No 'Speedy Trial'

Still More Court Cases Dismissed

By TENI YARBOROUGH Herald Staff Writer

For the second time in recent weeks, area judges have refused to try cases in their courts because of the state's failure to prepare the cases for prosecution under the provisions of the Speedy Trial Law.

Last month Circuit Judge Dominick J. Salfi dismissed charges of vehicular homicide against Jerome Alexander Jowais, 18, of Longwood, Salfi based his decision on the fact that the state attorney's office failed to try the case prior to the Jan. 14 deadline, and therefore dismissed the case because the state failed to provide Jowais with a speedy trial.

Jowals was charged with the May 17 death of Laurie Anne Hebel, 14, of Longwood, who died after being struck by a car allegedly driven by Jowais on Wekiva Springs Road in Longwood. Four other girls were injured when the car ran into the group walking along the road.

Police investigators later testified Jowais' blood-alcohol level tested at .24 percent two hours after the crash. Under state law, a person whose blood-alcohol level tests at 10 percent or higher is considered legally drunk.

And now, Seminole County Court Judge Alan Dickey has dismissed the cases against six area convenience-store clerks on charges of selling alcoholic beverages to minors because the legal clock for a speedy trial again ran out. The cases were dismissed Jan. 27.

Under Florida taw, the alleged offenders in the seconddegree misdemeanor were to be tried within 90 days after their arrests. The charge of selling alcoholic beverages to a minor carries a penalty of 60 days in the county fall.

In the dismissal order, Dickey ordered that the previously posted $100 bonds be returned to Ruben Reyes, 26, Orlando; Dianne Jeanne Sampson, 21, Oviedo; Joann II. Rose, 36, Chuluota; Frank Hall, 51, Winter Park; Pairicia Ann Brown, 39, Chuluota; and Eva M. Larnoureux, 59, Chuluota.

"I'm not going to assign fault to anyone," said Chief Assistant State Attorney Chris Ray, "We wrote letters asking for information in prosecuting the cases. We did not get the information as soon as we would have liked. We presented all our information to the judge. He dismissed the cases."

Sheriff's Department officials said the arrests of the six store personnel came after a concentrated crackdown Oct. 9 and 10 on illegal sales of alcoholic beverages to minors. Sheriff's deputies, using a juvenile informant equipped with an electronic bugging device, arrested the store workers after they allegedly sold alcohol to the juvenile without asking for any identification.

Following the arrests, defense lawyers for the six defendants entered pleas of not guilty in county court on behalf of their

Assistant State Attorney Robert Fisher wrote a memorandum to the sherift's office Oct. 22 requesting additional information concerning the arrests. He also requested a sworn statement from the informant concerning the transactions, and a transcript of the events leading to the arrests, court records indicated.

Receiving no information from the Sheriff's Department, Fisher again wrote a letter Nov. 24, saying he would be unable to file charges until he received the requested information.

On Dec. 1 Fisher filed notice with the court saying he was not filing charges against the six in the illegal alcoholic beverage transactions cases, citing insufficent information as requested from arresting officers as his reason.

However, he received the requested information Dec. 9 and filed the charges against the six defendants.

"We were partly to blame too (for the dismissal action)," Sheriff John Polk sald. "We were a couple of weeks late in responding to the state attorney's memos. I don't feel that blame can be placed on any one department, though. There was just a breakdown between this department, the state attorney's office and the courthouse."

Polk added that the memos and his department's responses to the memos were all mailed through the courthouse mail system and that some delays were incurred in routing.

About a week after the charges were formally filed, Fisher filed a motion before Dickey asking for a hearing date for action on his request for a 15-day extension of the trial date.

The motion indicated the arrest dates of the six defendants and described the circumstances surrounding Fisher's difficulties in obtaining information from Sheriff's Department officials. It also noted that the 90-day speedy trial limits would expire Jan. 7 and L.

Fisher said trial dates for all six cases were set for the week of Dec. 28 - a time when no jury was available. He added that the earliest the cases could have been placed on the trial docket was Jan. 18, which was past the speedy-trial cut off. Fisher's Dec. 15 motion request was heard by Dickey Jan. 4.

Two days later Dickey rejected the state's 15-day extension request. Defense lawyers filed motions for dismissals Jan. 7 and 8. Dickey dismissed the charges on speedy-trial grounds Jan. 18.

The Black Community Crooms Has Reflected Its Hopes

Third in a series

EDITOR'S NOTE: In observance of February as Black History Month, the Herald is running a series of stories examining Sanford's black community, a microcosm of our society that is both agonizing and hopeful. Today we relive the integration of Crooms High School and, in another story, meet some successful black business people.

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

The complete integration of Seminole High School may have been met with some apprehension by the white community back in 1970-71.

But in the black community it meant the end of an era, the end of a great source of pride, as the county's one black high school - Crooms Academy - was to die as a total high school institution. The plan was that Crooms would become an all-ninth-grade facility for both blacks and whites.

Crooms was built in 1926. Previously, black students from all over Seminole County had been bused to the Harper

PROFILE

Dr. Joseph Nathaniel Crooms, a black and the principal of Harper, had purchased property in the W. 13th Street area. And he was willing to sell some of it to the Seminole County School Board for a new high school site.

An innovative educator, ahead of his time, Dr. Crooms became the school's first principal and stayed in that spot until 1953, when he retired. A short time after retiring he Willie Ashley, registrar at Crooms, 26 years with the school and a graduate of Crooms, remembers the school back in those days.

At first it was a 4-through-10th grade facility. If students wanted and could afford to continue their educations, they went to a Volusia County school and boarded away from

In the 1930-31 school year, Ashley says, Crooms Academy included grades 4 through 12. Crooms first graduating class in 1931 had just three students.

The student body remained all black until 1965-66. An exchange of teachers between the state of New York and Florida was arranged. A black teacher from Crooms went to New York for a year and a white teacher came to

It was that teacher's child who became the first white student to attend Crooms.

By 1966-67 two white children were enrolled under the 'freedom of choice" permitted by the School Board of that

After 1966, Ashley says, integration began with the school's faculty.

He recalls that students were bused to Crooms Academy from Oviedo, Altamonte Springs, Lake Monroe, Midway-Canaan, and the Longwood area.

And virtually all the black leaders in Seminole County

Among those who graduated from Crooms, Ashley says, were medical doctors: Willie B. Black Businesses Achievers Point The Way To Success

Building a successful business is essentially a matter of hard work regardless of a person's race or ethnic background, according to five blacks who operate. businesses in Sanford.

Proprietors of Uncle Jones' Barbecue, Steen's Cleaners, Cherry's Real Estate & General Contracting, McCoy's Deluxe Cleaners, and Woodard's Flower Shop each developed their own formula for building a money-making business.

"There's no easy way to be successful," says Herbert Cherry, 61, owner of Cherry's Real Estate. "There's no limit to what a man can do if he wants to achieve it, but it requires hard work."

One primary prerequisite to profits is happiness. People must enjoy their chosen vocation, Cherry says.

"If you don't enjoy your work, you need to get out of it and do something else," he adds. And the man is one prime example of his own words.

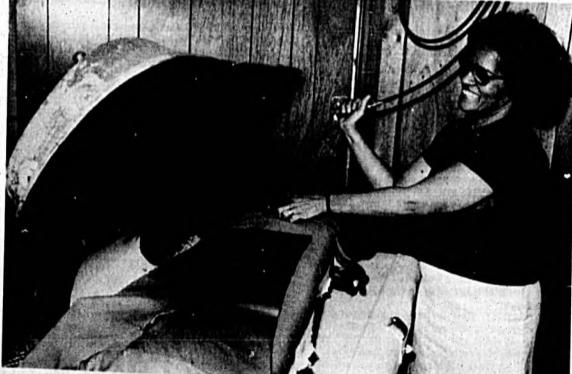

Some 40 years ago Cherry cut hair for a living. As a barber, those idle-time gaps between customers made him restless for other work.

To fill in the day's blank spots, Cherry began doing electrical repairs. The combination of barber and part-time electrician failed to fulfill this ambitious young man's

After hauting children across the county as a school bus driver for nearly 19 years, Cherry latched onto the work he loves. In 1956, Cherry Real Estate was founded.

Frustration marked the first few years of business. Homes built by other contractors did not meet Cherry's standards, he says. To alleviate this problem, he formed his own construction firm. Some of his building accomplishments include his own office facility, Cherry Plaza at 1220 W. 13th St.; St. John's Missionary Baptist Church, 920 Cypress Ave., and a dentist's office for his son, Errol, at 1204 W. 13th St.

Home For Retarded Heading For Showdown

By MARK YOGLER Herald Stall Writer

The zoning debate involving a residential facility for mentally retarded people proposed for the Fern Park area is headed toward a legal showdown over property rights.

Whatever decision the Seminole County Commission makes tonight on Reach Out Associates Ltd.'s request for a special exception permit, the issue is expected to draw further scrutiny in the courtroom.

Frank G. Finkbeiner, the Orlando lawyer representing Reach Out, says the county will be the target of a lawsuit if the commission blocks plans to build a 64-bed intermediate-care health facility at the corner of Fernwood and Fernwood Park boulevarda

And if the commission overturns an sariler county Board of Adjustment denial of a special exception to construct the facility, Sanford lawyer Thomas E. Whigham says be is ready to go to court to argue the case of four homeowner associations representing several hundred families.

The public hearing is set for 7 p.m. in the commission chambers (Room 200) in the County Courthouse in Sanford.

Should the commission reject Reach Out's appeal, Seminole Circuit Judge Vernon Mixe Jr. is already set Friday morning to hear a preliminary injunction that questions the county's zoning procedures.

Finkbeiner, in a suit filed in behalf of Reach Out last week, is challenging the county's right to subject the firm to a new zoning change last November after it apparently had met all the county's existing conditions for acceptable zoning. Meanwhile, Whigham says there are already "plenty of legal precedents to uphold the earlier ruling of the Board of Adjustment," Whighern said he bases his contention on a 1974 U.S. Supreme Court decision which ruled that "government entitles have the power to create a quiet place where yards are wide, people are few and motor vehicles restricted."

"The U.S. Supreme Court said in its opinion in the case of the Village of Belleterre vs. Bornas that government entities can lay out zones where family values, youth values and the blessings of quiet sechasion and clean air make the area a sanctuary for people," Whigham said.

"So I think there are some legal consequences involved if the County Commission were to grant the appeal. We are going to be arguing the validity of the county zoning laws here. This is a conditional use - not a permitted use. The county obviously saw fit to change the statute in November," he added.

Last July the county Planning and Zoning Board ruled that an intermediatecare health facility for mentally retarded people was similar to a nursing home or sanitarium and therefore was compatible with those uses designated for commercial

At that point, it appeared that Reach Out had the stamp of county approval to secure a building permit for its $1.8 million project

However, in November the County Commission adopted a zoning revision that would require planners of the home for the retarded to seek a special exemption permit from the Board of Adjustment, And for the first time, affected residents would have an opportunity to voice their opinion on such projects at a public hearing. The Board of Adjustment didn't list specific reasons for denying the permit, but was influenced by strong vocal opposition from homeowner associations in the Fern Park area.

The official version of the board's decision: "Lack of compelling evidence that this facility is located in an optimum location free from any distracting influences on any adjoining neighborhood."

Since the county already had advised Reach Out that its project was "compatible" within the county's existing zoning, Finkbeiner said, the new zoning ordinance should not apply.

County Commissioner Barbara Christensen said Reach Out has a legitimate grievance against the county. "I think Reach Out has some extermating circumstances, because they had sought our opinion before we changed the zoning law. I think this is an important

Economists Predict Reagan Budget Will Bring Gloom

By United Press International

President Reagan's proposed budget is causing a storm of debate on Capitol Hill and drawing predictions of more fiscal gloom from a think tank of conservative economists.

The budget proposal, which projects a record deficit of $91.5 billion next year, would keep interest rates up and slow economic expansion, economists from the American Enterprise Institute told a Washington lunch Monday.

On Capitol Hill, Reagan's proposed fiscal 1963 budget of $757.6 billion drew greans from both Democrats and Republicans, who seemed determined to alter it because of the fat deficit. The deficit worries spread to Wall Street where prices plunged to their lowest point

Genetic Rules Simplified

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A federal advisory committee wants government regulations on genetic engineering research relaxed, but rejected a plan that would have lifted controls,

The National Institutes of Health panel voted, 16-5, Monday to accept a plan that would simplify the rules governing experiments in which hereditary molecules from one organism are spliced into another.

Murderer, 15, Gets Life

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) - A judge said a 15-year-old youth was "a danger to society" and sentenced him to life imprisonment for killing his foster mother with a shotgun while she slept

"He got what he deserved," said District Attorney Chris Galanoes, who prosecuted John Anthony Cruse, one of the youngest people ever tried for murder in Alabama. But two ministers, pleading for leniency at Monday's sentencing, said Cruse was too immature to be held responsible for his actions when, as a 14-yearold on Jan. 21, 1981, he allegedly shot his foster mother in the face with a shotgun she had given him.

Refugees To Stay In Jail

ATLANTA (UPI) - About 800 Cuban refugees at the high-walled Atlanta federal penitentiary who have been imprisoned in this country since their arrival in the "Freedom Flotilla," will be detained at least one more year.

Government officials say only then can the refugees even hope for freedom, if they are not first sent back to

Of the 1,800 refugees at the maximum-security facility, about 800 are too dangerous to be released immediately, officials said, adding some 200 to 300 of them may never be released because they have committed serious crimes.

Activists On The March

GREENSBORO, Ala. (UPI) - Civil rights activists took time out today from their 160-mile voting rights march across central Alabama to hold an informal hearing on alleged discrimination against black

Some 45 marchers, who are advocating the extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act and protesting the vote fraud conviction of two black women, reached Greensboro late Monday alternoon after a 22-mile trip

Insurance Firm Wants Its Money Back

By TENLYARBOROUGH Herald Staff Writer

A claim to retrieve about $28,000 collected by Sanford police officer Walter L. Jones on an insurance policy has been filed in Circuit Court, Sanford, by an Orlando insurance company.

Jones collected on the insurance policy after his home at 1839 Jerry St. in the Goldsboro section of Sanford was destroyed by fire Dec. 30, 1980.

According to Jones' attorney Jack Bridges, the claim by the insurance company was filed following Jones' arrest for insurance fraud and solicitation for arson in the fire incident.

The 13-year police veteran has been implicated in the arson by three persons who testified Jones was to pay them for burning down the home so Jones could collect on the insurance

Sharon Meeker, 20, of Sanford; James Michael Williams, 35, of Union Park, and his ex-wife Patricia, 34, of Lake Mary, face up to 15 years in prison for their participation in the arson, a second-degree felony.

Following his arrest and release from jail on his own recognizance last week, Jones was served with a notice of intent for disciplinary action by the city police department. Bridges said a disciplinary hearing was to be held at 9:30

During the hearing, at which City Manager Warren E. Knowles will preside as hearing officer, Police Chief Ben Butler is expected to present evidence to support disciplinary action against Jones. If sufficient evidence is presented, Jones could be suspended without pay or dismissed from the police Bridges and Jones will be given an opportunity to refute any allegations at the hearing.

A Forest City woman, ordered Aug. 27 to get rid of 13 goats she was keeping at her Lake Brantley Shores home, is again housing two kids and a mother goat on her property

Robert McMillan, deputy county attorney, said today his office has received complaints from Mrs. Ingeborg Morris' neighbors about the goats. He said if the problem cannot be resolved through his office and Mrs. Morris' attorney Richard Manzo, he will file a contempt of court charge against her

Mrs. Morris, of Tak Drive, was ordered Aug. 27 by Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr. to remove the 13 goats after he ruled she was in violation of county zoning regulations regarding keeping livestock in a residential area. She has since appealed the case to the 5th District Court of Appeals.

A 13-member subcommittee approved the plan, including the plan for Seminole County drawn by State Rep. Robert Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, Monday afternoon.

And State Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, today called the plan for his district "the most gerrymandered" in the state. Hattaway's original proposal was to be changed today to include in the Brantley district, 9,000 people from Marion County and 5.000 from Putnam.

Hattaway's district would include much of Longwood, most of Lake Mary, most of Altamonte Springs and most of Sanford and Forest City. A new third district would include Winter Springs, Casselberry and Geneva with about 1,450 residents from Orange County and about 17,500 from Brevard. Sanford Seeking Some Answers On Water Problems

During the next two weeks, Sanford City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles will be working on plans to find the best way to help city water and sewer customers save money while protecting the city's revenue sources for bond issues.

Mayor Lee P. Moore Monday night instructed Knowles to research the matter after Knowles recommended that the City Commission consider methods of encouraging city residents to conserve water.

Noting that similar action is being taken in Lake Mary, Knowles said residents could conserve considerable amounts of water by using devices sold at cost by the New Resources Group (NRG) from New England. The devices include a type of shower head that wraps air around water to provide a finer spray and use less water, and two plastic covered steel sheets to be placed in toilet tanks to cut water usage Knowles said by saving water the capacity of the city's would be used. Knowles cited NRG figures which claim 70 percent of the water used by residential customers is used in bathrooms.

sewer plant would in effect be increased, since less water

Moore said while he personally favors the devices which cost about $18, he must also consider the impact decreased revenues resulting from lower utility bills will have on the city's obligation to pay its bonded indebtedness for the water and sewer utility system.

He estimated the per-home water savings through use of the NRG devices at about $120 annually.

Knowles said he will look into various conservation plans and their impact on the city revenues including:

-Requiring the installation of the water saving devices in new homes only.

-Providing the conservation kits to existing households free

-Providing the conservation kits to households with the costs included on water bills over a period of time. -Making the kits available for direct purchase.

The Death Of An Empire

If the Soviet bloc is, as some say it is, a dying empire, new life must be flowing into it from the spectacle of the flabby, nervous, divided, bickering Western alliance, whose weakness and disunity spells strength for the empire ruled from the Kremlin.

"Exhibitions of indecision, disunity and internal disintegration within this country (the U.S.A.) have an exhibitanting effect on the whole communist movement," George Kennan wrote in the July 1947 Foreign Affairs article that was the genesis of the U.S. policy of containment toward the Soviet imperium.

The same thrill must be going through the hard-core communist world today at the timorous reaction, motivated in part by mixed fear and greed, of the free world toward the trampling of Poland.

It is certain that Brezhnev, the Politburo, the party bosses, the Red army and KGB are not trembling in their boots. The subversion of Latin America, the wiring of Africa and the Middle East, the suppression of Afghanistan continue.

The United States alone, Kennan wrote in 1947, does not have the power of life and death over the communist movement.

But it does have, he wrote, "power to increase enormously the strains under which Soviet policy must operate, to force upon the Kremlin a far greater degree of moderation than it has had to observe in recent years (having taken over the nations of Eastern Europe ——ED.), and in this way to promote tendencies which must eventually find their outlet in either the break-up or the gradual mellowing of Soviet power."

Containment saved Greece and South Vietnam but not Czechoslovakia, mainland China, Mongolia, Tibet, Cuba, South Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and a string of other countries in various stages of subjection to communist power.

At the same time the North Atlantic Treaty organization—its backbone 300,000 U.S. troops—saved and is still saving Western Europe, Gen. Harold K. Johnson, former U.S. Army chief of staff, said in a U.S. News & World Report interview.

Although Poland is not NATO's concern, the weak, split Western reaction is the concern of Gen. Johnson. What if it invited Soviet attack? NATO's main need is national will among the member nations to resist a Soviet move on Western Europe, Gen. Johnson said, adding, "I'm not sure that the national will exists today."

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has suggested that NATO may disintegrate unless it is able to demonstrate greater unity in confronting international crises. He said there is not even the "beginnings of a consensus" on East-West relations, Central America, Africa and the Middle East, and he is right.

"We are facing in the Soviet Union a clearly disintegrating empire," he said recently. "If we (the alliance) can hold together for another 10 to 15 years, I have no question that the Soviet Union would emerge as 'the sick man of Europe' and that in the 21st Century totally different confrontations and conflicts would arise."

In this century popular pressures of independence obliterated the French, German and British empires. Such pressures exist in Poland and to some extent in the Soviet bloc states and the USSR itself. Against them is arrayed the machinery of totalitarian empire — armed forces, police and party — power enough to rule the world if it strikes before time runs out.

So the need for unity for purpose among thea allies is as urgent now as it was during the crucial days before the tide turned in World War II. Providing the leadership that can elicit such unity should be the chief present task of U.S. foreign policy.

Sooner or later the terrible truth dawns — someone you know and love is an addict? Hooked on that perplexing multi-colored puzzle insidlously known as Rubik's Cube.

Hadra realized this it is no use burying your

Having realized this, it is no use burying your head in the sand, hoping that the addiction is a passing fad, like collecting beer cans or Blondle buttons. You have to be aware that you are lighting an enemy that may be bigger than both of you, a rotating plastic tyrant that could ruin your lives.

I know. My brother is a Cubaholic. Now, I don't normally air my family's dirty linen in public. But I hope through this tale to help those similarly situated.

After realizing the problem exists, you must fight back. If you can't persuade your family addict to sign on with Cubaholics Anonymous, you have to undertake the long lonely battle of weaning him or her at home.

The most innocuous of situations become fraught withdanger: the offer of "taking the dog for a walk" may lead to an orgy of twiddling in back alleys; an innocent bout of "working in the garden" may lead to the exhumation of buried Cubes, revealed only by the ravaged countenance of the digger on his return from the flowerbeds. There is no end to the ingenuity the addict will resort to in order satisfy his craving.

With that in mind, here are a few guidelines for the brave souls who are coping with this dangerous habit without benefit of Decubification Centers.

One of the most common problems you will have to deal with is the Concealed Cube Syndrome. The addict hides Cubes all around the house and garden. His or her apparent abstinence is only a front for secret indulgence. Those rustling sounds in the cellar in the wee hours will be found to be the result of Cubes having been hidden under those old stacks of National Geographic.

Following are some of the common hiding places I've discovered in dealing with my Cubaholic brother:

The toilet is an old favorite. Trouble with flushing may give the secret away. Be suspicious of intestinal afflictions with a Cubaholic. The john is one of the few places he can be sure of a quiet uninterrupted session away from prying

The kitchen is swarming with places to hide Cubes. Some of these are fairly obvious: The ice cube tray is a favorite for the handy pocket versions. Have you checked the cookie jar lately? One hiding place was discovered only when several cooked Cubes rose to the top of a pot of beef stew.

In the living room, check the bookcase. Hollowed-out commemorative Bibles are particularly popular because they are fat and nobody ever takes them off the shelf. Is that old chair lumpier than it used to be? Have you taken down that hideous vase of Aunt Margery's from the top shelf to see if it raitles? These are just a few of the places the ingenious Cubaholic may conceal his Cubes.

The garden is a veritable hotbed of Cube concealment. The simplest method is burial. You can train your dog to sniff out and retrieve buried Cubes. Of course, make sure Rover isn't a Cubaholic himself first. It is also common to find Cubes dangling from apple trees among the ripe fruit.

Once you have found these clandestine Cubes, you must destroy them. It's the only way to save your frustrated twiddler, a no doubt well-meaning soul who thought they were buying a toy, but instead got a rotating nightmare.

Foreign Ownership A Plus

By LeROY POPE UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Foreign ownership of American business poses little or no threat to the U.S. economy and usually is good for the companies, two recent surveys indicate.

One was made by Lamalle Associates, Inc., a large executive recruiling firm, and the other by Hays Hill, Inc., a management consulting company.

The Lamalle survey found foreign-owned American companies are doing extremely well. Ninety-three percent of the presidents of 250 such companies said their businesses have grown in recent quarters.

The Haya Hill study disclosed that management of the foreign-owned companies enjoys a high degree of autonomy. Most presidents told Hays Hill they actually had more autonomy than if they were owned by a bigger American corporation.

Those answering the Lamalie survey pretty much agreed although not as emphatically. The Lamalie study found the Swiss and Japanese are most inclined to hold a tight rein on American firms they own, the British are the least so inclined.

The Commerce Department has reported that foreign business assets in the United States now total about $480 billion and that foreigners invested $50 billion in the U.S. in 1980. In fiscal 1981, foreign concerns acquired U.S. companies with $37 billion in assets and $21 billion in sales and launched new companies in the United States with $3.5 billion in assets. In that year about 267,000 Americans became employees of foreign firms.

About 52 percent of those queried by Hays Hill said an American firm is likely to have its marketing function greatly strengthened if it is bought by a foreign company. Product changes become less frequent and, somewhat surprisingly, only 26 percent of the firms said they handled the foreign parent's products. On the other hand, most said being foreignowned didn't automatically bring any increase in export sales.

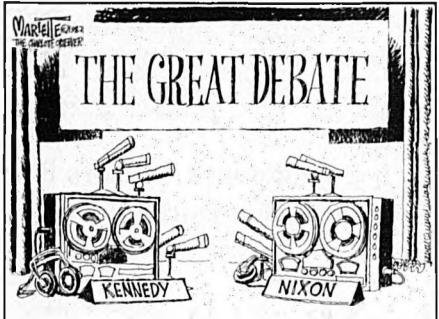

The Hays Hill study found financial support was more important than marketing support as an advantage of foreign ownership.

The Lamalie study said 52 percent of the foreign-owned firms are headed by Americans and the ratio of American presidents to foreigners is fairly certain to grow. American presidents are preferred in manufacturing and most preferred in businesses that are highly unionized.

On the other hand, Lamalle found that foreign presidents of U.S. subsidiaries are better educated than their American counterparts and typically speak several languages. They also tend to be younger than the Americans and most of them very much like working in the United States.

Lamalie found more than half of these presidents were earning $200,000 a year or more and 19 percent were getting more than $300,000. The compensation was generally the same for Americans or foreigners.

Another finding of both the Lamalie and Hays Hill studies, which agrees with the generally-held notion, was that foreign parent companies are much less concerned with quarterly results than American companies and tend to focus on longterm programs.

More Than Numbers

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The nation's unemployment picture is pretty bleak as painted by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. In December, the jobless rate stood at 8.9 percent of the work force. That meant that 9.5 million Americans were out of work.

All of this is had enough. But careful examination of the employment reports compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics suggests that joblessness may be far worse than the rate indicates.

Understanding why requires some knowledge of how the unemployment figures are gathered.

Each month the Census Bureau conducts personal interviews with a sampling of households. Each member of the household is asked whether he or she worked for wages during the past month.

If the answer is "yes," the person is considered employed. If the answer is "no" and the person has been looking for work, he or she is considered unemployed. (The self-employed are considered to be working for wages for purposes of the survey.)

There are a few flaws in this system.

Those who neither worked nor looked for work during the month are not considered to work during the month are not considered to be part of the work force and, therefore, are not counted among the unemployed. There is a separate category — "discouraged workers" — for those who say

"discouraged workers" — for those who say that they did not seek work during the month because they had looked unsuccessfully in the past and did not expect to have any better luck this time.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that the number of discouraged workers reached an all-time high of 1.2 million in the final quarter of 1981.

Adding these discouraged workers to the certifled jobless produces a total of 10.7 million unemployed and a national unemployment rate of about 11.9 percent.

And there is more. The number of white women entering the work force stopped rising last number for the first time in a half decade and actually fell during December. Those women are not entering the work force largely because they cannot find jobs, but many of them are not being counted as either unemployed or discouraged.

Survey reapondents are classified as discouraged only if they cite no reason for not seeking work other than their conviction that no jobs are available for them. If they also say that they were deterred from seeking work by family illness, the high cost of child care or whalever, this latter reason is considered primary and they are not even considered discouraged.

think that the decline in white women entering the work force indicates that the actual number of discouraged workers is considerably higher than the official 1.2 million.

Analysts at the Bureau of Labor Statistics

Which brings up the subject of underemployment.

Those who have worked even one hour for wages in the past month are considered "employed."

Let's say a skilled worker is laid off from his well-paying full-time job and manages to find some part-time unskilled labor that pays only a fraction of his former earnings. He may be out every day looking for a full-time job, but because he earned wages in the past month he is counted among the employed.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics does not have hard figures on under-employment. However, its experts predict on the basis of their raw survey data that this category is large and growing rapidly.

The administration and conservative economists talk about "fictional unemployment" when arguing that things are not as bad as the numbers seem to indicate. Fictional unemployment refers to highly employable workers who are temporarily between jobs, to those who are entering the job market for the first time and to those such as students and housewives who are looking for part-time jobs to supplement family income.

These economists argue that perhaps 5.5 percent of the current unemployment rate is fictional and that "real" unemployment is therefore only about 3.5 percent.

The professionals at the Bureau of Labor Statistics says that there is no way of estimating fictional unemployment. They cite the sucess of every post-war jobs program as evidence that the nation has never found a "floor" below which unemployment cannot be reduced.

Will New Federalism Make It?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The sweeping government-reorganization—plan that President Reagan portrays as "a bold and spirited initiative" holds the potential for creating more problems than it resolves.

That's the conclusion of an elaborate twoyear study commissioned and financed by the federal government, The final report on the project was submitted to Reagan's own Department of Health and Human Services late last year.

In the most far-reaching proposal to date to implement his "New Federalism" policy, the president, in his recent State of the Union address, called for the transfer of approximately 40 programs, currently costing $47 billion, from federal control to state and local governments.

The rationale for that "single bold stroke" is the president's belief — shared by many citizens — that inflexible federal restrictions, regulations and red tape make too many government programs unresponsive to the needs of those served.

In a vague but little-noticed experiment to test the validity of that theory, IIHS and 12 selected states agreed in mid-1979 to participate in a project that would provide the states with unrestricted federal funds to plan, organize and coordinate various human-service programs.

"The purpose of the project," HIIS explained at the time, "is to determine the extent to which a state's own planning and budgeting processes can be substituted for planning requirements imposed" by Washington officials.

At the same time, HHS contracted with the University of Southern California's School of Public Administration to monitor the experiment. The evaluation team was headed by Berl A. Radin, an associate professor of public administration.

Among the principal of that study:

— "Some states found that the project allowed them to reduce paperwork (but) others found that the paperwork burden did not change or occasionally increased."

— "Although states usually argue for openended funding without (federal) stings ... little would have occurred in the states" in the absence of minimal federal requirements.

Although the project was supposed to last for two years, two states — New York and Arkansas — were compelled to drop out voluntarily after the first year because the program was so badly handled by their officials.

A third state, Massachusetts, also was classified in the evaluation as having "clearly ... failed to achieve (ita) own objectives for the project."

Three states — Missouri, North Carolina and West Virginia — met with only limited success, while three others — New Jersey, Connecticut and Illinois — "achieved their objectives relatively well."

States with high levels of competence and commitment could well succeed in assuming the responsibilities. Reagan proposes to transfer to them — but others could experience a bureaucratic and political disaster of major proportions.

Mobil Chief, Congressman Battling

WASHINGTON — It isn't often that a congressional leader and a corporate tycoon wind up snarling at each other in public. The usual procedure is for their sides to get together on the sly and work things out to mutual satisfaction.

But when you have two guys like Mobil Oil's chief executive William Tavoulareas and House Energy and Commerce Chairman John Dingell, D-Mich., all bets are off.

These two antagonists have been locked in mortal combat since 1979. Dingell started the feud by accusing the Mobil Oil president of helping his son, Peter Tavoularens, create and operate the Atlas Maritime Company without telling Mobil stockholders about it.

The elder Tavoulareas, a hard-driving, ruddy-faced, diminutive man with a griddle-hot temper, traced news leaks of his son's alleged misbehavior to Dingell. In a fury, Tavoulareas marched into the congressman's office and demanded a written apology—written, that is, al Mobil headquarters.

Dingell is an unreconstructed curmudgeon, with a quarter of a century of congressional brawling behind him. He is not about to be intimidated, therefore, by a red-faced oil executive.

For two years, the two tigers have been clawing at each other — with neither gaining any visible advantage. Last Nov. 20, Tavoulareas wrote Dingell: "After nearly two years involving meetings and letters between us, I have reluctantly come to the following conclusion: That you in your capacity as a member of the House of Representatives have deliberately mixled a citizen who was rightfully trying to defend his reputation ..."

The Tavoulareas letter then made a series of erroneous accusations against one of Dingell's aides, Peter Stockton — allegations that were subsequently fed to The New York Times. As a sort of peroration, Tavoulareas chastised Dingell by aaying: "Finally, you said that you would admit being wrong if I were cleared by the SEC. This has now occurred, as you know, but I have had no word from you."

It turns out that Tavoulareas wasn't exactly "cleared" by the SEC. Internal documents uncovered by my associate Tony Capaccio show that the SEC failed to act on the allegations concerning Tavoulareas' son because of technical details in the agency's regulations, not because it disputed the facta in the case.

Here's what an "Action Memorandum" by the SEC staff had to say on July 7, 1981: "The staff believes that Mobil Corporation's disclosure of the subject matter to date has been incomplete, even if one accepts Mobil's version of the facts."

Dingell had alleged that the oil company executive gave his son's company preferential treatment without telling Mobil shareholders about it. On this point, the SEC staff wrote: "Mobil never disclosed to its stockholders the amount of control it exerted over Atlas" (the son's company) "at least during 1975 and 1976. During this time, given all the facts, one could reasonably conclude that Atlas was a de facto subsidiary of Mobil Corp ..."

After press inquiries, Mobil in 1976 finally issued a letter to Mobil stockholders explaining its relationship to Atlas. But an earlier version of the SEC staff memo concluded that "William Tavoulareas was the primary source of information for the shareholders letter. He knew that the information contained was false and misleading."

Far from eliciting an apology from Dingell, the SEC staff's findings are likely to continue the toe-to-toe battle between the congressman and the oliman.

Footnote: Said a Mobil spokesman: "Mobil believes the SEC investigation exhaustively examined and completely refuted Dingell's past allegations."

Streak Prompts Optimism

By SAM COOK Herald Sports Editor

It's amazing what a two-game winning streak will do for the optimism of a basketball coach.

Seminole High's modest two-game string (Lake Howell and DeLand) has coach Bill Payne thinking championships despite the fact his boys are just 8-16 for the year and 4-7 in the Five Star.

Sound farfetched? Is it time to send the men in the white jackets to the Seminole High attendance office? Maybe not. This year, probably more than any other in district 4A-9 competition, has no clearcut favorite.

Spruce Creek, 11-1 and 15-4 overall, should be the choice, but a loss at Lake Brantley makes the Hawks look awfully "Spruce Creek will probably win the conference," said Payne Tuesday morning. "But we're winning the district."

Definitely not spoken like a man whose team is 8-16. When the new season starts

Feb. 24 at Apopka, though, the records will be truly meaningless this year.

"It should be one of the wildest district tournaments in a long time," observed Lake Howell coach Greg Robinson whose Hawks are trying to avoid infamy by winning their first game tonight.

Robinson's Mark Layton-led crew travels to Apopka to meet the up-anddown Blue Darters of Butch Helms, Lake Howell has lost 17 in a ruw, Seminole, in the meantime, hosts Spruce Creek. Payne will get to see if the Star malchup. Tribe is really a contender or a pretender. "I hope we're peaking now," Payne said last week. "The rest of the season hasn't been much to talk about."

Elsewhere in the county, 9-3 Lytnan, with still an outside chance at the Five the county. Star, travels to Daytona to take on Scabreeze.

The Greyhounds will be without quick guard William Scott who quit the team

Prep Basketball after Saturday's game against West Orange which the 'Hounds lost.

> Scott missed a practice prior to the game and was benched by coach Torn Lawrence. He wasn't used on Saturday and then missed Monday's practice, reportedly upset about not starting.

"I don't think he'll be back," said Lawrence about his 6-2 guard who is among the county leaders in five categories. "He'll have to show the team he's awful sorry for what he's done before he can come back."

Coach Bob Peterson's Lake Brantley Patriots go to DeLand in the other Five Oviedo's 12-11 Lions take on Kissimmee and its dynamic junior duo of Jimmy McGrimmon and Frank Ford. The Lions counter with 6-4 Itonnie Murphy, the top rebounder and scorer in

Issac Picks FSU

Seminole High offensive lineman Issac Williams has made up his mind. The 6-3, 243-pound tackle has decided to sign a National Letter of Intent to play football for the Florida State Seminoles. Central Florida recruiter Jim Gladden will ink his prize prospect Wednesday evening at Dr. Mark Williams' house in Altamonte Springs. "I think he wanted to go there all along," said Tribe coach Jerry Posey. "He's always been a FSU fan."

Williams was pursued by numerous colleges including Florida, Georgia and Ohio State along with Miami. Teammate Lenny Sutton is still on hold concerning his choice of schools. Wake Forest, Tennessee Tech and Tennessee-Chattanooga are the interested parties along with Don Jonas' Central Florida Knights.

The Knights also covet defensive back Vince Edwards and tight end Frank Rowe. - SAM COOK

Conigliaro: 'Unchanged'

NEW YORK (UPI) - Looking down at Tony Conigliaro lying there helplessly in his hospital bed, so much alive, yet so deathly silent, Mike Ryan did a most natural thing.

He called out his name.

There was no answer. He tried once more and got the same result. Nothing.

Mike Ryan's mouth was dry but he swallowed hard to fight back the tears. The two of them had been teammates once with the Boston Red Sox, just a couple of kids having a good time. "I looked at Tony," says Ryan, a coach with the Philadelphia Phillies, "and what went through my head was all the fun times we had when we were first breaking in. We were just two kids and we roomed together in the Instructional League in 1962. He was such a handsome guy then and still is, with those even features he has and those big brown eyes of his.

"They're wide open and they look at you but it's kind of hard to explain .. they just don't focus. You talk to him but he doesn't answer. He's in a private room and when I saw him, I couldn't help it, I just got all choked up. What got me most of all, I suppose, was that when I walked into the room, his father was leaning over the bed rubbing his hands and talking to him without getting any answer. His father just kept rubbing his hands and talking to him

Rryan visited Conigliaro at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston a little over a week ago.

"I can't get the guy off my mind," he says. "Just seeing him lying there in the bed like that was such a kick in the teeth, I don't think I said two words to my wife all the way home. His family is really something. They never leave Tony alone." Although the 37-year-old Conigliaro has been in the hospital a month now and has been only semi-conscious and unable to respond since suffering a heart attack Jan. 9, his family has not given up hope.

Conigliaro led the American League in home runs his second season with the Red Sox in 1965 when he was only 20, and after he was felled by a pitch in August of 1967 and out of action the entire following season, he came back to play regularly in 1969 and 1970.

He came back briefly in 1975, playing 21 games with the Red Sox, then tried a number of other occupations, including singing, running a restaurant and finally sportscasting. He had come to Boston to audition for the Red Sox TV job left vacant by Hawk Harrelson's departure when he suffered his heart

"His audition went very well, I'm told," Ryan says. "His brother, Billy, said he was positive about it. 'I'm gonna get the job, I'm gonna get the job,' he said to Billy. Everything was going so well for him when it all hap-

"Whatta shame! I keep praying he'll get well again." The latest hospital word on Tony Conigliaro is guarded.

IN BRIEF

Sweden's Montgomery Leads Winter Springs Golf Open

Sweden's Charlotte Montgomery fired a four under par 68 Monday to take a two-stroke lead in the Winter Springs Women's Open at Blg Cyprus in Winter Springs.

Montgomery's round included six birdies as she carded 36-32 for her 68 which left her two ahead of Anne Marie Palli and Jane Lock.

Action continued today at the Winter Springs course. One shot back in third place were Judy Ellis and Saily Austin of Raiford, N.C. with 7s. At 72 were Kelley Spooner, Sarah LeVeque and Karen Permezel.

Debbie Petrizzi, Cyndy Chamberlin, Connie McCarthy and Susan Moon each had 73s.

Casselberry's Tracy Gaster-Cooper had the top amateur round with a 78. - CARL VAZURA

Lopes Traded To Oakland

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) - The Los angeles Dodgers broke up an infield that had played together a record nine straight seasons with the trade of veteran second baseman Davey Lopes to the Oakland A's for minorleaguer Lance Hudson.

"I wanted to play for Bill Martin," Lopes said of the A's manager at a news conference Monday, "I still feel there are things I can learn in baseball from Billy," Lopes, 35, said Martin was "a winner" and he has won "everywhere he has been." But Lopes, a 10-year veteran and three-time Ali-Star, has not had a winning streak lately.

He had the worst season of his life last year, hitting only .206, nearly 60 points below his lifetime mark of .265. He ended the season by making a record five errors in the World Series.

"A lot of things happened last year, but I don't want to make excuses, It's all in the past," he said.

Lopes, with three years remaining on his contract, will earn a reported $325,000 this year, $350,000 in 1983

Mount St. Ewing Explodes Hoyas Past Orangeman

Mount St. Ewing let loose Monday night,

"Pat is like a volcano ready to explode," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "He'll block a shot, dunk the ball, and all of sudden the defense starts to click. He did it all tonight." Pat Ewing, Georgetown's menacing 7-footer, scored 22 points while patrolling the middle, in carrying the No. 17 Hoyas to a 92-76 roll over Syracuse in a Big East game at Landover,

The Hoyas, who also had 27 points from Eric Floyd, settled the issue with two big spurts - 15-2 to close the first half and 20-9 to start the second. Georgetown hit 18-of-27 shots in the opening half and Ewing had 10 points during the second-half

"We played well in stretches but you can't have as many breakdowns as we had and win," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boehelm, "When we were up by seven (33-26) we didn't score in the next four or five possessions and that really hurt." Boeheim, whose club was backed by Erich Santifer with 21 points, said Ewing is improving with each game. "He's getting better all the time," he said, "If he's shooting his jumper between eight and 10 feet it's just going to be difficult to beat them." Elsewhere in the Top 20, No. 6 Oregon State downed California, 57-50; No. 10 Arkansas defeated Texas Christian, 79-69, and No. 18 Memphis State beat Ball State, 75-64.

At Corvallis, Ore., Les Conner scored 20 points and Oregon State held off a late California rally to run its record to 17-3. The Beavers are tied with Washington for first place in the Pac-10 Marc McNamara - leading the nation in field goal percentage at 69 percent - had 23 points and 17 rebounds for California.

At Fayetteville, Ark., Tony Brown scored 20 points as Arkansas cracked it open in the second half in hiking its record to 17-3. Darrell Browder had 19 points for Texas Christian. At Memphis, Tenn., freshman center Keith Lee had 24 points and 18 rebounds and Memphis State pulled away by scoring 13 straight points early in the second half. Ball State was led by

Ray McCallum with 23 points. "The end of the season rating is the only one I believe in," said Memphia State Coach Dana Kirk, whose club broke into the Top 20 for the first time this year. In other games, Chip Engelland's 34 points lifted Duke over North Carolina-Wilmington, 67-57, in overtime ... Rob Williams had 29 points and Houston beat Texas, 77-63, for the Longhorns' fifth loss in six games ... Southwestern Louisiana downed Arkansas State, 63-54 ... Lamar extended its home winning streak to 53 by beating Louislana Tech, 80-70 ... Texas Tech hit 11-of-12 free throws in overtime in a 91-82 victory over Texas A&M ... Tulane defeated Cincinnati, 53-30, behind Paul Thompson's 15 points.

...Integration Meant The End Of An Era At Crooms

EARL MINOTT
... 'the quality has remained high'

James Davis; a pharmacist, Carroll Stapler; a host of educators; Sanford businessman John Daniels; Sandra Gaines, active in the black community; Edward Blacksheare, currently principal at Crooms; Dick Evans, now principal at Lake Howell High School; Herman Refoe and Charles Roberts, both former principals at Goldsboro; Dr. Velma Williams of Seminole Community College; and doctors of philosophy: Lewis Jones, Elmer Jenkins, Hortense Evans, Eugene Barrington, Elmer Tossie, Clyde Ashley, James Ellzy, Henry Scurry and Henry Gilmore; dentists: Gordon Merritt, Edward G. Hall, Vernell Roberts and Kenneth Lee.

Ashley says the old Crooms Academy had a championship football team that played other black schools all over Florida. Its basketball team won three state championships, and it also had an excellent baseball team.

In addition to sports, Crooms had an outstanding band, which played one year at the Gator Bowl.

The school was a "great source of pride to the community," Ashley says. But the black community went "along with it nicely" when the change was made to Seminole.

Earl Minott, registrar at Seminole High School and a Crooms graduate, says there was not a very good feeling in the black community when Crooms was turned into an all-ninth-

"The community had been told that integration had to come. They didn't like the idea of changing Crooms. They had hoped that Crooms would continue as an integrated high school," he

"Graduates of Crooms went all over the United States, became principals in northern high schools and are in every field from chemistry through engineering and computer programming.

"Dr Crooms set the standard at Crooms, and the quality of education has remained high," Minott notes, adding that he is currently a member of a special committee looking into what can be done with the facility if the ninth grade is moved.

"By 1971 some students had already been going to integrated schools and quite a few black students were at Seminole High. The main problem at the time for students was their becoming familiar with student relationships they had to encounter,"

"There were no real racially toned disturbances. There was a fight here and there, but nothing that caused alarm," he save Minott says the curriculum at Crooms Academy and Seminole High was nearly identical academically. The vocational section at Crooms, however, had courses Seminole did not have, such as auto mechanics, masonry, and industrial arts. Auto mechanics and masonry have since been instituted at Seminole "Seminole still doesn't have industrial arts."

Minott says

Today, racial tension has evaporated at the school "Seminole's students of today have go gone to school together since kindergarten," Minott says.

Noting that Seminole this year had a single homecoming queen, rather than a black one and a white one, Minott says the rold way should have been done away with before it was started."

Seminole Principal Wayne Epps graduated from Seminole and spent his early years in the teaching profession at Seminole as a chemistry instructor

Epps says integration meant that Seminole High had a larger student body and could have more teachers and improve the curriculum.

The number of teachers is based on enrollment, and when the school had more teachers, more courses could be offered.

he notes.

"The vocational program also has grown tremendously. It's a great advantage to have a larger school," he access.

Seminole currently has an enrollment of 1,460 students in grades 10 through 12. Enrolled in the ninth grade classes at Crooms are 515 students.

children was no easy matter. "When you've got them in school at the same time, it seems like they are four or five families together," Cherry says.

There's no limit to what a man can do if he wants to achieve it, but it requires hard work,' Cherry says. 'For a young man going into business, his appearance and age have a lot to do with it.' Stability also is an important factor, he says. 'As long as you get established and people trust you, you've got it made. All the suppliers i deal with and the banks I work with have been helpful.'

If the lifelong Sanford resident were asked for advice from a young black with dreams of founding his or her own business, that person would hear, "There's no easy way.

"There's no limit to what a man can do if he wants to achieve it, but it requires hard work," Cherry says..."For a young man going into business, his appearance and age have a lot to do with it."

Stability also is an important factor, he says

"As long as you get established and people trust you, you've got it made," he says. "All the suppliers I deal with and the banks I work with have been helpful."

Another lifelong Sanford resident initiated her career at an early age. Zillersteen Bellamy, 52, owner of Steen's Cleaners, started her first cleaning business as a young girl.

"My mother took in washing and ironing when I was little," she says. "By the time I was 9 I had my own clients."

Mrs. Bellamy went to work at the Third Street Laundry in Sanford after completing the eighth grade at Crooms Academy when she was 15. For the next 20 years she worked for various dry cleaners throughout the city.

In 1965 Mrs, Bellamy bought her own dry cleaning business from Nathan Burns on Cypress Avenue. She relocated the store in 1977 to 418 Sanford Ave.

"In one week I have about 300 customers come through my store," Mrs. Bellamy says. "I have a lot of experience — and no education."

Advice she readily disperses to aspiring black businessmen includes: "Know what you're doing. You don't have to know why, but you do need to know what," she said.

Mrs., Bellamy also wants to see more black-owned and black-operated businesses located in other parts of town. "I'd like to see a black person start his or her business not particularly in one location," she said. "Money is all one color."

As the mother of three, Mrs. Bellamy boasts accomplished offspring. Elliot is a microbiologist, Haymond an engineer and Lazonia a substitute teacher.

One more bit of advice Mrs. Bellamy offers: "Enjoy the complaints as well as the compliments, because they help you do your lish better."

Getting a firm footing in the restaurant trade is no easy matter, especially when you have to operate out of very cramped conditions.

Although "Uncle" Henry Jones, 40, started his first barbecue restaurant in a tiny, dilapidated shack along State Road 436 in Altamonte Springs, he recently expanded his operation to Sanford

A new Uncle Jones' Barbecue restaurant opened in November at 1926 W. 13th St., across from Crooms High School Many people say you can't find better beef or perk barbecue than Uncle Jones'.

Business at the new restaurant is "about what we expected," said Tod Parker, 35, an associate of Jones', "The place is out of the way. To get customers out there you have to be good."

All Uncle Jones' meat is smoked for hours over hickory coals. At the Sanford restaurant, Kenny Day, 18, of Altamonte Springs oversees the careful preparation of those tasty ribs and barbecue sandwiches.

Although Uncle Jones', formerly The Coffee Pot, is about two miles west of U.S. 17-92, Day says barbecue connoisseurs are finding their way to the restaurant, with tasty results.

Another black businessman in the dry cleaning field worked into the business from the outside Duncan C. McCoy, 63, owner of McCoy's Deluxe Cleaners, 1107 W. 13th St., first acquainted himself with the dry cleaning trade 47 years ago while shining shoes outside Green's Barber Shop & Dry Cleaners in Goldsboro.

For the next 18 years McCoy worked for various dry cleaners before he opened his own shop in 1955 "I think I please a majority of the people," he says.

Between 300 and 400 customers patronize McCoy's each week during this time of year

"I plan to work as long as I can," McCoy says. "People who retire like to die quick."

McCoy founded his operation in Goldsboro 27 years ago because he thought it was the fastest-growing part of Sanford's black community. He learned his trade working with dry cleaners in downtown Sanford, and when he started his own business, many of his customers, while as well as black, followed him to Goldsboro.

The business community in the Goldsboro area is basically stable. McCoy says

"It's not growing any," he adds, "About every two years we get a new business."

Royal Welcome Prepared For The Purple Martins

By JANE CASSELBERRY Herald Staff Writer

The red carpet was rolled out for the purple martins in Sanford at 10 a.m. today—the date and time that Bob Daehn, Blmd Mosquito Task Force chairman, had predicted the annual influx would begin.

banking on the small migratory bird to wipe out the pesky blind mosquito (or midge, as it is more properly known), which plagues the lakefront and downtown area each year. Daehn estimates the purple martins devoured more than 2,150,000 blind mosquitoes during their stay here last spring and organizations pitched in last year to purchase and erect aluminum martin houses to encourage the feathered visitors from South America to set up housekeeping near Sanford's lakefront.

The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce's task force is

They cost $85 or more unassembled and included a pole and rope to lower and raise the birdhouse. All martin houses on city property have been steam-cleaned by city crews in preparation for the new tenants.

"The martins will not tolerate a dirty house," said Daehn, who is asking all private landlords to also clean out their purple martin houses to make the birds welcome.

Daehn said advance scouts for the martins had already been spotted in the area, signaling that the flock would soon follow. Daehn said 75 of the houses, including one large bird condo Paid for by the Sanford Woman's Club, were purchased through the chamber. There was at least a 50 percent occupancy rate, he said.

Chamber executive manager Jack Horner said support of the project had been excellent and that the birds showed up in greater numbers than had been anticipated. He said they stay here until it's time to head south in August or September, which is the end of winter in their homeland south of the Horner said houses still can be ordered from the manufacturer through the chamber. Although available locally through the Florida Audubon House in Maitland, they are more expensive, he added.

The task force was organized several years ago by the chamber to find out what could be done to fight the non-biting blind mosquitoes, which were an inconvenience and a costly problem each year to local businessmen. The insects gather in great numbers around the shore of Lake Monore.

After state funding was secured from the Legislature for a University of Florida (UF) research project here over two years ago, Arshail Ali of the UF Agricultural Research and Education Center in Sanford began to study the problem.

Dachn said Ali will present a public-oriented seminar, with exhibits and film, on progress to date in early summer. The chamber will host the seminar.

He said that after the purple martin's vacate the houses the entrances may be blocked up to keep starlings from moving in, or starling nests will have to be cleaned out so the martins will come back next year.

Chamber member Vic Arnett, who first came up with the idea of recruiting martins to fight the blind mosquitoes, said he read a story in the Evening Herald about the town of Griggsville, Ill., which erected martin houses to attract the birds, hoping they would eat up the mosquitoes (the biting kind) that were bothering residents. The plan proved to be a boon to the city.

Arnett says the martins have been beneficial in eating both the midges and regular mosquitoes in Sanford. He erected a martin house in his yard last year and three pairs of martins nested there. Each pair raised three baby birds, "It was a pleasure to watch the birds," he said.

issue that we should take a look at," Mrs. Christensen said. So if the county had determined that Reach Out was "grandfathered" and thus not subjected to the provisions of the ordinance change, the project could proceed as scheduled, she said.

she said.

The county attorney has issued no formal answer to the arguments of Reach Out's injunction against the county. However, Assistant County Attorney Bob McMillan said that since Reach Out had not made application for its building permit, the project would not be subjected to a "grandfather" clause under the ordinance as it existed prior to November.

"We (the county) told them in July what the law was. As it turned out, there was an ordinance change after that time which would change our earlier opinion. Since they hadn't physically started the project, they would have to comply with the new ordinance," McMillan said.

Meanwhile, some county officials are anticipating a lawsuit should the Reach Out facility be blocked. Finkbeiner, the firm's attorney already has confirmed that fear.

"There aren't any damages yet, since the county hasn't turned us down," he said.

"But if we're not successful with the County Commission or in our injunction, it's possible there would be some damages. In excess of $80,000 already has been expended to date on this project, even though construction hasn't begun yet. So there's a lot at stake," he said.

But homeowners opposed to the project maintain there is also a lot at stake in terms of deflated property values and new neighborhood problems, should the facility get the county's blessing.

"As I see it, the integrity of the neighborhood is what's at stake; the integrity of the county's zoning ordinances is what's at stake should the facility get approved," said Whigham, who speaks for the home owner associations. When somebody buys property in Florida and it is zoned a certain way, there is no guarantee that the zoning will remain the same, according to the lawyer. In summarizing his case, Whigham pointed to a Florida Supreme Court opinion:

"All that one who plans to use his property in accordance with existing zoning regulations is entitled to assume is that such regulations will not be altered to his detriment, unless the changes bear a substantial relationship to the health, morals, welfare or safety of the public."

Navajos Do Railroad Work CALENDAR For Pay, Lodging, Travel replacement crew composed mostly of Navajo Indians is helping keep the Union Pacific Railroad rolling.

Tie gang X812, a mechanized production line of 17 machines and 48 men, is the largest of three tie gangs that in 1981 replaced 450,000 of the wooden ties to which UP's rails are

The Navajo-railroad relationship is decades-old. Both say it has been beneficial.

"They are some of our most skilled machine operators," said UP spokesman Ed Trandahl. The Navajoe said they like the wages and the travel

"The UP's been pretty good to us," Ted Chiquito, 27, of Albuquerque, N.M., said while the crew was working near

Foreman Larry Meseck, 35, of Omaha said the Navajos on his crew are "damn good operators."

About two-thirds of crew X812 worked with the tie gang in 1980. Many of the 20 laborers know how to operate the machines, so the crew is "well-seasoned," Meseck said.

Some railroad crews have been known for occasionally getting drunk and disorderly, but not crew X812. Meseck said. the soft-spoken Navajos pitch in where needed, but don't brag Bobby Herrera, for example, didn't say anything about being an expert welder. But one day when some welding needed to be done, the 30-year-old extra operator from Counselors, N.M., "laid down a bead like you wouldn't believe." Meseck said.

Herrera in 1976 taught welding at a technical school in Roswell, N.M., and worked as a welder in Albuquerque for six years, but said he tired of the job.

A laborer starting out with the railroad makes more than $8 an hour. A machine operator earns more than $10 an hour.
"Back home, working in the fields, the pay is not as good," sald Earl Betselle, 32, Cuba, N.M. He said an agricultural field

Women Construct A Brighter Future

The Navajos on crew X812 are mainly from the area around Cuba and Farmington, N.M., and many are related, said

Chiquito has three brothers on the crew. Joe, 28, runs a scarifier, a machine that moves rock ballast away from ties to be replaced. Lee, 32, runs a "cherry picker" tie crane and

The Navajos like to travel with the tie gang, which since spring has been in Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas and Utah, where it worked until Thanksgiving and then finished for the

"It's better to travel than to stay in one place," said Betselie, who has a wife and two children in New Mexico. "I call (home) every weekend when I can."

Trandahl said many Navajos, some of whom have college educations, like to work six to nine months of the year, then return to their homes in New Mexico or Arizona until the spring construction season begins.

Chiquito, a bachelor, said he drove home from Nebraska during the crew's five-day Labor Day weekend.

Herrera, who has a wife and an 18-month-old son at home in New Mexico, said railroading has advantages over other work.

"We stay on the bunk cars, we don't have to pay rent," he said. "The boss drives us to work."

After work, which usually begins at 6:30 a.m. and ends at 3:30, most crew members shower in one of the two shower cars. on the "outfit" train, eat in the air-conditioned dining cur or watch television in their bunk cars.

"Sometimes we play basketball, if we can find a court, or softball or baseball," said Chiquito. Meseck said some crew members also run two or three miles before and after work. adv for ian 12 or thereafter

A MATTER OF RECORD

Mitzle McDonough wants a high-paying steady job. Mary. Starzec wants to build her own bouse.

A year ago, neither woman would have thought those dreams possible. But now they do

Along with 41 other women, the two are completing the nine-month Women's Outreach Program at the Altoona Area Vocational Technical School

The vo-tech school was one of four sites in the United States that received funding for similar pilot programs for women. Vo-tech Administrator Edith Walker says that Altoona's program is more advanced than any of the others.

The program was designed to train women for occupations that have traditionally been limited to men. It offered Mrs. McDonough the opportunity to learn construction maintenance and Miss Starzec the chance to study carpentry.

But in addition to learning the basics of these trades. both say they found a whole new world.

"I'm happier now than I've ever been," says Miss Star-zec, "I'm so satisfied with myself and I've really liked this program." The 20-year-old woman graduated from junior college in May 1980 and became very discouraged because she could not find a job.

She wanted to work in a nursery school but would have taken almost any job before she saw an advertisement for the Women's Outreach Program. She expects to have a much easier time finding work thanks to her newly acquired skills.

Mrs. McDonough says she never knew she had the ability to learn the skills that she has learned - for instance, how to work safely around machinery that at first appeared very frightening to

"I think that machinery would be frightening to anyone," says Mrs. McDonough. She thinks that men might simply not show their fear because they are taught to hide their feelings.

She says that she has also overcome her fear of heights and now can get on top of a building to work on a roof.

"I learned by doing," she says. "The teachers were very helpful. They told us what we were going to learn, they showed us how to do it and thern we did it."

The outreach project was developed and sponsored by Technical Education Research Centers Inc. of Cambridge, Mass., and Ellis Associates of College Park, Md. Both organizations encourage adult women to enter occupations that traditionally have attracted only men. To be admitted to the program, which was funded by the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, applicants had to meet low-income eligibility spent the past nine months training to enter carpentry and other fields traditionally dominated by men. Here she gets a lesson on siding from instructor Chuck Bickel.

requirements.

Before entering the exams. program, Miss Starzec had no income because she was a student. And Mrs. McDonough had been onfurlough from her minimum-wage job at the local Proctor-Silex factory.

Both women say that they were not taken seriously when they told friends and family about entering the program. "Some of them still can't believe I'm hanging in there," says Miss Starzec.

The only exception was her mother. "She gave me a lot of support," says Miss Starzec. "and I'd like to see her enroll In this program."

Others told them that the program would probably be all "book-learning and no onthe-job training." But the women quickly found out that was not so.

Miss Starzec built a ladder that her mother uses in the living room to hold plants. Mrs. McDonough made a coffee table and a chip-anddip dish that she proudly displays in her home.

Miss Starzec recalls that in junior high she had considered taking a construction course but was discouraged by her father and by the absence of other girls from the class.

"So I took the academic classes and prepared for college," she says. Now she is glad that she wasn't discouraged a second time. Sometimes the work is strenuous, Miss Stargec admits. But she says that she likes the feeling of being physically tired as opposed to being mentally drained as she was after studying for college

Mrs. McDonough said she likes the feeling of "taking a good shower" after a hard day at school.

Both women had to make changes in their lives to participate in the program. Mrs. McDonough had to make more than Miss Starzec.

Mrs. McDonough resorted to talking with her husband and two children on the phone in the evenings during class breaks. She also learned to make a variety of casseroles in advance for their dinners.

Because of her absence in the evening, says Mrs. McDonough, weekends have become a valuable time for her family to spend together.

Other women were probably not as fortunate in receiving support from their families. For various reasons, mostly personal, 19 of the 60 women enrolled in the program quit before graduation.

Those who continued seemed to enjoy the work, according to Miss Starzec and Mrs. McDonough.

Some of their classmates talk about moving to another area after graduation if they do not find jobs here. Some have wanted to move for many years but didn't because they lacked job skills. The school is seeking to have local companies hire the new graduates for trial periods in the hope that the employers will be pleased enough with the women's work to aign them on per-

Keep Your Jogging In Perspective

45 and trim. He is careful about what he eats and doesn't smoke or drink, which I like. But he tends to overdo everything. Part of his health kick is to jog. He jogs a lot and never misses jogging at least a couple of miles every day, sometimes many more.

He says the jogging will prevent heart attacks and help him stay young longer. I say you can overdo it. I read several months ago about a heart surgeon who was a runner and finally dropped dead while running. That frightens me as I can see Bob out there running and having a sudden attack. This is not the first time I have read about someone dropping dead while running. If this can happen to a famous heart surgeon what are the chances of it happening to my husband? What about all those other joggers? How can anyone say it helps prevent heart attacks when things like this happen?

DEAR READER - You may be referring to Dr. Richard Lillehei, a famous heart surgeon from Minneapolis. I do not know the particulars of his death but he did die while running and he had been a runner for several years, even competing in the Boston Marathon, It certainly proves again that just because you are a runner doesn't mean you can be absolutely sure you won't have a heart attack.

But don't lose sight of the fact that many people who die early in life might have died even earlier if they had not been on a health program. If you would have had a fatal attack at 38 and it didn't happen until age 52 that is a worthwhile achievement. Also, many people die of heart attacks while asleep. That doesn't mean sleeping is dangerous and you should not used sensibly, not trying to oversio it or do too much at one time. It can lower blood pressure and cholesterol by helping a person control body fat and that is very helpful.

Exercise can decrease your risk of having a heart attack if

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 13-4, A Perspective on Jogging Deaths, to help you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, selfaddressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Could you please send me a list of foods that contain little water so I won't have to urinate so frequently? I've already got a clean bill of health from my urologist. An acquaintance told me that there are certain foods that helped her but she has moved.

DEAR READER - Most important foods contain lots of water. The water content is the most important factor in determining how many calories an ounce of food contains. Lean meat is more than 70 percent water. Milk to 87 to 90 percent water. Fresh fruit and vegetables have as much as 80 percent water. Refined sugar, flour and fats contain the least water and are the least desirable foods for a good, well-balanced diet.

Of course as carbohydrates, proteins and fat are metabolized completely for energy they yield energy, carbon dioxide and water. That is also true of dry sugar.

Obviously fluid intake will increase urinary output, but that is good in most cases Fallure to pass urine often enough can lead to bladder infections and other

One of the first things taught in bridge is "Third hand high." This precept as well as the nearly similar Second hand low" back to whist. Today's hand shows the value of "Third hand high" West opens his deuce of diamonds. East looks at dummy's singleton If he wants to save his king, East can play low and keep his majesty alive II he is a sound player, he goes up with the king as he should and knocks out South's ace. South takes his ace. There is no good reason to duck. Then South loses the club finesse. East is on lead now and it is up to him to return the correct diamond. On most occasions you return the original fourth best of your partner's suit if you were dealt that many. This time the low lead is a This time the low lead is a loser. South will cover and make his game. East must lead back the line and now West will score three diamond tricks, the ace of snades and a small profit.
