Extradition awaited

SANFORD — Ricky Carol Thomas, 34, remains in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility today, awaiting extradition to Alabama. Thomas will face murder and robbery charges.

Deputies arrested Thomas Friday on an Alabama warrant. They reported Thomas and his girlfriend, Vicki Sanders, 30, are suspects in the robbery and murder of Jason Watts, on March 13 of this year.

The pair is reportedly accused of abducting Watts from his convenience store in Blount County, Alabama, robbing him, cutting his throat, then dumping his body in a ditch.

Deputies said Thomas and Sanders had been living at 1485 Lake Harney Road in Geneva until their arrests earlier this month.

When Thomas was arrested, deputies and agents from Alabama Bureau of Investigation reportedly found four handguns, several knives, marijuana, and $30,000 in cash in the home.

Sanders has already been returned to Alabama. Thomas is still waiting for extradition.

High school in jail?

Males-only GED program will accept females

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

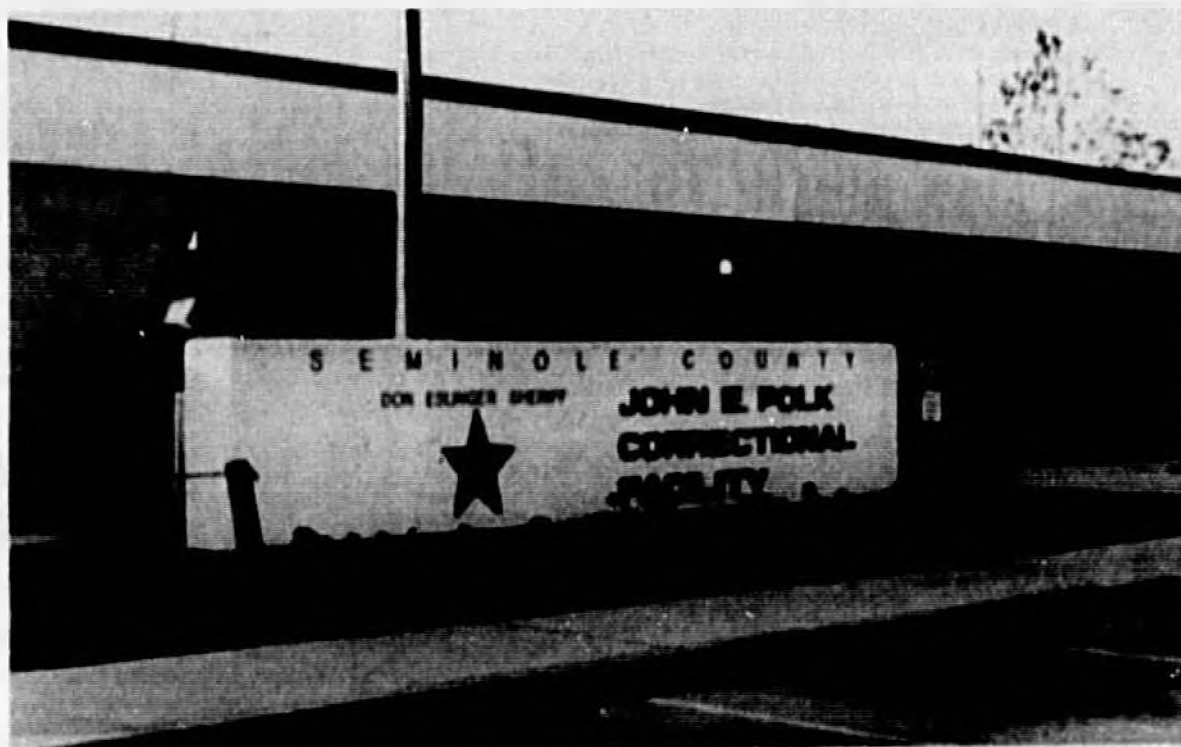

SANFORD — When this country was in its formative stages, a school education was something available primarily for boys from well-to-do families. Girls were taught how to run a household and bring up children.

As we approach the dawn of the 21st century after decades of women struggling to attain equal rights, such a scenario seems totally alien, except at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

While male jail inmates can attend an accredited program to earn the equivalent of a high school diploma (GED), female inmates cannot. The women are offered parenting class.

After learning a GED program is not offered to women, jail director Major Dave Britton said that will change by the end of January.

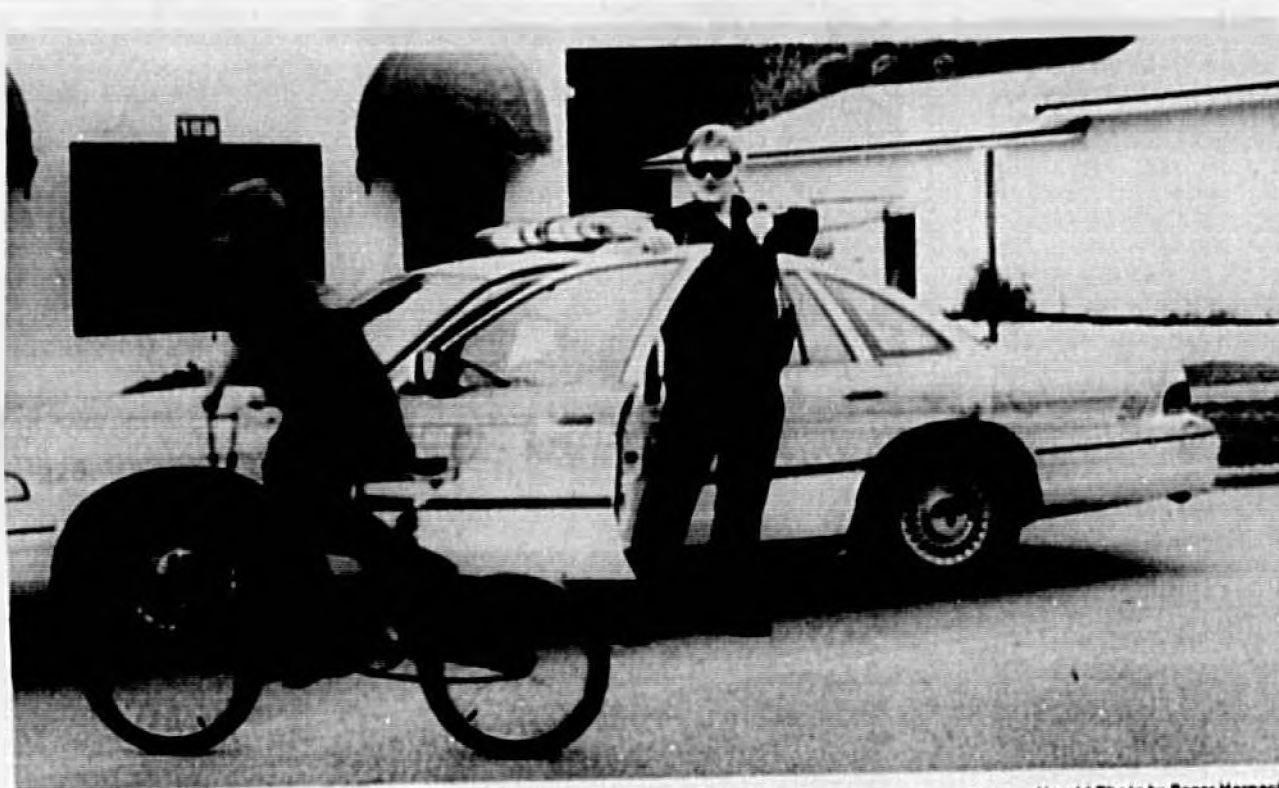

"I was under the impression we had one."

Suit challenges state spending

Staff and Wire Reports

Courts in Florida and many states are being asked to decide whether governments are spending enough money on public schools.

Governments in more than half the states have been sued in the past five years, with courts in a number of cases ordering lawmakers to change their education funding systems.

In Florida, 45 school districts, including Seminole County, banded together to sue the state earlier this year and ask a court to force the governor, education commissioner and Legislature to spend more on education.

A hearing is scheduled in Leon County Circuit Court in January to consider a defense motion to dismiss the litigation.

The Florida suit argues there's not enough money to go around.

Gearing up for Derby rally

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Soap box enthusiasts from Florida to Pennsylvania will be participating in the Holiday Soap Box Rally Wednesday and Thursday at Sanford's Derby Park on Oregon Avenue.

Mike Kirby, director of Parks and Recreation for the city of Sanford said this end-of-the-year competition is classed as a National Derby Rally (NDR), with boys and girls ages eight to 21 as the participants.

He explained, "The cars are built to Soap Box Derby specifications by either the driver or another party. The NDR programs, with races throughout the United States, are designed to give several opportunities to fine-tune the cars and the driving skills prior to the All American Soap Box Derby coming up in Akron, Ohio in 1995."

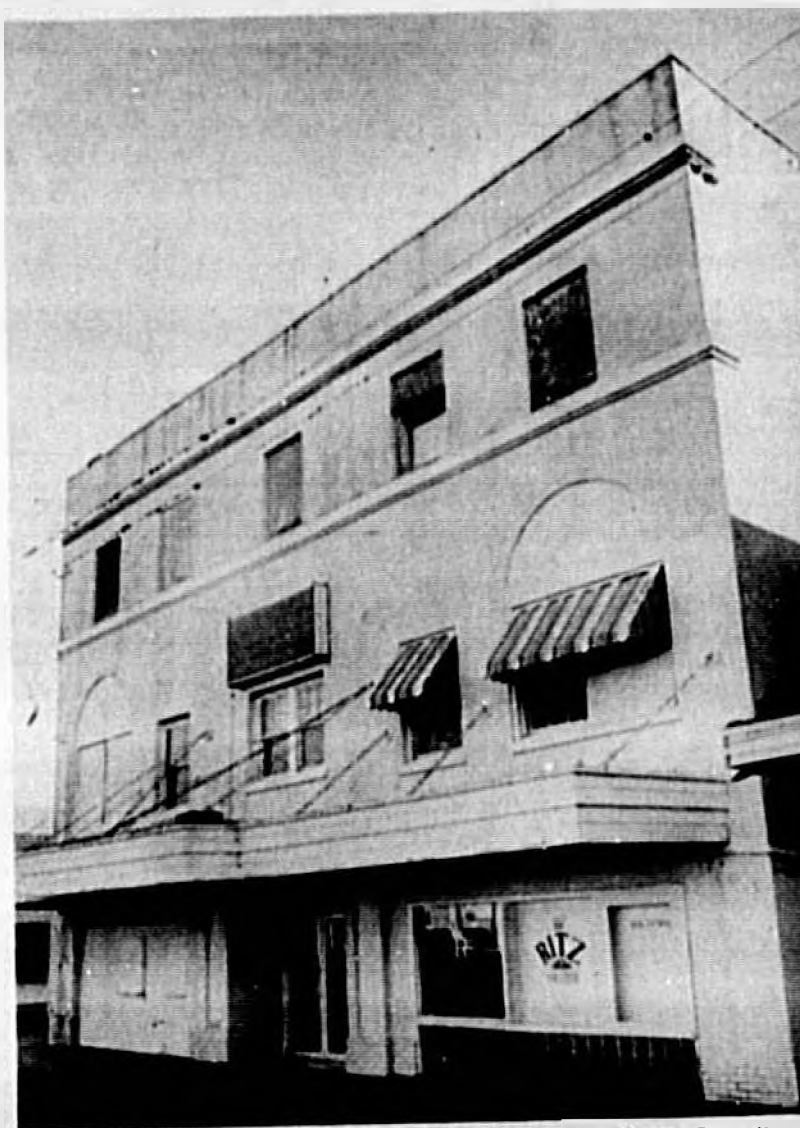

Today, some of the cars which will participate this week are being allowed to make some practice runs to help drivers become accustomed to the track.

In addition to the Sanford rally, another being held in Central Florida is the Space Coast Rally. The two events are designed to call attention to and promote family participation in all aspects of the NDR program.

Last week, Kirby had announced that 40 to 50 racers had already

Bounty hunting evolves into high-tech

WEST PALM BEACH — Bounty hunting — now known as skip tracing — has become a high-tech matter of tapping into the right database.

"It's almost all computer-based now," says bail bondsman Michael "Big Mike" Sandy. "It's no longer knocking down doors and intimidating people. I can tell you just about every move you make using a computer."

Christmas is a particularly rewarding time for skip tracers and bail bondsmen because fugitives tend to surrender to sentiment and call or visit relatives and spouses, which is just what their trackers are waiting for.

"Who says you can't go home again?" Sandy joked. "Christmas for bondsmen is a bonanza."

Sandy and co-worker Mitch, a skip tracer who asked to be identified only by his first name, are tracking two fugitives from authorities in Palm Beach County. Jerri Galtner, a "skip," is charged with first-degree murder, and Charles Frank Wilson Jr., a convicted rapist on the run from another rape charge.

Sandy, a former schoolteacher, posted $30,000 bond for Wilson and $100,000 bond for Galtner.

Researcher: Manatees like human touch

CRYSTAL RIVER — Divers and snorkelers who love to swim with and stroke the endangered manatee may be appealing to the giant mammals' vanity.

A student researcher at Florida Atlantic University is studying the effects of such behavior.

Manatees are "touch-oriented" and often become sexually aroused when humans pet their chests or flippers, which Barbara Abernathy says are erogenous zones. Many of the gentle creatures spend winters in Crystal River.

She and her husband Jim are conducting separate studies on the effects of interaction between humans and manatees at Kings Spring, the main spring in Kings Bay.

Her study looks at sexual behavior of manatees as they interact with each other and with humans.

Barbara Abernathy hopes to determine whether the contact with humans leads to more or less frequent manatee-manatee rendezvous.

It's possible, she said, that the revved-up manatees go out and seek manatee mates, thus helping propagate the species. But the opposite is also possible, that manatees are "transferring their sexual energy toward people rather than manatees," she said.

Police release composite, possible killer

MIAMI — A man who allegedly strangled a prostitute to unconsciousness and left her for dead several months ago emerged Monday as a suspect in a string of prostitute slayings, police said.

Metro-Dade investigators released a sketch of the man, based on a description by the prostitute who was choked during sex in the southwest neighborhood off Tamiami Trail where five other prostitutes have been found dead since September.

The woman has since recovered from the attack and provided a complete description of the suspect and his car, police said.

Citing a Federal Bureau of Investigations profile, police said Monday the killer was probably not prone to fighting at bars and was intelligent, passive, neat and compulsive.

The suspect was described as a white Hispanic about 5-foot-11, between 28 to 30 years old, weighing between 170 and 180 pounds, with shoulder length brown hair and a mustache and brown eyes.

The man also could have been married, since the late-model car with tinted windows he was driving had a child restraint seat in the back, police said.

Report: Dramatic changes in agriculture

TALLAHASSEE — The value of Florida's agricultural products has soared since the 1980s, but the number of farmers and land being used for producing crops and livestock has declined.

From 1982 to 1992 the market value of agricultural products increased from $3.5 billion to $5.3 billion, according to the recently released 1992 census of Florida agriculture.

The number of farms declined by 1,148 since from 36,352 in 1982 to 35,204 in 1992. The number of acres being farmed dropped from 12.8 million to 10.8 million in the same period.

The shift doesn't surprise many farmers. "With all the regulatory things you have to do, it seems to drive the smaller, independent farms out of the market," said Peter Harlier Jr., whose family has grown tomatoes since the 19th century in Manatee County.

The census showed dramatic shifts in agriculture over the 10-year period.

Most of Florida's agricultural goods are produced by the biggest farmers. More than 78 percent of the products sold came from 4.7 percent of the total number of farms, or those with sales of $500,000 a year or more.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Abortion clinic shooting tops list 10 biggest stories included Cuba, politics

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — In 1994, Florida was besieged by thousands of desperate Cuban rafters, a Republican electoral onslaught and two tropical storms that left behind destruction and misery.

But the year's top Florida story, chosen by Associated Press member newspaper editors and broadcast news directors, was a local crime with national implications.

The violent zealotry of two Panhandle men intent on stopping abortions they considered murder, and their subsequent trials, branded an unwilling Pensacola in 1994 as the nation's capital of abortion violence. The Florida Panhandle city, long known for anti-abortion activism, again became the national flashpoint for an unsettled and bitter debate.

The summer political storm that washed thousands of Cuban rafters across the Florida Straits and eventually to refugee camps at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and Panama finished second in the top story balloting, behind the abortion clinic violence.

The Republican bid to take over the state, felled only by a wily old "he-coon" named Lawton Chiles, a Democrat re-elected governor, was third and was the only other story that came close.

In March, former chemical worker Michael F. Griffin was convicted of first-degree murder for fatally shooting abortion doctor David Gunn to death in Pensacola a year earlier. He was sentenced to life in prison with no chance of parole for 25 years. Griffin wrote a letter from prison that said if one baby was saved it would be worth losing his life.

In a haunting refrain, former minister Paul Hill turned his weekly protests in front of another Pensacola clinic to violent action in July, murdering Dr. John Britton and James Barrett, a volunteer escorting the doctor to the clinic.

The 40-year-old Hill was sentenced to die in early December and spoke last week of his willingness to die for his cause.

Hill said he was inspired by the earlier murder of an abortion doctor in Pensacola. When asked if his actions would inspire others, he responded "Indubitably."

Stories of the year

By The Associated Press

The top 10 Florida news stories for 1994 as chosen by Associated Press member newspaper editors and broadcasters in the state:

1. ABORTION. A judge sentenced Paul Hill to death in Florida's electric chair Dec. 6 for killing a doctor and his volunteer escort at a Pensacola abortion clinic in July. Hill also was the first person convicted under a new federal law protecting access to abortion clinics. Michael Griffin, who shot another abortion doctor to death in Pensacola in 1993, was convicted of first-degree murder in March and sentenced to life in prison.

2. IMMIGRATION CRISIS. Cuban leader Fidel Castro unleashed a flood of rafters in the direction of Florida in late summer to show his displeasure with U.S. policy. The Clinton administration called on the Navy to divert the rafters to camps at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and in Panama. U.S. troops invaded Haiti, which has seen thousands flee by boat for Florida, and reinstated Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the democratically elected president ousted in a coup.

3. ELECTIONS. Gov. Lawton Chiles withstood a fierce challenge from Jeb Bush, but Republicans made gains in most other areas in an unusual election year. Florida voters also overwhelmingly rejected casino gambling.

4. TROPICAL STORMS. The Atlantic storm season didn't produce many hurricanes, but a couple of tropical storms — Alberto and Gordon — swept through Florida and caused significant damage and flooding.

5. GAINESVILLE SLAYINGS. Danny Rolling was sentenced to death for the 1990 slayings of five college students that terrorized the

Former president's son weighs next step

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Jeb Bush, who nearly unseated Democratic Gov. Lawton Chiles, may keep the door open for another gubernatorial bid in 1998 although he says it's premature to discuss his political future.

The former president's son said he is considering the idea of heading some type of organization that would study public policy issues and make recommendations.

Such a venture would keep Bush's name in front of the public, giving him an opportunity to again seek the state's highest office in four years.

"The practical political aspects of this will take care of themselves at some point when we get a little closer to where it's relevant to even talk about running again," Bush said in an interview published Sunday in a Jacksonville newspaper.

Bush, 41, expected to defeat Chiles but lost by 61,000 votes in a tough campaign. Since the election, the Miami real estate developer had remained silent about his future plans.

He told the newspaper he may head a foundation or institute that could involve many active supporters from the past campaign.

"The form of it I'm not certain quite yet, but it wouldn't be a campaign-in-waiting," Bush said.

"It would be more related to articulation of new thinking about old problems and trying to develop an expertise in communicating these ideas so that as many people as can will get a chance to participate."

State Republican Party Chairman Tom Slade said Bush might be able to pre-empt the field for the 1998 GOP nomination by letting it be known early that he is going to run again.

That would establish him as the state's dominant Republican candidate, ensure him public speaking opportunities and make him the party's spokesman on state issues, Slade said.

But Duval County Republican Chairman Don Brewer said Bush had his shot and other elected GOP officials may stake leadership claims of their own.

"The reality of it is, it's hard to find a place for Jeb," Brewer said.

Lynda Russell, executive director of the state Democratic Party, predicted Bush would reappear in politics sooner than 1998.

"I think you're going to see him surface next on a short list for vice president," she said.

Bush said he's still weighing his future after spending nearly two years campaigning for governor.

Drivers with air bags may take risks

By The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Air bags may encourage some drivers to become more reckless than drivers of vehicles without the safety devices, a study says.

The study of 200 Virginia crashes in 1993 concludes that drivers with air bags were disproportionately responsible for multicar accidents and placed their passengers at greater risk than did other drivers.

"What it suggests is that air bag drivers are driving in such a manner as to offset the effectiveness of the air bag," said one of the study's authors, George Hoffer, an economist at Virginia Commonwealth University. "They think technology will bail them out."

The study, based on data from the Department of Motor Vehicles, analyzed fatal accidents involving 1990-1993 model cars, 43 percent of which contain air bags.

In crashes involving an air bag-equipped car and one with no air bag, the driver of the car with the air bag was responsible 73 percent of the time, Hoffer said. Of 13 single-car accidents in which passengers but not the driver died, nine of the drivers had air bags.

Central to the study is the theory of "offsetting behavior," which suggests that people adapt to safety improvements by taking more chances. The theory was pioneered 20 years ago by University of Chicago professor Sam Peltzman. He edits the Journal of Law and Economics, in which the air bag study is to be published next fall.

Kim Hazelbaker, senior vice president for Highway Loss Data Institute in Arlington County, hadn't seen the new study but rejected the offsetting behavior theory.

"We find no credibility in that argument whatever," she said. "Safety research from all over the world has shown that that's not the fact."

Other researchers, however, have supported the concept.

"We have concluded that offsetting behavior is real and should be included in the policy-making process" for auto safety, said Edward Harper, a

How to save your resolutions from dissolution

By TIM WHITMIRE

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Most New Year's resolutions are doomed before the calendar even reads Jan. 2, a researcher says.

If you really want to lose weight or quit smoking, the trick is to start well before New Year's Day, says Dr. James Prochaska, a University of Rhode Island psychology professor and author of "Changing for Good."

"An awful lot of people will fail because they set up to take action at New Year's but they're not adequately prepared," said Prochaska, who also directs the University of Rhode Island's Cancer Prevention Research Consortium, which searches for ways to alter behavior and thereby reduce people's chances of developing cancer or other diseases.

He said people pass through six stages on their way to stopping addictive behavior.

● Precontemplation. This stage, which can take years, consists of reinforcing the desire to change. "Your average couch potato in this stage could list maybe four or five pros to starting to work out," Prochaska said. "(You) are increasing motivation by discovering more motives for change."

● Contemplation. Action is still more than a month away — this is the time to play down the drawbacks of a change and take small steps to prepare for it.

● Preparation. The month before attempting a drastic behavior change, it's important to publicly state intentions, Prochaska said. "Many people don't go public because they're afraid to fail. That actually weakens their willpower. Public commitments are much stronger."

● Action. During this stage, which lasts several months, the temptation to relapse is strongest. "Be prepared to reward yourself more than others will reward you," Prochaska said. "Use positive self-statements like a coach would coach yourself."

● Maintenance. This can last from five years to a lifetime, and is most difficult during hard times. "Two-thirds of relapses come during times of emotional stress," Prochaska said. "The three best ways for dealing are talking with others about it, physical activity (and) some form of relaxation — prayer, meditation, muscle relaxation."

● Termination. In the final stage, the new behavior becomes as much a habit as the old one was.

Does Prochaska follow his own advice? Yes, but with mixed results.

He said he has switched from whole milk to nonfat milk, but "I'm still struggling with ice cream."

What you do to make it better

At midnight Saturday, 1994 will come to a screeching halt. Everything that occurred during this just-ending year will go into the history books.

It will be interesting to read and hear what many people will remember about 1994. Some will say it was a profitable year. Others may say it was a financial bust, happy year, sad year, year of problems, or year of solutions.

Many of the responses will be based on a person's financial status, political party affiliation, age, and color.

In Sanford, citizens of the W. 13th Street area may see it as a year where many promises were made to help revitalize their area. As the year ends however, hardly anything has been accomplished.

Citizens have now begun demanding to know why nothing has been done, rather than ask how it will be financed or where the money would be coming from.

Others may also see the problems they believe to be the most important, reach a point of possible resolution, but little physical progress.

Rome wasn't built — oh, never mind. This isn't Rome. It's Central Florida and the cities located within it.

Any plans which are made are generally cheered when first discussed, especially by the people who would gain the most, and be the most affected. But when it takes time to obtain permits, gather financing, establish the operation, and insure that nothing will go wrong, people see it as a major delay.

What kind of a year has 1994 been? It has been just like most of the years in recent times. Things were accomplished which had been started during the previous years, and other things were planned for the years ahead.

Can anything be done to help get more tasks accomplished in 1995? Yes. When it comes to government, more citizen participation and input is needed.

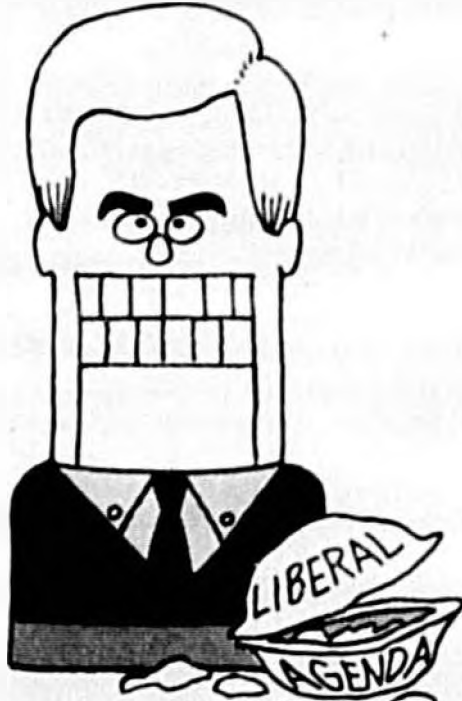

For jobs or the economy, youngsters, and yes, adults, can improve their lot by obtaining more education. This can be done through schools, special education, on-the-job training programs, reading, studying on one's own, and many other ways.

Regardless of whether or not you liked what 1994 produced, your opinion of 1995, one year from now, will depend directly, yes, DIRECTLY, on what you do personally, to make it better.

Are Democrats really quotacrats?

Does President Clinton's proposed middle class tax cut indicate a "move to the center"? Can he go all the way, to issues tougher than taxes? It won't be easy, as readers of the Louisiana Law Review know.

There is a startling passage in the July 1994 issue, appearing in an article dealing with the fight about the Civil Rights Act of 1991. The author is C. Boyden Gray, then counsel to President Bush. Gray tells about meeting William Coleman, distinguished Washington attorney, black Republican, former Secretary of Transportation and civil rights leader.

"There were private indications that a desire to codify a quota regime was the principal motivation behind the legislation. William Coleman, the bill's principal author, was quite candid with me about what he wanted. 'What I need is a generation of proportional hiring, and then we can relax these provisions,' he told me in my office."

Although ritually denied by civil rights activists, the issue is indeed "proportionalism," a fat word for "quotas," the antonym of "merit." It is a tortuous but transcendent topic that may well haunt Clinton as and if he seeks re-election. Voters are massively against quotas. And Clinton's record is difficult to defend.

It was not ever thus. The Democratic Leadership Council, with Clinton as chairman, staged a floor fight at their Cleveland convention in May 1991 to pass this proposition:

"We believe in guaranteeing equal opportunity and in affirmative action and developmental programs to assure that opportunities are in fact equal. But government should not mandate equal outcomes; therefore, we oppose quotas that create racial, gender or ethnic preference."

But as president, Clinton changed course. His pledge of a Cabinet that "looked like America" turned into a slot system with jobs earmarked by race, ethnicity and gender. He saluted black and Hispanic quota voting districts for Congress. His Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights, Deval Patrick, described the Supreme Court's ruling against such districts as "viral," and vowed to fight "every single challenge." A new seven-member legal team at Justice does that.

Patrick formerly worked at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund. Other key civil rights officials also come from organizations often supporting pro-quota positions: the ACLU, the National Women's Law Center, the Puerto Rican Legal Defense and Education Fund, the National Center for Lesbian Rights and the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund. As chairperson of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, Clinton chose the quintessential queen of the quotacrats, Mary Frances Berry.

Of these appointments, Clint Bolick of the Institute for Justice, says: "These appointments mark an historical milestone. For the first time an entire area of federal policy — civil rights — has been handed over wholesale to a special interest lobby."

Now, the LJ is a conservative/libertarian organization. Such a charge needs verification. What sort of policy did these activists, and the president and his administration, actually pursue?

Does President Clinton's proposed middle class tax cut indicate a "move to the center?"

ELLEN GOODMAN

Not role reversal, role playing

BOSTON — I suppose we have Ruth Bader Ginsburg to thank for this one. Back in the '70s, as a strategist in women's rights law, Ginsburg decided the best way to impress male judges with gender discrimination was to show how it affected men.

She paved the road to equal protection under the law with male plaintiffs. It was the widowed, divorced and other men who helped win equal rights for women.

Fast forward to the 1990s when the hot discrimination issue is sexual harassment. In the most celebrated cases, Clarence Thomas was elevated to the Supreme Court and Paula Coughlin was hounded out of the Navy. Now the poster child for sexual harassment is none other than Michael Douglas!

In "Disclosure," the mega-hit at the megaplex, the domesticated Douglas, a family and company man, is jumped by his old girlfriend and new boss, Demi Moore. This predatory single woman regards him less as a sex object than a business perk.

Douglas escapes from her clutches and her cleavage with his virtue intact but his job at risk. She then accuses him of harassment. He countercharges, and spends the rest of the movie trying to convince everyone that men too can be victims. In this task, he is given all the proper role-reversal lines like, "Sexual harassment is about power."

This act comes courtesy of author Michael Crichton, who has piously insisted that seeing man in this situation will help us to understand women who are harassed. A man makes the woman's case better than a woman. Thank you, Ruth.

If you assembled all the characters Michael Douglas has played in the past few years around one table, you would have a perfect focus group of beleaguered white men. Ever since he was the king of "Wall Street," it's been downhill. He's been the victim of a "Fatal Attraction," of a world "Falling Down," and of a truly "Basic Instinct."

Now he's the symbol of a world in which men are losing "their" jobs. Not to Third World labor, GATT, or downsizing, but to undeserving women like Demi, who, he says, "doesn't know the difference between software and a cashmere sweater." As a bitterly unemployed Everyman on the ferry intones to Douglas, "We used to have fun with the girls. Now she probably wants your job."

It's pretty clear that the moviemakers expect the "angry white male" in the audience to identify with Douglas. The AWM is invited to share the identity and anxiety of a Seattle computer executive who speaks CD-ROM as a master-of-the-universe. He's just another male, available for bonding.

Demi Moore on the other hand, is the latest in a long line of bitch-bosses in mini-power skirts — the women that Hollywood loves to present as an equal opportunity hate object. The setup might have been more subtle if she had been older and plainer. But then again, in Moore's last movie, Robert Redford of all people had to pay a million dollars for sex.

The movie's lips say that sexual harassment is about power, but its eyes say it's about sex. The camera pans Moore's legs and fingers on the virtual reality of her Wonderbra breasts. The ads promote the encounter as steamy, not scary.

So in the end, the movie is not really a role-reversal case study of male sexual harassment. It's not even the portrait of a complex he-said, she-said dispute. It's he-said all the way.

Sexual harassment is indeed about a abuse in the workplace. And yes, men can be harassed too. But on the whole, the issue raises different specters for women and men.

For women, the underlying fear is of male violence. The overbearing boss, the hands-on superior, the wolf whistles and the pinups on the locker door carry the threat of verbal and physical assault.

For men the most resonant threat is not of harassment and not of female violence. It's the fear of false accusation. The belief that a law designed to balance the power between men and women actually gives women power over men.

In "Disclosure," Douglas only charges sexual offense in self-defense. It's less a story about a man harassed than a man accused. Falsely, of course.

This isn't role reversal. It's role playing. I'm afraid Michael Crichton is no Ruth Ginsburg. His cutting edge is as old as a fairy tale. In the happy ending, the evil uppity woman always gets her comeuppance.

The movie's lips say that sexual harassment is about power, but its eyes say it's about sex.

First feline should lend paw

Dear Socks — I'm writing to wish you a merry Christmas, but first I have to get a few things off my fuzzy chest.

I guess the first thing I should do is refresh your memory. I am Samantha, a six-year-old female tabby, and I live with the character who writes this column. He calls himself a Curmudgeon, but truth be told, I taught him everything he knows.

I am quite put out by you, Mr. First Feline. I was among the very first to write to you, back when you were in Little Rock with the Chief Litter Changer-elect. That was before writing to Socks became all the rage. I've written to you twice since, but did I get a response? Nooooo. Every flea-bitten alley cat that drops a line gets a postcard with a picture of you and a paw-print autograph. But I, Samantha, among the very first of your correspondents, get diddly-squat. Perhaps you don't like my politics. I am quite the libertarian, you know.

Not that I care what you think, I have many other friends. Once when I published a letter to you, I heard from Faye and Mu, who live with a Litter Changer named Phil Pasture in Willowick, Ohio. They even told me a joke. In cat heaven, the mice move around on roller skates. The cats call them Meals on Wheels.

Another thing, Socks, I think you are destined to be remembered just like the other 12 First Cats have been — which is to say not at all. Why do you lie around the White House all day, basking your brains in the boiler room? With your access to the media, not to mention the Chief Litter Changer, you could do so much for cat causes. People brutalize cats all the time, but do you speak out against feline abuse? No. Millions of cats roam the streets, but do you speak up for the homeless? No. Heck, I've read where tourists see mice in the White House all the time. You're not even earning your keep, lazy bones!

Here're two ideas on what you could do for your own kind.

— Start handing out COOL CAT awards to human beings who are kind to their furry little friends. I've heard about a woman in the Sarasota, Fla., area who has rescued hundreds of abandoned cats. How about a Cool Cat award for her? You remember that cat Tabitha, the one who got lost on the jumbo jet while flying from New York to Los Angeles? How about a Cool Cat award for her human, who refused to give up the search? And another for the psychic who divined Tabitha's hiding place?

I read about a poll that showed 64 percent of the cat lovers in Britain would rather cuddle their feline companions than their lovers. Why not Cool Cats for the whole U.K.!

— Start handing out DIRTY DOG awards to the rotten people who mistreat cats. I'm talking about the so-called scientific researchers who say cats might be spreading bubonic plague. Give 'em a Dirty Dog. I'm talking about the dodos on the town council in Piscataway, N.J., who passed a cat leash law this year. What kind of boor is it that thinks you can lead a CAT around on a string? Canines, yes. Felines, never! Dirty Dog awards to leash-law proponents everywhere.

By the way, if you're tired of shredding the old man's documents and are looking for something new to irritate him with, try chewing the Christmas candles. I've been chomping down on them the last couple of days and it's driving my humans nuts.

Speaking of Christmas, if you can dump your Secret Service detail for a couple of hours, I'd like you to come over to my place for a little nog, Samantha.

I am quite put out by you, Mr. First Feline.

Brierton said, "We have volunteers helping the women but they are not part of our (GED) program. I thought I'd made that change."

The jail director was embarrassed and angry when he learned women were not offered a GED program.

"I've met with some program people already and told them by the 28th (of January) we've got to have them (women) in the program," Brierton said. "I'm embarrassed, I really am. It's just absurd. It's absolutely ridiculous."

"I asked the question some time ago and was told we had a program," Brierton explained, "but when I pressed that today, I find out it's a volunteer program. That's not the same thing. It is run through the chaplain and that's not the same thing by any stretch of the imagination. They mean well and I'm sure they do a nice job in their own way, but it isn't SCC (Seminole Community College) and it isn't accredited."

Although he is opposed to co-ed programs at the jail, Brierton said by the end of January female inmates who qualify for the program will have access to the GED classes. If separate classes for males and females are not feasible, joint classes will be instituted, the director said.

"They are going to have to have equal opportunity. It's the law," Brierton explained.

"My problem has always been," Brierton said, "I don't like co-ed programs in certain areas because what that does is tighten up the criteria. In other words, I can't put a sex offender/rapist in with a bunch of women." That could cause security problems.

Change sometimes comes slowly in the area of corrections. Before Brierton became the local department of corrections director, female trustees were not allowed to work outside the jail.

"I've got women over at the police departments now," Brierton said. "Those are things that we did do to equalize it, because those have been the biases in corrections for years and years and years."

The lack of a GED program for women was brought to Brierton's attention after an inquiry by the Sanford Herald.

Antoinette (Tiffany) Sanzo, 18, who is in jail without bond for violation of probation, asked to enroll in classes and was told they were not available for women.

Sanzo served about 18 months in Lowell Correctional Facility for plotting with three friends to kill her father, Wayne Sanzo in 1991. He was national president of the Warlocks motorcycle club when he was killed.

Sentenced as a youthful offender, Sanzo was ordered to get her GED. When she requested GED instruction at the prison, the then-15-year-old claims she was told by department of correction employees she would be too busy working in the prison kitchen. A department of corrections official did not return phone calls over a two-day period.

After leaving prison, transportation problems reportedly forced Sanzo to drop out of a GED program. Sanzo's probation officer filed a violation of probation order when she tested positive for drugs. He also listed her failure to obtain her GED as a probation violation. At a hearing next month, Sanzo could be ordered to jail or prison for the remaining year of her probation.

"Sanzo asked to get in the program and was told it was not available," Brierton said. "She was telling the truth. That will not be the truth on Jan. 28." Changes are being instituted by that date dealing with jail operations covering things like prisoners who don't want to work to weekend inmates doing work along roads.

Schools

statewide. School districts in other states have made the same argument or contend education spending is unequal between counties. Some argue both.

"What this has done is put the courts in the position of playing the education reform game," said Mary Fulton, who follows the education funding suits for the Education Commission of the States in Denver.

The suits have had varied results around the nation. In Alabama, Louisiana, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey and Tennessee, courts last year ordered states to create a fairer way to distribute school money.

In Minnesota, Nebraska and North Dakota, courts upheld the existing funding systems.

So far, school boards participating in the Florida suit have paid $386,679 in legal fees since the suit was filed in April.

Beside the 45 school districts, 11 students have joined the Florida suit as plaintiffs.

Heather Alderman, an 18-year-old freshman at Florida

State University, is one of those students. She graduated with honors from Harder Senior High in Wauchula last year but started college with no experience using computers.

She said she blamed the government - not her teachers, parents or herself.

"I was never offered the opportunity to work in a computer lab. I'm pretty much computer illiterate, and I'm in college now," said Alderman, whose roommate is teaching her how to use a computer.

The school districts accused lawmakers of using proceeds from the Florida Lottery, which began in 1988, to replace money siphoned off for other government expenses.

The suit contends lawmakers shortchanged education $1.5 billion between mid-1993 and mid-1994.

Voters may like the thought of increased money for schools but not the tax increases or cuts in other government programs that would involve, state officials say.

"You get in a situation where you're robbing Peter to pay Paul," said Jo Miglino, spokeswoman for Gov. Lawton Chiles.

Stories

Almost 700 miles away, Florida endured political turmoil of another type when a spasm from Cuba's aging revolution caused violent protests in Havana and launched a new wave of Cuban rafters across the narrow Florida Straits.

Chiles, who saw the impact of the Mariel boatlift's 125,000 refugees in 1980, moved quickly to stave off the renewed invasion. He diverted his campaign travels to fly to Key West in August, declaring a state of emergency and demanding federal intervention.

President Clinton responded by sending the U.S. Navy and Coast Guard to pluck the rafters from the sea by the thousands and take them to hastily prepared detention camps. The United States then negotiated an end to the crisis with Cuba.

But as 1994 ended, about 22,000 Cubans and 4,600 Haitians remained at Guantanamo Bay and another 8,440 Cubans were at a camp near a U.S. Army base in Panama.

The Cuban refugee crisis, and Chiles' quick action, became a key issue in the gubernatorial campaign. The 64-year-old governor pointed to the Cuban crisis as a reminder that experience counts.

He needed all the help he could get fending off a well-financed, sophisticated campaign by Jeb Bush, 41-year-old second son of the president.

Bush pushed all the right issue buttons, but Chiles countered with tough political advertising questioning Bush's character and a folksy approach promoting himself as Florida's political savior, the wildest old rascalon in the forest. The approach worked and Chiles celebrated his razor-thin victory wearing a broad grin and a coonskin cap.

Republicans fared better in other races, gaining control of the state Senate for the first time this century and picking up clout in the state House. They increased their control of the U.S. House delegation by two, holding a 15-8 advantage. The GOP won three of six Cabinet positions.

Chiles' victory averted a rout of the Democrats, long in control of state politics.

"With Lawton winning, it gave us a second chance," said former state Democratic Party Chairman Charles Whitehead.

Rounding out the rest of Florida's top 10 stories of 1994:

-Florida felt the effects of two deadly tropical storms.

The first named tropical storm of the year, Alberto, moved inland and stalled over Georgia in July, causing flooding that killed 31 people in the state and damaged property in Georgia and North Florida.

The last tropical storm of the season was the erratic Gordon, which washed away flimsy hillside homes earlier this month in Haiti, killing at least 830 people there. It killed nine others in the Caribbean and eight as it crisscrossed Florida.

-Four years after a murderous spree in Gainesville, Danny Rolling, a 40-year-old career criminal from Shreveport, La., was sentenced to death in April for the murders of five college students in Gainesville.

-The state battled with a continued decline in tourism during the first two quarters of the year after several sensational tourist murders in 1993, and started a recovery during the second half of the year.

"It's taken us a year to turn it around and we're not satisfied with everything yet, but we think we're headed in the right direction," said Gary Stogner, a spokesman for the state's Division of Tourism.

-A South Florida mother claimed her 7-year-old daughter was snatched at a flea market without a trace. But Pauline Zile later admitted concocting the story to cover up the girl's beating death at the hands of her stepfather, Walter Zile. He was accused of stuffing her in a closet and later burying her behind a suburban shopping center.

-Florida started grappling with a crisis of juvenile crime, creating a Juvenile Justice Department, toughening sentences for them and building new boot camps to try to turn youths around in time.

-The state Supreme Court ruled in September that the $295 impact fee charged to register out-of-state cars in Florida was unconstitutional. It ordered the state to make refunds.

-A judge in Monticello declared a mistrial in the case of a teen-ager accused of killing a British tourist at a highway rest stop in a crime that tarnished Florida's image and helped create a tourism crisis.

Sponsored by the Ritz Restoration Committee and the Embassy Suites Hotel-North in Altamonte Springs, the party will benefit the efforts to restore the historic theater in downtown Sanford.

The once-proud structure which, in its heyday, attracted some of the finest performers in the world to the shores of Lake Monroe, now barely stands at Second Street and Magnolia. The windows are boarded up and pigeons roost in nooks and crannies that were not part of the original architectural plan.

The restoration committee says it is "in danger of being beyond repair," but money raised through the New Year's Eve party will ensure the building enjoys at least a partial renaissance in 1995.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Draft of Whitewater report

WASHINGTON — A draft of the Senate Banking Committee's upcoming Whitewater report details the numerous times Clinton administration officials provided conflicting accounts or could not recall key events during testimony last summer.

It also states that the Resolution Trust Corp., the government's savings and loan cleanup agency, did not follow its own written policy in handling a criminal investigation that spawned the Whitewater affair.

The committee set out to determine whether President Clinton's aides did anything improper when they gathered information about the ongoing S&L investigation that involved some of the first family's Arkansas business dealings.

But the 300-page draft of the report, dated Dec. 5 and reviewed by The Associated Press, did not draw any conclusions about the legality or propriety of the administration's conduct.

The Devil's Highway

PHOENIX — It's called "El Camino del Diablo" — the Devil's Highway. For an elderly Colorado couple who got stuck near the dirt track pioneered by Spanish friars, the missionaries' purgatory was hell on Earth.

Donald Herink died in the desert that nearly killed his wife, Pauline, who apparently survived for five days on little but determination and three oranges.

Campers found Mrs. Herink Thursday evening wandering near an interstate in Wellton, about 90 miles from the California state line. Searchers found the body of her 64-year-old husband later that night.

"She was a little shaky, she was dirty, she was wet and cold," said an acquaintance, Sarah Willhite. "She done real good. She's an awful strong woman."

No smoking in the library

MARLBORO, Vt. — There'll be no smoking in the Marlboro College library. Majority ruled.

In longstanding Vermont tradition, that decision was reached at a town meeting on a voice vote by the students, the dean of students, professors and staffers gathered around the yellow- and green-covered folding tables in the school's pine-paneled dining hall.

Librarian Sally Andrews argued that the smoke damages books, and smokers drive up insurance rates and threaten the building with fire — though she did acknowledge that "a cigarette means a lot" to late-night students.

Heads nodded.

Objections were raised. Questions were asked. Support for the ban was voiced. Finally, someone moved a vote and the non-smokers prevailed.

And that, it seems, is how business is done at the small, unconventional liberal arts school established in 1947 on a rural hillside.

One person, one vote. From the president of the college to the 270 students to the custodial staff.

Cop gets his man — while on vacation

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — It was pure luck when Richard Burgos bumped into Jose Garcia 300 miles from home — good luck for Burgos, bad luck for Garcia.

Burgos, a police officer on vacation from Worcester, Mass., was walking outside his hotel when he encountered Garcia, who was wanted in Worcester for alleged cocaine trafficking and weapons possession.

After their eyes met Sunday, Garcia jumped in his car and fled. The officer followed Garcia in his own car and flagged down a Rochester police cruiser. Garcia was stopped without incident about a mile outside the city.

"This is one of the weirdest arrests I've ever made," said Rochester Officer James Woodward.

Burgos "can hardly believe this occurred. He's so far from Massachusetts, it's unbelievable," Woodward said.

Garcia, 33, was charged with being a fugitive from justice and jailed without bail pending an arraignment today.

WORLD BRIEFS

North Korea insists on apology

SEOUL — North Korea insisted today that U.S. officials apologize for the intrusion of an American helicopter into its airspace, which it called a "deliberate act" of espionage.

U.S. officials again denied that the helicopter was spying. The State Department dispatched an official to seek the release of American pilot Hobby Hall, whose prospects for immediate freedom plummeted.

The statement by the North's official Korean Central News Agency was only its third mention of the Dec. 17 incident, in which the U.S. Army OH-58C helicopter strayed across the border into North Korea and crashed or was shot down.

Hall was captured and his co-pilot, Chief Warrant officer David Hilemon, died. Hilemon's body was returned last Thursday as part of a deal worked out by U.S. Rep. Bill Richardson, who said North Korea had agreed to free Hall "very soon."

French commandos end crisis

MARSEILLE, France — In one of the most successful anti-terrorist operations in aviation history, French commandos ended a three-day hijacking crisis in a hail of bullets that left four Algerian extremists dead.

None of the commandos or the 171 hostages on board were killed in the dusk raid Monday, carried out as the hijackers appeared to be planning a bloodbath.

"We expected death. We were waiting for the explosion," Ali Kalak, an Algerian passenger, told Associated Press Television early today. "We never thought there would be such a successful intervention."

The hijacking marked the first time that Algeria's nearly three-year civil war has overflowed onto the soil of France, its former colonizer. Islamic extremists have increasingly targeted foreigners in their campaign to topple Algeria's military-backed government.

Food reaches Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia — Defying the danger of rebel attacks, the World Food Program recently sent much-needed food into Liberia's embattled countryside.

It wasn't necessarily good news for hard-pressed civilians, though. Some — maybe most — of the food ended up feeding fighters who have torn the country apart in five years of war.

The result highlights the no-win situation aid agencies face in trying to save the innocent without helping the guilty. Do they continue distributing aid, knowing much of it will be taken by troops of Liberia's seven warring factions, or do they cut off all aid, knowing civilians will suffer?

"It's a dilemma. We don't go out and say we're going to feed the fighters, but they're the strong ones. They can fight and loot," said Rheka Thapa of the United Nations Development Program. "If we don't do it, no one gets food. So where do you draw the line?"

IN BRIEF

AROUND THE STATE

Rockets burn Heat

MIAMI — Mario Elie scored Houston's first 11 points of the fourth quarter, including three 3-pointers, to propel the Rockets to a 101-88 victory over the Heat on Monday night. Houston's 10th consecutive victory over Miami. Hakeem Olajuwon had 24 points, 12 rebounds and seven block shots and Elie finished with 19 points. Carl Herrera added 15 points and Pete Chilcutt chipped in a season-high 12 points. For Miami, Glen Rice finished with 20 points and rookie Khalid Reeves a career-high 16.

AROUND THE NATION

Magic edge Bullets in overtime

LANDOVER, Md. — Nick Anderson scored a season-high 35 points, including 11 in the fourth quarter and four in overtime, as Orlando topped Washington 128-121. Anfernee Hardaway scored 29 and Shaquille O'Neal had 28 for the Magic before fouling out with 1:04 left in regulation. Orlando won its fourth straight and improved its NBA-best record to 21-5. Washington, which has lost 16 of 19, got a career-high 24 points and 14 rebounds from rookie Juswan Howard and 20 points and nine assists from Scott Skiles.

Eagles dump Kotite

PHILADELPHIA — After losing his final seven games following a 7-2 start, Rich Kotite was fired as coach of the Philadelphia Eagles. New Eagles owner Jeff Lurie said he would pay Kotite, 37, $2.9 million after replacing Buddy Ryan in 1991, the estimated $500,000 for the final year of his contract. On Friday, former Eagles coach Dick Vermeil met for several hours with Lurie and said Sunday he was interested in returning to the team. Kotite has been mentioned as a candidate for the coaching job with expansion Carolina.

Sanders paces All-Pro team

NEW YORK — Detroit's Barry Sanders became the unanimous selection to make The Associated Press All-Pro team since 1987. Sanders, who led the NFL in rushing with 1,883 yards, was the first unanimous pick in voting by a national media panel since San Francisco's Jerry Rice. Quarterback Steve Young from the 49ers received 96 of 98 votes. Dallas star Emmitt Smith joined Sanders in the backfield with 93 votes and Rice received 94 votes to make the team for the eighth time. San Francisco cornerback Deion Sanders was the defensive leader with 86 votes.

Young sets record

MINNEAPOLIS — Steve Young, who completed 12 of 13 passes in San Francisco's 21-14 loss to Minnesota, broke two NFL passing records. He beat Joe Montana's 1989 efficiency rating of 112.4 with a 112.8 mark and Ken Anderson's 1982 record for completion percentage of 70.55 with a 70.7 rate.

Orioles owner takes stand

NEW YORK — Baltimore Orioles owner Peter Angelos said his fellow owners can't force his team to use replacement players. The union was expected to begin its legal challenge against the salary cap today, filing unfair labor practice charges with the National Labor Relations Board. Owners, meanwhile, say they are prepared to start spring training and the season with strikebreaking players.

Boys' soccer teams head to Pizza Hut Tournament

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

ORLANDO — It is time to get busy. After taking a much deserved break for the Christmas holiday, five of the six boys' high school soccer teams from Seminole County will take part in the 16th Annual Pizza Hut Invitational High School Soccer Tournament starting today.

This premier event, which is quite possibly the top high school tournament in the southeastern United States, brings together 16 of the top teams from throughout the state of Florida. With most of the best soccer players in the region here, several college coaches from across the country will also be in attendance.

Seminole County teams in the tournament will be the Lake Brantley Patriots, the Lake Howell Silver Hawks, the Lake Mary Rams, the Lyman Greyhounds, and the Oviedo Lions.

Orange County representatives will be the co-host squads, the Bishop Moore Hornets and Edgewater Eagles, the Boone Braves, the Dr. Phillips Panthers, and the Winter Park Wildcats.

The other are team in the event will be the Seabreeze Sandersats from Daytona Beach. Making the trip to Orlando from around the state will be the Crusaders from Clearwater Central Catholic, the Melbourne Bulldogs, the Killian Cougars from Miami, the Leon Lions from Tallahassee, and the Leto Red Storm from Tampa.

All games will be played at Edgewater and Bishop Moore high schools on Edgewater Drive in Orlando and the tournament will be played everyday this week, ending with the finals on Friday.

Ticket prices for the event will be $2 for a One Day Pass and $6 for a Four-Day Tournament Pass.

In today's opening round games at Bishop Moore High School, Dr. Phillips took on Oviedo at 11 a.m.; Tampa-Leto will battle Lake Howell at 1 p.m.; Lake Brantley will challenge Seabreeze at 3 p.m.; and co-host Bishop Moore will face strong Melbourne at 5 p.m.

At Edgewater High School, Miami-Killian played Boone at noon; Lyman tackles Clearwater Central Catholic at 2 p.m.; Lake Mary welcomes Winter Park at 4 p.m.; and co-host Edgewater vies with Tallahassee-Leon at 6 p.m.

THE AGONY OF DEFEAT

A picture is worth a 1,000 words

It was easy to see who was NOT winning in the championship game of the Oviedo Rotary Central Florida Classic Basketball Tournament last Friday night.

Several Lake Mary High School fans looked bummed (top photo) and Rams head coach Willie Richardson (left) grabs his head in frustration during Lake Mary's 74-63 defeat at the hands of the Oak Ridge Pioneers.

Lake Mary (7-5) will be off until starting a five game home stand with a Class 6A-District 4 contest with Deltona on Wednesday, January 4, 1995.

Basketball teams take to the road

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

ORLANDO — The Seminole County's high school basketball teams were singing, "I'll be home for Christmas" last week.

Now it's, "On the road again." The Seminole and Lake Howell boys' teams, as well as the girls' squads from Lake Brantley, Lake Howell, Lake Mary and Lyman will all be in action outside the county this week as they head to tournaments for a tune-up for the conference and district races that will take precedent in January and February.

The Arrow Force III boys from Seminole made the longest trip, as they started play in the 16 team Playground Area Shootout in Ft. Walton Beach this morning. Arrow Force III (9-3) were to have played Winnsboro (La.) High School (12-3) at 11:30 a.m. Central Time.

Also in action today will be the Lake Howell and Seminole girls, both of whom are in the Bishop Moore Christmas Tournament.

The Silver Hawks (15-3) will play Unicoa High School from Erwin, Tennessee at 2 p.m., while the Tribe (13-1) will take on Orlando-Colonial at 5 p.m. If things hold true to form, Lake Howell and Seminole will meet in the finals.

In two other tournaments this year, the Tribe has defeated the Silver Hawks for the championship. In fact, all three Lake Howell losses have come against Seminole.

But for that scenario to take place, the two local powers will have to defeat some other impressive squads, as the defending state champion from Kentucky and a perennial standout from Cleveland, Ohio are also in the field.

The other three squads will get into action on Wednesday, with the Lake Brantley girls (4-11) traveling to Orlando's Boone High School and the Lake Mary girls heading east to Titusville for the Lady War Eagle Tournament at Astronaut High School. The opponents and times for the Patriots' and Rams' first games will be known today.

The Lake Howell boys (5-7) will join the Silver Hawks and Seminole girls in the Bishop Moore Christmas Tournament. The Silver Hawks boys will open with Charters Valley High School from Charters, Pennsylvania at 12:30 p.m.

No county players on All-State volleyball teams

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — The panel who voted on the Florida Sports Writers Association volleyball poll this season kept up their good work Monday as only two players from the four-county area (Volusia, Seminole, Orange, Osceola) that involves Seminole County athletes were recognized on the 1994 All-State volleyball teams.

No one from the six Seminole schools were picked for even honorable mention, despite Oviedo advancing all the way to the Class 6A state semifinals.

Earning Honorable Mention were Melanie Smith from Orlando-Oak Ridge and Sandra Reboucas from Orlando-Cypress Creek.

Is illness linked to depression?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please explain myasthenia gravis. I never had a health problem until I suffered from depression after my wife died a year ago.

DEAR READER: This autoimmune disease, caused by the body's inappropriate attack on the locations where nerves meet muscles, leads to periodic weakness, fatigue and double vision. Some cases of myasthenia gravis are inherited, others occur for no known reason.

If not corrected by drugs (such as neostigmine), myasthenia weakness can progress to a crisis (life-threatening involvement of the respiratory muscles).

The diagnosis is established by the Tension test, during which the administration of the drug Tension reverses the weakness. With long-term treatment using anti-myasthenia drugs, patients can live ordinary, healthful lives. In many instances, removal of the thymus gland in the neck will, for unknown reasons, result in permanent improvement.

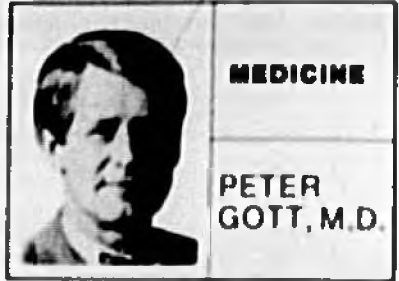

Most cases of myasthenia gravis are not associated with life stresses or depression. Therefore, I cannot comment on the effect your wife's death had on your disease. Obviously, if you are depressed, you should seek help from an appropriate health professional, such as a psychiatrist, who might choose to prescribe anti-depressant medication.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it possible that dreams can bring on vascular headaches? I find that upon awakening, my heart is pounding faster, sometimes associated with a dream that is not always pleasant. I do take medication for my vascular headaches that gives good control when taken in the early stages, but the dreams and headaches have me wondering.

DEAR READER: Dreams do not ordinarily affect vascular headaches, the cause of which is unknown. These pounding headaches come and go, but are generally not as severe as migraine and are not associated with "warning" symptoms, such as visual problems.

Nonetheless, unpleasant dreams can significantly increase blood pressure and, as you've discovered, pulse rate. Hypertension can sometimes trigger vascular headaches. Thus, it may not be the dreams that are affecting you as much as the physiologic alterations within your body that are stimu-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
A journalist asked Marilyn Monroe, "Didn't you have anything on?"

"I had the radio on," she replied. She didn't say to which station it was tuned.

When defending a bridge hand, it is beneficial to be on the same wavelength as your partner. If you need a particular signal, it helps if partner realizes it and gives you that signal. In today's deal, from last September's marathon, the NEC World Bridge Championships, two Poles, Grzegorz Gardynik and Wojtek Olancki, worked together well.

North opened with a strong and artificial two clubs. South's two-diamond response was artificial, showing positive values. Five diamonds promised one ace and six diamonds denied a king — don't ask! Gardynik found the only lead that gave the defense a chance: a low club. On any other attack, declarer can draw trumps and play on hearts, benefiting from the favorable distribution. The club ace is the entry to the established heart tricks.

After winning with the club ace, South drew one round of trumps before playing the ace and another heart. East correctly withheld his king, signaling with the two before the three. After West had ruffed, he had to decide whether to switch to a spade (right if partner had the queen) or to continue with a second club.

Trusting that his partner would have dropped a high heart as a suit preference signal if he held the spade queen, Gardynik led the club jack. The slam could no longer be made.

Phillip Alder's new book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available, autographed upon request, for $14.95 from P.O. Box 169, Roslyn Hts., NY 11577-0169.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Ocol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 28, 1994

The year ahead could be a favorable one for you in the romance department, especially if you are unmarried. If you are married, tender bonds will grow stronger.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Warmth and charm are two of your best assets today. You should be able to impress others, not by putting on airs, but by being yourself. Capricorn, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Take advantage of an opportunity today to elevate the sagging spirits of a close friend. You will know what to say or do to renew his/her zest for life.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Things will go smoothly today in a situation that you have previously met with an argumentative response.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Dealing on a one-to-one basis with others could prove easier today than communicating with a group or committee.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Something unusual, but beneficial, might develop today that affects your work or career. Try to keep what occurs confidential.

CANCER (June 21-July 21) Involvements with the one you love should turn out happily today. You will both do whatever it takes to make each other's life easier.
