SANFORD - Some residents continue to object to the city ordinance against parking recreational vehicles in front yards.

A request for an exemption was brought before the Sanford city commission this past Monday.

He said this has been the case for a number of years, but recently, the city placed a sticker on the window saying that the vehicle had to be moved, that it was in violation of the city ordinance.

During discussion on the matter at the regular commission meeting... Mayor Bettye Smith pointed out that parking the vehicle on the properly was one situation, but living in it was another, which was also against city codes.

City Manager Bill Simmons asked if Mohr's property would allow the vehicle to park along the side or in See Parking, Page 5A

Fishy record falls

NASHVILLE — The tale of D.L. Hayes' 11-pound, 15-ounce smallmouth base seemed fishy for 41 years.

The International Game Fish Association in Florida formally discredited Hayes' record this month for catching the portly base in Dale Hollow Lake on July 9, 1955.

The Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency is considering doing the same but isn't ready "to jump in the same body of water yet," said Bill Reeves, director of fish management.

Hayes' fish apparently was stuffed — with lead sinkers and outboard motor parts. The fish stuffer himself has been trying to tell people that since six weeks after it happened.

"At the time I put the weights in the fish, I did not know it would rob someone of the world's record smallmouth bass, and I do not want to be a party to such a transaction," John H. Barlow said in an affidavit Aug. 17, 1955.

No one paid any attention until Eldon Davis, an outdoors writer and assistant principal of Livingston Academy in Livingston, Tenni, saw the base at a show five years ago.

He said he and several anglers gathered around didn't think the fish could possibly weigh nearly 12 pounds.

"I started talking to people, knowledgestic fishermen wise had fished Dale Hollow for years." Davis said by telephone Thursday. "I began to hear stories that this fish was a bear."

Then he found the affidavit that Barlow had filed all those years ago with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

"I wrassled with whether or not to do anything about it because I knew the potential harm it could do." he said. "I threw it in a drawer where it stayed until this past summer."

Regents to vote on tenure reform that would make dismissal easier

By Southern DATE Associated Press Writer

long-standing system of tenure will lose some of its potency in state universities under a rule about to be adopted by the about to be adopted by the Board of Regents.

Critics have long complained that tenured professors are extremely difficult to dismise; because good professors don't need it, tenure benefits only the lasy and incompetent.

That, however, will likely change Sept. 27, as the regents take up "post-tenure review," a system that will force the 5,800 tenured professors at the 10 state universities to undergo an exhaustive evaluation at least every seven years.

"This is a corisensus about how to improve the tenure universities Chancellor Charlie Reed said Thursday.

A professor exceeding stan-dards could be rewarded with more money or extra time off. But a professor consistently below standards would face below standards would face "disciplinary action, up to and including dismissal."

"There's the perception that once you're tenured, things tend to go a little slack," and Dave Spence, executive vice chancellor. "We see this as a very positive thing."

Faculty, predictably, do not. "It's a phony issue," said Vencile Smith, a communication professor at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raion and an active member of the United Faculty of Florida union. "I don't think there's any need for tenure revision.

She said most professors work a 70-hour week, spending countless uncompensated hours helping students with projects and providing community ser-vice programs. What's more, all faculty already undergo an annual review.

"There isn't a guarantee of a lifetime job," said Florida State University chemistry professor Ralph Dougherty, a former president of FSU's faculty union chapter. "If you don't do your tob you can be canned."

job, you can be canned."

Steve Uhlfelder, the regents' vice chairman and the board's most vocal critic of tenure, said the existing system makes firing a professor for anything short of heinous or unprofessional conduct extremely difficult.

Further, he said, there is no reason for universities to be any less responsive to free-market forces than any other business, particularly when the schools are in such a buyer's market.

"We have no shortage of qualified candidates," said Uhifelder, a Tallahassee lawyer.
"We have 10 to 20 candidates for every position."

Uhifelder and other critics point out that in no other industry do professionals earning salaries that range from about $35,000 to $65,000 and more have as much job security as in academia.

Purported names of 4,000 AIDS patients leaked to Tampa press

By PAT LESCHER
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA - State investigators worked to find out how widely a secret list of AIDS patients was responsible for what could be the worst violation of AIDS confidentiality in the country.

William B. Calvert III, one of only three state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services employees with authorized access to the nearly 4,000 names, was on paid suspension Thursday as the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and HRS looked into the security breach at the Pinellas County health department.

Copies of a computer disk with the names of AIDS patients were shipped anonymously to The Tampa Tribune and St. Petersburg Times. The sender said Calvert, 35, of Treasure laland, dropped it after showing it to friends at a gay bar.

Calvert's home telephone number is unpublished and he could not be reached for comment late Thursday, but he has denied leaking the names.

"We have determined there has been a breach of confidentiality." said Elaine Fulton-Jones, HRS spokeswoman in Pinellas County. "We are not confirming what is on the list because that would be a breach of confidentiality. But the information we have was enough to call in FDLE.

"If any employee is found to have breached this trust, we would take the strongest steps possible. There is no excuse, she said.

Tony Weich, HRS spokesman in Tallahassee, echoed her sentiments.

''The trust was broken. Somebody, somewhere broke the trust. We are working with the utmost urgency. We worry about obstacles to being tested. It's so important for people to get tested. They can get help and treatment. And partner notification can save a life.

AIDS activists say they are -concerned about the anxiety especially of those recently diagnosed with AIDS who may fear losing their family, jobs and friends if their names were made public.

Jay Coburn of the AIDS Action Council in Washington, D.C., said his group was not aware of any breach of confidentiality affecting so many people.

The information is kept under several different lock systems, in a locked room, with a secret paseword access. Fulton-Jones said. The state health depart-ment keeps track of treatment provided the patients listed and turns that information over to the federal government.

MIAMI - In one of those examples of man lootishly messing with Mother Nature. a huge kind of South American toad was let loose in South Florida, the Caribbean. Hawaii, the Philippines and Australia earlier this century to try to control sugar cane pests.

Big mistake. The toads, which can grow to more than three pounds, are overrunning a part of Australia. They're scaring tourists in the Caribbean and occasionally killing dogs in South Florida with a poison so potent that the family pets die in a matter of minutes.

"Someone got this wild idea it would increase sugar cane production. It didn't." said University of Miami biologist Jay Savage. "You'd have to have bumper to bumper toads to increase a crop."Now they've become a pest themselves."

Some people try to use the poison of the toad. Bufo marinus, and its cousins as an aphrodisiac and a hallucinogen. The substance was sold up until last year in grocery stores and tobacco shops in the United States. "Four New York men purchased it, thinking it was an oral aphrodisise. They died. It oral aphrodisiac. They died. It was supposed to be topically applied." said Dr. Rossanne P hilen, a medical epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control, in Atlanta.

something that big, they leave it alone." Savage said. The poison glands are in two big bumps, one behind each eye on the sides of the head.

"It's nasty stuff. The primary stuff is a steroid that is a cardiotoxin," Savage said. "If a dog gets a good shot of the toxin, it can kill it. The first sign is that the dog starts frothing at the mouth.'

If the toxin is spit out, the toad just ends up ruining the dog's day. But if the dog swallows the poison, death can be quick, Savage said.

The Centers for Disease Control says that the poison is similar to a prescription heart drug digoxin and bufa-dienolides, a steroid that disrupts the heart's rhythm.

'It is not usually a problem for human beings. They might get some on their hands and then perhaps put their fingers in their mouth or wipe their eyes. It wouldn't be enough to stop the heart, but the toxin is very irritating to the membranes," Savage said.

Although most people think of welfare recipients when they think of people who receive government largess, a report released Thursday by the non-partisan policy group Florida TaxWatch refutes that notion.

The study found that single wage-earners, married couples without children and retirees contributed the most to the state

It takes three

The page 1 story in the Sanford Herald, Thursday, Sept. 19, was headlined "Thwarting Teen Gangs." The opening sentence said, "Now that it has been established that there are gangs in Seminole County, perhaps only in the formative stages, the sheriff's department and the school district are working together to reduce or eliminate the problem before it gets out of hand."

Editorially speaking, it's about cottonpickin' time.

Gang activities have been visible locally for a number of years, and growing regularly. It should have been evident as much as two years ago, when the Sanford Herald had stories and photographs of gang symbols spray-painted on dumpsters and a few other structures around the city. (Some have never been painted out, even today). Yet officials continued to deny the existence of gangs, saying only that it was the work of a "bunch of kids".

We wonder, if there hadn't been a teenconnected shooting death recently if officials would still be denying that we have youth gangs. We even wonder why, at the present time at least, officials are saying that if we have gangs, they are, "only in the formative stages.

There should be little doubt. We have active gangs in our cities and county, and they have been, or soon will be, responsible for incidents which will make us wonder what has gone wrong.

But the point here is that, regardless of how they plan to approach this problem, we cannot allow them to do it by themselves. It takes three entities law enforcement, the school system, and parents.

Yes, the parents.

They must be more aware of the actions of the youngsters, especially at night. Whether or not the city eventually enacts a curfew, parents should consider one for their own

Tackling a problem in its beginning stages may be a great deal easier than if we allow it to grow beyond control.

It takes three, and considering that, we encourage all parents to join with the schools and law enforcement in this endeavor.

LETTER

Thank you

I would like to thank the Sanford Herald and Mr. Hunt for the insightful article about the attempted HRS budget cuts to Creserode (August 18 edition). I feel that your article better informed the public of the true tesues incurred and the potential problems that could arise from the closing of this facility.

Mr. Berry's statement that Crossreads was "a glaring example of an agency that could survive" couldn't be further from the truth. While it is true that most recurring addicts and alcoholics do become some of the most successful and hardest working members of the job force, when they first enter treatment, most are totally broke and defeated. They usually have lost everything. They are as indigent as indigent can be. They no longer have any friends, family members to turn to, jobs or money. If they did, they probably wouldn't be ready to seek help. For this reason, it is imperative that Crossroads and other facilities of its kind, remain funded by outside organizations like HRS. In order to keep their doors open to the people who desperately need it, facilities like these need the money up front and not after treatment has been given. It is vital not only to the individuals themselves, but also to the community as a whole with such help, addicts and alcoholics can once again rejein sectory as helpful, contributing members instead of living as perasites on other state and locally funded programs like welfare and/or penal institutions.

I for one, being a current client of Crossroads' Level II Resident Program, am grateful for the honest and even presentation of the facts about this issue. Crossroads is teaching me much more than just how to live drug and alcohol free. It is showing me how to live a more productive, purpossful life. Not only am I learning how to change my additive a new beginning to recognize my additive thought processes and rationalisations. Noticing when I'm alsping into my addict-thinking mades is essential to my being able to change my entire way of living. By changing the way I think and perceive the world, I am better equipped to live life on life's terms without depending on drugs or alcohol. With the hole of the staff is Crossroads, Alcoholica Assentance and the God of my understanding. I am better quity in the live like I want; and so again I limit was for writing the article in hopes thus others like myself may benefit from the extraordinery life-awing, life-changing program at Crossroads.

WILLIAM RASPBERRY

Are we scaring ourselves to death?

Washington-Americans may be as frightened as we've ever been, at least in peacetime. Plane crashes, environmental dangers, the seemingly endless discovery of new carcinogens in our food, and, of course, violent crime: Of course we're frightened.

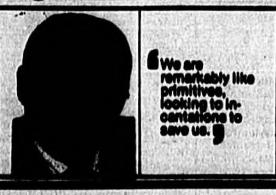

And yet, as two people tried to tell us this week, we cometimes seem most frightened of things that pose the least danger for us. We are remarkably like primitives, looking to incantations and human sacrifice to seve us from things that are the equivalent of tidal waves and volcanoes—awful when they happen but, statistically, at least, not much of a threat to new one of us. to any one of us.

John Stessel confronted the tasse directly in this week's repeat of his ABC-TV special. 'Are We scaring Ourselves to Death?' He leoted at everything from goled communities and ever-scalous product safety regulations to the EPA's reluctantly shandanes plan to dig up much of Aspen, Cole., and remove themsends of residents in order to righthe town of the lead-contaminated soil that is a relic of its aliver mining past.

Lead is a problem, implicated in painful disease, mental retardation and even death, and Aspen's soil has lots of it. But how much danger? Tests of residents indicated that they have lower levels of lead in their blood than the EPA hoped to reach by wrecking the town.

And so it went, according to Stessel's

And so it went, according to Stoseet's Monday night report, for effort after effort to rease the marginal safety of circumstances it were only slightly dangerous to begin

The ereck's other report was from the Campaign for an Effective Crime Policy (CECP). For loss dramatic than the TV special, this report commissed the impact of "three strikes and yeave out" legislation. The authors (principally Walter Dickey, former corrections commissioner for Wisconsin) lard their report with covents-the 22 states that have three strikes love have widely varying guidelines for their invention, and the two-year-old federal statute has been used to sentence only nine effecters. But the conclusion is similar to Stoosel's: Whatever good it does may be outweighed by the coets.

Nor is Dickey particularly surprised. "If the impetus had come from police and district atterneys telling us they needed a new tool to do a better job. I'd have taken it more seriously. But this came from the political people looking for sound-bite celebrity by catering to public fear. Many of the states that have three-strikes laws aren't even using them, on the simple ground that they aren't needed."

But ien't there really a problem with violent crime that threatens to grow out of control? Doesn't it make sense to identify these "career" violent offenders and put them away for good?

Well, ne and yes. For most Americans, violent crime is no more of a threat than it was 10 or 30 years ago. We perceive it differently because more of it is in the news.

As for putting the instatently violent in prison for life, Dickey, whose organization comprises some 1,100 criminal justice professionals and officials in all 50 states, has its objection.

And that, of course, is the issue. Even if each new public or private dellar spent in fear made us a tiny bit eafer, we'd have to reflect on the wisdom of some of the expenditures. But if saled communities increase alienation, if Draconian sentences decrease the willingness of criminals to enter guilty piece (and thereby drive up the cost of trials) or else reduce the willingness of juries to convict, if boby seats for airliners mean parents have to buy tickets for their toddlers-we have to start asking: How much safer is only enough?

On "Herd Copy," which paid Sherry Rowlands somewhat more than her usual hourly wags, the hooter held the high ground. In time magazine, Dick Morrie and his wife Elicen McCann posed for a portrait suggesting that Sherry was barely a blip in their marital bliss.

But just a few cable channels away from "Hard Copy," there was a new blow being struck for chamelessness. This time the once-forbidden topic for television wasn't sex. It was money. The former sin wasn't infidelity. It was debt.

This summer's hip new guis abow on Lifetime is named after our latest national fad: "Dobt." On the same night that Sherry did the Dick story, a cheery young woman named Melanie was telling the world why she was in the red for $7,223. Because, also chirped, "the world has too many nice shoes."

In this guts show, the debters may be down at the heels, but they are relentisesly upbent. The host-is alternately described as "The Crown Prince of Credit" and "The Duke of Debt." The questions are cultural trivia for the Generation Insolvent.

Last of 3 sons of immigrant family that built farm empire

OVIEDO. Pla. - Ferdinand Duda, the last of three sons of an immigrant family that built a Central Piorida celery farm into an agribueiness giant, is dead at the age of 87.

Duda, 87, came to this area as a child from the Slovak region of the Austro-Hungarian empire shortly after the turn of the century. The family patriarch, Andrew Duda, had emigrated several years earlier.

The Duda family slowly built the family farm into a diversified company called A. Duda & Sons Inc., operating in California, Arisona, Texas, Mexico and Australia. In addition to growing citrus, vegetables, sugar cane has branched into land development in Brevard County.

Ferdinand Duda, known as "Mr. Ferdinand" was the youngest of the three Duda boys and widely regarded as the farmer among them. His brother John, who died in 1988 at age 84, was the mechanical and technical expert. His other brother, Andrew Jr., who died in 1986, was the marketing specialist.

Their father died in 1966.

WASHINGTON - The unconscious may not be as powerful as Sigmund Freud thought, say researchers who found a way to show that subliminal messages do influence the human mind - but the influence lasts only a fraction of a second.

Uphili abortion battle

WASHINGTON — Opponents of so-called partial-birth abortion face tough odds in the Senate after celebrating a House vote to reverse President Clinton's veto of a bill banning the procedure.

"We have an uphili battle in the Senate. I don't think there's any secret about that," said Rep. Charles Canady, R-Fla., an abortion foe who led the 285-137 vote Thursday to override the presidential veto.

The vote, four more than needed for the two-thirds majority required for overrides, was a major victory for anti-abortion forces who have made the drastic form of late-term abortion their key issue this election year.

Republican presidential nominee Bob Dole, who supports the ban and has criticized Clinton's veto in campaign speeches. said Thursday that as Americans learn details of the procedure "the president has been left almost alone, defending the in-

New drug holds promise

GAITHERSBURG, Md. - Although no cure exists for multiple scierosis, a new drug holds out the promise that some sufferers will have fewer attacks and a better quality of life as a result.

The drug, copolymer 1, got the go-ahead Thursday from an advisory panel of doctors and other scientists. The Food and Drug Administration usually follows such recommendations.

If approved, the drug would become the second type available to treat mostly people with mild to moderate forms of the crippling disease of the central nervous system. The other two drugs, both new, are similar to each other.

"The last three years have brought a major change in the way we view and the way we're able to manage multiple scierosis," said Stephen Reingold, vice president for research and medical programs at the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, hailing the new drugs.

Dole ad campaign

WASHINGTON — Getting personal in his political drug war with President Clinton. Bob Dole launched a $6 million ad campaign today that includes TV footage of a laughing Clinton saying he would inhale marijuana if given the chance to relive his college days.

The new ad features footage from a 1992 MTV interview in which a tollege student saked Clinton about his earlier statement that he had tried to smoke marijuans while at Oxford University in the 1960s but had trouble inhaling because he was a nonamoker.

"Sure, if I could, I tried before," Clinton said when asked if he would inhale if he could try again.

Dole mentioned the Clinton remarks for the first time on Wednesday, suggesting they sent an alarming signal to young Americans that it was OK to experiment with marijuans and other drugs.

Earlier this month, Clinton insisted the MTV question was lighthearted and that he did not mean to suggest experimentation with drugs was acceptable. And in an interview airing tonight on ABC's "20-20," the president tells Barbara Walters that he was sorry he had tried marijuana in college, even unsuccessfully. "It was wrong," he said.

Women on chain gangs

PHOENIX - Prisoners on the nation's first women chain gang say they welcome the opportunity to escape their cells for a few hours pulling weeds and picking up trash along downtown streets.

Shackled at the ankles in groups of five, 15 women wearing bright orange jumpoults and caps began their month-long stint in the morning sun Thursday as reporters from around the world watched and passing rush-hour motorists blared their

"Jail life is boring. It's dehumanizing," said Rebecca Lopez, 28, who is serving a three-month sentence for a parole violation on a drinking-and-driving offense. "But this chain gang ian't so bad. At least it gets you back into the outside world for a couple hours a day,"

Ending last and longest war

MEXICO CITY — Guatemalan guerrilia leaders in suite and ties shook hands with army officers in uniform after signing an agreement to shrink the military and move closer to ending Central America's last and longest war.

Thursday's accord makes the end of 36-year conflict in Guatemala virtually a certainty. It calls for cutting Guatemala's 43,500 troops and defense spending by a third next year and eliminating elite counterinsurgency units.

Diplomata, human rights activists and Guatemalan gov.

Diplomats, human rights activists and Guatemalan government officials applauded and cameras flashed as the two sides signed the accord, the last pact before a final cease-fire

"We are near the signing of a (final) peace," said government representative Gustavo Porras. "Our country needs it. Guatemala is in a crucial time."

The decision is a departure from south mores a policy of never raising such issues at the world body, in spite of what it perceived as growing military threats from North Rores.

Thousands of soldiers and police, assisted by helicopters and sniffer dogs, assarched rugged mountains today for North Koreans who came ashore after their submarine was stranded on South Korea's east coast, 90 miles north of Seoul.

Overnight, troops exchanged gunfire with North Koreans in at least two places, according to Youkep TV, the state-owned national cable service. In one clash, an agent fied after hurling a grenade at his pursuers.

Fire department tower truck is down, future uncertain

By WOR PPEIFAUP Herald Blaff Writer

BANFORD - The future of Sanford Fire Department Tower Truck 35 remains questionable. It appears it would cost too much to repair it, and it would cost too much to replace it, yet one is needed.

During work session discussion by the Sanford City Commission this week. Fire Chief Tom Hickson explained that estimates on needed repairs to the tower truck have been $39,450, to replace just one Regarding a replacement unit.

Hickson said the cost is approximately $410,000 with trade-in.

"Does Seminole County have a tower truck," asked Commissioner Whitey Eckstein. "Yes, but it's stationed in the southern end of the county," Hickson replied.

"Why do you suppose the county doesn't have one in the northern part," Eckstein asked. "Because Sanford has one." Hickson said.

"We are in a first-response situation, and we should have one in northern Seminole County," Eckstein continued. "I believe if the county doesn't have one in this area and is depending on us, then they should help us pay for a new Chief Hickson said the truck has been out of service for approximately three weeks. When in service, he said it is used quite often, mostly as part of the first-response agreement with the county.

Last Monday, City Manager Bill Simmons said he would investigate the alternatives regarding the need for a lower truck and report back to the commission. The matter has already been scheduled for additional discussion and updating during the work session preceeding this coming Monday's commission

ORLANDO - Dino Ciccarelli scored twice and added an assist as the Tampa Bay Lightning posted a 3-1 exhibition game win over state rival Florida Panthers on Thursday.

Both of Ciccarelli's goals came on secondperiod power plays. He also assisted on Brent Peterson's first-period goal.

Ciccarelli, who has 551 goals in a 17-year NHL career, was obtained from Detroit during the offseason for a conditional draft pick. Rob Niedermayer scored Florida's goal.

Tampa Bay's Daren Puppa allowed one goal on 16 shots and Florida's John Vanbiesbrouck atopped 12 of 14 shots. Panthers backup goallender, Kevin Weekes allowed one goal on 14 shots, while Lightning replacement Tyler Moss rejected 15 shots.

ELSEWHERE

Florida St. 51, N.C. State 17

RALEIGH. N.C. - Thad Busby showed some of the Improvement coach Bobby Bowden was hoping for, throwing two 29-yard scoring passes as No. 3 FSU routed N.C. State 51-17.

Warrick Dunn rushed for 108 yards to complement Busby and the Florida State defense shut down its second straight opponent. The Seminoles (2-0, 2-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) blew out the Wolfpack for the fourth consecutive time, outscoring them 224-40.

N.C. State (0-2, 0-2) hadn't lost its first two games since 1987, when it finished 4.7. Busby was sharp against the Wolfpack most of the night as he got plenty of time to throw. He completed 17-of-26 for 251 yards.

Busby was replaced in the fourth quarter by Dan Kendra, who also threw two scoring passes.

Morrison wants to fight

TULSA, Okia. — Former heavyweight boxer Tommy Morrison, who is HIV positive, said he will return to the ring for one last fight to raise money for children with AIDS and awareness about the disease.

There is no site, date or opponent, but Morrison hopes the fight occurs before the spring. Morrison, 27, said he has done extensive research and firmly believes the virus cannot be transmitted in the ring.

Becki Andre, of the state Professional Boxing Advisory Board, said Morrison likely would not be licensed to fight in Oklahoma because he remains on medical suspension in Nevada.

Petty admits mistake

RALEIGH, N.C. - Retired stock-car star and aspiring politician Richard Petty admitted he broke traffic laws when he followed too closely behind a speeding car, a practice he used on the track to capture 200 racing victories. Petty admitted his 1996 Dodge truck was tailgating the 1996 Mazda driven by James Rassette on Interstate 85 as Petty drove home from the Charlotte Motor Speedway on Sept. 11.

He blamed Rassette for causing the two vehicles to bump by jamming on his brakes as both traveled about 70 mph.

Petty is a Republican running for Secretary of State. A Republican prosecutor and a Democratic governor's administration grappled over what charges he would face just weeks before his first election for statewide office.

Tribe turnaround

during Thursday night's two-game sweep of the Lyman Greyhounds in Seminole Athletic Conference action.

By JEFF BERLIMOKE Lake Mary Life Sports Editor

LONGWOOD - Last night, the Seminole girls volleyball team put on a display that has been common for anyone following the team over the last few years. A quick, two-game rout took place much like it often has over the past couple of years but this time, and all season long, there has been a difference:

Now it is the Seminoles walking off the court with an easy win over an outmanned opponent. Last night, it was a 15-5, 15-12 win over Lyman but three years ago, many of the players that now make up a senior-dominated roster were freshmen getting pounded night after night.

The team stayed together and is now one of only two Seminole Athletic Conference teams - Oviedo. the defending champion is the other without a loss in conference play. The Tribe travels to Oviedo next Tuesday and, to face a team like the Lions on equal terms shows how far they have come in only three years. Dec Velleyball, Page 22

The early part of those three years is a forgotten time in the minds of the players.

"We're just focused on this year," senior Marisea Alford said. "We always said this would be our year. We want to go farther than we've ever gone before.

If last night was any indica-tion, they may get there. They rolled over the Greyhounds and icoled strong throughout. Alford and Aubrey Nelson led the way with five kills spiece and Nelson had 12 digs. Lindsey Keeler helped by coming off the bench and diving all over the floor to keep points alive.

"We just want to get better every night," Seminole coach Both Cores said. We want to be right where we want to be playoff time."

Lyman had every reason to feel intimidated as the match begun. The two teams faced each other in a pre-season jamboree and the Tribe fired a 15-0 shutout. As the match started last night, it looked as if started last night, it looked as if Lyman might never score.

Seminole jumped out to a 4-0 start before Sabreena Sapp missed a spike to give the Greyhounds their first point. Powerful serving from Naimmled to a -15-2 lead and Seminole never struggled.

It was a different story in the second game as Lyman made a game effort. After Seminole's Amanda Cook made an outstanding block of a hard hit spike to make it 7-3, Lyman made a run and eventually went up 2.7

It was time for a time out and Coreo let the players do the talking. After blowing the big lead, Coreo said she was in no mood to talk.

"I was furious with them and they knew it," Corso said. "I didn't knew what to say."

Apparantly comeone did know what to say because, after Lyman upped the lead to 11-0, it was over quickly. Nelson element a point in even the sease and, serving with a 14-13 lead, Lyman cours only lift the deck chang one of her serves. Create awaits Seminele next, then a match against stateranised Merritt leland a few days later.

"This is our hig chance to be ranked," Corec sold.

By the end of next week, Seminale will know just how for it has come since these days of just three years ago.

How to find a job in cyberspace

Whether you're a college student looking for a summer job or a senior executive interested in new possibilities, no job search today would be complete without taking advantage of the wealth of resources on the internet. But like much of cyberspace, on-line job hunting plays by its own distinctive, sometimes peculiar, rules and it helps to have someone show you the ropes. Here, then, is an insider's guide to finding a job in cyberspace:
1. Check databases weekly.

First, go to a search engine like Yahoo, infoSeek or Alta Vista, and type in your job description. Chances are, you'll get a list of forume, organisations and yes, job listings. If not, don't despair. There are many databases with general job information. A few of the biggest are internet Career Connection (http://iccweb.com), Online Career Center (http://www.occ.com/occ/). Career Path (http:// www.careerpath.com) and America's Job Bank (http:// www.ajb.dni.us/). Determine which have the listings that are most interesting to you and check with them every week. Not all on-line job databases are up to par, of course. Learn to judge whether a particular one is worth your time and effort. You can tell a lot from job listings. Check to see if listings are dated. You can waste a huge amount of time following up dead leads. The better databases update their listings every week or so.

CONSUMER POCUS

2. Get advice. Whether it's your first time on 15th toh

3. Simplify your resume. If you're pursuing your search electronically, some of the conventional wisdom of job hunting changes. For one thing, you want a resume that will translate well to any computer screen and any e-mail inbox. It really helps to get a resume in a format that is scanable. It's different than what we were taught, but what the industry is evolving toward is the plain vanilla resume--no bold, no Italics, a readable font size.

4. Network. Only 15 percent of jobs are found through classified ade, and 15 percent more through recruiters. The other 70 percent are found through what's classically defined as networking. And the 'Net makes networking easier than ever. Participate in newsgroups. bulletin boards and e-mail lists where you'll encounter people who have jobs or work for companies that interest you. Ask questions. Share information. When you are interested in making a change, you'll be much better prepared.

5. Don't pay for services. You shouldn't have to pay to get your resume included in a job bank or to get job listings. Recruiters, essentially what most resume databanks are, make their databanks are, make their money from companies that are looking for new employees. Don't let them make it from you

6. Be discrete. When you're in an industry forum, bulletin board, or chat room, don't leave your name all over the place if you don't want your boss to know you're looking for another

A psychopath is minus conscience · Lack of ability to give and Occasionally our responsibilities are assaulted by news of atrocious crimes committed against young children by quite normally in most other areas of their lives. A neighbor in an apartment complex rapes and murders a preschooler; a young man befriends a family then kidnaps and murders a child in the family. The behavior and circumstances in these crimes are so outrageous that they make us wonder if we can trust anyone, or if anyone could have been able to foresee the kinds of monsters that were living among them.

Dr. Alan Cohen, M.D., in his

Open-bar reception is cause for litigation, not celebration that a cash bar at a wedding reception was not proper. You are out of touch — it is proper. The key word is liability. An open bar may lead to overindulgence may lead to automobile or other accidents. If the bar is free, the liability may be that of the host. Teens day of prayer, a success 'See You at the Pole' was well attended

By VICKI Decomings Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - Thousands of teens gathered on middle and high school campuses around Seminole County this week to lift up prayers to God and join forces with teens around the world in the fight against Satan.

In an age where teenagers are more often than not percieved as the legions of evil, interested in little more than sex, drugs and rock n' roll, these teens showed their faith in Jesus Christ as they stood united in His name.

Wednesday's "See You At The Pole" celebrations were orga-nised at each of the district's six public high schools and at most of the middle schools in the county by students who have committed their lives to Christ and who believe that their example of Christian love and committment will bring others

At Seminole High School the crowds swelle to more than 200 students and several dozen faculty members and ad-ministrators as dawn broke before the start of classes.

The celebrants gathered quietly in the school's central quadrangle. Readings from the book of Hebrews, from the letters of Timothy and from the gospels were read and prayers for those in attendance and those not yet committed to the Lord were offered.

While the crowd grew, other teens not involved in the celebration of faith stood along the perimeter. Some strained to hear the Word while others, at what they believed to be a safe distance, mumbled their disapproval. Yet, none was moved to confront those united by faith.

"We can only hope that they are moved by our example. said Zerimar Ramires, a freshman who helped coordinate the even, "and that they say 'I want that in my life too'."

The See You At The Pole celebrations began six years ago at schools here and across the country with small gatherings around the flag pole. A handful of students gathered to proclaim their faith through the Word and to lift prayers to the Lord that others might see the Light and accept the Lord.

Today, in many cases, the gatherings have grown too large to be accommodated at the small flagpole areas and have moved to larger areas of the campuses.

'It's real exciting," said Amanda Coho the events coordinator at Seminole High's celebration before the event got underway. "We're expecting more people than ever this year." The crown at SHS exceeded anyone's expectations this year.

Sidney Brock, youth minister at the First Baptist Church of Sanford, was on hand for the non-denominational celebration to show his support.

"This is a beautiful demonstration of the faith of these young people," he said, surveying the crowd. "I think this shows that there are some very positive, good young people in our community.'

Ways to manage bladder inflammation

Interstitial cystitis, a poorly under-stood bladder inflammation that affects tens of thousands of men and women, is not a malignant or infec-tious condition. Even so, it is difficult to manage — in no small part because the cause of this disease is unknown.

The affliction attacks many more women than men (9:1). Onset usually begins around 40, although the disease is commonly seen in the 20s and 30s. The primary symptoms include bladder pain, urgency, frequency, painful urination, and nocturia (night-time voiding).

The diagnosis is established with cystoscopy, a procedure used by urologists to examine the lining of the bladder. During this test, specialists may see ulcers of the bladder wall, as well as tiny bleeding points (petechiae) and — on biopsy — specific abnormal cells and scarring of the deeper bladder wall.

As a result of this inflammation, the capacity of the bladder is substantially reduced, causing the frequency of urination and urgency experienced by most patients with the disease. In one of the hallmarks of interstitial

In addition to these findings, such patients fail to show infection or blad-der tumors. Moreover, other common causes of bladder irritation — including chemical cystitis (following chemotherapy) and radiation (for can-cer) — are not present.

During cystoscopy, urologists may choose to expand the bladder walls with water (hydrodistension) under general anesthesia. For unknown reasons, this may relieve symptoms for days or weeks. There is no successful oral treatment for interstitial cystitis, although many drugs have been tried.

As a spin-off to hydrodistension, many urologists are now using a technique called "intravesical therapy."

During the bladder-stretching procedure, medicines — such as dimethyl sulfoxide (DMSO) - are added to the water. These drugs, which often have analgesic and muscle-relaxing properties, may accentuate the beneficial effects of hydrodistension.

But, alas, these effects are not permanent, and the bladder-expansion technique may have to be repeated as symptoms re-appear. Modification of dlet and sexual activity, bladder surgery (to remove the ulcers), behav-ioral therapy, electrical nerve stimulation, and spinal anesthesia have all yielded disappointing results.

In summary, the cause of interstitial cystitis is unknown. However, the condition, which is marked by bladder pain, painful and frequent urination and urgency — in conjunction with an irritated bladder lining and a reduced bladder volume — can be treated by stretching of the bladder wall and,

DEAR DR. GOTT: My mother suffers from spastic torticollis with severe pain on one side of her neck. The pain is causing a pulling in the neck muscles that forces her head to turn in one direction. Do you have any information on the cause of her illness and possible treatments?

DEAR READER: Spestic (or span-modic) torticollis refers to intermit-tent spasm of the neck muscles. The cause is unknown, but the condition is often associated, in adults, with a con-dition called "focal dystonia": that is, a distorted muscle contraction.

Treatment includes heat, massage and physical therapy, in conjunction with muscle-relaxant drugs (Robaxia and others) and analgesics.

Sometimes injections of botulinum toxin (Oculinum) into the spastic muxcles yield relief for up to three months. Ask your mother's doctor about this treatment, which should be administered under the supervision of a neurologist.

Young and gone

It is depressing how many of my bridge friends have died this year. Another one, Richard O'Reilly, left us on March 28 at the early age of 47. He didn't play much bridge in the last few years, but he had been very successful in partnership with Chris Duckworth, winning the Guardian Pairs and Evening Standard Teams in 1974, both prestigious events. And they finished third in the Common Market Junior Teams the following year.

O'Reilly quickly spotted the right line in this deal. How would you play in six diamonds against a heart lead?

North's three-no-trump rebid is awful. Two diamonds is automatic. However, clearly O'Reilly knew his partner's eccentric tendencies, introducing his diamond suit.

A trump lead would have killed the contract, but West selected a heart.

O'Reilly saw that he didn't have the communications to establish his club suit. Instead, he won trick one with dummy's heart king, cashed dummy's spade ace, ruffed a spade in hand, played a heart to dummy's ace and ruffed the heart five in hand. Then came the club ace and a club ruff with came the club ace and a club ruff with dummy's diamond five. Having scored all his low trumps, O'Reilly claimed five more tricks on a high crossruff.

It is one of the pleasures of life to make a slam while your opponents are going down in three ne-trump, as happened in this deal. Losing friends like Richard O'Reilly is at the other end of the stimulation spectrum. Almost all the stimulation spectrum. Almost all bridge players have their aggressive side. I never saw one in Richard: He was always happy and enjoying life.
