The Misfortune of Being Famous

Time was when even the greatest of men in all lines f activity, when foremost singers, writers, scientists, even kings and emperors, received very little mail, not because there were not thousands who would like to communicate with them, but because the difficulties of letter writing and delivering were so difficult as to make such communications almost impossible.

Not so, now. The efficiency of our post office depart-ment, while often most discouraging to some of us, actually worke a hardship in the other direction on those who for some reason or other have become famous. Let a man get

MEMBER ASSOCIATED PRESS The Associated Press is exclustive of the use for restricted to the us dred thousand persons.

Think then, of Luther Burbank, famed horticulturist, who s so pestered by letter writers, that he feels it necessary to broadcast this plea:

"Always, until the past few years, I have been able to reply, with the aid of several assistants, to # every letter received. Lately they have come by the thousands from every part of the earth and in every language, a continual daily stream, sometimes 500 per day or 2,000 or more per week. It has become an absolute physical as well as mental impossibility to give even the most brief reply to the infinite number of questions asked. This is a matter of self-protection, but I shall as heretofore try to reply when I can be of real service and not endanger my own life. Please always be very brief if a reply of any kind is expected."

You know then what to expect if you ever become famous. You will be inundated with a deluge of letters which you will never be able to read even if you spend all your time at it. You will need a large corps of secretaries to assist you in ule opening your mail and in answering the chosen few. And you will be accused of being a snob and a high-hatter by all whose letters you were unable to answer. The best thing to do in a case like this is to don't be

Thus did Seminole county citi-zens get their first view of a fea-ture race in central Florida. The day, was ideal. The crowd was a jolly one. The ladies were there in almost equal numbers to the men. The betting booths were to well patronized. The hot dog van-dors and the dispensors of sodal water were there doing a rushing business. The big boys and little boys, the rich and the poor, all mingled to make the day a happy one for those who love the "sonry of kings" as only a lover of thor-oughbreds can enjoy a horse race.
