MOSHI, Tanganyika, P. — The CHAGGA tribes of African blacks are building a school which will be open to whites and to Indians from the Chagga live on the southern slopes of 19,545-foot Mt. Kilimanjaro highest in Africa. They've grown rich in the last few years because their coffee crops have brought high prices. The Chagga number all told about 365,000. In 1922 they organized a cooperative society called the "Kilimanjaro Native Cooperative Union, Ltd." They were helped in doing so by Roman Catholic missionaries and district government officers. The union has about 35,000 members. Last year the Chagga's 6,000 tons of high grade "Arabica" coffee brought them more than 10 million dollars. The coffee is marketed cooperatively. Three years ago the Kilimanjaro coop group built a four-story community center — with its own all-ages public library, small hotel, shops and roof-top restaurant. The center, built at a cost of $200,000 — paid from cooperative profits — was itself a unique venture. It is used by all races. Last March the coop announced plans to build a new commercial school as an addition to the center. It will cost $140,000 and will also be paid from coop profits. Missionary schools have, in the same fashion, been open to all regardless of color of skin, but the Mushi School is said to be the first built and paid for by blacks. Teachers will be brought from England. The school will handle 100 students. The Chagga are one of the most advanced of African tribes.

OMAHA, Neb. — I saw him standing by the rail on the right. We blew the whistle and sounded the bell. The child just stood there. I knew there was just one thing to do. And in firm grip I took Gibson of Falls City, Neb. — dropped from the cab of his locomotive and scrambled ahead to the footboard as the train slowed down. Leaping to the right of the rail Gibson braked the child under his arm and the two pulled to safety. Engineer Ray Exler brought the train to a halt on feet beyond. The rescue occurred on the Missouri Pacific tracks in South Omaha last night.

Fat Man Falls In Love: Girl Wants Slimming
ATLANTA, Ga. — Marvin "Fat Sam" Samples, a parking lot attendant, fell in love — all 307 pounds of him. The object of his affections was attractive but adamant. One of 127 pounds, she said, and will see Samples did just that, going on a rigid diet and getting his weight down to 145 in only 8 months. Samples, a neatly brunette, said yes and they were married. The bridegroom didn't stop. He kept on dieting and now weighs a mere 110. How did he do it? "I just ate steak and tomatoes," Samples said. "I had steak all the black coffee I wanted. I was terribly hungry the first few weeks but then I got accustomed to eating less and it didn't bother me." He used to wear size 50 pants. Now he wears 37's. His shirt size was 28 and now it's 15. Samples got rid of 192 pounds skin by climbing a pole and doing gym exercises on a filling station grease rack. A newborn Indian elephant is about three feet in height.

Commission

(Continued From Page One) spokesman for a committee representing retail gasoline dealers, made a further protest against C. M. Rytche, who is accused of illegally retelling gasoline from property which he leases from the city for the purpose of operating a motor transport business. Rytche, present at the meeting, said it was unnecessary for the neighboring dealers but he submitted records showing he was only selling trucks owned or leased by himself. Mayor Higginbotham appointed Strickland and Charlie Brown to meet with Rytche and work out a satisfactory solution to the problem.

The frame center portion of the Anchor Restaurant, owned by the city, will be moved to Ft. Mellon Park to be utilized as a recreational facility, according to Commission designation.

The commission authorized City Manager Warren E. Knowles to advertise for bids to purchase a carload of sewer pipe, a billing machine for the water department and a budgetary accounting machine for use in the office of the city clerk.

A bill for $21,122.56 for services rendered by Robert M. Angus and Associates, consulting engineers to the city, was approved. Payment will be made when the City approved bonds are sold.

E. H. Holcomb Co., Clearwater was approved to handle the installation of approximately 2,500 feet of sewer line east of Summerlin Ave. extending from the railroad south to 24th St.

Late Ex-Governor

(Continued From Page One) ing the way to the embarrasment which had befallen the senator. Hoffman also was quoted in the affidavit as saying another unnamed state official blackmailed him of $100,000 after learning of the embezzlement. The affidavit also dealt the affidavit said.

Mrs. Leonard told a reporter she has a good idea who the "elder candidate" is, but would not identify him because she didn't want to bring "grief" to his family. The blackmailing official, she said, "I'd tell you if I knew." Richman said his office has begun an investigation to determine the identity of the two men.

The affidavit told of Hoffman's making commitments "which I temporarily covered by drawing from inactive accounts at the South Amboy Trust Company." Hoffman, with the high cost of Washington living, the maintenance of two homes, and what I can only label as the expensive nature of a newswoman's things, instead of bettering, got worse."

At the news conference yesterday, Harry Green of Little Silver, Hoffman's attorney, said he had seen the charges brought against the former governor. Green said the charges were shown to him the day Hoffman died and that a tentative agreement had been reached to have the late governor submit a letter of resignation rather than face a hearing on the charges.

Meyer, Green and Richman told how Mrs. Leonard visited Hoffman at his Little Silver home last Wednesday and showed him the letter from his father. She later showed the letter to an of-

Disaster Averted

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Cowboys and horses were racing across the TV screen and Kathleen Ford, 4, was watching them. Her younger brother preferred to throw things around. Exasperated, Kathleen warned.

"If you don't stop, that you'll break the television, and all those little horses will fall out on the rug."

Green said it took several hours Thursday to convince Mrs. Leonard and the contents of the letter should be made known to Meyer. When she consented, Green called the governor and he began an immediate investigation.

Mrs. Leonard prepared the affidavit, recalling essentials of the letter. The affidavit was turned over to Richman yesterday.

State Treasurer Archibald Alexander said his records showed $1,200,000 in state funds had been on deposit in the South Amboy Trust Co. for many years. He said $900,000 of the funds is covered by securities deposited in other banks.

Meyer and Banking and Insurance Commissioner Warren Gaffney said depositors of the bank would lose nothing because of the Hoffman delinquency.

France's Crisis Spells Trouble For Defense Treaty

PARIS (AP) — France's current political crisis spelled new trouble today for the long delayed European army treaty. The controversial pact in turn posed a major problem for Premier Designate Pierre Mendes-France, whose criticism of government policy in Indochina was a major factor in Laniel's fall, accepted the mandate to form a cabinet yesterday. He is slated to seek confirmation before the Assembly tomorrow or Thursday.

His chances were considered slight. A big factor is the bad split in the Chamber over the scheduling of debate on ratification of the European Defense Community (EDC) pact, which has been languishing in committee for more than two years. Any successor to Laniel needs the support of both the Catholic Popular Republican Movement (MRP) and the Union for Republican Action (URAS). The latter made up of followers of Gen. De Gaulle. The MRP wants the army treaty debated as quickly as possible, the Gaullists bitterly any attempt to force debate. The new Premier will have to conjure up some formula to reconcile these views. Mendes-France's public statements have been more against than for the European army, a position which will probably cost him support among the MRP bloc.

THE EARTH, traveling in a smaller orbit than that of Mars, will catch up with the other planet in their race around the sun on June 24. At that time, the planets will be in opposition, as illustrated on the diagram, at bottom, supplied by the American Museum-Natural History, New York. The two planets will then be in a straight line with the sun, with Mars on the right side of the sun and the earth on the left side. Because of the periods in which the two planets revolve around the sun—Earth one year, Mars slightly less than two years—opportunities occur at average intervals of about two years and two months. However, since the orbits of Mars and Earth are not circular, but elliptical, opposition distances between the two planets may vary slightly less than 35 million miles to over 45 million miles. Of all our neighbors in space, Mars, as shown on top, most closely resembles the earth in climate and topography which might allow for a few familiar life forms. It is characterized by the existence of polar "caps" which wax and wane with the seasons. An extremely thin atmosphere envelops the planets, but it is so rarefied that humans could take no more than a few breaths before dying. (Central Press)

Case Of Puerto Rican Gunmen, Who Shot Solons, Goes To Jury

WASHINGTON—The case of the four Puerto Ricans who would lead five congressmen in a wild shooting spree in the House of Representatives last March went to the jury at noon (EDT) today. Federal Judge Alexander Holtzoff instructed the seven men and five women to bring in separate verdicts on each of 10 counts of assault against each of the four defendants—a total of 40 verdicts. Earlier, U.S. Attorney Leo A. Rover told the jury the evidence clearly indicates a verdict of guilty. He termed the shootings "hideous, despicable, ruthless, sadistic." Chief defense counsel F. Joseph Donohue, former commissioner of the state of New York, asked the jury to acquit the four defendants on the first five counts of assault with intent to kill. This offense carries a maximum possible penalty of 30 years for each of the four Puerto Ricans. The defendants sat quietly and without a show of emotion during the final day's proceedings. Only once—when the judge told the jury that the question of motive is immaterial—did the four give any sign of interest. Rafael Cancel Miranda, 25, perked up and began speaking quickly to 34-year-old Lolita Leon. Their colleagues—Andrés Figueroa Cordeiro, 28, and Irving Flores Rodriguez, 28—leaned forward. The four contended in their testimony they did not mean to harm or kill any congressmen. They said they only wanted to stage a patriotic demonstration to dramatize the cause of Puerto Rican independence.

Additional Bond Issue Planned By Body City Plans To Pick Up Portions Of Improvement Program Dropped

City Manager Warren Knowles today said that the City Commission intends to vote an additional sewer and water bond issue of $203,510 to replace parts of the original program dropped because of a lack of funds. Sanford's $1,175,000 bond issue was thought adequate to complete the program when the commission passed it last month. However, constantly higher bids on the work took the plan off its financial schedule. In an attempt to get the sewer and water project moving towards early completion, the City Commission, with the aid of Robert M. Amick, Jacksonville consulting engineer, cut portions of the original program. According to the city manager, the program that was cut were mostly lines that would serve only one or two houses on a block. The cut contracts affected the east and south sides of Sanford.

Informants Report Parachute Troops Land In Guatemala

PANAMA—Reports circulated here today that a dozen parachute troops landed on the Pacific coast of Guatemala a few hours after Col. Carlos Enrique Diaz, the army chief of staff, tried to leave by plane for Washington. This was the latest and to come from Guatemala, where the leftist government has clamped down a tight censorship on the grounds that the regime is threatened by a revolution. Private sources yesterday said the army had submitted a questionnaire to President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman regarding Communist influences in the country. Arbenz asked him to break ties with the Reds, and demanded an answer by the end of the week. The Guatemalan radio denied last night in a series of broadcast that the army had submitted any ultimatum to the president. Informants here said the parachute troops were dropped on the Pacific coast on Monday night. Other reports said the army's chief of staff, Colonel Enrique Diaz, was expected to return to his office this afternoon. Jose Alfredo Palmieri, anti-Communist editor of the newspaper El Espectador, and an outspoken critic of Arbenz's regime, has sought refuge in the Salvadoran embassy in Guatemala. His brother, Guillermo Palmieri, has been a member of the already pro-government Guatemalan Revolutionary party, although he was ousted yesterday as chief of the government Tourist Bureau.

Bullet Just Misses Heart Of Boy, 17

TAMPA—Tony Vargas, 17, got a bullet within an inch of his heart but lived to tell about it. Vargas was shot yesterday while sitting on a street bench. His brother, William, and Louis Torres, both 15, were shooting a .22 caliber rifle and one bullet apparently struck an unidentifiable object, came out and hit Tony in the chest. Driven to a hospital he was taken into the emergency room and later was reported in good condition. Doctors said he should have no ill effects.

Unlocked Pentagon Windows Cause Concern

WASHINGTON—Somebody left some windows unlocked in the Pentagon. That was 60 days ago, memoranda and 1,000 words ago. It seems that on the night of 14 April, at about 2000 hours, G-2 agents found a couple of windows unlocked. That means about 8 p. m. on April 14, G-3 is Army intelligence normally concerned with ferreting out information on a foreign power or fanning foreign agents. The Pentagon has 7,600 windows. The unlocked ones were in the suite of offices used by H. Struve Hensel, assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs. Hensel's "international security" is high-level stuff, including such things as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. He said the night of 14 April, between 2000 and 2100 hours, three more unlocked windows. These were in the press room. By May 3 (for 3 May) a memo had been issued in the proper authorities, starting out, "Subject: Security inspection of Pentagon Perimeter," and discussing the matter of the unlocked windows. Instructions were issued to "notify occupants that it is a violation of building security regulations to unlock or open any windows." "Who unlocked 'em?" Suspicion pointed first at the corps of window washers. But on 13 May the foreman of the unit, a sergeant named "Buddy" Williams, was interviewed. He said: "Unlocked windows." He said the window incident of 14 April couldn't have been his men, because they did a wash down windows until 15 April. Moreover, his washers reported that a clerk in Hensel's office wanted fresh air. The interoffice communications rolled on and on—and on—the Pentagon building security officer; to and from Headquarters, Military District of Washington, office of the Army Headquarters, Commandant; another one from the Administrative Facilities Planning Branch, office of the Secretary of Defense. Finally the file closed up on a 1,000-word total. The last page locks up the case—and presumably the windows. This one is a broad sheet, aimed at all occupants of the Pentagon; the subject open windows; the order: keep 'em closed. The reason: it upsets the air conditioning system—and also upsets the G-2 agents and security officials.

Joan Foster, Bride

By Alice Ross Colver

JOAN'S answer to Betty's question about teachers was based on the memories of her father's experience and now on Todd's prospects.

"In the public school system they're supposed to have regular raises—yes, but it's always a fight to get them established and when they finally do, the salary schedule is never commensurate with the cost of living. And teachers are allowed days off for illness, of course. And they do have a pension system, in the public schools, at least, because Mother couldn't have carried on without Dad's money. But something is awfully wrong or why are teachers all over the country always struggling to get more money? They are listed as the poorest paid professional people in the country excepting nurses. She answered her question herself. The trouble is that they have too low a starting salary. And by the time they have wangled adjustments from the local boards, that cost of living has gone up again and they are still behind. Most of the teachers I know have to hold down two jobs to make ends meet. The men work at night, a lot of them, and of course all summer, too. When you consider how much time and money it takes to qualify for teaching, everything seems okay."

"How is it where Todd will teach?"
"We won't really know till he gets there. All we are sure of is that there is no pension system, though I believe he'll get a Social Security card. But what good does that do for just one year? I mean—it he transfers later to where there is a pension system, he won't get Social Security too. It makes us stop and stare old age in the face. I tell you, I don't think that's a thing to want. Can you imagine yourself old, Betty? Can you imagine yourself old, Betty? And how hard it is—anyway you work it—to save money for that time. Especially out of only twenty-three hundred dollars."

Betty nodded slowly.
"There's no tenure there, either," Joan went on. "In the public schools, after three years of teaching, you get tenure if you've been satisfactory. That's security, anyway. But talking about the public schools is a waste of time, because Todd is not qualified to teach there. He is not really qualified to teach in this private school, either, in the lower grades, but it was the only opening."

"Yes, you told me. But don't you think after he's had a little experience there that he can get into the college field where he really wants to be?"
Joan shrugged. "I don't know. I don't believe so. And that's what has me worried. I don't see how teaching, writing and arithmetic is going to be of any help to Todd in landing a job to teach college students advanced German. The colleges just won't count grade experience as worth anything. The two are just different worlds with different requirements for each. They aren't reciprocal in any way. I see what you mean."

"What if more Todd has to complete his Ph.D. in order to get a decent college position. He'll be only a little more than half through by the end of this summer. And where's the money coming from for him to go on? If we should happen to have a baby soon, Todd would be stuck. He couldn't pay for a baby and study for his Ph.D., too. Well, he might, perhaps, if we stayed where we are, but—"

"But you want your own place, I know."
"Yes," Joan said. "I do. Things are pretty good right now, Betty. They've worked out better than I thought they would. But—well—you never know how long it will last. Besides, if we had a baby while we were in that apartment, where in the world would we put it? After it was a year old, I mean. In the kitchen sink, I guess."

"Anyway, that's not a present worry," Joan shook her head. "No, but you have to think about it and plan ahead, just in case." She paused. "You see, Betty, the thing is I don't want Todd stuck in a job that should really only be temporary because he's not trained for it and because it's not what he wants, on account of me and a baby. I don't want the two of us to be a million around here, cooking."

"Of course not. What about your writing, though, Joan? Doesn't that income of yours help?"
"Oh, a little. But only a little so far," Joan told Betty. "I will get bigger. Mr. Adams keeps telling me it will. He says that each book in a series helps sell the others."
"Are you writing now?"

"No," Joan looked a little troubled as she replied. "I'm not doing a thing except retouching furniture. I'm going to get started in the fall, though, and I'll have it ready when it's due in May."
"What will it be about this time?"

"That's another worry! This started out to be a travel series, you know. Joan in Arizona, then Joan in Switzerland. But I'm not going anywhere this year, so what do I do?" She spread her hands in a helpless gesture. "If others mind my knowing, I keep thinking about it and not getting anywhere. That's one reason—the man one, really—why I've done nothing yet. You can't write till you know what you want to write about. Oh, Betty! Here I am, at usual, spilling all my troubles on you."

"You're not doing much spilling," Joan shrugged. "I don't know what you'd call it."
"Why, you're just seeing your problems clearly and facing them. Trying to find the answers. That's all. Why don't you write a book about Joan at Home? I should think you might find enough to say about that."

"Well, it did occur to me. The only trouble is that Joan in my series is not a married gal. And besides, I don't know whether my publishers would want me to stop writing travel books. Maybe I'd better go in and see them before I decide."

"That would be smart," Joan went on, then, to talk of other matters. And of Pamela and Tom.
"He's still job hunting, I believe," Joan said. "It's hard for him to find anything. Pam writes. For one thing, he got back here to this country after all the college grades had been made. He really settled down seriously to look."

"What is it he wants to do?"
"He's not quite sure himself. I think he's been trying to get into diplomatic service. But that's always a long wait and I guess he's tired of it. To be sure, they don't have to worry a great deal. Pam's people are delighted to have them stay there as long as they will. They live just outside Albany, you know. And I guess Tom has a little income from his mother's estate. Still, it's not much. Pam said he used most of his principal to stay abroad those two years. She looked at Betty. "It seems to me all our generation is doing is thinking about ways to earn money."

"Well, that's pretty important," Joan nodded. "I never realized how important until I was married. Betty—" Her face clouded and Betty saw her eyes clouded again.
"What?"

"Oh! I'll feel terrible if Todd gets stuck teaching fourth graders and can't get away! It means more to her than to me, you know. The top salary any teacher gets in that school is three thousand, and if he can't see ahead—and get ahead—to the thing he wants to do—to his German, I mean—he'll well—wither on the stalk."
"Todd isn't the kind to get stuck. Or to whimper on the stalk. He'll find an outlet for himself. Don't worry."

"He might find one. But would he? He'd think of me. What I want. What I need. If I get impatient because we haven't our own home—" She gave a little laugh. "Do you see what I'm driving at? I mean, I'm silly to be talking like this when he hasn't even begun teaching yet."

"I think you are. Give him a year there before you start agonizing over the way ahead of you. You're like a woman who says, 'Jo-Jo, Lillian, don't hear Betty! Yes, I do. Come on in with me.' She's so cute when she wakes up. Look! While I think of it, how about the four of us—you and Todd and Mike and I—going on an all-day picnic at Jones beach some time soon? Don't you think that would be fun?"

Lillian Roth Is Making Come-Back After 20 Years

NEW YORK (AP)—In the jargon of show business, one of the "hottest" items on this year's entertainment scene is an elfin-eyed songstress with a story that beats Cinderella's yarn a mile.

The label is Lillian Roth, a performer in big demand. And for the label, singer Lillian Roth is happily grateful.
It's her second chance at the Cinderella slipper of fame. The first time was more than 20 years ago when films made her a teenage star. Then she smashed the slipper during what she now recalls as "my horrible alcoholic past."

Today, big show spots all the way to Las Vegas keep her busy, a nice two-year recording contract is in the safe, one of the big book-reading agencies has her under its wing and her autobiography is newly in the bookstalls. Currently she is playing a return engagement at the New York supper club La Vie en Rose and is the headliner of the Palace Theater's fifth vaudeville anniversary program.

"It all reminds me of the man who kept praying for things," says Lillian Roth, "and then when his wishes began to come true said, 'Not so fast, Lord, not so fast.' She talks of her past and present with a mingling, vivacious candor. She's a person who frankly looks at her past mistakes, is wittily pleased at current attention and makes religious faith a working part of her everyday life.

"I tell my husband (they married when both were members of Alcoholics Anonymous) that we've had our seven lean years, maybe now we'll have seven good years. About a year ago, well after physical and mental rehabilitation had been generously worked out, Lillian got the first touch of spotlight in a long, long time when Ralph Edwards did his "This Is Your Life" TV show about her.

That led to brief engagements in supper clubs, then an extended stay at a beach stand that re-launched her in the entertainment world she first entered at the age of 5.
Born in Boston in 1910, Lillian Roth had stage-struck parents who were hopeful she would, like Ann, born two years later, would be actresses. The family moved to a cold-water tenement in New York and the name was changed to Roth—to look better in lights—when she was 10.

The youngsters played movie bits at the old studios in Fort Lee, N.J., then sang and danced in vaudeville.
The sister later left the show world, it is today the mother of a lad of 8. For Lillian, however, there were Texan Guinan and the night club stints, then the "Vanities," "Ziegfeld" and "The Youngsters" and finally talking pictures.

Her films included "The Love Parade" with Maurice Chevalier, "Paramount on Parade" and "The Vagabond King."
Ironically, Miss Roth recalls, she never indulged in the uplifted glass during those frenetic days, was only when the personal tragedy of the death of her father shattered long plans that she turned to alcohol "for its knockout effects."

In the 1930's, Lillian Roth's path led nightmarishly downward. Her reputation preceded her now and regular work gave place to occasional bit engagements here and there.
Eventually the girl who had once been brightly climbing found herself on the West Coast, without a cent, ill, her health as well as waking hours a phantasmagoria of faces and voices.

For some reason which she is unable to explain, Lillian Roth recalled that her name was changed to a New York psychiatrist who had known years before. With the name came a conviction that if he could get to him, he would help her.
What followed was voluntary commitment to a sanitarium. Within a few months physical recovery was complete. She was released. The rest was up to her.

For several weeks she avoided the label, the name, the face. She was in a New York psychiatric hospital for several weeks before. With the name came a conviction that if he could get to him, he would help her.
What followed was voluntary commitment to a sanitarium. Within a few months physical recovery was complete. She was released. The rest was up to her.

any new alcoholic temptation. "Then I thought I could have just one drink," she ruefully remembers.
The dreadful storm engulfed her anew.
"It wasn't very long until I was hearing those voices. I knew there would be no more chance after this."

From somewhere she was able to summon the will to try for escape. Finally, the tortuous struggle to redeem herself led to Alcoholics Anonymous.
Here she met T. Burt McGuire, a man who had fallen from comfortable social station down the 99-proof path.

"He was sort of an AA sponsor more when I arrived as a freshman. Miss Roth says, and he always was near to lend a hand and show me the ropes."
It became a mutual enterprise, boosting each other along the road back. Within a year they married. Their home is now in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Although she was physically recovered and had the erstwhile craving firmly suppressed, Miss Roth had yet to face what she calls her "hardest battle"—to regain personal dignity and to be unafraid.
The couple decided starting anew far from past associations would be good therapy, so they went to Australia where "they still have vaudeville." She went on a singing tour. The trip, she concedes, had a partial role in restoring her personality. But she says religion gave her the strength she craved.

"Doctors can only go so far," she explains. "The rest is up to God."
The growth of her religious belief was capped four years ago when she joined the Roman Catholic Church.
"I feel I don't want to have to go searching any more," she says quietly and unaffectedly of her faith.

Golf Links Maker Says Hogan, Snead Open's Top Players

SPRINGFIELD, N. J. (AP)—Robert T. Jones, the golf course maker and not the onetime course wrecker, today called the 54th National Open championship at Baltusrol "the best and most exciting between Ben Hogan and Sam Snead."
"Snead can win it by four strokes if he can maintain his present attitude and put a little on his game," Jones added. "The more the fairway architect who has made a career of putting fangs in modern courses."

Bobby Locke will be very tough if he's not so fat he can't pivot.
"You have to consider Lloyd Mangrum a threat. I don't think Cary Middlecott will have a chance this time, but I don't consider it a dark horse tournament."
This analysis was made by Robert Trent Jones, the internationally famous links architect whose hand has been seen in such courses as the Augusta National at Augusta, Ga., Oakland Hills in Detroit and numerous others. He's no kin to Robert Tyre Jones Jr., the grand slammer.

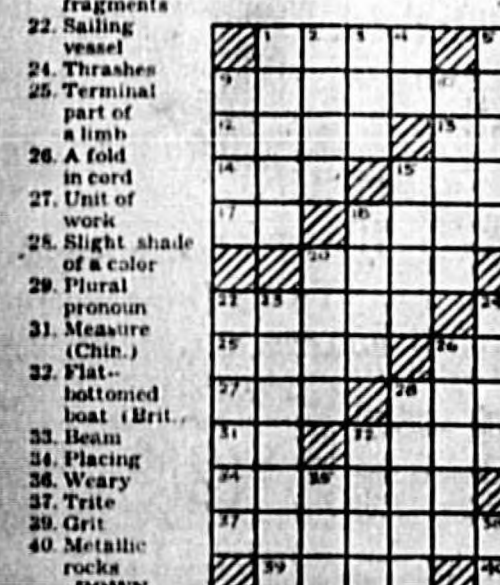

Trent Jones likes to fit golf courses to the men who play it and just before the 1951 Open at Oakland Hills, where he had the players crying openly, he predicted this finish: Hogan, Locke, Mangrum. The finish was: Hogan, Clayton Heffer, Locke, Mangrum.
"I disagree with both Hogan, who says this course is very easy, and Snead, who calls it hard," Jones said. "If Baltusrol is kept at its full strength—1,027 yards—I look for a winning score of 283 to 285."

"As every roofer fan knows, each contestant is out to win, because otherwise he will take home no money for his effort," Parlin explained. The 1954 day money of $125 is somewhat greater than the usual prize offered at the Kissimmee show, and is designed to attract the best available roofer talent.
The 1954 rodeo will open Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, following a rodeo parade in downtown Kissimmee beginning at 5 p.m. Afternoon performances will be held Sunday, July 4 and Monday, July 5.

Cowboys will compete in five major contest events: Bareback Bronc Riding, Saddle Bronc Riding, Bull Riding, Steer Wrestling, and Calf Roping. Parlin reports. In addition the club has pooled $80 to winners in the Girls' Cloverleaf Race, and $50 to winners in the Boys' Relay Race, both of which are limited to juvenile entries this year.
Mildred Murphy and her high-schooler horse, the world-famous Silver Spurs Horseback Quadrille, and a team of trick and fancy riders are included in the program.
Box seats are available for the first time in the new covered South grandstand, construction of which is assured by opening date.

Silver Spurs Rodeo To Open Saturday

KISSIMMEE—A total of $195 in prize money has been posted for the Tenth Annual Silver Spurs Rodeo, according to Rodeo Chairman Doc Parlin, and has been approved by Rodeo Cowboys Association. Entry fees of $15 per contestant per contest will be added to the prize money to make the purses total between $3,000 and $4,000.

"As every roofer fan knows, each contestant is out to win, because otherwise he will take home no money for his effort," Parlin explained. ME GOT THE WORD
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Harry W. Tisdall of Winchester, Mass., on the first leg of a 2,500-mile automobile trip with his family, was given a warning for a minor traffic violation. Weeks later, he wrote State Policeman Charles Sanga: "Perhaps you wonder if warning is so unneeded and if it pays to give them. For the balance of our 2,500 mile trip, the laws were strictly obeyed. We soon found the trip was a pleasure although we did contain a desire to give them a day or two. We were the remains of a fatal accident which, but for your warning, could have been us."

Cattail Said To Be Valuable

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—A Syracuse University research team says the common cattail that grows in swampy areas "is a potential gold mine" of raw material for industrial and scientific uses.

The scientists say its many possible uses range from tarty cookies to "cattail likker."

Dr. Ernest Reed, chairman of the university's plant sciences department, and Leland C. Marsh, primary investigator in the department's cattail research center, say they have turned up nearly a dozen uses for the plant.

They say the root or rhizome can be eaten like a potato or ground into a flour. They did this and baked cookies. The flour also could be used as a substitute for corn starch, fermented to produce ethyl alcohol or used for growing molds from which antibiotics are produced, the scientists report.

They say the stem has long been used for making furniture barrels. The leaves have been used in making rush furniture.

Marsh says he has extracted soft fibers from the stems and leaves by treating them chemically and that the fibers could be used for string and webbing, as jute is used.

He also has extracted a sticky substance from the stem and says he is experimenting to see if it could be used as an adhesive or as sizing for paper.

The flower or blurb can be used to stuff lifejackets, baseballs and mattresses and was used this way during the war.

A drying oil like linseed can be drawn from the seeds and Marsh thinks it could be refined for cooking. A wax can be made from the seeds and the meal remaining could be used for cattle or chicken feed.

But Reed and Marsh, with other names for students of the cattail, caution farmers not to get excited about immediate prospects for raking in cash. Reed says: "It won't be worth while harvesting cattails on your property this year. There isn't a market for them yet."

"When industry recognizes their potential value, it will be time enough to start harvesting them into burlap or other land into swampy cattail farms."

Marsh is quick to point out that the uses he cites are not all new. In his research he has turned up information that in 1952, the Russians had been using the cattail as a source of food.

The French made ethyl alcohol from the stems.

And the Rumanians have used the cattail to refuse a "people's whiskey."

The Rev. Burnette Christian Church Pastor For Summer

The Rev. H. J. Burnette, recently of the Hillier Memorial Christian Church, Raleigh, N. C., where he served as student youth director for nine months, is the pastor for the summer of the First Christian Church here.

The Rev. Mr. Burnette is a graduate of Gainesville High School and has just completed his sophomore year in Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, N. C. During his freshman year in college, he served as student minister to several churches in North Carolina. Among these were the Hassell, Oak City, Everette and Chiquapiin Chapel Christian Churches.

He has been closely associated with youth work in Florida as well as in North Carolina, having graduated from the Christian Youth Fellowship Conference in 1952. He also served as president of the Florida Christian Youth Fellowship in 1951-52 and president of the United Christian Youth Movement for the state of Florida in 1951-52. He was a teacher in youth camps last summer and delivered the Sunday morning sermon at the Florida State Christian Youth Fellowship Convention last September.

"I am heartily looking forward to working with the people of Sanford in spreading the Gospel of Jesus Christ this summer. The greatest asset of any community is not its income, but the influence of the Master of Galilee," said the 19-year-old minister.

U. S. Joins Five Other UN Nations In Patrol Proposal

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States has joined five other U. S. nations in a move to send a peace patrol to check on the threat of a spread of war in Southeast Asia.

Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., chief American delegate, said there is a "real and continuing threat" to Thailand, sponsor of the peace patrol idea.

Thailand originally wanted the U. S. Peace Commission to go into Laos and Cambodia, two states of Indochina, but withdrew that idea under French and British pressure. Its resolution was finally introduced before the Security Council calls for the investigation to go only to Thailand, and seek further authority if they desire to go elsewhere.

The resolution received the support of six of the eleven Security Council members—the United States, Britain, New Zealand, Turkey, Nationalist China and Brazil. Thus the peace patrol will be set up unless Soviet Russia vetoes the proposal. The Russians will make their views known Friday when the council resumes consideration of the proposal.

PROFITS OF PRODUCTIVITY

For a number of years past, organized labor has used rising living costs as a basis for wage increases, but now it has shifted to productivity—the increased output of goods turned out for a man-hour of work. Some of the unions are even contending that labor should be rewarded for most or all of the productivity gain in order that mass purchasing power be increased and thus expand the demand for factory products.

Actually, of course, the issues involved go far beyond that of better pay for workers and include a clear understanding of the functioning of our economy and the factors responsible for our enormous productivity in this country.

The tremendous output per worker in the United States—two to ten times as much as that of Europe—is the result of about thirty times that of the Chinese worker—is not accounted for so much because our labor force is more energetic or skilled as yet, but because of our productivity multiplied manifold by the extensive use of power and machines.

Back of every production worker in this country—varying greatly by industry—is an investment in plant and machinery of about $11,000. This physical equipment is financed mainly by a share of the earnings caused out of the profits of those who invest in the business and expect a return thereon. As to power, the amount of electrical power produced in the United States last year was equivalent to thirty-six times the amount of human power; in other words, the average worker has at his command the equivalent of thirty-six mechanical slaves.

To supply the worker with twice as efficient a machine or with twice as many mechanical slaves, it is necessary to invest in productivity, it is very clearly no reason for doubling his pay. To realize the contribution made by productivity should be to enable the worker to share in the profits of those who provide them, it should be recognized that without their aid the American worker would be forced to work under primitive conditions; his working period would be more than twice what it is today, while his living standards would be reduced to a subsistence basis.

This does not mean, of course, that the worker should not benefit from increased productivity. He should benefit, along with all other segments of our economy. And he does. Over the decades, labor has shared fully in gains made by American industry. Since 1909, real wages have kept pace with increased productivity, which has almost trebled because the use of modern tools has enabled workers to turn out more goods in fewer hours. It is interesting to note, too, that the amount paid out in employee compensation last year was about twenty-two times as much as was distributed in dividends to stockholders—the owners of American business enterprise.

Since organized labor has the most at stake in job making, it is of particular concern to them that the economy should function smoothly and effectively. Therefore, organized labor should go along with those policies which make for greater productivity. Just as a maker of self-interest, though many labor leaders don't seem to realize it—labor should support rules which impose limitations upon output and opportunities, permit "leather bedding" and slow-downs, and that perpet-

Preparing the family car for a long vacation trip may require some initial expense, but it can mean the difference between a trouble-free and a nerve-racking motoring holiday.

Here are essentials suggested by experts:

A close check on tires for cuts and bruises, new tires if present ones are in anything less than good condition.

Check tire jacks before starting your trip. Carry some strong wood blocks. A one-foot square piece of wood is a service base for a wheel when increasing tires on soft shoulders. Two pieces of 4 x 4 lumber serve as wheel blocks when changing tires on a hill.

If you do any night driving take some warning lights to place in the rear of your car.

Flush and clean the cooling system before embarking on long trips. Check radiator and hose connections. Winter thermostats can cause the engine to overheat.

Brakes should be inspected along with cylinders and fluid. You need better brakes on the open highway than in city driving.

Get a general tuneup with a check on oil, lubrication, voltage regulator, lights and spark plug condition. Change oil filter if necessary.

Check the oil supply with each purchase of gasoline. Overly hot engines consume crankcase oil.

Clean out the glove compartment and equip it with sun glasses, a whisk broom, a first aid kit, disposable tissues, soap and face towel, aspirins, cleaning fluid and a sewing kit.

With all these precautions what you get out of the trip will be largely up to you and your driver.

Experts like Robert Nisbel, emergency road service manager of the Automobile Club of Michigan, say preventive maintenance on the car is the best way to insure general condition of the car and of major importance.

"Driving on sun-baked roads at high speeds is tough on the best of tires," he says. "When tires are in poor condition you're almost inviting a blowout."

New Jersey Segregated

Racial segregation is commonly thought of as primarily a Southern practice, but until two years ago it was in existence in New Jersey. Though almost everyone would call New Jersey a Northern state, yet part of it lies below Mason and Dixon's Line, the traditional boundary between North and South. Below the Line there was separation of the races in schools and in employment. In the well-known seaside resort, Asbury Park, it did not end till 1915.

The campaign against segregation began in 1881 when the legislature forbade exclusion of any child from the public schools by reason of nationality, religion or color. This law was little regarded, however, in South Jersey. In 1945 a Division Against Discrimination was set up in the State Department of Education. Segregation was formally outlawed in the new state constitution, adopted in 1947.

Moral suasion persuaded many of the opponents to abandon their stand. In a few districts the Negro school buildings were so dilapidated that new ones for black and white to use jointly had to be erected before unified schools could be started.

The New Jersey experience roughly parallels that likely to be found in some parts of the South—but not in all.

HAL BOYLE

Highway Is Threat To Home

By CHARLEN WEBBER For HAL BOYLE

OLEN RIDGE, N. J.—The spot where I am writing this may some day be in the middle of a six-lane highway. Or maybe it will be beside the highway. Or maybe the highway will be a block away. And possibly the highway never will come this way at all.

The spot is my desk in our house. After I got out of the Army in 1946 we lived in furnished rooms while we hunted and hunted for a home. The places we could afford we did not like, and the places we liked we could not afford.

Then, one Sunday afternoon in 1947, we saw The House. The land curved around it and nine big oaks stretched their arms about it and people had dwelt happily in it many years.

"This is it," I said after we'd been through it and learned the price.

"Yes, this is it," my wife said. "But we can't afford it."

So we bought it and moved into it all our possessions—a portable typewriter, a portable radio and wedding gifts that never had been unpacked.

Since that time we've been told by various people that it's a nice home. We can't afford it. It's much bigger than we need. I'll get a coronary working on all that lawn. I'm trying to get a high hat or something more in here."

We always reply that we like it and view it as a permanent home. For in 1947 we were hunting permanence and certainty after much uncertainty, and along with the rest of the world we still desire permanence and certainty today. So we furnished the house and lived in it and the sheriff has stayed away from our door. We've known happiness and sorrow here. It's become a place much lived in and attained in our minds the permanence we desired.

About a year ago we first heard the state was mounting an attack on us. Goths pushing bulldozers would invade from the west, we were told, driving a super-highway through us toward New York. Citizens of arms-bearing age were mustered in meetings of protest where it was impossible to sift wild rumors from military intelligence.

The road would go here; it would go there; it would go anywhere. Some people in the threatened zone of attack wanted to sell, but nobody would buy. One fellow stopped painting his house. A few optimistic strategists figured out positions were secured by a large cemetery a half mile forward of us which also protected a wide swath of our left flank. But a peasant said he had it straight from the State House in Trenton that the highway would go all the way around the cemetery and then hit us.

Everybody felt that a good clean death—like having the highway driven straight through you—was far better than the crippling wound of the highway creasing your property. Nobody, in short, wanted to live by the side of the road and be a friend to man.

Well, I wish I could report a courier had just galloped in from Trenton with a message there never will be a highway coming this way. Actually no new word has come. Actually, as we were saying last night on the porch, life isn't like that.

Yet I can report some good news. Nobody has talked about the highway in several months now. That fellow has finished painting his house. I have spread much fertilizer and top soil on our lawn. Life goes on.

The good news around here, I think, is that people now feel ab-

They are Mrs. F. D. Scott, chairman of the Girl Scout board, Miss Frances Cobb and Mrs. Deva Clark.

With the group meeting for the first time yesterday, the program is being planned for teaching swimming in four divisions: Beginners, intermediate, swimmer and advanced swimmer.

This educational program is a profitable one for the Scouts. Not only do they have a chance to enjoy the recreation of swimming, but they are afforded a chance to learn to swim and to swim properly—something which is an asset to anyone. Everyone should know how to swim.

The local Girl Scout officials deserve credit for promoting the swimming program, which is definitely beneficial to our local children.

TEXAS—Texas—its name comes from the Spanish explorers who applied the term "Aejias" (Friends or Allies) to certain friendly confederacies of Indians who lived in the region. Texas is the only state that was an independent republic before joining the Union. It is the largest State, covering more area than Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio combined.

The President's Budget for Fiscal 1955 contains estimates for $145,500,000 for supervised loans for small farmers which includes $19 million for farm purchase and development, $120 million for production adjustment and $6 million for adequate supply and distribution of irrigation and farmstead water systems.

Violence Flares At Struck Mill

TOKYO—Violence flared again today at a big silk mill struck by a union protesting what it calls company interference in workers' private affairs.

Some 52 persons were injured in a midnight fist and club-swinging battle between pickets and new workers hired by the Oni Silk Spinning Co., Osaka.

It was the second outbreak. A dynamite explosion injured 50 persons yesterday.

Union leaders say company officials opened employees' mail, searched private belongings, forbade workers—many of them teenage girls—to have dates, and split up married couples to promote efficiency on the job.

Dear Editor:
I want to thank the people of Sanford, who gave me moral support and courage in my fight to keep the mayor from putting his horse lot at my front door. It was not because of that support that I had the courage to make the fight. It was a losing fight, but I did not let them run away. I still expect to "live to fight another day."

I also wish to thank your paper for an excellent publishing service letter that I gave you, and also thank Com. Gordell and Kridler for so fearlessly doing their duty in the face of the wrath of the mayor.

Yours very truly,

Follow Doctor's Advice

By MERRAN H. BUNDEN, M.D.

PENICILLIN has become as popular as aspirin for the average man. The only difference is that he can take the aspirin by himself, but he must still go to his physician for a treatment with penicillin.

It is most often in regard to the common cold that he asks for penicillin. The physician usually advises the patient that penicillin is not the proper treatment for colds without complications, and the intelligent man will heed his doctor's advice. However, many patients adopt an antagonistic attitude and say they will go where they can obtain the penicillin.

Many non-medical people feel that penicillin or hormones are better given by injection because these products are more easily available to the body in this form. However, many of these drugs can be taken by mouth.

If patients could observe some of the severe reactions to injections that even require hospitalization, they would be less persistent in urging a physician to give them these injections. One single injection of penicillin in an allergic person may result in hospitalization for weeks. The reaction may be in the form of skin eruptions, fever, and a type of arthritic-like pain.

Most drugs, if they can be given successfully by mouth, will involve less risk to the person taking them. Above all, patient should follow his doctor's instructions on the necessary and proper method of treatment.

QUESTION AND ANSWER
L. K.: I am forty-two years old and during my menstrual periods I have passed blood clots and flow excessively. Is this normal?
Answer: No, it is not. It may be due to many causes such as polypa, a growth, infection or irritation of the womb. It would be advisable for you to have an examination by your physician.

Oppenheimer Story Is Reviewed

WASHINGTON—The life of Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, the atomic scientist, will be marked and lonely if the Atomic Energy Commission decides he should no longer trust him with secrets.

But even a decision to trust him won't guarantee him peace, for at least one congressional committee may investigate his case again.

The 50-year-old Oppenheimer directed the original A-bomb development. The AEC said yesterday it will rule this month whether he may be trusted with secrets in the future.

This is his unfolding story: Oppenheimer directed the A-bomb from 1942 until the war ended in 1945. From 1947 he has been one of a group of scientists advising the AEC on atomic problems, with access to the most delicate secrets.

He helped in writing this country's atomic disarmament plan.

Oppenheimer was investigated by the government when Truman set up his program for checking on the loyalty of government employees. He continued to work on secret matters.

Then on April 27, 1953, President Eisenhower issued an order calling upon every department head to review every case in which there had been a full FBI field investigation, as there was in Oppenheimer's case.

On July 7, 1953, four days after Eisenhower had made him chairman of the five-man AEC, Lewis L. Strauss ordered a review of Oppenheimer's case. Strauss was a security risk. This was in keeping with the President's general order of April 27.

Strauss had been a member of the AEC, but no chairman, in 1949 when Oppenheimer opposed the H-bomb. Strauss was one of those who favored going ahead with it.

Early in December 1953, Strauss took to Eisenhower all the information the AEC had on Oppenheimer. The President ordered a "blank wall" to be placed between Oppenheimer and secret information.

On Dec. 23, 1953, Strauss told Oppenheimer he could resign his advisory job with the AEC or ask for hearings. The only way Oppenheimer could clear his name was to ask for a hearing. He did.

The AEC appointed a special three-man board: Gordon Gray, now president of the University of North Carolina and formerly secretary of the Army; Dr. Ward V. Evans, professor of chemistry at Loyola University in Chicago; and Thomas A. Morgan, former president of the Feery Corp.

Hearings began April 23. The board heard over half a million words of testimony from Oppenheimer and a parade of scientists and others who knew him and read 3,000 pages of information on the AEC files.

The board's decision was made known June 1. The three members found Oppenheimer a loyal American and discreet but, by 24 vote, Gray and Morgan against Evans, decided he shouldn't be trusted with secrets. The hearings were made public last night.

Oppenheimer's lawyers appealed to the full five-man AEC to review the findings of the board and reverse them.

But if the AEC does decide he's not security-minded, the Senate House Committee on Atomic Energy, which checks on the AEC, has indicated it may investigate the Oppenheimer case all over again.

Some Frozen Foods May Be Refrozen After Thawing

What should be done with food if it thaws? Thawed fruits can be refrozen. Fruits usually ferment when they start to spoil. A little fermentation will not make fruits dangerous to eat, but it may spoil their flavor. Thawed meats can be refrozen if they still taste and smell good, or can be used in cooking and baking or for making soups, jellies, and preserves.

Be careful when freezing thawed meats and poultry because they are apt to eat when they start to spoil. Therefore, examine each package of food before freezing. Thaw some vegetables, such as lettuce, shell fish, and cooked foods. Thawed meats, even though the quality may suffer, it is often better to eat food that is completely thawed than to refreeze it. Be sure to cook it thoroughly, however. If the odor of thawed food is poor or questionable, get rid of it. It may be dangerous.

Be careful of refreezing vegetables, shell fish, and cooked foods. Refreeze any of these foods when they have thawed completely. If the crystals are still in the food, it can be refrozen immediately. The quality may suffer, but it is often better to eat food that is completely thawed than to refreeze it. Be sure to cook it thoroughly, however. If the odor of thawed food is poor or questionable, get rid of it. It may be dangerous.

Refreeze food quickly. When refreezing thawed foods, freeze it quickly. If the freezer is full of frozen foods, get a quick refreeze if you can't take the food to a commercial freezer plant. Chill to 0 F. or below before taking the food back to the home freezer. Wrap the food well with news papers and pack before moving it to or from the freezer plant.

To refreeze food in a freezer, rearrange the food to get the warmest packages against the refrigerated surface, if possible. Use the packages so that they are circled around them. This means quicker freezing. If the freezer cabinet is too full, move some of the colder packages to the periphery, and return them gradually to the freezer.

Approximately 25 persons enjoyed a delicious covered dish supper held last evening at the Fourth of July Club.

After the supper, the members played cards and shuffleboard.

Here is how to iron a pleated skirt on a garment that has been ironed. Work pleats into place with fingers, a few at a time, pin or even haste at hem if the pleats are hard to keep in place from the hem of the skirt first and work upward, pulling the garment slightly against the iron. Work on the wrong side of the fabric if possible.

Atoll Natives Call Selves 'Poisoned People'

Editor's Note—A shifting wind cast radioactive ash along an uncharted path after the March 1 test of the hydrogen bomb. The result was injury to two score natives—and a petition to the United Nations which sums up the Marshall Islanders' feelings toward the radioactive danger and the loss of their land. To get the facts at the scene, AP correspondent William J. Waugh went from Honolulu to the Marshalls and spent 10 days interviewing injured persons and their leaders, and also personnel who run the atomic tests. This is the first of two stories reporting his preliminary findings. They were delayed by censorship in the Defense Department, the Atomic Energy Commission and the State Department. Only minor deletions were made in the original copy, however.

KWAIJALEIN, Marshall Islands (AP)—They call themselves "the poisoned people."

There are the 82 natives of Rongelap Atoll who were showered by radioactive ash from the March 1 explosion of a hydrogen bomb.

One of them, John Anjin, said the ash rained down for 24 hours. "It looked like salt," he said. "It came down like a light rain. You could feel it strike your skin. It burned when it touched."

Some of the "poisoned people" lost their hair. Others were burned. Almost all of them are cured now—but they have been banished from their homes for a year. They are among the Marshall Islanders who have petitioned the United Nations to end atomic experiments in this area—at least to see that the United States observes closer precautions.

The Marshall Islands, midway between Hawaii and the Philippines, came under U. S. control in the war 10 years ago. In 1947 the United States became their trustee under U. N. authority. The islands are low coral atolls with a population of about 11,000.

Natives of Bikini and Eniwetok atolls were uprooted in 1948 to make way for atomic experiments. In the March 1 blast the 82 persons on Rongelap and 154 on Ulrik were exposed or endangered to such an extent that they were removed from their home atolls. The Ulrik people have gone back, but the Rongelapers must wait a year until their atoll is considered safe.

Anjin, a Rongelap leader, described the March 1 explosion: "First saw light, then smoke. Smoke went up, and right through the clouds. Later heard a fell blast. Wind so strong some people fell down. It banged doors."

Of the 82 Rongelapers, about 45 suffered radiation burns. Many of these were slight. One man, 39-year-old Tom Nari, still has a bad burn on the back of his right ear, three months after the explosion. He was fishing in a canoe when the ash began falling.

"Some were frightened," said a Rongelap medical aide. "By night children were crying. Many adults were sick."

A few days after exposure, some of the residents began losing their hair. Three days after the blast a destroyer arrived to evacuate the residents. All started taking showers then.

The evacuation from Rongelap and Ulrik was completed in two days. The affected people received medical assistance here on the Kwajalein Atoll. A top medical team was flown from the United States, arriving March 10.

In April a survey party visited the two affected atolls. This consisted of representatives of Joint Task Force 7; commander in chief Pacific Fleet; high commissioner, Trust Territory of Pacific Islands; the Atomic Energy Commission's engineer contractors (Holmes and Narver); and the native magistrates of Rongelap and Ulrik.

It was decided the Ulrik people could return home, with adequate water and food supplies to be furnished them. It was determined the Rongelap people would have to stay off their atoll for a year. They will live, meantime, on 14-acre Elit in the Majaro Atoll. There the AEC contractors have built an entirely new village of 27 buildings.

"There is anger among some people," Anjin said. "I think it will disappear if we get back home. They trust the American people."

He said the Rongelapers have been well taken care of since their arrival on Kwajalein—with all the food, clothing, medical care and entertainment they need. The Marshallese people are movie fans. They like hillbilly and Hawaiian music.

Americans in the area felt a personal responsibility for the natives brought to Kwajalein. Mrs. Percy W. Clarkson, wife of the commanding officer of the task force, rallied wives of naval personnel in a clothing drive for the women and children. All the evacuated persons I talked with have been emphatic that their treatment has been the best. But there is a certain amount of sadness among the people of Rongelap.

"My people don't feel good about not going home," Anjin observed. "We fear we may have the fate of Bikini."

The 200 Bikinians, move from island to land, are now on the latest kill, inaccessible many months of the year because of heavy surf. Physically, Rongelapers today bear few signs of their exposure. Those who lost hair are getting it back. Thirteen of the men made a brief visit to their home atoll to recover some of the possessions left behind. All the residents have been compensated for the lost crops.

Did these people have any message for the American people? Paul Irujiman, 38, spoke up in Marshallese: "Please tell them not to do the same thing again—throw the bomb. We didn't do anything wrong."

A second dispatch to appear tomorrow tells the story of the petition and of the islanders' feelings toward the United States.

over the railings into the river. Then the mothers jumped. Mothers found the rear steps pushed overboard by the press of the crowds fighting to get back from the flames.

Still the great white ship steamed ahead, leaving behind it a mile-long trail of floating women, children and bodies.

On shore there was a desperate and sickening frustration. On every tongue was the question: Why doesn't the captain turn the ship and beach it? It was only a few hundred yards to either shore—a matter of seconds.

But onward it sped, spewing over the side its human cargo and ghastly living torches.

At North Brother Island, not far from the present location of La Guardia Airport, the ship, aflame almost from bow to stern, nosed into a small, rocky cove and crashed into the rocks with a roar. The ship's deck, its wooden supports virtually eaten away by fire, fell with a thunderous report, plunging hundreds of women and children to a fiery death below.

Scenes more fell or jumped over the ship's side. The living and the dead were so closely jammed together in the water many survivors could not stay afloat without a struggle.

Within minutes the river was jammed with every kind of craft imaginable, from rowboats to private yachts, retrieving survivors and bodies until crewmen collapsed with exhaustion.

Employees of the island's hospitals, and even some of the patients, formed human chains out into the river currents.

Police by the hundreds were rushed to the scene by horse-drawn carriages and by foot. There were scores of doctors and nurses.

Bodies soon began arriving downtown at the morgue on the East River waterfront at 20th St. They were laid out in cribs, on boxes, hastily assembled, on the morgue's pier.

Ten thousand men, women and children covered on the morgue, weeping, shouting and finally fighting their way toward the gruesome rows of boxes.

Many, finding bodies of loved ones, tried to throw themselves into the river. Others collapsed on the coffins.

In the days that followed, funeral processions wound through the streets by the hour, with most victims buried together in the Lutheran cemetery across the East River in Queens.

There was a great outcry from a shocked populace. There were charges, and denials, that the Slocum was poorly equipped; that life preservers were old and crumbling; that lifeboats were fastened with wire and could not be loosened in time; that fire hose was cheap, old and unusable; and that crews were poorly trained and supervised.

There was bitter criticism of Capt. Van Schaick. The captain, who broke a leg jumping off after the beaching, replied that he did the best he could, considering such things as wind, water currents, position and other factors.

Many veteran pilots and seamen, after studying the situation, agreed. Others maintained his every move was wrong.

In subsequent probes by state and federal agencies, blame was heaped upon the captain and numerous others, including officials of the company owning the Slocum and federal steamboat inspectors. Court actions dragged on for years, but no one ever went to jail except the captain. He was sentenced to 10 years, but was pardoned by President Taft after two years in response to petitions with thousands of signatures. Not long afterward Van Schaick, blind and ill, died.

The precise origin of the fire never was established. It was believed to have resulted from a match or cigar carelessly dropped in a stateroom forward on the first deck.

For weeks the death list grew with the finding of additional bodies, and finally the official toll was put at 1,021.

Painful as the memory of the disaster was, those most affected by it formed an organization to perpetuate the remembrance of the victims.

The "Organization of the General Slocum Survivors" holds monthly meetings, and each year on the Sunday nearest June 15 it conducts memorial services at the Queens Cemetery, where a large monument was erected.

Bridge Jurisdiction Falls To 3 Counties

TAMPA, (FNS)—It appears that three West Coast counties will have a jurisdiction over portions of the new Lower Tampa Bay Bridge which is scheduled to be opened early in August.

It had been thought the bridge was wholly within Pinellas and Manatee counties, which it connects, but the County Commissioners of Hillsborough were informed last week by engineers of the State Road Department that Hillsborough will control about 22,000 feet of the gigantic $24,000,000, 15-mile structure. Traffic controls will have to be worked out between the three counties on the basis of jurisdiction.

Water Disaster Occurred In 1904

NEW YORK (AP)—A little girl ran breathlessly down the long pier jutting desperately at her sear, brother whose feet just caught, seem to carry him fast enough.

Far ahead she could see deck hands starting to pull the gangplank alongside the pier. But someone saw the children coming and the ship waited.

In a moment the tiny pair clattered up the gangplank, almost in tears. From fear they would miss the big excursion. They disappeared in the crowd of shrilling, happy children lining the rail's edge. Knots of mothers gaily chatting.

The crew cast off and the vessel eased away from the old St. pier into New York's East River.

The ship was majestic. Its three decks, freshly painted, dazzled the eye in the bright morning sunshine. Two brilliant yellow funnels rose above the upper deck. Flags fluttered in the breeze. Two splendid paddle wheels, 30 feet in diameter, churned the water on each side.

Big gold letters on the ship's side spelled the name familiar to every small boy in the bustling city: "General Slocum."

Also well known to New Yorkers, especially seafarers, was the ship's master, bearded, dignified Capt. William Van Schaick. He had spent most of his 63 years on the water and was regarded as one of New York's best pilots.

The Slocum was carrying its happy passengers to a picnic spot on the north shore of Long Island. It was June 15, 1904, the day of the annual Sunday school outing of the Lutheran church on East 6th St.

By 10 a.m. the ship had steamed upriver the length of Manhattan Island and was plowing through the waters of Hell Gate, spanned now by the giant Triborough Bridge.

Presently, a wisp of smoke emerged from the forward part of the ship. Then there was more smoke, heavier.

Suddenly, the ship's band brake off. For a moment there was silence. Then a great groaning, moaning cry rose from the ship—an awesome cry, mingling fear and terror—a cry that paralyzed all who heard it.

The General Slocum's whistle began to shriek frantically in high-pitched short blasts. There was a shout of "fire!" Alarms began to ring.

Fast on the heels of this was a muffled explosion, and a great sheet of flame enveloped the nose of the ship.

In a flash, hysteria gripped the women. They fought to get to the rear of the ship, clawed at life preservers and tore them from each other's hands.

Children and mothers alike were trampled in the fearful crush. In what seemed a mere instant the entire forward part of the vessel was aflame, and the stern began to drop low in the water because of the weight of passengers.

The Slocum was headed straight up the river at full speed, the flames fanned by the speed of the ship.

Faster and faster the blaze roared toward the stern until now it was half afire. The women, all but insane with fright, could no longer press backward. One by one and then by dozens they began throwing their babies and children—many shrieking with pain—

over the railings into the river. Then the mothers jumped. Mothers found the rear steps pushed overboard by the press of the crowds fighting to get back from the flames.

Still the great white ship steamed ahead, leaving behind it a mile-long trail of floating women, children and bodies.

On shore there was a desperate and sickening frustration. On every tongue was the question: Why doesn't the captain turn the ship and beach it? It was only a few hundred yards to either shore—a matter of seconds.

But onward it sped, spewing over the side its human cargo and ghastly living torches.

At North Brother Island, not far from the present location of La Guardia Airport, the ship, aflame almost from bow to stern, nosed into a small, rocky cove and crashed into the rocks with a roar.

The ship's deck, its wooden supports virtually eaten away by fire, fell with a thunderous report, plunging hundreds of women and children to a fiery death below.

Scenes more fell or jumped over the ship's side. The living and the dead were so closely jammed together in the water many survivors could not stay afloat without a struggle.

Within minutes the river was jammed with every kind of craft imaginable, from rowboats to private yachts, retrieving survivors and bodies until crewmen collapsed with exhaustion.

Employees of the island's hospitals, and even some of the patients, formed human chains out into the river currents.

Police by the hundreds were rushed to the scene by horse-drawn carriages and by foot. There were scores of doctors and nurses.

Bodies soon began arriving downtown at the morgue on the East River waterfront at 20th St. They were laid out in cribs, on boxes, hastily assembled, on the morgue's pier.

Ten thousand men, women and children covered on the morgue, weeping, shouting and finally fighting their way toward the gruesome rows of boxes.

Many, finding bodies of loved ones, tried to throw themselves into the river. Others collapsed on the coffins.

In the days that followed, funeral processions wound through the streets by the hour, with most victims buried together in the Lutheran cemetery across the East River in Queens.

There was a great outcry from a shocked populace. There were charges, and denials, that the Slocum was poorly equipped; that life preservers were old and crumbling; that lifeboats were fastened with wire and could not be loosened in time; that fire hose was cheap, old and unusable; and that crews were poorly trained and supervised.

There was bitter criticism of Capt. Van Schaick. The captain, who broke a leg jumping off after the beaching, replied that he did the best he could, considering such things as wind, water currents, position and other factors.

Many veteran pilots and seamen, after studying the situation, agreed. Others maintained his every move was wrong.

In subsequent probes by state and federal agencies, blame was heaped upon the captain and numerous others, including officials

University Workers Offer Suggestions On Farming Topics

GAINESVILLE—Care in handling and hauling livestock will enable Florida farmers to avoid losses of market animals during the summer months, according to Dr. Charles Simpson of the University of Florida Agricultural Experiment Stations.

"Care should be exercised at all times in handling and hauling animals," the Experiment Station veterinarian says, "but it is especially important during the hot summer months. Far too many animals are injured or lost every summer as a result of overcrowding, beating, kicking, projecting nails and splinters in chutes and corrals, and exhaustion."

While many bruises are not apparent on the surface, they result in much loss of meat, he explained.

Buyers tend to pay reduced prices for animals they suspect of having been bruised or injured in transit.

Dr. Simpson offers these suggestions for preventing injuries and avoiding losses of livestock in handling and hauling:

Remove projecting nails, splinters, and broken boards from pens, corrals, and chutes.

Sort livestock a day or two before loading, and confine animals that will go to market to pens near the loading chute for a few hours before loading. Always use a good chute to load animals.

Avoid exciting animals. Drive them carefully yard quietly. Instead of a stick or kicking, use a canvas slapper to drive them.

Never use dogs to catch animals for market.

Thoroughly clean the floor of the truck and place a couple of inches of fresh sand on it and wet it down before loading animals in it.

Be sure there are no protruding nails or splinters in the truck sides. Sand on the floor helps the animals to keep their footing. If possible, provide a top cover for the truck and be sure there is plenty of ventilation.

Avoid crowding animals in the truck. A truck with a floor 15 feet long and 7 1/2 feet wide will accommodate about 10 head of cattle or 30 hogs. If animals of different ages or kinds are to be hauled at one time, they should be separated by partitions.

Haul animals at night or early in the morning when temperatures are not so high. Drive the truck at moderate speed, slow down for curves, and avoid sudden starts and stops.

While cattle ordinarily will not eat foliage from tung trees if good grazing is available, they may eat it if grass is sparse. Tung foliage is poisonous and should never be removed from trees and piled where cattle can get to it. Cattle will "sample" prunings from tung and other poisonous trees if the material is piled or dumped in the pasture.

Glasses, Samples From Typewriter Lead To Solution Of Ghastly Murder

CHICAGO, (AP)—A pair of horn-rimmed glasses and samples from a "thrill" killing which two brilliant university students planned as an experiment in human emotions.

The kidnaping and slaying of 14-year-old Bobby Franks was a crime so ghastly and bizarre that it shocked the nation.

Equally horrifying was the motive advanced by the slayers, Nathan Leopold, then 19, and Richard Loeb, 18, sons of Chicago millionaires and outstanding students at the University of Chicago.

Why had they kidnaped and bludgeoned to death a young school boy against whom they said they bore no malice?

Their explanation amazed and sickened even veteran policemen to whom murder was a routine experience. The pair of Bobby Franks had slayed him for the "perfect crime." They wanted to prove to themselves that they could outwit the authorities. Also, it was to be an experiment to determine how far they could preserve their own detached, scientific attitude while snuffing out the life of a fellow human being.

But the crime fell short of perfection. A clue found near the victim's body trapped the killers. Thirty years after the killing, Leopold, in Stateville Prison, near Joliet, Ill., is trying for a parole from his 99-year sentence. Loeb, killed by another convict in 1930.

On May 21, 1934, Bobby Franks' father, Jacob, a wealthy retired manufacturer, and Mrs. Franks became worried. Bobby had not appeared for dinner.

But it was not until 10 p. m. that Franks decided to notify police that his son was missing. Minutes after he left for the district police station, the Franks telephone rang.

"This is George Johnson," a muffled voice informed Mrs. Franks. "Your son has been kidnaped, but he is safe. Instructions will follow." The caller hung up.

At the insistence of the Franks family, police kept the kidnaping secret for some time.

The next morning a man walking through a forest preserve near Wisconsin, on the far South Side, came upon the nude body of a boy lying face downward in a railway culvert.

The boy's head had been savagely beaten with a heavy instrument. Other evidence indicated the boy had been slain by a killer of deranged mentality.

A pair of horn-rimmed glasses, which police took to be those of the victim, were found 19 feet from the body.

The same morning the postman brought a letter addressed to Franks, saying:

"Allow us to assure that he (Bobby) is at present safe and well. You need fear no physical harm from him, provided you live up carefully to the following instruction and such others as you will receive by future communication."

The writer instructed Franks to prepare a ransom of $10,000 "in old bills" for the safe return of the boy. Franks, still believing his son alive, obtained the cash.

He soon received a telephone call from "George Johnson," told Franks to proceed by taxi to a drugstore where further instructions would be given.

Police had notified Franks of the discovery of the nude body of his son, but from their description Franks assumed it was not his son. Later, an uncle ascertained it was Bobby.

Police brought word of the identification while Franks was waiting for the taxi to bring the ransom money. He was taken immediately to an undertaking chapel to see the body. Police had placed on it the horn-rimmed glasses.

As he gazed sadly at the body of his only son, Franks provided the clue that trapped Bobby's killers.

"My son," he said, "did not wear glasses."

It was soon established that only one firm made glasses with the diamond trademark on this pair.

Records of this firm showed the glasses had been made for Nathan Leopold, son of one of Chicago's pioneer families. A precocious ornithologist, he had been acclaimed by scientists for his studies.

Leopold calmly admitted the glasses were his and said he must have lost them while studying birds in the forest preserve.

Next, police seized Leopold's pal, Richard Loeb, a University of Michigan graduate whose scholastic brilliance matched that of Leopold.

The two asserted they had gone riding in Leopold's car on the day of the killing. Questioned about a portable typewriter he had used in his studies, Leopold said he had disposed of it. Police were unsuccessful in locating the machine, but they found typewritten notes from Leopold to other students. The typing corresponded with the ransom letter.

Confronted with these findings, Loeb confessed. In a matter of hours Leopold also confessed. Each claimed the other was the actual slayer.

Their confessions recounted they had induced young Franks to enter their car a rented one for a "ride home" as he left the school playground; how he was murdered almost immediately with blows from a chisel later found by a watchman.

On July 23, 1934, Leopold and Loeb were brought to trial. A battery of alienists testified for them. One declared the defendants were victims of a lack of normality in their lives. He blamed the crime on early childhood complex as established in each case by experiences with nursemaids.

Judge John R. Caverly sentenced each of the slayers to 99 years for kidnaping and a life term for murder.

In the nearly 30 years he has served in Stateville, Leopold now 49, has been a model prisoner and a medical guinea pig. For his services in medical research, Leopold's 99-year sentence was reduced to 35 years by former Gov. Adlai Stevenson.

The reduced sentence made him eligible for parole last year and he made a bid for freedom on the ground that he has been rehabilitated and is "a completely changed personality."

Atlanta (AP)—Thirteen "model" rural churches in as many South-eastern states have been named "Rural Church of the Year" by G. Ross Freeman, director of the Emory University Town and Country Church Development Program.

From the 13 finalists selected by state committees, the church judged to have "done the most with what it had to begin with in creating its own church, community and well-ordered program" will on July 21 be named "Rural Church of the Year in the South."

A central committee meets here tomorrow to begin the preliminary judging.

Last year the title was won by the 3-member Egypt, Miss., Methodist Church.

Finalists this year are:

Duncan Memorial Methodist Church, Alexander City, Ala.; All Souls Community Church, Scott, Ark.; First Presbyterian Church, Crestview, Fla.; Chesnut Mountain Presbyterian Church, Finney Branch, Ga.; Centenary Methodist Church, Shelbyville, Ky.; Bethel Methodist Church, Longsight, La.; Pleasant Valley Methodist Church, Guntown, Miss.; Prospect Presbyterian Church, Mooresville, N. C.; St. Matthew's Episcopal Parish, Fort Motte, S. C.; Potts Chapel Methodist Church, Jackson, Tenn.; Our Saviour's Lutheran Church, Clinton, Texas; Veto Methodist Church, Galax, Va.; and Nuyako Baptist Church, Nuyako, Okla.

A total of 84 churches representing 31 denominations, all located in communities with populations under 5,000, participated in the program.

Four second and five third place winners for each of the 13 states have been named.

Cash awards totaling $12,500 will be given the 130 winners. Freeman said. Each state's first place winner will receive $500, with the possibility of an additional $300 for the church named "Rural Church of the Year in the South."

Second place churches will get $100 and $50 will go to churches winning third places.

Serape and slice a bunch of carrots; cook just until tender in boiling salted water, then drain. Reheat the carrots with a tablespoon of butter or margarine and a couple of tablespoons of mint jelly. Serve these roasted carrots with roast leg of lamb.

Thirteen Churches In Southeast Get In 'Model' Class

On July 23, 1934, Leopold and Loeb were brought to trial. A battery of alienists testified for them. One declared the defendants were victims of a lack of normality in their lives. He blamed the crime on early childhood complex as established in each case by experiences with nursemaids.

Judge John R. Caverly sentenced each of the slayers to 99 years for kidnaping and a life term for murder.

In the nearly 30 years he has served in Stateville, Leopold now 49, has been a model prisoner and a medical guinea pig. For his services in medical research, Leopold's 99-year sentence was reduced to 35 years by former Gov. Adlai Stevenson.

The reduced sentence made him eligible for parole last year and he made a bid for freedom on the ground that he has been rehabilitated and is "a completely changed personality."

NEW COFFEE MAKER

Reheats Without Repercolating

Economy, efficiency and style are three very important items to the modern housewife. All three have been considered in the design of modern electric appliances such as the General Electric Automatic Coffee Maker.

This new, fully-automatic coffee maker will brew from two to nine cups of any desired strength coffee, making it as practical for everyday use as for entertaining. It takes less than four minutes to brew two cups and less than 15 to brew nine.

The automatic features allow the user to simply put in the coffee and water, and set the control for the strength desired. A signal light indicates when the coffee is ready, and it is kept hot until served. The G-E model also has a unique RE-HEAT setting which reheats the coffee without repercolating it.

The modern, gracious design is also functional as well as stylish, making serving so easy that the first four or five cups can be served without lifting the Coffee Maker from the table.

Three Puerto Rican Gunmen Found Guilty On 10 Counts Of Assault

Strolling In Sanford

Seminole county fishermen are today purchasing 1954-55 fishing licenses which went on sale at the Court House yesterday. The only change in the licenses, which cost residents two dollars, is that information as to the holder's date of birth must be included on the application. The licenses are effective today.

A resident of the Sanford Trailer Park, weary of wading through small order house red tape to correct billing mistakes or to exchange unsatisfactory items, decided to find out what happens to the money who lacks the time or education to answer involved correspondence. . . . When her electric iron went bad, she electrically lettered on the price tag "My Iron Is No Good" and sent it back. . . . Soon she received a new one shortly from the factory with no long questionnaire to be filled out.

A state newspaper carried this one yesterday: "Wanted: Man to wash dishes and two waitresses."

Pensacola Paper Asked To Return Stolen Checks

PENSACOLA (AP)—The Pensacola News-Journal yesterday received a letter containing 23 checks and a note asking that the checks be returned to Britt's Service Station where they had been stolen.

About $1,100 in cash and checks were in a safe taken from the station Tuesday. The checks totaled $294.12.

Journal City Editor Hal Stokes said the unsigned note read: "Greetings, please get your checks to proper owner as I have no use for them. P. S. Do not appreciate (sic) cheap writing up in News-Journal. With these words 'have your fair city.'"

Girl, 13, Charged After Teen-Age Drinking Party

DAYTONA BEACH (AP)—Charges have been filed against a 13-year-old girl who was charged with serving 30 to 40 children of well-to-do families, Juvenile Officer Willey Gaddy reported.

He said the party was held May 21-23 at the home of one of the boys whose mother was away.

Four girls, including the 13-year-old, spent long hours with boys in the bedrooms, Gaddy said, at least one girl went swimming nude, and about 200 cans of beer were consumed along with home-made wine and liquor.

The mother of one of the girls, Miss Mrs. J. J. Gaddy, reported it to the juvenile officer.

Cause Of Death Of Woman Found; Husband Is Held

ORLANDO (AP)—Mrs. Lottie Cohen died from a skull fracture caused by a blow and a blood clot on the brain, Dr. Frederick Rawling reported yesterday after an autopsy.

Her husband of five months, Joseph George Cohen, 35, is being held in jail at Deland on a manslaughter charge.

Mrs. Cohen, 43, former New York City store manager, died Monday after being brought here from Daytona Beach for an emergency brain operation.

Police said Cohen had been arrested twice on assault charges resulting from fights with his wife over a divorce. Cohen said his occupation is salesman. Deputy Sheriff Bob Slay said Cohen shed sheets and pillow cases.

Inside This Issue

The Herald today is starting publication of a series of strips concerning learning to swim. These strips were furnished by the local Girl Scout council.

TO CHOOSE PRESIDENT DAYTONA BEACH (AP)—Florida Future Farmers of America choose today between James Quincy of Trenton and Colin Williamson of High Springs for president of their organization.

They were survivors of a field trial of the first prize at the annual convention yesterday.

SUZANNE RUTH HANKIN, 20, of Azusa, Calif., and Robert Lodge, 21, of New Zealand, who have been "pen pals" for seven years meet for the first time after the liner Oranary docked in San Francisco if the romance survives, they will marry in October and return to New Zealand where Bob manages a news service agency.

Plans To Suspend Indochina Talks Are Shelved Today

GENEVA (AP)—British-American plans for suspending the Indochina peace talks were shelved today while the Western Powers poured over a new Communist cease-fire proposal.

As a result of the Communist move and because of French opposition to suspension of the talks, it appeared unlikely the parley would be resumed this week as had been expected.

Red China's Premier-Foreign Minister Chou En-lai submitted the new armistice proposal to the Geneva conference just as French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault returned from Paris to try to prevent the proposed recess.

Bidault entertained Britain's Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and U. S. Under Secretary of State Walter Bedell Smith at dinner last night. The principal subject of discussion obviously was the future of the conference.

French sources said Bidault, they believed, had not received the proposal, but had "preliminary breakdown" of the parley.

The talks will continue on the foreign minister level for the present, they said, but may be turned over to deputies later.

Details of the Chinese cease-fire proposal were not divulged by delegates who attended yesterday's secret session. They were understood to cover three main points:

1. A simultaneous cease-fire, 2. negotiations of opposing military commands both here and in Indochina, and 3. a proposed ban on the import of troops or arms into Indochina.

County School Body To Meet Monday

R. T. Milwee, County superintendent of public instruction, today announced that there would be a special called meeting of the County board of schools Monday at 10 a. m. in his office.

The board, according to the superintendent, will discuss appointments of teachers to fill vacancies recently created in the County school system by the resignation of approximately 12 teachers and the retirement of several more.

Milwee has stated that the situation is not critical and that he feels most of the vacancies will be filled at the meeting.

The majority of the teachers who resigned last week were the have recently been transferred and married women, many of expected added family responsibilities, felt Members of the County school board will convene in the superintendent's office Wednesday to work on the 1954-55 budget for the school system, according to Milwee.

Commission Okays New Water Route

BRADENTON (AP)—A new route for the West Coast Inland Waterway through Venice has been approved by the Waterway Commission which for years has been plagued with arguments over direction of the canal.

Newest route would have the canal parallel the Seaboard Air Line Railway for three and a half miles.

The Commission previously had approved a route near the beaches but property owners opposed it. Commission members were told that the cost of building the new route would be about one million dollars more but this would all be offset by decreased right-of-way costs.

McCarthy Attacks Demos

Jury Deliberates On Lone Woman In Solons' Shooting

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mrs. Luita Lebron waited alone as the sole subject of jury deliberations today on the fatal shooting in the House of Representatives March 1.

A federal jury of seven men and five women, behind closed doors for 9 1/2 hours, emerged late last night with verdict of guilty on all 10 counts of assault lodged against her three male associates.

Rafael Cancel Miranda, 25, Anselmo Figueroa Cordova, 28, and Irving Flores Rodriguez, 28.

The 34-year-old Mrs. Lebron, already convicted along with the three men on five counts of assault with a dangerous weapon, whispered when she heard the verdict.

"I don't see why they don't convict me too."

With five charges of assault with intent to kill still outstanding against the woman defendant, U. S. District Judge Alexander Holtzoff sent the jury home for the night and told them to return today to pass final judgment.

Mrs. Lebron's fellow Puerto Ricans gave no show of emotion upon hearing the verdict, which carries a maximum penalty of 75 years in prison. But soon afterwards Cancel and Flores, although not smiling, joined briefly in the conversation.

All four admit to opening up with wild pistol fire from the House gallery. Five congressmen were wounded. But the Puerto Rican Nationalists say they meant to kill or harm no one, their only aim being to dramatize their demand for Puerto Rican independence.

Under the law, each defendant could possibly receive a sentence of up to 10 years apiece on each of the weapons counts and 15 years apiece on each of the intent-to-kill counts, a maximum of 125 years. The judge has discretion as to whether the sentences should run concurrently, however, and Judge Holtzoff has announced he will not impose a total of more than the 75 years allowable under the intent-to-kill finding.

Plant City Firm Contracts To Buy Crops In County

In what was termed an effort to head off possible poor marketing conditions this fall, Southland Frozen Foods of Plant City recently announced a plan where it will purchase the crops of approximately 800 acres of vegetables from Seminole County farmers.

An audience of 75 farmers greeted the scheme with enthusiasm after being told the story of six Sanford area farmers this season. While most of the area's farmers lost heavily this spring because of adverse market conditions, these six received $225 a acre for their guaranteed crops of wax beans.

No figures were disclosed by the company of the farmers showing profits on the crops or their growing costs, but it was stated by W. W. Linn, president of the county farm bureau that it was inviting.

Officials of the Southland Co. commented that their firm expected to contract for 300 acres of green beans, 200 acres of squash, 300 acres of spinach, and not yet determined amounts of other vegetables.

No price for the proposed fall crop was mentioned other than the statement that it was to be established on.

Man Questioned In Old Slaying Is Released

BAKINGHAM (AP)—One of two persons being questioned in the investigation of the slaying of Dr. H. H. Beat 22 years ago has been released.

John Peoples, 61, of Tampa, was released after being held on an open charge of investigation still held in Al Roy Scott, 30, brought here from Frogtown, S. O. B. S. A. Negro.

Beat was killed by a shotgun blast shortly after he had served a two-year term as mayor of Lake Wales.

Sheriff Pat Gordon said at the time of the slaying, Peoples was a handyman and Scott a cook for Emmett Donnelly, Lake Wales atorney who was accused of being an accessory before the fact.

Donnelly killed himself last week after being charged with leading a conspiracy to kill three wealthy persons for their money. He was a law associate of Deal's and held a $20,000 double indemnity life insurance policy on him.

A grand jury refused to indict Donnelly.

Writer Of Letter Used By Collins Fired By SRD

TALLAHASSEE (AP)—The State Road Department has fired R. E. Wells, auditing division chief clerk, who wrote a letter on highway finances that state Sen. LeRoy Collins used against Acting Gov. Charlie Johns in their gubernatorial campaign.

His notice of dismissal from the job he has held for more than 20 years said it was "for the best interest of the department."

Wells said he considered himself "just a political casualty. I realize the vindictiveness of it. I'm hoping it's just six months with-

Guatemala Appeals To Honduras

To Stop Reported Border Massing

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. McCarthy asserted today the lengthy row was promoted by the Democrats and that the Democrats "will suffer and bleed because of it."

It was one of numerous threats with a political tinge which came into the 90th, and possibly final day, of the McCarthy Army hearings.

Sen. Stymont (D-Mo.) accused Sen. McCarthy (R-N.Y.) presiding at the hearing of making "unjust and partisan remarks that would end the explosive inquiry into '52."

Stymont hung his accusation after Mundt with caustic humor had raised the question of what role Clark M. Clifford, once chief advisor to former President Truman, may have played at Stymont's suggestion in setting off the Army's charges against the McCarthy.

Mundt said it should be recalled that Clifford and Stymont "are fellow Democrats, fellow Missourians" and that at Stymont's advice Clifford gave advice to the public secretary of the Army Stevens that might normally be expected to be "in a different vein" than a Republican lawyer might expect.

In reply to Stymont, Mundt said he was attributing to the inquiring, in which politics is intruding, was in which politics is intruding, in which politics is intruding.

Joseph N. Welch, the Army's special counsel, said that in fairness Stevens should be permitted to answer.

Jaycees Receive National Award For Campaign Here

The Seminole County Jaycees learned today that they were awarded a national award for their first-place award for their 1953-54 Trade Promotion Campaign. Don Bider, vice president and program chairman, spoke briefly during the program, earnestly endorsing a Jaycees project to beautify Fort Mellon Park.

Stymont said he was surprised that the award was given to the Jaycees, who had been the subject of a recent article in the past year while the organization was under the leadership of President Cliff Aldrich. Aldrich today was presented a "special award" by the present board officer Herb Roloff.

Walter F. Knowles, associate members and Sanford City manager, spoke briefly during the program, earnestly endorsing a Jaycees project to beautify Fort Mellon Park. Knowles called attention to the fact that the city commission Monday night approved the moving of the center portion of the former Jim Spencer building to Fort Mellon Park to be used as a community center.

The Seminole Jaycees also amended their by-laws to exclude the voting right of associate members. The local group was one of the few Jaycees organizations in the state which heretofore permitted inactive members to vote.

Building Permits Total About 147

Three building permits were issued today by the City of Sanford. The permits are for a City Hall building, the total to approximately 147, thus far in the City fiscal year, which started in the fall.

B. D. Owen was given a permit to erect a concrete block home in the Franklin Terrace subdivision. The house, according to the application, will be built at 2414 Oak Ave. and will measure 21 1/2 by 33 feet.

Cost of the construction was placed at approximately $5,000 by the applicant.

According to the reports, James A. Williams of 601 Mellenville Ave. intends to place asbestos siding on his residence. Cost of the project was estimated at $750 by Williams.

The porch of the C. E. Smith residence, 600 Magnolia Ave., is scheduled for remodeling, according to the City Hall file. Cost of the project, which will be done by Smith, was placed at $250.

SCHOOL RECORDS STOREN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—At least some of the eighth-grade pupils at Lagunitas Elementary School probably were pleased to report cards, achievement records, day.

A chief dejected with the record progress reports of the class, which is due to graduate this afternoon.

"It was probably the work of some troublemaker who wasn't going to get any grades," theorized school principal Mrs. Isabel G. Lankau.

The letter was signed by his superior, SRD General Auditor W. A. Williams.

It said "there will be little or no primary state funds available for matching primary federal funds during the remainder of this year."

About a week after it was written, a newspaper reporter found it and published it. Collins used it to support his contention that the Johns road board couldn't carry out its highway building commitments with funds available this year and to criticize the board for failing to match federal road mon-

Regime Is Said Threatened

Showdown May Be Soon

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP)—Guatemala called on Honduras last night to stop anti-Red Guatemalan exiles reported massing on the border for an assault against President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman's Communist-influenced regime.

The appeal was made by Guatemalan Ambassador Amadeo Chinchilla to Honduran Foreign Minister J. Edgarlo Valenzuela as reports here and in other Central American nations indicated a showdown might be imminent between the Arbenz government and its anti-Communist opposition at home and abroad.

"We have reports that well-equipped soldiers carrying guns are being flown and driven by car to points near our border," Chinchilla told newsmen. "They are being flown in chartered planes."

The Guatemalan envoy said Valenzuela had given him assurances that Honduras "will prevent any incidents at the border and has given orders for seizure of any arms there."

Reports here and abroad indicated the anti-Arbenz forces were pushing their preparations for a try at ousting the Guatemalan regime. Among these were:

1. Dispatches from Belice, British Honduras, quoted Guatemalan exile sources there as saying anti-Communist parachute troops already have been dropped into Guatemala. The sources gave no details.

2. Usually reliable sources here said Guatemalan exiles are being invited to publicize the border where men dressed in khaki reportedly were flown out of Tegucigalpa yesterday and an unknown number were in the area.

The sources also said a well-armed boat left the Honduran port of La Ceiba yesterday apparently for a strike at Puerto Barrios in Guatemala.

3. A close aide to Carlos Castillo Armas, head of the Guatemalan exile movement here, claimed 5,000 anti-Arbenz men stand ready along the frontiers of El Salvador and Honduras and "at least 50,000 supporters inside Guatemala will rise up to fight with us when the moment comes."

4. Castillo Armas in a message to his Guatemalan "compatriots," said he would be with them "very shortly." The exile leader called on the Guatemalan people to prevent Arbenz and his aides from fleeing.

Chinchilla told newsmen it was rumored the Castillo Armas forces were planning to fight Arbenz.

A dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Jack Rutledge in Guatemala, delayed five hours by the next flight, reported up to 100 planes in the capital and quiet and international airlines had resumed normal service after a temporary government-ordered halt.

The dispatch said authorities were pushing plans for massive demonstrations tomorrow to show the solidarity of the people behind the Arbenz regime. Rutledge said 10,000 persons are expected to bring Guatemala City's narrow streets.

The Guatemalan general staff and the presidential office earlier yesterday denied reports that the army had given Arbenz 24 hours to resign. A joint statement said the army "is giving all its support to citizen President Arbenz."

El Salvador's embassy in Guatemala City was reported bulging with 24 refugees who sought asylum there from the government roundup. Exile sources say 800 or more opponents of Arbenz and the Communists already are under arrest.

The government reportedly has granted safe conduct for 18 of those in the Salvadoran Embassy to leave the country. Several other opponents already have made their escape via this route.

Guatemalan exiles in Tegucigalpa made no secret of their military preparations. Men dressed in fresh khaki but wearing no insignia walked the streets and gathered at the city's airport. They were seen boarding planes without any apparent effort to hide their movements.

Mystery Surrounds Disappearance

Has anyone seen a strange house? It was the house, a 20 by 20 foot building, owned by Jack Standford, salesman at the Sanford Furniture Co., has just disappeared into thin air.

Standford reported that he last saw the house standing firmly on its foundations Thursday night. When his family arrived at its site yesterday, not only the house was missing, but also approximately 100 feet of water pipe which had been buried under six inches of soil.

Sheff J. J. Hobdy commented: "It's the fact that the house had a house kidnapping, but we're investigating." The house was valued at $250 by Standford.

It had been located on the south shore of Lake Mary.

Titles Translated By U. S. Officials

TOKYO (AP)—The men who command Japan's security forces have strictly untranslatable titles such as superintendent.

So there was some surprise to hear that the U. S. Navy base and Rear Adm. Yasumaro Taniguchi had visited the aircraft carrier Borer.

Inquiry showed that U. S. officials have been privately translating titles to military rank. Taniguchi is vice superintendent of the coastal safety force.

A Navy spokesman was mildly surprised when asked about it all. "You mean they have some other titles?" he said.

City Body To Study Problem Of Parking Tonight At Meeting

According to Warren Knowles, city manager, the City planning and zoning commission will meet tonight to study and act on proposed changes in the zoning ordinance on off-street parking.

The following report and recommendations will be presented to the commission by the City manager when they meet in the commission's room of the city hall at 7:30 p. m.

"For our cities to prosper, it is imperative that an adequate supply of off-street terminal spaces be provided, particularly in central business districts." In addition to private facilities, municipalities have found it necessary to provide additional spaces either by public parking spaces in garages or in lots and by off-street parking provisions in zoning ordinances.

Municipalities handle the situation differently throughout the country. Some have a very comprehensive plan for a wide range of uses. Other municipalities handle only specific areas such as hotels and theaters, commercial buildings and clubs, or a combination of the above. A comprehensive plan would undoubtedly be the best solution.

People requirements may vary out generally the following information can be used:

1. Single family dwellings—one to two spaces.

2. Multiple family dwellings—two to four spaces.

3. Hotels—81 square feet per guest or sleeping room, on one car space for each guest room.

4. Tourist homes, cabins, and motels—one car space per unit or cabin.

5. Theaters and auditoriums—two to four spaces per 100 seats for each seating area, usually 10 square feet of parking space per seat.

6. Hospitals—1 parking space per 1,000 square feet of floor area in the building.

7. Business, commercial, or industrial—1 parking space per 100 square feet of floor area.

8. Warehouse or storage that has a gross floor area of 10,000 square feet or more—one space for each 5,000 square feet in excess of the first 10,000.

9. A parking space may be considered as one eight feet wide and eighteen feet long (144 square feet).
