McLain named to United Arts board of trustees

United Arts of Central Florida has announced the addition of Seminole County as trustee for the 2001 campaign.

Trustee members of United Arts make a long-term investment in the Central Florida arts community through annual gifts of $100,000 or more. Seminole County joins Orange and Osceola Counties on the United Arts Board of Directors. Seminole County Commissioner Daryl McLain will serve as trustee representative.

"Cultivating a well-developed arts community is a regional issue," McLain said. "Our seat on the United Arts board ensures that Seminole County's voice is heard." Studies have proven that a well developed arts and cultural community has a major impact on economic development, education and the overall livability of an area. Because these issues transcend geographic borders, United Arts has developed its mission to be regional in approach.

"We welcome Seminole County to the United Arts community," said Harvey Massey, United Arts Chairman of the Board. "Through cooperation on a regional basis, Seminole County joins United Arts in promoting, advocating and fund-raising for a quality arts and cultural community in Central Florida."

Residents defeat proposal to fund new street lights by a slim 5 percent margin

SANFORD — Property owners in Sanford's Historic District narrowly rejected a proposed special tax district that would fund the installation of 122 decorative streetlights throughout the neighborhood.

Of the 552 ballots sent out, 287 were returned, with 146 property owners voting against the proposal and 125 owners favoring the plan. Sixteen ballots were disqualified for various reasons.

More important than the number of votes was the total square footage of property — the determining factor for failure or success. The combined total of those against the plan was 1,138,904.70 square feet compared with 1,035,221.91 square feet for those supporting the lights. The 103,682.79 square feet difference represented a 4.76 percent margin of victory.

"There will be a lot of disappointed people, but there are also a lot of people who are breathing a sigh of relief," said Brady

Lessard, Sanford's mayor. "The vote was close, and I think it was the fairest way to get an accurate reading of what the community wants."

Sanford's Historic Trust, a group of residential home owners within the District, promoted the installation of street lights as a way to reduce crime and increase property values.

"Street lights were one of our top three priorities," said Linda Kuhn, a member of

A mascot with attitude

Seminole High School is being decorated with some new art work. Stacy Ridgeway and his son, Stacy Jr., owners of Mural On The Wall of Atlanta, Georgia, are in the process of painting a Seminole Indian on the side of the bleachers at the Nolls football stadium. Ridgeway said his company is the official mascot painter for the Southeastern United States. Locally, Ridgeway has painted murals for Sanford Middle School, Crooms Academy and several other schools. A typical mural takes about three days to complete, he said. "We do the first and second shift," Ridgeway said. The mural at the stadium is one of two Seminole Indians being painted for the school. Describing the mural, Ridgeway said, "He's an Indian with an attitude."

Husband arrested for dragging wife behind van

By Christopher Patton
Staff Writer

The Seminole County Sheriff's Office responded to an unusually high amount of calls for domestic violence and child abuse this weekend, including an incident where a woman was allegedly dragged behind a van driven by her husband.

According to police, the dispute began shortly after midnight Saturday inside the Cheers Bar, located at 156 Candice Drive in Fern Park. Valerie Norris was at the bar with her husband Jay Norris, 37, of 1511 Melody Lane in Apopka. She reportedly wanted to leave, but her husband would not give her the keys.

Norris said she was struck across the face and over the head with a plastic beer pitcher in the parking lot, and while trying to get into the van she was thrown to the ground. Her husband then allegedly wrapped a rope around her waist and tied it to the bumper of the vehicle.

After being dragged around the parking lot for a "short distance," she was able to get free and use her cell phone to call a friend. Deputies made contact with the victim at the Winter Springs Police Department and was "in and out of consciousness" while she gave her verbal statement.

At the Orlando Regional Medical Center, deputies described the victim's injuries as "serious" with abrasions on her left knee and shin, both elbows

Cyber High School adds 11th grade

By Michelle Jerla
Managing Editor

Sanford's Cyber High is on its way to becoming a four-year school.

The Seminole County School Board approved an amendment to the school's charter Monday to include the 11th grade. Initially, Cyber High's only enrolled ninth and 10th graders, with administrators planning to add the remaining secondary grades in its second and third year of operation.

The Board's decision quashed fears of several students, who were concerned they would not be able to return to Cyber High for the 11th grade.

Tristan Jordan, who finished the 10th grade last year, said Cyber High has enabled him to increase his grade point average. Boasting about the school's FCAT scores, he also indicated many of the students scored in the 95 to 98 percentile.

"I think we would be missing out on a lot if we didn't go back for our 11th-grade year," Jordan said. "The technology and support each teacher gives the students makes it a great environment."

Tina Moore-Juska of Oviedo said her daughter probably would have dropped out of school if the Board had not made the decision to amend the school's charter.

"She thought about quitting school before she enrolled at Cyber High," Moore-Juska said. "Now she is an A, B student on the honor roll and she intends on going to college."

"Cyber High changed her entire outlook on things," she said.

Cyber High opened its doors to 150 at-risk students at the beginning of the 2000 school year. It was the first private charter school in Florida to receive backing from a university, Nova Southeastern University, which provides support in personnel and on-line education services.

The school is designed to serve students identified as being at-risk of academic failure. Cyber High focuses on communications technologies, with emphasis placed on language, arts and mathematics. The curriculum combines traditional and Internet instruction, and each student receives a lap top computer.

Expect lane closures as crews continue work on GreeneWay

By Christopher Patton
Staff Writer

As construction crews press on to complete the 5.7 mile extension of the GreeneWay by the beginning of 2003, several road closures will take place this week to help the progression of their work.

Starting Wednesday, Interstate 4 will have nightly lane closures in each direction from Lake Mary Boulevard to State Road 46. Crews will shut down the median lane in both directions from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. every night until Saturday. Granite Construction Company will be tearing up the existing four-foot shoulder and replacing it with a 10-foot shoulder.

According to the project's public information officer Stefany Strong, the widening of the shoulder will serve several purposes.

"Right no there is not much space out there," Strong said. "Once we do the widening, cars and emergency vehicles will be able to use the median."

"They are also doing this particular work because they are going to shift the traffic on to it. This is just getting the traffic a good distance away from the construction workers."

Construction crews have been working at night for several months along Interstate 4 and their work will continue throughout the summer.

Thursday, motorists using U.S. Highway 17-92 will experience lane closures near the

SEMINOLE SUMMARY

A GLANCE AROUND OUR COUNTY

It's once again budget time

Government budget discussions are under way. There will be three choices — raise taxes, keep them as they are, or lower them. Certainly, every home owner would like it if their taxes were lowered, but that involves many enticements.

Each government department annually submits budget requests. The requests are then closely studied; and most of the time, they are trimmed considerably before they are accepted as tentative requests. For example, a police request for 10 new officers may be trimmed to four or five.

Nick Pfeifauf

Then, they go before commissions or councils and are presented in public hearings. Only after the public hearings have ended and votes taken, will we really know what millage rate is to be utilized in determining taxation.

Taxes we pay as property owners go to many separate entities. Included are county taxes, city taxes (if we live in an incorporated area), school taxes, taxes for the St. Johns Water Management District (SJWMD), and other special taxes, which may have been voted on in the past.

St. Johns has already announced it is lowering its millage rate from 0.472 to 0.462. For the owner of a home assessed at $75,000, with the $25,000 homestead exemption, it means taxes will drop by 50 cents. Doesn't sound like any big deal, does it? But the county and city may increase the millage, so the 50 cents might be of little help.

Taxes coming in to a government entity however, are based on property evaluation. If the population increases, there will be more homes paying taxes. If there are new businesses from which taxes will be obtained, or even annexation of property into a city which would lead to more increases in property taxes, keeping a millage rate at the present level would mean more income, without "raising" taxes. That has been going on for many years in Lake Mary as the city continues to expand and grow in businesses.

There are those however, who shout "No new taxes." They urge people not to vote for particular government leaders who vote for tax increases. Yet, these are many of the same people who demand more law enforcement, more utilities, more street lights, and more government services. That sounds like the dog, biting his own tail.

The thing to watch out for when tax discussions come around and budgets are scrutinized, is government waste, spending money on something which is not truly needed, or not advantageous to the population. Unless there is some serious under-cover motivation, what elected official would vote to accept an item which could be construed as waste? They want to be re-elected and voting in favor of waste is a sure way to lose that next election.

Yes, there are such government leaders — but thankfully, they are few and far between.

Of course, if a homeowner has made marked improvements recently which bring the assessed value of the home up, they can expect higher taxes. That's the price we pay for improvements. But it's also the additional value that can be placed on a home going up for sale. So, we lose some, but we gain some.

Answering the call of the wild

"Sometimes you have to go out with a guy even if he's wrong," Allison says, as we watch her date pull off his motorcycle helmet, shake his hair out and spit bug parts into the potted palm.

When it comes to dating, it's a small, small world. Harley used to date our friend, Kat, and the intimate details that she shared with us remain some of our favorite bedtime stories.

Normally, Allison is not your hand-me-down kinda girl. But Harley turns a pair of holy Levi's into a religion. Long wild hair, eyes like melted chocolate and arms that will make a girl forget English.

"He should come wrapped in a plain brown wrapper," I say, crunching on a pickle.

"He's an animal," Maxine huffs with disgust, as she dumps French onion dip into a bowl.

"You have no idea," Allison shivers. Al's cheeks may be flushed and her toes curled inside her Pradas, but if you ask us girls, it's a match made in the Twilight Zone. Al went to private schools so private the professors had trouble getting in. She's rich, runs the family business, and pops over to the Riviera like the rest of us go to mall.

Meanwhile, Harley's idea of grounding his future on a firm foundation is carefully securing the concrete block he uses to keep his travel trailer from rolling off the Wal-Mart parking lot. In an effort to bring Allison to her senses, Maxine has thrown a party — the theory being, if Al sees Harley around civilized mules, the call of the wild will be disconnected.

"A woman rises to the level of the man she's with," Maxine says, slipping half-frozen egg rolls onto a platter. "Another week with Harley and you'll be crawling on all fours!"

Judging by the sheepish grin on Al's face, regression has already begun.

"It's not like I need a man with money," Al shrugs, popping an olive in her mouth. "And after six months, who talks anyway?"

Well, she's got us there. Except for an occasional grunt and groan, Max isn't sure her husband has vocal chords. Still, there is something in Allison's voice that suggests this is more than a short spin on Harley's hog.

"Alright! Alright!" she admits. "I want to keep him!"

"Al, Al, Al," Max tuts, shaking her head ominously. "Remember Pamela Parker."

An icy blast from the past blows across the bottled salsa and we shudder in unison.

Pamela was a sunny blonde with a disposition to match. Her only dilemma in life was which Ivy League scholarship to accept. Then she fell in lust with Rip Totter.

The last we heard, she had two dirty-faced kids with a third on the way, while Rip — whose dad laid him off after they automated the gas pumps — passes the time passed out on the La-Z-Boy.

"He doesn't look that bad," Rosie says, "except for the beer gut pooching through the holes in his T-shirt and the Cost Cutter cheese dip crusting on his week-old beard."

On that note, we take a long hard look at Harley.

While the rest of the guys in the room — hair gelled, Polo shirts laundered and chinos pressed — discuss who lost the most in the stock market, Harley scans the room like he's searching for something to gnaw on. He looks like a wolf in a poodle parlor.

"All he needs is a good haircut, some decent clothes and a dead job," Allison insists.

The thought of Harley being domesticated into a wine-sipping, chino-wearing, corporate Ken doll brings tears to my eyes.

"Honey," I say gently, "you have to set him free."

"But he makes me so happy," she whispers, a tear running down her Chanel Souffle Mocha powder blush.

Sniffing a platter of appetizers, Harley picks up a cocktail wienie and wolfs it down. Studying the foodpick, he crams it into his ear, digs around a little, pulls it out and holds it to the light.

"Then again," Al says, "I mustn't think only of myself."

U.S. should boycott China's 2008 Olympics

More than 50 years ago, the Chinese communists evicted foreign missionaries on the grounds that the gospel they preached would undermine the creation of a communist heaven on earth. Now, the International Olympic Committee - a bastion of "hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil" when it comes to evil - will send the sports equivalent of missionaries to the 2008 Summer Games.

The Western press is full of columns, editorials and stories about the conversion possibilities of sports. Instead of passing out Bibles, sports missionaries will distribute sportsmanship and goodwill. These are, in the minds of some, supposed to persuade China's citizens, if not its dictators, to embrace our political and economic way of life. Never mind that just 12 years ago, these dictators ordered and applauded the massacre of student protesters in Tiananmen Square (estimates of the death toll range from 200 to 2,000), or that they have just completed an "anti-crime" campaign which resulted in 1,781 executions since April, according to Amnesty International.

Cal Thomas

China will pretend to adhere to the principles of the Olympic Charter, which include "Encouraging the establishment of a peaceful society concerned with the preservation of human dignity." Not even the staunchest defenders of Beijing 2008 can say that China lives up to such a standard.

Some believe holding the Olympics in Beijing will persuade China to change for the better. That's what former Carter administration national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski argued in a recent New York Times column. That's what USA Today founder Al Neuharth wrote in his July 6 column. While President Carter was right to boycott the Moscow Olympics in 1980 to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan the previous year, writes Brzezinski, China is different. Satellite TV and the Internet are opening up China to different ideas, he says. I doubt if the troops who killed those pro-democracy demonstrators in Tiananmen Square had TV or the Internet in their homes.

The Washington Post correctly editorialized last week: "Beijing appears prepared to press on with repression even while demanding that the world accept it as an Olympic host and World Trade Organization member."

A dangerous theme runs through Western thinking. We believe that if enough people can see our goodness and the benefits of democracy and free enterprise they will reject evil, perhaps even overthrowing their dictators. We are so convinced that our way of life is superior to all others that we think we only have to expose people to that way of life and they will embrace our beliefs.

Former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher warned two decades ago that we in the West make a mistake when we transpose our morality on those who don't share it. That is what those who think the world should ignore China's cemeteries, prisons and execution sites are doing. They believe the sight of athletes from free nations running, jumping, swimming and throwing will persuade China to convert to the democratic systems from which some athletes come. That view didn't work in Berlin in 1936. World War II began three years later.

Americans used to care most about freedom, our own and the freedom of others. Now, we care most about commerce. The material has replaced the spiritual. Nothing China does to suppress its people seems to sufficiently outrage enough politicians or corporations to change their attitude about doing business with this regime. Would the world have stood for awarding the Olympic Games to South Africa when apartheid was in force? Couldn't it have been argued that the Olympics might have opened South Africa to racial tolerance and diversity? Why would that argument have been rejected in the case of South Africa but accepted when it comes to China?

Unless there is observable improvement in China's human rights record, the United States should keep its athletes from participating in the Beijing games. The Carter administration refused to pretend that the invasion of Afghanistan didn't matter. Whoever is president in 2008 should boycott the Beijing Olympics if human rights have not improved in China. To do otherwise would be to dishonor the blood of the martyrs to freedom. To participate would mock the theme of "liberating strife" for which America the Beautiful is supposed to stand.

Credon wants Maloy to receive deserved credit

To the editor: It would be nice to see your newspaper say something complimentary about Seminole County Commissioner Grant Maloy. Here's your chance.

Mr. Maloy has been prodding the County Commission to enact a lobbying ordinance which would let the taxpayers know who has been cozying up to various special interests, but alas, Messers Morris, McLain and Van Der Wiede think it's a bad idea to let the ordinary folks know what goes on behind closed doors. After all, we only vote for them and pay their overly generous salaries. The difference is that Mr. Maloy is a citizen legislator who will not run for a third term while the others want to make a career at the expense of the local taxpayers. You may not like Mr. Maloy but you must admit that he, at least, has the courage of his convictions.

A view of Bush — Gore from the bottom up

One of the reasons so many politicians, no matter how they vote and talk, are against almost any kind of campaign finance reform is an old rule: Only 10 percent of what candidates do actually works, but no one knows which 10 percent. So, though public opinion may force them to cut expenditures, they really want to get and spend every penny they can get their hands on.

Richard Reeves

That rule seems to be confirmed by the experience of a 21-year-old Northwestern University student who spent his summer and fall vacations last year toiling away in the lower levels of Al Gore's Media Response Center in Nashville — the war room staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Charles Huebner had a bottom-up view of politicians and reporters doing their mating dance, and he described the moves in his honors thesis titled, "Shaping Media Messages: Communication Strategy and Tactics in the Gore 2000 Presidential Campaign."

Reading this little memoir with analysis you might get the impression that Gore, George W. Bush and the ladies and gentlemen of the press might all do better if they stayed home and kept their mouths shut. One of the patterns he shows in seven case studies is that more often than not the smaller the issue, the bigger the play in newspapers and on television — and the candidate who talks about mini-issues and mini-crises usually comes out the loser. The best "issue" analyzed by young Mr. Huebner was arguably the most ridiculous one in a campaign not noted for big things — the "RATS" commercial. In case you've forgotten, blessedly, a Bush television commercial attacking a Gore scheme for reducing the price folks pay for prescription drugs seemingly hovered on the last four letters of the word "DEMOCRATS." A Gore supporter in Seattle called Nashville and said it looked like subliminal advertising. No one proved anything in the media scrum that followed, except that George Bush could not pronounce "subliminal."

What happened in the war room was a decision to go for "an exclusive leak" to The New York Times by Gore communications director Mark Fabiani. To everyone's surprise and delight, the Times played the thing on Page One, ignoring the fact that the story had actually broken a few days earlier on a local Fox News program. No matter, the Times had more clout and credibility than Fox — or Gore for that matter — and the story and RATS ate up three or four campaign days.

As Huebner reports from leak central: "Simple, vivid and easily understood stories are the ones that get covered on national television. ... The story was an effective effort for Gore. It undermined Bush's message strategy, putting the governor on the defensive for several crucial days and preventing him from doing anything that might damage the Gore campaign."

The Gore campaign did nothing. The candidate said nothing. That's what "effective" meant. "This development effectively turned Bush 'off message'; that is, he no longer was telling the press what he wanted to tell them but instead was talking about whatever they wanted to hear," Huebner wrote. "By letting pundits and the press do all the dirty work and criticism, Gore avoided the risk of looking negative and unfair."

The paper also does some issue-tracking to show why another rule of campaign is simply: "Timing is everything." Or, perhaps it should be luck is everything. The example Huebner used was the "Failed Leadership" tour of Texas taken by Gore's running mate, Sen.

Joseph Lieberman. The idea was to generate television footage of stunts, guns and pollution in Gov. Bush's state. I hat might have done Gore some good, but pretty much no one outside the Nashville war room knew where Lieberman was.

Why? Because Lieberman toured during two days dominated by horrible foreign news with dramatic pictures: the terrorist attack on the U.S.S. Cole in Yemen and film of Palestinians killing an Israeli citizen, throwing his body out a window, then waving bloody hands in celebration.

So it goes in the dance of politics and media. Huebner ends up calling for more serious campaigning and coverage. That's what we all say, isn't it?

Silent killer lurks at the boat's stern

DEAR ABBY: As the owner of a cabin cruiser on Lake Powell in Utah, and an occasional renter of houseboats, I have recently learned how easily I, or one of my passengers, could become a victim of carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning.

The level of CO found beneath some houseboats is so high it can kill a person after only a few breaths.

Swim ladder designs on some houseboat models create an air cavity beneath the stern deck. This space is a popular place for kids to go swimming. Many boats also vent the gasoline generator exhaust into this space, which has no outlet, allowing lethal levels of carbon monoxide to build up within a few minutes.

Sadly, since 1994, nine people have died, and since 1991, more than 100 have required emergency care — all from CO poisoning at Lake Powell.

Abby, please warn readers about the dangers of houseboats. Houseboats are being recalled and refitted.

Houseboat owners should contact their nearest U.S. Coast Guard station for more information.

BOAT OWNER IN FLAGSTAFF, ARIZ.

DEAR BOAT OWNER: Your warning will be news to a lot of people — it was to me — and I hope it serves to alert individuals and families who vacation on or around rented houseboats.

The problem seems to be a design flaw in certain models of houseboats that allows carbon monoxide to collect beneath swim platforms or in the vicinity of the swim ladder near the back of the boat.

Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless, tasteless gas. Exposure to it causes headaches, dizziness, fatigue, confusion and nausea. The symptoms can mimic those of seasickness. When breathed in high concentrations or for prolonged periods, it can cause convulsions, seizures and death. It is also the No. 1 cause of poisoning deaths in the United States. That's why proper ventilation when burning carbon fuel is a must.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old about to turn 13. I don't remember all the details of a letter in your column that touched me, but I do know what it was about — sniffing inhalants.

When I read that letter I knew it had to be God speaking to me. I was experimenting with inhalants — and having problems such as depression and suicidal thoughts that were beginning to take over my life.

I looked at suicide as a way out. I had it all planned, but my cousin talked to me, sensed something was wrong, and I confided in her. I didn't think she'd squeal, but she did. At first I was mad that she'd wrecked my plan. Fortunately, I was put into "Teen Recovery" to work out some of my problems.

After five days I was out and on to a new and better life — thanks to the world's best parents, cousins, grandparents and friends that a person could ever have.

I hope my letter today will encourage some other troubled boy or girl out there to reach out if they're in trouble.

Just sign me ... PRE-TEEN WITH NEW HOPE

DEAR PRE-TEEN: I, too, hope your letter reassures other kids who are in trouble that they can get the help they need. Caring family and friends are the best support system in the world.

Lights

the Trust. "Obviously we're disappointed."

City engineers and consultants, working with Trust members, created a plan that would install 122, 15-foot historic Washington concrete black poles with a single Acorn, 175-watt lamp fixture. To pay for the $690,000 project, the city asked residents to share the burden through a special tax assessment district.

Costs for each property owner were based on the square footage of the lot at a rate of .0023 cents per square foot. The average residential cost was between $10 to $12 per month per parcel for a 10-year period to pay for the lights and installation. After the 10-year finance period, Florida Power & Light had guaranteed maintenance and energy costs would remain at a flat rate forever, with the average home owner paying about $4 per month.

While most residents liked the idea of additional lights, many protested the monthly finance and maintenance charge.

"This was a checkbook vote," Lessard said. "We asked people if they wanted to make a financial commitment. They said no."

Lessard said the street light issue may not be dead yet. There has been some discussion about the city installing lights along major thoroughfares like Sanford and Park avenues.

"The City Commission will have to make a decision on July 23 about where they want to go from here," Lessard said.

There's also the possibility the Trust or some other group could request another vote, maybe as soon as next year.

"I don't think there's anything to prevent the issue from being brought back up," Kuhn said. "Since it was so close, they may want to bring it up soon. It's up to the Trust."

Of the 287 ballots returned, 16 were disqualified for lack of a signature, no social security number, missing the deadline or in four cases, for not marking a choice — so called under-votes. While 16 ballots could change the outcome (the properties would need to average at least 6,500 square feet in size), the Trust is not expected to challenge them because nine of the 16 disqualified ballots were "no" votes.

Watch for different problems when growing tomatoes

Tomatoes are one of the most popular vegetables grown in Florida gardens. The plants are easy to grow and the fruits can be used fresh or cooked in a variety of ways.

For those of you who like to grow tomatoes, maybe you have faced one or more of the following problems.

Flower Drop
Flowers drop in tomatoes because of poor pollination.

Tomato flowers are self-pollinated, therefore, a pollination problem is usually related either to very high doses of nitrogen fertilizers or the pollen aborts due to excessive high night temperatures.

Some vegetable gardeners use very high doses of fertilizers to produce their crops, and consequently sometimes the amount of nitrogen is so high that the plants will produce an exuberant vegetative growth but the production of flowers will be affected. This is especially true when organic fertilizers such as manure are used in large quantities. Some varieties, specially those developed in the Northerner areas of the country, do not set fruits very well when the night temperatures are high and consequently most of the flowers will drop unfertilized.

Control
Use tomato varieties developed by the University of Florida tomato breeding program or varieties that will set fruits under conditions of high temperatures. Use recommended fertilizer levels, especially nitrogen, to avoid flower drop.

Al Ferrer

Bacterial Wilt
This disease affects mainly tomato but it also affects other plants such as green pepper and eggplant. Plants affected by this disease wilt during the day but may recover overnight.

The disease progresses rapidly and in a few days infected plants will permanently die. Symptoms are usually observed when plants start to develop the first fruits and day temperatures are high. A rapid diagnosis of this problem can be made by cutting the tomato stem at ground level and immersing the stem end in a glass of water.

A steady milky liquid will be observed coming from the stem end into the water. A dark background will enhance the view of the bacterial flow from the stem into the water.

Control
Most tomato varieties have no resistance to this disease. Do not plant tomato where this disease has appeared before. Infested beds should be rotated with plants not related to tomato.

Do not move soil from infested fields into other areas of your garden. No chemical control is recommended for home gardeners.

Blossom-End Rot
The typical symptom of this condition, which is an indication of calcium deficiency, is the discoloration of the end of the fruits, opposite to the point of attachment. The affected area will change from a pale green to a black sunken spot that is usually invaded by secondary organisms that contribute to the damage to the fruit.

Poorly limed, sandy soils can induce this condition as well as extreme changes in soil moisture.

Calcium may become unavailable if water is restricted around the root area, and during those short periods of calcium deficiency, it can affect the development of the rapidly growing fruits.

Control
Maintain an adequate moisture level in the bed. Lime according to soil test results. Foliar applications of calcium chloride or calcium nitrate can correct this problem. Dilute 4 tablespoons in 3 gallons of water and use 1 Qt of the solution per plant, twice a week as a foliar spray. There are products already mixed and ready to spray that can be purchased in garden stores.

Leaf Spots
Tomato plants can be affected by many leaf spots producing organisms. Many of those organisms are fungi, but some bacteria also produce leaf spots on tomato leaves. Some of those diseases are very serious and can defoliate a tomato plant in a very short period of time.

Make sure that you learn to recognize the different types of leaf spots to be able to use the best control method available. The agriculture extension service in your area can help you to recognize the different diseases and can recommend the best control methods.

Control
Use a fungicide spray program recommended in your area.

alcoholic and hadn't had a drink in 33 years, but was lonely after the passing of his wife, said Lindahl.

Lindahl said his father had phoned him after his heart congestive failure and told him he met a woman and didn't need his help. His suspicions raised after he hadn't heard from his father for several weeks.

"She told nurses that he had no family," Lindahl said. "When I showed up they weren't going to let me see him. When I showed up it was some miracle that brought him back to life. This was something we needed to solve before he passed on."

"I'm glad people are taking this thing seriously. It was rough there for awhile. I was doing my own investigations. Thank God for the Longwood Police Department. They did a bang up job. He was alone and she preyed on him."

A separate attorney revoked the power of attorney from Hallowell-Thomas and recovered the Hurley's vehicle and other personal property.

Investigators met with Hallowell-Thomas and she stated that Hurley had given her a $7,000 loan, which she was using to pay personal bills. Upon talking to Hurley, he stated to investigators that he had known Hallowell-Thomas for years and after his third stroke she came to him asking if anyone was handling his affairs.

He went on to explain how Hallowell-Thomas had taken him to an unknown attorney's office to sign the proper documentation for the power of attorney. He stated he did not know what the power of attorney meant, but trusted Hallowell-Thomas. However, he said he did not give her a $7,000 loan and only authorized her to remove $3,000 for his motorized scooter.

After a search warrant was executed, investigators located four withdrawal statements from Hurley's Hartford Life account totaling $14,000. Investigators also discovered several overdraft notices from the his bank accounts.

According to Lindahl, he believes about $15,000 was taken from his father in the last month and a half, but he continues his own investigation into suspected missing funds from all the way back in January.

"We had some information that an acquaintance of Hallowell-Thomas was contacting Lindahl," Investigator Stewartson said. "We were trying to find out who she was."

On July 13, investigators were contacted by Teresa Cottle who had been unanimously calling Lindahl stating Hallowell-Thomas was using Hurley's savings to pay for her bills. Cottle advised investigators she was a friend of Hallowell-Thomas and had witnessed her using the Hurley's credit cards to purchase lottery tickets and to pay her rent.

Cottle also advised investigators that on July 4 Hallowell-Thomas took her to Hurley's apartment to clean. Cottle stated the residence had cat feces all over it, a dead rat in the cat box, the bed had been soiled several times and two sinks were full of dirty dishes. Cottle said she threw out a large amount of spoiled food and the residence was unsanitary.

"At the end of the interview we asked her a blanket question if she knew anything else," Stewartson said. "That opened the door."

Cottle later advised investigators that Howell-Thomas had approached her several times about having her ex-husband, Andrew Gaba, killed. Cottle at first believed she was kidding, but Hallowell-Thomas continued to ask her. According to the police report, Hallowell-Thomas was trying to gain custody of couple's young girl from her ex-husband but was unsuccessful.

On July 14, investigators told Cottle to inform Hallowell-Thomas that she had found someone to kill her ex-husband. Two days later, Cottle once again contacted investigators and said Hallowell-Thomas said "hot damn" when she heard a hit man had been found.

According to Stewartson, it was necessary for investigators to show intent of the crime and that is why they had Casselberry Police Department Investigator Scott Pleasants pose as a hit man. Stewartson said they would have used one Longwood's investigators, but Hallowell-Thomas had already met them at prior interviews.

"We had to see if she would engage in conversation and basically spell out what she wanted done," Stewartson said.

Investigators placed a recording device in a Lake Fairy Motel room where the alleged hit man, Cottle and Hallowell-Thomas were to meet at 8 p.m. July 14. An investigator posing as a hit man told Hallowell-Thomas the job would cost $3,000.

Hallowell-Thomas said "She didn't think it would cost that much," but handed over a $300 down payment, a photo of her ex-husband and directions to his house.

She was immediately arrested by investigators and charged with larceny over $300, exploitation of the elderly and criminal attempt to conspire in a capital felony.

"It's one of those things if you let go it could be tragic," Stewartson said. "And there's a child involved so it's something that had to be looked into."

The lead investigator for case is Ryan Bruce. Investigators Stewartson, Darrell McCaskill and James Hockenberry assisted in the case.

School

Cyber High's charter was not a unanimous. Board member Larry Furlong, the only Board member to vote against the motion, voiced concerns about Cyber High's student enrollment projections and funding.

Administrators project 175 students, including about 40, 10th-graders, will attend Cyber High during the 2001-2002 school year, but Cyber High Principal Leona Rachman said the school's charter does not put a limit on the number of students who can enroll at the school.

Furlong said the school needs an enrollment cap to allow for the correct allocation of state and district funds to the school.

"You can't sign up as many kids as you can and then come back and ask for money," Furlong said.

However, Rachman said her administration wants to work with the school district in regard to funding. She also said the school will not let enrollment get out of hand.

"We would like to grow," she said. "I am not saying we are going to get 1,000 students. We really don't want to enroll more than 300 students."

Students interested in enrolling at Cyber High Charter School can contact 407-324-1212.

During Monday's meeting, the School Board also:

- Approved the 2000-2001 Annual Report for submission to the United States Justice Department. The 2000-2001 Consent Decree Annual Report documents the Board's efforts with respect to the July 10, 2000, Consent Decree with the United States of America. Sections II-IV of the report demonstrate the Seminole County School Board's efforts to implement the plans, policies, and procedures for the unitary status areas of facilities, cheerleading, and student assignment. Sections V-IX of the report demonstrate the Board's good faith efforts to the future operation of the district as evidenced by the implementation of the plans, policies and procedures in the areas of faculty recruitment and hiring, higher level courses, gifted and mental disabilities programs, and discipline.

• Entered into contract with Protective Life to provide employees dental coverage on a voluntary basis, effective for the plan year beginning Oct. 1. Employees may learn about the new optional dental plan at the employee benefits open enrollment meetings scheduled in the near future.

• Adopted the proposed revisions to the Pupil Progression Plan 2001-2002 policy.

• Adopted the proposed revisions to an attachment of the School Attendance/Transfer policy. The revised attachment pertains to the elementary attendance zones and addresses the development of the Forest Lake Academy property, which will be zoned for Forest City Elementary.

The Board will hold a public hearing regarding the proposed adoption of the 2001-2002 tentative budget on July 24 at 5:05 p.m. The next School Board Meeting will be held on Aug. 14 at 3:30 p.m.

Closures

Intersection of Airport Boulevard. One lane in each direction will be closed from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. as crews pour concrete for the highway's overpass.

Sunday, Airport Boulevard will be closed between U.S. Highway 17-92 and Live Oak Boulevard during the hours of 9:30 p.m. and 6:30 a.m. Crews are scheduled to pave additional lanes that will allow for a traffic shift as workers continue their work in the area.

Originally, Interstate 4 nightly lane closures were to begin Monday, but like many construction projects in Central Florida, the work was delayed because of rain the following week, according to Strong.

"What we have is three sections on this project right now," Strong said. "You get different things going on at different times, but we are giving us some space because anything around these areas of construction can happen, like bad weather. All motorists traveling around these areas of construction are urged to drive carefully.

Arrest

and a contusion on her forehead. The victim was also evaluated for neurological damage.

Jay was arrested at his home at 8 a.m. Sunday and was charged with aggravated battery with a deadly weapon. Valorie has since been released from the hospital.

"There never seems to be a rhyme or reason when it happens," said SCSO Information officer Steve Olson about the large number of domestic calls during the weekend. "Like Super Bowl weekend I thought we would have a bunch, but we didn't. It's a cyclical type of thing — that's what I have observed."

On Sunday, deputies also responded to a Sanford home where Daniel Perez, 35, was charged with aggravated abuse (cruelty toward children). The mother reportedly had dropped the two children off the day before for a visit with their father, but when she returned the next day several bruises were found on the two-year-old boy's buttocks and lower back.

"It's a phenomenon of human nature," said Stephanie Ryan manager of SCSO intelligence center about the weekend's outbreak of family violence. "We certainly look at all aspects of criminal activity, but its hard to pinpoint the cause of abuse. That would be a wonderful goal for us to achieve.

"Prevention like anything else is in education. There is a circle of violence that occurs and it repeats itself in a family unit. So you have to somehow break the cycle."

Dalli's Pizzeria

Joe Dalli, and his wife Julie, owner's of Dalli's Pizzeria, would like all the folks in Lake Mary and the surrounding area to know that authentic New York style pizza has arrived.

The Pizzeria is located at 101 North Country Club Road, Lake Mary. Dalli said he moved to Florida in 1995 from Brooklyn, New York, and decided to open the restaurant in 1998. "I wanted to go into business for myself," he said. "It's nice because I get to meet a lot of people, and I like doing that." After eating at other establishments, Dalli said he always came away unsatisfied. "The portions were too small," he said. At the Pizzeria, Dalli sees to it the portions are large and no one leaves hungry. Dalli pointed out that all the food — including the New York style pizza — is prepared using favorite family recipes. "But it's a lot more work now then it was in my mom's kitchen." "Now I make large pots of sauce instead of small ones," he said smiling.

Some of Dalli's famous Italian cuisine includes: pasta dinners made with spaghetti, linguini and ziti. And covered with homemade meat sauce, mushroom sauce, red or white clam sauce, and meatballs or sausage.

Baked dishes include: eggplant parmigiana, ravioli, stuffed shells, manicotti, homemade lasagna and baked ziti. Dalli's dinners feature dishes made with chicken, veal or seafood. Chicken marsala, veal parmigiana, and shrimp scampi are only several of the mouthwatering delicacies Dalli's has to offer. The best part is the reasonable prices. Dalli said pasta dishes run between $5.95 and $7.95, with special dishes around $8.95. Baked dishes are $6.95 or $7.95 and dinners are from $8.95 to $10.95.

But if you are a pizzaholic, you won't be disappointed with the large variety of New York and Sicilian style pies. In addition to the calzones and strombolis, Dalli's offers a children's menu (for kids under 12—dine in only, drink included). Prices are from $1.99 for a slice of pizza to $3.25 for ziti with meatball.

Dalli's is not only a community business, they also are involved in the community. Dalli said the restaurant is business partners with the school district, supporting various school projects and also donates food to numerous charitable organizations in the area.

The restaurant is open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday. "We're closed on Sunday, Dalli said, because I need to spend some time with my wife and two children, Joshua, 5, and Jenna, 5-months.

Accidents on rented watercraft a concern

Col. Robert L. Edwards, director of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission's (FWC) Division of Law Enforcement, has directed his officers to make sure facilities that rent PWCs (personal water craft) and other boats are providing the public with boating safety information that is required by law.

Jim Shupe

"We must address careless operation and boaters not paying attention to what's going on around them," Edwards said. "Effective boater education is our best solution, and we hope the rental operators also understand how important it is."

In 2000, three-fourths of PWC accidents occurred on borrowed or rented vessels, and statistics show an alarming increase in accidents. PWCs comprised only 13 percent of all registered vessels, but they accounted for 32 percent of all boating accidents (382 out of a total of 1,194 statewide) and 46 percent of all boating injuries, including nine fatalities.

The accident rate for PWCs was 386.6 accidents per 100,000 registered vessels, more than three times the accident rate of all other vessel types. The most common type of PWC accident was collision with another vessel, followed by collision with a fixed object.

New laws, effective Oct. 1, 2000, require businesses that rent boats, including PWCs, to provide boating safety information. Employees putting patrons in these rented craft must have completed a boater safety course approved by the FWC and the National Association of State Boating Law Administrators (NASBLA).

Information must include: the operational characteristics of the vessel; safe vessel operation and right-of-way; vessel operator responsibility; and local characteristics of the waterway where the vessel will be operated.

Everyone born after Sept. 30, 1980 who plans to rent a vessel with 10 horsepower or greater must be able to show they have successfully passed an approved boater education course, or they can take a temporary certificate exam from a livery or marina that has contracted with the FWC to administer the exam.

Rules also require rental businesses to display boating safety information in a visible place. And the age of a person who can sign the rental contract is now 18, up from 16.

To obtain a boating safety education course or to get more information about 2000 boating accident statistics, visit our Website at: <http://floridaconservation.org/>

OVIEDO — Kids from the Florida JETS Wrestling Club competed in two separate national-level tournaments July 5-8.

The USA Wrestling Kids Nationals were held in Fresno, California, while the AAU Grand Nationals were held in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Both tournaments involved the Greco-Roman and Freestyle styles of wrestling—the styles wrestled in Olympic and all other international-level competitions. Those placing in the top six in the nation in their respective weight class are awarded All-American status.

Each JETS wrestler who competed garnered All-American status. JETS traveling to Fresno, with accom-

The national tournament in Fargo is the largest high school-level wrestling event in the nation, with over 100 participants in each weight class. It is the proving ground where college coaches do a majority of their next-level recruiting.

JETS wrestlers will also participate in a Team Florida training camp July 16-20 at North Dakota University, with competition taking place July 21-28 at the Fargo Dome.

SANFORD — Asa Evans' two-out, two-run single capped a seven-run seventh inning as Central Baptist Church rallied to claim yet another Sanford Parks and Recreation Department Church Slow Pitch Softball League Championship.

Entering the top of the seventh inning Monday night at Zinn Beck Field, Central Baptist trailed Westview Baptist Church 7-1 and had only four hits.

But Evans opened the fateful seventh with a single and then scored all the way from first on a double by Brent Templeton to start the rally and then capped the comeback nine batters later with his bases-loaded single up the middle.

With the lead in hand former All-America pitcher Tom Gracey went to work, getting a pop up and a strike out, before getting a short foul fly down the leftfield line that Evans caught after a long run to give Central Baptist an 8-7 Spring League Championship clinching victory.

Central Baptist finished the season with an 11-1 record, but it needed every one of those wins as the Saints had won a doubleheader earlier in the evening to complete their season at 10-2.

Accidents on rented watercraft a concern

Col. Robert L. Edwards, director of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission's (FWC) Division of Law Enforcement, has directed his officers to make sure facilities that rent PWCs (personal water craft) and other boats are providing the public with boating safety information that is required by law.

Jim Shupe

"We must address careless operation and boaters not paying attention to what's going on around them," Edwards said. "Effective boater education is our best solution, and we hope the rental operators also understand how important it is."

In 2000, three-fourths of PWC accidents occurred on borrowed or rented vessels, and statistics show an alarming increase in accidents. PWCs comprised only 13 percent of all registered vessels, but they accounted for 32 percent of all boating accidents (382 out of a total of 1,194 statewide) and 46 percent of all boating injuries, including nine fatalities.

The accident rate for PWCs was 386.6 accidents per 100,000 registered vessels, more than three times the accident rate of all other vessel types. The most common type of PWC accident was collision with another vessel, followed by collision with a fixed object.

New laws, effective Oct. 1, 2000, require businesses that rent boats, including PWCs, to provide boating safety information. Employees putting patrons in these rented craft must have completed a boater safety course approved by the FWC and the National Association of State Boating Law Administrators (NASBLA).

Information must include: the operational characteristics of the vessel; safe vessel operation and right-of-way; vessel operator responsibility; and local characteristics of the waterway where the vessel will be operated.

Everyone born after Sept. 30, 1980 who plans to rent a vessel with 10 horsepower or greater must be able to show they have successfully passed an approved boater education course, or they can take a temporary certificate exam from a livery or marina that has contracted with the FWC to administer the exam.

Rules also require rental businesses to display boating safety information in a visible place. And the age of a person who can sign the rental contract is now 18, up from 16.

To obtain a boating safety education course or to get more information about 2000 boating accident statistics, visit our Website at: <http://floridaconservation.org/> fourth inning to erase a 9-7 deficit and went on to post a 20-10 run rule win over Christians United in the opening game of the evening.

The Saints then got off to a fast start in the second game, scoring five runs in the bottom of the first inning to wipe out a 2-0 deficit and then tacked on four runs in the second inning and eventually scored three runs in the sixth inning to close out a runner-up clinching 16-6 run rule win over Westview Baptist.

That win forced Central Baptist to win the nightcap, because a loss would have thrown the league into a tie and since the two teams split their two games in the regular season a winner-take-all game would have had to be played next Monday.

Westview Baptist took a 3-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning as Littleton led off with a single and Mortan followed with an inside-the-park home run, driving the ball to the fence in left-center field.

Fore followed with a single and went to third on a single by Curtis Tabor before scoring the third run on a sacrifice fly by Bobby Tabor.

Central Baptist got a run back in the top of the second inning when Robert Hirt got a pitch to his liking and drove the ball over the 330-foot sign in left field, the first ball to leave Zinn Beck in left in a softball game this year.

The score remained 3-1 until the bottom of the third inning when Westview Baptist doubled its scoring.

Bobby Tabor led off with a single and got to second on an error, allowing Szyvester to reach safely. Salsbury then singled to load the bases and Bobby Tabor scored when Page forced Salsbury at second.

Campbell then grounded to third, but the throw was wild to first, allowing both Sylvester and Page to score.

Westview Baptist added to the lead in the fourth inning as Mortan led off with a single, went to second on a fly to left by Fore and scored on a single by Curtis Tabor.

Central Baptist then made the play that probably saved the game as Curtis Tabor was thrown out at the plate trying to score on brother Bobby Tabor's double to right-center.

Evans opened the seventh for Central Baptist with his single and scored on Templeton's double and Templeton scored on a single by Mike Hartman, breathing life into the Central Baptist players.

A fly out and a force of Hartman on a grounder by Jeff Neff looked like it might end the Central hopes, but Jay Crutchfield singled and Mike McCoy walked to load the bases.

Gracey then grounded to short, but the throw to third was dropped, keeping the inning alive and scoring Neff.

Hirt and Brian Morgan walked to force in two more runs, setting the stage for Evans' heroics.

action. Bass, however, prefer the low light conditions of early morning and late afternoon. The Puzzle Lake area is providing top notch action with all species. Wading is good this time of year, as bass tend to bunch up in holding areas such as deep bends, steep banks, slough and creek mouths, and sand bars. I prefer a tiny spinning outfit rigged with six-pound test and a small Rapala. This tactic is deadly this time of year in the Puzzle Lake area.

Sebastian Inlet has steady catch and release action with snook, with most fish running from 8-to-15 pounds. Also expect a few flounder, redfish, and trout. Large live shrimp, finger mullet, and pinfish are the top baits.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports that king mackerel are the main attraction. Kings can be found from just off the beach, to the buoy line and 8 A Reef and Pelican Flats. Tripletail are in the buoy line, while sheepshead and flounder can be found inside the Port. Trout and redfish are rated as fair in the Banana and Indian rivers.

Ponce Inlet has fast action with sheepshead, drum, redfish, jack crevalle and small bluefish. Live or dead shrimp is the top bait. Trout and redfish are rated as good in Mosquito Lagoon.

TRITON FALLS, N.J. - Just ask current CART points leader Kenny Brack what he thinks about self-death and he'll tell you it is a self-imposed obstacle to be traversed.

He believes wholeheartedly that nothing is impossible if you're focused determination is what won Brack the Indy Racing League Champion of the Year award, the 2000 CART Rookie of the Year award, two CART wins to date in 2001 and his second chance at the True Value IROC championship - all of this accomplished in less than four years after arriving in the United States.

Rusty Wallace, Dale Jarrett, Jeff Gordon and Jeff Burton. He would have equal equipment and be on the same learning curve as Eddie Cheever Jr. on Greg Moore and Adrian Fernandez, all of whom Brack's sixth place finish in the 1999 series was a victory as his follow on wheel competitors, Indy in different forms of auto racing making him the quintessential IROC champion.

The 2001 25th annual Indy Motor Speedway and the Value IROC series will conclude on August 4 at the 100th Anniversary of the Indianapolis 500. Brack is expected to be on the pole for the race.
