. House as one of the Four Americans produced by the World War whose names history will in all probability endow with immortality, the others being Woodrow Wilson, who he believes as the spokesman of the Allies, had as much to do with breaking down the German spirit with his moral offensive as had the armies in the field; Herbert Hoover, who emerged as the war's greatest efficiency expert, and Walter H. Page, House and Page, Dr. Holt points out, reach their full stature of greatness through their books and he believes that the former's Intimate Papers will be a source book of history as long as the memory of the World War endures, and that no genuine estimate of the epoch of that conflict can be made without taking his name and his influence into account.

"He was in the thick of every issue," states Dr. Holt. "His grasp is on every part of the record. Here was a man enjoying the extreme and exclusive confidence of another man (Woodrow Wilson) who held the highest political office on earth at a time when that office was probably the decisive factor in determining the destiny of the human race. These two men worked together until the war was over in a relationship that was as beautiful and effective and human as can be found in history."

"No man in American history, not even Washington or Lincoln, could visualize and then put his visualization into letter or clearer words than Wilson. Wilson was always right in principle. He was not always wise, however, in his methods. House's genius was method. House understood the motives of men as did no man in high place during the war. And when Wilson acted on House's advice, their joint effort was as near perfect as finite acts of statesmanship can be in this world of necessary compromises."

It was under the combined leadership of these two men, Dr. Holt points out, that America reached her heights such as this or no other nation ever reached before.

Are YOU Getting YOUR MONEY'S WORTH In Entertainment?

The American people pay more generously for entertainment than any nation on earth. Their generosity has enriched the motion picture industry. Spoken dialog has come to replace the subtitle of the silent picture. Laughing along with the talkie comes Mechanical Music—an economy. Real Music is being ordered out of many theatres in favor of this new comer, who never dated a theatrical appearance until he gained the protection of the Talking Picture's novelty and the magic word "Synchronized." Now synchronization with a picture does not give Mechanical Music the quality of Real Music. Banishment of Living Music represents a loss for the theatre patron. Is this loss balanced by the substitution of Mechanical Music? A very great many theatre-goers will answer "NO!" Then why should the aforementioned American people, who pay so generously for entertainment, be required to take less for their money than they were wont to get?
