Cooling-off period considered

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners scheduled a public hearing, tentatively set for Oct. 11, to consider a three-day cooling-off period for gun purchases.

At the request of Commissioner Bob Sturm, the commission approved considering enacting the cooling-off period, authorized by the Legislature earlier this year. The three-day period was a compromise between the two-day period approved by legislators last year and the seven- to 10-day period sought by law enforcement organizations.

Orange and Volusia Counties have already adopted the cooling-off period and Sturm said he fears if Seminole County does not do the same gun buyers will flock across the county line to purchase guns, defeating the intent of the law.

Fire rages through Lisbon

LISBON, Portugal — A huge fire raged through Lisbon's historic shopping district early today, gutting dozens of landmark 19th century buildings, killing an elderly man and injuring at least 11 other people, officials said.

"This is a real catastrophe," said President Mario Soares, who toured on foot the charred hilltop Chiado area.

The national Lusa news agency said it was "the worst catastrophe" to hit the Portuguese capital since an earthquake and fire leveled the city in 1755.

Officials said the blaze broke out in the landmark Grandella department store at about 5 a.m. Fanned by winds, the blaze quickly engulfed an area of roughly four square blocks of 19th century four- and five-story buildings.

Lottery at $32 million

TALLAHASSEE — Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said Wednesday this week's LOTTO grand prize has been increased to $32 million, tying it for the seventh-largest lottery prize in United States history.

Lottery official estimated the prize would be about $30 million, but record-shattering ticket sales forced Paul to revise that prediction.

"When we started the week with a record jackpot, we expected record sales," Paul said.

'Golden Bear' faces decision

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Bobby Jones conquered all he thought was necessary in the world of golf and retired from competition at the ripe old age of 28.

It isn't that easy for Jack Nicklaus, who has conquered more worlds than any golfer in history.

"All athletes find themselves in this position," Nicklaus said. "And it's not much fun."

In five months, Nicklaus will celebrate his 49th birthday. Along with that milestone must come a decision. He admits the decision must be made and as yet he is not sure what he will do.

"But I've got to decide," Nicklaus said. "Basically, the decision must be whether I am going to play or I'm not going to play."

Rezoning guidelines OK'd

By CAROL RUMSEY
Herald Staff writer

SANFORD — To reduce the controversy associated with last year's rezoning of 20 Seminole County elementary schools, school board members approved new guidelines Wednesday for this year's rezoning of middle and high schools.

According to enrollment projections, there will be 3,605 more students in grades six through 12 by 1992, with the bulk of the growth falling into the middle school programs.

Middle school enrollment will grow by approximately 200 students each year until 1990-91, then the rate of growth will more than triple with yearly increases of more than 1,000 students expected.

High school enrollments are projected to stay relatively stable during the five-year projection period.

Wednesday night's approved rezoning guidelines call for formation of a county-wide Middle School Zone Task Force, a county-wide High School Zone Task Force, and individual school zoning committees.

The task forces will include one administrator and parent from each school, along with Jack Heisler, director of secondary education. They will develop proposals for recommendation to board members, who will then make the final decisions.

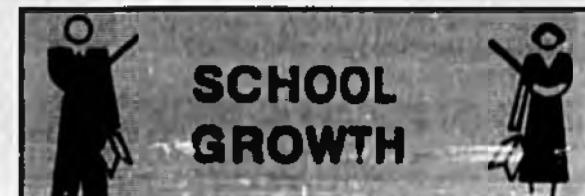

School committees will be comprised of parents, teachers and administrators. They will review all plans, recommendations, and alterations and chose their preference for consideration by the task forces. Meetings will be open to the public and parents are to be notified and encouraged to come.

Marion G. Dailey, assistant superintendent for instructional resources, asked that current seventh, 10th and 11th grade students be allowed to remain at their present schools after rezoning. The suggestion, as are all recommendations for the new guidelines, resulted from a rezoning committee.

Board member Ann Neiswender said confusion already exists among some students and parents who think rezoning plans are complete. For this reason, after all committees have been formed, a joint meeting will be held in September to review procedures, enrollment projections and problems related to school construction.

Dailey said in this way all parties will begin with the same information. Board members hope this will alleviate rumors, fears and hard feelings that often surround this emotional issue.

"What confused the issue last time is that we had such a massive rezoning, with three zone coordinators and three facilitators," Dailey said. Board Chairman Joseph Williams, Jr. agreed that last year's problems were due to poor communication. This year, Heisler will be the sole facilitator and will attend all meetings.

Police arrest Sanford man in rape case

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A 31-year-old man who allegedly raped a Sanford woman in an alley about one hour after police questioned both of them early Tuesday is charged with aggravated sexual battery. He remains jailed in lieu of $10,000 bond.

The man, Jay C. McClure, 1215 Palmetto Ave., Sanford, was hospitalized for one day after being taken into custody by Sanford police Tuesday morning at his house. McClure underwent orthopedic surgery on his left hand to repair a cut reportedly inflicted by the rape victim. Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett said, "The 26-year-old victim defended herself with a scalpel," Harriett said.

The reported rape occurred in an alley between 10th and 11th Streets at about 3:30 a.m. Tuesday. Harriett said the incident occurred about one hour after a policeman on patrol had confronted the couple as they walked on 12th Street. Because of the early hour, Harriett said, the policeman filled out identification cards on both the man and the woman.

After the woman was reportedly raped and released in the alley, she reported the crime to police. She said she had been hit in the head.

Sanford Plaza not for sale

SANFORD — Sanford Plaza will not be sold and the current owner says the deteriorating center will soon become viable and a source of pride for the city.

Local developer Stan Sandefur, owner of Sandefur Properties, Inc., said in late July he had begun preliminary negotiations to purchase the shopping center from Prudential & Associates of Atlanta.

However, Frank Prudgen Jr., president of the Atlanta company, said Wednesday he never had any intentions of selling the property. "A brokerage firm wrote me a letter and said they had a client (Sandefur) who wanted to buy it. I wrote back and said it's not for sale," Prudgen said.

He said his company took over ownership of the City seeks patrol program for public housing

By WAYNE MIZE

SANFORD — Money for a neighborhood patrol program to help curtail drug problems and crime in the city's six public housing projects will be applied for by the Sanford Housing Authority (SHA).

The authority will apply for $75,000 from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD) Comprehensive Improvement Assistance Program to initiate the project. The Authority's board of commissioners approved applying for the grant Wednesday night.

If approved, $50,000 would be used to provide a police substation in one of the six projects within the city and pay the salaries of two police officers, who would be hired by the Sanford Police Department.

"Residents are concerned about drugs and crime," Elliott Smith, executive director of the authority, said. "Some families are afraid to be in their houses at night. We feel taking this step would assist us in eradicating these problems."

The location of the police substation has not been determined, Smith said. Police would patrol all six of the public housing projects with the station as their home base.

The housing authority oversees the six public housing projects in the city: Redding Gardens, William Clark Court, Castle Brewer Court, Edward Higgins Terrace, Cowan-Moughton Terrace and Lake Monroe Terrace.

Policing Chief Steven Harriett has indicated the city police department will provide, without cost to the authority, patrol transportation, supervision of the two police officers, and help in educating the residents regarding the benefits of the neighborhood patrol program.

"Conceptually, I believe the program has merit," Harriett said. "I think it would be

Grant could be coming for William Clark Court

By WAYNE MIZE

SANFORD — Application for a $2.4 million grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for renovation of William Clark Court was approved by the Sanford Housing Authority Board of Commissioners Wednesday night.

Approval of the program application by HUD's Jacksonville office appears favorable, according to Elliott Smith, executive director of the housing authority.

"When you're approved to submit a final application it is "favorable," Smith said. "This is the final step in a long application process. Most (public housing authorities) do not get approval for final application." HUD gave approval for the final application last week.

The application is for money from HUD's Comprehensive Improvement Assistance Program (CIAP), which is for rehabilitation of public housing projects.

"I think it is an important step because there is a real need to improve that project," Smith said.

He said the need for the money was justified by a study of the project's housing and grounds.

Lotto jackpot increased to $32 million

TALLAHASSEE — Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said Wednesday this week's LOTTO grand prize has been increased to $32 million, tying it for the seventh-largest lottery prize in United States history.

Lottery official estimated the prize would be about $30 million, but record-shattering ticket sales forced Paul to revise that prediction.

"When we started the week with a record jackpot, we expected record sales," Paul said. "But sales are growing a little faster than we anticipated."

Through noon Wednesday, LOTTO retailers had sold 5,707,151 tickets. The prior mid-week sales record, set when the grand prize totaled $26 million, was 2,693,851 tickets.

If ticket sales continue to increase, the estimated prize could be increased again before Saturday night's drawing.

The estimated jackpot ties the $32 million awarded in Ohio this January as the seventh-largest in U.S. history. The largest prize ever awarded in the United States, $51.4 million, was awarded by California earlier this year.

The prize is based on ticket sales plus any prize money remaining from the previous weeks. No one won the jackpot the last two weeks, so that money was included in this week's prize.

Hearing on DeSillers continues

MIAMI — An attorney representing the estate of the late Ronnie DeSillers asked a judge Wednesday to hold the boy's mother in contempt for failing to surrender property purchased with donations left over from his medical fund.

But a woman who had worked to raise money for Ronnie, whose benefactors included President Reagan, testified that not all the contributions were specifically earmarked for the boy's medical treatment.

Both appeared at an all-day hearing before Circuit Judge Francis Christie to decide whether the boy's mother, Maria DeSillers, should be held in contempt of court for failing to surrender all the personal property she bought with the donated money.

Prison escapee jailed in police murder

DELRAY BEACH — A 25-year-old prison escapee named as the prime suspect in the shooting death of West Palm Beach motorcycle police officer Brian Chappell was arrested Wednesday night.

Authorities say Norberto Pietri, a native of Puerto Rico, was arrested in Delray Beach. He is known by the nickname of "Spider-Man" because of a black tattoo of a spider on the right side of his neck, police said late Wednesday night.

Pietri is charged with escaping from the Lantana Correctional Institution Aug. 18, said West Palm Beach Police Lt. John Conklin, and is the "prime suspect" in Chappell's death.

Chappell, 31, was shot dead Monday after making a routine traffic stop. He was the city's first police officer killed in 21 years.

Another officer was shot this week under similar circumstances. Like Chappell, Dennis Quinn, 38, a Pinellas County sheriff's deputy, was shot in the chest after a routine traffic stop. But he wore a bulletproof vest. Chappell did not.

Court-martial of officer begins today

PENSACOLA — A Navy officer facing court-martial today is charged with dereliction of duty for talking on the telephone while a recruit with a phobia of water had a panic-induced heart attack and drowned during a swimming class.

Lt. Thomas A. Torchia, 32, the officer in charge of the Rescue Swimmer School at Pensacola Naval Air Station, contends he never knew anything was amiss at the pool March 2 during the death of Lee Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis.

Navy investigators said Mirecki wanted to quit the course, but a group of instructors pulled him from an equipment rack, dragged him back in the pool and held his head under water. Other students were told to turn their heads and sing the national anthem, the investigators said.

"Posner may have avoided prison, but his service obligations will be so personally demanding and time consuming, that he is by no stretch of the imagination, a free man," Spelman indicated.

Acting U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen said he has not decided whether to appeal.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Three killed as Puerto Rico flooded

United Press International

MIAMI — A tropical depression caused three deaths and spewed 6.6 inches of rain on Puerto Rico, triggering flooding and forced evacuation, and forecasters said today it has a good chance of strengthening.

At 8 a.m. EDT, the depression was located about 35 miles west southwest of Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, moving west northwest at about 15 mph. Highest winds were 35 mph, said forecaster Bob Case at the National Hurricane Center.

"This depression has the potential to strengthen to a tropical storm," he said. "However, with the track forecast moving the center of the depression over the island of Hispaniola during the next 24 hours, significant strengthening is not likely until the center moves away from the island."

In Puerto Rico Wednesday, the depression caused mudslides and forced the evacuation of hundreds of people along the Guanajibo River on the western part of the island.

On the southern coast, a man and his 12-year-old son were killed when their car was crushed by a tree. A similar accident caused the death of another man in Barceloneta on the northern coast, 50 miles west of San Juan.

The government closed all public activities on the island and sent government employees home early.

If the system reaches 39 mph, it would be named Chris, the third tropical storm of the 1988 hurricane season.

Meanwhile, heavy rain continued to fall today on the island, Haiti and also the Virgin Islands, Case said. He said reconnaissance aircraft would continue to watch the depression.

A flash flood warning continues for western Puerto Rico and is now in effect for the Dominican Republic, he said. "The heavy rainfall will likely spread over Haiti during the day."

Only two of seven tropical depressions this season have reached tropical storm status and there have been no Atlantic hurricanes. The hurricane season officially begins June 1.

Forecaster Miles Lawrence said current estimates place the weather system south of western Cuba in three days.

"On its current course it would pass to the south of Florida, but there's always the uncertainty of whether it will remain on its current course," he said.

A second and much more poorly defined depression in the eastern Atlantic was centered about 1,000 miles west-northwest of Santo Antao, the northernmost Cape Verde Islands, off the coast of Africa. It was moving west at about 17 mph with highest winds clocked near 35 mph. Forecasters expected the depression to continue moving west and doubted it would strengthen today.

Pilot flies donor heart to child

United Press International

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE — A fighter pilot who made a two-hour flight to New Mexico to bring a donor heart to a 6-year-old girl returned home Wednesday and said it was a satisfying experience.

Capt. Phil Manning, 30, of the Tactical Air Warfare Center near Fort Walton Beach, said it was the first time he was called on to perform such a mission.

Manning said he took his F-15 to 44,000 feet and traveled close to the speed of sound to make the 1,000-mile trip. When he arrived at Kirtland Air Force Base an ambulance was waiting to take the heart to Albuquerque's Presbyterian Hospital.

Air Force officials said the recipient was 6-year-old Sarah Long, who needed a transplant because of a viral infection. She is the daughter of Sanford and Debbie Long of Portales, N.M.

Capt. Linda Bennie, a spokeswoman for Eglin, said a team of surgeons had traveled to Pensacola in a Lear jet to remove the heart from a 7-year-old donor who had died in an accident.

County breaks sky-rocketing contract

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners voted unanimously to break a three-month-old contract with a Georgia-based oil company to deliver large loads of gasoline and diesel fuel for county and sheriff's department vehicles.

The company, Keeman Petroleum Co. of Valdosta, Ga., had escalated prices above their originally-bid fuel price without notifying the county under the required 15-day advance notice of any increases over one penny per gallon, county officials say.

A Keeman official says the 15-day requirement is unique and the company utilized another clause in the contract stating the assumption that the delivered cost of the gasoline will vary according to market prices enabled them to fluctuate the prices according to their costs.

"There were conflicting clauses in the contract," said Chris Keener, secretary of the family-owned Keeman Petroleum. "The volatility of the oil market makes the 15-day period unworkable."

Commissioners approved the contract with Keeman May 10 to deliver 8,000 gallons or greater-sized loads. Keeman's gasoline bulk bid price was 53 cents per gallon with a two-cents per gallon delivery charge. For smaller loads, two other contracts were awarded to local companies, including Seminole Petroleum Co., Inc. and W.T. Harvey Oil Co. of Orlando.

On May 17, seven days after Keeman was awarded the bid for the tanker-load deliveries, they mailed a letter stating that effective that day, their gasoline price would be increased to a little more than 60 cents per gallon, nearly seven cents more than their bid price.

The letter was received by the county Fleet Management Department May 23. But on May 18, the 8,399-gallon delivery bearing the higher price had already been made. It was the first delivery made to the county by Keeman under the contract.

On May 23, the day the first letter was received, Keeman mailed another letter stating the prices would be increased, effective the next day. That letter was received on May 25. On May 24, a 7,432-gallon delivery of diesel fuel was made bearing a cost nearly eight cents higher than the original bid price of slightly more than 46 cents per gallon.

In all,

Keeman notified the county of 21 price increases in the last three months, the latest on Aug. 19. By then, the price had risen to 66.5 cents per gallon of gasoline, more than 13 cents higher than the bid price. Diesel fuel had increased from the original 46 cents per gallon to nearly 52 cents per gallon.

The price rose and fell several times for both gas and diesel fuel, but both ended with a higher price during the 31 deliveries made to the county.

Although RoseAnn Hunter, county fleet director, said she received the letters on or near the time when the deliveries with higher prices were made, she thought the contract gave the county 15 days to respond, not that Keeman had to notify the county 15 days ahead of the time before the increases took effect.

County officials say the local vendors will be used for future deliveries.

Patchett: GOP votes will give Carpenter speakership

United Press International

said. He said the chances of a Carpenter-GOP alliance were "very good."

Carpenter said he was pleased with Patchett's prediction, but that it would be "presumptuous" to claim victory with the speaker's election still several months away.

"In honesty we have to wait until November to see," Carpenter said. "It's looking real close, but it does look good to us."

Patchett based his statement on a projection that Republicans will win between 52 and 55 House seats in this fall's elections. Republicans currently hold 46 of the 120 seats.

"Florida tends to vote Republican and conservative in national elections, and we have a 10-15 percent higher turnout," Patchett said. "That should be enough to put a lot of our closer elections over the top."

Fifty-five Republican backers would mean Carpenter would need to carry only a half dozen Democratic votes, including his own. Carpenter said he already had 10 Democratic votes locked up, though he refused to identify those backers.

Five Democrats have allied themselves publicly with Carpenter, although supporter Rep. Elvin Martinez, D-Tampa, has said he would not go along with a GOP alliance.

Charles Canady, who heads the Democratic's House campaign effort, said Patchett could not win six to nine more seats this fall. He also questioned Carpenter's Democratic support, and predicted Gustafson will hold the speakership.

"They are blowing smoke," Canady said. "If (Carpenter) has the votes, why doesn't he deliver them?"

In return for the Republican support, Carpenter will open up the House to allow proportional representation on committees and on the House staff. The ruling Democrats have traditionally stacked key committees and staff positions with fellow Democrats.

Both Carpenter and Patchett said they had not discussed whether the GOP would be rewarded with any committee chairmanships.

Senate Republicans received 11 committee chairs after a coalition organized by Sen. Dempsey Barron, D-Panama City, wrested the Senate presidency away from Sen. Ken Jenne, D-Hollywood, in 1986.

"We both agree on one thing — that we will do everything we can to see I am the speaker and not Tom Gustafson," Carpenter said. "But as far as chairmanships and that sort of thing, we haven't made any deals."

Gustafson could not be reached for comment.

Suspected prostitutes arrested

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — One of two women arrested after allegedly offering sexual favors for cash to undercover City County Investigative Bureau agents reportedly told the men, "I know you aren't cops," minutes before the arrests.

Accused of assignment to commit prostitution are Kimberly Wassner, 20, of P.O. Box 217 Maple Ave., Oviedo; and Diane Maddox, 29, of 49 Marker St., Altamonte Springs. The arrests were made at 11 p.m. Wednesday. Maddox, who allegedly initially gave the agents a fake name, was also booked on a count of obstruction by disguise. She remains jailed in lieu of $500 bond. Bond for Wassner is $100.

The agents report they were driving on Lake Howell Road at North Street, rural Altamonte Springs, when the women allegedly flagged them down. The agents asked what was wrong and Wassner allegedly said, "We're working."

The agents asked what kind of work they were doing and Wassner allegedly said, "I know you're not cops," and named a price for specific sexual favors. The agents asked if the price included both suspects, and Maddox allegedly replied, "Yes, both of us."

Victim doesn't see who robbed him

WINTER SPRINGS — Noel Morales of 4455 Willa Creek Drive, Winter Springs, told Seminole County sheriff's deputies he didn't turn to see a man he said robbed him in woods about 9:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Morales said he was walking on a path between Willa Springs Plaza and Willa Springs Apartments when a man approached him from behind and put an object he believed to be a weapon in the small of his back, and demanded Morales' wallet.

Morales said he handed over the wallet and never turned to see the suspect, who fled with his $50 and a $500 postal money order taken from the wallet.

Dukakis stresses labor themes in Midwest campaign swing

United Press International

CLEVELAND — Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis, in the industrial heartland today with his theme of "jobs you can raise a family on," is ridiculing George Bush's goal of 30 million jobs in eight years.

On a campaign swing that began Wednesday with the endorsement of the AFL-CIO and then went to Grand Rapids, Mich., before Cleveland, Dukakis repeatedly spoke not just of new jobs but of "jobs with a future, jobs you can count on."

In a computer center at Grand Rapids' Grand Valley State University, the Massachusetts governor told students and others he had traveled across the United States talking to thousands of Americans concerned about their jobs.

"I have met too many people who have accepted jobs over the last eight years that pay less than their old job," he said. "I have met too many couples who are working harder at two jobs just to stay in place."

"This election is not about whether Mr. Bush's own economists believe his speeches. It is about making every American a full shareholder in the American dream. It's about creating jobs with a future, jobs you can count on, jobs you can raise a family on."

Dukakis was referring to reports that economic advisers to Bush have backed away from the goal the vice president pledged when he accepted the Republican presidential nomination last week: 30 million new jobs in eight years.

The event, co-sponsored by AT&T, WCAT-FM/106 Radio and the Greater Seminole Chamber of Commerce, marks the beginning of a citizens group effort to support the state park and focus attention on the need to preserve the Wekiwa River from the threat of over-development and pollution.

Volunteers and participants should contact Debbie DiPesa or Ken Rabae at 339-10678 for more information.

Fun Day is Saturday at Wekiwa Park

A day of fun, festivities and old-fashioned River Raft competition will be held this Saturday at Wekiwa Springs State Park. The race is a fundraiser for the a needed visitor's center at the park to provide an educational program for visitors and school children. Organizers hope the event will become an annual affair.

In addition to the River Raft competition, which starts at 10 a.m. at the state park and ends at Wekiwa Marina, volleyball and softball tournaments will be held Saturday afternoon. Wekiwa Fun Day will be capped off by a live music concert and awards celebration.

The event, co-sponsored by AT&T, WCAT-FM/106 Radio and the Greater Seminole Chamber of Commerce, marks the beginning of a citizens group effort to support the state park and focus attention on the need to preserve the Wekiwa River from the threat of over-development and pollution.

Volunteers and participants should contact Debbie DiPesa or Ken Rabae at 339-10678 for more information.

Rubbish fire destroys garage

CHULUOTA — Richard Warner Sr., of 470 Live Oak Ave., Chuluota, reported to sheriff's deputies he left a cardboard box and some papers burning in a metal barrel behind his wooden garage at his home about two hours before Seminole County firefighters arrived to extinguish the garage that caught afire.

The garage burned at about 3:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Propane truck overturns

Sanford firemen are prepared for fire to break out on a propane gas tank truck which overturned on Old Monroe Road at its intersection with Iowa Avenue Wednesday. Charles Bumgardner, driver of the truck, was treated at Central Florida Regional Hospital for a dislocated shoulder after the accident. The 2,000-gallon tank on the truck was approximately half full. The propane did not ignite, and was pumped into another tanker. The truck is owned by Therm-O-Tane Gas Co. of Sanford.

Low tax haven needs money

Florida's tax burden dropped a little this past year as compared to other states, but the sales tax and the so-called sin taxes on alcohol and tobacco remain among the nation's highest, we were told by Florida TaxWatch yesterday.

This can be viewed with several variations on the theme of good and bad news.

Florida was cited in the report as ranking 37th in the nation with an 8.0 tax rate, thus maintaining the state's reputation as a haven for those believing in low taxes. The position is an improvement over the 9.4 rate in 1986 which ranked Florida 38th, but a drop from 44th in 1985.

Floridians paid an average of $818.95 in 1986, a total representing only 80 percent of the $1,018 national average.

But low taxes can also serve as an early warning system. Unlike the federal budget, Florida's budget must be balanced. The law prohibits deficits. The Constitution prohibits an income tax, and heaven help a politician who even suggests the remote possibility of changing that provision. The money comes in from the prime source of sales tax — and the sin tax, if you will, and then is distributed according to the budget to the many needed areas such as schools, roads, prisons, welfare, environment, etc. The result is annually obvious: There is not enough money to go around to do the job which citizens want to have done.

It's interesting to note that TaxWatch refers to the state lottery as one of the state's new taxes which will effect the 1988 figures probably dropping the state to the low 30s or high 20s in national ranking. However, revenue from the lottery was pledged to provide additional funding for education when presented in the 1986 election. Voters will have to rely on the integrity of the legislators and the governor to insure their wishes are carried out.

Regular funding from general revenue, plus the lottery money, may suffice for the immediate future in education, but does not relieve the demands in the many other areas.

Which brings the good news face to face with the bad. Florida must find additional tax sources. The ill-advised, ill-fated sales tax on services was not the answer, and will not become a solution in the future. A personal income tax may be enacted in the future but that time is too distant to promise relief in the immediate years ahead. The appeal in that form of tax is the deductibility from federal income taxes.

The 6 percent state sales tax is one of the nation's highest and further increases in that area might prove self-defeating through reduced spending and business.

The state legislature will have to deal with the revenue shortfall and ever increasing state needs in the 1989 session. Most members of that body are now seeking election or re-election. Answers to questions on taxes — or revenue enhancement — are needed from all candidates. It will be their opportunity to demonstrate creativity in thinking and logic in problem solving.

There's a lot behind Quayle flap

The brouhaha over the circumstances of Dan Quayle's entry into the National Guard back in 1969 has managed to slow George Bush's momentum coming out of the New Orleans convention, but what impact it will have on the campaign, let alone the election, remains to be seen. Much may depend upon how ready the Bush forces are to launch a really powerful counterattack.

Luckily the Quayle controversy has not obscured, in the eyes of the American people, the fact that George Bush's acceptance speech was a highly impressive performance: cool and masterful, yet thoughtful, good-humored, and friendly. The media have wildly exaggerated Bush's defects, and this first close look at the man was, for many people, an important corrective. It undoubtedly reassured millions of voters.

But the Quayle controversy demonstrates how effectively the media can "establish air superiority over a beach-head" no to speak. Let some glitch or seeming vulnerability appear, and soon the media's obsessive concern with it overwhelms everything else. The subject may not be very important, but who's talking about any other?

Amusingly, it took the media about 24 hours to find out what they wanted to say for rather imply) about Quayle's record. For a while they seemed to be suggesting that anybody who joined the National Guard during the Vietnam War was a draft-dodger. Then somebody remembered that there are about a million and a half highly patriotic Americans in the Guard, and the media suddenly changed their tune.

Now the question became "whether" Quayle used undue influence to get into the Guard.

Note that "whether." It served the purpose of launching the smear without making the media responsible for any specific charge whatever. It was this sort of sharp practice that so enraged the Quayle fans at the outdoor press conference in Huntington, Ind., that they booed the members of the press corps.

On the actual question of undue influence, there is as of this writing not a shred of evidence to suggest it. But the matter can and no doubt will be pursued as long as anybody is listening, so we can resign ourselves to daily articles reporting that Quayle is being "dogged" by questions on the subject.

Beyond that, an attempt is already being made to turn the issue against Bush himself. Here (so goes the argument) is a man who proclaimed his intention to choose a running mate with the highest credentials, and devoted weeks or even months to the search. Yet his choice turns out to be at least seemingly vulnerable — etc., etc.

George Will may well be right in saying that Quayle ought to make a speech to the nation — along the lines of Nixon's 1952 Checkers speech — to lay the issue to rest. But the Bush campaign will be inexcusably derelict if it doesn't also press the issue of Senator Bentsen's son, Lloyd III.

This young man was just about Quayle's age, and entered the National Guard at just about the same time. Moreover, he seems to have discovered an opening in the Guard and been lotted into it in just about 24 hours — surely some sort of record for the standing broad jump.

Congress loses aides

WASHINGTON — As the 100th Congress winds down, dozens of Capitol Hill aides are scurrying like lemmings to industry lobbying jobs where they can cash in on their inside information. The exodus is beginning to worry congressional leaders, who don't want the "sleaze factor" of the Reagan administration to rub off on them.

Law Congress concentrate on its reputation. Industry is concentrating on hiring the best senators money can buy.

For example, last month congressional staffer Tim Smith was hired by the American Nuclear Energy Council, which lobbies for the nuclear power industry. Before he joined the ANEC, Smith stuck like a barnacle to his boss, Sen. John Breaux, D-La., chairman of the Nuclear Regulation Subcommittee. If Breaux started a sentence, Smith could finish it. He was his senator's alter ego.

Now, the nuclear industry stands to benefit from the insights Smith gained while working for Breaux.

Senate rules bar Smith from directly lobbying his former colleagues on the Nuclear Regulation Subcommittee for one year — a minor problem, Smith told our associate, Stewart Harris, that he will advise other ANEC lobbyists. And he has been spotted lobbying in the House, where there are no restrictions on him.

Congressional staffers are sensitive to charges that they ought to come under the same laws as executive branch staff members who are not allowed to swing back through the revolving door within a year after leaving their jobs with the administration. Former White House aides Lyn Nofziger and Michael Deaver were investigated under those ethics laws when they cashed in on their expertise too quickly. Nofziger was the first person convicted under that law, and Deaver was convicted for lying under oath.

Some congressional aides complained to us that Capitol Hill staffers are doing the same thing — putting a price tag on the things they heard in closed-door meetings.

Ethics concerns on Capitol Hill have spawned a series of proposals. In April, the Senate passed an Ethics in Post-Employment Act that prohibits Senate aides from lobbying the Senate for one year after leaving. A similar bill, expected to go to a vote in the House this fall, would keep former House staffers from lobbying their co-workers for one year.

That House bill would keep former staffers from doing what Tom Ryan has been up to for the past year.

For years, Ryan was the respected chief counsel for the House Energy and Commerce Committee, one of the most powerful committees on Capitol Hill. Ryan quit that job last year and joined the law firm of Wunder and Delfenderfer, a Washington boutique for former congressmen and staffers who sell their expertise as lobbyists for industries pushing legislation before Congress.

One of Ryan's jobs since joining the firm has been to work for a coalition of manufacturers promoting a bill that would make it harder for consumers to win lawsuits over hazardous products. In nine months, the coalition paid Wunder and Delfenderfer $28,200 for lobbying services.

The controversial product liability bill made it through Ryan's old stomping grounds, the Energy and Commerce Committee, thanks in part to his hard work.

Veep choice may backfire

NEW ORLEANS — In trying to be cautious in his choice of a running mate, Vice President George Bush may have made the classic political error of leaning over so far backward that he has fallen flat on his pat. The selection of Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana represents at least an opportunity lost: potentially, the decision could backfire on Bush and his bid for the White House.

Quayle is an attractive and conscientious senator, a strong campaigner, whose public-policy record is very much in line with the conservative platform of his party and the message the Republicans want to send to the voters.

At 41, he is clearly of the successor generation and therefore the right kind of man for Bush to have chosen. When the voters are understandably ready for change after eight years with the oldest President ever to sit in the Oval Office, it would have been a mistake for the incumbent party to present two men who are in the seventh decades of their lives, as would have been the case had Bush picked Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas.

But it's a case of a generation, wrong guy. The news was barely out when Bush's media managers found themselves on the defensive, arguing against the obvious skepticism about Quayle's qualifications for the No. 2 job. What campaign chairman James A. Baker III called "a bold reach across the generations" looked more like an improvised lunge. A day after the surprise announcement, Baker was telling Bryant Gumbel of NBC that Quayle "has more experience in government than the presidential candidate on the other side." Michael S. Dukakis, who has been governor of Massachusetts for 10 years and was an influential state legislator for years before that.

The Baker whopper simply underscores the fact that Quayle, after 12 years in Congress, is just beginning to make his mark as a legislator with some significant contributions to domestic and foreign policy. His reputation among his colleagues rests on the craftsmanship and bipartisanship he displayed in redesigning a discredited Carter-era program for government-subsidized jobs into an effective, locally controlled job-training partnership act, and on the toughness and technical mastery he brought to his side of the debate on the recent U.S.-Soviet arms-control treaty.

But he is vastly overshadowed in the Senate by his colleague from Indiana, Richard Lugar, who is, like Dukakis, a member of the Fit Fifties generation. And in terms of national reputation and credentials, Quayle is not even in the same ballpark as the two Republicans most politicians thought Bush would use to bridge the generation gap — Rep. Jack Kemp of

New York and former governor Lamar Alexander of Tennessee.

When you compare Kemp's leadership on the tax issue and Alexander's on education reform and economic development to Quayle's legislative record, the choice is hard to explain or defend.

It's equally difficult for hardheaded Republican politicians to see Quayle as someone who will help Bush win a close election.

Indiana is a smaller prize in electoral terms than Texas, the home state of Dukakis' running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen. It is one of the safest Republican states in the nation, while Texas is a vital battleground.

Ed Rollins, the manager of Ronald Reagan's 1984 campaign, was openly scornful of the choice. "Now that we've nailed down Indiana," he observed, "I suppose we'll try to lock up New Hampshire next."

As a symbol, Quayle also presents problems. An heir to a multi-million-dollar publishing fortune, he is all to easy a target for Democratic populism.

When Texas agriculture commissioner Jim Hightower (D) gives that Bush is "a guy who was born on third base and thinks he hit a triple," he could be speaking as well of Quayle, whose family connections smoothed his early business and political career.

It's questionable how much Quayle shares with the members of his own generation. If the Vietnam War was the defining experience for their political coming of age, Quayle missed it. He certainly did nothing to oppose or protest the killing. And at the height of the draft, he came out of college as a single man, joined the Indiana National Guard and spent the war years going to law school and holding down a series of political jobs in the Indiana state capitol arranged by officeholder friends of his family.

So why did Bush choose him? The shrewdest answer I heard here came from Tom Rath of Concord, N.H., a strategist in Bob Dole's ill-fated campaign. He said: "I think George Bush is saying, 'I'm going to win this election on my own.' He's lived in the shadow of one guy (Reagan) for the last eight years.

FINANCIALStock prices open lower*United Press International

NEW YORK — Prices opened lower today in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 37.34 Wednesday, was down 16.54 to 2010.13 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 702-159 among the 1,256 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 8,930,000 shares.

The stock market broke a three-day slide Wednesday and sent prices sharply higher in slow trading. Analysts, however, remained unconvinced that the advance signalled an end to the market's recent downward bias.

"The market was oversold and everybody was waiting for someone else to make a move," said Trude Latimer of Josephthal & Co. "It's always easy to follow."

In addition, the gains might have been related to short-term interest rates, which softened somewhat. To put it another way, interest rates did not play a discouraging role in today's thinking.

Latimer said the buying could not be described as aggressive.

"Whether this turns out to be a minor technical rally remains to be seen," Latimer said. "If we see more volume, it might just develop into something."

Dollar sharply lower

The Deutsche Bundesbank's Central Bank Council raised the discount rate to 3.50 percent from 3 percent and the central banks of France, Switzerland and Austria also raised key interest rates.

Elsewhere, in earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar declined slightly against the Japanese yen, closing 0.54 lower at 133.76 yen.

In Europe, the dollar opened lower against major European currencies and gold rose.

The dollar began the day in Frankfurt at 1.8735 West German marks, down from Wednesday's close of 1.8944. In Zurich, the dollar opened at 1.579 Swiss francs, down from 1.595.

Economy shrugs off droughtUnited Press International

WASHINGTON — The nation's economy shrugged off the effects of the drought this spring and grew at a healthy 3.3 percent annual rate, but inflation hit a six-year high, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

The 3.3 percent, or $32 billion annual growth in the second quarter, was better than the 3.1 percent rate, the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis forecast last month.

The nation's total output of goods and services would have grown at an even quicker 4.3 percent annual rate except for the long drought, which sliced 1 percent off the nation's gross national product in the second quarter, the bureau estimated.

The increased growth rate was on the low end of analysts' forecasts, which ranged from 3.2 percent to 4 percent.

The economy would have to grow at only a modest 2.7 percent annual rate in the second half to meet the administration's goals.

The city commission would have to support the project and the hiring of two officers before the police department could proceed with implementing a patrol plan for the projects, Harriett said.

According to Smith, if the application is approved by HUD the program could be in operation in two months.

The cost of the project will be $50,000 for the first year with

The study of the project's 85 housing units, located at the corner of 10th St. and Mulberry Ave., took several months and revealed many unsafe conditions.

Smith said the most glaring of the unsafe conditions is the large quantities of lead found in interior and exterior paint in the units. "This needs to be eradicated immediately," he said.

According to the CIAP application other findings included:

- Dwelling units have no fire alarm or smoke detection system.

- Units have no flow-through ventilation.

- Interior gas lines have developed leaks and need replacing.

- Electrical service in units is inadequate and does not meet codes. The system is ungrounded.

Harriett said police referred to the information card the patrolman had filled out on the woman's companion. They went to McClure's house and found that he needed medical treatment for a severe cut to his left hand.

He and the victim were transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford, where both were treated. McClure underwent surgery while under guard and in the custody of police in the hospital. The suspect was released from the hospital Wednesday and was booked into the Seminole County jail where he remains.

plaza last year with plans to remodel and revitalize it. However, shortly after the property was purchased, it was placed on a reservation map by the Seminole County Expressway Authority (SCEA) for right of way use for the proposed beltway. The original design of an intersection proposed for the area would have wiped out the center.

"That effectively stopped all building for a five-year period and killed all hopes of our being able to improve or upgrade this facility," Pridgen said. "What that effectively did was run out all my tenants, old and new, which hurt Sanford Plaza. Now, it appears we have escaped."

The plaza currently is the home for nine businesses, including J.C. Penney's, the anchor of the center. There are 15 vacant store fronts.

"We have been lucky to hold on to J.C. Penney and the few remaining tenants that we still have," said Pridgen.

The SCEA recently approved a redesign of the expressway on and off ramps at the expressway's intersection with U.S. Highway 17/92, saving the center from destruction.

Pridgen said he is now waiting for the SCEA to release the property from the reservation map, which should be done sometime in the next few weeks, according to Pridgen and the SCEA.

He said that once he is notified the property is released, "I will dust off the plans we had before and try to rekindle interest."

"The first thing I will do is contact all prospective clients that previously expressed an interest, (in moving into the center)."

Pridgen, who visited the plaza last week, said the entire plaza will be remodeled and a new parking lot will be constructed. He said the cost of the project "will be in the millions."

Polish strikes reach tenth day

GDANSK, Poland — Solidarity activists seeking legalization of their banned union extended a nationwide walkout into a tenth day today, but the government remained adamant in its refusal to negotiate with the outlawed organization.

Solidarity founder Lech Walesa said Wednesday "the world is watching us" after police used force or threats to end strikes at four enterprises in Poland overnight.

Walesa told a rally of 2,000 striking workers at the Gdansk repair shipyard on the Baltic Sea that the nationwide wave of work stoppages that began Aug. 16 was in support of economic reform.

"We must save this country," Walesa said as the crowd cheered. "We must throw away all scum who drove the country into poverty."

State of emergency repeal is positive

SANTIAGO, Chile — The opposition said the lifting of a 15-year-old state of emergency yesterday was a positive development but will wait to see if the military government actually allows freedom of the press and assembly.

Military leader Gen. Augusto Pinochet approved Wednesday the lifting of the law curbing civil liberties that has helped curtail opposition activity since the violent 1973 coup that brought him to power.

The decision came less than a week before the ruling junta names a candidate, expected to be Pinochet, for a plebiscite that probably will be in October. Chileans will decide in the yes-or-no vote whether they want to keep a military leader in power for eight more years or return to civilian rule.

Government killing civilians in Burundi

NYABITARE, Rwanda — Refugees fleeing tribal massacres that have left at least 5,000 people dead in Burundi say their homeland has been turned into a killing field by government troops, slaughtering hundreds of people at a time with grenades, machine guns and bayonets.

The refugees, many of them suffering ghastly bullet, shrapnel and stab wounds, said Wednesday the Burundi troops had run wild in northern villages of the East African country.

At least 5,000 people have been killed since Aug. 14 in clashes between the majority Hutu tribe and the rival Tutsi tribe, which dominates the government and the army.

At makeshift refugee camps at the Rwandan border post of Nyabitare and nearby Kirarambogo, Hutu refugees from the killing, including women and children, arrived Wednesday with bullet, shrapnel and bayonet wounds.

They said the predominantly Tutsi soldiers were killing villagers indiscriminately with hand grenades, bayonets and machine guns.

Tensions increase between U.S., Panama

WASHINGTON — Tensions between the United States and Panama stood at higher levels today as charges and countercharges flew of intimidation and human rights violations in the Central American country.

Ambassador Juan Sosa, recognized by the United States as his nation's official representative but disowned by Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, planned to discuss today what he described as "human rights and security issues" in Panama.

Tensions between the nations increased with acts of harassment and violence against American officials and their families in Panama. For the first time Wednesday, the State Department linked Noriega's government to the acts.

FBI ordered to stop agent harassment

EL PASO, Texas — A federal judge has warned the FBI not to retaliate against Hispanic agents and has ordered the Justice Department to produce government documents needed by lawyers in the class action discrimination suit against the elite law enforcement agency.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton verbally ordered the FBI to end its administrative investigation of Special Agent Felipe Frocht of San Jose, Calif.

The bench order came after reports that Frocht was being investigated because of his testimony last week in the class action.

Frocht told attorneys he was being investigated for alleged misconduct as the result of his testimony in El Paso.

The judge's bench order early Wednesday came after Frocht complained of the alleged retaliatory investigation.

A total of 311 of the nation's 404 Hispanic FBI agents are taking part in the class action suit, charging discrimination on the basis of race, religion and national origin.

Villagers desperate to find arsonist

United Press International

JEFFERSON, N.H. — Residents of this small isolated New England hamlet are beginning to even suspect relatives of being the arsonist who has terrorized the town for nearly four months.

Since May 5, the elusive arsonist has torched 19 houses, barns and outhouses around the northern New Hampshire town, injuring three people and leaving 16 others homeless.

"First they were looking at strangers," Charles J. Jordan, regional editor of The Coos County Democrat in neighboring Lancaster, said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, many of the town's 800 residents began to sleep in shifts, or with a gun at their bedside.

"I've seen a lot of tired people coming in here," said Postmaster Gordon Savage, sitting alone in the tiny brick Post Office. "Everyone's saying the same thing: When are they going to catch him?"

But no arrests have been made and no new leads were reported Wednesday although a suspect reportedly had been interrogated at the state police barracks in Twin Mountain on Tuesday night.

Farmer and summer visitor, woodsman and journalist, no one has been left untouched by the situation.

The home of John Harrigan, editor of the Democrat, was struck Aug. 5.

Helen Merrill's home went up in flames three days later, destroying a chunk of North Country history. Merrill had collected and documented life dating back a century in the state's most northern region.

For Dominic Inferrera, who is moving from Bedford, Mass., to Jefferson, a June 14 fire leveled his future home and its contents: tables and chairs for a restaurant and beds and furniture for small cabins he planned to operate on a ridge overlooking the Presidential Range in the White Mountains.

"There has to be a reason, whether it's a vendetta or whatever," Inferrera said in the rain next to charred rubble that had been a three-story house.

Smith leads Olympic Team

DENVER — Charles Smith of Georgetown hit a 3-point play with 23 seconds left in overtime Wednesday night, helping the U.S. Olympic basketball team blunt rally by an NBA select squad for a 105-103 victory.

Smith, a point guard, scored 7 of his 20 points in overtime to lift the Olympians to their sixth victory in seven games against NBA players.

Jeff Hornacek of the Phoenix Suns scored 25 points, including 11 in the final 62 seconds to erase an 8-point deficit and force overtime. With the NBA trailing 91-88, Hornacek hit five straight free throws to cut the margin to 91-88 with 51 seconds to go.

When Danny Manning muffed the inbounds pass, Hornacek picked up the loose ball and sank a 3-pointer to tie the score with 46 seconds to go. Dan Majerle nailed a 25-footer with 14 seconds left to put the Olympians ahead 94-91, but Smith knocked Hornacek to the floor on a 3-point attempt at the buzzer.

No. 1 Graf crushes Sanchez

MAHWAH, N.J. — Top seed Steffi Graf, tuning up for next week's U.S. Open and a shot at the Grand Slam, needed only 44 minutes Wednesday to crush 16-year-old Arantxa Sanchez and reach the quarterfinals of the $20,000 United Jersey Bank Classic.

Graf of West Germany eliminated the Spanish teenager 6-2, 6-0 in a second-round match halted Tuesday after one game because of rain. Defending champion and No. 2 seed Martina Maleeva of Bulgaria fell in the second round to Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist, 7-5, 6-7 (4-7), 6-3.

In other second-round play at Ramapo College, third seed Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia downed France's Isabelle Demongeot 6-2, 6-2 and No. 4 Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union stopped South Africa's Elma Reinach 6-4, 6-0.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Spring, Texas, and Pearl City, Hawaii, defeated U.S. opponents Wednesday in first-round games of the Little League World Series.

The Texans used a three-run first inning and a four-run third to down Andover, Mass., 8-2. Skye Nakagawa delivered a two-run double in a three-run sixth to lift the Hawaiians to a 3-2 triumph over Tulsa, Okla.

Right-hander Craig Hickman paced Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, to a 5-1 victory over Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, in Wednesday's final first-round game.

In Thursday's semifinals, Tai Ping, Taiwan, faces Glace Bay and Spring, Texas, meets Pearl City, Hawaii.

Right-hander Jason Powell went the distance for Spring, allowing four hits and striking out 10 in a game postponed Tuesday. Andover used four pitchers, with starter Toby Guzowski taking the loss.

Tyson may fight Green again

NEW YORK — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson called Mitch Green a "punk" Wednesday, but said he will consider giving him a rematch in the ring following their street brawl in which Tyson suffered a fractured hand.

Tyson scuffled with Green about 5 a.m. EDT Tuesday outside a clothing store in Harlem. The barbital fracture in Tyson's right hand may push back his Oct. 8 title defense against Frank Bruno in London.

Green, who lost a decision to Tyson in May 1986, said he would like to fight the champion again. Tyson said that was possible, if Green wins a few fights and becomes a ranked contender.

"Green filed a criminal complaint against me as a cheap publicity stunt," Tyson said in a statement released by a spokesman.

Three sports agents indicted

Walters, two agents who were the targets of the investigation, signed college players from late 1984 through early 1987 using "an array of benefits." They included large amounts of cash, interest-free loans, cars, clothing, concert and airfare tickets, trips to New York City, hotel accommodations, use of limousines and trips to major entertainment events, prosecutors said.

The indictment said that when some athletes decided they no longer wanted to be represented by Walters and Bloom, the agents threatened to break their legs or other violence. The agents claimed the backing of Michael Franzese, an imprisoned reputed member of New York's Colombo crime family, the indictment said.

"They said they had partners from Los Angeles and Las Vegas, individuals who don't like to be messed with," Valukas said.

Walters, 58, of New York and Bloom, 25, of Sherman Oaks, Calif., were charged with racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and mail and wire fraud. If convicted, they could face up to 70 years in prison and fines totaling $2 million.

Indicted on charges of perjury and obstruction of justice is agent David Lueddeke, 37, of Calabasas, Calif., who allegedly made a $5,000 payment to Carter. Lueddeke, if convicted, faces up to 15 years in prison and fines of up to $750,000.

Carter, an All-America receiver at Ohio State in 1986, is charged in a two-count criminal complaint with mail fraud and obstruction of justice. He faces up to 10 years in prison and a $500,000 fine if convicted.

Valukas said Carter is believed to be the first athlete to be charged with criminal fraud as a result of accepting improper payments while playing in college.

"I understand the nature of the charges filed against me by the U.S. attorney's office," said Carter, who allegedly concealed the $5,000 payment from a federal grand jury. "I am cooperating fully with that office and can only say that I regret my past mistakes."

In the indictment, the 43 other professional athletes admit they signed professional management contracts while in college, then falsely told their schools they were eligible for scholarships.

From Kingdome to Metrodome, to Hoosier Dome and beyond, the NFL's veteran quarterbacks are looking over their shoulder pads.

Experienced passers are facing the test of their professional lives and some of the league's most proven performers are bearing the onrushing cleats of all those young dudes. Even San Francisco's Joe Montana, who won his first passing title in 1987 and is praised by Coach Bill Walsh as "undoubtedly one of the great all-time NFL performers," is being pushed.

Other teams with heated quarterback competition include Seattle, Minnesota, Indianapolis, Kansas City and New England.

Steve Young, 26, acquired from Tampa Bay before the 1987 season, replaced an ineffective Montana in the 36-24 playoff loss to Minnesota and has sparkled again in exhibition games. Montana, 32, enters his 10th NFL season determined to keep the starting job he won late in 1980. Young's quick feet and natural running skills make him an intriguing alternative when the 49ers face a powerful pass rush.

"The last thing we want is a quarterback controversy because the quarterback does need total confidence in his team and his role," Walsh says. "As soon as this is compromised, he loses some of the confidence and begins to worry how we will play rather than just play well."

Montana is still No. 1 entering San Francisco's Sept. 4 opener in

Greyhound park blazing new ground

CASSELBERRY — The Seminole Greyhound Park will record a first in the greyhound industry in Florida on Sept. 3, when it will offer fans a chance to see and wager on the $125,000 Race of Champions at Southland Park in West Memphis Arkansas.

"This is pending final ap. oval from the state," announced Seminole General Manager Tom Blaney. "But I do not anticipate a problem."

Seminole has been simulcasting its Wednesday matinees to fans in West Memphis all season. Wagering pools at each end are separate. Of particular interest in this year's Race of Champions is the entry of two greyhounds from Seminole, AJG Zorro (R.O. Collins Kennel) and Cushley's Foxy (Midnight Blue Kennel) will participate in qualifying which starts August 22nd.

In a recent Grade A race at West Memphis, Zorro and Foxy finished 1-2 in the same race, beating Derby Lane's highly touted Uncle Albert in the process.

The top 48 Greyhounds which broke their maiden this summer at the Seminole Greyhound Park will launch first round competition in the $20,000 Future Champions, commonly referred to as the puppy stakes.

Eliminations will cut to 32, then 16 and finally eight for the Sept. 10 championship.

One of the top favorites is Only A Shadow, an eight time winner from the Young-Aiesta Kennel. Other top entries include Cliff Freeman's CR's Blackplayer, J.C.K. Kennel's Bobby's Angel, Florando Kennel's Captain Ahab, Robert Mendheim's You Be The Judge, D.E. Rowe's Brucata, Jack Kuhn's Flashback and Thomy Lee's Massey's Pride.

Sanford area good for tripletail

By JIM SHUPE
Herald fishing writer

As mentioned in last week's column, the tripletail is one of Florida's under-rated gamefish, and anglers in the Sanford area are fortunate to have some of the best tripletail fishing in the state at their doorstep.

The busy line of Port Canaveral is home to the state's largest tripletail. In fact, the world record, a whopping 31 pounds, 4 ounce monster, was caught at Port Canaveral.

Featuring a line of thirteen buoys, the ocean entrance to Port Canaveral resembles a condominium complex to the structure-loving tripletail. The abundance of structure, coupled with a generous food supply, draws tripletail to the buoy line by the thousands.

A single buoy, number 13, is the western-most marker. Markers 9 and 10 form the western end of the buoy line, and buoys 3 and 4 make up the western end—some 2½ miles offshore. For some reason, the tripletail seem to prefer the markers at the mouth of the Port. It should be noted, however, that tripletail can be caught from under virtually all of the buoys.

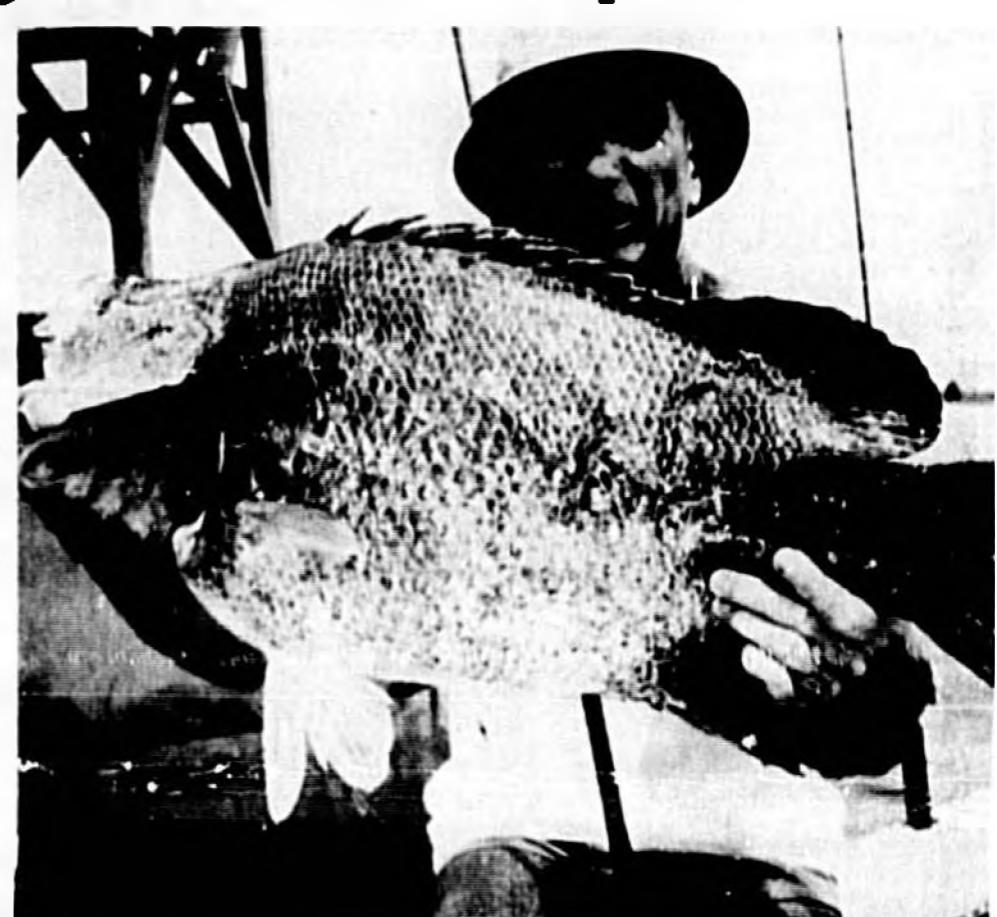

Tripletail will hit bare jigs, but they prefer bait when possible. Live shrimp is a tripletail delicacy, but they will also eat crabs, finger mullet, cut bait and squid. My favorite offering is a bare halfounce jig head tipped with a live shrimp hooked up through the bottom of the head area, avoiding the heart (the dark spot). The wisest of tripletail cannot resist this combination, fished below a marker buoy.

Fishing techniques for buoy line tripletail are fairly standard. The vast majority of anglers prefer to shift their outboards into neutral and drift the markers while making their casts. This method has several advantages. First of all, it is quick and requires no extra effort on the part of the angler. Fishermen can rapidly cover several marker buoys in a short span of time and quickly catch the "easy" fish.

Another advantage of drifting with the motor in neutral is that the fishermen can simply put the motor in reverse and literally pull a hooked tripletail away from the buoy chain.

Once the hook is set on a tripletail, it is important to brace yourself. Tripletail do not take being hooked lightly, and they are a very powerful fish. If a tripletail and a jack crevalle of similar size were tied tail-to-tail, the jack would wind up being towed backwards all over the

Jim Shupe holds up a 23-pound tripletail he landed. The Sanford area is fortunate to have some of the best tripletail fishing there is. The buoy line of Port Canaveral

Blue Jays begin to rebuild

By RICHARD L. SHOCK
UPI sports writer

The Toronto Blue Jays face some tough decisions, and from all appearances they have already fluffed the first one.

A year ago at this time Toronto looked a cinch to capture the American League East title for the second time in three seasons. They were poised to take that step to greatness with the addition of one more pitcher at the right time.

The pitching help came too late, though. And how were the Blue Jays to know the Detroit Tigers would not die? How could they foresee key injuries to shortstop Tony Fernandez and catcher Ernie Whitt? How could they know seven straight losses would drop them behind the Tigers in the last week of the season?

Now Toronto fights to stay at .500, flip-flopping between fourth and fifth with Milwaukee while awaiting decisions on Manager Jim Williams and key players George Bell, Jesse Barfield and Dave Stieb. The situation may require all of General Manager Pat Gillick's wisdom and patience.

Do you re-assign Williams after the season? Firing him is almost out of the question. It is not the Blue Jays' way.

Replacing Williams would tell the players they have won their battle to fire a manager for whom they have little use. It would be like letting the animals run the farm, forcing Williams' successor to get the players to like him.

Keeping Williams as manager would make the front office get rid of his handful of malcontents. This is not easy to do when general managers around the league know you're conducting a fire sale. They become only too willing to give less than equal value in return.

It is to the organization's credit it refused to remove Williams when Bell's problems with his manager resulted in a dugout episode. But Toronto then made a fundamental mistake. It should at that point have either given Williams a contract extension through 1989 or a two-year pact.

"This lets the players know exactly where management stands and where they stand," an inside source said during a casual discussion of the Blue Jays' disintegration. "At the same time, you tell the manager that you are backing him now and he has two years to get things together. Look, you can always buy out the second year of his contract if things don't work out. How many times have you seen somebody eat a year on a salary?"

It appears the Jays will try to have it both ways. By not adding to Williams' contract, they are in effect saying he won't be managing the Blue Jays next season. It is also likely Toronto will move some of its disenchanted veterans, if only to let them know who's calling the shots.

Jesse Barfield looks at the top of the list. He is a premier defensive outfielder who still commands value even though he hasn't hit effectively for nearly a year and a half. It is possible a change of scenery or some protection for him in the batting order will enable him to rebound.

Bell is a different question. There's no question Toronto mishandled the idea of shifting him from left field to a designated hitter role. His big salary makes peddling him difficult, though.

"Doug is our starting quarterback," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs says flatly. "That has been determined. He started training camp that way and he still is."

Williams, an erratic passer in Tampa before joining the United States Football League in 1983, may be difficult to dislodge after throwing four touchdown passes against Denver during the 42-10 Super Bowl rout.

"There's no quarterback controversy here," says Williams, at 33 six years older than Schroeder. "The only controversy I know about is who's going to be No. 2. We knew who No. 1 was when we got to camp. Everything was settled a long time ago."

In Seattle, Dave Krieg continues to accumulate numbers, if not respect. Despite a 44-27 record as a starter and 121 touchdown passes since 1983, Krieg can lack consistency. Jeff Kemp and Kelly Stouffer are Orel Hershiser went for his 18th victory Wednesday and had a shot as he threw shutout ball for six innings. But the Mets rallied for two runs and Hershiser got no help from his offense in a 2-1 loss.

Mets trim Dodgers, 2-1

United Press International

If there is one positive for the Dodgers, who were just swept by the Mets and have lost eight of nine against them this season, it's that they're moving closer to a home victory over New York.

And with both teams in first place, and a possible meeting in the League Championship series in October, Los Angeles has to grasp anything positive.

The Dodgers turned to their top pitcher Wednesday night and he "couldn't throw the ball any better" and the Mets still won, completing a season sweep of the six games at Dodger Stadium.

After getting silenced by Dwight Gooden 7-1 Monday and by David Cone 5-1 Tuesday, Los Angeles was quieted by a trio of hurlers Wednesday night in a 2-1 setback.

"We were fortunate to go out and win all three games," New York's Kevin McReynolds said. "All the credit has to go to the pitching staff."

"We had our chances to score and we didn't," Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda said. "How can you win?"

Orel Hershiser, a 17-game winner bidding for the Cy Young Award, hadn't faced the Mets this season — certainly a good sign for the Dodgers.

"That probably was the best I've seen him throw since I was a rookie as far as movement on the ball," McReynolds said.

Hershiser had thrown 16 consecutive scoreless innings, including the first seven Wednesday. New York had managed only four singles and the right-hander felt "I couldn't throw the ball any better. If the ball (Mookie) Wilson hit had been caught they wouldn't have scored any runs."

With the Mets trailing 1-0, Wilson opened the eighth with a fly ball to deep right field that Mike Marshall caught up with, only to let it glance off his glove for what was scored a triple.

"I thought I should have had

Hershiser, perhaps rattled, walked Wally Backman on a full-count delivery and Keith Hernandez, batting .464 against Hershiser entering the game, delivered a run-scoring single to right with Backman taking third. One out later, McReynolds hit a sacrifice fly and the Mets had their sweep.

Ironically, Marshall had ripped a liner over the head of center fielder Wilson, who initially broke in for the ball, in the fourth for an RBI double.

Bob Ojeda hurled the first six innings. Terry Leach, 6-1, worked in and out trouble in the seventh and Roger McDowell finished for his 14th save.

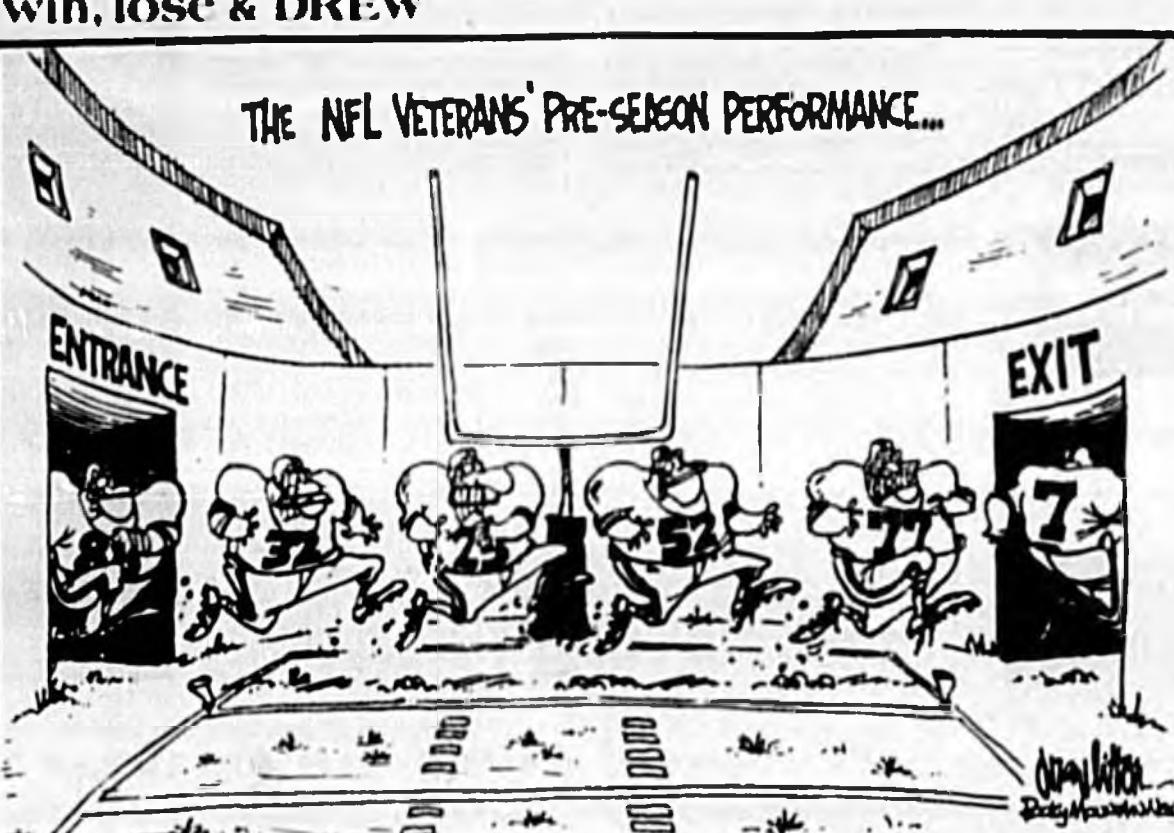

The trio held Los Angeles to seven hits while Hershiser, 17-8, did the same to New York in his ninth complete game.

"We just haven't played our best against the Mets," Hershiser said. "When you don't play well and don't execute the fundamentals, you lose."

Yankees rally to down A's, 7-6

United Press International

After battling owner George Steinbrenner in a war of words, the New York Yankees have turned their aggression toward the American League East race.

Wednesday afternoon against the Oakland Athletics, the Yankees produced their most significant rally of the season, scoring five runs in the bottom of the ninth inning for a 7-6 victory.

Finally, New York is riding an emotional high, and pulled within four games of first-place Detroit. Boston is two games behind the Tigers.

Sunday, Don Mattingly spoke out against the Boss, and after losing their next game, the Yankees scored two clutch victories over Oakland. Several of Mattingly's teammates supported him the following day.

Tuesday, Mattingly singled home the winning run in the ninth after New York blew a 4-0 lead in the top of the inning.

Wednesday, the Yankees won for the second time in 48 games when trailing after eight innings, and they began their comeback against the major leagues' saves leader Dennis Eckersley.

"That was a win we needed," said Ken Phelps, who homered to pull the Yankees to 0-5. "We've obviously got a little momentum after these two wins. We ought to be able to play this way all the time."

Eckersley, who was seeking his 36th save, entered in the eighth inning, but yielded five runs and was knocked out after allowing four consecutive hits to start the ninth. He blew a save for only the sixth time in 41 opportunities.

White Sox 6, Blue Jays 4

At Toronto, Carlton Fisk hit a two-run double to ignite a three-run Chicago first inning, helping the White Sox snap a six-game losing streak. Bill Long, 5-9, scattered five hits over five innings to gain the victory. Bobby Thigpen recorded three outs for his 27th save. Jeff Mullan fell to 5-2.

Indians 7, Brewers 2

At Milwaukee, Joe Carter went 3 for 4 and drove in three runs to pace the Indians. Carter had an ninth consecutive complete game and Mike Stanley keyed Texas' four-run eighth inning with a two-run double. Witt, 6-8, retired 19 of the last 20 men he faced and has won six of nine games since his recall from the minors July 7.

out in the 12th, lifting the Orioles to their first double-header sweep since Sept. 24, 1984. Pinch hitter Larry Sheets delivered a two-run home run with two out in the ninth inning of the opener. Orsulak, who had three hits in the game, delivered his winning fly to left, spoiling Mike Moore's 13-strikeout nine-inning effort. Moore has struck out 49 in his last 33 2/3 innings.

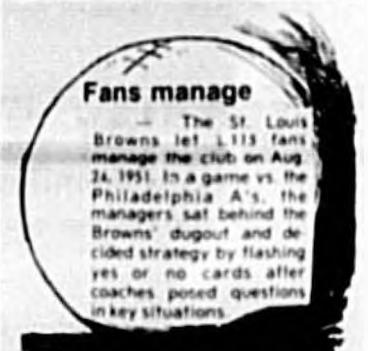

Angels 4, Red Sox 3

At Minneapolis, Dan Gladden and Kirby Puckett hit home runs to cap a six-run second inning outburst and help the Twins to an 11-1 season series advantage over the Tigers. Brewers acquire Young

United Press International

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Brewers acquired outfielder Mike Young from the Philadelphia Phillies Wednesday for minor league pitcher Alex Madrid.

Young, 28, batted a disappointing .226 with one home run and 14 RBI in 75 games this season with Philadelphia. He was acquired by the Phillies March 21 from Baltimore for infielder Rick Schu and outfielders Jeff Stone and Keith Hughes.

The Brewers, who have a surplus of outfielders, will have to make a roster move when Young reports.

In addition to starters Robin Yount, Rob Deer and Jeffrey Leonard, the Brewers also have Jim Adduci and Mike Felder on the major league roster. The Brewers also have Glenn Braggs, who is out for the remainder of the season with a shoulder injury, and promising minor-leaguer Darryl Hamilton, who was called up from Denver when Leonard and Deer were hurt.

General Manager Harry Dalton said he is unconcerned about an over-crowded outfield.

"We've seen him in the American League with Baltimore. He's a switch-hitter with power and he'll deepen our outfield for us," said Dalton of Young. "But you're never too deep."

Dalton said he will meet with Brewers Manager Tom Trebilhorn to discuss possible roster moves.

The Brewers are hoping Young returns to the form he displayed with the Orioles in 1985, his first full season in the major leagues, when he hit .273 with 28 home runs and 81 RBI.

Nicklaus must decide on course of career

By MIKE RADIN
UPI Sports Writer

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Bobby Jones conquered all he thought was necessary in the world of golf and retired from competition at the ripe old age of 28.

It isn't that easy for Jack Nicklaus, who has conquered more worlds than any golfer in history.

"All athletes find themselves in this position," Nicklaus said. "And it's not much fun."

In five months, Nicklaus will celebrate his 49th birthday. Along with that milestone must come a decision. He admits the decision must be made and as yet he is not sure what he will do.

"But I've got to decide," Nicklaus said. "Basically, the decision must be whether I am going to play or I'm not going to play."

When Nicklaus leaves the first tee at the Augusta National Golf Club each April, a huge crowd goes with him. By now, it would seem, every golf fan in the country should have a Jack Nicklaus autograph. He has signed his name countless thousands of times.

And yet men, women and children gather in flocks whenever he walks off the 18th green, anxious to add his signature to their collection. That attraction must be factored into Nicklaus' upcoming decision.

"One of the reasons I con-

Jack Nicklaus, close to 49-years-old, soon will decide whether or not to retire from professional golf.

tinue to play is that I owe it to the game of golf," he says. "But I owe it to myself to be able to play well."

Over the past few years, Nicklaus has tried to reduce his competitive schedule to the bare minimum. At times he has suggested very soon he might be looked upon as a "ceremonial" golfer. At other times, he has said he is already a ceremonial golfer.

And yet at the recent International tournament in Colorado, on a course he designed, Nicklaus came very close to being one of the 18 players who competed on the final day.

Only an errant tee shot on the 17th hole of the Castle Pines Golf Club prevented him from having a legitimate shot at capturing his 72nd PGA tour event.

Such spurts of excellence tantalize Nicklaus and his fans.

"I think the main reason I keep playing is that it is fun," he said. "Golf has always been fun for me and it still is. I know I can't play the way Jack Nicklaus did 10 years ago. And I don't have the time to devote to practice so that I can play at my best with some regularity. But I'm not playing so poorly that I shouldn't be out here. I'm somewhere in the middle. And I've never been in the middle before."

Two factors have caused Nicklaus to face the critical decision he must make. One has to do with his upcoming eligibility for the PGA senior tour and all the requests he will receive from sponsors around the country hoping he will play in their tournaments.

And another is his schedule for 1989, which is far larger than Nicklaus would like.

"I've already set my schedule for next year so that is not the question," Nicklaus said. "It's the year after that when I will have to decide about."

"I'm still eligible to play in the majors next year, of course, and I plan to play in those. I've designed a course in New Orleans and they are going to move the tour stop to that course next year. They wanted me to come down and play in that tournament and I told them I would. I'm looking forward to it, in fact."

Lendl drubs Hlasek, 6-2, 6-3

United Press International

JERICHO, N.Y. — Ivan Lendl, preparing for his defense of his U.S. Open title next week, Wednesday night beat Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland 6-2, 6-3 to advance to the second round of the $190,000 Norstar Hamlet Challenge Cup.

"If I'm not ready now I'll never be," said Lendl, who has won the last three U.S. Opens.

The Czechoslovakian unleashed a dozen aces and kept Hlasek off balance with deep crosscourt ground strokes, winning in 61 minutes.

"I'm playing here to get good match play on the same type court we'll have at the Open," Lendl said. "I'm going into the Open now hoping to win it and deserve to keep my No. 1 ranking."

A first-round night match between No. 4 Yannick Noah of France and Slobodan Zivojinovic of Yugoslavia was postponed because of rain with Noah leading 6-3, 6-7 (2-7), 2-1. The match will be completed Thursday. Noah won the first set with a break in the sixth game, the only break so far in the match.

Earlier, Amos Mansdorf of Israel beat Aaron Krickstein of Grosse Pointe, Mich., 7-5, 4-6, 6-1, in a match halted because of rain Tuesday night with Mansdorf ahead 6-5.

"It's the first time since Wimbledon I have played well," said Mansdorf, who won the third set after taking a 4-0 lead.

"I was hurt, a pulled stomach muscle, and didn't start playing again until this month."

Krickstein was a late replacement in the draw for No. 5 seed Andres Gomez of Ecuador. Gomez said he withdrew for personal reasons.

Lendl has been working with his coach, Tony Roche, for more than a week.

"Ivan is in good condition physically and moving better now than ever," said Roche, who arrived from Australia 10 days ago. "He's been working hard, doing our daily drills each morning for three or more hours and then playing sets with some of the guys in the afternoons. If he continues to serve as well as he is now, hopefully he can win the Open again."

Lendl led 5-1 in the first set after holding serve in the fourth game from 15-40. Two aces helped him erase the threat.

Ahead a service break at 4-3 in the second set, Lendl had to erase a 0-30 deficit to hold serve. He then broke in the ninth game to end the match.

Lendl next plays Anders Jarryd. The No. 8 seed from Sweden advanced Tuesday night with a victory over compatriot Peter Lundgren. Mansdorf will play Thursday's winner between No. 3 Boris Becker of West Germany and Jimmy Arias of Jericho.

Find cause of eczema through examination

DEAR DR. GOTTL: My wife has had bad eczema of her entire body for 12 years. Her skin is badly damaged from the itching. She is reluctant to take prednisone because of the side effects, but the doctors offer no otherwise.

DEAR READER: Eczema is a type of dermatitis marked by inflammation, redness, oozing, crusting scaling and itchiness of the skin. Some eczema is due to allergies or hypersensitivity to certain substances, such as chemicals, animal dander, medications and industrial solvents. Sunlight can trigger eczema.

Other patients appear to have endogenous eczema, a dermatitis caused by factors within the body. Often the cause is obscure, as in atopic dermatitis, a humeral dermatitis and seborrheic dermatitis, various similar skin eruptions. There may be an inherited or genetic predisposition.

Because the cause of the disease may be unknown, often all doctors can do is try to treat the symptoms. Oils, lotions and cortisone-containing medicines may be useful. Patients who are reacting to a variety of drugs can develop skin lesions identical to eczema. Any medicine has the potential for causing dermatitis in a different individual. In addition, some diseases, such as urticaria, erosion of metabolism and nutritional deficiency, are associated with eczema.

To get at the cause of her skin irritation, your wife needs a thorough medical evaluation to identify any disease, compound pollutant or drug that could be causing her eczema. An allergy investigation and scrupulous environmental history may be necessary. Before assuming that her eczema is atopathic without obvious cause, your wife should be tested to see if she is reacting to a specific factor. Prednisone, a form of cortisone, may be appropriate to use in her case as a temporary measure.

until the basis of her skin reaction can be discovered.

For more information, I'm sending you Dr. Gott's new Health Report, SKIN, ECZEMA AND PSORIASIS. Other readers who want a copy of the Health Report should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101.
