SANFORD — The second group of students will graduate from the the internship program at Siemens Stromberg-Carlson this week with job offers and the necessary skills to compete in the highly competitive technical job market.

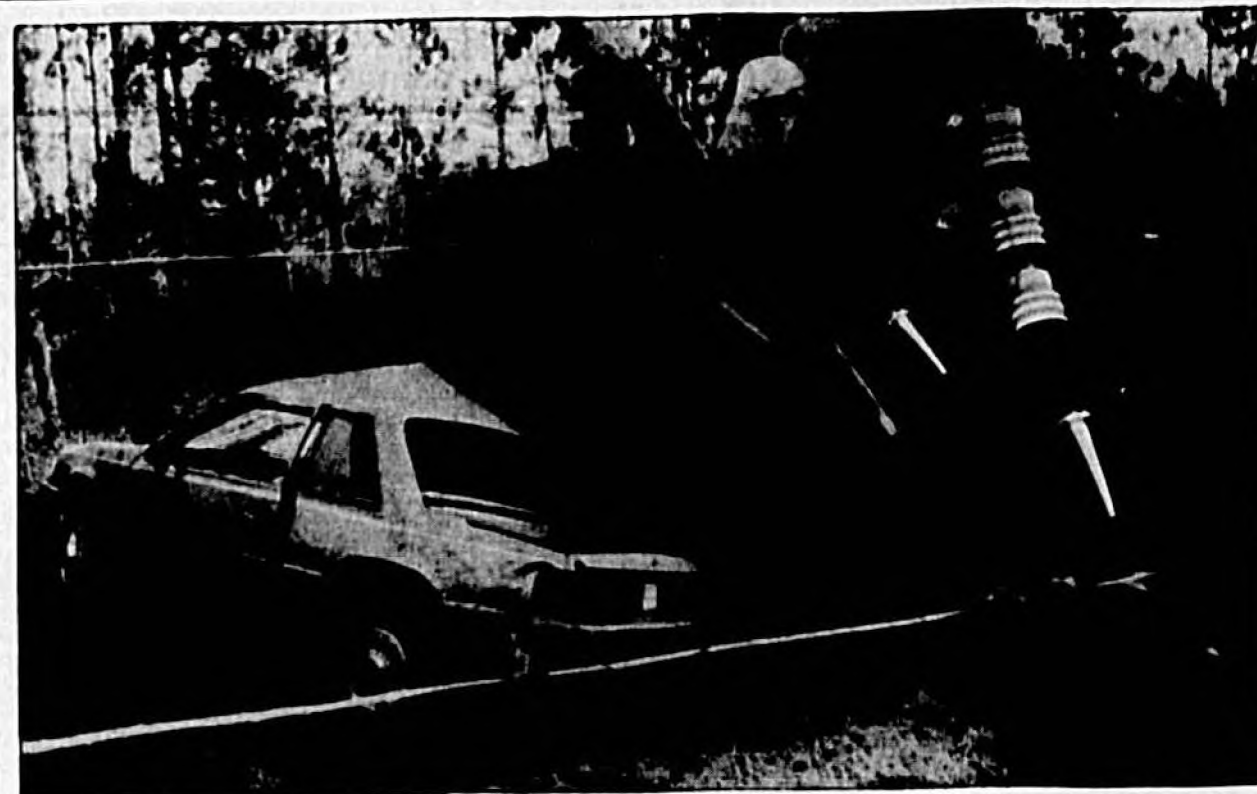

Today, the students who have completed the rigorous program at Seminole Community College and at Siemens' Lake Mary facility, graduate from the specialized apprenticeship program.

The students have completed long and arduous program that involves far more than simply classroom training. They have also worked many hours in actual job environments at Siemens.

According to Richard Riley, the U.S. Secretary of Education, who attended last year's first graduation ceremony, the students who complete the apprenticeship program are the kind of skilled workers needed to keep pace with other nations.

Car wreck forces road to be closed

State Road 44, between DeLand and New Smyrna Beach, was closed for more than six hours early this morning due to a car accident which knocked a power pole down. According to the Florida Highway Patrol, an unnamed driver was eastbound on the highway when he went off the roadway onto the eastbound shoulder. The driver over-corrected and crossed back over the highway, striking the power pole. The car, a Ford Mustang, came to rest atop the stump remaining from the pole, and the pole fell across the car, blocking the highway. The driver was airlifted to Halifax Medical Center in Daytona Beach. The highway patrol said alcohol may have been a factor in the accident. Further information was unavailable.

Utility rate hike: Put in your two cents Public meeting set to air Southern States increase

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — In June of this past year, Southern States Utilities, Inc. (SSU) filed an application for a rate increase and increase in service availability charges with the Florida Public Service Commission. The increases would cover a 22-county area including Seminole, Volusia and Orange.

SSU says the rate increases will produce additional sales revenues for consolidated water operations of over $7.428 million, and for consolidated wastewater operations of over $4.9 million.

On January 4 of this year, the Public Service Commission approved an interim rate hike which would total just under $6. The final rate increase is now being studied.

In order to make a final decision, the PSC has scheduled a dozen meetings at various locations throughout the state. The only one for Seminole/Volusia/Orange counties has been scheduled for the Sanford Civic Center on Jan. 30.

The next nearest hearing will be in Mount Dora that same evening.

The PSC says it wants to know what consumers have to say about the application for a rate increase and increase in availability charges, and is urging public input at these meetings.

Written comments are also welcomed by writing to the commission at 2540 Shumard Oak Blvd., Tallahassee, FL 32399-0850. Persons may also phone the commission's toll-free number 1-800-342-3552.

Technical hearings, which will examine the results of these public hearings, will begin on April 29, with a final decision expected on August 15.

According to a PSC notice, areas in Seminole County which would be affected by the rate increases include areas listed as, (for residential water), Apple Valley, Chuluota, Dol Ray Manor, Druid Hills, Fern Park, Harmony Homes, Lake Brantley, Lake Harriet Estates, and Mercedith Manor.

For increases in Seminole County for residential wastewater charges, areas include Apple Valley, Chuluota, and Mercedith Manor.

Areas directly north of Seminole County include Enterprise, Deltona, Deltona Utilities, Sugar Mill, and Jungle Den.

All persons served by Southern States Utilities in these areas are urged to attend this meeting in Sanford.

As an example of the differences between the present rates, interim rates, and proposed rates, Deltona's increase is approximately average to what can be expected in all of the Seminole County communities.

Deltona's present rate for residential wastewater is a usage charge of $12.67 plus $3.66 per 1,000 gallons. The proposed rate would be $17.59 usage charge plus $4.74 per 1,000 gallons use.

For residential water, Deltona Utilities present charge is $5.13 base charge plus $1.23 per 1,000 gallons use.

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — Four persons were arrested by Sanford police Wednesday, in connection with a burglary Tuesday at Hamilton Elementary School, 1501 E. Eighth Street.

According to Sanford Police Cmdr. Dennis Whilmire, the first arrest was made when police located David T. Dobbs, 29, 618 Melonville Avenue, at his home. Officers served Dobbs with an Orange County warrant for burglary. During a police interview, they said he reportedly confessed to the school burglary, and implicated several other persons, including the two other residents of 618 Melonville, twins, Steven Timothy Dunn and Jeffrey Mark Dunn, both 34.

The fourth person, Charles Alford Williams, 22, of 611 Park, was also

According to the Volusia County sheriff's office, earlier this week Anthony Copeland, Derrick Jones and Jerome Williams, all 17-years old, were arrested in Deltona after they tried to burglarize a home on Montego Street.

Gary Davidson, public information officer with the Volusia County Sheriff's Office, said the three are suspected in other burglaries in southwest Volusia County, but they have not been charged in any other case.

Endangered mice suffer setbacks

PANAMA CITY — The endangered Choctawhatchee beach mouse managed to survive Hurricane Opal, but the subspecies did suffer a setback in its struggle to avoid extinction.

Three mice turned up when state biologists left 80 traps out one night last week on Shell Island, an uninhabited barrier island about a mile off the coast near Panama City. Two were pregnant.

Biologist Jeff Gore of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission estimated 1,500 mice lived on the island before Opal destroyed about 90 percent of their sand-dune habitat last Oct. 4.

"It's entirely possible that you saw the only three mice that are left out there," he said. "On the other hand, it's possible that there are a lot of mice. It's probably something in between."

ER head quits amid controversy

CORAL SPRINGS — The chief emergency room doctor at Coral Springs Medical Center has quit just one week after the administrator of the much-criticized hospital resigned under pressure.

The facility, part of the North Broward Hospital District, has been under state and federal scrutiny for months. Inspectors said five emergency cases were mishandled, three involving children who later died.

On Jan. 5, the state fined the hospital $35,000 and ordered changes to correct slow and poor care in the emergency room.

The resignations clear the way for the tax-assisted facility to replace key decision-makers who had daily control of emergency care.

"We are making changes that will make things better," said Dr. Stephen Geller, the hospital's chief of staff. "It's time to move on. Hopefully, we can go on from here."

Geller told the district's board on Wednesday that the emergency room medical director, Dr. Timothy Atkins, gave notice on Tuesday. Dr. Sherman Podolsky, vice president of medical affairs for Coastal, insisted Atkins was leaving voluntarily, and the hospital's troubles played only a small role in the decision.

Byrons converts to Uptons

MIAMI — Byrons, one of South Florida's oldest retailers, will close or renovate all of its 54 department stores as the chain is folded into its sister company, Atlanta-based Uptons.

About 900 of the company's 2,700 employees will lose their jobs, including 175 at the Miami headquarters, Byrons said Wednesday.

Byrons will close 17 of its 54 stores by May and renovate or convert all the others into Uptons. The combined chain will be managed from Georgia, according to Byrons' parent company, New York-based American Retail Group.

The chain dates to 1896, when it opened as Byrons Red Cross Pharmacy in downtown Miami and became Jackson's-Byrons after a merger in 1947. It was sold by Eckerd, the drugstore company, to American Retail in 1985 and became JByrons. The J was dropped in 1991.

Pinellas gets letter from Einstein

LARGO — The Pinellas County school system just received a letter from famed scientist Albert Einstein. He died 40 years ago.

The flip of a coin brought the miselve, not slow mail service. "It's not an ordinary method of estate distribution. It's very unusual," said Jim Baxter, an attorney who handled the estate of Sarainne and Edward Andrews.

The April 29, 1947 letter, offering a copy of a book, was written to Andrews, an inventor and heir to a family fortune. He died in 1973; his wife died in 1991. The letter was part of their estate.

The school system and All Children's Hospital, both named in the couple's will, wanted it.

School attorney Jeff Goodie said he offered shared ownership, but the hospital refused, saying it wanted to auction the document.

AIDS quilt shown in Navy Commissary

KEY WEST — A portion of the AIDS Memorial Quilt is on display at the Old Navy Commissary, the first time the quilt has been showcased at a U.S. military property, officials said.

Almost 400 panels of the NAMES Project AIDS Memorial Quilt will be exhibited until Sunday, said Michele Drengberg, who coordinated the project's visit.

The opening ceremony, which drew about 200 Keys students, came on the same day that the White House said President Clinton would sign a defense bill that includes a provision to discharge service members with the AIDS virus.

Samantha Reynolds, an eighth grader at Sugarloaf Middle School says the display, a facet of the travelling 31,000-panel AIDS Memorial Quilt, teaches students that "anyone can get AIDS. It doesn't matter who you are."

Volunteers find boy and his dog

By The Associated Press

SALT SPRINGS — A 3-year-old boy is back home after spending a night lost in Ocala National Forest, and his mother praises the family dog for keeping him safe.

"I would say she's the hero in this whole thing," Dawn Weaver said of the Rottweiler who disappeared with her son Blake. "Samantha stayed with him all night, kept him warm, and more or less she's the one that led him out of the woods."

Blake, who wandered off into dense woods near his house about 1 p.m. Wednesday, had a tearful reunion with his mother

Thursday. He wore only shorts and a red T-shirt.

"He was barefoot and probably would have frozen or been hurt if it hadn't been for Samantha," his mother said.

"I think that everybody's just fortunate the dog did stay with him. I'm sure the dog did keep him warm last night because it did get pretty chilly," said Lt. Joy Hill, spokeswoman for the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

Temperatures were in the low 40s, but the wind-chill factor made it seem like the 30s, she said.

Neither boy nor dog was injured, and they were back together at home after Blake was examined at an Ocala hospital. Officials at Monroe Regional Medical Center said he had scratches on his face and body from the dense vegetation.

"They're romping and playing now," said Mrs. Weaver, 25. "They grew up together and they're happy together. . . Samantha is going to get a rare T-bone steak for supper."

Blake and Samantha were standing in the middle of a dusty service road when a small group of searchers stumbled upon them about 11 a.m.

"He didn't seem too upset," said Debbie Sundstrom, one of the searchers. "He was hungry.

We gave him some cookies and water. But he was in really good shape, really good spirits," said Sundstrom, of the Florida Search Dog Association.

The search was hastily mobilized by officers of the Game and Fish Department, the Marion County sheriff's office and the U.S. Forest Service. They used tracking dogs, a helicopter with infrared sensing cameras and hounds.

"We were flooded with offers of assistance," Ms. Scott said. "But we discouraged volunteers from coming out in the dark Wednesday because of the dense woods."

Wedding bells for homeless couple

By The Associated Press

PENSACOLA — A homeless couple who want to get married but say they were turned away by church after church may finally be hearing wedding bells after all.

Robbin Decker and Sherry Hopf, who is four months pregnant, say they have been told over and over that they have been living in sin on the streets of this Florida Panhandle city.

"We've been trying for years to get married," Hopf said Wednesday. "We've asked every church, but they all turned us away." He said some cited their lack of money to cover church expenses.

Help, however, was offered after the Pensacola News Journal featured the couple in an article Monday about homeless people living in a camp dubbed "Gilligan's Island" near a waterfront railway trestle.

South Florida pastor is the new bishop of St. Petersburg

By The Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG — Monsignor Robert N. Lynch says he wants to be a friend and shepherd to priests and religious of the five-county Roman Catholic Diocese of St. Petersburg.

"Religious women and men — pray that my ministry to you and with you may always be inclusive, supportive and profoundly appreciative," he said Thursday, the day before he was to become bishop of the area.

"You are in many ways on the front lines daily of direct service, be it educational, health or social service and action," Lynch said during a homily at evening prayer.

The 335,000 Catholics in the diocese are well served by "your brilliant testimony of faith," said Lynch, who previously served as pastor of St. Mark Catholic Church in Fort Lauderdale. "I look forward to a close bond of collaboration and participation."

Lynch, 54, was to be ordained as the diocese's fourth bishop at the Cathedral of St. Jude in St. Petersburg during an afternoon Mass attended by a host of cardinals, archbishops and bishops.

The turnout is testimony to his far-reaching influence and the relationships he established during the 10 years he worked for the U.S. Catholic Conference of Bishops in Washington, D.C.

During ordination, Lynch is given a wooden staff to symbolize his role as shepherd of the people. The diocese oversees 73 parishes in Hillsborough, Pinellas, Citrus, Hernando and Pasco counties.

The St. Petersburg office has been vacant since the departure of John C. Favalora, who became archbishop of the Miami archdiocese last year.

Lynch, who speaks with humility, honesty and humor, said he plans to lead with courage and gentleness. He wants to be known as somebody who serves rather than being served. He worries about strain and burnout among priests who work tirelessly to spread the Gospel message and meet the challenging demands of modern-day living.

"My service as bishop is for all God's people, but for you I am a brother who cares," he told fellow priests.

POLICE BRIEFS

John Doe arrest

Sheriff's deputies made an arrest Wednesday, in response to a report of a man seen riding a bike, carrying a large amount of copper tubing. Deputies said there have been several cases recently where copper had been reported stolen from various businesses.

Following a search of the area, deputies located a man matching the description, in the 900 block of W. First Street. The arrest report said the man first identified himself as Allen Sykes. Later, when a Sanford police officer arrived, he reportedly identified the man as John Doe. Eventually, the man is said to have admitted that his name was Allen Sian, but later told deputies they would never learn his true identity.

He was arrested as John Doe on charges of obstruction by a disguised person, possession/use of drug paraphernalia, and threatening a public official.

Deputies said approximately 25 pounds of copper tubing which he had in his possession was identified as having been stolen from a business in the 100 block of Commercial Avenue.

The man was not immediately charged in connection with the tubing, but an investigation is continuing.

School theft

Antonio Jerome Smith, 19, of 120 Academy Avenue, was arrested by sheriff's deputies Wednesday. • A 1972 Ford truck, reported stolen Wednesday in the 800 block of Sanford Avenue, has been located a short distance away on Eighth Street between Palmato and Sanford Avenue.

Another hepatitis virus identified

By PAUL ROSEN
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Researchers are uncertain whether a newly discovered hepatitis virus poses a public health threat or even if it causes symptoms of liver disease.

Scientists announced today in the journal Science that they had isolated a virus identified as hepatitis G, or HGV, from the blood of patients with chronic hepatitis.

"We have shown some association of this virus with chronic hepatitis," said Patrice Yarbough, director of research at Genelabs Technologies in Redwood City, Calif., where much of the work was done. "The implication of this finding is still not known."

Dr. Harvey Alter of the National Institutes of Health, a coauthor of the study, said it is not known if HGV poses a public health problem or even if infection by the virus should be worrisome to patients. He said more studies are needed.

Although the virus is newly discovered, Alter said "it probably has been around a long time."

Sophisticated laboratory techniques capable of detecting the virus are only now becoming available, he said. No antibody test of the type used to identify other hepatitis viruses has been developed for HGV, said Alter.

The researchers showed that HGV is present in 10 percent to 20 percent of people who have chronic hepatitis that cannot be attributed to other causes. At least 14 other viruses have been linked, directly or indirectly, to hepatitis, an inflammation of the liver. The disease also has been associated with some types of bacteria, fungi and protozoa, and to alcoholism.

Five viruses — hepatitis A through E — have been identified as causing acute viral hepatitis. The seriousness of infection varies from virus to virus, and from patient to patient, but many chronic carriers never experience serious disease.

The research showed that HGV can be transmitted through blood transfusions, but Alter said "the odds of getting a case of this virus are very low."

Blood donated for transfusion is tested

now for a number of diseases, including the AIDS virus and three types of hepatitis virus. Whether there will be a need to add tests for the new HGV is "a matter of debate," said Alter, because many of the carriers of HGV are also infected with other hepatitis viruses. Potential donors shown to have antibodies to the other viruses are prevented from donating blood. Some patients infected with hepatitis C also were found to have hepatitis G, said Alter. These patients would have been rejected as blood donors because of their hepatitis C infection.

In screening 1,400 approved blood donors, he said, the researchers found traces of HGV in less than 2 percent.

Just how much of a problem HGV could pose for blood transfusions is not known, Alter said, and there is a possibility that the virus poses no threat at all.

"The rate of transfusion-transmitted hepatitis has dropped dramatically in recent years and is approaching zero," he said.

Simpson interview gains TV anchor fame

By LINDA SUTYON
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — Appearing on a small cable TV channel, Ed Gordon has scored many blockbuster interviews — Bill Clinton, Nelson Mandela, Oprah Winfrey — but nothing compared with his biggest scoop: O.J. Simpson's first post-acquittal TV interview.

"I guess I'm the latest overnight sensation that's been around for 10 years," Gordon joked Thursday.

He acknowledged the interview was a high point for Black Entertainment Television, the network he describes as "the little engine that could." Its normal viewership of 300,000 homes ballooned to about 3 million on Wednesday night when Simpson took to the airwaves, according to Nielsen ratings.

"A lot of times we've beaten the big boys to the interviews and gotten noticed. But I hope now we're going to be taken more seriously," he said.

"Certainly this has put us on the map."

For Gordon, the interview brought wider recognition than he has ever known.

"While people are not that familiar with me, I've been doing a lot of high-profile interviews," Gordon said. "I've been to the White House and the Oval Office to interview President Clinton. I've interviewed Minister (Louis) Farrakhan at the height of his controversy. I talked to Marion Barry in jail."

The list goes on, he said, and includes Mike Tyson, Magic Johnson, and a memorable trip with Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide as he returned to his nation from exile.

These experiences prepared him for the biggest interview of all — Simpson.

"There were the usual butterflies just before we started," he said "But I didn't feel any great pressure."

Gordon, 35, a native of Detroit and a graduate of Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, began his career as an intern with WTVS, a public broadcast station in Detroit.

where he hosted, "Detroit Black Journal."

BET hired him in 1989 and he quickly became one of their prime interviewers, first hosting the show "Personal Diary" then launching the one-on-one program "Conversation," which got him interviews with world leaders and celebrities.

Reviews of Gordon's performance with Simpson were generally favorable, although there were a few naysayers. A competitor, Geraldo Rivera, said he would have been tougher.

"I would have liked Ed to have asked more follow-up questions, but it was clear Simpson was in control of that environment," Rivera said. "I certainly would have made him feel a lot more uncomfortable."

But Southwestern University of Law professor Robert Pugsley offered praise.

"He was courteous, but he did not feed him cream puffs. He was quite tenacious," Pugsley said.

Talk show host Tom Snyder also saluted Gordon.

"You know, many people said this was going to be a softball interview ... and I thought he did just an outstanding job," Snyder said.

Gordon said he was aware from the outset that Simpson would refuse to answer questions that might hurt sales of his upcoming mail-order video or compromise his defense in the wrongful-death lawsuit against him.

"But we also thought he talked more openly than he has about some things. When he talked about the Goldman and Brown families — even people who thought he was acting could see, he was talking from the heart," Gordon said.

The conversation was Simpson's first in-depth TV interview since he was acquitted of murder Oct. 3 in the slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Gordon said he has no plans to leave BET for a larger audience, but he's clearly enjoying the fame — and so is his family.

"It's made my mother in Detroit a local celebrity," he said. "Local TV crews are coming down. Her house is filled with cameras. She's having a ball."

Advertisers raid zoo, bank for Super Bowl spots

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Frogs croak for beer, a goldfish plays dead for a soft drink and a city slicker leads a cattle drive in a snazzy four-wheeler during what may be the most widely watched TV show of the year.

Super Bowl XXX on Sunday pits the Dallas Cowboys against the Pittsburgh Steelers for the National Football League championship. But with Dallas heavily favored, don't be surprised if the office chit-chat Monday dwells on what ad provided the most entertainment.

In some cases, advertisers have drawn on visits to the zoo for inspiration. Other ads use aging stars and cute shots of football's littlest warriors to score points with viewers.

The Super Bowl has long provided Madison Avenue with a showcase for creativity and the networks with a reason to charge record sums for advertising time.

The game typically attracts 100 million or more viewers and is usually the year's biggest draw on television.

With that much attention, the networks have been able to boost ad rates a notch higher each year. This year, NBC charged a record $1.2 million on average for each of 58 half-minute commercial spots.

That's $40,000 a second — a solid annual wage for many people or about what it costs for a new low-end luxury car.

NBC executives say they were able to get a 20 percent increase over the $1 million ABC got for last year's Super Bowl commercials even with the prospect of the Summer Olympics in Atlanta providing advertisers with another high-profile sports event this year.

Anheuser-Busch Inc. has purchased four minutes, and plans to run another in a quirky series of ads launched last year featuring frogs that collectively croak its flagship beer name, Budweiser. It has Clydesdale horses, penguins and buzzards in three other ads.

Pepsi-Cola Co. has four minutes of commercials. One shows a goldfish that plays dead but revives when a youngster drops Pepsi in its bowl. In another, a Coca-Cola delivery man is caught on a convenience store camera raiding the Pepsi cooler.

Two longtime actors show up in the Super Bowl ads. Charlton Heston is the latest to reject Johnny the moocher's efforts to bum a Bud Light. Jack Palance leads a cattle drive in a new Ford pickup.

Nike Inc., which ran a 90-second ad last year showing Dennis Hopper delivering a Patton-like ode to football, features pee-wee football in three 30-second commercials this year celebrating the sport.

Advertisers and ad consultants say the Super Bowl offers an unmatched onetime opportunity to introduce a product, deliver a sales theme or show off an arresting creative idea.

American Honda Motor Co., which bought three commercials last year, won't be advertising during the game this year, however. Their ads were all placed in the break that ran with two minutes left in the San Francisco 49ers' 49-26 drubbing of the San Diego Chargers.

"We would have hoped to see a closer game," Honda spokesman Art Garner said. Nonetheless, Honda knows the value of a Super Bowl ad. "You're still not going to reach that many people on any other show," Garner said.

Domestic violence

From all circles, we are constantly hearing about the need to fight spouse abuse and/or domestic violence. What disturbs us is that almost without exception, all of the comments are directed toward preventing husbands from beating their wives, or men beating women.

Yet, as even local statistics will show, many of the domestic violence charges are being placed against women. We note however, that very few people are complaining about domestic violence against the men.

Traditionally, women have been depicted as being the "weaker sex." But this is no longer the case, especially in today's society. Women are involved in as many activities as men.

Unfortunately, more and more women are also involved in causing domestic violence situations.

This is not to say that women should not be protected, they should be, indeed. But men must also be considered. In many cases, females are attacking males for various reasons, and end up being arrested.

Look at this Sunday. It's Superbowl time. Many people will be gathering in front of their TV sets, some with a house full of friends, to watch the game. Traditionally, there will be beverages served, and we can guarantee that it will not be coffee, tea or soft drinks. Alcohol sales can verify that.

So, as an example, we'll say the men have a few too many. In many cases, their reflexes will become foggy. The wife becomes angry, perhaps over something which may be said, and lambastes the husband. It's domestic violence, and in many cases, law officers will be called.

Naturally, the situation may be reversed, and even a drunken husband is quite capable of beating up his wife.

This is not to say more men than women may end up being victims in this situation, but we are suggesting that, regardless of this big sports weekend, there should be more concern over beatings and other violence for both sexes.

There are moves in Washington to have more stringent laws enacted to prevent abuse of women. While this is good, we would hope the protection expands to men as well.

Let's stop blaming only the men for domestic violence. Look at the arrest reports, and you'll see there should be equal concern for the protection of men.

LETTER

The last word

Listening to all the conversations and questions regarding the youth of the world's disregard for the law, leads me to what I believe is the problem. The world today has no regard for the "Higher Power" (God). All one must do is "not get caught" in a crime or breaking the law. Everyone seems to avoid the obvious — God is watching over us. The "all seeing eye" atop the pyramid on the reverse side of our dollar bill graphically displays "God knows our every move," and we, they, and all are accountable to him for love, truth and justice. I believe all religions teach that. We must begin in school and home to remember that daily. We could sing, "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands" either before or after the pledge to the flag. If the feminists must remove the gender, use whatever gender you will, but the Higher Power sees and knows our every action and will have the last word — either reward or punishment.

A zero for Jesus in a public school

A consortium of civil liberties and religious organizations — from the ACLU and the American Jewish Congress to the Baptist Joint Committee and the American Muslim Council — has issued a parental guide to religion and the law in the public schools.

One section states: "Teachers may not require students to modify, include, or exclude religious views in their assignments, if germane. These assignments should be judged by ordinary academic standards of substance, relevance, appearance and grammar."

In March 1991, Dana Ramsey, a teacher in the Dickson County Tennessee School District, gave a research assignment to her ninth-grade English class. The students could choose any topic they wanted, provided they could show four secondary sources for their research.

Among the topics the teacher approved were papers on witchcraft, black magic and the occult and spiritualism (supernatural meetings with dead people).

Brittney Settle, then 15, decided to write a paper on "The Life of Jesus Christ," for which there were decidedly more than four secondary sources. The teacher rejected the topic, telling Brittney it was "not an appropriate thing to do in a public school." Moreover, it was all the more inappropriate, the teacher added, because Brittney was a Christian, already knew a lot about the subject in which she was intensely involved, and so it would be hard for her to research and write the paper in a properly scholarly way. Brittney wrote and submitted the paper anyway, and was given a grade of zero.

When a lawsuit was filed charging discrimination against religious speech under the First Amendment, the teacher said, during a deposition, that "we don't deal with personal religious beliefs in a public school."

Dana Ramsey was supported by her principal, the school board, the federal district court, and the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. This unequivocal rejection of the student's claim that she was being punished for her religious viewpoint was in odd contrast with a Dickson County School District written policy that in compositions, "Student-initiated expressions in assignments which reflect their beliefs or non-beliefs about a religious theme" are to be permitted.

A consortium of civil liberties and religious organizations has issued a parental guide to religion and the law in the public schools.

School boards often tend to be shamelessly contradictory in defending their violations of student speech rights. For instance, this school board said that Brittney's zero grade did not conflict with its stated policy on protected religious expression in school assignments. After all, said the board, Brittney Settle's paper was not "a composition."

Adding to this educational obfuscation was the teacher's response when she was asked about having given her imprimatur to topics of reincarnation, spiritualism and the occult. Those were not, she said, religious topics.

The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals declared: "Learning is more vital in the classroom than free speech," as if the two had nothing to do with each other. Does that mean all speech, including what has previously been held by courts to be protected student speech — like refusing to give the Pledge of Allegiance — is now prohibited? Or the right, affirmed by the Supreme Court, to have a student-initiated religious club before or after classes?

GOP looking to finish off Dems

WASHINGTON — Few can forget how coldly and concisely former Joint Chiefs Chairman Colin Powell promised to crush the Iraqi army: "First we're going to cut it off, and then we're going to kill it."

Now Republicans are refining a corollary for a different battlefield: political control of the House of Representatives. One of the Republican lieutenants recently summed up the battle plan this way:

"First we beat them (House Democrats), and then we take away their staffs, their money and the lobbyists."

Republicans are looking beyond the mere preservation of their majority status to a longer-term effort to uproot the vestiges of the Democratic power base. That means winning elections, but also entails a more subterranean set of changes.

The "favor-doing staffs," as this Republican dubbed them, are not only the intellectual nucleus of the House, but they are also situated to dispense favors and collect hefty campaign contributions. But this year, Republicans have built a 3-to-1 fund-raising advantage over the Democrats. Term-limits may have been part of the "Contract With America," but the talk of the Republican cloakroom centers on long-term job security.

If Republicans can focus on the size as opposed to the survival of their 238-197 majority, it's largely because they are winning the all-important ground war: Fund-raising, recruitment and retirements. "Democrats have a lot more retirements (23) than Republicans (12) have," explains political sage Charles Cook. "The Democratic open seats are a lot more vulnerable to Republican pick-ups than the Republican open seats are, and Republicans have one of the best recruiting classes they've had in a long time versus the Democrats having spotty recruitment. Those things would seem to offset the natural advantage that Democrats would normally have or that the party that had just lost a landslide would normally have."

Cook gives credit to Democrats for identifying potential candidates, but notes that they are having "a very hard time getting them down to the altar."

The lack of ground troops cost the Democrats in 1982, two years after Ronald Reagan's landslide. Although the Democrats never lost majority control of the House, they only picked up 26 seats in 1982 even though they had some potent issues cutting in their favor, such as the recession and Social Security. The reason, says Cook, is that the Democrats "didn't have a full team on the field."

This time around the Democrats not only lack a full team but they have cause to fret over the fate of their leaders. Republican officials, who have money to burn, have decided to target high-profile Democrats, even those whom they have only a slim chance of defeating. According to one GOP source, the Republican National Campaign Committee goal is to "nail them (Democratic leaders) down and keep them at home. ... Maybe you don't beat them, but you make them crazy. Then we're free to cherry-pick others."

For example, Republicans believe they were the ultimate victor in last year's bitter Massachusetts Senate race between incumbent Democrat Edward Kennedy and political novice Mitt Romney. Kennedy won the election, but only after a difficult and expensive fight that diverted valuable Democratic resources.

But this year, Republicans have built a 3-to-1 fund-raising advantage over the Democrats.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Fleeing the lion of AIDS

SAN FRANCISCO — It is after hours and the AIDS clinic at San Francisco General Hospital is almost empty. Just one patient remains, confused and emaciated, waiting for a ride home.

Dr. Steven Deeks, who works here, stops to help the man he calls "Dallas" with one of the smaller indignities of this disease. The doctor calls again for a cab to come to an address the drivers may know too well and avoid too often.

For three years, Deeks has kept a name and address book of 100 AIDS patients. Sixty have died and half the remaining 40 have moved on to late-stage disease. Just today, the 33-year-old doctor tells me, a patient his own age, a man just beginning his professional career, came in exhibiting the terrible, unmistakable first symptoms of AIDS-related dementia.

Working as he does, among patients with advanced disease, Deeks is not ashamed to describe himself as frustrated or even "a little" desperate. "In an epidemic," he says calmly, "things can't always be done in a conservative manner."

So it is no wonder that the doctor took a risk. Last month, he became part of the most highly publicized — indeed sensationalized — AIDS research in memory. He performed a baboon bone marrow transplant to see if cells from an animal that does not get HIV could boost the deteriorating immune system of a human with the disease. And, he said, "I had no qualms."

If Deeks' desire to try something was understandable, so surely was Jeff Getty's desire. Getty advocated for this experiment, pushed for FDA approval, and volunteered to be the subject.

After all, Dr. Christian Barnard might have been writing about Getty when he described the state of mind of his first heart transplant patient this way: "If a lion chases you to the bank of a river filled with crocodiles, you will leap into the water convinced you have a chance to swim to the other side when you would never accept such odds if there were no lion."

With the lion of AIDS chasing Getty, the 38-year-old who told me to call him an AIDS "activist" and not a victim, was determined "not to just lie down and die." If nothing else, he would devote his body to search for a cure.

Now, little more than a month and innumerable banana jokes since the transplant, Deeks doesn't yet know whether the baboon cells have had any effect. But Getty has become a star of print and video in a controversy that labels him either a hero or a threat to humanity.

Getty has become as well the poster boy in an ethical debate about front-line medicine. What risks should medicine take for what chance of cure? What are the costs and benefits of research in a disease that has seen so many hopes raised and dashed?

Getty's claim to heroism comes from his role in the quest for the cure. But the threat in this xeno-transplant from baboon to man is that another devastating disease could "jump" from one species to another — as AIDS itself did. It's the fear that a transplant recipient's body could be the perfect halfway house.

The likelihood that Jeff Getty would provide such a halfway house is virtually nil. The FDA approved this procedure for one man, one baboon. It's easy to monitor a study of one. But you do not have to be a screenwriter to script the next scene with 50 clinics, 20 baboons, 1,000 patients — an impossible tracking job and a public health danger that, in a worst case scenario, could outrank AIDS.

As ethicist Art Caplan at the University of Pennsylvania says, the baboon transplant "would be bad if it failed. It would be worse if it worked."

Optimistic researchers talk about a temporary boost to the immune system, not a cure for AIDS. It may be unpopular to put price tags on health care — or on life — but are we ready to pay some $200,000 or more for a "boost" when the Centers for Disease Control estimate there are between 750,000 and 1.2 million Americans with AIDS or HIV? Where would the hundreds of billions come from? And at the cost of pursuing what other avenues of AIDS research?

Every researcher holds some candle of promise, if only the elusive hope that "we will learn something." But the social risks and costs of baboon bone-marrow transplants are far too great for too small a promise, too vague a hope.

Here, in the busiest AIDS clinic in America, keenly aware of the devastation of this disease, it is possible to admire the bravery of an AIDS activist and the humanity of his doctor, and still believe they are going down the wrong path.

Even a society being chased by the lion of AIDS may have more to fear from the crocodiles in the river.

So it is no wonder that the doctor took a risk.

 "We are looking at similar burglaries in the area and seeing if the three boys are connected to those as well," he said. "We have some evidence connecting them to other burglaries."
 This week's burglary of a home on Montego Street was thwarted when they selected a house at which the resident was home. She heard the boys breaking into her house and summoned the sheriff's office by calling 9-1-1.

 Two of the youths were attempting to gain entry to the home by cutting through a window screen with a razor knife. When they saw the resident, they fled the scene in a car driven by a third young man.
 The car was stopped eight minutes later, Davidson said, at the corner of Doyle Road and Bluefield Avenue. The victim was driving to the scene where she identified the two boys who had been attempting to get into her house.

 All three suspects were charged with one felony count each of burglary to an occupied dwelling.
 A ski mask and a telephone taken from another burglary were recovered from the car at the time of the arrests.
 Investigators have also cleared two other burglaries and expect to file other charges against the teens, Davidson said.

 Apprenticeship programs have been used extensively in Europe, especially in Germany. In a test of knowledge and skills given to apprentice program students in Siemens plants in Europe and the United States last year, the Lake Mary group scored higher than any other group.
 During last year's address, Riley told the graduates they offered the employers in the community hope.
 "The apprenticeship program is an example of how and why our country is moving from being a nation at risk to a nation with a hopeful and promising future," he explained.

The electronics technical internship program was introduced in Seminole County in August 1992.

The students spend about 15 hours a week in the classroom and in the lab at Seminole Community College and 20 hours in on the job training at Siemens. They learn skills in telecommunications electronics.

There is a pre-internship program for students at Lyman and Seminole high schools. Those students study part of the day at their high schools and take additional programs at Siemens the rest of the day two times a week. They are able to go from there into the apprenticeship program after graduation from high school.

At the conclusion of the apprenticeship program, the graduates earn an Associate of Science degree in Telecommunications Engineering Technology from SCC and are certified by Siemens and the German Chamber of Commerce as Electronics Technicians.

"We commend the graduates for completing the rigorous two year apprentice program," said Fred Fromm, president and chief executive officer of Siemens Stomberg-Carlson. "The nature of the program ensures that the graduating apprentices bring exemplary skills to the workplace and are working proof of what can be achieved when industry and education collaborate to train the workforce of the future."

The second class of interns graduates in the SCC Fine Arts Concert Hall today at 1 p.m.

After 10 years, mom finds missing sons

By The Associated Press

ORDERVILLE, Utah — For 10 years, Elizabeth Sircy prayed and searched for her three sons, who had disappeared while visiting her ex-husband.

Finally, around Christmas, someone recognized the man's new wife from a police wanted poster and took down her license plate. The tip led Sircy, of Silver City, N.M., to her sons, now 16, 17 and 19.

They had been living under aliases in this southwestern Utah town of about 400. Now, she says, she is a stranger to them.

"It was definitely an awkward situation. ... They had changed so much," Sircy said after seeing them last week. "You could still tell by the eyes who they were, but they were so skinny. They wouldn't even look at me."

The father, Frederick Neabitt, 49, and now-divorced wife Idella, 42, had changed their names to Jacob and Ava Stevens, authorities say. They were arrested Friday on a decade-old warrant for custodial interference.

Ms. Neabitt had been visiting family in Silver City when someone recognized her and took down her license number.

To his neighbors, friends and even the Kane County Sheriff's Office, where mug shots of the couple hung on the wall, Frederick Neabitt was an accepted member of the community.

"I knew his kids; I knew him from church," said Sheriff Lamont Smith, who didn't recognize the Neabitts from the mug shots. "The whole thing's very odd. It's quite a shock."

When Neabitt was arrested, he said he took the children away from their mother for their own good, Smith said. Authorities do not know how long they have lived in Orderville.

The Neabitts were free on $30,000 bail each, awaiting an extradition hearing Feb. 16.

A telephone number for Jacob Stevens in Orderville was unlisted. A call to his business, Green Valley Pest Control, was not returned.

Ms. Neabitt, who now lives in nearby St. George, said that they had the boys' best interests in mind in 1986.

"We believe the children come first," she said. "I guess the New Mexico court doesn't see it that way."

For now, Sircy is allowing her sons to stay with their father. She hopes they can once again become a part of her life. She does not want revenge against her ex-husband.

"That doesn't give me my 10 years back," she said. "It makes me disappointed in the system because there's nothing I can do. Usually, when a parent finds their missing children it is nothing but joy. But this is one of the saddest things you'll ever see."

arrested. The police report said he had been called by the others to go to the school and pick up several TV sets and other items reported taken during the burglary. Whitmire said Williams allegedly took the items in exchange for $100 worth of crack cocaine.

The police subsequently located several items which had been listed as stolen at Williams home.

A pair of televisions were connected to burglaries at other Sanford homes and a microwave oven was located which is also believed to be stolen, but the owner has not yet been identified.

Williams was arrested on charges of dealing in stolen property, burglary, grand theft, and sale/delivery of crack cocaine.

The Dunn twins were each charged with burglary, grand theft, and dealing in stolen property.

Dobbs was arrested on the same charges in connection with the burglary.

Police said there have been several similar burglaries in recent times, and have launched into an investigation to determine if any of the men may have been involved.

"We believe they are involved in other crimes in the area," said Whitmire. "The investigation is still continuing."

school system where she has served as a substitute teacher. She is also director of the education department at Sanford Church of Christ and spends much of her time in providing transportation and support for two women of the community.

Karen Coleman, principal of Crooms Academy in Sanford, was selected as the winner of the Topper Award based on her many achievements in connection with chamber activities. She has also served on the United Chambers Board of Directors.

The Topper Award is selected each year specifically to honor the outstanding chamber volunteer. A committee, chaired by Mack Cleveland, the first winner of the award in 1970, consists of other past winners.

The Luis Perez Humanitarian Award was first given posthumously to Dr. Perez, in 1989. Since that time, winners have included George Touhy, Dr. Vann Parker, Lucia Weaver, Mother Bell Weaver, Irene Brown, and last year's winner, Phyllis Conklin.

Touhy is the only person who has won both of the top awards. He received the Topper Award in 1980 for volunteer work with the chamber, and the Luis Perez Humanitarian Award in 1990.

Last night's award to Karen Coleman was the 28th annual Topper Award. It has been presented each year since 1970.

In addition to the Perez and Topper awards, the chamber presented its annual Sports Hall of Fame award to Larry McCorkle and Willie Brown, and its Executive Committee Award to former Chamber President Bob Douglas.

Also during the event, Bobby Von Herbulis was officially installed as the chamber president for 1996, while outgoing president Brent Adamson was presented a plaque for his service during 1995.

Other officers include Vice President Sandra Glenn, and Treasurer Doug Sills.

Inmate executed by firing squad

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah — A child killer who chose bullets instead of a lethal injection became the nation's first inmate executed by a firing squad in 19 years early today.

The white cloth target pinned over John Albert Taylor's heart appeared to disintegrate as the four slugs fired by anonymous marksmen struck him just after midnight. The front of his blue jumpsuit quickly turned dark with blood.

"I guess that answers that, don't it," Taylor's uncle, Gordon Lee, one of three witnesses invited by Taylor, said through tears moments later. "Johnny was lucky. It went quicker than lethal injection, but seven years is a long time to die."

Taylor, 36, had been on death row at Utah State Prison since his 1989 conviction for the rape and strangulation of an 11-year-old girl. In December, he fired his lawyers and dropped all appeals, saying he preferred death to life in prison.

Whitewater prosecutors grill first lady

WASHINGTON — Her veracity under attack in the Whitewater affair, Hillary Rodham Clinton says her unprecedented grand jury appearance is not a first she's particularly pleased about.

Nonetheless, the first lady says "it will be a relief" to answer prosecutors' questions stemming from the mysterious reappearance of long-sought billing records that outline her work for the failed Arkansas savings and loan at the center of the Whitewater criminal investigation.

Today's grilling by Whitewater prosecutors before 23 grand jurors is "not a first that I'm particularly pleased about, but I think that it's a necessary part of this investigation, and I intend to cooperate," she declared Thursday during a political trip to New Hampshire.

Clinton to sign budget bill

WASHINGTON — With a midnight deadline looming, the White House says President Clinton is willing to sign a bill approved by the Republican-led House that would keep the government running through March 15.

The Senate today was taking up the measure, which would extend federal spending authority another seven weeks while cutting back funds for dozens of federal agencies.

Without the bill, thousands of federal civil servants face a third partial government shutdown beginning Saturday. But the White House said Clinton would sign it before the current temporary spending bill expires at midnight tonight.

Rape in Japan

TOKYO — While the trial for three U.S. servicemen accused of raping an Okinawan schoolgirl winds down, the Air Force confirmed today that another U.S. enlisted man has been charged with rape — this time of a 14-year-old American girl.

The latest charges come amid widespread calls in Japan for the withdrawal of the U.S. military from the southern Japanese island following the September rape and abduction of a 12-year-old girl.

Two U.S. Marines and a sailor are on trial in a Japanese court for that crime, and a verdict is expected next month.

In a full-page ad in today's New York Times, a Japanese women's group appealed to the United States to remove military bases from the island, saying that is the only way to prevent future rapes.

Grand jury can be an ordeal

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Experts on grand jury proceedings offered first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton this advice: Be alert. Be honest. Be brave. Be careful.

"She's in for a lot of questions, and not necessarily just the ones she and her lawyers might expect," says Washington lawyer Joseph diGenova, a former federal prosecutor. "There are no limits."

Mrs. Clinton, scheduled to testify behind closed doors today, was expected to be asked about billing records of her work as a lawyer for a failing Arkansas savings and loan owned by partners of her and President Clinton in the Whitewater real estate venture.

Those documents, apparently missing when subpoenaed by federal prosecutors two years ago, recently were found in the White House family residence. Mrs. Clinton will be asked whether she or anyone else inside the White House tried to hide them.

But "there's no guarantee that all she'll be asked about," diGenova says. "She won't know what questions they're going to ask. The questions could range all over the lot" of the Whitewater investigation.

If Mrs. Clinton wants to consult with one of her attorneys, she'll have to leave the room. No one will be allowed to accompany her inside.

Only members of the 23-person grand jury, a court stenographer and Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth Starr or his assistants will be in the unadorned, windowless room with her.

Mrs. Clinton's legal help must wait several steps away in a third-floor hallway inside the U.S. courthouse.

Typically, a prosecutor asks most of the questions. But individual grand jurors — District of Columbia residents randomly selected for twice-a-week duty over an 18-month period — can pose their own questions.

"She must pay very close attention because questions typically are loaded and leading," says Juanita Brooks, a defense lawyer from San Diego.

"Witnesses shouldn't be bullied into answering such questions without first consulting with their lawyers," she says. "It can be an ordeal, even for someone who is an attorney."

A witness who frequently leaves the grand jury room to consult with a lawyer waiting outside is said to be doing "the grand jury shuffle" and prosecutors can grow impatient with the resulting delays.

But Brooks says Mrs. Clinton should leave the room as often as she wants to consult with a lawyer.

"It doesn't make you look bad," she says. "It just makes you look smart."

Any witness should offer answers that are direct and least likely to be misconstrued. A slip could result in a perjury charge.

"She's got a very tricky, tight wire to walk," says Washington lawyer Abbe David Lowell. "She must be absolutely candid and truthful. On the other hand, she can't contradict anything she may have said previously" when questioned by prosecutors at the White House.

Most grand jury appearances last several hours, and federal law makes it a crime for anyone inside the room — except the witness — to discuss what occurred.

Only Mrs. Clinton is free to talk about what she was asked and what she answered. Of course, she can let someone in the White House or one of her lawyers speak for her.

"This presents something of a public relations dilemma for the White House," diGenova suggests. "If she discusses her appearance, they run the risk of (angering) Ken Starr. If she doesn't discuss it, there's the unfair inference of having something to hide."

His advice? Say only that the investigation does not involve any allegations against Mrs. Clinton. Then refuse to discuss any details of her testimony and claim doing so would be "unwise and unfair to the independent counsel and to the grand jury."

Pregnant runaway

Her name's not Cindy, she's not 10

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — It turns out Cindy Garcia wasn't 10, wasn't from Houston and wasn't even Cindy Garcia.

The case of the young pregnant girl whose flight from social workers prompted a wide search took an even stranger twist, Thursday.

The girl was carrying a forged birth certificate obtained by her mother, police said.

What authorities now believe is that Cindy is really Adella Quintana, probably about 14, born in Mexico and about eight months pregnant. Officials earlier feared she could deliver any day, but doctors who examined her Thursday said she probably won't give birth for a month.

Pedro Sotelo, 22, Adella's boyfriend and the father of the baby, was to appear in court today on charges of aggravated sexual assault and could get life in prison if convicted. Sotelo, also Mexican, has been held in a county jail on $200,000 bond since Wednesday night, when he and Adella were found in a Houston apartment.

A woman had taken them, cold and hungry, into her apartment and had a friend call 911.

Adella was taken to LBJ Hospital where obstetricians said she was in good condition. It was not clear when she would be released.

The girl's mother, Francesca Quintana, gave police a written statement Thursday saying she got the phony birth certificate when the family moved from Mexico so she could enroll Adella in Houston's public schools, police spokesman Alvin Wright said.

Detectives were consulting authorities in Mexico to try to confirm Adella's age. The girl had given police and social workers various ages, although the birth certificate was the only documentation they had.

"Whether she's 10 or 14, she's been sexually abused and we will protect her," said Judy Hay of Harris County Children's Protective Services.

A 14-year-old in Texas can legally have sex only with someone no more than three years older. The unrestricted age of consent is 17.

Police have not determined when Adella's family moved to Houston from Mexico. Adella and Sotelo are illegal aliens, authorities said, but it was not immediately clear whether Ms. Quintana was living in the country illegally.

Adella's parents are divorced.

Her father's whereabouts were unknown, and police were investigating whether to charge the mother with child neglect.

The girl had been taken to a shelter by authorities after she turned up at a welfare office two weeks ago with the phony certificate to qualify for food stamps and child support.

Social workers had panicked when Adella ran away Sunday, fearing that she wouldn't have proper medical supervision. They said her young body probably wouldn't be able to withstand childbirth without a Caesarean section.

Rams girls claim district top seed

By GARY COATMAN

LONGWOOD - Stephanie Dale scored 18 points Thursday to lead Lake Mary past Lake Howell 68-52 in Seminole Athletic Conference girls basketball action. The Rams earned the No. 1 seed in the upcoming Class 6A-District 4 tournament with the win.

"Our players came out and turned it up a notch on defense," said Lake Mary coach Carl Brown, whose team is ranked No. 8 in this week's state poll. "We got our inside game going, and Stephanie was hitting shots from the outside. We also continued to shoot free throws well."

Kathryn Butler and Stacey Gomes missed the game for Lake Howell because of injuries, and Lake Mary took a 15-2 lead to start the game. Dale had nine points in the period, while Maggie Reedy and Lori Hammett each added four. Stacey Helge cut the Lake Howell deficit to 19-9 by the end of the first quarter, and the Silver Hawks closed within 19-12 on a three point play by Angia Goff.

Avoid food poisoning at home

Millions of people suffer from food poisoning every year and no less than one-third of these cases are caused by food prepared at home. Every kitchen has the basic tools needed to prevent foodborne illness: a refrigerator and modern packaging materials. Follow the tips below to help ensure your food is safe to eat:

Before you cook:

- Juice from raw meat and poultry may leak from the original grocery store packaging and contaminate other foods or surfaces. Slip these foods into plastic bags for an extra layer of security.
- Ground meats spoil much faster than other cuts. In going through the grinder, microbes (ever present on its surface) are distributed throughout the meat. Ground beef, pork, lamb and poultry should not be stored in the refrigerator longer than two days.
- Buying jumbo-sized

CONSUMER FOCUS

packages of meat or poultry may save you time and money, but it may also mean these items end up spending too long in your refrigerator. Take out what you will use in a few days, then freeze the remainder, using airtight, sealable plastic bags designed for the freezer. You can also cook what you don't plan to use right away and refrigerate it for as long as a week in containers sealed with plastic wrap or snug-fitting lids.

Never thaw meat or poultry on the kitchen counter. Bacteria can multiply rapidly at room temperature. Cook frozen food directly or thaw it in the refrigerator.

- Everything in the kitchen that comes in contact with raw meat should be washed immediately to prevent contamination of other foods. Scrub counter tops and utensils with hot soapy water. Throw dish towels in the laundry and run cutting boards through the dishwasher — plastic holds up best at dishwasher temperatures.

After you cook:

- Leaving hot foods out on the kitchen counter to cool increases the time the food is in the temperature danger zone (45°F. to 140°F.) where bacteria has a chance to grow. It is okay to put hot food directly into the refrigerator — the sooner the better.
- Divide large quantities of hot food into several smaller containers for quick chilling.

Pack the food loosely and seal in containers with tightly fitting lids or use plastic wrap to cover. Lids and wraps will keep your leftovers tastier and also prevent contamination from raw foods stored in the refrigerator.

- When you pack food for lunch, ensure it stays cold, fresh and safe until it's time to eat by packing it in an insulated lunch box.

- It is important to know how to take perishable foods on long trips. Remember to chill food first. Then, pack it in a cooler with a cold pack, keep it in the shade and leave the lid on as much as possible.

Teach kids about cause and effect

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for years. I'm often surprised, moved, outraged or entertained by the foibles of those who write to you. You answer each letter with such courtesy, kindness and wisdom that I often wonder how you can be so objective and nonjudgmental.

Take, for instance, "Stressed at Home in Pa.," the mother of four children — all under the age of 5 — who needed a "sanity day." Abby, why did she have four children under the age of 5? Hasn't she heard of cause and effect? Whether it's because of religious, social, ethnic or familial brainwashing, too many couples (and single women) make decisions that create heavy burdens they end up carrying far longer than nine months.

We no longer live in a world where the support mechanisms necessary for the successful rearing of large families exist for low- and middle-income families. If they had been available to "Stressed," she would have been receiving her sanity day from her church, or from the children's grandparents, or even from the sisters who remember the "fun and funny" sibling who is now stressed.

Parents today (if children are fortunate enough to have two) must make conscious choices between quantity or quality. Fewer children means more time for Mom to enjoy the few that she does have, more time with hubby doing the fun things that brought them together, more time to volunteer to help children less fortunate than her own, and more time to grow spiritually and mentally so she can guide her fewer children toward paths that will enrich the world.

ADVICE

Decisions must be made with awareness of the realities that exist today. Children should be taught the concept of cause and effect. As a society, we can no longer afford to act without considering the consequences and then complain about the responsibilities we must shoulder. Without a long-term perspective, we will continue to have rampant divorce, welfare mothers, gender conflict and escalating crime thanks to children who grow up in combat zones. Before we accept the responsibility of bringing more children into this world, we should stop and smell the diapers.

REALISTIC READER IN ISSAQUAH, WASH.

DEAR REALISTIC READER: Thank you for an intelligent letter. Of course, you are correct. However, in the case of the stressed-out mother who wrote to me, it was a little late to discuss family planning or the economic realities of life in the '90s. I'm printing your letter in the hope that its plain-spoken message will reach anyone who is undecided before she decides to take the plunge.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please stop referring to any repetition as "a broken record"?

You'll never hear anything from a broken record because it is broken! You will succeed only in bringing the needle.

Please say "well-worn" or "scratchy" record instead. Sign this: A Retired Public School Music Teacher.

On second thought, you may go ahead and use my name.

DOROTHY R. BEMBRIDGE, LONG BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR DOROTHY: Thank you for your suggestion. I'll try to change my tune.

DEAR ABBY: My name is "William Wagner." I married a woman named "Mary Ann" in 1985. It was not a happy union, and we have been divorced for five years.

I have recently remarried, but Mary Ann continues to call herself "Mrs. Wagner." Her name appears on charitable committees and donor lists as "Mrs. Mary Ann Wagner." And on occasion, her name is printed next to my wife's name — which creates the impression that there are two Mrs. Wagners.

Is this correct?
 CONFUSED IN DELAWARE

DEAR CONFUSED: Your former wife is still "Mrs. Wagner," but only your present wife is entitled to call herself "Mrs. William Wagner." Your former wife is "Mrs. Mary Ann Wagner," indicating that she is divorced, not that she's still married to you.

Broke dad is dealing with an addict and a con artist

DEAR MARY: My son has been drinking since he was 15 years old. I started bailing him out of trouble at school and then out of jail and I'm still doing it. He's 40 years old now and I'm paying his rent and insurance, paying off his bad checks and paying his legal fees when he gets arrested for drunk driving. He always promises me that if I help him just one more time he'll stop drinking. He's 40 years old now and I'm 70, and I've spent my entire retirement savings trying to help him, but he's still drinking.

I'm mad at him and at myself for letting this happen, but it seems like when the next situation comes up, I always convince myself that this time he really means what he says. I know if I refuse to help him now, he'll end up as a homeless bum and I'll never see or hear from him again. I don't know if I could live with the guilt if I happened to

FAMILY COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

How can I convince him that he's destroying both our lives?

BROKE DAD: I don't think you have a prayer of convincing your son of anything. You're dealing with an addict and a con artist. You better start working on getting your own head straight or you might end up homeless, too. Long ago you made the classic parental mistake of rescuing your son from the consequences of his alcohol use. You've been enabling him ever since. Now the question is, are you willing to do the hard work and accept the painful consequences of stopping your participation in your son's alcoholism. You need to understand up front that you cannot control what he does. He may never speak to you again; you may never see him again, or he may come to realize the depth of his problem once he has been forced to accept the consequences.

You need to immediately find a support group for codependents. Look in the telephone book under Alcoholics Anonymous or check the newspaper for meetings. When you go to one of these meetings, you will be amazed at how many people share stories like yours and have overcome them. Good luck.

Hunt inspires crowd with message

By MARY ROWELL
Herald Correspondent

LAKE MARY — For three evenings, Father Bob Hunt presented his "Mission for Today" in the cafeteria at Lake Mary High. Over 1,000 people each night heard Father Bob's message. Part of the message was the same that many missionaries, priests and preachers bring to their audience. "We all need God in our lives." The biggest difference with Father Bob is the additional message he brings. "We also all need joy, laughter and happiness in our lives."

Father Bob is an ordained priest from the Order of the Precious Blood based in Dayton, Ohio. He inspires and entertains audiences all over the nation. Laughter was heard with great frequency all three nights he spoke in Lake Mary.

One sure sign, Father Bob said, that God is within you is laughter. People who don't laugh may have God in them, but you can't be sure. We are all basically spiritual people who have to live, temporarily, among material things. Unhappiness comes because our culture convinces us that we are what we own. But what we own is never enough. Truly happy people are less obsessed with material things. They are, by and large, healthier and more successful than unhappy people.

Father Bob told about meeting a surly cashier who rang up his groceries, and after he paid, said in a surly voice, "Have a nice day." Father Bob said, "No thank you, I have other plans." You can't, Father Bob says, "have a nice day." But what you can do is "make it a nice day."

Father Bob Hunt addresses the audience

Ask the preacher Bible questions

Question: "Where did the Idea of Satan or the Devil originate?"

Answer: The Bible is the best source book for his existence and identity. Although many popular concepts about Satan are more the product of human imagination than Scripture, the Bible clearly recognizes him as real.

The figure of Satan is sketchy and vague in the Old Testament. He rarely appears as a distinct figure in Hebrew thought.

The word "satan" is Hebrew in origin and means "adversary, accuser or slanderer." The Greek word "diabolos" has the same meaning and forms the English word "Devil."

Satan is mentioned as the Devil some 30 times in the New Testament and is a being of great power and wickedness. He rules the demonic realm.

His personage is demonstrated as antithetical to the purpose of God and Jesus. Satan appears in person to tempt the Son of God (Matthew 4 and Luke 4).

Satan is real. His power is limited by the blood of the cross and his days are numbered, but his work is evident throughout the world.

Peter calls the devil, our adversary, and warns that he walks about as a lion seeking someone to devour (I Peter 5:8).

Be alert. Ultimately, Christ will crush the evil works of Satan but we must be ready for battle (Ephesians 6:11,12).

SANFORD — Life is a funny thing. Time can be spent worrying about problems and then to no avail things work out anyway.

Did the worry help? No. Added a bit of impatience, a tad of stress and a lot of anxiety, but did not improve the situation.

As we give of ourselves there are times we get anxious too. Did the person appreciate what we did? Did they even understand our motives?

When not acknowledged for the deed done do we think at times...that will be the last time I do that again.

The very act of giving of ourselves requires a spirit of sacrifice. Bible school teachers are the first to admit that when studying for a lesson they receive more application to the text than the students.

When is it okay to call a cease to giving our time and talents? My example has always been the life of Christ. He continually lived in service of others expecting nothing in return.

He didn't worry that he wouldn't be appreciated or concern himself with the outcome of his efforts. He had a higher calling to do everything in love and for the glory of his Father.

When we are tempted to worry a bit too much and withdraw our giving nature I urge you to consider Jesus. John 4:34ff says, "...do the will of the one who sent me." Phillipians 2:14 NIV says, "Do everything without grumbling and complaining."

Let the beauty of Jesus be seen in you.

*There never was a person
Who did anything
Worth doing that did not Receive more than
He gave*

Youth minister gets pie for good cause

Sidney Brock, youth minister for First Baptist Church of Sanford recently had a little time to clown around. Staff and members of the church made a humorist bargain concerning attendance records. If numbers of those participating in January 21st service topped the goal them various staff were to receive a pie in the face. Brock was one of those chosen. Meredith Laurence and Cassie Mery performed the honors.
