So far this year we have had over average cloudy weather. A lot of it caused, no doubt, by some of those logy international issues.

Approval Of British Loan Bill Is Urged By Truman And Byrnes

House Banking Group Chief Gets Letters From President and Secretary of State

WASHINGTON, July 8. (AP)—President Truman and Secretary of State Byrnes today threw their weight behind the British Loan Bill. The balance between yes and no votes apparently is so close that administration leaders are worried. Opponents of the loan say they think they can defeat it, but they won't claim that they have enough votes already lined up.

Mr. Truman's endorsement of the loan was made in a letter to Chairman Brent Spence of the House Banking Committee. Spence read the letter at the start of debate on the $3,250,000,000 credit today. Secretary Byrnes sent a cable from Paris, where he is attending the Foreign Ministers Conference. He told Congressmen Spence that the loan is essential to the welfare of the United States and world peace. Even supporters of the loan admit that some votes for the bill have been lost because of Britain's treatment of the Palestine question. On the other hand, they feel that any new blast of criticism from Moscow aimed at the western powers would help the loan. They reason that fear of Russia would build up sentiment for a strong Britain.

Byrnes said, "The foundations of peace can never be secure if they rest exclusively on a political base."

May's Testimony Described Today As Inadequate

WASHINGTON, July 8. (AP)—The testimony given by Representative May of Kentucky concerning his relations with Illinois Munition Makers, came in for some harsh criticism today. Chairman James Mead of the Senate War Investigating Committee said that the testimony given by May on June 4 was wholly inadequate.

Mead said that May left the impression with the committee that he had made only a few disinterested calls to the War Department about war contracts. Later testimony was shown, Mead said, that the Kentucky congressman made many telephone calls and that the calls were repetitive and troublesome.

May is chairman of the House Military Committee. He has denied that he profited in any way from dealing the munition firms. He said with a firm of which he was an agent, but Senator Mead said today that the Representative left a number of things unexplained.

The Senate committee heard testimony from one of its own investigators, Thomas O'Connell. He said he was handed $100,000 in cash, with an understanding that he would resign and withdraw from the investigation. He said he obtained the money from a man who was a close associate of May.

Later Representative May told the committee that there is a close relationship between the firm and the U. S. Ambassador.

Figures In War Profits Probe

FORMER CHIEF of the Chemical Warfare Service, ex-Maj. Gen. William E. Rogers is shown in Washington as he testified before the Senate War Investigating Committee against Rep. Andrew May (left) today. The committee was probing the current war profits inquiry. Rogers said that he had advised May to step on Col. R. E. Tibbs of the Army Services of Supplies when the latter asked that a contract with Batavia Metal Products be voided. The hearing will be continued.

BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

A VERY FEW PROFOUND PHILOSOPHERS UNDERSTAND WHAT THIS MEANS. THINGS ARE NOT WHAT THEY SEEM. THE ULTIMOST REACHES OF THE UNIVERSE ARE THE THOUGHTS OF GOD'S THOUGHT AND SO ARE WE. For in him we live and move and have our being.—Acts 17:28.

Too Much Remembering (From The Washington Post) Come, shade the sightless pines, And bolt the heavy door; Then never look behind, At Lot's wife, once before.

For eyes turned backward now Are bitterly at fault... Too much remembering Turns any heart to salt. SARAH M. HOWARD.

The government has not done anything to discourage hoarding since the OPA ceilings were removed.

Although Senator Bilbo was rejected in Mississippi, the state has made political progress. Negroes were allowed to vote for the first time since Reconstruction Days. And there were no disorders.

And it's easy, observes a local philosopher, to see through people who make spectacles of themselves.—Titonville Star-Advocate. Maybe these people should make bifocals of themselves; then you couldn't see through them.

Not that liquor drinking and smoking does anybody any good, but drinkers and smokers contributed $33,000,000 in taxes to the State of Florida last year. And that is more than twice the tax receipts from the same source the year before. If you tried to collect that much money from three same people in any other way, there'd be a rebellion.

The United States has set a fine example to other nations of the world in how to treat conquered territories in giving the Philippine Islands their independence. For the Philippines were conquered by the United States as surely as India was conquered by Britain or Poland by Germany. Fortunately Britain is trying to find a solution for the Indian problem and Poland has been rescued from Germany. It remains to be seen how enlightened Russia's future policies may be.

There is an element of propaganda in current OPA releases from Washington quoting OPA officials on rising prices. Virtually all of the commodities quoted are like butter and beef which have been virtually unobtainable anyway, and the new prices are compared with previous ceiling prices, which wouldn't get you any butter or beef, and not with black market prices which would. The same is true of rent increases used as a basis for these propaganda stories. There have been some enormous increases in a few isolated cases, increases which were designed to get rid of objectionable tenants more than anything else. But the fact that such a barrage of propaganda is coming out of Washington trying to terrorize the public with the fear of rising prices tends to create a buying panic and induce the very inflationary situation the OPA pretends to fear.

The fact that Britain is having to ration bread is being blamed by British officials, most of whom belong to the Labor Party, upon strikes in America. No doubt they have been a contributing factor as they have reduced production in practically all lines by tremendous percentages. Strikes are also contributing to starvation in many other countries. And if you think the strikes are over because the headlines are not full of news of coal miners, steel workers, or longshoremen leaving their jobs, then you should be interested to learn that production at General Motors plants last week was interrupted by only 104 strikes, a slight improvement over the previous week when there were 112 strikes. Most of these strikes the public never hears about; they are too small and inconsequential. And incidentally the Merzenthaler limousine strike is continuing into its fifth month.

Food, A World Bond

On September 2 in Copenhagen a conference will be held of the Food and Agriculture Organization of which Scottish Sir John Boyd-Orr is director. The purpose is a momentous one, to plan long-term permanent international machinery for food, its production, distribution and consumption.

If member nations agree, for the first time in man's history the problem of hunger can be tackled everywhere, even in the far reaches of the world where it has been commonplace through the ages. Freedom from Want will be translated into practical plans for increasing agricultural production where needed. Such paradoxes will be avoided as one country destroying food in the interests of giving farmers a decent living, while other peoples starve. Food will be considered from a world-wide point of view.

The United States has the opportunity to take the lead in pushing such an international food scheme, both by acquainting its people with the problem, and by backing its officials at the conference. Food under such circumstances becomes a test case for true international effort. It is of interest to every human being, be he Russian, Dutch, American or Japanese. It is a tangible, basic starting point for getting the world into peace.

Books For Brazil

Brazil is hungry for North American books. More than a million dollars' worth were sold there in 1944, and the market is increasing all the time, according to the Brazilian Government Trade Bureau.

Two reasons are given for this great demand—the expansion of industry in Brazil, calling for modern technical information, and the compulsory teaching of English in schools there.

This looks like a booming business for United States publishers, as long as they concentrate on inexpensive editions within the means of the Brazilians. It also is an effective way to inform South Americans about this country.

One can't help wondering how many people in the United States have a comparable interest in Brazil, and care enough to read Brazil's own books, even in translation. Perhaps we need Brazilian pocket books, too.

Fluctuating Province

The Council of Foreign Ministers has done one thing for Russia: it has confirmed her possession of Bessarabia. This fertile province between Russia and Romania has floated back and forth between the two countries, just as in the 18th century it changed ownership five times between Russia and Turkey.

Bessarabia has been coveted ever since its invasion in the 7th century by the Bessi, a tribe from Bulgaria who gave it its name. The Romanians will probably console themselves for losing it now by reflecting that past transfers have not been permanent, and hope this one will be no more so. But more stability and less fluctuation would help all the little countries.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

By RUSSELL KAY

I'm writing this column on Monday morning, July 1, 1946. It is a lovely morning. The sun came up as usual, the birds are singing, bees are buzzing from flower to flower, and folks I've met all seem happy and content.

All this in spite of the fact that for more than 8 hours we have been struggling along with the OPA. After listening to all the dire predictions over the radio and reading the papers, I was working for $25.00 a week and had just gotten married. I paid $16.00 a month rent for a good five room house. Always had plenty to eat, wore fairly decent clothes including shoes and didn't worry about much of anything.

Of course I was on my own. Uncle Sam hadn't formed the habit of looking after folks in those days like he does now. I had to wipe my own nose and comb my own hair. The $25.00 a week was MY money. I could do what I pleased with it. I didn't have to pay any withholding tax, social security tax or union dues and assessments.

Prices went up on a few things but I didn't have to buy them. I didn't go without anything I really wanted. I shudder now when I think of the awful predicament I was in. I was absolutely helpless, nobody protected me from my landlord or my grocer or milkman.

The only black market operating in those days to my knowledge was on liquor. It was during prohibition. All you had to do to get a drink, in a case for that matter, was know somebody that knew somebody and pay the price. Prohibition worked just about as well as far as protecting anybody was concerned.

Of course a few racketeers and greedy individuals attempted to stick the public for this and that. Some folks paid the inflated prices if they wanted the merchandise bad enough, but most folks didn't because Chester Bowles or some other "bureaucrat" told them not to, but just because old fashioned common-sense told them so.

Things adjusted themselves pretty rapidly as I recall. Realizing that if they spent all their earnings foolishly and went broke, they couldn't go down to Mr. Sam's office and draw rocking chair money for not working. Most folks stuck to their jobs, were reasonably careful about expenditures and the old American

Let Your Physician Treat Impetigo

Toucheur Drug Co.

Impetigo is a skin infection that is quite prevalent in summer, especially among children. It usually appears on the hands, face, or legs, and is characterized by blistering sores that are painful and unsightly.

Only a doctor can diagnose impetigo, consult him at once, for this highly contagious disease spreads rapidly on the body, as well as to other persons. Never attempt home remedies as they may cause the infection to spread further.

Your doctor will advise medication. Entrust his prescription to a reliable druggist, then follow the directions implicitly for positive results. This is the 11th of a series of Editorial Advertisements appearing in this paper each Monday.

Meat Famine Slated To End in Fortnight Price Stabilization To Break Bottleneck

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Government officials are saying that the meat famine in the United States will be over within a couple of weeks. This is a good bet because by that time the OPA battle in Congress should be history and the meat industry, farmers and all concerned will know where they stand on prices.

Agricultural Secretary Anderson has expressed the belief that pricing has been a large factor in the bottleneck of steaks, chops and roasts. Anderson said he believes that you can't expect industry to sell products at a lower price today when there are expectations of price rises tomorrow.

Most Washington observers blame the price factor, its uncertainty and its letter-trotting for the meat shortage. They point out that there are now more beef cattle in the U. S. than ever before in the nation's history. Reason for a lack of meat at retail levels, they point out, is that there has been small inducement to move live animals to market.

Housewives, who have been unable to buy meat in their local markets, can look forward soon—government officials say—to better days. The point meat supply will be there and can move to butcher shops through packing centers and wholesale outlets when economic difficulties are ironed out.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN probably is not to blame, but someone at the White House got his wires crossed when the chief executive wrote to Capitol Hill recommending a new Army-Navy merger plan. The letters from the president went to the chairmen of the House and Senate military and naval affairs committees.

What may prove to be embarrassing later to the president is that he neglected to send a letter to the chairman of the House committee which is handling merger legislation. This is the House committee on executive expenditures, of which Rep. Carter Manasco (D) of Alabama, is chairman. The White House mistakenly thought the House military affairs committee was handling the merger bill and sent its chairman, Rep. Andrew J. May (D) of Kentucky, a letter instead.

Mansaco said that was all right with him. He was not miffed by the oversight. "I read the letter in the papers," he said. "Anyway, we are not going to do anything about the merger until the Senate has acted."

CONGRESS is rapidly getting legislation in shape for adjournment around July 20. Most major legislation is already out of the way. This includes the OPA extension and appropriation measures.

Within a few days many bills will have been disposed of, about the only big measure remaining will be the $3,700,000,000 British loan and atomic energy control bills. Democratic leaders predict that the British loan will be approved by the House without great trouble. They want to get the atomic energy bill through the House as it passed the Senate. The odds are

The House will pass bills approved by the expenditures committee rejecting President Truman's three reorganization plans. The Senate may follow suit, so the chances are that the president's first efforts at revamping the federal structure will come to nothing.

One thing that will have to be settled, either before adjournment or after the November elections, is the old-age pension payroll tax. Unless Congress acts, the tax will jump from one per cent on employers and employees to two and one-half per cent January 1. The House ways and means committee is at work on legislation to boost the levy to one and one-half per cent on January 1.

When a merchant hiked his prices or offered inferior goods, his competitor got the business and the dumb grasping merchant went broke. Yes, it was pretty tough after the last war, but I used to buy milk from a neighbor who kept a cow and had more than he needed, and the dirty so-and-so charged me a quart. I had a few hens who laid nice fresh eggs for my breakfast and only asked for a little water and table scraps in return. I paid 25c for a haircut and got my suit cleaned and pressed for 40c and thought the guy was holding me up. Fish and game weren't "protected" in those days and I used to go down to the river after work and could snag out a couple of fat bass and to hell with the butcher and his $1.00 steaks.

Of course I didn't know about OPA or realize how bad off I was or I would probably have written my congressman and screamed my head off, but on the other hand they say that "What a guy don't know won't hurt him" and now thinking back, I'm right glad I was so blamed ignorant for I was happy.

TERRACE TALK BY CECELIA TRULUCK

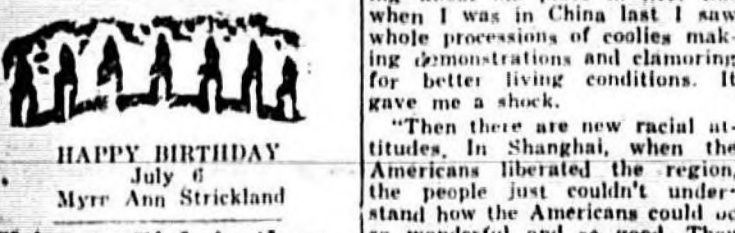

BOBO DEAN left by train each morning to Exeter, N. H. where he will study Latin, English and Mathematics during the summer months at Phillips Exeter Academy, the oldest prep school in the United States. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society. MRS. BOB AND DEAN DEAN BOBO has aspirations to be a lawyer and with his excellent record this fact should be a good omen. MR. and MRS. HAROLD APPELBY and daughter, NANCY JEAN, were thrilled when they were "showed on air" June 1 in Detroit, Colo. They have returned from a six weeks' tour of the west by air where they have seen some of the most beautiful golden wheat fields and green corn fields were beautiful to see and made one stop and ponder about our bread shortage. The country looks prosperous, she said, with homes and buildings in top condition. Before settling down in Sanford after their trip they spent several days last week at Colorado Springs, Colo. From Berlin, Germany, comes the news that a Florida WAC officer was the only woman contestant this weekend in the United States Army's Berlin District Golf Championship. She was LUKE CONSTANCE BENNETT of Babson Park and she lost in the final of the fourth night to a fellow Floridian, LUKE COLE JAMES LUNNINGHAM of West Palm Beach. CONNIE BENNETT was a popular Stetson University student from 1938 through 1941. The Country Club summer dance last Saturday evening was attended by an excellent crowd. Tables were placed indoors and outdoors and it was fun to dance to the music of an orchestral band. Several excellent parties were given before the dance and with most of the ladies securing long dresses. There was definitely a post-war feeling about!

Chinese Girl Author Of Two Books At 20

By Adelaide Kerr, AP News Features Writer. Lin Taiyi, 20-year-old daughter of Chinese author Lin Yutang, twirled her jade bracelet around her wrist and talked of the two books she had written, the one she is now writing, the process of growing up, her secret of success, the problems of the young generation in China and many other things. The black dress, which molded her slim little figure, was a classical Chinese design. But her hairdress was modern American and so was the lipstick which matched the corse braid on her dress. Her English flowed with the
